For we bring them, alast in our blindness, To the heart that no longer feels pain, We are dumb 'neath the weight of our sorrows

So we live as though nothing could sever The lives that to day are entwined; In the future we're saintly lorever-Good intentions are easy to find. For to-morrow we promise repentence For the sins that have soiled us to-day: But a morrow will come when the sentence All our yows can no longer delay.

CHANGING HER NAME.

"On, I've no objection to change my name," said Phebe Warland. She spoke in a tone no louder than her usual wont, but it so happened that the piano, ylo-lin and cornet engaged by Mrs. Dupre for her little informal dance had just finished the waltz numbers with a final crash, and during the unnatural silence that followed, Phebe's voice sounded clear and distinct. Everybody looked in her direction; she looked confused and turned red. "Most young ladies haven't," said

Captain Casserly, mischievously. "It depends entirely on who asks you, eh, Phebe?" laughed Mildred Payne, not without a spice of malice in her Ulric Perry looked at her with a cold, disapproving glance. Of all things be valued delicacy and refinement in a woman, and up to this time he had firmly believed Phebe Warland to be a pure sweet lily of the valley among women. And now this bold and startling declaration savored of the fast young lady type which he particularly As for Phebe herself, she sat silent, the rosy blushes suffusing her fair fore head to the very roots of her hair. "I'm of the same opinion myself, Phebe," called out Fairy Falkland, who was the most uncompromising romp in town. "Only I haven't had the courage to declare it before folks."

"Here's the Lancers," said Casserly.

"Miss Falkland, will you honor me?
Always with the understanding that I'm not prepared to ask you to change your name." There was a general laugh, and when Ulric Perry looked around for Miss Warland her place was vacant.

"It is very strange," said he. "I had written my name down on her card for this Lancers. Now I cannot find her." I dare say she's flirting with that young Cuban officer out in the hall."

Ulric Perry was silent. Half an hour ago he would have staked his existence on Phebe Warland's being right in everything. Now, all was chanced on account of that unfortunate speech of Phebe was very silent when she came home from the Dupre party. Cilla, her sister, was in unusual spirits. "I say, Phebe," she cried, as she brushed out her masses of auburn curls, "what a sensation you made!" Phebe made no answer.

"But it was a ridiculous speech, wasn't it?"

Phebe bit her lip. "You might, at least, have spoken up to defend me, Cilla." Cilla shrugged her shoulders.

"What could I say? That you were steadfastly determined to make a fool of yourself? Thank you, I don't mean to be the first to declare that fact to the public.' "Oh, Cilla! after the dreadful language that butcher used to mamma vesterdav.' "Tradespeople always make themselves disagrecable." "And that poor dressmaker crying so over last summer's unpaid bill!" "All put on," complacently murmured Cilla, the brush still passing in and out among the gleaming masses of her rich hair. 'We can't live on so, Cilla." "Other people do," retorted the elder sister. "And, after all, it isn't our fault; we can't pay people if we have no money. And it will all come right when we are once married and set-

"Fraud and treachery never come right.".

Cilla Warland flung down her brush with an impatient exclamation. "You ought to be ashamed to use such cruel language to me, Phebe!" she cried. "Nobody would believe that you were a gentleman's daughter, to hear you talk! I just wish that Ulric Perry could have the benefit of it! But there's one thing—what you say or don't say won't make much difference to Ulric Perry after this." "No, I know that it won't" Phebe list lessly answered.

"You saw that glance then?"
"Yes, I saw it." And Phebe went to bed, and cried herself noiselessly to sleep.
"It is very strange," said Mrs. Love-joy to her brother, Ulric Perry, several weeks afterward, "but one never sees that youngest Miss Warland in society

"Perhaps she is out of town."
"No. for I met her on Wildman street after dark last night. Have you called there lately?" Mrs. Lovejoy looked keenly at her brother. Ulric's face was as impassive as that of the Egyptian sphinx. "Cilla Warland is extremely pretty," said she, tentatively. "So are butterflies and fireworks and. "I never can understand you, Ulric."

"That isn't at all strange, Kate. I can't always understand myself."
But whenever he heard Phebe Warland's name mentioned after this, Mr.

Perry had a strange sensation as if people were talking about somebody said she coaxingly, "and give me the ium.

Valley Cashmere shawl you've promised me so long. Do, Ulric, there's a darling!"

. What could Ulric do but yield? The shawl department at Beauclere's was crowded, and the smiling floor-walker called one of the attendants from an adjoining room to act as layfigure for the advantageous display of the thousand-dollar shawl on which Mrs. Loveloy had fixed her fancy.

"Miss Denton," he called, "be so good as to step this way. There," flinging the shawl in sumptuous folds over her shoulders, "you can scarcely fail to see the effect now." Mrs. Lovejoy gave a little start.

"Ulric," she softly whispered, "it is Phebe Warland." But he had turned away and was apparantly occupied in scrutinizing a rare old piece of German tapestry displayed in the window.

Mrs. Lovejoy put up her eyeglasses and feigned to examine the India shawl. Phebe turned white and red by turns. "How do you do, Mrs. Lovejoy," said she, breaking the embarrassing silence

"I thought that it was you," stammered the customer. "But why did they call you Miss Denton?" "Actresses always assume stage names," said Phebe, coldly smiling. "It is their privilege. I am an actress—on life's stage. Denton is my middle name, and I have a right to do it."

"Yes, but—but— "I understand. It seems strange to you. You cannot comprehend my motive. Well, I do not blame you. We are poor. The Warland name and pedigree are not of any use to live upon, so I have decided to break loose from old traditions and earn my own living, beside paying a few troublesome indebtednesses. My mother and sister did not approve of my plan, therefore, to satisfy their scruples. I changed my name. "Changed your name?" Ulric Perry had come forward now and was standing with his dark, intent eyes fixed on the girl's countenance. "Was that what you meant, Miss Warland, that evening---'

"At Mrs. Dupre's? Yes, I was discussing the project with my sister then. She had made it a stipulation that I should entirely detach myself from the family gentility," with a bitter smile, "and I have done so. Not because I am ashamed of what I am doing," she added, a sudden flash coming into her

"Ashamed!" repeated Ulric. "If ever woman was a heroine you are one, Miss Warland, and I have no words to say how highly I honor your, or—or how deeply I despise myself for misunderstanding you."

"Yes, to be sure," said Mrs. Love; oy, promptly flinging herself into the current of popular opinion. "So very laudable—so spirited!" The shawl was bought and paid for, but Mr. Perry never knew exactly what the price was. His mind with something else. Did ever a man propose and become accepted in the shawl department of a monster store, at high noon, before? Probably not. There must always be precedent. Ulric used no special form of words. It is possible that his eyes spoke more than his lips, while Mrs. Lovejoy was busy directing the packing of her treasure. All that he was certain of was, that he did propose and was accepted. And for the second time Phebe Warland openly acknowledged that she had no objection to changing her name.

The First Repeating Rifle.

An Atlanta veteran was talking the other day about his first experience with a repeating rifle. "I was out on the picket line," he tells it "and a lot of yankees kept shooting at us from the shelter of a pine thicket. Finally we made a break for the thicket, and then we had it. Every fellow would pick out his man, and then load and shoot, taking advantage of the shelter of the trees." "My yankee got the first shot, and missed me. As I was only seventy-five or one hundred yards away I thought would reach him before he could load again, so I made a dash for him. He stepped out from his tree and aimed, but I thought he was just trying to bluff, so I didn't stop till he pulled down on me. "My Lord! I thought, that's the first rifle I ever saw with two barrels!' I just halted, but thought surely his gun must be empty now, so I started for him again. Well sir, he just stood there and bang! bang! bang! bang! like milking a cow. I jumped for a tree mighty quick, I can tell you. I heard him to be a superior to be a superior belief. him just hollering behind the tree. It tickled him mightily. I didn't know what to make of it. I put my cap out from behind the tree and he banged! banged! down on it. It scared me. I didn't know how long the thing would hold out. Presently though I saw him bending over. His head was protected, but his back was showing, I took a good aim. The ball plunged through the fleshy part of the thigh, and as he hollered I made for him. He had dropped his gun and started to run, but he stopped and started back with "I carried that old gun of his back and it was a great curiosity to our boys. They never did believe that it could shoot sixteen times, and I couldn't prove it because he had only one load left and we couldn't get any ammunition to fit the gun. So we broke up the gun to keep the yankees from getting hold of it again."-Atlanta Constitu-

Old Democrat Slick Worker-The man who will put up the most money, Perry had a strange sensation as if people were talking about somebody dead and buried.

Just about that time the lace window draperies in the Perry mansion needed renewing, and when Mrs. Lovejoy heard that her brother was going to Philadelphia, she declared her intention of accompanying him.

Beavers-Their Sagacity and Industry.

Probably more has been written about the industry of the honey bee and the sagacity of the beaver than any other two members of the animal kingdom. A recent number of the Boston Journal of Commerce gives a graphic description of the intelligent and industrious beaver, as follows: Beavers live in families, like human beings. The male has one wife, and the children stay at home until they are three years old, when they go abroad seeking companions of their own and set up housekeeping for themselves. If by any reason a general breakup of the "lodge" takes place, the young beavers go down stream and the old ones up, as it is easier to build a dam up stream, where the water is shallower, and generally bark from small trees is more easily obtained.

The lodges, if not broken up by man, remain in use for a lorg series of years, and are admirably adapted to convenience and safety. Each lodge on the bank of a stream has three openings, and sometimes more. The first entrance slopes up gradually from the bottom of the stream to the chamber where the beavers live. By this entrance they bring in their food, which consists of short sticks of wood covered with bark, cut short enough to be turned or handled any way inside of the living room. Another entrance, or way of egress rather, goes straight down from the chamber to the bottom of the river, when it turns squarely and comes out into the bottom of the stream. Down this hole they drop the sticks when they have eaten off the bark, and then drag the white naked pieces of wood out of the bottom to float away. The third entrance is from beneath also, and is sinuous, turning in many ways, and serves a good purpose when beseiged by an enemy. All these entrance ways are arched over with sticks and plastered with mud and grass. The bottoms of these entrance ways are also laid with or chamber itself is a house from six short sticks like corduroy The lodge to eight feet square, laid up against the wall with sticks like a log cabin. When stick in the wall of this cabin rots. t is carefully removed and another put in its place. The beaver exercises great dilligence and wisdom in procuring and storing its food. Thick bark on the trunks of large trees is not suitable for him and his family, and so they cut down the tree for the smaller limbs, on which the bark is more tender and nutritious. Two nights work is sufficent to fell a large tree, each family being left to enjoy the fruits of its own labor. It is said they promptly kill all socialists, trouble breeders, and those that are two lazy to work. When a tree on which they are working begins to crackle, they desist from cutting till they begin to fall, when they plunge into the water one after another, "plunk," "plunk," "plunk," till all are in, where they wait with great caution east the noise of the falling tree might attract some enemy to the place, may be some fool with a gun. Nor is this

all. They know how to regulate the cutting of a tree so as to make it fall always in the water. This is done so as to enable them to transport their short sticks by water to the lodge. Master beaver places it under his throat and pushes it before him to the place where it is to be sunk at the mouth of the entrance way to the lodge.

A book might be written on the peavers' dam. This is, without doubt, the most ingenious and scientific structure built by any creature save man. The object of this dam is to raise and hold the water so as to cover the entrance way to his chamber. This makes the beaver both comfortable and safe. The dam is constructed of sticks, mud, and stones gathered together with great skill and labor. The breadth of the base and top of the beavers' dam is always in exact proportion to its height and

A Kentuckian's Point of View. A little story is told, by the Washington Star, of Congressmen Caruth and McCreary, of Kentucky, illustrative of sectional peculiarities. The nativity of a business man in the mountain region, who had gone into the state from Indiana a dozen years before, was questioned, McCreary holding that he was a Kentuckian and Caruth taking the opposite ground, and $5 was ready for the winner. A few days afterward the three men met at a hotel and the two statesmen told the business man they had bet on him. "Well, what is it?" he said, good naturedly, at the same time taking off his overcoat and handing it to a colored boy, with the remark: "Be careful, Henry, and don't let the pistol in that outside pocket knock against the bottle

But neither man answered him and Caruth quietly handed a $5 bill over. saying: "That settles it; I'd have sworn in any court, though, that he wasn't a Kentuckian,"

The business man explained later, and then McCreary put his $5 with Caruth's and they had champagne with their supper.

Visitor, "as making haste slowly." If the Chicago business man could be shot through a pneumatic tube into New York City in the space of a few minutes, the limited express train taking twenty-four hours to reach there would no longer be patronized. And if the New Yorker could land in Liverpool in less than two days via. an air line, the ocean greyhounds would find their day of usefulness had fled. No one has time to build Egyptian pyamids nowadays; indeed, with every facility to visit the land of the Pharaohs, few of us have time even to stop and look at such works of art. Speed is the necessity of necessities in our time, and if lightning speed can be obtained, nothing but lightning speed will be tolerated. This rule applies equally to firing a gun, making money or the developement of science. This century has already passed through the phases of a cotton age, an iron age, and is rapidly being transformed into an electical age.

The Niagara River Hydraulic Tunnel, Power, and Sewer Company will now, it is stated, carry out its plan for utilizing the fall of water at Niagara, New Democrat' Slick worker-Who by building its main tunnel and conis the best man for us to put up for necting cross tunnels with wheel pits. is estimated that if thirty mills of 500 horse power each are built, it would pay five per cent upon a capital of $3.ooo,000, while if all privileges were taken the result would pay the interest upon a large block of bonds and a handsome return upon the stock. Prevention of Consumption. The health department of the city of Providence has issued the following

"Consumption causes more deaths than any other disease the human race is subject to. Nevertheless it is to a very great extent preventable. It is though not generally known, a contageous disease. Consumption, or pulmonary tuberculosis, is in every case caused by disease germs which grow in the lungs in enormous numbers. When a person is sick with this disease, these germs are coughed up in great quantities in the expectoration, and when this becomes dry and crumbles, or is trodden to dust, the germs float about in the air and are liable to be breathed into the lungs of any one. If the lungs of the person who does breathe them are poorly developed, or if the constitution is feeble, the germs are very sure to grow and cause the disease. Unfortunately, we do not know how to kill them when they are once in the air passages. The best that can be done is to build up the system and strengthen the lungs by the use of cod liver oil, good food, and fresh air. Much, moreover, can be done to prevent the spread of the disease by destroying the germs as completely as possible in every case.

1. No person with consumption should ever spit on the floor or in the street. If handkerchiefs or bits of cloth are employed, they should at once be disinfected or burned. A good plan is to use a wide-mouthed bottle with a rubber stopper. The contents should be thrown into the fire and the bottle and stopper thoroughly scalded with boiling hot water every day. 2. The dishes used by a consumptive should be at once scalded, and the unwashed underwear and bed clothing should be thoroughly boiled as soon as possible. 3. When a person with consumption has diarrhea, the discharges from the bowels should at once be disinfected, as at this time they contain the disease germs. A good way is to add a half-teacupful of fresh chloride of lime, or fill up the chamber vessel with boiling water.

4. No one with consumption should sleep in the same room with another person, and the room occupied by a consumptive should be thoroughly cleansed as often as possible. 5. No mother with consumption should nurse an infant, and children ought never to be taken care of by a consumptive person."—Boston M. and his views concerning the present outlook, said: "It is a difficult time to judge of the future. If the question had been asked of me a year ago I would have said the outlook was poor; but in less than three months activity began, and I ordered new cars, although there were 5,000 idle cars on the tracks. It is seldom that you can correctly judge the future; but there is no reason why the manufacturers of the country, and especially those in iron and steel, should not have a very fair season. The outlook for railroad trafic is encouraging also. I have a notion, too, that we as a nation, are about to become exporter of manufactured products to a larger extent than ever before. Our industries will now seek success outside of the domestic market, which they have heretofore depended upon. But our large and profitable consumption gives us an advantage over older producing countries, where most manufactured articles have to seek a market outside the home market,"

His talons were seven inches broad, and his claws were one and one-fourth inches in 40> Costly Piano Leather.

The costliest of all leathers is known as piano leather, and is used sorely for covering piano keys. The world's sup-ply of it comes from Teuringia, in Germany, where a family of tanners handed down the secret of its preparation from father to son, says the Dry Goods Chronicle. The skins that make it grow upon the gray deer—a species found only in the neighborhood of the great northern lakes. They are worth 20 cents a pound when just stripped off. When they come back to us as piano leather the price has risen from $15 to $18 a pound.

The First Ice in India. When one of the first importations of ice from America arrived in India it was most amusing to see the anxiety with which it was sought after. The deposits were only open for a short time before sunrise, when crowds of coolies were in attendance to carry off the portions required by their employers: these portions were immediately enveloped in thick blankets and inclosed in baskets, which were carried off with all speed; but a very considerable quantity invariably dissolved before they could reach their respective des-tinations, says the New York Ledger. Two or three natives crowding around a basket, which had just arrived, were eager to touch the novelty; but, im-

Professor Dujardin-Beaumetz, Paris, France, in a recent lecture at the Cochin Hospital, Paris, France, on the treatment of nervous diseases said:
I need not here speak of the advantanges and danger of morphine. I have many times discussed this subject, showing that if morphine is an admirable analgesic medicament, it is that the patient becomes accustomed to and dependent on the morphine injections, and ends in a morphiomaniac. It may be affirmed that morphiomania has become one of the vices of the day, we may almost lay it down is a rule that any patient who for thirty consecutive days takes morphine injections will ever after be a victim to the habit, even when the symptoms of the pri-mary malady shall have completely disappeared; and it will thenceforth be a matter of no little difficulty to cure the morphine habit, now become a disease more rebellious than the affection for which these injections were first ordered. The number of morphiomaniaes increases every day, and this deplorable vice exists in all classes of society. Unfortunately, our own profession is not exempt from this abuse, and I know quite a number of medical confreres who have been or are still victims of morphine.

Tannin in the Treatment of Burns. A correspondent of the Pharmaceutische Zeitung, speaking from his own experience, says that tannin cannot be too highly recommended as an applica-tion to burns, especially when very ex-tensive, the skin being entirely remov-ed. Not Suited With Prohibition. DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 27.-In his inaugural address to day the newly elected Democratic governor, Bois, said that the prohibitory laws had been de spised, disregarded and ignored in most of the large cities of the state. The use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage had not been diminished. Millions and millions of the capital of the citizens had been invested in the business and then it had been coldly wiped out without an effort to compensate those who were ruined thereby. Wherever the law had been enforced owners had been impoverished. In his judgment the chief object of the enforcement of the law lay in the fact that it was a cruel violation of one of the most valuable of human rights. The message recommends the framing of a license law for those localities which desire

A wedding that attracted consider able attention in the social circles of Buchanan, took place March 4, high noon, when Rose E. Rough became the bride of Clyde M. Valentine. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A Frye before about thirty guests, near relatives of bride and groom. A trail of smilax and rose buds crossed the bodice from right to eft. The bridesmaids were attired in

OBITUARY.

As was announced in the RECORD of last week that we would furnish an obituary relating to Mrs. Albert Clark, of Galien, Mich., we offer the follow-

Mrs. Clark was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John, Howell, and was born in Huntsburg, Geauga county, Ohio, February 27, 1819, and on the 10th of February 1845, was married to Mr. Albert Clark, who now mourns her loss. Mrs. Clark exemplified her early piety by uniting with the Christiau church when but nine years of age. In the fall of 1857 she, with her husband moved to Lake county, Ohio, then in 1863 to her home in Galien where she lived until her decease, which occurred on the 24th of February, 1890. The time of her departure then being at handshe passed quietly away, and even when smitten with the vivid shaft of death, with a cheerful smile seemed re si ned to her fate. She was the mother of four children, two of whom survive her, and with her numerous friends mourn her departure, Mrs. Clark was a lady who had the universal respect of all, who knew her, as was attested by the large concourse of people attending her funeral obsequies. As a kind mother and benefactor she had but few equals. Her exemplary disposition and christian fortitude won for her a name and place in the hearts of those associated with her influence, which we are disposed to believe will bevelop in a beautiful wreath of immortal bliss in that beautiful home of the soul where sorrow and pain never shall invade. And while our hearts are bleeding over the spoils that death has won, and her form we no longer behold, thus leaving an aching void, yet her benign influence and noble deeds still live, beckoning us on in our struggles here, and perchance will blossom in other lives, leading them up to that haven of rest that remains for the people of God. The funeral discourse was delivered by Elder Faunce, of the Christian church of New Carlisle, Ind., and her body laid to rest in the Galien cemetery on the 26th of

Sunday School Convention.

Held at Watervliet Tuesday and Wedner day, February 25 and 26. The convention opened promptly at 2 o'clock p. m. Tuesday, with devotional exercises led by C. H. Johnson, who, by his earnest and pleasant manner, gave the meeting a lively start. Pres. Warren then took the chair, and briefly addressed the meeting in a few well chosen words, and asked the question: What do I expect to gain from this convention?" Which drew from the audience a variety of responces. Rev. M. M. Martin suggested that all should contribute something to our knowledge to the common treasurer, and then each would gain something. Geo. Parsons then cordially welcomed the delegates, to which President Warren responded in his usual hearty manner. Reports from townships being next in gobble it for about $20 an acre. order, about thirty minutes was used in hearing from nearly every township in the county. Lack of space will not permit us to particularize, though the reports were uniformly good, and showed the Sunday schools of the county to be in good condition, and the Sunday school workers better organized than heretofore.

Mrs. C. W. Halland, of St. Joseph. had been assigned the topic "Can more children be brought into our Sunday school?" but was unable to be present But she had thoughtfully forwarded her essay, and Mrs. Alva Sherwood, of Three Oaks, read it, The essay abounded in valuable suggestions and gave the convention much food for thought. Rev. M. M. Martin, of Three Oaks, then It consisted almost wholly of quotasions from the brightest and most able bibical students of the world and was truly a rare and rich collection of gems. This closed the first days' session, and the people of Watervliet es-corted to their homes about seventyfive guests, feeling that it was a pleasure to entertain such people.

Wednesday's session opened at nine o'clock with a song and praise service, led by James Baley, of Benton Harbor. which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. In fact much of the success of the convention was due to Mr. Baley's hearty and inimitable method of leading the song service from the opening to the closing session.

The Executive committee presented the convention their views on the county work, which showed they had given the matter much thought and consideration. Secretary Gillette then submitted his annual report, which we would be pleased to give in detail, if space permitted. The summaries are as follows:

Missionary collections.....$1,448.87 For state and county work.... 77.88 For support of Sunday school. 2,422.21

Number schools reported..... 100 Officers and teachers reported 1140 Scholars and teachers reported... 7318 Members reported...... $458 Average attendance..... 5712 Received into church from S. S. 255

Mr. Gillette also read a paper on 'Value and use of statistics" in which he showed conclusively that Sunday school statistics were absolutely necessary in order to fully understand the present needs of Sunday school work in our county. The value of such statistics can not be measured, but the orces and undeveloped fields are made known and an incentive for increased effort is the result. On motion of C. H. Johnson, the convention pledged Berrien county to give

$100 to aid the state work. During the discussion of the county work, excellent suggestions were made by N. Nims, M. Jennings, Thos. Evans, R. B. Gregg and others. Miss Lena Eldred, of Benton Harbor, introduced the topic, What can a teacher do for the scholar outside of the class work", and said that all have responsibilities in this line, and that much good can be done by the teacher who should devote as much time as possible to this part of the work. The discussion following brought out the fact that the teachers by meeting the scholars in a cheerful manner, by inviting them to her home, and by being courteous and attractive can do a wonderful work outside the class. Mrs. Barrett, of Niles, introduced the "primary work" in which she urged its great impor-tance. Mrs. W. W. Ward, of Eau Claire, and Mrs. W. L. Garratt, of Watervliet, and others, outlined some successful primary methods. As the closing hour approached the President announced the topic, "Parting words". Many took this opportunity to express their high appreciation of the convention, the exceedingly interesting programme rendered, the valuable and efficient work of the officers, and of pledging renewed feally to the work. It was from the opening, Tuesday p. m., until the closing, Wednesday p. m., a lively, interesting and profitable meeting, and many who ought to know declared it was the most successful Bunday School Convention ever held in Berrien county.

The officers were all re-elected, and are as follows: Pres., E. K. Warren, Three Oaks: Vice Pres., W. W. Cooper St. Joseph; Treas., James Baley. Benton Harbor; Sec. Joel H. Gillett. Niles: Executive Committee, E. K. Warren, W. W. Cooper, Joel H. Gillett, James Baley, W P. Harmon, Geo. W. Sickafoose, Geo. Parsons.-Watervliet Record.

AN EFFECTIVE BLOW.

Fom Kelly, the Pugilist, Discovers a Blov That Is Worse Than the Jowl. How can a man best defend himself when unarmed he is stopped on the street and told to hold up his hands? Tom Kelly, the well known veteran pugilist, was talking about this very thing last night. He said: "In most cases the footpad has the drop on a

"He is well armed, and hits you before you know it. Or, you are in danger of being killed if you resist, at the point of a pistol. Thugs come armed for their work, and they know it; so does the fellow who is held up. "Once in a while you may have a chance to save yourself by slugging the would be robber and knocking him out. Not with any weapon save your fist. "Let me illustrate it to you. I won't hurt you." The veteran hitter turned to the reporter—the largest and best developed man on the paper, and Kelly's equal physically. Raising his arm the expugilist brought his fist slowly around, catching the reporter on the very tip of the jaw, plumb, below the end of the mouth on the left side.

The blow was gently delivered. If it struck the stomach, or any other vital or sensitive part of the body, it would scarcely be noticed. But it didn't. It seemed as if a sledge hammer had landed on the whole side of the face. The pain was almost unbearable. It was sharp, severe and stunning. The shock seemed to jar the whole head and teeth.

Mr. Kelly offered to repeat the operation by way of a more forcible illustration, but the reporter declined. "Now, try it on me. Your fist isn't so hard as mine, so put a little more ginger in your blow." The veteran winced and made a wry face, though the blow was simply a tap.

"That spot is the most sensitive in the body," said the once famous hitter. time, and know it. Astonishingly few people seems to know that. It's the popular impression that a blow beneath the ear is the most effective, but such is not a fact. This ear, or jugular blow, simply stings. Try both of these blows on yourself, and see."
"Why is this blow in the chin so effective?" "I can't tell exactly. Physicians differ as to the cause. I think that there is a very sensitive nerve that will paralyze, or at least stun the brain. Most of the fighters you hear of being knocked out receive the unlucky chin blow

"All the advice I have to offer to those cornered by a footpad is to swing your arm quickly around, let you strength and force go with it, and be sure you strike that part of the jaw below and at either end of the mouth. "The blow is not serious, but it stuns. Always be careful to guard vourself well with the other hand. The full force of such a blow from a light man will floor the heaviest of footpads. But never, never, never, lose your head."-St. Louis Chronicle. .

Before the days of la grippe, when the ladies of Pompeii were the belles of the day, posed as the professional beauties, and for all we know had their photographs taken and got a percentage on them, well bred people did not cry in handkerchiefs. They dropped their tears slowly and gracefully into vials of cut glass, that had gold stoppers, set about with precious There can be no doubt that the woman with thoughts upon a graceful pose practiced with her tear bottle before her mirror, and can there be anything more touching than, when one's best young man was off to the wars, sending him by registered letter a little note saying: "You have all my heart and these are the tears I have wept for you since your absence!" The tear bottle could be inclosed as practical proof, and the maiden fair would write on the outside of the envelope in large letters: 'Glass—please do not stamp too Those, indeed, were the days of romance. Undoubtedly, some very fetching young women, who appreci ated the impression made by a bottle of tears, but didn't like getting a red nose, had their slaves do the weeping for them, and physically cultured themselves by administering to the slaves a good sound whipping, so that they might have something to weep for.—Toronto Globe. The Proper Weight of Man. Professor Huxley asserts that the proper weight of a man is 154 pounds made up as follows: Muscles and their appurtenances, 68 pounds; skeleton, 24 pounds; skin, 101 pounds; fat, 28 pounds; brain, 3 pounds; abdominal viscera, 11 pounds; blood, which would drain from the body, 7 pounds. The heart of such a man should beat 75 times a minute, and he should breathe 15 times a minute. In 24 hours he should vitiate 1,750 cubic feet of pure air to the extent of 1 per cent. A nan, therefore, of the weight mentioned should have 800 cubic feet of ventilated space. He should throw off through the skin 18 ounces of water, 300 grains of solid matter and 400 grains of carbonic acid every 24 hours, and his total loss during that period should be 6 pounds of water and about 2 pounds of other matter.— St. Louis Republic.

A Funeral in Napies. While traversing one of the narrow streets I was fortunate enough to see a funeral, writes a Naples correspondent. Of course, I was sorry for the deceased, but I was glad, since there was a corpse, that I was there to see the funeral procession, as it is one of the most curious of sights. The corpse ced in a h tacle on a raised platform, which is carried high over the heads of the eight bearers. Then come about a dozen of the Brothers of the Miserecordia in their grotesque costumes of a white flowing sheet, with heads en-tirely concealed by the same, save the large holes cut for eyes and mouthlooking like ghosts of the past. After them came about twenty old chaps dressed in black, with huge black hats of ancient make. After these came the relatives and friends, the Brothers of the Miserecordia and the solemn old

On one of the ocean steamers once a friend of mine was a passenger. There was a lady aboard with her daughter. She was from Wisconsin. She said so so often that finally they took her word for it and believed it. She knew pretty nearly everything outside of Wisconsin, too. Her daughter had to indorse so many extraordinary scraps of information that she could only say, "Yes, ma," when her mother called upon her to confirm her statements. The old lady had a lovely time, for she poked her nose into everybody's business; from the passenger who was sick to the captain who was well and running the ship as well as he could with her assistance. One day the purser, the captain and several others were sitting around smoking, when the Wisconsin encyclopedia came on deck. As she came up the purser said. in an ordinary conversational tone, with a wink: "I see Mr. -, of Wisconsin, has been appointed minister to China."

"Yes, indeed he has," broke in the lady; "yes, indeed he has, and I am glad of it. Tve known him many years, and many and many a sermon I have listened to from him in his own church. He is a splendid preacher."-San Francisco Chronicle.

Strawberry Plants in Winter.

In setting out strawberries it is well to select ground which is not liable to be raked with sharp winter winds, and where at least a partial covering of snow will not be blown off and the land left bare. The shelter of screens of evergreens within a few rods will be In nearly all localities, sheltered or otherwise, winter mulching is important. Even a thin covering of evergreen branches will afford protection enough for the strawberry plants to come out with a fresh and lively green when uncovered in the spring, contrasting with the dull and brown color of the strawberry leaves that have been fully exposed to the sun, wind and freezing. If evergreens cannot be had, chopped cornstalks put on thin enough to partly admit air and light will cause the partial retention of snow and shelter from hard winds. A little covering of thin straw does well if free from the seeds of weeds. This covering is to be applied after the ground is frozen, and not removed in pring till danger has past of hard reezing.—Albany Cultivator.

Ventilating Living Rooms The question of ventilation is even more difficult than that of heating. If one uses a stove the oxygen in the room. must supply the fire as well as the lungs of the inmates, and unless it is constantly re-enforced from the outside it will become exhausted, and the air of the room will be unfit to breathe, both from the exhaustion of the oxy gen and from the exhalations from the bodies of those who live in it. A good way to ventilate is to close the doors between the living room and the one adjoining; then in the latter open all the windows until the air is entirely renewed; then close the windows and open the connecting doors. This has been used with success in the case of invalids. Another way is to raise one of the sashes a few inches, and have a strip of wood fitted snugly in below the sash. The air will then enter upward between the sashes, and will cause no draught. A hinged pane in one of the windows is an excellent

THERE is but one thing that will be likely to give the creditors of the defunct Berrien Springs bank more than fifty cents on the dollar, and that is, that the $20,000 invested in the St. Joseph Valley railroad improvements may be realized upon, and the likelihood of this happening is not most encouraging. Without this the percentage is likely to fall below fifty. Rather tough on the creditors, but it adds to the lesson regarding banks and railroads working well together.

A RATHER extraordinary solar halo was seen from this vicinity, Sunday afternoon. In the different minds of various citizens it has all kinds of meaning. One class look upon it as one of the much looked for second coming: others see in it a sign of cold weather, and others of warm. The Fulton addition "coons" were so badly scared they are said to have turned white. "Tige" Davis was a rich stone color next morning.

THE St. Joseph Valley railroad has gone into dry dock once more. It is well-known to many that when they get into close quarters, they will be subject to cold sweats. This is the case with the railroad. The engine sweats so occasionally that steam cannot be raised, and now these sweats have become chronic, and the engine will have to go to the doctor's before it can be used again. Meantime, if you have any business at Berrien Springs,

As an educator, there is no investment made in the township that will show greater proportionate returns. There is but one trouble with it, and that is the annual appropriation given the library is barely enough to gles, General Passenger and Ticket pay for wear and tear, without increasing the number of volumes.

your last week's issue I saw a short item, to which my attention was drawn from its peculiar wording, which read as follows: "There is a law in this state against quack doctors, but unfortunately we have no protection against the faith cure nonsense." I would say fortunately we have, even in Buchanan, a few honest-hearted men and women who are not ashamed to acknowledge the blessed promise of God, as recorded by the apostle James in his 5th chapter and 15th verse, "And the prayer of faith shall save the sick and the ly valueless. The artesian well has Lord shall raise them up." And the 16th reads, "Confess your faults one to another and pray one for another that ye may be healed, the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Let us think of these things

J. GRAHAM, on Friday last, was nominated by the president as postmaster at Buchapan to succeed J. G. Mansfield. It was deemed highly important among the old Angle Saxons that a was preferred to all others for the arrival of the little stranger. A child born when the moon is new Will surely live past eighty-two, they would chant to themselves, and be happy with the thought. The secbe happy with the thought. The second day was not so lucky as the first. The child born on that day would grow fast, but not live long. If born on the fourth day of the moon, it would be a great politician; if on the tenth, a great traveler; if on the twenty-first, the chances were that it would be a third as his desired. be a thief or a highwayman. But of all the days of the week or month the most lucky by far was Sunday, and should such day happen to be a new moon day, the child's prosperity was destined to be unbounded. Friday was a most unlucky birthday, not only because it was the day of the cruci fixion of Christ, but because, according to old time calculations, it was believed by the Anglo-Saxons to have been the day upon which Adam ate the forbidden fruit. In this connection it may be interesting to mention that the Khurds and the Armenians believe that Adam was expelled from Paradise on Friday, and that the beginning of the flood was the same day.

What queer creatures these Chinese are! They look and act as if they might be the inhabitants of some other planet, so totally different are they from all the other mundane races. Nevertheless, they have logical minds. Guy Min, a Chinaman, in a speech at San Francisco, expressed ome surprise at what he considered the inconsistency of "sending millions of dollars to China to prepare her peo-ple for the kingdom of heaven, and refusing them a home in the United States."

Yes, it does look a little queer, doesn't it? There is a great deal of difference between the Chinese stories and those that appear in our novels and magazines. There is very little love in the average Chinese novel. The hero is a fellow who made his money in America by washing clothes, while the heroine is a girl who wants revenge because the villain killed her cat.

84 85 9 06 1 39 1 00 46 30 19 18 4 99 77 1 00 25 94 3 49 91 14 1 00 5 54 88 23 04 1 00 2 15 1 75 46 07 1 00 2 28

Much has been written about the barbarity of the Chinese in bandaging the feet of the female babies. It seems now that there is reason in this apparently senseless cruelty. It is done to prevent them from spending itslf their time on shopping tours when they grow older. And yet the Chinese are called uncivilized.

The Chinese have queer ways of punishing frauds. For robbing a peddler the culprit is put in a mortar and fired against a stone wall. Whether this cured him of his propensities we have not yet learned; we should not wonder, however, if it had.—Texas Siftings.

No Kissing in Japan. Young Japanese girls are as nature made them, and very sweet they are, too, in their quaint dresses showing the plump chest and rounded arms. Pages could be written about their whomas What down deintrelights. charms. What dear, dainty, little dolls they are! Such white teeth, rosy lips and coy smiles! Who shall describe them? and what next? A kiss, perhaps? Not over here. Oh, never! They never do. They don't know how, actually don't know how, and even peasant girls are closely guarded.

Fancy a young man in cotton kimono and wooden clogs stealing a chance to walk with his best girl under the blooming abover. der the blooming cherry trees, explaining the constellations and quoting sentimental poetry, telling her that he "hung upon her eyelids," that "her voice was like a temple gong;" in fact, that he loved but her alone, and then making her several formal bows at the door of her father's straw thatched hut as they parted in the moonlight. Can any American lover stretch his imagination enough to believe in a sweetheart not kissing those pretty lips, paint and all, by a sort of "natural selection?"

'Tis a melancholy fact, but a Japanese has no such impulse. No lover courts his mistress with "sweetest persuasive kisses." No mother kisses her baby as she cuddles it against her bosom.—Cor. Home Queen.

The Reality of Life.

To the reflecting mind there is nothing more extraordinary than to observe with what obtuse, dull and commonplace impressions most men pass through this wonderful life. Life, which, to such a mind, means everything momentous, mysterious, pro-phetic, monitory, to the many is but a round of cares, of familiar pursuits and formal actions. They look upon this world as a vast domicile, or an extensive pleasure ground; the objects are familiar; the implements are worn; the very skies are old; the earth is a pathway for those on earthly errands; the world is a working field, a warehouse, a market place-and this

But life indeed—the intellectual life, struggling with its earthly load, with an eternity unimaginable behind it, with an eternity to be experienced be-fore it, with all its strange and mystic remembrances, now exploring its past years, as if they were periods before the flood, and then gathering them within a space as brief and unsubstan-tial as if they were the dream of a day—with all its dark and its bright visions of mortal fear and hope-life, such a life, is full of mysteries. -Orville Dewey.

The Telephone in War.

It is an interesting fact, which might become important in case of war, that the telephone furnishes a simple and ready means of intercepting secret telegraph dispatches without the knowledge of the operators. All that is necessary is to run a wire parallel with the telegraph line for a short distance, when the currents induced in this wire as the message is sent reproduce the signal in the telephone. The plan is attended by one difficulty, which is that the signals would be a sent of the signals. would become a confused medley of sounds if dispatches were submitted simultaneously from both ends of the line. This matter has attracted the attention of the Austrian government,-New York-Telegram.

Beware of Cintments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and competely deranger the whole system, when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly de-rive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarri child should be born on a lucky day, upon which his whole after life was supposed to depend, for, in their opinion, each iday had its peculiar influence upon the destiny of the youngstee.

Chairman Executive Committee of the Grant Monument Association. LETTER FROM EX-GOVERNOR CORNELL.

LETTER FROM MRS. GRANT. LETTER FROM MRS. GRANT.

NEW YORK, NOV. 23, 1839.

The arrangements made between the Weekly Mail and Express and the Grant Monnment Association meets my hearty approval. The offer of the Weekly Mail and Express is patriotic, and should it be responded to promptly by the citizens of America the monument will speedily be built at the very site suggested by my hushand, and selected by me as the last resting place of bis precious remains, the spot where I lopp my remains will lie beside his, and where our children unite with me saying, "Here only shall be his lomb."

Julia Denty Grant.

GRANT MONUMENT ASSOCIATION,
New York, Dec. 18, 1889.

Dear Str.—It gives me profound, satisfaction to acknowledge receipt of your esteemed favor of this date inclosing check from the Weekly Mail and Express for ten thousand delegates, pasable to the order of the Grant Monument Assocition, as a contribution toward the erection of the Grant memorial at the Riverside Park, in the city of New York.

Such a contribution coming at this time, is doubly valuable. It will stimulate the renewed efforts recently entered upon to complete the fund necessary to construct what we confidently believe will be the grandest personal memorial in Christendom. Faithfully and cordially yours, Alonzo B. Cornell, Chairman Executive Committee.

To Col. Elliott F. Shepard.
