BUCHANAN, BERRIEN COUNTY, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1888.

All earth to me is dreary now,

Each dazzling ray of hope is fled,

Neath sorrow's crushing weight I bow:

My sky is dark! Alone I tread

Of joy expells this bitter dream.

Ah, not a dream, 'tis too true,

The path of life, and not one gleam

That every cherished bliss I knew,

Far from my bosom is receding.

To one whose star is set in night?

What visions filled my airy flight

Far upward to the pure divine,

But as the mist on ocean's shore.

Or dew drops of the early morn,

Like forest bird with crippled wing,

And though all earthly joys may fail,

This precious promise he has given,

Each happy dream forever more,

Alone I'm left my lay to sin ..

No. not alone, that Friend above.

I have a hope within the veil.

On golden wing wrapt fancy soared,

For what can look all purely bright,

And fair hope's beacon light was mine,

And grasped each glittering pearl adored

Has left my happy heart a place forlorn

Inspires my soul with wonderous love,

To lead our thoughts from earth to heaven

RUMFORD'S, when not fresh

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder-"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances.

E. G. Love, Ph.D." "It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure.
"H. A. MOTT, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious sub-stance. Henry Morron, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology." "I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome.

S. Dana Hayes, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of the other hands of the country of the royal desired and the country.

' NOTE—The above Diagram illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

But it does cure any disease for which a reputable physician would prescribe IRON Physicians recognize Iron as the best restorative agent known to the profession, and inquiry of any leading chemical firm will substantiate the assertion that there are more preparations of iron than of any other substance used in medicine. This shows conclusively that iron is acknowledged to be the most important factor in successful medical practice. > There's an excursion to Beech Point to-morrow. Will you go with us-Lou and me?" "With pleasure. Anything to pass away the time until we are ready to start off for the summer vacation.

You ladies," and the young man bowed with an air of gay deference to his sister's fashionable friend, "who have nothing in the world to do but to sit in easy-chairs, and fan yourselves and look beautiful, can form no conception of the horrors of a close, heated law office, where we pass through a regular Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego experience eight hours out of every twenty-four."

This sally, of course, provoked an equally gay retort, and as Florence sat silently watching the two, a vague feeling of distrust crept into her heart; distrust of one whom, in her girlish thoughtlessness, she had, hitherto, been centent to regard simply as the friend that she professed to be, without troubling herself to inquire into the hidden motives and springs of that friendship. Could it be, as more than one officious acquaintance had already intimated, that Louise Whitman was really incapable of a pure and disinterested affection for any one, and that she attached herself to her merely as a satelite, determined to shine, even if it were from the reflected light of another's wealth and station? It was not a pleasant fancy, and yet Florence could not shake it off; and even amid the pleasant excitement and bustle of the morrow's excursion it would not be completely exorcised. The sail, the grove, the sylvan dinner were all delightful, but when the latter had been duly enjoyed and discussed, there came an interval of leisure that Louise proposed to spend in an exploration of the grove. "Let's go out to the western side," she whispered, in a confidential aside to her friend. "There's a beautiful place near there—one of the finest farms in the State, I've heard it said and I should really like to get a peep

"Who is the owner?" Florence spoke with the most profound indifference. A farm was, to her, simply a plot of ground covered with potatoes and corn; useful, no doubt, but decidedly unromantic and commonplace. "Mr. Wylie, a very wealthy, middle-aged gentleman, and a widower, with only one child, I believe." "Ah, a most desirable acquaintance for marriageable young ladies." Evidently Louise failed to detect the sarcasm of her friend's words, for she replied with unaffected eager-"You may well say so, for he is rich enough to afford his wife a house in town during the winter, and this would be a lovely retreat during the hot months of summer."

"But the owner himself," suggested Florence, mischievously, and stooping as she spoke to pluck a spray of the ground ivy, whose polished green leaves and scarlet berries had caught her eye. "He might prove a disagreeable encumberance, you know."

"Oh, he is a nice, gentlemanly mant a trifle past forty when I saw him, which was on the occasion of my visit here that I told you about. I remember that he twined my curls about his fingers, and kissed me, saying to papa that I bade fair to become a very beautiful woman." The fair speaker tossed her head complacently at the recollection of this tribute to her childish beauty. "It's a pity that you couldn't find ance with the gallant old gentleman; you might manufacture quite a ro-mance out of it," laughed Florence. "Only fancy yourself Mrs. Wylie, of Beech farm! You might invite all of your friends—myself included, of course-out here to spend their summers, and feast them on strawberries and cream, with plenty of-Oh, how That my lone heart is sad and bleeding; beautiful!" And forgetful of all her foolish banter Florence stood silent, but with wide open, admiring eyes, gazing out upon the scene that lay be-

In months long past, when life was bright, A sudden turn in the wood path that they had been following through the grove, had revealed to them the broad domain at a single glance, with neither forest nor hill to obstruct the view. Far away, toward the west, stretched the fertile acres; wide meadow lands lying at their very feet, where waved in its full perfection the heavily headed grass crops, dotted with golden buttercups and the more fragrant blossoms of the purple clover; while further away, gleamed white beneath the midsummer sun the snowy fields of buckwheat and the pale-green patches of rye; and further still, in the distance, stood the hillside, crowned with the glossy green streamers and silken tassels of the Indian corn—the bannered host that summer sends to guard the autumn's golden treasurers. Born and bred in the city, Florence Hollis had never before, in her whole life, looked upon a scene of such rare and surpassing beauty. It is true that, "You're going on the excursion to-morrow, Flo, of course?" inquired in her yearly visits to the seaside or to friends in distant cities, she had often passed through many so called fine agricultural districts, but beyond a "I don't know. I hadn't thought of passing glimpse from a car window, of hay and potato fields, flanked by big barns and comparatively diminutive look of surprise, not unmixed with impatience, at the indifferent face of dwelling-houses, she had never, heretofore, had the slightest conception of

"Why, it's to be the excursion of the holds within her bosom for the hand season," she went on. "Everybody, in of patient, intelligent labor. "It is a glorious sight!" she repeated, course you're going."
There was the sly shadow of a smile lurking in the dimpled corners of the young girl's mouth, but she only said, in the same tone of indifference,—
"Let them go, if they like. I can't see that I am under any obligations to accompany them." so enthusiastically that her companion, who had been engaged in a mental calculation of the probable value of the estate, smiled half contemptuously at what she evidently considered an entirely useless and uncalled-for display of sentimentalism. "I had no idea that a farm could be such a beautiful place. If I were only an artist I'd paint it, just as it looks now, with the bright summer sunshine on it, and theu, when the dreary, wintry days came, my picture should be a constant reminder of the summer days in store for me."

the glorious possibilities that nature

Miss Whitman laughed.
"I would rather," she said, "have the place itself, than ever so fine a picture of it, But what are you trying to get?"

Florence, having thrown her gloves and parasol upon the grass beside her was now down upon her knees, with one arm thrust through the fence. evidently trying with all her might to reach some object that quite as pertinaciously eluded her desperate grasp, replied, withdrawing her arm as she spoke, and laughing a little vexed laugh. "Don't you see it over there, close to that cluster of tall flowers? There are one, two, three—seven beautiful berries in it. I do so long to touch them, for I never picked a wild strawberry in my life, and I'm bound to have these." And snatching up the discarded parasol she thrust it through the opening between the fence rails, endeavoring, with the ivory hook at the end of the handle, to draw the coveted prize within reach of her eager other inducement than the knowledge ingers. that my society will conduce to your pleasure; and if Jack will go to take care of us, I will. Here, Jack," as the But she had not counted upon the tenacity of strawberry roots and stems, and in spite of all her efforts, the red-lipped clusters refused to yield themselves to her grasp.

"Ah, well! If the mountain won't come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the mountain." And before her companion could guess her intentions, the merry girl had scaled the high rail fence, and in a moment more she held up to view the bright scarlet berries with a laugh of triumph. "Oh, you shy little rogues!" she exclaimed, apostrophizing the blushing prize, and nodding her curly head at them, as if they had been a group of naughty urchins at school. "Why didn't you come when I called you, and save me the risk of breaking my neck in coming after you? You deserve to be devoured without mercy." Suiting the action to the word, the red lips closed over the topmost of the scarce redder berries, when Louise called out impatiently,-"What are you doing over there in that grass, Flo? Those mowers at the other end of the field will be sure to see you. Do come out, quick!" And the speaker cast a suspicious glance at a group of haymakers who were vigorously swinging their scythes, at some distance, but within sight of that part of the meadow. "And what if they do?" laughed

Florence, unconcernedly. "I don't believe they'll begrudge me a few field strawberries." And laughing defiance at her more cautious friend, she strolled still further into the field, peering eagerly beneath the tall grass to catch a glimpse, if possible, of more of the tempting fruit whose charms had lured her within the forbidden precincts. "See here!" she called out, triumphantly, and holding up to catch her friend's eye a handful of the rosy clusters that made that lady's mouth water. "They're just as plenty as the buttercups here by this stone. Come and pick some for yourself."

Unable longer to resist the temptation, Miss Whitman accepted the invitation, and proceeded, with many a cautious glance, in the direction of the haymakers, to follow her friend's example, making a most merciless raid upon the tempting defenceless berries.

"It wasn't the berries that I supposed Mr. Wylie would care for," she remarked, in an explanatory tone, as the two seated themselves upon a stone beneath the shade of a solitary maple to cool off, after their unusual exercise in the sunshine. "But I've heard it said that farmers were very particular about not having their grass disturbed just before the mowing, and I thought—"

"Bow! wow!" and both girls sprang to their feet with a cry of alarm, at sigh of a hugh mastiff that came bounding toward them, his eves glaring and his great red tongue hanging from his mouth, whether from heat or rage neither of the frightened girls paused to ascertain, as, with shrieks of uncontrolled terror, they fled in, as it seemed to them, the direction of the grove.

But, in their pursuit of the berries, neither of them had realized the distance that had been traversed by them, and failing to catch sight of their only landmark, the fence, Miss Whitman, in her bewilderment, turned aside, stumbled, and, catching her dress upon a projecting fragment of a half-buried to read the note, suggested that they step stump, came to the ground, with a force and suddenness that called forth successions of shricks and groans from the terrified girl herself, while they arrested Florence in her flight, and prompted her, in spite of her own terror, to come instantly to her friend's assistance.

"Are you hurt, Lou?" she gasped, as with a hurried glance at the fast ap- him to call at his office.

proaching dog, she tried to assist her to rise. "Do try and stand up if you possibly can, for that horrid brute is close upon us now."

As the words escaped her lips a louder bay from the brute himself proved his nearness to them, and brought Louise to her feet, just as a clear, manly voice called out impetuevidently one of the farmers, came hurriedly toward them, a look of con-cern upon his handsome, sunburned face, as he said, courteously, "Don't be frightened, ladies. The dog is not at all dangerous, in spite of his voice. He hasn't really courage enough to attack a cat, but he likes to make believe fierce. Don't you, old fellow?" addressing the dog, that now, perfectly quiet, stood rubbing his head caressingly against his master's hand. "I'm very sorry that he should have frightened you so," he added, with a glance at Florence's flushed face, and the no less flushed but far angrier one of her companion. "I supposed when I saw him start off that he was after a squirrel or field mouse, for I had not observed you until your voices attracted my attention."

Florence blushed slightly beneath the clear gray eyes bent so earnestly upon her, as she said hurriedly,— "There's no harm done, I assure you

But here Louise interrupted her by an angry exclamation, as she held up the stained and torn remnant of her "No harm done? Look at my dress! It is completely ruined, and on account of that great ugly brute of a dog." In her indignation she shook the ragments threateningly at the dog nimself, who, seeming to consider the act as a challenge, snapped briskly at them from beneath his master's detaining hand.

"I am sorry for the injury to your dress," returned the young man, with quiet courtesy, but as no one is at all blamable in the matter, and Lee was only acting out his doggish nature, I cannot see

"Whom does the dog belong to?"
Florence colored painfully at her friend's insolent tone and manner, but the young farmer seemed perfectly unmoved, as he answered readily,— "Myself."

"Then I shall go directly to Mr. Wylie, and complain of you for keeping such a brute upon his premises. and you may be sure that you will either have to dispose of the dog or quit his employ yourself." "Do you know Mr. Wylie?"

The tone was cool and corteous, but Florence caught a mirthful twinkle in his eye as he turned his face toward the two. "Of course I do," and the lady drew herself up haughtily, as she spoke. "I have known him for years, so you need not count upon my lack of influence with him." she added, scornfully, "for it will be strong enough to drown or ang that detestable beast, if nothing more. Here Florence, overwhelmed with surprise and mortification, and uncertain in regard to the surest mode of quelling this unlooked-for tempest on the part of her friend, and, at the in spite of the alleged harmlessness of their four-footed assailant, began, rather awkwardly, to express her commiseration for her companion's misfortune, when, to her inexpressible relief, in glancing across the field, she caught sight of Jack, approaching from the direction of the grove, and evidently in search of them.

"O Jack!" she cried, running to meet him, and then, in a burried half-whisper she added, by way of explanation, "we climbed over into the field to pick some strawberries, and a great dog ran at us, and we ran, and Lou tumbled down and tore her dress, so that when the dog's master came to our help, instead of thanking him she was hateful, and declared that she'd go to his employer and complain of him for keepng such a troublesome animal."

Here Florence paused, more for the lack of breath than for the lack of something to say, while Jack, who had listened to her communications with his usual easy indifference, now suddenly started forward, his usually indolent face lighted up with a glad smile, and his hand extended in eager recognition.

"Hector!" The two shook hands with a heartiness that fully proved the sincerity of their joy at meeting.
"I never dreamed that this was your place, Wylie," exclaimed Jack, after leturning the other's cordial salutation. "I knew that it was somewhere in these parts, but I didn't know exactly where, or I should have been here long before this. Halloo, Flo!" as he caught a glimpse of his sister's puzzled face; "I came near forgetting you in my surprise. Wylie, this is my sister Florence, that you've heard me speak of before; and Miss Whitman, a friend of ours; and, ladies, this is my old classmate and chum at college, Hector Wylie."

Babies for Crocodile Bait.

"Babies wanted for crocodile bait. Will be returned alive." If newspapers abounded in Ceylon as much as crocodiles do, advertisements worded like the foregoing would be common in their want columns. As it is, the English crocodile hunter has to secure his baby by personal solicitation. He is often successful, for Ceylon parents, as a rule, have unbounded confidence in the hunters, and will rent their babies out to be used as crocodile bait for a small consideration. Cevlon crocodiles suffer greatly from ennui; they prefer fo lie quite still, soothed by the sun's glittering rays, and while away their lazy lives in meditation. But when a dark brown infant with curling toes sits on a bank and blinks its eyes at them they throw off their cloak of laziness and make their preparations for a delicate morsel of Ceylonese baby humanity. When the crocodile gets about half way up the bank the hunter, concealed behind some reeds, opens up fire, and the hungry crocodile has his appetite and his life taken away at the same time. The sportsman secures the skin and head of the crocodile and the rest of the carcass the natives make use of.

NUMBER 15. An April Thunder Storm.

A dispatch to the Associated Press from Tionesta, Pa., says: "During the frightful thunder storm that passed over the oil regions on Friday afternoon, April 6, Simon Frey was in his barn, looking out of the door. A blinding flash of lightning was follow-ed almost immediately by a terrific thunder clap, and Frey saw a ball of "Down, sir! down!" A young man, fire run around a wire clothes line from a post in the yard to a corner of the house, to which one end of the line was fastened. When the ball struck the house, Frey saw the splinters fly from the timbers, and the ball disappeared. Frey's wife and baby were in the house. He ran to the house to see if they were injured. He found the baby lying in the corner of the kitchen and his wife in the middle of the floor Both were apparently dead. He dushed water in his wife's face, and she slowly recovered. Frey then succeed ed in restoring the baby. His wife's shoes were lying side by side under the table. When he lifted his wife from the floor he found a round hole burned in her dress between her shoulders. He stripped the dress off and discovered a red spot on the flesh, from which two red streaks led, one to the right hip and down the side of the right leg to the toes. The other streak fed in the same way to and down the

As soon as Mrs. Frey was able to speak, she told her husband that she had been sitting in one corner of the kitchen, holding the baby, when she suddenly felt a great shock, and that was all she remembered. She had her shoes on at the time. The electric fluid which Frey had seen had evidently struck Mrs. Frey after it entered the house at the corner, separated, and leaving the marks of the passage as described. No marks were found on the baby, which had been hurled across the room.

On looking for further traces of the electric current, Frey found that it had passed through the floor into the cellar, where it had burned the iron hoops of a vinegar barrel and made a hole in the bottom of three milk pans. A bolt struck the house of William Oadel, a quarter of a mile from Frey's. It came down the side of the chimney, hurling the bricks in every direction and pulverizing many to fine powder. It followed the chimney into the gar-ret of the house, run along the garret floor to the partition, when it went through the floor, half of it on one side of a partition wall on the story below and half on the other side. The half that was on the left side of the wall jumped into the room when half way down, setting a bed on fire, tearing the baseboards away on all sides of the room, and then passing through the floor again to the kitchen, where it knocked a servant senseless, broke a table to splinters, set fire to a splint bottom chair, and then passed down into the cellar. The part of the fluid that went down the partition up stairs entered a bedroom where one of | ful nature. A small quantity of Oadel's sons was lying sick in bed. With the exception of the servant girl no one in the house was injured, although there were seven persons in the diningroom and two besides the girl in the kitchen. Mrs. Oadel ran up stairs to her sick son, and found the carpet on

The invalid was uninjured. The fire had barely been extinguished when the house was struck the second time, the bolt passing through the roof and entering the sick man's room. It knocked the headboard of the bed to pieces, and ran along the four sides of the room, and uniting again on one side, where it passed through the floor, splintering the casing from a window in the room below, and tore the clapboards off the side of the house for several feet, spending its force against a cherry tree, to which it jumped from the house, splintering its trunk as if it had been done with an ax.

The servant whom the first stroke of lightening rendered unconscious had not been restored when the house was struck the second time, but she came to without anything having been done to restore her, immediately after the house was struck the second time. Every person except the servant and the invalid, was made deathly sick by the second stroke, some of them suffering with distressing nausea attended by a strong sulphurous taste for hours afterward. The invalid was not affected in any way by the fluid, although he declared that a flame the size of a lamp flame rested on his forehead while the current was flashing about his bed, and that from it a thousand jets and sparks issued and seemed to envelope his head. No fire resulted from the lightning, except the burning of the carpet in the invalid's room, but the damage to the property will require the almost entire rebuilding of the house.

Then the father hastens out into the street, and crosses the nearest bridge, scarching for the truant spirit. He hears the mother's wail, and shouts back the cheering answer: "Coming! coming!" Then a paper horse is burned in the house for the soul to ride home upon, and the mother, still uttering her weird cry, begins to search the corners of her floor-mud, if she be poor; brick or marble, if she be rich-and the first thing of life she finds is supposed to contain the missing spirit. Often it is a flea or a beetle. When it is secured she gives a great cry of joy, wraps it in paper, and places it under the pillow of the suffering child, and

Dangerous Food Adulteration.

The Fraudulant use of Alum and Lime in Cheap Baking Powder, If consumers prefer to buy an adulterated article of food because it can be had at a lower price, they undoubt-edly have the right to do so, provided the adulterants are not of a character injurous to health. If such articles are not falsely sold as pure, and the customer is not deceived as to their real character, the transaction is not ille-gitimate. But the large danger in the traffic in adulterated food arises from the deception that is practiced by manufacturers usually classing such goods as pure. This is almost invarably done when the adulterant is one that is injurous to health. For instance, manufacturers of alum and lime baking powders not only fail to inform the public of the real character of their goods, but carefully conceal the fact that they are made from these poisonous articles. Most of these manufacturers also claim that their articles are pure and wholesome, whilesome go still further and proclaim boldly that they are cream of tartar goods, or even the genuine Royal Baking Powder itself. No consumer will buy alum baking powders knowingly, for it is well understood that they are detrimental to health. The sale of lime and alum baking powders as pure and wholesome articles is, therefore, criminal, and it is satisfactory to notice that several persons engaged in such sale have already been brought to justice in the courts. The official analysis have recently been active in pursuit of these dishonest articles. The baking powders of several states have been carefully and critically examined. The officials are surprised at the large amount of lime and alum goods found. It is a sug-gestive fact that no baking powder except the Royal has been found without either lime or alum, and many contain both. Dr. Price's baking powder has been found to contain nearly 12 per cent. of lime; Cleveland's 11 per cent. of impurities: the phosphate powders over 12 per cent. of lime.

The chief service of lime is to add weight. It is true that lime, when subject to heat, gives off a certain part of carbonic acid gas, but a quicklime is left—a caustic of most powerhow much more serious must these effects be on the delicate membranes of the stomach, intestines and kidneys, more particularly of infants and children, and especially when the lime is taken into the system day after day, and with almost every meal. This is said by physicians to be one of the causes of indigestion, dropsy and those painful diseases of the kidneys now so

Adulteration with lime is quite as much to be dreaded as with alum, which has heretofore received the most emphatic condemnation from food analysis, physicians and chemists, for the reason that while alum may be practically desolved by the heat of baking it is impossible to destroy or change the natura of the lime so that the entire amount in the baking powder passes with all its injurious properties, into the stomach. The large profits from the manufacture of lime and alum baking powders has placed many of them in the market. They are to be found in the stock of almost every retail dealer, and are urged upon customers calling for baking powders upon all occasions. Because of their well-known detrimental character it is desirable that prompt means be taken to suppress their man-

Pure baking powders are one of the chief aids to the cook in preparing perfect and wholesome food. While those are to be obtained of well-established reputation, like the Royal, of whose purity there has never been a question,

A Remarkable Railroad. Probably the most remarkable railroad in the world is that running from Gloggintz to Lounering, near Vienna. It is only twenty-five miles in length, and cost over seven millions of dollars. It begins at the little station of Gloggintz, at an elevation of fourteen hundred feet, and from there the train, hauled by two powerful locomotives. winds round and round over some fifteen double viaducts and through as many tunnels. It creeps along precipices affording glimpses of some of the wildest scenery in Europe. Its terminus, Lounering, is at an elevation of thirty-five hundred feet.

THE editor of the RECORD is the smallest man and the biggest nobody in town. In speaking of the Summer School, he says: "It is also expected that the State Teachers' Institute, lasting one week, will commence on the closing of the Summer School." That is lie number one. Whether it lasts longer or not, it is expected to last two weeks. "The school board has not been consulted regarding it" (the school). That is lie number two. The Director told the writer some time ago that the school building could be used for the purpose mentioned. He is the proper representative of the board. He is the only one, for instance, who will be consulted about holding the Institute in the building. Does the RECORD know how many of the board were not consulted, anyway? "The janitor will be expected to work nights and Sundays to do his annual job of housecleaning in time for the opening of the regular fall term of school." That is lie number three. To begin with, the janitor is a Christian man and does not work on Sundays, as the editor of the RECORD does. Moreover, the janitor will be paid for his extra work, and has kindly consented to do it. It was not deemed necessary to ask the additional privilege of using the library six weeks, nor did we ask for the use of the seats and piano. During the four years now closing, the school itself has supported a reading-room two years, bought most of the books in the library (except the encyclopedia), purchased a skeleton and case, an furnished the school in singing books, paid $50 toward a new piano—in all, invested nearly $300 for the benefit of the school. Will not the people prevail on the RECORD to let us use the library books? We wonder if the edi-

Up to the time the RECORD went to press the School Board had not been consulted about the proposed school. Peter Weese and J. E. Barnes knew nothing of the proposed school until they read the RECORD. B. D. Harper and Wm. Osborn first learned of it when they read Mr. Aleshire's circular. Robert Rogers heard, some weeks since, that there was some talk that perhaps there might be such a thing done, as conduct a summer school, but asserts that no request had been made to him for the use of the building for that purpose. This is how many of the board had not been consulted either separately or collectively. The first arrangement that was made with Mr. Dempsey to "kindly consent" to do the extra janitor work, was after Mr. Dempsey had read the above in the Period. "He [the director] is the only one. for instance, who will be consulted about holding the Institute in the building." That, surely, will be courteous and gentlemanly treatment of the balance of the board, each member of whom has just as much to say about it as does the director. The amusing part is that Mr Aleshire should show his true character in such a manner as above when no one, not even the RECORD, has ever objected to his using all of the school property he wants. We did think, and do yet, that a gentleman would at least have secured the consent of the board to use the public property for a private purpose. The fact is that Mr. Aleshire has no more right to appropriate that property for his private school than he has for a printing office or cobbler shop. Nor do we believe the board has any right to grant such a privilege. "Liar" and "lie" are the language

A Destructive Policy. To the Editor of the Detroit Journal: SIR:-I have read with great interest the able and exhaustive speech of the Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, delivered in the house of representatives last week, and I commend it to the thoughtful attention of the American people. Years of experience have impressed me deeply with the importance of a wise course on the part of our representatives in congress touching a question of national concern—a question now being discussed by the people, and upon the settlement of which depend great issues and large hopes. Considering all these matters, I have felt it a duty to oppose the Cleveland tariff pronunciamento, a proclamation which. in my judgment, deals unfairly and unkindly to domestic labor-tending, as I believe it will, to bring embarrassment and disaster to toilers—causing to them in the near future non-employment, and finally their subjugation. The president advocates a scheme for elevating foreign labor and foreign industrial supremacy in opposition to the substantial interests of our country and the hopeful and rightful expectations of our own enterprising people; a presidential scheme, detrimental alike to the enterprise, the thrift, the growth and the prosperity of the whole nation. I can never raise my hands against the workers of my country: on the contrary, I will cheerfully expend my income, and, if need be, my service in the cause of protection to home labor. My course is with my life. My position in this regard is well known to the United States. I will never consent to the destructive policy, now advocated by ignorant men, of forcing our industrious people into idleness and poverty in order to furnish mechanical work to the wealth and industries of other countries. The trial had lasted nearly two days and by working Wednesday evening they managed to get the evidence all in, and on Thursday evening, the counsel on both sides made their arguments before the jury. The jury was then dismissed until nine o'clock Friday morning. When that hour came, the counsel for the contestants asked that proceedings be suspended until they could prepare some necessary papers bearing upon the case, which request was granted. "And how large is it you wish this curtain to be?" inquired the artist. "Ah, well, we will say fifteen meters by eighteen." Meissonier took up a pencil and proceeded to make a calculation. At last he looked up and said with imperturbable gravity: "I have calculated and find that my pictures are valued at 80,-000 francs per meter. TAMING SAVAGE ANIMALS

How Cruelty, Skill and Science Are Com bined to Subdue Wild Beasts. The king of beasts when conquered is like a lamb, and the young lions are trained one at a time. For several days the animal is well fed. He is tempted to thrust his forepaws out in front of the den. Over them is slipped a noose, and the feet are then firmly tied down. The lion at once begins to roar and thrash his tail and hind legs about the cage. After a time he quiets down and the keeper enters the den. With a dexterous movement the bag is drawn over the lion's head. The keeper sometimes bestrides his back and holds his seat by tightening his legs around the body and grasping the mane of the animal. In the head covering is usually a sponge, saturated with about eight ounces of chloroform.

The lion will try to shake off the keeper, but is powerless when his fore paws are tied down. In a moment or two the beast becomes unconscious. Other trainers then enter the den. Great attention and care are exercised over the pulsations of the lion's heart. The pulse is felt under the lower jaw the same as in a horse. It is dangerous to etherize or chloroform an animal of the cat species too severely, and the instant the pulsations become at all feeble the dose has to be lightened.

When the keeper becomes satisfied that the animal is unconscious, they begin operations on his teeth. The canines, bicuspids and incisors are cut off. It requires great dexterity to know how far in the crown to cut without laying the nerve bare. After the operations on the teeth are finished, the keeper clips the claws, and in a few moments the lion is bereft of his teeth and claws. A heavy collar and chain are fastened around his neck, and when he comes to consciousness he is a very different beast than

The keepers will enter the cage short intervals after this, and, should the lion attempt to spring, the chain retards him, and the keeper at once administers a sharp rap with a rawhide whip. The lion deprived of his teeth and claws soon becomes cowardly. He is kept well fed, and, if too ferocious, is drugged until he becomes used to his keeper's presence in the cage. Tigers are more difficult to conquer.

Their teeth and claws are cut off in a similar manner to those of the lion. Tigers are more treacherous, and will spring at a keeper unexpectedly and without any warning whatever. They are drugged and kept chained for a long time and often flogged into submission. Leopards and panthers are easily tamed. With the wolf and the hyena the keepers fear only the teeth. They are "dog footed," and do not strike like a cat animal. Their teeth are cut and a good club will do the rest. The operation upon the long tusks of the baboon is so painful and apparently so inhuman as to call for a humane so ciety's interference. The keepers will secure a baboon's paws and legs and draw the creature close up to the bars of his cage. The head will be tied also. After he is made fast his long tusks are sawed off. The baboon is subject to tootache and his teeth extremely sensitive. When the saw cuts through the nerve the poor beast will utter the most piercing shrieks and howls. To allay the pain, toothache drops of oil of cloves, oil of cajuput and chloroform are poured in the air. After the operation is over, the keeper retreats, the fastenings are removed and the baboon allowed to recover. After such an operation the baboon seldom shows a disposition to attack a man. It is, therefore, not so wonderful, after all, that the man eaters and all sorts of carnivorous animals are paraded through the streets with keepers among them. . Timid people should take heart and remember that animals clipped, drugged and chained in cages are not possessed of such ferocious instincts as those of their native wilds.—Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Japanese Sacred Nuts. A quantity of Japanese sacred nuts, the first ever brought to this country, has lately been received at a Broadway fruit store. They are called sacred from the fact that they are used in certain forms of Japanese worship. The nuts are placed on the altar and ignited. They burn with a bluish flame and give off a peculiar odor. They are rich in oil, and the fumes are supposed to rise as incense to the gods. They grow under water, have a leaf like a pond lily, and are shaped like a steer's head, with two projecting horns. This resemblance is so great that it is difficult to believe that they are not carved. In the raw state they are hard and tasteless, but when cooked they have the flavor of boiled chestnuts. They retain their qualities ten or fifteen years, and are fit for food when even twenty years old .- New York Mail and Express.

> PHACTS AND PHYSIC. Found an old Friend.

COLOMA, Mich., Dec. 3, 1885. Gentlemen: - One of your circulars came to my notice to-day, and it re minds me of an old and very valuable friend, one that saved my life twelve rears ago, and because I had not needed its help since. I had most forgotten it. I was sixteen years old and suffering from menstrual derangement: I cough ed continually and had chilis every day. I was as miserable as any one could be and live. A lady who knew the cause of my illness persuaded my mother to have me use Zca-Phora-i was called Woman's Friend then. Be fore I had used one bottle my cough and chills ceased. I kept on and used two bottles and they brought me out all right. I afterwards married and am now the mother of three nice healthy children. I feel that I owe a great deal to Zoa-Phora. I hope it will ecome well known, and every woman and girl who needs it will use it. If you will send me some circulars, I will give them to acquaintances, and do all

WE have the renting of a house, and there is some talk of its being vacated at some time in the near future. Up to date there have been something like a dozen or fifteen applications for the house, and, that there may be no more, we wish to state that it is rented. These numerous calls for houses form a good indication for the town, but there should be more that may be had at a rental that may be afforded by laborers. Houses that are rented at $5 to $7 per month are not allowed to stand idle.

Last year there was considerable of a craze among the boys at making collections of birds' eggs, and on that pretence there was a grand hunt for bird nests, and every one that could be found robbed. There is a severe penalty prescribed for that sort of business and boys who indulge this year will be most likely to find out in a highly practical way just what the penalty is, and how it is imposed. Better let the bird nests alone.

CAN any one give any good reason why railroad eating houses should be allowed to skin their customers, by charging 75 cents for a meal that other restaurants who are at the same expense furnish for 25 cents, any more than railroads should be limited in their charges? They have the advantage of their patrons in that they are obliged to buy there or go hungry, and they apply the skinning act with the greatest unction.

This morning we received the following notice:

"There will be a meeting of the society, to enforce the new local option law, at Niles, on Friday, the 18th day of May, 1888, at 11 o'clock a.m. A large turnout is hoped for and expect-

SOMETHING NEW.-Mr. A. O. Koontz has been at work for the past few months on a valuable improvement in the Buchanan windmill and now has his drafts all complete, and will soon have patterns ready embodying the improvements in the mills manufactured by the windmill company. For cheapness and simplicity it leads anything in that line yet thought of. The only thing to give out is a block of wood that can be replaced in a few minutes by any one who knows enough to wield a handsaw and monkey wrench. For the ordinary sizes the new mill is already taking the place of the old one.

NOT DEAD .- The Detroit Tribune, Saturday, containtained the following from Jackson: Some time ago a report was published throughout the country to the effect that George F. Anderson, formerly of this place and well known here, who was convicted in England and sentenced to five years, had died in prison. That the report was incorrect cannot now be doubted. J. C. Lowell, of this city, who was in England and attended the trial of Anderson, recently learned that an effort was being made what seemed good authority, that Anderson was dead, he wrote the United States legation at London and received a letter dated April 20, signed by Henry White, secretary of the legation, which says: The report of Anderson's death was incorrect. He is still alive and serving out his sentence. I have

A Body of Able Men-Are Women Eligible as Delegates?—A Long and Exciting Debate-A Chinese Methodist-Colored Delegates-Powers of the Conference.

The seventh quadrennial conference, under the new system, of the Methodist Episcopal church, convened on May 1 in the Metropolitan Opera house of New York city, and was plunged at once into lively debate on some of the most exciting topics of the day. This session may be said to be the first in which all sections of the whole church are fully represented—it has taken a few years for the new system to grow—and it may be regarded as providential that the lay and clerical con-

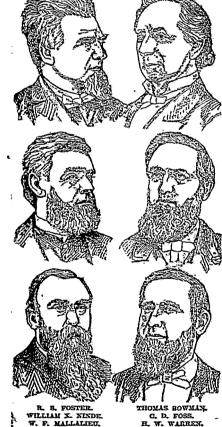

METHODIST EPISCOPAL BISHOPS. ference had full time to grow to complete efficiency before these questions came to an issue. In the first full conference under the new system, which was held in Chicago contemporaneously with the great soldiers and sailors' convention of 1868 and the Republican convention that first nominated Grant, there were but five bishops of full powers present, and none but ordained ministers in the body of the conference; yet the deliberations of the body were of a character and weight to attract the attention of statesmen and philosophers all over the world.

Since that date the great principle of lay representation has been adopted and completely practicalized. Not only do the 20,000 regular ministers have a voice, but all the members of the great Methodist body, and a large minority of this conference consists of laymen. Among them are able law-yers, prominent politicians and eloquent orators, men of note in their respective states, including the eminent historian, Professor J. C. Redpath, of Indiana; Gen Hurst, of Ohio: ex-Governor Lounsbury, of Connecticut, and many others of that class. And it is worthy of note that two able speeches, perhaps the most logical on that side, were made by lay delegates in favor of admitting women. The speech of Gen. Hurst, on May 4, gave the discussion an entirely new phase. It is scarcely possible in this brief space to set forth the Methodist system of government. Suffice it here to say that it rests on the broad principle that no specific form is commanded in the New Testament, but that the church has Christian liberty to adopt the form best suited to each country or age, and that, developing on this principle, the church may now be said to be in a transition state, from an extreme episcopacy to a regular representative system; and as in secular government there is always a small party which far outruns the main body, and another which insists on not moving at all. so there are "radical Methodists" and "Prctestant Methodists," who insist on a thoroughly democratic-republican system, and rvatives who insist upon the exact letter of St Paul's instructions to the five Christian women in the heathen and licentious city of Corinth. It will readily be seen how, in a body of several hundred keen witted and ex-perienced men, these variances produce de-bates of intense interest; and, truly, the discussion of the "woman question" in this conference has evoked expositions of parlia-

W. F. MALLALIEU. METHODIST EPISCOPAL BISHOPS. mentary law, judicial constructions and fundamental principles of right not unworthy of the American senate or the British parlia-

The main question is this: Did the conferences and confirming bodies, which provided for "lay delegates" without in terms excluding women, mean to adopt the accepted rule in other respects and exclude them in fact? On this point the evidence appeared conclusive that the bodies did so intend. Then came the second question: Do "constitutions grow," so that women may now be admitted as delegates by mere consent of this body, or must the matter be referred back to the annual conferences, who have the power to change the ecclesiastical constitution, just as three-fourths of the states must act to change the constitution of the United States? And the weight of opinion in the conference is that the question must be so referred, as the constitution does not permit the admission of women; but it may be added that at least half of those who opposed the present admission of women avowed their intention to support the proposed amendment. The question is revived by the choice this year of a few women delegates, of whom Miss Frances E. Willard is best known. of admitting the women at once were Rev. J. H. Potts, of The Michigan Advocate: Rev. William Bush, of Dakota; Rev. Theodore F. Flood, editor of the Chautauquan; Gen. Hurst, of Chillicothe, O.; Rev. J. B. Hamilton and others. The opposition was led, and very ably led, by Rev. J. H. Buckley, editor of The Christian Advocate, who produced a letter from Senator Edmunds on the principles of constitutional law and the admission of members on certificate to any elected body. This led to a very animated discussion, in which constitutional principles were searched out and applied at great length. We give but the main points, disregarding resolutions and wordings, as the matter goes back now to the constituent bodies. The Metropolitan Opera house is beautiample stage sat the bishops, secretaries and distinguished visitors; in the orchestra the large body of reporters; the main floor was filled with the delegates, lay and clerical, while back of them rose the five great circles filled with interested spectators. On the floor are sixty colored men, representing their branch of the great Methodist body; also a Methodist Chinaman, and several Germans, Scandinavians and other Europeans The powers of the conference are two extensive to be enumerated. It is, in short, the great legislative body of the Methodist world, and takes cognizence of everything, from an account in the Book Concern to the character of a bishop. Much interest centers in the three bishops to be chosen, for the selection of a chief officer of the church is a personal matter and easily understood. Of the present incumbents no one has served over eighteen years. Those who have filled this term of years are Thomas Bowman, Randolph S. Foster, Stephen M. Merrill and Edward G. Andrews; those who have served a less time are Henry W. Warren, Cyrus D. Foss and John F. Hurst, eight years, and William X. Ninde, John M. Walden, Willard F. Mallalieu, Charles H. Fowler and William Taylor, four years. Since 1872 sixteen bishops have been elected, and five of them have died—a little less than a third of the whole number. Reckoning in the five senior bishops who were already in office at the opening of the general conference of 1872, out of twenty-one bishops living in the period from 1872-1888, ten, or nearly one-half, have

A BIG FOUR MASTER. The Largest Iron Sailing Vessel in the World. Just below the big Suspension bridge, between New York and Brooklyn, on the Brooklyn side, there was recently docked the largest iron sailing vessel in the world, the four masted ship Palgrave. She is 322 feet from stem to stern, 49 feet beam and 29 feet depth of hold, and registers over 3,000 tons. She is all iron, and even her lower masts, topmasts and bowsprit are made of steel. Standing on the poop deck and looking for-

THE PALGRAVE. ward, the eye sweeping over the long deck, past the four masts to the point of the jibboom, it seems singular in these days of steam that so large a vessel should be propelled by wind power. There is also something incongruous in a ship made of iron— a modern idea—being driven in so old fashioned a manner as by means of sails. Then lingering about the deck of such a vessel brings fancies of contrasts—a contrast between the silent, motionless hulk lying between docks and the same object with all her sails set bowling along under a twelve knot breeze; a contrast between the scenes about the ware houses against which her powsprit juts, and whence she sailed and through which he passed on the voyage. The Palgrave came from Calcutta, and made the trip in 100 days. The captain reported that he never took in his skysails from the time they were set till be sighted Cape Hat-teras. In forty years at sea he had never had such an sight in the ocean, but to see the Palgrave with all her mainsails, topsails, gallantsails, royals, skysails, and moon scrapers swelling under a fine breeze must be an invigorating Capt. Hugh Harney, who commands the Palgrave, and whose picture is given with this, is a typical seaman, whose jolly laugh and funny stories are worth going a good distance to hear.

Ozone as a Medicine. In some experiments with ozone as a curative, an English lady, so far advanced in consumption that her case appeared hopeless, has been treated with inhalations of this gas, with results described as marvelous. After a month's treatment the appetite was regained, the sleep calm and refreshing, and there was a very good prospect of recovery. The ozone was prepared by passing a stream of oxygen through the current of an induc-tion coil, and was administered with atmospheric air in the proportion of one to five. The experimenter has reached the conclusion that the ozone treatment is specially applicable to all germ diseases.-London Public Opinion.

MELVILLE W. FULLER.

Sketch of the Man Appointed Chief Justice by President Cleveland. Melville Weston Fuller, a native of Maine

and long a resident of Chicago, has been appointed chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, and the people are almost as much astonished as they were when Hon. Morrison R. Waite was appointed to the same office. It is a safe statement that Mr. Fuller is about as well known, nationally, as Judge Waite was, as both had been, at the time of their appointment, members of the legislature and constitutional conventions, and both had argued very important cases before the supreme courts of their respective In one respect, however, there is a marked contrast. Nearly all the great judges of history have been large, deep chested men, and Judge Waite was certainly no exception; but Mr. Fuller is a small, wiry man, below the middle height. With silver gray hair, a drooping gray mustache and a noticeable neatness of dress - almost the profound lawver. He was born in Augusta, Ma. Feb. 11, 1833, and retains his youth well, being fresh and healthful in appearance at 55. MELVILLE W. FULLER. And here we have the main reason why comparatively unknown men are appointed as chief justices: By the time a man has gained a national reputation as a judge he is nearly old enough to be re-tired. Mr. Fuller has yet fifteen years to reach the age of retirement, and that is a strong point in his favor. His maternal grandfather was Chief Justice Weston, of Maine, and his father was a lawyer and the son of a judge; so, if there is anything in heredity, he is a judge by congenital inheritance. He was graduated from Bowdoin college in 1852, one of his classmates being Hon. E. J. Phelps, now minister to England, and but lately thought a probable selection for chief justice. In 1855 young Fuller was admitted to the bar, at the age of 22, and soon after he took a very active part in politics. For awhile he edited the Demo-cratic paper of Augusta, James G. Blaine being editor of the Republican paper. He was elected city attorney, the highest office in law practice he has ever held. Soon after he removed to Chicago, where he won a very high position at the bar. In 1861 he was elected a member of the state constitution: convention; in 1863 he was elected to the legislature from a strong Republican district, and was a delegate to the Democratic national conventions of 1864, 1872, 1876 and 1880. Mr. Fuller has appeared in many celebrated trials, and is wonderfully well informed on the technicalities of law. A striking illustration of this occurred during the trial of Bishop Cheney, of the Reformed Episcopal church. About fifteen years ago the Rev. Charles E. Cheney, then rector of Christ Protestant Episcopal church in Chicago, was arraigned before Bishop Whitehouse, of Illi-nois, on charges of heresy. The prosecution was conducted by S. Corning Judd, then and still the chancellor of the diocese. Mr. Judd. like Mr. Fuller, was one of the ablest men at the bar. He is also, by the way, an appointed of President Cleveland, being now postmaster of Chicago. Mr. Cheney was defended by Mr. Fuller, and during the course of that re-

Unser Fritz's Orangery. The emperor of Germany, when the weather is bad, is accustomed to take exercise by walking in what is called the Orangery, at of buildings extending to the west of the Royal chapel and of the central block in the north front of the palace overlooking the park and the avenue to the royal mausoleum. The orangery is not roofed with glass, but large windows along both sides admit the sunlight. Through the whole length a path is laid with cocoanut matting, and on each side there is a double row of orange trees in wooden boxes. In the middle of this range building is a pavilion. The emperor only walks here when the weather will not permit him to go elsewhere. On fine days he drives

THINGS POLITICAL.

HON. JOSEPH FIFER NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR OF ILLINOIS.

Robert S. Robertson, William C. Cumback and James N. Huston, Candidates for the Cubernatorial Nomination in Indiana-All These Men Are Republicans.

The Republicans of Illinois, assembled in convention at Springfield, have placed Hon. Joseph Fifer in nomination for governor of that state. Mr. Fifer is frequently spoken of as Private Joe Fifer, because of the fact that he was a private in the Union army during the late civil war.

Joseph Fifer is a native of Virginia, and was born forty-five years ago. When he was very young he removed with his parents to

cluded, and at once entered the Illinois

Wesleyan college, from which institution he was graduated in ISCS. He then studied law and was admitted in due time. Later he was elected prosecuting attorney for McLean county. Afterwards he was elected to the Illinois state assembly, serving two terms. He has also served in the state senate. Mr. Fifer resides at Bloomington.

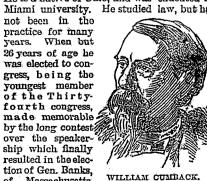

Lieutenant Governor Robert S. Robertson, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Indiana, was born in Washington county, N. Y., in 1839. He received an academical education at his home in Argylo, studied law in New York city and was admitted to the bar in 1860. In September, 1861, he entered the army as a private in the Ninety-third regiment, New York volunteers, receiving successive promotions to the rank of second and first lieutenant and during the Gettysburg campaign was acting adjutant of his regiment. In three years active service he won an enviable reputation as a brave and gallant soldier. He was severely wounded at Spottsylvania and again at Toplopotomoy, from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. At Lincoln captain of United States volunteers and colonel by the governor of New York for personal bravery on the battle-field. During the latter part of the 自然を war he served on the staff of Mai. Gen. Miles, commander of the First division of the Second Army corps.

Two years later be was the unanimous choice of the Republican state convention for the office of lieutenant governor, but with the rest of his ticket was defeated at the polls. In 1880 he was strongly talked about for candidate for governor, but declined to enter the race for the nomination. In 1886, when it had been held that a vacancy existed in the office of lieutenant governor, to be filled by an election, he was the nominee of the Republicans over his protest, and led his ticket to success. For several years he held the position of register in bankruptcy for the United States district court. Governor Porter tendered him an appointment of judge of the supreme court, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Woods, but he declined it. He is tall and magnificently developed. He wears a full black beard and mustache. His face shows evidence of will and strength. He is a mar of literary culture, and as a member of the board of trustees of the state university he takes great interest in educational matters. Hon. William Cumback is also a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination at the hands of the Republicans. His career as a politician and lecturer has been successful. He is a native of Ohio, and was educated at Miami university. He studied law, but has

tion of Gen. Banks, of Massachusetts. WILLIAM CUMBACK. In 1868 he was elected lieutenant governor of his state, and was the caucus nomin his party for United States senator, but owing to a bolt of five or six Republicans his name was finally withdrawn, and that of Hon. D. D. Pratt substituted. Shortly afterward he was appointed by President Grant revenue collector for the Lawrenceburg district, one of the largest districts in the Union, holding the office for twelve years. He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi, and was president of the national convention of that society held at Cincinnati. He is also prominent in Odd Fellowship, and has been grand master and grand representative of the state; also a leading Methodist, and is one of the trustees of that denomination, appointed by the general conference. In 1878 he was appointed by the board of bishops as one of the fraternal delegates to the general conference of the church south. He is an A. M. and an LL D., the former degree having been conferred by Miami university, and the latter by Asbury (now De Pauw) university. He is a man of youthful appearance and manners, is well known as a lecturer, and is greatly interested in literary matters.

Hon. James Nelson Huston, chairman of the Republican state committee, another candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, is a native of Pennsylvania, having been born near Greencastle, in that state. He is only 87 years of age and is a young man to have achieved so prominent a place in state politics. He received an academic education in his native state, but removed with his parents to Indiana while still a youth, locating at Connersville. He comes from good stock, his grandfathers having been officers in the revolutionary army His ancestors early settlers of Pennsylvania. He still owns the farm on which he was born and which has been in the family for more than two centuries. His education has been that of a thorough going, 🎉 practical, business man. His father having opened a bank at Connersville, he entered it as cashier and is now at the head of the institution. He inherited quite a fortune, but by his own thrift and superior management has added very largely to it. He is now the head of the bank estabished by his father, but at the same time is largely interested in agricultural matters and in various manufacturing industries. So methodical and practical has he been in business matters that he is able to carry on all his enterprises with success. He is a liberal giver to all charitable enterprises and to help on the prosperity of the city in which he politics Mr. Huston has always been a Republican, and has served in both branches of the general assembly of the state. In 1886 he was chosen by his party to take control of the organization as chairman of the state committee. Physically he is a small man, but his energy and capacity for work take him to a place far above the average.

JAMES F. WILSON. Sketch and Portrait of Iowa's Junior Senator.

James F. Wilson, Jr., United States senator from Iowa, was born in Newark, O., Oct. 19, 1828. By the death of his father he was thrown upon his own resources at an early age, and was deprived of many of the advantages of education. Securing such an education as the common school of Ohio afforded, he afterwards served a term of apprentice ship to a barness maker, and while working as apprentice and journeyman began the study of law. In 1853, he removed to Fairfield, Ia., and with no capital but his own ability and energy, began the practice of his profession. He early became identified with the politics of his county, and was one of the founders of the Republican party in his ernor assistant the Des Moines river improvement. the principal public work of the state at that time. In the same year he was elected a member of the lower house of the legislature; JAMES F. WILSON. ator, and in 1861 president of the senate. In the latter year a vacancy occurred in the congressional delegation of the state and Mr. Wilson was chosen to fill it, while he was afterwards re-elected to the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth and Fortieth congresses, clining a renomination at the end of his fourth term of service. At the beginning of the Thirty-eighth congress Mr. Wilson was chosen chairman of the judiciary committee of the lower house, being the youngest man who ever served in that capacity, a position he held until he de-clined his re-election. His position gave him much prominence, and his counsel and advice were much sought and needed during the dark days of the war of the rebellion. While n member of congress Mr. Wilson introduced n amendment to the constitution abolishing slavery—the first step in that direction ndvocated the enlistment of colored troops; a joint resolution forbidding payment of the Confederate debt; a bill for establishing im-partial suffrage in the District of Columbia; and reported and engineered the civil rights bill through the house. He also served as one of the managers on the part of the house in he impeachment trial of President Johnson. After his retirement from congress Mr. Wilson served three or four terms as a government director of the Union Pacific railroad. He was twice offered a position in Grant's cabinet, once as secretary of state and again as attorney general, both of which he declined. In 1862 Mr. Wilson was elected to the United States senate.

Manhattan Island, on which the city of New York is built, has never been anything of an island except in name since the city pecame of consequence. The northern por tion of it is cut off from the main land by the Harlem river and Spuyten Duyvil creek.

The creek is very narrow, and in some places separates the island from the main land by only about a dozen feet. Now it is about to be widened into a ship canal, which will divide New York more widely from the main land. When the canal is completed ship and steamer and river craft of all kinds may pass from the Hudson to the East river without going round the Battery, thus saving a distance of from twenty to twenty-five miles. The United States government appropriated $410,000, and work, which was for awhile delayed by the backward season, has been commenced. The canal will be 350 feet wide and deep enough to accommodate ves-sels of eighteen feet draught of water. Excavating to the rock has been the chief task hitherto, but the blasting has now begun in carnest. On the border of the creek the rock has the appearance of sandstone, but disintegrates to powder under the blasts. Six excellent quality of building or paving stone is being accumulated to be used in facing the sides and bottom of the canal. It is thought that this part of the work will be finished by the fall of 1889. After its completion nothing further can be done until the government makes another appropriation. If this is made promptly, so that there will be no delay of the enterprise, the canal may

ARCHBISHOP WALSH.

An Irish Prelate Who Disagrees with the Pope. The peculiar condition of Irish affairs, the curious interlock of civil and ecclesiastical orders and religious sentiment, now attracts the attention of intelligent people in every country, and possesses for Irishmen a really painful interest: Seven hundred years ago Nicholas Breakspear (Pope Adrian IV), the only Englishman who ever held the Roman pontificate, granted, it is alleged, to Henry II, of England, the right to conquer Ireland; and now the pope has pronounced against th "Plan of Campaign" adopted by the Irish National league, in aid of the struggle for Irish home rule and tenant right. Archbishop Walsh, of Dublin, has declared that while he will obey in ecclesiastical matters he cannot in good conscience instruct his people to oppose the "Plan of Cam-paign." When this announcement reached Rome a special congregation of cardinals was called to examine every issue in Irish affairs, on each of which it will formally

Archbishop William J. Walsh, thus made the most prominent man in Ireland, is but 43 years old, and probably the most learned man in Ireland, having taken up each successive rank in the church as soon as his age would permit. He was born in Dublin, and entered the great Catholic university at the age of 12 Two years later he entered Maynooth, where he carried off the honors in all his classes, and went ARCHBISHOP WALSH. through the course so speedily that he had to wait three years before becoming old enough to be ordained. This period he spent in special ecclesiastical studies. He was made tutor in theology, and in 1807 a regular professor. In 1878, on the death of Dr. Russell, the extraordinary honor of the presidency of the National Ecclesiastical College of Ireland (Maynooth) was conferred on this young priest of 33. On the death of His Eminence Cardinal McCabe he was chosen "dignissimus" by the clergy of the Dublin chapter; the pope ratified their choice, and conferred the high honor of summoning Dr. Walsh to Rome to be conse crated. There, on Aug. 2, 1885, he was with great pomp and solemnity installed as archbishop of Dublin. The high character of the archbishop, the fame of his writings, his learning, the esteem in which he is held by both Catholic and Protestant, make his present position doubly interesting.

Unversed in Literary Topics It was at a small dinner party, and a gen-tleman was bravely striving to maintain the conversation, but she was, alast unversed in town topics, it being only one of her few visits from the peaceful surroundings of a rural neighborhood. They were talking of books when the sweets appeared. "And now," said he, smiling pleasantly, "may I inquire if you like Besant and Rice best, or Besant without Rice, as we now get it?" "Oh," she nurmured, starting slightly, "I can't take any of those dishes, I thank you. I always eat that which I know agrees with me."—Home Journal.

DE BAUN HAS DEPARTED.

He Was Assistant Cashier of the Park National Bank of New York. There had been a long hiatus in the series of defalcations and embezzlements, and mer-cantile circles had begun to feel in a congratulatory humor, when Wall street was startled with the information that Charles I. De Baun, assistant cashier of the Park National Bank of New York, had fled with what little he still held of some $95,000 he had stolen. It was apparently a May day flitting, as the defalcation was on that day made pub-

DE BAUN-PARK NATIONAL BANK. as he resigned on the 19th of April, and disappeared from his usual haunts soon after. It was the familiar story. Mr. De Baun had been in the employ of the bank for twenty years, knew all its concerns intimately, was "loved and trusted, above suspicion," etc., according to the usual formula For some years past he had enjoyed a salary $3,500 a year, on which he had lived in fine style with his wife and two children at 133 Fort Green place, near Lafayette avenue Brooklyn, and been an active member of two A HANDSOME WEDDING, BIRTHDAY, OR HOLIDAY PRESENT. or three very extravagant clubs. His intimates are positive he took very little money away, as he has used the whole amount in prodigal living. Indeed, a strange feature of the case is that more than one of his associates shook their heads ominously long before the outcome, and one said that "Charlie couldn't subtract his expenses from that salary;" and still the directors suspected nothing. De Baun is 43 years of age and a fine looking man. As the bank has a surplus of $1,685,000, its standing will not be affected, and as the criminal will doubtless be compelled to live away from New York for the rest of his life, his punishment will, perhaps, be severe enough.

A prominent stockholder has said that too much economy has been practiced in the bank in order to raise its surplus; that the salaries of the employes have been very low. A system of espionage has been practiced which, it was hoped, would prevent any loss. The clerks were given frequent leaves, and detectives were introduced to do their work during their absence There is no knowledge of the whereabouts of De Baun, but the directors of the bank are understood to be determined to punish him as severely as the law will admit if he is

In a French Insane Asylum.

The expressions of insanity, however varied their form, are not interesting to the specialist unless they give indications of a mood differing from those characterizing a mental state already classed "Aubertin, the would-be murderer of M. Jules Ferry, belongs to the very common class of which the larger half of his family of insane is composed—the general paralytics. The symptoms are easily distinguished. Come and see for yourself," said the professor, who had spied four women under the guidance of a nurse passing before the window. We met them as they entered the hall. "Well, where are you going?" he asked one of them. "To fetch the soup," answered the woman addressed, with a slight hesitation of speech. "Now watch her walk," said the professor to me as the little procession moved on. I noticed the same incertitude of motion as of speech. These are the symptoms whereby to distinguish the general paralytic, whether his illness manifests itself under the form of hypochondria, melancholia, mania, monomania, furor, hallucination, or softening of the brain.—Paris Cor. New York Post.

At Moscow and St. Petersburg the street cars are similarly constructed to those in Paris, but are a little larger. They are almost as long as the passenger coach on a steam road—have double decks, or two stories, and accommodate over sixty passengers without crowding. A stairway winds up at the rear of the cars leading to the long seats above, over which is a wooden roof or canopy, and the passengers have the privilege of a seat in the breeze above or in the in-closure below, the latter being like the interior of American street cars. Eight horses are used when there is snow on the ground, four of them being hitched abreast. In the summer four horses, two abreast, do the pulling. Three men run the car—a conductor, a driver and a man who rides the off horse hitched in the rear. The driver rings a bell continuously, and when any one attempts to cross the track in closs proximity he rings more vigorously and rails in several languages. The fare is usually twenty kopecks, which is about ten cents. The street cars in Russia are not old institutions and are not very liberally patronized. —Philadelphia Times.
