THE Coldwater Republican of recent date contained a profuse account of the operations of three street fakirs who attempted to do business in that town. After they had been allowed to make their little speech and sing a song, accompanied by a guitar and mouth organ, and before they had an opportunity to fleece any of the crowd, there fell a shower of 'o'er ripe eggs that caused a sudden scattering. They were registered at the Southern Michigan hotel as Dr. H. Rivers, Wait, Voorhees and Chas. McCoy, of Chicago. The boys appear to have struck Cold-water this time.

MR. CARLISLE has succeeded in stirring up considerable commotion in St. Joseph over the new projected railroad from South Bend to that point. He arrived in this place Saturday, and reports having secured subscriptions amounting to $15,000, right of way into the town, and a line of dockage that will give them sufficient shipping accommodations with the lake, and connection with the West Michigan road. He appears quite sanguine that the necessary assistance in right of way through the county, and such aid will be readily secured and that work of construction will be commenced at an early date. All attempts to buy the narrow gauge have been abandoned, and if the new road be built it will be entirely independent of that property, as no part of it is available, and the price asked is too high to be considered.

HENRY FARRAN is the embodiment of democracy. He reads and is in accord with the principles of his party. He says he favors absolute free trade. He would assess no duty that would protect any one or any American industry. If Americans can not make iron, steel, salt, wool and other products as cheaply as they can be made anywhere he believes they should stop making them. When asked how he would raise the revenues necessary for running the government, he said he would raise it by an income tax and every man's shirt-tail, and a return to the war practice, of sticking a stamp on every thing you buy or make or sell or look at. No man must earn anything without paying a tax on it. If a laboring man can not live as well on what he earns making iron as cheaply as any one else can let him out down his living, such as wheat bread, carpeted floors, etc. If he can not have meat let him take swill or anything. This is genuine democratic doctrine. How do you like it?

Dearborn is the site of a freak in the shape of a living man who hasn't washed his face for 20 years. It is unnecessary to say he is tolerably lazy, but his face hasn't gone unwashed, either. The "how" of it is this: Twenty years ago, when he was a young married man, he decided to get out of bed one Sunday morning to accompany his wife on a pleasuring trip unless she would first wash his mug, and as she did the job up brown, he ever after compelled her to keep it up. Since then some children have been born, however, and they occasionally relieve the mother of the task, but the measly chump doesn't hesitate to face the world with dirty chaps if he can't get scrub him.—Detroit News.

The counterpart of the "chump" lives in Buchanan, but not of the family, and judging by the looks it is 60 years since his face has been touched by water, excepting perhaps a chance drop of rain as it fell.

MILLIONS upon millions of sand flies, a small, almost white insect, appeared along the river last evening. The iron bridge was literally covered with them, in places a couple of inches deep, and they were so thick in the air that people passing could scarcely breathe. —Niles Republican.

LINCOLN MERRILL met with a serious accident, Friday afternoon last, while riding in a sulky behind a colt. The animal kicked breaking several small bones of the right hand and at the same time his face was cut to the bone, so that the physician found it necessary to stick the flesh of the paper red hot with abolition arguments. He did not have much success until finally he printed a translation of "The Book of Job." The paper was finally waked up. They cried over the story, and raised such a protest against slavery that the government was forced to abolish it.—Atlanta Constitution.

There were no tariff speeches from recent converts.—Enterprise Convention Notes.

Perhaps not. No recent converts there to make 'em. The converting is not being done in that direction to any alarming extent.

The life of prosecuting attorney is anything but a joy forever, or words to that effect. He of our complaints that are brought to him are of personal or fancied grievances which would not stand the test of the law, and when the officer refuses to waste his time in prosecuting them, he is called a "chump" is censured, and accused of partiality. There is a coterie of people in this city who are not at home unless they are mixed up in a legal squabble in some manner or another, and these parties always expect the state to bear the expense.—Niles Mirror.

All of which is true, but the Mirror might have added that the present prosecuting attorney, Mr. Geo. W. Bridgman of Niles, has made a most excellent record during his term of office in refusing to take any notice of these petty quarrels, thus saving the county a great expense that would have been useless. It might also have said that Mr. Bridgman has been nominated by the republicans for re-election and was going to be elected.

THE Democratic County Convention in Berrien Springs town Hall, Tuesday, nominated the following ticket: Sheriff, Wallace Peck of Niles; Judge of Probate, C. B. Potter of St. Joseph; Prosecuting Attorney, A. C. Roe of Buchanan; Treasurer, Ed. Brent of Watervliet; Clerk, Thomas Slattery of St. Joseph; Register of Deeds, Charles Wells of Bertrand; Surveyor, Guy E. Drew of Chickaming; Coroners, P. P. Clapsaddle of Hagar and C. M. Barron of Niles; Circuit Court Commissioners, Wm. A. Barnes of Buchanan and John A. Eastman of Benton Harbor; Fish Commissioner, Henry Risto of St. Joseph. The platform written by the editor of the Niles Democrat consists of two resolutions, one advocating tariff reduction and changes in the pension laws as recommended by "Our beloved President." The resolution does not state whether this has special reference to his beloved votes or not. Presume it does, however.

BUSINESS—A few days since the grocers in this place began to compare notes and discovered that a certain class of fellows who traded quite freely had all of their profits, one man to the extent of $900. They also learned that when one of these fellows gets all he can of one grocer's profits he immediately transfers his operations to some other until he gets around. By that time the grocers have busted or gone out of business, a new set have taken their places and the good customers go around again and keep going. They have concluded that for the best interests of all, they will continue to compare notes and if any more of these fellows get in debt to more than one of them they will know the reason why. This comparing notes does not extend further than the grocers thus far, but it is intended that there shall be fewer dead beat accounts. That is the name they are commonly known by. The tradesman's capital is in his stock of goods and there is but one reason why he should give it all away.

The agricultural college library now contains 10,126 bound volumes, 1,800 pamphlets and 210 periodicals. One of its most valuable features is a complete author and title index with 45,000 references. For ten years past $1,500 has been expended annually on the library.

Battle Creek has a murder excitement. A young man named Campbell disappeared suddenly last August, and after talking about it a year the neighbors dug open an old well on a neighboring farm, that had been filled up at the time Campbell disappeared, and there found his body with the skull crushed as with some blunt instrument. A young man named House has been arrested for the murder, the circumstantial evidence being quite strong against him.

George S. Babcock, aged 70, was fishing on Bristol lake, one week ago last Friday, and became unconscious and fell out of the boat and had a miraculous escape from drowning. When he came to his senses he was lying on his back on the bottom of the lake in about twenty feet of water. As soon as he realized where he was he commenced crawling on the bottom, and as it was sloping he directed his course up the slope and soon reached the shore nearly dead. As no one was near he did not know how long he was in the water.—Barry County Democrat.

West Branch pays its marshal $75 a year, and the saloons remain open until 11 o'clock at night about as often as they want to. The Ogemaw Herald calls it a plain case of cause and effect.

Farmers and others can have water-melons for their Christmas dinners if they will pack them away in the center of a good dry, clean hay-mow, and don't let a living soul outside of the family know which mow they are in.

Railroad.

It is understood that active efforts are being made to secure the speedy construction of the Indiana & Lake Michigan railroad. The line is already surveyed and most of the way from South Bend to St. Joseph the route has been definitely located. The right of way nine miles south of St. Joseph and in and through the town—together with 7,400 by 200 feet of river and dock front has already been secured to the company.

Mr. J. M. Studebaker writes: South Bend must derive great advantages from this road. I may mention, for instance, that our company alone annually receives from twenty-five hundred to three thousand cars of lumber, iron, and other material, a large share of which would find ingress over this road. Moreover South Bend is rapidly growing in the increased volume of its manufactures—all of which would tend to give business to a railroad from South Bend to St. Joseph. Connecting further west with the well known Vandalia line south, a large amount of business could be safely counted on from towns still beyond. Taken all in all, affording a direct line to a lake port, with the timber passing through fertile and highly cultivated agricultural region. Serving a natural roadway for vast quantities of lumber and iron in this city and along the line, and finding here an important outlet to the south. * * * I feel no hesitation in predicting for the Lake Michigan & Indiana railway an undoubted future of prosperity.

Mr. J. B. Birdsall writes: It would place them (South Bend and St. Joseph, Mich.) in direct communication with Michigan and Lake Superior iron and coal fields, and the lumber districts, from where a large proportion of the raw material used by the manufacturers of this city is procured, all of which would naturally find its way over this road. Messrs. Messrs. Cutler & Savage write: Our business from the north amounts to 300 car loads of lumber annually; the road that makes the most satisfactory rates gets our business.—South Bend Tribune.
