Vacation! I fancy, if you were a child, And rules and examples had driven you wild, You'd just be as joyful as I am to day At the thought of vacation and freedom and play Not a lesson to look at for ever so long.

VACATION.

Not a dull, puzzling sum, with the auswer all No dreadful dictation to write on your slate, No teacher to frown if a second you're late;

But fun in the morning and frolic at night, And the hours between full of mirth and delight, Such races and chases, such laughter and giee, You'd know if you only were little, like me.

There's only one trouble; you look very kind; Perhaps you'll tell mother (you're sure you won't If she wouldn't insist so on bed-time at eight,

She'd make it more jolly for Freddie and Kate. Vacation! We're off with the birds and the bees, We'll picnic in woods and have swings on the trees. We'll fish in the brook, and we'll ride on the hay, And weeks upon weeks we'll do nothing but play Perhaps you are right-it don't seem so to me;

MISS OPHELIA

But we may by-and-by, having had so much glee,

De pleased to return to the teacher's kind rule,

And willingly answer the summons to school.

It was a dreary night, dark, cloudy and windy. Bertha Westervelt sat be side the window looking out upon the passers-by, envying them their erect carriage and strength as they hurried along. Then, with a piteous sigh, she cast her eyes downward upon her own

At that moment the door opened and a lady swept into the apartment. To very near where Bertha sat, the lady drew a chair and dropped into it. "How very melancholy you look in this dim twilight," she said, softly.

"Do I?" questioned Bertha, absently "Yes, indeed. I do wish you would be more cheerful, for I am sure it must be very depressing to Godfrey. I know he feels it, he wears such a sombre air when he leaves you. It is very unfortunate for him that you should become an invalid so soon after marriage!" "Very," responded Bertha, tremu-"Surely I will get my strength soon now?" For a moment, in profound silence the lady regarded Bertha. "Do you believe so, Bertha Westervelt? Why, I thought you knew bet "I-I-what do you mean, aunt?" she queried, piteously Her heart seemed to stand still; what new horror was to descend upon her now? "Why, I am sure Godfrey knows it, and I thought, of course, you did. You have always been delicate, and now the physician thinks you are troubled with hip disease. There is no permanent cure for that complaint; you go from bad to worse, as it is vulgarly expressed. Poor Godfrey!"

Bertha threw up her thin, white hands as if to ward off a blow; but she uttered no word, gave vent to no cry. Uncomfortable, from the death-like silence that her speech had produced, the lady, after fidgeting a moment, left the room.

At that moment Bertha's eye fell upon her husband walking briskly up the street, his cousin, Ophelia Brent, beside him. She was a radiant brunette. sparkling, vivacious in manner, though there was something in the expression of her greenish hued eyes and around her mouth that made Bertha instinctvely distrust her. "She is the one he loved before he met me," she groaned, "and whom be

I think you had better not disturb Godfrev opened the door softly, and went in. The room was so dark that he could only see the outline of his wife in her chair by the window; as she did not speak he concluded she must still be sleeping, and so closed the door softly. "I am in a hurry to return to my office," he observed, "so will have dinner now. Explain to Bertha when she awakes why I did not wait for her." He ate a few mouthfuls in silence, and then left the house. His wife heard the door close behind him, and watched him hurry up the street. "No wonder he avoids me!" thought, bitterly. "What am I to do?" The next morning dawred clear and oright. It was Valentine's day, and the postmen were darting hither and thither with their precious missives. Ophelia and her mother sat in the room with Bertha, toying with some worsted work. The very sight of the two women made her nervous and wretched, but they told Godfrey how much care they took of his dear wife, and kept her from thinking of her illness, so they were welcome guests. "Miss Ophelia Brent," the postman said at the door, and the maid brought the missive in. "A valentine for me!" Ophelia exclaimed with delight. "See, Bertha, what it is not to be married!"

She tore the envelope open and read the contents; then with a profound sigh she replaced it and put it in her pocket. Bertha thought no more of the little scene, until a few hours later she saw Ophelia's little pug playing with it under a chair. She went over to rescue it from him. In taking it from his mouth she recognized her husbands well-known chirography. She looked at the envelope a moment; a great desire took possession of her to know the contents.

"It surely cannot be wrong," she whispered to herself, and flushing with conscious shame, she pulled the neatly my own mad folly. I cannot restrain the desire to take advantage of faithful Valentine's day, to tell you how dear you are to me still, and how much hanpiness your simple presence gives me in my miserable home." The flush died out of the wronged wife's cheek, and was succeeded by an unnatural pallor, as she continued: "I have to keep my passion concealed for fear of its dis covery by her who holds your rightful place, or else the tattling servants." She read no more. She crushed it in her hand, and then hid it in her pocket as if it was a serpent that had stung her, as if it was a serpent of the dead

"Oh, my God!" she groaned, in her anguish, "it is only too true what his aunt told me! I am only a blot on his life."—She hobbled into the adjoining room, where a five-months-old infant slept in a crib. She fell on her knees, hid her pallid face in the coverlet, and wept such bitter tears that grief can

"Oh, we will not endure it any longer; we will go out of this life as completely as if we had never been in!"-She rose, went into her own chamber, gathered up her jewelry, hid it in her bosom, and filled her purse with money. Godfrey had al-ways been liberal, and in the last few

About dusk she called the nurse. Bring the baby into my room, and tell them not to wait dinner for me." The nurse obeyed. The mistress is going to lie down, she thought, and wants her bale with her.

An hour later Godfrey asked for his wife. The nurse answered that she was lying down and did not wish to be disturbed. He turned away disappointed; it had now been two days since he had seen her for a moment.

He returned to his office, and did not come home until a late hour. In the outer room he found the nurse asleep in a chair. He awakened her. She sprang to her feet and rubbed her eyes. "What time is it?" she cried.

"One o'clock!" was the somewhat impatient response. "And I have forgot the blessed lady, she cried. "I sat down to await the mistress' orders, and must have gone asleep." As she spoke she opened the door. "They are not here!"

"Not here?" he ejaculated. He entered the desolate room; no wife, no baby greeted his eyes. On one of the pillows a note was pinned, and the nurse handed it to him. "Your own heart will tell you where have gone. Do not seek to find me." He read the words over and over; was there any hidden meaning in them? "My God, what can it mean? She He had no inkling of the truth-nothing to lead him to the unraveling of the mystery.

He called the servants and awoke his aunt and cousin. Their search was fruitless; she had gone as completely and secretly as though she had dropped through the earth.

The next morning Ophelia Brent opened the newspaper, and ran her eyes over the columns. "A sad accident," she read. "Last night, about eleven o'clock, a woman with a babe in her arms jumped off the ferryboat. All efforts to rescue her were fruitless." A cry escaped from her lips, and she passed it to Godfrey. He read it with ashen lips and pallid face.

It was a quiet little hotel generally, but to-night there was a rushing of feet and some unwonted commotion. A pale, delicate woman opened her door and beckoned to a servant.

"What is the trouble?" she inquired. "A lady dying in the next room," was the response. She cast one glance back to the bed where an infant lay asleep, and then cautiously wended her way to the scene of death and sorrow.

The woman on the bed was insensible, and beside her stood a man with a wailing infant in his arms. Great tears were running down his cheeks, and his form shook with emotion. "Give me the infant," she said, gen-"I have a child of that age of my own."

He cast one glance at the frail woman who spoke to him, and then relinruished the child to her care The next day the bereaved husband came to see her. He told her they were on their way to California; that his wife was taken sick on the train, and got off here for medical aid. "All help was vain," he continued; "and now I am left with a poor motherless babe. I have no relatives to take it to; I am utterly at a loss what to do.'

"Let me keep it," said the woman, eagerly. "It is about the same age as my own: they will be like twins." "Are you able?" he questioned. "I noticed that walking seemed very painful to you."

A flush stole into her pale cheek. "I am weak, very weak," she returned, "but surely I will not be forsaken if I try to care for a motherless infant." "Then I will leave him. May heaven reward you for your kindness." He took a roll of bills from his pocket, and counted out a liberal sum. "I will write you soon after I reach my destination," he said, as he left. "No one will ever trace me here," and make a home for myself and babes." A small but desirable place was soon found. She hired a girl to do her work and help care for the children. A few weeks made a great change in her health, and she determined to try and give music lessons. She want-

The old physician whom she consulted when she first arrived, and who had assured her that all that ailed her was protracted weakness, from which in time she would recover, promised to speak among his patients for pupils. His two little granddaughters headed the list, which soon run up to six.

 Once every six months a letter came from Mr. Forrester, the father of the babe, and with it a check for two hun dred dollars. The years passed by; years of bitter tears and passionate longings, until they numbered seven. Had it not been for her blossom, Baby Belle, she would not have had the courage to face them. One morning she was surprised by a strange gentleman calling to see her. She went into the little parlor, think-to procure a teacher. She recognized her visitor. "Mr. Forrester!" "Mrs. Godfrey, I am pleased to see you looking so much improved," he exclaimed, as he took her hand. He was met at the railroad depot in Newark by his sister, who escorted him to his former home. Upon entering he anxiously inquired for his mother. The sister hesitatingly told him that both mother and father had died, which news so affected him that he reeled and fell to the floor in a stupor. By the prompt aid of a physician the grieved man's life was saved, but his reason is so far gone that his incarceration in a hospital for the insane it is thought will be necessary.

A WONDERFULLY GOOD UNDERSTAND ING.—A pair of No. 29 shoes, 19 inches long, 71/2 inches wide, with waists of 181/2 inches, instep 191/2 and ball 19, attract much attention in the show case of a John street shoe house, in New York city. They have cork soles and button tops, reaching to the calf, the measure at which is 201/2 inches. The neels are 5½ inches wide and 4 inches long, and they contain as much stock as eight ordinary pair of ladies' shoes, requiring four chamois skins to line them. The cost of the shoes is $45, and they are said to be the first pair of dress shoes made for Miss Fanny Mills, of near Sandusky, O., whose feet are famous for their size. The cat had a fit the first day, two or three the second, and then the number of attacks increased until, as the saloon man said, "There was more fits than cats, and the cat had to give in." Maxwell, who it will be remembered was charged with the murder of C. A. Preller at St. Louis, about April 5, and placing the body in a trunk, where it was found on the 14th of April, and who then fled from the country, has been captured at Aukland, New Zealand, and was landed in San Francisco on Monday, and no doubt by this time is on his way to the city where the murder was committed, where he will be tried. It is expected that the trial will be a long and expensive one, as Maxwell shows much grit, and the insurance companies in which Preller's life was insured for a large sum will aid the defence on the supposition that the body found in the trunk was not Preller's but that of a cadaver, purchased for the purpose of deceiving the insurance companies and thus get the insurance money. The companies believe Preller to be alive and has disappeared to render the plan to rob them more complete.

Police Leutenant Michael Mullen, of Cincinnati, gave the Democrats considerable "aid and comfort" at the election last November by causing the arrest of 100 Republican colored men, the night before the election and keeping them locked up until after the close of the polls, when they were released, no charge being preferred against them. For this piece of fine electioneering he was arrested and sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the county jail, which sentence commenced Jan. 3. The Democrats recently petitioned President Cleveland to pardon him, and notwithstanding the fact that the petition was not signed by the or by the District Attorney who conducted the prosecution, he has been pardoned. To a disinterested person this clemency has the appearance of a reward for services to the Democratic party. The petition for a pardon was signed by a number of the most prominent Democratic politicians in Ohio.

Why Is It?

I call for information on the recent discrimination made by the Michigan Central Railroad, between the white and colored citizens of the State of Michigan, in going to and from celebrations. Why is it that when celebrations are announced by the colored citizens, to take place in the State of Michigan, and low rates asked by said citizens of the authorities of the Michigan Central Railroad and branches, that said authorities of the above railroad and branches make this discrimination: Namely, that no white citizen shall have a low rate ticket to colored celebration? Why this extraordinary regulation has come into existence in Michigan, we, with many citizens, are at a loss to know. It can't be that the authorities of the road referred to are afraid that white citizens would want to do ordinary business on colored celebration days, and thus seek to get low rates! But we have a better opinion of the white citizens of Michigan than that. Again, it can't be possible that the authorities of the above road wants to prevent the white and colored meeting together as citizens, to exchange thoughts on the past and present condition of the citizens of Michigan! Is it in consequence of the Democrats coming into power that this strange regulation in Michigan railroads has been made? We hope not. We want the regulation removed, for it is in opposition to Mr. Cleveland's inaugural address, the civil rights bill, and Democratic platform, where they

As near as could be ascertained the total Union loss was 359.496. Of this number 110.038 were publican. killed or died of wounds; 224,586 died of diseases; 4,933 were drowned; 4,114 deaths were accidental; 524 were murdered: 100 were killed after they were captured: 391 committed suicide; 267 were executed; 64 executed by the ememy; 313 died of sunstroke; 2,034 other known causes; and 12,121 died of causes not stated. There has never been an effort made to obtain statistics on the rebel side, but it cannot be far ont of the way to estimate that the southern losses were equal to our own. Aspirations for Statehood. A recent letter from Dakota is authority for the assertion that the people of the territory, who are becoming very anxious for admission as a state, generally wish to be admitted just as the territory stands, without division. There is no little diversity of opinion and the lack of unity of purpose has been a bar to throwing the greatest effective influence for admission. The sentiment of the people, however, this informant states, is overwhelmingly for keeping the coming state intact. The gener ation of politicians left over from the old Dakota of six years ago, and that springing from the new population acquired since 1880, desire division and

The reason for the feeling among the citizens is probably to be sought in the greater prestige which the full territory would have as a single state. Taking it as it stands Dakota ranks high in the elements of intelligence and thrift. It outranks 25 states in railroad mileage, 23 in postoflices and 32 states in the revenue it furnishes the postollice department. Of all the eastern and middle states only New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts have as many newspapers. Dakota also has 2,200 schools. That tells the story. A convention will be held early in September to prepare for the entrance of south Dakota into the union. In spite of the popular feeling, presuming the latter to be correctly represented, it is probable that the territory will be cut in two. The national interest in the question demands that. For Dakota's unprecedented strides in population and enormous spread of territory, as well as the commercial avenues of communication, point to the advisability of making it two common wealths instead of one. But the claimant for statehood is knocking at the door and it will not be prudent to defer her admission, either for political reasons or any other.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

The President was compelled by the universal remonstrance of decent men to revoke the appointment of Meade to be postmaster at Hazelburst, Miss., because Meade was one of those who planned and approved of the wanton murder of Print Matthews at the polls for voting the Republican ticket. Since then it has been proposed to ap point George Groome, one of the editors of the Vicksburg Commercial-Herald, to be postmaster at Vicksburg. This has brought out a shower of re monstrances, on the ground that, if Meade was removed because he approved of the murder of Print Matthews, Groome is equally guilty. Among the proofs is an extract from one of Groom's editorials in which he said that: "The killing of Print Matthews, of Copiah county, the other day, is not an event calculated to excite any regret outside of his immediate family circle. The killing of Matthews at any time in the past dozen years would have occasioned no surprise or regret." And much more of the same sort. If, therefore, the President draws the line at murder, he cannot consistently permit Groome, any more than Meade, to be appointed to office.—Detroit Post.

GALESBURG, Aug. 10. - During a thunder storm early yesterday morning lightning struck a barn belonging to Alanson Becker, who lives near the place, set it on fire and it was entirely consumed, together with a large quanity of grain and hay. A binder was the only thing saved. The loss will amount to about $3,000. There is an insurance of $800 on the barn, $1,000 on the grain and a small amount on the farm implements destroyed.

RICHLAND, Aug. 10. - Yesterday morning lightning struck the residence of Arthur Barrett and distributed itself over the whole house. It badly injured the roof, tore up the carpets, splintered the floors, made kindling wood of the cellar stairs and knocked down a part of the foundation. None of the occupants of the building were seriously injured.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 10 .-John Fox and Fred Schuur were engaged in painting the dial of the clock in the tower of the Second street methodist church this morning. While attempting to lower the scaffold the rope slipped from them and both were thrown to the ground, a distance of 70 feet. Fox's neck was broken and he died instantly. Schuur has the ribs on his left side broken and suffers internal injuries. It is thought he will not

The difficulty at the Saginaws betweeen the mill owners and their men is not yet settled. A few of the mills have started up on reduced hours and wages, but the most of them are still closed. On Thursday last a conflict took place between the police and some 200 or 300 of the strikers who had gone to close a mill which had just started up. The mob was dispersed, but not before several were injured by the policemens' batons. Another crowd of 200 was dispersed at the salt block of Avery & Eddy, at Bay City, on the same day.

It shows at a glance the annual numler of deaths from small-pox in the army and navy since 1860, togetler with the ratio of such deaths per 1,000, and the number of men joining in each year. Through out the whole period, with very few exceptions, the tendency has been toward a constant diminution of mortality. In the case of the army, this is all the more gratifying on account of the much larger number of recruits now joining the service, a class particularly liable to catch any infectious disease which happens to be rife. During the first five years to which the table refers, the average annual mortality from smallpox in the army was 29.5, and the average number of rec uits 10,929. But in the last five yea s the mortality per annum fell to 5.5, while the number of men joining rose to 27,666. Turning to the companion service which had twenty-six fatal cases in 1860, we find a clean record for two years in succession —1877 and 1878—and the final ratio per 1,000 is only .03, the same as in the army. It appears established, therefore, by these tests that compulsory revaccination is slowly but surely operating to stamp out small-pox both in the army and navy, and if this happens in these cas s we have warrant for believing that the same results might be accomplished in the civil population .-London Globe.

THE annual reunion of the soldiers and sailors' association of Southwestern Michigan takes place at Benton Harbor on the 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st of this month, and the committee reports that a large number of G. THEY have a fellow at Benton Harbor who is claimed to be the champion beer drinker of the county, and if the Expositor tells the truth in the following notice, he probably can claim the championship of the State:

"Chas. Garrett has the ability of swallowing more beer in less time than any man in Berrien county. One of his latest feats in that capacity was to get away with a glass of the aforesaid ten inches long by 41 in circumference without stopping to breathe, and, strange to say, while it did not end with one, but many of the same propensity, it seemed to effect his nervous system no more than so much canal water."

SEVERAL of our citizens are enjoying themselves at Dramond Lake island this week. So far as we have been able to obtain their names the following compose the party: Mr. and Mrs. John Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. G. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Wells, Miss Kit. Kingery, Miss Nellie Smith, Miss Emma Croxon, Mr. L. Boyle and Mr. C. H. Baker. They have rented the hotel building on the island for their home while there and employed Mrs. J. N. Dempsey and daughter of this place, to look after the culinary department. That they may have a pleasant time and be much benefited by their sojourn on the island is the earnest wish of the RECORD.

MR. JOHN LOGAN, who has been a long and patient sufferer with that lingering disease, consumption, died Monday morning about one o'clock, aged 41 years. During the war Mr. Logan was a member of Co. A, Eighth Michigan Cavalry, and at the time of his death an honored member of Wm. Perrott Post No. 22, G. A. R., whose members have had the care of him for several months, and their kind attentions day and night have demonstrated the fact that the old soldiers remember their comrades in their hour of affliction and adversity. He was also an exemplary member of the Good Templar Lodge of this place. He leaves a wife and two small children. His funeral took place this forenoon, under the auspices of the Post, and was largely attended.

MARRIED.—At the residence of the bride's parents, on Terre Coupee Prairie, on Wednesday evening, August 5,

Miss Olive E., only daughter of Wesley THE ties and other material for the and Sarah Redding, to John C. Wenger, A large number of friends and relatives of the parties were gathered to witness the ceremony, which was briefmen, who are making the dirt fly at a | Iy and impressively performed by Rev. C. W. Pattee. The bride was tastefully arrayed in white nun's veiling, and seemed every way charming and happy. Miss Cora Price, of New Troy, was bridesmaid, and Dr. E.D. Howland, of Dayton, assisted the groom. The floral decorations were profuse. most noteworthy being a large horseshoe, set with pond lilies; in front and beneath this the contracting parties ook their position, at 8:30 o'clock, and received the congratulations, and good wishes of their friends. An elegant and bountiful supper was served, and at eleven o'clock the guests dispersed. The happy couple were the recipients of a large number of valuable presents, for which he did not pay, hence his de- the tokens of immediate relatives and friends.

Memorial Services.

The memorial services in Rough's Opera House last Sunday evening, under the auspices of Wm. Perrott Post, were largely attended, the seating capacity of the hall being nearly all occupied. The stage was handsomely and appropriately decorated. In the center, at the back of the stage, was a fine portrait of General Grant resting against a large American flag, appropriately draped, and underneath were the words "Peacefully Rest." The balance of the stage was tastefully arranged with emblems of mourning and a profusion of flowers. The exercises commenced by reading the General Order of the State Commander of the G. A. R., by Mr. Richmond, the Chaplain of Wm. Perrott Post, which was followed by music by the choir, which consisted of the Beistle Bros. and J. H. Roe, with Miss Huldah Hahn as organist. This was followed by an eloquent and impressive prayer by Rev. W. W.

Wells. The choir sang another piece, when Rev. H. Vallette Warren delivered an eloquent and highly eulogistic address, in which he reviewed the services of General Grant from the time he entered the army until his death. The address was well written and delivered by Mr. Warren in an earnest manner. Music by the choir, which was followed by the benediction, pronounced by Rev. W. W. Wells.

WE have received a communication this week in which the writer finds fault because the people have spent so much money for crape, &c., to properly decorate on the day of Gen. Grant's funeral. Besides this, he evidently thinks Gen. Grant was "no great shakes' anywav. But we will let him tell it in his own words:

"General Grant has no doubt done for his country just what any other honest man would do but he has not done even as much as some other men who never got a red cent nor a word of praise from his Country look at this one instent the battle of Bunkers Hill he stood back and the rest done the work & he got the praise and here we have been keeping him & his famely in there lucture & ease and extravegance."

. We hope the historian who may hereafter write up the great battles in which Gen. Grant was a participant will not forget the battle of "Bunkers Hill," as that was no doubt one of the greatest battles of the late "unpleasantness," but historians in the past have either entirely ignored it or placed the date of the battle too far in the past by about one hundred years.

I. O. G. T. Resolutions.

At the regular meeting of Buchanan Lodge No. 856, held Aug. 10, 1885, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The silent messenger of death has entered our Lodge and taken from us our true and beloved sister, Lillie Carlisle, who died July 28, 1885 aged 19 years; therefore be it Resolved. That in her death we have lost a sister who was always ready to aid the needy and sympathize with their misfortunes; the Lodge an active and faithful member: the Union schoo one of its noblest and most promising scholars; the church and Sunday school an efficient worker; the family a devoted daughter and sister. Resolved, That we tender to the family of our deceased sister our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of sad affliction; that our charter be draped in mourning for thirty days; that these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Lodge, and a copy be sent to the BUCHANAN RECORD and the MICHIGAN INDEPENDENT for publication.

Silas Ireland is a self made man

Born in Concord township, Ross county, Ohio, November 10, 1818, the son of poor parents, he had to work hard to help support the family and had but little time in which to acquire even the rudiments of an education. In October, 1839 he came, in company with his uncle, George Murphy, to Berrien township, with his entire wardrobe, except what was on his back, tied up in a handkerchief and carried under his arm. When he arrived the sum total of his earthly possessions was seven dollars. He went to work at grubbing, in the neighborhood where he now lives in ease and luxury, at $2 per acre. He showed his early faith in the government by laying by every piece of silver and every kind of money that bore the U. S. government stamp. When not grubbing by the acre, he worked by the day at whatever he could find to do, a part of the time surveying. On the 3d of May, 1842 he was married to Miss Martha Michael, of the same neighborhood. Twelve children have been born to them, eight boys and four girls; two of them, one boy and one girl, have died. The next month Mr. Ireland bought eighty acres of land for $250, the hard earnings of his days work. This land was all covrude log cabin and in this humble way the happy couple commenced wedded life. This land, and some acres since added, is the same on which he has ever since lived, and now his farm is provided with every convenience known tance through a corn field, but failed to husbandry, When Mr. Ireland located in Berrien township roads were land, like most who commenced life as he did, has been prosperous in business, the reward of diligence and hard labor. He was a stock-holder in and vice-pres ident of the First National Bank of Dowagiac until it wound up its affairs. He is now and has been for many years a stock-holder in and one of the directors of the First National Bank of this city. He was elected constable the first year he came to Michigan: has been supervisor of Berrien township five or six times; served as deputy county surveyor, and in 1877-8 repesented acceptably the First District of this county in the State Legislature. He has been executor or administrator for innumerable estates, and has been guardian of more children than any other man in the county, having as many as forty under his charge at one time. He was appointed by Gov. Bagley the first agent for this county of the State Board of Charities when the

The Misses Kittie Savage and Ida Black, of Buchanan, alighted from Kalamazoo accommodation on Tuesday morning, and went to the jollification circus at Hudson Lake with the party from this place. The excursion may be beneficial to the reading public, as works are liable to appear, bearing the following titles, to-wit: The Adventures of a Cloak, or, Ulster Lost and Ulster Regained, following Milton's scheme with Paradise; a treatise on how to drink milk from a bottle without getting the lacteal juice up. one's nose, and a long and interesting a catalogue of others which we cannot confide to you, owing to limited space. Clarence Mervin of Dowagiac was driving home through this place accompanied by his wife. While going down the river hill his horse stumbled and fell and the two wheeled gig in which they were riding, stood up on its fills for an instant and went clear over the horse. Strange to say no one was injured and the only damage reported was the breaking of a few straps.... Walter I. Himes, ex-clerk of this county, now of Elk Point, D. T., has been appointed by the governor to fill the office of sheriff in his county. .

Just then a man ran out of the barn and Mr. McClung followed him some disto catch the fellow. The man evidently intended to kill the horse, as an ax scarcely known; there was nothing with which the blow was struck was but a path leading to Niles. Mr. Ire found in the stall. [Three Oaks Sun.]

Kingery and Geo. Slater of Buchanan put up a telephone for the Warren Featherbone Co. from the office to the factory, also one from the office to the store....A storm passed over this section of country on Monday evening last. Hailstones of large size came down, and we learn not far west of town corn and vines were damaged slightly; many window panes were broken.

This will be a fine improvement....Through the efforts of ex-Sheriff Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Graham regained possession, a few days ago, of their gold watches and chains, stolen from their residence some weeks ago. The property was found in two pawn-shops in Chicago, where the thief or thieves had disposed of them for a small consideration." [St. Joseph Republican.]

Capt. Lockwood, who has charge of the harbors of lower Lake Michigan, has made his annual report to Washington. Of the St. Joseph harbor he says: "At St. Joseph it is proposed to tear out part of the old north pier, beginning at a point four hundred feet east of the angles, and replace it with pile revetment parallel with the south pier. To complete work on the St. Joseph harbor, below the railroad bridge $51,015 is asked. There is available this year, $20,367." Of the New Buffalo harbor he says: "At New Buffalo there has been expended in all $83,000, and yet there is only three feet of water at the entrance, and the harbor is available only for fishing craft. The original estimate was $500,000, but the captain asks for nothing for the completion of the project.'

I Niles Mirror 1 It is not generally known that raw onions sliced and set on plates, absorb contagion in the air, and to eat plenty of them before entering infected air is a safeguard against disease. They are powerful but harmless in their antisceptic properties. Such a simple remedy would be well to be generally known....Officer Chas Evans, of Buchanan, drove into Galien on the 5th., at 11 a.m., and the operator came running to him with a dispatch which read: "Niles depot, Mich., Aug. 5, 1885" To any officer at Galien: Arrest and hold two men in box car on No. 27." The train was one which did not stop at Galien and a request was sent to Gen. Manager Brown for an order to stop it. The order came just in time. Mr. Evans found the two men in the car, arrested them and took the passenger train and brought them to this city, arriving at 11:50. This was doing up business pretty quick, but they proved not to be the right men, for they were looking for two who left the Cass connty jail the Saturday afternoon previous, charged with burglary of a dwelling house ... Friday evening at about 7 o'clock some person entered the back door of H. C. Wheeler's saloon, on second street, took the key from the top of the sideboard, opened the money drawer and appropriated $27. Mr Wheeler and his right-hand man(Del)

stood in the doorway, not more than

Accompanying this article are portraits of thirty of the Old Testament Revision Company, and Wyclif, Coverdale and Tyndale, besides other illustrations. Illustrative papers on "Madagascar," "Picturesque Bits of Jamaica," "Warwick and its Neighborhood," and "Scenes at Chautaqua Lake," will interest the geographical student. Bernhard Klein, Auguste Panseron, Johann Simon Mayer and Samuel Parkman Tuckerman are sketched in the Sacred Musicians series "The Prodical Son." with two illustrations, is the subject of the Parable, and "The Rival Kingdoms of Judah and Israel" the subject of the Bible History article. This last has seven fine illustrations. Adventure is provided in "Elephant Trapping in Ceylon," "The Aggageers, or Sword-hunters, on the Nile," and "The Prisoners' Adventure." Dr. Talmage's sermon on "The Boy Home," and his editorial comments treats on fresh and timely topics. The two serial stories increase in interest and there are several good short stories and poems, besides an attractive and abundant miscellany. As to the medical profession, it is so well represented that if an argument of cause and remedy should be raised there would be a regular squabble for precedence among speakers, each telling us of his individual ability and experience. Nor is there any deficiency of representations of the legal profession, who, if chance permitted them, would confound us with their technical phraseology. be found men of almost every class; mechanics in good work, and others out of employment; sporting men who know the pedigree of every horse in the racing calendar, and give gratuitous advice on the races to come, assuring any who have money to invest in their certainty of gain; they live mysteriously, yet always manage to dress respectably, and to do without work. But there are honest tradesmen here who gain their livelihood by the sweat of their brow; they prefer th se establishments, because they can enter at any time they please and find a good fire and a hearty reception, when supplied with the mysterlous 20 cents. Again, we have seen wits, "natural wits, without education," at these lodging houses—men from whom we can derive a better knowledge of life than can be gathered an individual I once met at one of these places. At my first interview he was walking up and down the room asking conundrums, and quickly answering them, after each answer calling loudly, "half a dime the book." I at first ques-tioned his sanity, but soon found that he was at rehearsal before going into the streets to sell half-dime books, not that these identical conundrums were in the books, but were generally inven-tions of his own, at which he was clever. His ingenuity was never at a loss: when books would not sell he would make half a dime microscopes with a bit of glass and a tin covering, which would exhibit the animalculæ in a drop of water al most as perfectly as the more expensive ones, and would magnify cheese-mites into little monsters.

[New York Sun.] An interesting account of the mental states induced by fright was given sometime since by Dr. Fazio, who was an eye witness of the great earthquake in Ischia. He says the emotions awakened by the catastrophe were of the most varied character. During the fifteen seconds that the shock continued everybody stood still, seemingly rooted to the ground with terror. Men were weak in the knees and shook as with ague, feeling as though they were about to fall. Soon the stillness was broken by loud cries and howls, and every one rushed toward the shore. Then women and children fell into convulsions, or appeared to be semi-paralyzed and speechless. Rudeness and brutality were mingled with self-sacrifice and heroism of the most exalted character.

Six hours after the catastrophe the stillness of death reigned over Casamicciola. Men wandered about the ruins half clad and silent, as if risen from the grave; women were excited and hysterical; children of 8 or 10 years seemed dazed and stupefied, while smaller children stood around unconcernedly, eating whatever attractive food they could find in the ruins. It was most interesting to see the different ways in which individuals were af-

The keeper of a refreshment booth, who had lost everything, kept offering his delicacies to those who passed by, just as though his whole stock had not been swept away in the debris caused by the earthquake. A surgeon, covered with blood and sorely wounded by the falling beams, was concerned only for his instruments, and inquired after them of everybody whom he encountered. An hysterical woman, who had been bedridden for months, jumped up and saved herself by flight, and ro-mained permanently cured. A very considerable number of instances of this kind are well authenticated, and the reports seem to show that diseases not generally classed as nervous, and, at all events, not wholly nervous in character, ofter disappear under influences of a strong emotional character. Many persons at Ischia, who were brave and full of energy immediately after the first shock of the earthquake, became depressed, or wholly apathetic, later in the day, or had conv Isions, or alternate fits of laughter and crying. Sometimes an attack of melancholia was induced which continued for months, and many peop e became incurably insane.

These were, perhaps, persons having the insane temperament, though the actual manifestation of it might never have taken place except under the influence of a great nervous shock. In many instances there was an aversion for food, lasting for hours after the catastrophe.

There were several instances in which the hair was whitened by fright, and even some boys of 10 to 14 years showed heads sprinkled with gray. Many of the ruins exhibited the greatest indifference to their fate, following list-and had not the faintest idea as to how long they had remained buried. In very many cases those who had been wounded by falling buildings were obliged to undergo severe surgical operations. Most of them experienced no pain while under the knife, though they were manifestly in a condition of excessive sensibility to most of the impres-

'there is another meaning of miss. We

The consequences of this more or less general neglect are found in a predisposition to disease, both febrile and pulmonary. The unwashed skin is in-capable of discharging its natural and healthy functions, and the stoppage or interrupted action of the organs which throw off so vast an amount of the waste of the system, develops and fosters every morbid tendency. Times). The leading Kaishinto paper is the Akebono Shinbon (Morning Sun), and the most influential Juito organ is the Choya Shinbon (Daily Globe). All the leading cities have papers, there being nearly 3000, all told, in the empire. The total population of Japan is about 36,000,000. Approximately, the Konkentos number 1,000,000, th Kaishintos 500,000 and the Juitos 5000. The balance go from one party to the other from day to day. They take up a Konkento paper, read an article that they like, and espouse Konkento pring ciples. The next day they peruse a Kaishinto publication, and become, for the time being, a Kaishintos. The Juitos, being looked upon as revolutionists, comparatively few dare to side with them openly. As will be seen, politics are still very young in Japan. The present emperor, Mikado Mutsuhito, has been in power since the revolution in 1856. He succeeded his father in the control of the government by birth, and succeeded, by force of arms, to the military power which had been for 200 or 300 years in the family of Tykoon, who was deposed by the revolution. Tykoon, now about 55 years of age, is living quietly in Sidsuoka, a small country town. The revolution which deposed him resulted in the loss of about 100,000 lives. The church has but little power in affairs of state. The principal beliefs are the Shinto, or original religion of Japan; Buddhism, which came from China 800 or 1,000 years ago, and the Christian beliefs, introduced early in the seven-teenth century. Of the latter belief, the Roman Catholics had the ascendency for a century or more, but after the religious war of Amakusa they were largely driven out of the empire, most of them taking refuge on Amakusa island. I uring the last twenty years the other Christian denominations, as Congregational, Unitarian, Episcopal, Baptist and Methodist, have built many churches and obtained a strong foothold in the empire. (If the denomina-tions mentioned, the Congregational seems to the most popular.

> Origin of the Tumpkin. [Exchange.]

Without doubt the pumpkin pie was originally evolved in New England; just where the pumpkin itself was first discovered in a wild state is a disputed point in geographical and historical botany, but perhaps the vine which DeSoto found growing on the gulf coast of Florida was the progenitor of our best pies. De Lesseps and Said Pasha. [Faris Letter.]

"Only strong characters know how to deal with barbarians," continued M. "Said had taken home with him from France a service of Sevres ware, and you had another for your own use. The service of the viceroy was soon broken to pieces through the carelessness of the domestics, while yours was still in good condition. The situation was unfortunate. One day you noticed that the well-trained camel that carried your dishes was replaced by an unruly and almost wild one. You were careful not to object. In a few moments your Sevres ware was in pieces. The viceroy trian won for you the warm friendship of the descendents of Mehemet Ali, more clever in exercises of this kind than in you and Said were in the midst of the desert. The viceroy's tent was pitched on the top of an eminence surrounded by a stone wall. You had noticed that at a certain point it was possible to jump the parapet on horseback. You chose this path. You might have broken your neck. But in the Orient foolhardiness counts for as much as wisdom. Your boldness excited universal admiration, and on that day the concession was signed."

A foreign riicer, whose legs were imprisoned under some heavy timbers, drew out a cigarette and smoked it with the utmost non halance. One man, as soon as he was pulled from the ruins, shook his rescuer by the hand and pre-sented him with his card. Another, who lay in the for twenty hours, immediately looked at his watch in order to ascertain the exact moment of his deliverance. A lady who had just been extricated from a mass of rubbish would not budge from the spot until she could ascertain the fate of her pet dog, which was buried covered up in the debris, heard a man calling loudly for his daughter. She attracted his attention to her, and succeeded in making him, believe that she was his lost child. So cunningly did she practice this deception that the old gentleman had rescued her from the ruins before the trick was discovered. Most of the people, however, who were imprisoned beneath the ruins were too indifferent to their fate to make any attempt to get free through stratagem. It

Again we have the youth from the country. He comes to New York with letters of introduction to merchants and others. These he delivers and is told with what appears to him cheerful words—"Call again." But after many days it is still the same answer—"Call again." He has written to his friends cheering hopes, and as days and weeks pass by he still hopes on, and with a wish to be as economical as possible, he seeks the 20-cent lodging house. Still hoping, but always unfortunate, he takes the temporary offer of employment that is afforded to the forlorn and destitute, that of a supernumerary of the theatres, for the 20-cent lodging houses supply the greater number of these auxiliaries to the stage. And you, reader, who attend the opera houses or the large theatres, and see before you a vast assemblage of kings, priests, and nobles, making a grand spectacle, perhaps believe that they have a good remuneration for their services. But perhaps one of the most singular exhibitions in this line was a Colt's navy revolver, which some years ago was sent to the factory in Hartfort, ('oun. This was before the adaption of these pistols to the metallic cartridges, and it is probable that in loading with open powder and ball only a small amount of powder got into the chambers, and the bullet was not propelled with sufficient force to drive it from the muzzle; at least the bullet did not go out, but lodged. As the shooter did not know whether the bullet escaped or not, he kept on firing until the barrel burst or bulged, and when it was sawed in two longitudinally there was found fourteen bullets wedged one into the Hugo's Ideas of the Future Life. [Paris Figaro.] Victor Hugo was always convinced that he would meet all his friends in a future world. He was equally sure that he had always existed from the antedi-luvian times when the Creator placed him on earth. He believed that he would exist forever, inasmuch as he felt in his soul thousands of hymns, dramas and poems that had never found expression. When the atheists would say to him "The proof that you will not exist in the future is that you did not exist in the past," Hugo would answer: "Who past," Hugo would answer: "Who told you I did not exist in the past centuries? You will say that is the legend of the ages. The poet has written: 'Life is a fairy tale twice written.' He might have said a thousand times written. There is not an age in which I cannot find my spirit. You do not believe in the doctrine of surviving personalities for the reason that you do not recollect your anterior existence But how can the recollection of vanished ages remain imprinted on your memory when you do not remember a thousand and one scenes and events of your present life! Since 1802 there have been ten Victor Hugos in me. Do you think that I can recall all their actions and all their thoughts? The tomb is dark, and when I shall have passed the tomb to emerge into light once more all these Victor Hugos will be almost wholly strangers to me, but it will always be
