A THANKFUL PARSON.

A pious parson good and true Was crossing o'er the seas, When suddenly there blew A wide and sweeping breeze.

He feared the storm the ship would wreck His heart was sore atraid, He sought the captain on the deck And found him undismayed. The captain saw his awful fear

And led him up to where The servant of the Lord could hear The sailors loudly swear. "You clearly see" the captain said, "If danger hoyered nigh They'd all be on their knees instead And asking grace to die."

The parson felt his words were true, And when the skies grew lair Just when to pray or swear. But when the seas which wildly flowed Had ceased to plunge and spont, Unto himself he said: "It showed

But later on another storm Came fiercer than before, The parson heard with wild alarm The ocean's angry roar. He sought the deck in awful dread To near the sailors get. He listened-then he bowed his head-

"Thank God, they're swearing yet."

They know what they're about."

-Chicago Herald. THE CALICO FROCK.

It wasn't a hot day, nor a cold day, nor a damp day, but it was an atrocious day, a clammy day, an unbearable day, a day that made your clothes stick to you like poor relations, that brought out cold sweats on pitchers and goblets, that made your back a race course for contemptible little chills and the rest of your body a target for a thousand invisible pins and needles, that made the grasshopper a burden and the dusty, begrimmed city a pandemonium, that made Solomon Griggs, bachelor, of the firm of Griggs, Makem & Company, the great clothing merchants, shut up his edger with a bang and start for the country by the next train, remarking to old Grimseby, the head clerk, "that the city was stifling."

To which that worthy replied,—
"So it is, but how about the fellers that can't get out of it and must stay to be choked?" A problem which I suspect our friend of the firm of Griggs, Makem & Company, troubled his head very little about, being just then busy in looking into the dusty recesses of that picture gallery, which memory furnishes and arranges for us all as a single landscape, hanging there.

A low house with mossy, overhanging eaves, standing on the slope of a green hill, shaded by branching elms, with level fields stretching off in the foreground toward the sparkling water on one side and dusty woods on the other, and there, dusty, sweating and tired. Solomon found himself just about sunset. Out came a ruddy-cheeked, smiling old lady in a cap and apron that had attained a state of snowy perfection unknown to city laundresses. "Why, bless me, if it isn't little Sol! Why, who'd a thought of seeing you?"

and she folded the stalwart, bearded man in as warm an embrace as though he were in reality still the little Sol of former days. And how do you do, Sol? Come in, come in, don't stand out there You know the little path and the way to the pantry, yet, I dare say. Come in; you needn't start back—it's only Ra-

"But I didn't know you had any young ladies with you, Aunt Hester."
"It's only Rachel, I tell you—Rachel Hart, the seamstress. Are there no women in your city that you are afraid to face a little country girl?"
"Little, indeed," thought Solomon, as he acknowledged his aunt's somewhat peculiar introduction—and not pretty, either-with large eyes of that uncertain gray that sometimes beams darkly blue and then deepens into brown, with smooth, low forehead and light brown hair drawn tightly across each ear, just revealing its crimson tip; a face irregularly featured, and rendered still more striking by the singular contrast between its extreme pallor and the intensely scarlet lips—the personi-fication of neatness, the embodiment of reserve.

"An old little person," thought Solo-mon, "but it's none of my business!" Dismissing her from his mind, he proceeded to the much more important business of making himself perceptible at Aunt Hester's tea table. Solomon did ample justice to the snowy bread, golden butter and luscious strawberries, and later, as that worthy was indulging in a stroll across the field, he lifted up his eyes, and beheld the little seamstress, whose existence he had quite forgotten, under a venerable cherry tree, making desper-ate efforts to seize a tempting branch on its lowest bough—revealing in her gyrations a very neat foot and ankle, and looking almost pretty with her flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes. Now Sol was a gallant man—decidedly the preux chevalier of the firm of Griggs, Makem & Company; so that whenever, as had once or twice happened, a petticoat ventured into the mouldy shades of the establishment, sol was the man whom destiny and the other partners selected to parley with the enemy. Advancing, therefore, with a happy mixture of confidence and condescension, Sol plucked the cherries and was about to present them, when Independence in a calico frock stepped back "Keep them yourself, sir; I don't care

"I thought that you wanted them," stammered Sol. "So I did. because they were difficult to obtain; had they been on your aunt's table, I would not have touched them. It is the glow of triumph that gives a pleasure to it's zest. Eat the cherries yourself, and good-evening, sir!" "Stop a moment!" said Sol, not a little astonished; "that is-I mean-permit me to accompany you." "No; you would expect me to entertain you, and that would be too much trouble. "But if, instead, I should entertain you?"

"You cannot."

"Why?" "You could tell menothing new. You are only a crucible for converting cloth into the precious ore that all the world goes mad after. No doubt you are all very well in your way, but there are dchemists who could transmute our numdrum, daily life into golden verse or heavenly thought. To such a one I might listen, but you and I have noth-

"No," she answered angrily, "not eyen that. I, you know, am made of the inferior clay—you of the pure porcelain. Do you not remember how even good, kind Aunt Hester told you there were no young ladies with her, there were no young ladies with her were not young ladies with her were no young ladies with her were not young ladies with her were ladies with her were not young ladies with her were no young ladies with her were not young ladies w there were no young ladies with her, only the seamstress. You are slightly bored already, and think me odd enough to amuse you for awhile; but "What a furious little radical!" thought Sol, with an uneasy laugh, as he watched her retreating figure. After all, he was not quite sure that she had not spoken the truth. If the calico frock had been a flounced silk, deferential would have been his manner in presenting the cherries? Querry the second.

If the calico frock had been walking down Broadway about four o'clock in the afternoon, would he, Solomon Grigss, of Griggs, Makem & Company, as willingly escort it across those green fields where, if the robins and bluebirds did make remarks, it was in their own Sol couldn't answer the questions satisfactorily, but he went to bed and dreamed all night of the little Diogenes in her calico frock.

That week and the next he waited patiently for the first glimpse of that remarkable garmant coming around the corner, but in vain. And when, in such a very careless manner that it was quite remarkable, he wondered audibly where that odd little girl lived whom he saw on the eve of his arrival," Aunt Hester answered dryly,—
"Away up—thereabouts," pointing with her hand.

She boarded, she believed, with some queer sort of folks there; though, for that matter she was queer enough her-self. And this was absolutely all she would say on the subject. She next day Sol took it upon himself to wander up that way, "thereabouts," and was rewarded with a glimpse of the calico frock going through a broken gate, and following it closely, came up with the wearer as she was about to enter the dilapidated front door, at which piece of impertinence she was so much incensed as to turn very red, while tears actually started to her eyes. "What do you want?" she inquired, sharply enough. "To see you!" replied Sol, who, taken by surprise, could think of nothing but the truth. "Well, you have seen me-now go!"

"But it's a warm day, and I am very "I can't help that. It's not my fault "You might ask me to walk in and sit down, if you were not as hard-hearted as a Huron."

"This is not my house." "You would, then, if it were?" "I don't say that." "Well, then, I am thirsty—give me a glass of water." "There is the well, and an iron cup fastened to it by a chain; help your-"You inhospitable little misanthrope!" But she was gone; and the next time he inquired for her, Aunt Hester told him, with a malicious twinkle of the eye, that she had gone to the city to Perhaps the good soul had been troubled with visions of a future Mrs. Griggs, and was not altogether displeased that an insurmountable barrier was placed between "that odd Rachel Hart and her nephew Sol, who was a good boy, but didn't know the ways of women. Be that as it may, her joy was shortly turned into mourning, for Solomon received dispatches requiring his immediate presence in the city. At least so he said, for Aunt Hester was immovable in her conviction that "that Rachel was somehow at the bottom of She even hinted as much to Sol when he bade her good-by; but he only laughed, and told her to take care of herself. After all, business could not have been so very pressing, as he spent the greatest portion of his time wandering through lanes and back streets, not un frequently dashing down alleys with the inexplicable exclamation of "That's her!" from whence he always returned very red in the face and sheepish in

"Rachel-Miss Hart, I have been looking for you everywhere. I—where do vou live? She hesitated a moment, then said shortly,— "Come and see." Turning, she led the way through narrow streets, reeking with filth and teeming with a wretched population, up a flight of broken stairs, into a dingy little room, whose only redeem ing feature was its perfect cleanliness "Will you be seated, Mr. Griggs?" she asked with a scornful smile. "Now that you know my residence, I trust to have the pleasure of seeing you frequently, "And you live in this den?" asked Solomon, heedless of her sarcasm. "How do you support yourself?" "By my needle." "How much does it take to keep up this magnificent style of living?" "By unremitting exertion I can earn two dollars a week." "Great Heaven! Why didn't you come to me?" he asked. "For two excellent reasons: First, I should not have known where to have found you; secondly, I should not have come if I had."

"Of course not. Your pride is to you meat and drink. Still, you might have come. We are in want of hands." "I do not believe it. You wish to cheat me into accepting alms." "There is our advertisement, read justly offended." "I have no family, and for the world, let it laugh; I dare be happy in spite "I will not have you." "Do you not love me?" "I will not have you," and with that answer Solomon was obliged to rest

On account of the surface of the paper being smooth and hard it cannot catch on fire as easily as a wooden building. It is found warm in cold and cool in hot weather. The Breslau fireproof chimney has demonstrated that cooking and heating stoves, bathtubs and pots, when annealed by a process that renders it fireproof, becomes more lasting than iron and will not burn out. Cracks in floors around the skirting board, or other parts of a room, may be neatly filled by thoroughly soaking newspaper in paste, made as thick as putty and forced into the cracks with a paste-knife. The entire case is made of compressed paper, to which is given a hard surface, a cream-white brilliant polish. The legs and sides are ornamented with arabesques and floral designs. The exterior, and as much of the interior as can be seen when the instrument is open, are covered with wreathes and medallion painted in miniature. An Italian monk has succeeded in constructing an organ where the pipes are made of paper pulp. It has 1,400 pipes of various sizes. Zimmerman was an excent soldier, and served faithfully for ing his pickles, and not liking them, about a year, when he began to redepart without buying. "They will know good vinegar," thought he, and ceive letters from his wife telling him of the struggle she was having to keep so he bought the honest stuff. But "business is busall the time, never shirked a duty, and iness" upbore him, and he succeeded in making a profitable sale. Calling at a store to get, if possable, an order for pickles in bottles, he was quickly and there was no ground upon which he could be given a furlough. It seems however, that one day, with his trouble weighing heavily upon him, he sat down and wrote a letter—a simple rerudely met with, "Don't want to see any such stuff." Noticing the utter cital of his woes—and sent it to Abraham Lincoln. He gave his history while with the regiment; that he had never shirked a duty and if he were dismay on the young man's face, the merchant said, short and sharp, "Don't you know enough of business to put up your goods attractively?" A New Meaning. The expression "You are a daisy" is now considered a slang term; but it was not originally. In "David Copperfield" it is first used in the sense of calling a person a daisy in a way to express admiration, and, at the same time, to laugh at one's credulity, Steerforth says to young Copperfield: Steerforth says to young Copperfield:
"David, my Daisy, you are so innecent of the world! Let me call you my daisy, as it is so refreshing to find one in these corrupt days so innecent and unsophisticated. My dear Copperfield, the daisies of the field are not fresher than you." Hence, when conveying that a person is artless and innocent amid a skeptical and scheming condition of society, to say, "You are a daisy" is not slang. It is forcible and elegant. The same passage gave us the other word, meaning the same thing, though sounding a little harsher, "fresh." We often hear the expression, "You're too fresh!" This, too, was originally intended by Dickens to mean an innocent ignorance of the ways of the world. It was so used by Steerforth in reference to the ways of David Copperfield. But when used to mean that a person is imprudent and forward, as is too frequently the case now, it becomes slang, as such a meaning is in reality senseless. Thus it is

The paper on which bank notes are printed is called "distinctive paper," being used exclusively by the govern-ment for the printing of bonds and current notes. The mills where it is manufactured are at Glen Falls, West Chester county, Pennsylvania. An agent of the treasury department receives the paper direct from the hands of the manufacturer, and precaution is observed in order to prevent any loss. Short scraps of red silk are mixed with the liquid pulp in an engine. The finished material is conducted to a wire cloth without passing through any screens, which might retain the silken threads. An arrangement above the wire cloth scatters a shower of fine scraps of blue silk thread, which falls upon the paper while it is being formed. The side on which the blue silk is deposited is used for the back of notes. and the threads are so deeply imbed-Each sheet is registered as soon as it

The Mobile Daily Register has gotten out a "boom" edition with a map supplement in real western style. Just such work the Register is now engaged in is what is to finally settle the much vexed Southern question that has been the bone of contention in this country about a century. The dispatches state that Mr. Chipman has introduced a bill in the National legislature for the remuneration of a Detroit physician who claims to have discovered a sure cure for la grippe, which is of such a nature that it cannot be protected by a patent. If he can get a sum of money out of the United States treasury he will give his discovery to the public, but if he does not get any money he will let the people suffer on. This may be all right, but to us out back here in the country it looks as if that doctor could raise bristles enough on his back to supply every shoemaker in the country.

There being so much money sent to the greatest swindling institution in the country, the Louisiana Lottery Company, every month, a general demand is being made for legislation that will put an end to it. The post-office department has made several efforts, but with only temporary success, for as soon as one avenue is closed to the company another would be devised, so that it has kept steadily taking the people's money for nothing for seyeral years. This company is said to clear $500,000 every month, so that it can afford to offer to pay the Louisiana state debt-about $12,000,000-for a ten year renewal of its charter, which expires in 1892. Several bills have been introduced in Congress looking to abating the nuisance, and the one that seems nearest to the point to be attained was introduced by Mr. Bingham, of Pennsylvania. It provides that "no letter or circular concerning lotteries or similar enterprises shall be carried in the mail, and that any one who shall deposit such matter in the mails shall be fined not more than $500 nor less than $100, and shall be imprisoned not less than six months. The act shall be a continuous offense from the place of mailing to and including the place of delivery, and every United States court in the districts through which the mail passes shall have jurisdiction for the trial of the offense. To further enforce the spirit of the bill, it is provided that the Postmaster General, upon satisfactory evidence that a person or company is engaged in a lottery or similar scheme, may instruct postmasters to return all registered letters addressed to lotteries or their agents to the senders, and that if it be publicly advertised that any bank or other firm will receive money for a lottery, it shall be taken as evidence that the firm is an agent of the lottery, and no registered mail matter shall be delivered to the firm. The same regulations shall apply to the delivery and payment of money orders."

It is encouraging to know that the subject of emperance has become one of such general shought that it may receive a place upon the program for a gathering like this. It indicates hat the rank and file are about to take the natter in hand and then the question will be settled. The thoughts which I shall present, have been suggested by efforts to introduce Scientific Temperance Instruction into our schools, and which I hope will show something of the nature of the work. The idea originated among the home makers of our land. No wonder then that from the farm and rural home there comes a call to hear about it. No matter what the object to be accomplished is education along that line is necessary. The one who knows best the effects of this or that course of proceedure is enabled to accomplish his object with the fewest mistakes.

The skilled workman in any department is worked up. The bungler coes at a difficult job with no A. B. and C. experience. We are anxious that our children begin reading, writing, and arithmetic young. And are not at all disturbed when the little one at five toddles off to school to begin a fifteen or sixteen years' course of study of those things which will disclose the mental part. Now what does Scientific Temperance Instruction mean in connection with chool work? What does it propose to introduce into the school curriculum of this same little toddler? Simply instruction in regard to the actual effect of alcohol and narrotics upon the brain, nervous and muscular systems of the body. Ordinarily the most that children know o the effects of drinking, is that it makes people reel about while walking, to be idiotic or fiendish in their actions, a drunken man more frequently being a source of amusement than any thing else. They have not the least idea how that man or Woman has injured the body by drinking, and children (of a larger growth or even that have become to be twice a child are sometimes equally ignorant. Had that man multilated with a knife his hands and face, the child beholding it would have been horrified and ran away, yet when he has done a thing more terrible, amusement is created at the apparent results, simply because he does not know fully what has been done to the body.

O! but children cannot learn Physiology, says an objector. In reply let me ask is Physiology more difficult than Algebra, Geometry or Conic sections? You had the child begin quite young with Addition, Multiplication and Division, and then Conic sections came out all right. Why not apply methods with this most important subject that we use with mathematics and language? Children can learn difficult things easily if right methods in teaching are adopted. Hannibal, at ten years of age began to learn the methods of warfare by being taken by his father upon his expeditions of foreign conquest. Rome required her children to be put in training for the army at seven years of age, and Germany at the present time, is scarcey less extreme in the discipline of her army. Now shall we not train the children of America to meet a greater foe than the weapons of an enemy in battle? After all, it is not much of physiology that we propose to teach them. The big doctor words, as Mrs. Hunt calls them, are to be left out. It is not a difficult thing to teach children the functions of the organs of the body. They will be pleased to learn what they do, how they act and look in their natural condition. These things they are to be taught and more. The effect of alcohol upon these organs will be explained; that it produces inflammation of the tissues of the body because it bstracts the water from them. They will learn that a person addicted to the drink habit is more susceptible by far to contagious diseases, and why it is so, Every child will appreciate gratefully a preventive for fearful them to have the old time argument intelligently refuted, that a drink of whisky will keep a man warm on a cold day; to know that the glow of warmth experienced by him are but temporary, caused by a rush of blood to the surface, efrauding the vital organ of their rightful erosity of saloonists and beer guzzlers.

share of warmth preserving blood. They will readily understand that the red face of the habitual drunkard is due to the disturbed circulation of the blood. They will readily appreciate the violence done to the liver when its weight is increased from five lbs., its natural weight, to 50 lbs. by the drink habit, and also that this is what causes the general pond-By this new study children will be taught that alcohol is a poison, as strictly as armenic, or strychnine, the effects of which they so well understand, a poison a hundred times more priiable in its effects because its effects are so ong drawn out. They will learn that besides the natural noison which alcohol contains that of commerce is drugged to a fearful extent. The incipient farmer may fear less the loss of market for his grain, in the overthrow of King Alcohol, when he knows that only a very small per cent of his grain is found in the whisky ommonly used. It is made of cheaper stuff. But how is all this to be accomplished? Much has already been accomplished. Great force lies in the fact that a thing must be done. There is no better prompter as to ways and means than stern necessity; this necessity is apon us. And this instruction must be given in our schools for the law has spoken. Hear it. The law is compulsive, not simply preventive: It provides a penalty. Strange to say this very wholesome and sensible law was obtained only through a severe struggle Brave pioneer men and women literally beseiged congress and legislative halls. Timtd women braved the august presence of conventions, assembled with their pleas, until this and similar laws have been obtained in all but twelve or fourteen states. Now the enforcement of the law is all that remains to be accomplished. Of this we will speak further on The law contemplates graded system of books. Primary books for primarians. Intermediate and high school for their respective grades. What! buy so many books? Yes. Why not. Isn't that the way the children have learned Arithmetic and Geography, just a small book and then one a little larger, then a larger one still. You bought them all because it was best and necessary, The child could not take the highest reade first, it must reach that by grades. Every child with a book in its hands, suited to its age, from which to learn the nature of the nonster who is seeking to destroy every boy. aye, many of the girls of our land.

Now to accomplish the enforcement of the law the county school offices must be filled with men of forceful character, who believe in temperance. They will meet at the outset sometimes Prof. Kedzie of the State Agricultural | with indifference if not opposition, upon the part of the various school boards. The district school board should be law abiding temperance men. Then it remains in a large degree with the parents and teachers to create a sentiment in favor of the law. It is our parts as parents to be willing to furnish the books, to see that the children are attending faithfully to this study. Question them as they come from school as you are accustomed to do in other essons. Help create an interest in the subject. I would like to give some credit to the splendid organization of the W. C. T. U. for strong influence in favor of the requirements of the law. It can boast of no legal or official power and it assumes none, but all its womanly and motherly might is given in its favor. It is claiming the woman's royal prerogative of talking. Its vigilant superintendents are talking with teachers and officers and peeping into school houses to see if the work is going on.

But now we have the law and we will suppos

ter rests with you. You virtually stand at the divergence of two roads, one leading to honor, ealth and happiness, the other to disgrace, despair and ruin, and over one or the other every child of our land must pass. Will you teachers faithfully point to this in the rigt lirection. You know as well as we that it is possible to go through the form of the teacher's work with no practical good resulting. Will you not put your heart in this phase of your work, teach it as earnestly, yes, more earnestly than any other subject, for verily it has to do with the immortal souls in your care. In your care during more of their wakeful hours than even that of their mother. Study methods, perform experiments, relate incidents, create an interest in temperance and a disgust and hatred for intemperance. Get the child to understand that he is not the same ever after the first drink: power of resistance has been reduced, imper eptible at first perhaps, but very soon the brain is so weakened that resistance is impos

It seems to me that the teachers in our schools have now the opportunity of revolutionizing the moral status of the nation. Will you do

The work also contemplates warfare against tobacco. The cigar and modern cigarette is even a worse foe to the little boy than alcohol. for they have become or are fast becoming to think it their province and privilege to use them long before they arrive to the dignity of drinking. Not even the restraint of privacy hampers the little fellow with his poisonous cigarette between his lips, for they march boldly along our streets, talking loudly and fluently of the merits and expense of, the brand. Where are the parents in connection with this matter? Surely you can control your child at en years of age, at any rate the law can contro the man who sells the cigarette. Teachers you have it in your power to work better than you know in this matter. Read carefully the little leaflet entitled The tobacco habit and its effect upon school work, which has been or will soon be sent to every one of you. Let me urge ance matter in any form which comes to your hand. It has been sent to you by the head of some department who hopes great things at your hands. The matter has been prepared with much care and is worthy your serious

The principal of the Iowa State Norma School after making a study of several hundred boys, running through a period of ten years, came to the following conclusions: 1st-That boys who began the habit at an early age are stunted physically, and never arrive at normal bodily conditions. 2nd-Accompanied with the use of the narcotic was certain disordered physical functions, such as indigestion, impaired taste, defective eyesight, dull hearing nervous affections and diseases of the heart 3rd—The tobacco used in any form destroyed the ability to apply one's self to study and prevented his comprehending or remembering his lessons. The mental faculties under the influence of the narcotic seem to be in a stupor He says: "I have never had a pupil addicted to the habit whose scholarship record was good and in almost every case the deportment was below the average; and then gives the following case: A high-school boy who had always done excellent work, was reported one term as not getting his lessons. I had a talk with the boy and stated the facts, assuring him that with his past record his poor work was unexplainable as he insisted that he devoted his time faithfully to his studies. He denied using tobacco at all. His work failed from month to month and before the year closed his parents withdrev him from school. His father deeply regretted the failure, admitted that a change had come in the boy's conduct at home, but as he had beretofore been truthful and faithful, he could not think that the presupposed cause was the true one. In a few months the habit, thus far secret, became more pronounced and more pub lic, and it was absolutely established by the boy's own admissions, that it was begun sever-I months before the trouble noticed at school and that no one knew it save the salesman that furnished him the supply of the narcotic. Teachers must be in the first rank, but par ents, ministers, public speakers of every class and every citizen who loves his child or regards the welfare of his country, should stand as reserves, to encourage and enforce this new undertaking. Apathy of parents, indifference of schoolboards, inefficiency of teachers, arising from lack of experience in this line of work are some of the obstacles to be overcome. One authority says: While it is yet hardly time to look for results from this work, reports coming from all parts of the country testify that public opinion is being influenced by what is taught in the schools, that classes of people inaccess ble by other instrumentalities, are being reach ed; that in many cases the habits of parent are being changed, and that a generation in training for whom the saloon will have no attractions. These results are most marked where these laws are best enforced, with our ndorsed text-books in the hands of the pupils. Although the annals of poets, historians statesmen, philosophers and warriors are all blackened with here and there a name that has fallen victim to the cup, yet history is equally faithful in showing that its worst work is always done among the degraded and uneducat ed, even when temperance was no part of the school work. Now with this added instruction we expect many haunts of misery and want will be penetrated by a light heretofore unseen When I think of this system of Scientific emperance Education in its possible results indeed its necessary results if carried out to its perfection, I see in my imagination a few ears hence, every young man free, standing in the dignity and beauty of perfect physical and mental manhood. Clear brained, bright eyed, wholesome complexioned, with white teeth pure breath and manly aspirations forever. For with the drink and tobacco habit eradicated, disinherited, in their places will come pure thoughts, elevating and energizing every mental and moral power: Muscle and nerve no longe preyed upon by these wasting, weakening, withring agents, there will be developed a perfect physical manhood. Hour after hour Jugurtha and his army poured destruction and death int the ranks of the Koman enemy. Koman Marius with a few detatchments of soldiers fought through the long fearful hours, checking, re-Jugurtha, their cause seemed nearly hopeless. Jugurtha's money had bought off consul after consul, senator after senator, till he in a mom ent of exaltation exclaimed, O, venal Rome thou art only waiting for a purchaser! But back from among the hills and valleys of Italy, into the deep dark dungeon of Tullianum.

Another conflict is raging, numerous companies of determined soldiers are trying to stay the destruction. Temperance organizations of every kind are in battle array against the enemy. ometimes a field has been won, but the enemy's money has bought off judge, jury and legislator, until at times a modern Jugurtha might say, Oh, wretched land, thou art only waiting a purchaser. But out in the school houses of our country there is being equipped and trained, an army, which shall one day come marching up from mountain and plain from hillside and valley, an army too rich in knowledge to be bought off, and with their effectual and bloodless weapons, the ballot, it will drive the legions of darkness from the field and drop their leader into a dungeon deeper and darker than Tullianum.

Detroit Journal. THE Era has the following concerning the closing of the bank of Berrien

They claim that their effort to swing through the railway enterprise that has, for nearly a year, occupied the at-tention of this community, owing to the failure of Buchanan parties to the agreement and of Mr. Burns to do what they had undertaken, put the bank in bad shape and effort was at once made to secure the necessary funds to make everything secure. The Atlas National Bank of Chicago had agreed to pay all drafts, and take care of all such obligations, but Friday night, without warning, repudiated the arrangement and it became necessary to close up. All deposits made on Saturday were returned and the assignment occurred as stated.

SALE OF STATE TAX LANDS. AUDITOR GENERAL'S OFFICE ELANSING, MICH., January 27, 1899.

NOTICE is hereby given that certain lands situated in the County o Bertien, bid off to the State for taxes of 1856 and previous years, and described in statements which will hereafter be forwarded to the office of the Treasurer of said county, will be sold at public auction, by said Treasurer at the County Seat, on the first Monday of May next, at the time and place designated for the Annual Tax Sales, if not previously redeemed or cancelled according to law.

Said statements contain a full description of each parcel of said lands, and may be seen on application at the office of the County Treasurer after they are received by him.

The lands struck off to the State for taxes of 1856, or other years, at the Tax Sales in October last, will be offered subject to the right of redemption prescribed by law.

The petition of Henry H. Aplin, Auditor General of said State of Michigan, respectfully shows that the lists of lands hereinafter set forth and marked "Schedule A," contain a description of all lands in said county of Berrien upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein, and which were returned as delinquent for non-payment of taxes, and which taxes have not been paid; together with the total amount of such taxes, with interest computed thereon to the time fixed for sale, and collection fee as provided by law, and the cost of advertising and other expenses of sale of each of said parcels of land.

Your petitioner further shows to the Court that said lands were returned to the Auditor General as delinquent for the non-payment of said taxes for said years respectively, and that said delinquent for the non-payment of said taxes for said years respectively, and that said delinquent returns were made prior to the first day of July, 1888.

Your petitioner further shows and avers that the taxes, interest, collection fee, costs of advertising and other expenses of sale, and the legal fees for personal service of subpena in each case where such personal service is actually made, are a valld lien on the several parcels of land described in said schedule.

Your petitioner further shows that the said taxes on the said described lands have remained unpaid for more than one year from the first day of July next after their return to the Auditor General, and the said taxes not having been paid, and the same being now due and remaining unpaid as above set forth, your petitioner prays a decree in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of said lands, for the payment of the several amounts of taxes, interest, collection fee, cost of advertising, and other expenses of sale, as computed and extended in said schedule, against the several parcels of land contained therein, and in addition thereto of the amount of legal fees for personal service STATE OF MICHIGAN. beginning 4 rods e of sw cor, thence width 8 rods.....

Notice is also hereby given that on the first Monday of May, 1890, the lands described in said petition, and for which an order of sale shall be made, will be sold for the taxes, interest, and charges thereon, as deter-mined by said decree, at the County Treasurer's office, in the village of Berrien Springs, in said County of Berrien.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT.

Family. When the present Cornelius Vanderbilt was born, in 1843, at New Dorp, S. I., the commo dore, his grandfather, for whom he was named, was not a very rich man, and his father, William H. Vanderbilt, was poor. The young Cornelius was not sent to college, as he doubtless would have been had he been born twen-ty years later, but was set to work as a bank clerk. He was a steady young man and a church member, having from his youth been a worker in the Episcopal denomination. At 22 he was made treasurer of the New York and Harlem railroad. When the commodore died he left his namesake $5,000,000.

Cornelius Vanderbilt in 1877 became first vice president of the New York Central road, and when in 1883 his father resigned the presidency the son became chairman of the New York Central and Michigan Central systems.

When William H. died he left the bulk of his property to his sons, Cornelius and William K., who together or separately came to be among half a dozen millionaires who are the richest in the world. Cornelius Vanderbilt has especially proved himself worthy of his good fortune. He is an active worker in a business way, in the church and in charities. He has given away millions as other men give thousands or hun-

Mr. Vanderbilt's city residence is on Fifth avenue, on the fashionable Murray Hill. It has come to be a noisy place of late years, for Fifth avenue is now a great thoroughfare with its Belgian stone pavement and innumerable vehicles. But he only lives there durat Newport. There he possesses a beautiful place which he occupies during the summer with his wife and his sons and daughters when he is not yachting or traveling abroad.

CHARLES CARROLL COLBY.

The Latest Addition to the Canadian Cabinet-A Sketch of His Life. To attain the distinction of becoming a cabinet minister of the Dominion govern-ment—a distinction accorded to only a dozen ment—a distinction accorded to only a dozenof its five million people—necessitates in the aspirant rare qualities and sterling merit.
The latest addition to cabinet advisers,
Charles Carroll Colby, member of parliament for Stanstead, Quebec, is no exception to this rate.

Mr. Colby is not a native Canadian, but was born in Vermont, whence he went to Stanstead at the age of 5, where he has since resided. His father represented Stanstead in the Lower Canada assembly until the rebellion of 1837. The son inherited his father's facility and fire of expression. The boy was sent to Dartmouth college, and after gradu-ating, in 1867, he spent four or five years on his father's farm. He afterwards owned a farm of a thousand acres, which he managed himself.

Mr. Colby practiced law for ten years, and particled in many important local enterprises. In 1858 he married Miss Harriet Child, of Waybridge, Vt.

Mr. Colby's parliamentary career has been a notable one. He has never known what it is to be defeated in a popular election, and for twenty-three years his constituency in Stanstead county has kept his name as its representative in parliament. Not alone has the new minister invariably carried his own elections, but every candidate in any other contest whom he has supported has also been elected. This wonderful record extends back to 1852, a period of nearly forty years. He was elected by a majority of 151 in 1867, with Sir A. T. Galt. He was strongly anticonfederate, and from that day has retained the confidence of the picturesque county by the shores of Lake Memphremagog. In 1887 Mr. Colby became first deputy speaker of the house of commons, no objection being raised from either side of the modest and retirmodest and retiring manner, and, CHARLES C. COLBY. though a fluent, engaging speaker, with a most effective style of oratory, and thoroughly versed in parliamentary tactics, his voice is rarely heard in debate. When he does speak, therefore, he at once receives the undivided attention of the members, and his words are listened to with marked respect. His speeches leave the impression that he may be, perhaps, somewhat over cautious, but stamp him as a discerning, enlightened and sagacious public man.

Mr. Colby has written a work entitled "Parliamentary Government in Canada" a "Parliamentary Government in Canada," a simple and correct description of the Domin ion form of government, which has been adopted as a text book in Harvard university It must not be denied that Walt Whitman has given to the world some genuine poetry, but the quantity is small, especially when we compare it with his many attempts at soaring. He has written as much poetry as William Wordsworth, and fully as much childish nonsense. He has never sustained a lofty and continuous flight, but it seems that lofty and continuous flight, but it seems that when he takes wing all sorts of bats and monstrous productions of a loathsome atmosphere obstruct his passage, and he moves away on a current of mystical vacuity. Discuss it and dwell upon it as we may, no scholar will ever uphold mystery as genius. It is only an indication of weakness and exhaustion. But Walt Whitman, as a peculiar and disjointed creator, takes a place in our literature that he will certainly retain.—Hugh Farrar McDermott.

New York's New Chamberlain. There was a surprised man recently in New York city, who has for some time been occu-

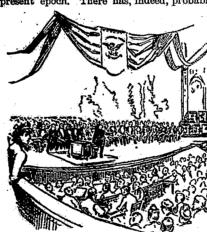

RICHARD CROKER. THOS. C. T. CRAIN. The Mayor decided to appoint a city chamberlain, and to appoint some one entirely upon his own responsibility, without consulting any one. So he chose his secretary, a a man 30 years of age, and with no more expectation of succeeding to such an office than to Jay Gould's estate.

Formerly the city chamberlain of New York, who has charge of the city's funds, was not obliged to account for any interest, and the office could be made to pay him some two or three hundred thousand dollars a year. But all that is changed now and there is a fixed salary of $25,000 a year, out of which the chamberlain must pay his office outfit and clerk hire, so that he may realize about $18,000. Mr. Crain will therefore during his administration probably be able to lay up a trifle for a rainy day. When the mayor informed his secretary that he had appointed him city chamberlain the secretary laughed, thinking that Mr. Grant was joking. When he discovered that he was in earnest he hesi-tated to take the office, but finally decided to accept. The appointment of so young a man to so important an office has occasioned a great deal of comment.

Richard Croker, Mr. Crain's predecessor, has been Tammany's "boss" for some years. His reason for resigning the office was illness, and he has gone to Carlsbad, Germany.

The centennial celebration of the organiza tion of the supreme court of the United States, which took place in New York city recently, was doubtless the most dignified of all the centennial meetings occurring in the present epoch. There has, indeed, probably

He has brought the flower she loved, Her own French daffodil; He has laid it on her breast,

Who can tell what he feels, That 'neath the arches dim
Of some chapel for the dead
Hears sing, when day has fled,
A funeral hymn?

Who knows what the painter feels
As he brings his daffodil,
With aching heart and head,
To the wife of his bosom, wed To the Wooer chill? In a chamber of his soul, - Never unlocked till now, The priestess, Sorrow, stands, Pain's censer in her hands,

And an iron brow. His nerves grow sick and faint, And darkness veils his eyes, As her incense odors press To each far away recess But his love is pale and still, With her golden daffodil; Clasped to her silent breast.

Does she know his wild unrest, His shattered will? Where is her spirit now? To the shores of her native France Has it swift recrossed the years? Does the light of larger spheres Its joys enhance?

He only knows that he Henceforth must climb alone Closed is the studio door. And none pass in today; His brush unheeded falls.

I commenced to gain strength as soon as I got the chills and fever brok-en up. I don't have those nervous spells any more. I don't cough and raise as much as I did; what I do raise looks pretty bad, but no blood, just clear corruption. I have not vomited up my food for about a week. My victuals begin to taste natural. I have a splendid appetite. MRS. A. F. BERDAN, Raymond, Dak

The Weekly Mail and Express

You Can Subscribe to Both at Once. HOW IS THIS? YOU ASK.

WE WILL EXPLAIN.

The Weekly Mail and Express has agreed with the Grant Monument. Association that the entire revenue of the paper from yearly subscriptions of two dollars each will be turned over to the Fund for the erection of a NATIONAL MONUMENT to General Ulysses S. Grant at Riverside Park, New York City. In other words, if yon send Two Dollars to the Weekly Mail and Express you will receive the paper for a year, and your money will be paid over to the Grant Monument Fund. You will thus receive a full equivalent for your money in a first-class weekly newspaper and at the same time you will be helping to forward a noble and worthy cause. The Weekly Mail and Express has further evidenced its earnestness and sincerity in this work by subscribing TEN THOUS AND DOLLARS to the Monument Fund. The following letters are self-explanatory:

LETTER FROM EX-GOVERNOR CORNELL. NEW YORK, NOV. 22, 1889.

Proprietor of the Mail and Express:

It gives me pleasure to assure you that the members of the Grant Monument Association appreciate, approve and accept your generous offer to aid, through the medium of the Weekly Mail and Express, in the erection of the grand memorial at Riverside Park in honor of the illustrious soldier and patriot, Ulysses S. Grant.

ALONZO B. COENELL,
Chairman Executive Committee of the Grant Monument Association. Monument Association.

LETTER FROM MIRS. GRANT.

New York, Nov. 28, 1889.

The arrangements made between the Weekly Mail and Express and the Grant Monument Association meets my hearty approval. The offer of the Weekly Mail and Express is patriotic, and should it be responded to promptly by the citizens of America the monument will speedily be built at the very site suggested by my husband, and selected by me as the last resting place of his precious remains, the spot where I hope my remains will lie beside his, and where our children units with me saying, "Here only shall be his tomb."

Julia Dent Grant.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM GOV: CORNELL.

GRANT MONUMENT ASSOCIATION,
NEW YOUR, Dec. 18, 1889.

DEAR SIR—It gives me profound satisfaction to acknowledge receipt of your esteemed favor of this date inclosing check from the Weekly Mail and Express for TEN.THOURAND DOLLARS, panable to the order of the Grant Monument Associytion, as a contribution toward the erection of the Grant memorial at the Riverside Park, in the city of New York.

Such a contribution coming at this time, is doubly valuable. It will stimulate the renewed efforts recently enteredupon to complete the find necessary to construct what we confidently believe will be the grandest personal memorial in Christendom. Faithfully and cordially yours, Alonzo B. Connelle, Chairman Executive Committee.
