BY LUCY BLAKE. "Felix, they say that good for naught young Englishman, Lieutenant Hazledean, is lurking about Alderberg again; is this gossip true?" asked Baron Zell. myself saw him reading the papers at the Taube this very morning."
"Confound the fellow! You know, Felix—oh! these raw fogs give me a throat like a raven's. I say, Felix, you are no fool, and you must have observ-lucky one for you, as well as for the "My lord baron is the soul of goodness on this as on all other occasions," replied the diplomatic Felix, sharpening his ears for the confidence he knew would follow.

Felix had grown gray about the muzzle in the service of Baron Zell. He alone knew of the mixture which kept his master's mustache black and glossy; his hand adjusted the stays and shoulder padding, which no one else suspected, and which preserved the figure that was the envy of the baron's contemporaries. It was therefore but natural that a valet who so fully understand the absciscal makes up of his derstood the physical make up of his master should have also an insight upon his mental machinery. "Do you think, Felix, that the young man has yet appeared in our immediate neighborhood?"

"Not nearer than the Taube; my "My cousin Adelaide is so careless I fear that she may allow my niece to renew her acquaintance with Lieutenant Hazledean. My clear-headed sister, the Fraulein Zell, will prevent any rendezvous, and, at the Schloss, I hope my vigilance and yours may frustrate any attempt the young man may make to enter the grounds."

"I'll keep a sharp lookout, my lord."

"I'm sure you will."

Then the baron, looking as fierce as the stable-boy's bulldog, devoted his attention to his chocolate and rolls. Hilda Zell, nineteen years old had two ideas fixed in her pretty head; one, that she would not marry Count Lurie; and the other, that unless she could be Jack Hazledean's wife she would mumble her life away over a string of beads in some convent.

She had met Jack while on a visit to her Aunt Adelaide, and had found him a handsome, hearty, honest fellow whom any girl might be proud to win Furthermore, he came of a good Devonshire family, able to farnish him comfortably with the most substantial good the world can give-money. Between aunt Adelaide, at Falkenstein, and the two old people at Alderberg, there was a long and bitter feud. Adelaide's conduct, views and opinions were all wrong, and it was with great reluctance that Hilda was allowed to make the short visit to Alderberg. And in that brief visit much had occurred to endanger the peace of mind of Baron Zell and his sister, so set upon their niece marrying Count Lurie. The count also took fright at the re-ports he heard, and being in no mind to lose his prize, he circulated a few stories at Adlerberg very detrimental to the innocent Jack. Count Lurie's elderly relatives proved themselves only too willing to believe the Englishman a villain of the very blackest dye.

"Fancy Hilda going away to murky England with this feather brained rogue!" ejaculated the Fraulein Zell. "And Lurie in a rage, and his assistance in the management of the estate lost to us forever. Perish the thought!" replied the desiccated spinster's brother. Driving and walking Hilda was watched by her aunt as a cat watches a mouse; and when that old lady was off duty the office of spy was relegated to Kathrina, a jealous ally of Fraulein Zell's and an enemy of Hilda's since, the days when the young lady stole almonds and figs from the store

Except for the precious dower of her beauty, vivacity and grace, Hilda had not a farthing in the world. Her aunt and uncle believed that in providing for the girl out of their abundance they had earned the right to dispose of her hand in marriage as they chose, re gardless of her wishes in the matter. No one, not even a poor relation liv ing in hopes of a legacy, could call Lurie attractive either in appearance or manner. He was nearly old enough to be Hilda's father, and had a peevish fretful disposition which he took not the slightest pains to control. But to offset these drawbacks, he was very rich, and unquestionably a brilliant match for a proportionless girl.

Great pressure was brought to bear upon Hilda to make her see the advantage of this match, rendering her life at times almost unendurable. one sympathized with her in her dislike of Lurie except Jack and her maid and foster-sister, good Clarchen, The poor victim seemed alarmingly near the sacrificial alter. Leading from the lawn at Schloss Adlerberg to the lake was a long walk called the Avenue of Heroes. Some defunct Baron Zell had amused himself by placing at each side of this avenue bronze statues of warriors of Napoleon's generation and the preceding.one. Some of these statues were of were statueless.

"Very odd," said Baron Zell to his sister, "this passion for listening to nightingales which Hilda has lately developed; on such dull, moonless evenings, too. She was never in the habit of troubling her head about nightingales." "It has rather a suspicious look, Egmont. Are you sure the nightingales are not made a pretext for clandestine meetings with that unprincipled young The baron shut one eye and gazed fixedly at the old lady with the other. niece's conduct of late?"

"Yes, I have noticed a certain defiance of manner in Hilda of late which causes me a great deal of uneasiness." "I really must compliment you on your astuteness, Isabel. I too am uneasy, and consequently I have placed Felix on guard to watch the girl and "What does he report?"

"Nothing at all amiss. The two girls walk quietly up and down the Avenue of Heroes, Hilda often leaning sentimentally against one of the statues or they sit on the bench and talk. No one approaches, and all seems open and above board. Felix feels much illused at having to dog their footsteps for an hour or two every evening; still, I don't like to let him off till Lurie returns, or that fellow goes."

"And I shouldn't."
"I won't unless you can persuade Hilda to stay in at night." "If I forbade her going out in the evening—a thing I never yet have done—she might suspect that young Hazledean is here and I fear their "True, true; but I wish she would spend her evenings indoors." "That night, as usual, Hilda and her maid came out for their stroll down to the lake.

"Not a whisper from any bird about oung Englishman, Lieutenant Hazle-ean, is lurking about Alderberg again; this gossip true?" asked Baron Zell. "The baron has heard what is a fact. myself saw him reading the papers at myself saw him reading the papers at sity little Clarchen have blushed so for Tanke this ways magning?" furiously when I purposely asked Felix in her hearing what strangers were at the Taube? And Hilda singing that silly Scotch ditty, 'Jock o' Hazledean, when she fancies no one is listening. I have a strong presentiment that affairs are not going right."

With such disturbing reflections the baron went out on this particular evening to join Filix in his prowl after the girls. He made no secret of his presents. Hilds but walked beside presence to Hilda, but walked beside her for a turn or two on the avenue, talking with his accustomed gallantry. He presently tell behind, ostensibly to smoke a cigar, but he took care always to keep his prey in sight. Hilda and her maid sauntered up and down the path once or twice, and then, when the baron and Felix were well in the background, a very strange thing occurred. One of the brazen statues, with extended arm and voluminous cloak, opened his lips and whisphered,-"The old rascal is out himself to-night. May be catch another for his pains but a twinge of rheumatism!" Then, in a semi-tone higher: "Here I am, my darling!" "Oh! dear Jack!"

Clarchen, to whom the English tonage was as Sanscrit, sat at the base of the statue while her mistress leaned in a pensive attitude against its pedestal.

Then the statue dropped its arm, exclaiming,— By Jove! that position is enough to finish a fellow!" Here some tiny soft fingers stole up to take the hand reached down. Some soft endearments followed, too sacred or too silly, according to the sentimental or jaundiced views of the auditor, for repetition in prosaic black and "Are they still persecuting you about that detestable man, dearest?" asked the statue after a while. "Yes, Jack; it grows worse and worse all the time.' "We must put a stop to it. When is the fellow to return?

"He is coming next week, and then there will be dreadful scenes. My courage fails me at the bare thought!" "Cheer up, my dove, while I think of a way to circumvent the dev-villain,' "I have no one to help me but you, and it sometimes seems as if I must give in at last and let them dispose of me as they like."

"Hush, Jack! Here they come Stretch out your arm!" With military promptness the bronze hero stood up and stretched out his The baron passed by, making some

"Never while I live! My poor little ordinary remark to his niece, who now sat beside Clarchen on the bench. Was she not cold?-the nights were chilly." "Extraordinary fancy, moping out here in the dark; but it seems innocent enough," muttered the baron, If the old gentleman's wits had been sharpened to that keenness upon which he piqued himself, he would have remembered that in daytime the pedestal behind the bench now occupied by the two girls bore no statue. As the old man passed out of earshot, Felix loitering after him, Jack continued,-

"Why cannot you trust yourself to me, my darling? You love me, do you "Oh, Jack, how can you ask such a question?" And the little hand stole up again under the folds of the cloak. "If I were to ask your uncle for you, would he not have me turned out of his house?"

"I fear he would."

"I can't win you by a strightforward course; there is therefore nothing for us but flight or separation forever." "Which shall it be, Jack?" laying her forehead against the statue's knee. "Flight, if you love me." "You know I do." "Very well; now listen to my plan:

We shall take Clarchen and start for my aunt's villa near Paris. She is the kindest soul in the world, and would have unbounded sympathy for us. We can be married at her house, and then no living soul could mar our happiness."
"But Jack dear, isn't there always something disgraceful in a runaway marriage?"

"How can there be in this? We have no other alternative. If I leave here, you will be compelled to marry Lurie." Hilda trembled, and drew nearer to as much as she could reach of her idol.
"I can't dodge about like this much longer without being found out. A dog might take exception to my being on this old perch, and raise a row that would upset everything. Hilda, be a brave little soul, and promise to come with me to-morrow-to-night, even. We have no time to lose; your hesitation may wreck both our lives. Give me your word now, sweet, that you will trust yourself to me."

"Not to-night, Jack; give me till to morrow to make up my mind. At this hour to morrow I will tell you my de-"Thank you for that, dearest, and

"No, Jack, the risk is too great. Geod-night, and be cautious, I beg of you. Come, Clarchen," said Hilda, seizing a hand of her much-bored little menial and hastening toward the castle.

The next evening was decidedly chilly, and the young officer equipped himself with a warmer cloak before starting to pose as a statue in the Alderberg grounds. Alas! for the forethought of a former landlady, who had plentifully sprinkled this cloak with red pepper, not for the comfort of the "Noticed any singularity in our wearer, but to keep away moths. At dark Jack let himself in at the remote little garden gate, of which Clarchen had managed to give him the key. He made his way among the trees silently as a specter, and selected at random an empty pedestal, upon which he mounted. It was part of the plot arranged with Hilda, that to divert suspicion he should vary the place of rendezvous. Scarcely had Jack struck a properly martial attitude when Felix appeared upon the scene, the first time he had come out in advance of Hilda. Unconscious of Jack's presence, he passed once down the avenue; as he retraced his steps, Jack hastily unfastened one button of his cloak, which was rather oppresive, and in doing so sent such a whist of red pepper into his face that a sharp sneeze was inevitable result. Felix stopped short in his walk; there were certainly uncanny forces at work when a bronze statue took to. sneezing. He was about to accost the warrior threatened with influenza, when another idea occurred to him. Felix was a sharp fellow, and that sneeze enlightened him upon many points which had seemed dark and mysterious during the past week. Still, he would do nothing precipitately.

Fraulein Hilda would appear presently and make assurance doubly surefurthermore, a statue that could sneeze could also strike when attacked. No, discretion was the better part of valor; Felix would make sure of his big game, and then trap it in a way that would bring glory to himself and humiliation to the wrong-headed young people who had caused him such weary hours of watching. So the valet continued his pipe and his walk with an innocent, insuspecting air that was of immense relief to Jack, though he felt that affairs were not as smoothe as they The proceedings of the previous night repeated themselves. Hilda and Clarchen came sauntering slowly down the avenue, and at the usual signal halted beside one of the statues. "So I have found you out at last, my young lady!" said Felix, at a discreet distance, to himself. "Have all the tilling and cooing you like to-night, but to-morrow night I shall interrupt you with a little army from the kitchen and stables, and your gallant lover will come to grief, I very much fear. You shall be allowed to escape all blame, to be sure, my dear young lady, but only for Count Lurie's sake."

"Hilda, my darling, is it yes or noheaven or worse than perdition?" began Jack,

"I will go with you, Jack—to the world's end," said Hilda, simply. "Bless you for those words, my love! and confound the ill luck that obliges "Let us make much of the precious a fellow to stand up here like a stick time that our jailers are out of hear- when the woman he adores says she will marry him!" "Don't attempt to get down, Jack dear. We are watched."

"I know we are. A while ago I was idiot enough to sneeze. There seems to be some infernally irritating stuff in my cloak. I can't say whether that rascal Felix heard me or not-he is a sly dog. At any rate, there is great risk in delay, and we must be of tomorrow night. You can be ready, can't you, dearest?

"Yes, Jack." "Have you told Clarchen?" "I have; she is willing to go, and vill arrange eyerything."

"Get her to send a trunk addressed to her mother with what you want in t; it can be put in the carriage I shall have waiting at the little gate to-morrow night. I don't see any obstacle to our getting off safely." "Let us hope not. Oh, dear, it is beginning to rain! I shall have to go back to the house. My staying here in the wet would look so odd," said Hilda.

"Nor will I allow you to run the risk of taking cold. Good-night sweetheart! Courage for our venture of to-morrow "Felix, bring us an umbrella, please; it is raining quite hard." Then the pedestal was suddenly denuded of its statue, there was a most tender leave-taking, and before Felix returned the garden-gate had closed upon Jack Hazledean. Kathrina had received from her mistress a new waterproof cloak which was the delight of her heart, until the first shower of rain descended on it. Then, to Kathrina's dismay, she discovered that every raindrop had left a like an old one. "Let it get a good soaking all over, and there will be no more spots," said the cook "Would you have me dip it in the lake and ruin its shape, or shall I stand out in the next downpour till I'm wet through, with rheumatics in every dingy spot, making the new cloak look bone?" snarled Kathrina. "Put it on one of those brouze generals' backs when we have the next rain. He would probably be thankful for the warmth, and the cloak would get nice and wet," said the housemaid. To the girl's surprise Kathrina listened attentively, without giving vent to the shout of derision which was expected. In truth, the owner of the damaged cloak was saying to herself that the girl's idea was not a bad one; but for fear of being ridiculed she kept her own counsel and the subject was The evening that was to decide the fate of Hilda and Jack was dark and threatening, with intermittent rain, giving warning of a downpour before morning.

At dark Felix stole out softly as a cat and betook himself to the Ayenue of Heroes, where he scanned each statue in the faint light the lamps at either end of the walk afforded. Presently, on one of the figures, the folds of a cloak, which should hang so rigid, stirred slightly in the wind. Felix waited for another gust, and watched the result narrowly. Yes, the cloak certainly moved, and he need not be longer in doubt as to the spot where

In Brazil senators hold office for life, and take a so-called active part in the legislation of the country so long as they can be carried to the senate chamber. A view of the Brazilian senate reminds one of a hospital for the infirm and aged, with here and there a man with some bodily vigor thrown in. As a rule, at least, a third of the senators are so old that they fall asleep after sitting in the senate chamber for half an hour, and even on important occasions of debates it is impossible to keep them awake long enough to hear the argument of the younger men, they never attempt anything like an address themselves. Will this congress do anything to redeem this country from the influx of criminals that are coming to our shores from the countries of Europe every day? The rapid increase of crime and filling up of our prisons, poor houses and asylums can be traced directly to Castle Garden, and there should be means adopted to check it.

The latest American industries to attract the attention of English capitalists is the creamery plants. Last week a large share of that business in Wisconsin was reported sold to an English syndicate. It will be but a few years before the profits of all of our live industries will be taken to England, if these transfers are followed, and this country placed on a footing with Ireland as a payer of tribute to England's wealth.

The Democrats having obtained control of Ohio, have set about redistricting the state so as to make it solid for about three-quarters of the congressmen, and some of the district lines they have drawn in order to get the districts to suit them, are said to yery much resemble the worm of a rail fence. They are now contriving a plan for capturing a similar portion of the presidential electors, by a law providing that electors shall be elected by congressional districts. Great managers are the democrats, when they get the reins all in one hand.

THERE was an entertainment in Rough's opera house Monday eveing, poorly attended and a poor entertainment so it makes a fair "stand off" between the audience and the company. Show companies give Buchanan a reputation of being a poor show town, which is probably a fact, but when it is considered how few respectably good entertainments our people have an opportunity to see, it is a wonder that they patronize any of them. A real good opera house man ager keeps himself thoroughly posted on what companies are good and is able to inform the patrons of the house when they may expect to see a good show and when a snide. Where there are such managers good entertainments are patronized and poor ones are not.

An English syndicate has gobbled Congressman Wheeler's shipyards at Bay City for $3,500,000. Wheeler and his former associates receive half that amount in eash and half in stock, both parties retaining $1,000,000 each to be used in improving the already large plant. The papers were signed in London nearly two weeks ago, and have reached West Bay City properly executed, and the transfer has really been made. The company has nine vessels on the stocks now, and has just closed a contract for two fine steel steamers for the Flint & Pere Marquette railway company, which must be completed by Nov. 1. The works will be enlarged to more than double their present capacity, which will make the plant the largest on the lake. There will be no change in the present officers, but the board of directors will be enlarged to admit representatives of the new owners. The deal was engineered by an English lawyer, who received a cash consideration of $100,000 for his services.

Two men broke into the postoffice in Dayton on Wednesday night of last week, stealing a lot of stamps and some goods from DeArmond's and Kern's store. The losers of the property waited until the theives could have a good start of about fifteen hours and then notified Under Sheriff Palmer who started in pursuit. He found where they had stopped at the Terre Coupee Prairie school house to change old clothes for new and from there tracked them plainly to Warren Center when all trail was lost. Four fellows were Spotted fever, in a malignant form, arrested in South Bend for selling stamps on the street but too early for any connection with the Dayton transaction. > THE Allegan Gazette, in an account of the visit to that place of President Tolford, of the proposed G. R. & L. M. railway, says: "Mr. Tolford speaks confidently of the early construction of his line—indeed insists that it is a sure thing, though he does so with the air and words of a sensible man of business. 'Which is it,' was asked of him by a reporter, 'the Vandalia road working north or the G. R & I. working for a new route to Chicago, that is backing your project? 'You will never know from me, but either one makes good enough backing, don't it?" said Mr. Tolford with a good-natured smile." This is a project that our railroad committee should keep one or more eyes upon. It is just the line Buchanan wants to be connected with.

WHEN Mr. Dallin settled for right of way for the Indiana & Lake Michigan road he was charged an outrageous price in nearly every instance, the right of way through one twenty acre piece costing him more than the entire twenty acres is worth. Considerable of the same spirit appears to have been met in the procuring of right of way for the new road to this place. While those interested in the purchase of right of way expect to pay a decently high price for the privileges expected, no contracts have been entered into making it necessary to build the road. The only thing that is now, in the way of Buchanan having the new road, and have it speedily, is this one question of the cost of right of way. No such prices will be paid as were paid by Mr. Dallin in the case of the other road, and if it can not be avoided in any other way the entire enterprise will be abandoned. Some changes may be made in the line, for the better accommodation of those whose farms are cut by the road, so as nearly as possible to follow the dividing lines, and that between the marsh and upland, placing the road where it will be of the least possible inconvenience to the land owners. Whether Buchanan has a north and south railroad or not depends entirely upon this one consideration, and the manner of its settlement.

THE following dispatch from Paw Paw is suggestive to surrounding counties, of which Berrien is one, and may be taken as an objective lesson. If Van Buren county allows the drug stores to debauch their business, as is suggested in the last portion of the dispatch, the reputation of the county, gained for intelligence will hardly be sustained. One point in connection with Van Buren county, which should not be lost sight of is that that is the banner Republican county of the state. and also the leader in local prohibition, and that Clinton B. W. Van Antwerp, proprietor of the only saloon in Paw Paw, will close up in May, if the law becomes operative then, as will also George H. Rix, of Lawton. There will no combatting the law as far as they are concerned. Also at South Haven it is understood that the grog sellers will comply with the law. From all account none of the saloon keepers in the county are inclined to make any opposition. They cannot afford to take any chances on being beaten in the Supreme Court, and everything now indicates "no saloons" after May 1. The drug stores will then have to supply the public.

Another dispatch states that South Haven liquor sellers will contest.

Those Good Old Days.

In those good old times of long ago before the present "war tariff" made the "necessaries of life" so dear, how was it with the farmer? The free trade organs and attorneys are telling him that he has to pay a war tax or almost everything he has to buy; how was it back in 1845, for instance? A good way to find out is to turn back to the old account books and ledgers of those good old times. Mr. F. Hodgman of Climax, Mich., to satisfy his own curiosity, has been doing this and here is what he says to the Tribune: In looking over some of my father's old books, kept in the good old Democratic days when Polk was President I have been interested in noting the prices of various articles bought and sold by him and how much better (?) off the farmers and common laborers were in those good old times before the Republicans had put a "war tariff" on everything they had to buy than they are to-day. Perhaps your readers may be interested in the figures. They are from actual transactions in Cli max. The figures taken from Mr. Hodgman's books show that the farmers in those good old times received 75 cents a bushel for wheat; $1 a bushel for beans; 10 cents a pound for butter; S cents a pound for lard. Farm laborers received $1 per day in harvest time; carpenters the same; corn huskers 62½ cents; man and team drawing logs

$1.25 per day. Now, what was the purchasing power of the farmer's and farm laborer's dollar in those good old times i Mr. Hodgman's books tell the story For their "necessaries of life" they had to pay 45 cents per quire for paper; 38 cents per yard for gingham; 15 to 22 cents per vard for calico: 1 cents per yard for drilling; $1 per yard for satinet; 21 cents per yard for linen 8 cents per pound for nails; 12 to 18 cents per pound for sugar; 10 cents a paper for pins; $2.50 per barrel for salt!

Compare these prices with those of to-day and then ask the free trader to sing his plaintive song about the "war tariff" on "the necessaries of life" to the marines.

The Tribune recommends all farmers and merchants who were in active life n "those good old times" to do as Mr Hodgman has done-look up their old account books and note down the prices received and paid by the farmers before the present "war tariff" was imposed. That is a good way to find out how much truth there is in what the free traders are telling them about the burdensome "war tariff" on the necessaries of life.—Detroit Tribune.

The Markets and the Outlook. The wheat market developed interest ing phases the past week, under liberal export business and a growing belief that the grain was getting scarce, probably the result of an overestimated crop. But yesterday values got "knocked into a cocked hat" by the government estimated that the wheat still in farmer's hands was 34,000,000 bushels more than the quantity one year ago. A loss of %@1c resulted, cash No. 2 red going to 79c and May No. 2 red to 80%c, with a small rally forward, which left cash ¾c and May 1½c net lower than a week before. One year ago cash No. 2 red was 95@96c, or fully 16c dearer than now. It is notable that London is quoting only 2 pence per quarter of eight bushels lower than at this time last year for English wheat. The fact helps the belief that American prices are too low

Corn has a little more than held its own in this market. Oats hold a similar position, and even at the low prices prevailing both cereals are too plenty to develop much investment buying. Rye alone remains steady around 47c per bushal. Barley increases in duliness as the weather may soon be too warm for malting. Cloverseed advanced 5c during the week but dropped back to old prices, or $3.25, at which it has few friends.

On the whole farm products have lost rather than gained during the week. There is plainly too much ground used for the cultivation of wheat, corn and oats, and while the world's political horizon is peaceful these crops promise to be larger next year, for in America at least many of the states have increased their wheat area. The situation is a strong argument in favor of "diversified farming." Michigan developed its great salt industry by paying a bounty for some years, and who now says that money was ill spent by the state? Supposing Michigan should now in a similar way encourage the developement of beet sugar, would not certain economists bob up and say it was another branch of "tariff robbery"; The same pretended friends of the farmers prefer to buy sugar from German beets, while Germany interdicts American pork on the thin excuse that it is less healthy than other pork.

"Well, pretty easy." "You don't have much to do. Just stand at the window, count out stamps and take in the money. 'That's all, save the little item of making correct change every time." of course. But that isn't "Oh," much."

'No, not much, though sometimes half a dozen people, all in a hurry, want stamps at the same moment." "Yes, to be sure. You must be busy at times, say early in the day, or at Christmas and Easter. But most people could do the work with a little practice. "Yes, practice is a great thing, but

I've been a stamp clerk for ten years, and yet yesterday I made a mistake in counting out a small number of one cent stamps. Still, practice is a great "Well, I should like to have your place, that's all. It can't be very hard to sell postage stamps."

"I wish you had it, as you think it is so easy. But, should you try it a day, you might think differently." This conversation between two acquaintances occurred in a city postoffice some time ago. The change which brought about a new administration removed the old postoffice clerk and installed another man in his place. The new clerk entered upon his duties with a feeling that selling stamps was a diversion suited to his genial temperament. He hadn't been at the window an hour before he was a sadder and a wiser man. A woman came up and wanted thirteen cents' worth of twos and cards and a package of two cent wrappers. She had nothing smaller When the clerk had recovered from the temporary slow fever into which this episode threw him there was a crowd waiting outside, and all he could hear was: "Twenty-five cents' worth of twos, please." 'Package postal cards." 'Dollar's worth stamps, quick." "How much'll that take? Goin' to Canady." "Nuff stamps on that, hey?" "Gimme two twos and three ones, will you? I am in a hurry."

The young man nervously counted out stamps, weighed packages, consulted the printed sheedule for rates in foreign countries and perspired freely. Cold chills ran down his back, for he had a vague idea of giving somebody seventy-five cents' worth of stamps for fifty cents, and of selling a package of postal cards for half price. The crowd at the window did not diminish, but grew.

A man finally came up in a great hurry and threw down a handful of loose silver and nickels and coppers and asked for-"Twenty-seven ones, sixteen cents" worth of twos, two and a half packages of postal cards, and the rest in twos and one cent wrappers." The new clerk choked down a big word or two, mopped his brow nerv-ously with a sheet of stamps, and began counting out a package of stamped envelopes, government official size.

"How many did you say?" "How many what?" Envelopes. "Envelopes? I don't want any envelopes. Twenty-seven ones, sixteen cents' worth of twos, two and one-half packages of postal cards and the rest n twos and one cent wrappers. That's what I want and in a big hurry, too. Got to catch a train." 'Yes, I said so." 'Oh, well, all—all right! There you And—and how many ones?" "Twenty-seven. Come, hurry up."

the syncope into which this little transaction had cast him, he spied his old acquaintance, the former stamp clerk, at the window.

Does the Pitcher Plant Eat Meat? Notwithstanding the admitted fact that bits of meat, insects and other animal substances are more quickly decomposed in the leaves and other trap like appendages of the pitcher plant, sundews, venus fly traps and various insect eating plant, than they are in open air, there is a body of scientists who deny that the plants themselves have any agency in the matter, or exercise any vital power in capturing the prey that falls in their nets. Dr. Mostedt is one of these skeptics. He favors the idea that the decomposition of the imprisoned insect is owing to chemical action simply, and that the effect is produced in almost exactly the same way that a person is poisoned by coming in contact with a poisonous plant.—St. Louis Republic.

.. A Cat Trap. Over in a certain west side neigh borhood the residents have been great ly annoyed by a horde of howling cats and as poison, bootjacks, soap dishes and other bric-a-brac have proved unavailing in attempts to arrest the plague, the people have been at a loss what to do. Finally an inventive young man arranged a trap which has proved highly effective in some cases. He first spent some time in fixing up an artistic wire noose, and this he ar ranged over a pulley in the shed just back of his house.

a little i after marriage. It was so arranged that a cat pok-ing his head through the noose would spring the trap, and a ten pound dumb bell on the other end of the wire would descend and jerk the offending feline up toward the roof. In a day or so the remains of the animal would be removed. At first it was difficult to get the truant cats to poke their heads through the deadly noose, but a lady who lived next door, and was in sym pathy with the movement, furnished a little catnip, and this was sprinkled about the trap. It was great bait, and already eight cats have climbed the golden stair via the deadly wire route. The name and address of the young man is withheld out of respect for the Illinois Humane society.—Chicago Herald.

Two Strings to His Bow. "The prairies of the west are great places for wind," said a wild west telegraph operator. 'I used to have a station out in Nebraska, right out in the open prairie, and the way the wind blew there was a caution. But it was a lucky wind for me. At a station about thirteen miles west my girl lived, and, as I had no Sunday trains or business of any kind, I used to go up there and stay over Sunday.

night to Monday morning cost me too much money, so I rigged up a sail on an old tie car. All I had to do on Saturday night was to hoist my sail, push the tie car out on the main rack, and in less than an hour I was at my journey's end. For more than a year I went to see my girl every Saturday night by means of that sail car. Pretty sleek, wasn't it?"
"Yes, pretty sleek. But you don't mean to say that the wind blew in the same direction every Saturday night during all that time?"

"Of course I don't." "Well, how did you manage on those nights when the wind blew in the other direction?" "Easy enough. I had another girl at a station fifteen miles east."—New York Ledger.

Poaching by Officers.

As I entered M. Labouchere's hall. I was amused to observe a broad backed German officer, quartered on him, in the act of mounting the back stairs, bent nearly double under the load of a roebuck, the legs of which he wore round his neck, and which met under his chin. The officer had evidently been doing a little poaching, unbeknown to his host. Poaching was indeed, during the war, quite the order of the day, the imperial preserves at Versailles, Cloud. St. Germain and everywhere else, being apparently open to all comers. At the Versailles restaurants pheasants and hares were considerably below the price one is charged for them ordinarily in Paris. In fact, supplies of all kinds, which were kept out of Paris by the siege, found their way to Versailles and other suburbs, where the officers of the besieging army, and every one else who had money about him, could live on the fat of the land. Not even sea fish was wanting.—Blackwood's Magazine.

The LaFayette papers say Mr. K. has made an enviable record in his church work there, and regret his departure. He will be pleasantly remembered by his numerous Buchanan friends.

> A MEETING of citizens of Bertrand township has been called to be held at Howe's school house, Saturday, March 15, at one o'clock P. M., for the purpose of considering the proposition to build a town hall. Thus far since the organization of the township, all public meetings, elections, caucuses, etc., have been held at some private residence, and it would seem that a town hall would at least be a great convenience.

MRS. E. B. CASE,

HERE is an item that will interest He was on his way home from school, was cut in two just above the ankle.

THE election Tuesday was of a rather peculiar character, so far as results are concerned. Three tickets were in the field. Republican, Democratic and Prohibitionist. The democrats voted mostly straight tickets while the republicans split theirs with but little mercy, there being 130 of the former to 75 of the latter, when these numbers should have been reversed. As will be seen by the following figures, the democrats have elected president, marshal and one councilman, and the republicans the balance of the ticket. While the republicans have had a little war dance over this election, and some members may consider that others have acted foolishly, it is time now to stop all growling, bury the hatchet and be prepared for the fight that is coming on next month. The majority in Buchancers, it will simply be because of the same kind of quarreling we have had this time, and the republicans can give no good sensible reason for any such Whole number of votes cast, 451. PRESIDENT. TALK about schemes to make the small towns in the state prosperous, Morenci has found the right one. Every merchant in the town who sells flour has agreed to handle none that is not ground by the Morenci mills; this has led the mill owners to arrange for first-class machinery, and the new machinery will produce such excellent flour that will increase the radius of the mills' patronage by miles, and con-sequently add to the general prosperity of the place.—Detroit News.

institution, no matter who hands it in, it is hurried to the block and branded with the stencil cutting die. They ask no permission, but just go and do it. The same rule is followed, too, in the parties of the same the block stoop in the same rule when the sam rotunda where the bills of larger denominations come in. Sometimes men get very angry when their bad bills are handed back to them mutilated in such a manner that they cannot be used. A few days ago the South Ferry company sent up to the sub-treasury a bundle of the fractional currency, re-presenting about $100. It had been discovered back of a partition in the old ferry house, where it had either been stowed away or misplaced and was found when the old building was torn down to make room for the new structure. Mr. Haff shuffled through the pile, and not only pronounced it all counterfeit, but discovered that some of it had been brought to the sub-treasury at least twenty years ago, as the marks of the old stamps used as long ago as that to mark counterfeit paper money was still plainly visible on them. Each piece was subjected to the cutting process, and will probably not be presented again for redemption.

All the fractional paper currency that is redeemed at the sub-treasury is cent to the sent to the treasury at Washington, where it is placed in the crematory and burned up, and all that is left is a sediment of slag, a single pound of which may represent $100,000; the balance floats off as smoke and gas.— New York Commercial Advertiser.

Journalist, Reporter, Editor. At the recent annual dinner of the Pittsburg Press club, George S. Welshons (St. Geo.), one of the best known and wittiest newspaper men of the state, got off the following in response to the toast "The Reporter:"
"There are three grand divisions," "There are three grand divisions," Mr. Welshons said, "in newspaper work—journalists, reporters and editors. Speaking more acurately, there are three stages of development. A journalist is a calf reporter. He is a reporter in the miniature tadpole stage, when his head is so big that it takes all the rest of his person to shove it around. If he is lucky, by and by it around. If he is lucky, by and by he becomes a reporter. After a reporter's legs wear out they make an editor out of him. The final stage of a frog, you know—the extreme removal from the tadpole—is the bullfrog, too stiff to jump, too old and tough to eat, who just sits on the bank and bellows.

That is an editor. "In the old days the editor called a man a chicken thief; nowadays the reporter finds the feathers in his backyard. The weapon of the old time editor was the epithet; that of the modern' reporter is the evidence. What the editor used to assert the reporter now

"If the people who complain of what the reporter writes about them would only consider what he does not write about them, they would shrine him in the friendliest corner of their hearts. The waste baskets in a daily newspaper office of any town do more to keep its citizens in good repute than any other agency, excepting the fear of the law and the hereafter. Not all that the reporter writes is truth. He is not infallible himself, and those who are the sources of his information are much less so. There are very many men who cannot tell a straig story. There are others who do not try to. The man who tells the story to the reporter is usually an interested party. He has a purpose to serve in metamorphosing this or suppressing that. The reporter has no desire ex-cept to get the truth accurately and completely, and to write it quickly and entertainingly.

"All men do not love the reporter, and I am glad of it. The fear and hatred of bad men is as a chaplet above his brow. It is the assurance of his honesty to his badge of honor as a servant of truth. If the time ever comes when all men love the reporter, it will be time to bury him. He will have forgotten his mission, betrayed his trust and shamed the noble fellowship of men who have made the white cross of the Pittsburg reporter the decoration of a legion of honor."—Exchange.

That the growing desire for the pos ession of good pictures is not confined to buyers with heavy pocketbooks is daily evidenced in the experience of those who are familiar with the increase of art taste in this community. The most appreciative picture admirers are not those who desire that their possessions shall be known to all men, and the best pictures are not by any manner of means altogether those that are most known to the public, or that are component parts of large and important collections It would be interesting, if it were possible, to learn about the scores of individuals who, in a small way, have collected a few good pictures for their personal enjoyment, and concerning which the public knows nothing whatever. There are in New York probably several hundred such small collections of not over half a dozen canvases each that would surprise the community could they be brought out to public view in one large exhibition. One amateur, who makes very little display, has in his possession three pic-tures only, but these he considers would put to shame many more pretentious collections. One of his pictures is a curious work by Turner that the amateur picked up in London and that has an interesting history. picture that, like many others by Turner, is little more than an experiment in color, represents a grotto with sur-rounding landscape. It was painted by Turner on a time wager after a dinner at which the artist and his friends were present. The picture was given to the host, and was purchased by the present owner from the family of the original possessor.—New York Star. An Automatic Rabbit.

B. H. Worrall, proprietor of Queen's Park, Morley, has invented an automatic "rabbit," which, it is said, meets almost all the requirements of the sport of coursing. It fits in a socket attached to an endless wire running in gutters below ground, only a narrow slot showing on the surface. The contrivance is worked by machinery erected in a small tower. The motive power is a heavy stone weighing about half a ton, working like a clock weight, the speed at which the 'rabbit" travels being controlled by a man at a crank handle. The gutters are laid diamond shape, and the length of the course is about 200 yards, the "rabbit" doubling twelve times on the journey, the angles being very acute. In case the dogs are unable to capture the "rabbit" before the whole-ground has been traversed the quarry runs into a box, an inclined plane in which lifts it out of the socket, the dogs losing it.—New York Sun.

RAYMOND, FEB. 28, 1888. Dr. F. B. Brewer:-I received your last box of medicine all right. I think I am much better than I was a week ago, I commenced to gain strength as soon as I got the chills and fever broken up. I don't have those nervous spells any more. I don't cough and raise as much as I did; what I do raise looks pretty bad, but no blood, just clear corruption. I have not vomited up my food for about a week. My victuals begin to taste natural. I have a spleudid appetite.

The Weekly Mail and Express

You Can Subscribe to Both at Once. HOW IS THIS? YOU ASK.

WE WILL EXPLAIN.

The Weekly Mail and Express has agreed with the Grant Monument Association that the entire revenue of the paper from yearly subscriptions of two dollars each will be turned over to the Funn for the erection of a NATIONAL MONUMENT to General Ulysses S. Grant at Riverside Park, New York City. In other words, if yon send Two Dollars to the Weekly Mail and Express you will the paid over to the Grant Monument Fund. You will thus receive a full equivalent for your money in a first-class weekly newspaper and at the same time you will be helping to forward a noble and worthy cause. The Weekly Mail and Express has further evidenced its earnestness and sincerity in this work by subscribing TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS to the Monument Fund.

LETTER FROM MRS. GRANT. LETTER FROM MRS. GRANT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28, 1839.

The arrangements made between the Weekly Mail and Express and the Grant Monument Association meets my hearty approval. The offer of the Weekly Mail and Express is patriotic, and should it be responded to promptly by the citizens of America the monument will speedily be built at the very, site suggested by my husband, and selected by me as the last resting place of his precious remains, the spot where I hope my remains will lie beside his, and where our children unite with me saying, "Here only shall be his tomb."

Julia Dent Grant.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM GOV, CORNELL.

GRANT MONUMENT ASSOCIATION,
NEW YORK, DEC. 18, 1889.

DEAR SIR—It gives me profound satisfaction to acknowledge receipt of your esteemed favor of this date inclosing check from the Weekly Mail and Express for ten thousand dollars, panable to the order of the Grant Monument Associytion, as a contribution toward the erection of the Grant memorial at the Riverside Park, in the city of New York.

Such a contribution coming at this time, is doubly valuable. It will stimulate the renewed efforts recently cutered upon to complete the fund necessary to construct what we confidently believe will be the grandest personal memorial in Christendom. Faithfully and cordially yours,

Chalrman Executive Committee.
