and there is a carriageful just behind them that I do not recognize—" "It is Benjamin Harrison and his cabinet, very likely," came in a sarcas tic tone from the invalid's corner.

Gladys laughed so good humoredly at this that her brother felt obliged to express his disapproval by a deep "Ira is coming," cried the girl springing up with a little blush, "and he will

"Umph! There is little regard for my feelings shown in this house!" complained Miles, as Gladys opened the door for her loyer, and explained that the invalid was not feeling as well as usual, and did not wish her to leave

As Gladys had expected, Ira immediately offered to remain with her: and although she knew that Miles did not desire his company, she could not tell him so, and the young man followed her into the sick-room, resolved to cheer up the invalid; for he under-stood as well as if he had been told the exactions which Straughan imposed upon his patient sister. "Gladys tells me that you are worse

"Well, it really must be trying to remain in bed so long. It's five years since you have taken a step, I believe."
"Five years, four months and nine days," returned Miles, with precision. 'And it's not only lying in bed, but in have to raise you with a derrick?" "A derrick!" repeated Miles, with an indignant jerk that caused the machinery to give way and the foot of the bed to fly nearly to the ceiling, while springs, mattress, pillows, quilts and Miles himself, fell to the floor. -For a moment Miles' feet formed less of the silken curtain attached, the invalid began to chase Ira about the room, making frantic dives at the young man as he dodged from one piece of furniture to another. Fortunately or otherwise for Ira, his hand came in contact with a door knob, which he turned in his despair, and an instant later he found himself prawling upon the cellar bottom eight

Encouraged by the downfall of his enemy, the invalid took the stairs at two steps, and would then and there have secured his vengence had it not been that his feet were found to be protruding through two large rents in the curtain before mentioned. As he paused to disentangle them. Ira arose. and with an adroitness at drawing bolts which would have secured a burglar untold wealth, flew through the outer door into the snow, and from time Ira, to use a hackneyed expression, was nowhere. "Where did that bareheaded man go?" panted Miles, waving his torn curtain ferociously in the face of an approaching neighbor.

Unfortunately this neighbor was troubled with an impediment in his "St-sist-et-sist-oh, go alongyou'll gig—gig—gig—git there before I can tell you." he stammered.

"Confound you for an idiot," cried Straughan. "Gug-gah-gug-gone crazy at last, have you?" cried the neighbor, angry in his turn. "I always thought you could wa—wah—wa—walk if you had a m—m—mind to!" Miles Straughan, realizing now for the first time that he was out in the street in his dressing-gown and slippers -he had had the rheumatism so bad for the last five years that he could not take a step about the house, even turned in fear for the results of his own prowess and with swift footsteps made his way toward home. He had not gone far before he met Gladys with a shawl over her head, hastening in pursuit of her lover and her brother. "Miles she cried as she met the latter, who had wound the curtain around the pole and was now using it for a staff, "lean on me. I am afraid you will never get over this-never!" "No." he returned, refusing the prof-

"Miles, you must not think that I am unwilling to help you, or that Ira let fered help, "if I can walk myself I in-the bed fall purposely, because,—"

For the first time in her remembrance her brother laughed heartily.

"I understand it all, sis," he said in a tone that revealed the better state of mind to which he had come. "I was an idiot to get angry, and yet, if I had not I might naver have known that I not I might never have known that I was able to walk. I think I must send Ira a note informing him that he has cured me, and ask him to send in his

He did so the next day. The note brought a personal answer, when everything was settled satisfactorily, and Gladys attended as many parties as she chose after that, with her lover, and afterwards her husband; for neither Miles nor Ira experienced any serious results from the evening's escapade, although life presented a rather mottled appearance for a week after to the latter, owing to his unpremeditated descent into the cellar. - Waverley Mayazine.

Crook's Playful Relative. General Crook's death recalls one of the most picturesque incidents of the civil war, viz., the capture of Crook and Kelly, both then general officers of vol-unteer forces, by a handful of Confederates as the two slept in a hotel in the city of Cumberland, Md. There were fully 10,000 Union troops in and around Cumberland at the time, but a few of McNeill' Partisan Rangers, a guerilla corps party recruited in Cumberland, crossed the Potomac from Virginia, and at midnight made the capture. The Confederates, familiar with the place from childhood, clattered unchallenged through the sleeping city, easily captured the sentry pacing the gas-lit streets in front of the hotel, and actually penetrated to the bed-rooms of the two generals. When the dazed officers awoke it was to find themselves in the hands of the enemy. They were mounted on horseback and quietly taken out of the city before the alarm spread.

Railroads in South America. In a recent issue the Chicago Tribune says: "The proposed inter-contnental railroad which is to connect North and South America, starting southward from the city of Mexico, is now supplemented by a proposition from H. C. Parsons, of Virgin a, to build another road, less than 2,000 miles in length, beginning at Cartagena, on the northern coast of Columbia, thence running south through Ecuador to Cuzco, in Peru, where t will connect with the road already buiding northward from the Argentine Confederation. A company has already been formed under a cuarter from the State of Virginia, and trustees appointed, the latter being Judge Granville P. Hawes, of New York; Ex-Senator T. M. Norwood, of Savannah, Ga.; John W. Thompson, a Washington banker, and A. W. Campbell, of Wheeling, W. Va. The first step to be taken will be the survey of the route, and for this a fund of $500,-

000 has been raised. Great difficulties will stand in the way, especially among the mountains, as huge peaks will confront the surveyors in Ecuador and Bolivia, but in these days of science it is premature to consider any-thing insurmountable, and the success which has crowned the efforts of the builders of the road running east and west-in piercing the Andes with tunnels will be encouraging to the projectors of the north and south road. The new road, it is claimed, will pass through an exceedingly fertile country to the north, in many sections rich in gold and s lver, and abounding in coal and timber. A considerable portion of the road will run through an almost virge region, very sparsly populated, but once opened up the projectors are certain that its natural resources will attract a large colonization. The country penetrated by the road is one of the most picturesque in the world, and the enthusiastic projectors are confident that within five years it will be the favorite route of tourists, instead of the European. It will, at least, be a new experience when the traveler can purchase his

Wooling in Australia. The Illustrated Sydney News states that one of the wool companies there has a burring machine recently imported from America which effectually eradicates all burrs and other extraneous matter from sheep skins, and its work is done in the most complete manner; skins thickly matted with burr and seed are put through this machine and turned out clean and free, without doing the slightest injury to the wool, while its value is materially enhanced. This is a great acquisition to the company in their fellmongering department, enabling them to treat the very worst class of skins in a complete and satisfactory manner. There is also connected with these works a tannery on an extensive scale. where from 200 dozen pelts per week are converted into basils of a high class, for which there is a ready market.

An Acute Sense of Smell. A well known blind man records that he said one morning to a workman, You have had a red herring for breakfact, you have smoked a pipe of tobacco and you have just lighted a fire." As the man had carefully washed himself after lighting the fire and eating breakfast, the blind man's sense of smell must have been acute to detect all three odors in succession. "You have had fish here," said this same blind man to a clerk on entering a store. The clerk said that they had not, but on the blind man insisting that there was the smell a fish dealer's stand.

A Little Too Honest

An old farmer in Indiana wanted to sell his farm for a fancy price, and after throwing a number of diseased by allowing him to sew with a thread which had no knot on the end. This would be no breach of the Sabbath, she concluded, as drawing a thread through against a free.

The Nicaragua Canal. The election of ex-Senator Warner Miller to the presidency of the Nicaragua Canal Company, at a meeting of the directors in New York, on the 6th inst., is an additional indication, if any such were needed, of the intention of the promoters to push this great enterprise with energy and business sagacity to its conclusion. The former pres ident of the company, Mr. Alfred C Cheney of the Garfield National Bank is still as actively connected with the enterprise as ever, and is now vice president; but the time has come when the canal requires a working manager who can devote all his time thereto, which President Warner Miller intends to do, pushing the work, as he says, "with all the vigor that men and money can bring to bear on it. The board of directors includes many men of high standing in the financial and business world, and, there has not been much flourish of trumpets about what they are doing, as was so conspic uously the case at Panama, all accounts agree that the preliminary work has most thoroughly performed and a substantial commencement made toward the building of the canal.

Jail Delivery Prevented by a Young Girl.

There is one brave girl in Charlotte N. C., and she is Miss Lula Smith, the pretty little twelve year old daughter of Sheriff Z. S. Smith, says the Atlanta Constitution. At 5 o'clock one after noon Miss Lula was playing near the jail with some other children, when she happened to see a prisoner slide out the jail through a newly made hole in the wall. The little miss knew that would nev er do, so she ran quickly to the side of the jail and picked up a big stone. She began to pound a second kinky head, poked nearly through the hole, and in the act of escaping. Only a few licks were necessary to drive the prisoner back. Standing by the hole on the inside of the jail were a dozen prisoners ready to crawl through and escape, but the little woman stood guard at the outside and dared them to poke out their heads. She gave the alarm, and soon her father was on the scene and the prisoners all locked up in their cells. By some means or other the prisoner had cut a hole through the thick brick wall, and had it not been for Miss Luca a wholesale delivery would have followed. The prisoner that succeeded in getting away was a negro boy in for a

Keep Busy. The secret of success in life is to keep busy, to be persevering, patient and untiring in the pursuit or calling you are following. The busy ones may now and then make mistakes, but it is better to risk these than to be idle and inactive. Keep doing, whether it be at work or seeking recreation. Will Shoot Eleven Miles. The largest-gun in existence, and the heaviest ever made by the Krupp works, has recently been completed and sent to Cronstadt, where it will be mounted. It is of cast steel and weighs 235 tons. The caliber is 1314 inches, the barrel is 40 feet in length and has a maximum diameter of 61/2 feet. All About the Ear.

People with a taste for music usually possess large ears, while those of the ill-tempered and cruel are thin and small. Large ears also are said to de note generosity, while the opposite is the trait of those with smaller organs of hearing. This last idea is scarcely correct, however, as observation wil show. The ears of great philosophers and statesmen have been rather large. Boxing children's ears when they need correction is a barbarous custom, apt to induce deafness in later years. The fashion of boring the ears, that jewels may dangle therefrom, is one which seems to be passing away, and it is one which ought never to be revived in a of fish in the store, the clerk remembered that a lady had been in to pay a bill, who lived in a house next door to out seeking to beauty it further by metal decorations.

Crimping and Banging a Doll's Hair. A large doll was taken to a fashionable hair store yesterday to have her hair dressed. The long, flaxen locks were taken off, scalp and all, and hung on the head of a dummy. Then her back hair was dressed with crimps, and the front cut in a bang and curled with a heated iron. The wig was then skilfully adjusted to her head, her little white bonnet was tied on, and she was laid in the showcase until called for. "How much does it cost to dress a doll's wig like that one?" asked an interested party.

"Cutting the bang and dressing the hair comes to seventy-five cents," answered the attendant. "You see it is a very nice piece of work."

"Was the wig purchased here?"
"Yes, we sell all sizes. But we have dolls' wigs from all parts of the world brought here to be dressed at all seasons of the year. We have several little girls who are regular customers, and bring in their dolls when they are going to a party and have their hair dressed like their own. And it costs just as much, too."

Mud Huts in an Oasis.

Biskra, a large oasis on the Sahara Desert, may now be reached by an energetic traveller in three days from England. The climate is very delightful for six months in the year, and even in the middle of May the heat is by no means excessive. The sky is clear, the desert air dry and invigorating—though the sand finds its way in everywherethe sunsets are magnificent, and the moonlit nights have a splendor beyond description.

Outside the walls, and, indeed, dotted here and there over the desert, are encampments of Bedouins, whose low, dark colored tents are filled with a strange collection of animals—dogs, goats, chickens and children, with perhaps a camel or two, forming part, and only part, of the live stock.

A Cup of Warm Tea.

An enterprising firm of spinners in Dundee, Scotland, have hit upon a capital plan of bringing their workers up to time at 6 o'clock in the morning. The defaulters were principally women, and the firm, knowing the weakness of the fair sex, offered a bribe of a cup of warm tea to every one who presented herself at the proper hour. Even during the cold mornings the experiment worked splendidly, and the firm have now no cause of complaint. The fame of the tea has reached other works in the city, and a large company of women workers at one of the factories in the west end struck work in consequence of the refusal of their employers to follow the good example.

Cheap Production of Iron. A correspondent to one of our daily newspapers states that the balance of the Woodward Iron Company, of Birmingham Ala., a month ago showed the total average cost to the company, including repairs, interest on capital invested, improvements, etc., of producing pig iron, had been only $8.36 a ton for the year just then ended. During one month of the year the average to tal cost had run down to $7.71 a ton, which is the lowest we have ever known of pig iron being produced.

The warmest days since 1850 were those in July, 1851, and in the months of May and July, 1865, when the mercury registered one hundred and one in the shade. The highest temperature since 1861 was ninety-six degrees in the shade, which has been registered on several occasions, but not since 1880. The coldest day was on February 8, 1862, when the thermometer registered thirty-five below zero. The coldest winter since 1850 was the one of 1871-72, when when we had thirty-five days that the thermometer stood below zero. The coldest period was in January 1866, when the mercury went below zero at six in the morning on the fourth, and continued thus for one hundred and twelve consecutive hours. The heaviest snow storm was the blizzard of March 12, 1888, when the snow fell for fifty-two hours to a depth of three feet. The next great depth of snow

How She Settled It. A little boy of our acquaintance is fond of amusing himself by sewing with a needle and thread in imitation of his nurse and his mother, who are both expert needlewomen. One Sunday not long ago, he was left in charge of his nurse while his parents were at church, and beginning to weary, he wished to resume his favorite occupation. This, however, the nurse, who was a strict Sabbatarian, would not allow, as she held that would be breaking the Sabbath if she allowed him to sew. The last part of last week witnessed the most extensive and destructive storm of the entire winter. Its effects were felt throughout nearly the entire north and west, the snow fall blockading travel in many places, and in the southern portion the high winds carried death and destruction in their path. A cyclone passed through the heart of Louisville, Kentucky, and Jefferschville, Indiana, demolishing hundreds of buildings over the heads of their inmates. In Louisville the loss of life will reach 100 persons, and the number of injured several times as many. The worst destruction was that of Fall City hall in which a number of public meetings were being held, and all of the occupants were buried beneath a mass of brick and mortar The storm path was five blocks wide and three miles long through the city.

Popular Jingoism.

The new extradition treaty with Great Britain, the text of which was officially published yesterday, is the second treaty negotiated by Mr. Blaine and ratified substantially without change by the Senate. Mr. Blaine's success in this respect is in marked contrast with the lamentable failure of his immediate predecessor. Mr. Bayard tried his hand at the Samoan difficulty, the fisheries dispute, and the extradition treaty matter, and made a sorry mess of them all. His stupendous failure humiliated the who try and disgusted even his own party. Mr. Blaine succeeded to the worse than miserable heritage left by his predecessor, and in less than a year has brought the entangled problem to a successful solution. The Samoan trouble has been settled to the satisfaction of this country, his extradition treaty was accepted without even a semblance of serious opposition, and indications are that the Behring Sea and fisheries controversies will be adjusted in an equally satisfactory manner. The country is proud of this sort of "jingoism."— Minneapolis Tribune.

Self-Convicting.

Free-trade will make work more plenty and wages higher by widening the market for American products and thus increasing the demand for labor. The farmer and mechanic have everything to gain and nothing to lose by free-trade, for they both sell in a free and buy in restricted market,-Detroit Evening News.

A few months ago the News sent a whole steamer load of expert American mechanics to Europe to examine into the condition of free-trade workmen. They did so, returned, and reported almost unanimously that the News was wrong in its position. Work was not demanding more help, and skilled as well as unskilled labor was overworked, underfed, poorly clothed, miserably housed, and wages barely sufficient to sustain life in a manner which an American workman would scorn. This was in England; and it was worse in other countries, where free-trade competition made wages

This is not our testimony. The News furnished it to the people of this country at great expense. It stopped publishing it when the reports of its emissaries were found to be simply cumulative evidence, convicting it of willful misrepresentations. But it didn't quit soon enough. Even its stupendous gall could not stand this self-conviction, and it was silent upon the subject of freetrade for several months. Now, with a change of editorship, it breaks out again. Probably it thinks that the people have forgotten the cld conviction by this time. It is true, however, that English farmers and mechanics have nothing to lose and everything to gain. Forty years ago the farmers of Great Britain had something to lose; but they have long since lost it under the baleful influence of free-trade. They now have everything to gain, and the labor of that country is making desperate efforts to gain as much as will enable them to keep the wolf from the door, by inaugurating the most extensive strikes (so far as numbers are concerned), ever known in the history of labor. They also have a large, aggressive, and rapidly growing party of protectionists there, called fair traders. What credence should be given a paper that convicts itself of lying, and pays several thousand dollars to secure the evidence?-Lansing Republican.

Not the least significant fact in the discussion of free trade in this country is that when it was first opened we were cited to several European countries, supposed to be prosperous under that policy, but all have since adopted protection, leaving only England and Turkey among the free trade nations. Nearly two centuries of that policy have long since reduced Turkey to pauperism, and it retains its national position only through the jealousies and dispute of other nations as to who shall have the "sick man's corpse". Russia has strengthened her tariff, and instead of an annual deficit she now has a surplus. Germany has been so profoundly impressed by the miracuulous growth and prosperity of the United States, that within a decade she has adopted protection, much to the advantage of her people of all classes. France, now that her treaties made by Napoleon III are expiring, is moving rapidly toward strong protec-tive measures. The English colonies have generally rejected the practice of the mother country, and adopted progective tariffs. New South Wales, the only free trade colony in Australia has struggled until its deficit, notwith-standing its vast agricultural resources and inexhaustible coal deposits, exceeds $2,500,000, and its legislature now has a free trade minority of one member. Even in England there is an active, aggressive and growing party | preserves and all, etc., etc.

THE new council met last Friday evening and appointed their committees for the year, and voted on the selection of village attorney, but the vote was a tie between Worthington and Roe and no election was made, and the question laid over to the next meeting, which is to be held tomorrow evening.—Record. That's where you are wrong again, Mr. Holmes. It does not stand a tie between Messrs. Roe and Worthington, but a tie on the nomination of Attorney Roe. Action on the nomination of Mr. Worthington was disposed of and his selection lost by a vote of four to three. The two nominations were not made a matter of a selection between the two gentlemen, as President Rough thought was best at the time of the meeting, but in each case they were brought up separately, and the nomination of Mr. Roe is the only one now before the council. His selection must be made, or else the city will remain without an attorney for the coming year.—Enterprise.

Curious, that is. It seems that Mr. Roe was not selected, and still the village has an attorney. The question was brought up at the meeting of the council. Friday evening, by a motion of Trustee Palmer, that the council proceed to vote for a village attorney. President Rough, doubtless having in mind a vote to reconsider, was not sure whether the motion coming from that side of the house would be in order, and as Mr. Duffield was present referred the question to him, and he decided that some one who veted for Mr. Roe at the previous meeting should make this motion, and it was accordingly made by Trustee Hamilton and seconed by Trustee Miller, and when the vote was taken Mr. Worthington had six votes, and Mr. Roe one vote, the President not voting. Another brilliant idea of this parliamentary referee is that in case of a tie, President Rough is entitled to two votes. One as a member of the council and one to break the tie. We suggest that he ought to be entitled to one vote because he is a citizen of the town, and another because he is a heavy taxpayer, and perhaps one more because he is a good business man, and two or three more because he is a democrat. You can always depend upon a democrat to devise means to get in all of the voting necessary, and this democratic sage appears to be no exception. His wonderful knowledge of parliamentary law will take him to congress, sure. The boy from Mendon must

The Vandalia folks are anxious to operate their new line.—South Bend Times.

FROM a reliable source we learn that seven wagon loads of lake suckers have been sold at South Bend during the past week, which were caught in a seine between Niles and Buchanan. This is contrary to law, yet no regard is paid to it whatever. An investigation should be made at once. The fish were sold at live cents a pound, and it is said the demand is greater than the supply. The above is an explanation to the fact that but few lake suckers have appeared in the river at Niles.—Niles Star.

BENTON HARBOR is called on for privileges aggregating $10,000 in aid of the Grand Rapids line; but this is not all we are expected to do this year for new railroads.

The new road from the north really means also a new road from the south or southwest; possibly from South Bend by way of Buchanan and Berrien Springs, or perhaps from some junction with the Vandalia, or not improbably an independent line intended to give the Grand Rapids road an outlet southward. In this event, we may be asked to provide vard privileges and right of way for the second line, and to go a little deeper into our pockets than will suffice to raise the $10,000 now asked.

If the southern road comes it is quite likely to give us the long-desired highway bridge over the St. Joseph river by planking the structure. This would doubtless involve the utilizing of the bridge tax of $12,000 already voted in this township.—Palladium.

The System of Manual Training Now Being Taught in Boston. The word "sloyd" has been seen in print more or less of late years in magazines as well as newspapers and al-ways in connection with the vital uestion of manual training and its ntroduction into the public schools. It is an anglicized form of the Swedish slojd, meaning dexterity or manual skill (compare Norse word slogd, cunning; English sly). Of late, however, the word has been restricted in its use to denote a system of manual training, of which the best known is the so called Naas system, adopted some fifteen years ago in Sweden. When this system was adopted at Naas, it was new only as a whole. The details had been worked out and proved to be beneficial by different persons at different times and in different countries, but not until then had they been collected and made into a systematic whole. The material used is wood, found, by experiment, to be the cleanest and easiest to work—a most profitable selection, as with called at the Tribune office to-day. He proper tools it can be worked into any shape or form.

The purpose of the sloyd instruction is by no means only to give general skill to the hand, but also to stimulate and broaden the mind, and to excite a love and respect for all honest work; it is to be looked upon as educational, a thing which will help us all and generations to come to be more fully and evenly developed. On the value of various systems here is much dissent; but all believers in manual training agree to the fol-lowing principles: The work must, 1. Interest the pupil. 2. Give use ful articles as a product. 3. Promote general dexterity. 4. Develop the sense and love of order and exactness. 5. Encourage cleanliness and neatness. 6. Take into consideration the ability and strength of the pupil. 7. Cultivate the asthetic sense. 8. Develop and strengthen the body. 9. Counteract sedentary occupations. 10. Progress methodically. 11. Train the perception and develop the constructive and inventive faculties. 12. Cultivate attention, diligence and perseverance. These qualities the sloyd will be found to supply more fully than any other system, while it is bet ter calculated to secure a symmetrical development of mind and body.-Boston Transcript.

A Village of Chess Players. In the neighborhood of Halberstadt

in Westphalia, is the village of Strobeck, where chess is taught at school to every young villager. An examination in the game is held annually in the upper form of the school, and the best six players, who, however, have to be victorious three times running, are presented with a chess board, and feasted for a whole long summer's day. The custom is said to have originated several centuries ago, when a recalci-trant priest from Halberstadt was sent into exile at Strobeck. Time hanging somewhat heavily on his hands, he instructed the peasants in the game of chess, and ever since then the game has gone down from generation to generation. The pride and glory of the village is an old chess board, which is kept in their board room by the elders of the village, and which the great elector presented to the peas-ants after he had played chess with them when passing through the village. The edge of the board represents, in delicate wood carving, the village of Strobeck, and the figures are of silsnver gi other side. The peasants tell also a tale of how Frederick the Great once played chess with their mute forefathers, but there is no tangible sign that the Alte Fritz has really added to

A new fiber plant has been discovered on the Isle of Trinidad which promises to be an improvement on ramie. It was found by an agriculturist named T. J. St. Hill, who has called it "maholtine," but whose scientific nomenclature is abutilon periplocifo-lium. The great thing with this plant is that the ribbons at nearly all times of the year are easily detached from the woolen portion by simply stripping them with the hand, and therefore decorticating machine is not required as for ramie. When it is known how readily the stems allow themselves to be deprived of their coating of bark and fiber it will be seen what an advantage this simple fact gives the new product over many of the fiber pro-ducing plants. All that is required is to cut the stems, which are fully ten feet long, split the bark at the larger end and strip off the bark from end to end without stopping, as fortunately the stems have no side branches. Samples submitted to London brokers were favorably reported on and were val-

Profitable Egg Hunting. A case in some respects similar to that of the famous man who jumped into a bramble bush is reported from Kennebunk. Mrs. A. F. Wood, a lady who had been lame several years, went to the barn loft to gather some eggs and in sliding down upon the hay, with her lame limb, hearing something crack she felt she had broken some bone. She called to her husband for help and when he lifted her up she found she could walk better than before. The ligaments which had adhered to each other by non use were broken apart, improving her lameness. —Lewiston Journal.

Having been sent to the depot with a message for a gentleman about to leave on a train, he arrived just as the train was pulling out. Satellite of the Star Algol. Professor Vogel, the German astronomer, has recently made an inter-esting demonstration of the existence of a companion to the big variable star Algol from photographs of the star's spectrum. Algol is 134 times as large as the earth, but suffers a partial eclips at short and regular intervals, when it loses about five-sixths of its brilliancy, and falls from a star of the second magnitude to one of the fourth magnitude. Professor Vogel demonstrates by photographs of its spectra, what was before suspected, that Algol has a dark satellite, 100 times as large as the earth, and moving at a speed of fiftysix miles per second, the interposition of which between us and the big star perfectly accounts for its remarkable variations. The final demonstration that this satellite exists is scarcely more remarkable than the fact that it has been more than a century since the astronomical observer Goodricke, who discovered Algol's variations, explained the phenomenon by the revolution round it of some opaque body. It has remained till this time for the spectroscope to

Two Kinds of French

'An old lady in the department of the Ardeche, from whom I and a fellow traveler had been picking up some folk lore, ventured the observation: "Par-don, but I should like to know why it is that, though you speak with me the same sort of French that others from Paris talk, yet you seem to use an alto-gether different kind of French when you speak to each other." She did not seem to have the least idea that there was more than one language. Something very like it happened to us in Spain.—Notes and Queries.

A School Girl's Fight order to keep pace with the progressive spirit of the times, the two higher classes of the Women's Medi-cal college recently indulged in a regular college fight. The dispute arose over the ownership of a beautiful green cushion.

A young lady entered the lecture room with the cushion. She threw it upon the bench, and, sitting upon it, said to her companion: "Oh, my, but that is comfortable," Soon after she missed the seat, and, followed by her comrades, walked up to a senior, who by this time was enjoying the soft seat, and demanded her property. On re-ceiving a negative answer to her request the plucky junior grabbed hold of the cushion and pulled it from under the senior. In an instant there was a regular tug of war. The members of each class came to the assistance of their comrades. Each division held on to the cushion, pulling and wrestling, and finally both came to

United by a String. Nearly a year ago fisherman W. T. Van Dyke, while pursuing his occu pation off shore, invitingly threw out a fishing line with two well baited hooks, writes the fishing reporter of The Long Branch News. Presently there was a jerk—the bait had "took." Van Dyke was hauling in hand over hand, when suddenly the tension ceased and the line was gracefully and adroitly whisked into the boat minus both hooks. Last fall Mr. Van Dyke, over night catch, discovered among his captives a "pig" fish and a sea bass united by a bit of fishing cord, which he readily identified as his own

A hook had penetrated the jaw of each fish, and becoming imbedded there the flesh had grown around their barbs and thus securely fastened them in position. Thus held together for nearly a twelve month they had coursed the bring in double team, held by a single twine, till death cut their thread of life in twain. The skeletons of this curious pair of accidental Siamese twins, together with the hooks and line which constituted their sole domestic tie, now adorn the walls of the fish house of Mr. Van Dyke, on Ocean avenue, opposite North Bath avenue.

A Cow in New York. A cow has become a stock sensation in one part of town. Every night at 10 o'clock a real one, alone and contentedly chewing her cud, is driven into Fourth avenue from East Twelth street. She ambles along up the avenue in homely country fashion. Most of the boys and girls of the neighborhood wait up for the event. They take solid comfort and bubble over with childish antics in watching every move of the cow, and she returns the attention by mild looks from her big and peaceful eyes and a switching o her tail, just as in fly time. "She's goin' to do her act," said a Fourth avenue car driver, nodding toward the cow a few evenings since. He meant that the cow was an attraction in a neighboring theatre. In the play there is a country scene, and the cow—so strange to New Yorkers, so commonplace to most other persons—is making an unbounded "hit." -E. G. R. in Chatter.

Oiling Troubled Waters. During the last five years more than 1.000 American vessels have used oil to insure their safety in storms, and at least 300 claim it prevented their total loss. The action of oil on waves was

I have been dazed several times in the ring. Once I was almost dead from drowning. The feeling was almost exactly the same as when I was hit hard. It is not at all unpleasant. I felt as if I were floating in the air, and I didn't seem to care a rap what happened to me. I felt no pain, and, indeed, I felt really comfortable. When a man is knocked out he doesn't feel it at all. He suddenly goes to sleep and feels nothing. When he recovers he is dazed for a time.—Interview in New York Sun.

Louis Shoendorf gave Mr. A. CITY HOSPITAL, LOUISVILLE, Ky. ? March 19, 1890.

TO WHOM CONCERNED:—It gives me great pleasure to recommend (without being solicted) Miss Rosamond Weese as a first-class nurse, and in every respect thoroughly competent to take complete charge of any medical or surgical patient. During my service in charge of medical wards at the Louisville City Hospital, she has at all times shown efficiency, courage, skill, honesty and morality of character, pleasantness of manners and disposition, which endeared her to the hearts of all with whom she came in contact. I merely grant this recommendation as a slight evidence of the esteem in which we hold her in her professional capacity, and congratulate any one who may secure her service. Yours respectfully, FOREST LAJENKINS, M. D.,

More About Railroads.

A mass meeting was held in Benton Harbor, Monday night, to discuss this important question, and from the Palladium's report of the meeting we glean the following which is of interest in this part of the county: Dr. Bell stated that the officers of the belt line company bad decided to call this meeting in order to present the new situation with regard to the Grand Rapids, Chicago & St. Louis railway. This line from the north, it is expected, will connect with the Vandalia system and eventually give us another line to Chicago by way of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago. For this road $10-000 is asked in shape of right of way and terminal facilities to be given to the home company for the use of all railways on equal terms. He also noted the offer made by Mr. Dallin to bring in a line from South Bend via Buchanan and Berrien Springs for $15,000, towards which the $12,000 tax already voted in this township for a bridge could be utilized. He said it was thought desirable to raise $25,000, to be expended in right of way and terminal grounds and facilities as inducements for these and other enterprises. Mr. Tatman made a brief report of his visit with Mr. Farmer to Holland. He assured bis hearers that there was both energy and capital behind this Grand Rapids road; and that when the road is complete as planned it will be a direct tages of the line, and said the G. R. & I. Company, who are backing this road, are anxious to handle the Chicago business from Grand Rapids. On motion, it was decided to proceed to raise $25,- 000 by the note plan. It is preposed to buy right of way and loan them to the railroads, the village still holding the title.

Another distributor of bad seed is the threshing machine, which might be mostly remedied by taking pains to clean the machine at each place when they get through threshing. When we consider the wonderful rapidity with which these evil plants increase, that from a few seeds the land of a whole neighborhood may be covered, what a responsibility rests upon us farmers to see that we sow clean seed, and take the pains to eradicate, root and branch, all those weeds that will be a curse to our fertile land in years to come. THE HAVOC WROUGHT BY THE TORNADO'S DEADLY SWEEP.

A Force of Nature That Cannot Be Eliminated or Controlled-How to Avoid Danger-The Recent Horror at Louis-

Death wears no more hideous and appalling shape than when garbed with mystery and darkness. Before the lightning's fury the man will quail who has laughed at the leaden

1. City hall. 2. Union depot. 3. St. Patrick's church. TRACK OF THE STORM THROUGH LOUISVILLE. fiercely defended heights of Lookout. The red Indian dies at the stake, defiant, eagle eved and undaunted to the last, but a toothstand, makes him cry. In the face of naturo's awful and unexpected wrath the iron nerved grow weak and the cool headed frantic. So, when the other evening the mad might of the whirlwind was hurled down upon the fair city of Louisville it is no wonder that the first sensations were those of panic and dread unutterable. But as to the crash of falling buildings succeeded the cries of the wounded, brave hearts and willing hands were not found wanting to meet the unpar-alleled emergency, and through the dismal hours till dawn to urge the labor of rescue by the light of blazing structures wherein fire was completing the work begun by the

The scene after the storm was heartrending, heroic, sublime, American. Probably no tornado ever did such swift and deadly work on this continent as the one which chose Louisville for the central object of its wrath. It was of a peculiar nature and defied in many respects the laws laid down as governing these natural phenomena. It has generally been held that a city of respectable size would turn a wind no matter how fierce. This is now disproved. The maximum width of previous tornadoes was placed at fifty yards. The Louisville blast extended trom side to side a full half mile. Former visitations of the "cyclone belt" have taken place almost exclusively in the afternoon.

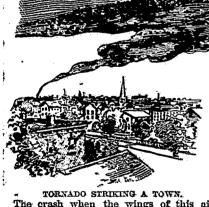

The black dots indicate the location of previous tornadoes recorded in the south-central west. This diagram is taken from Lieut. Finley's book by a pall of darkness. In a word, it was unique, both as to the conditions surrounding it and the frightful loss of life and property for which it is responsible.

Louisville was founded in 1778 and incorporated as a city in 1828. It has never before met with a serious disaster, that is, serious as compared with the recent horror. The calamity which has fallen upon the metropolis of Kentucky naturally brings up anew the question: What can be done to safeguard the future? A reply may be given in these "The populous region of the United States is forever doomed to the devastation of the tornado. As certain as night follows day is the formation of the funnel shaped cloud." This is the deliberate conclusion reached by Lieut. John P. Finley, U. S. A., after years of careful attention paid to the subject of atmospheric phenomena. But he declares if the danger cannot be averted it is among the possibilities at least to escape the extreme effects of its wrath. There are many premenitory signs which denote with almost absolute certainty the approach of a tornado, such as an oppressive, enervating air, the peculiar and unusual silence of birds, the uneasiness of domestic animals and the development of cowardly traits in breeds of dogs usually ferocious, like the mastiff or the bulldog. Human beings feel weighed down with an indefinable premonition of some impending evil. The sultriness of the day continues, but in the hitherto clear and coppery sky great banks of clouds appear, generally one in the southwest and another in the northwest or northeast, moving towards each other. They are entirely different in aspect from the ordinary heralds of a summer storm. They may resemble the thick smoke from a burning building, or a bank of fog or steam, or, if heavy and dark, take on a greenish hue, which presages the quick coming of a fierce and irresistible elemental foe. Sometimes nature marshals these forces of destruction in solid and heavy masses; again they roll up lightly, but black and frowning

The crash when the wings of this airy army come together and unite for their mighty swoop to earth is described by those who have witnessed it as something diabolically grand and awe inspiring. The noise resembles the angry roaring of uncounted beasts of prey, or the confused yet persistent and sullen booming from a battle field. Then begins the terrible progress across town and village, the country side and city. The huge demon of the air leaps with giant strides from ridge to ridge, or else chooses some river val-ley for its route and rushes onward over its appointed course, leaving behind a pathway marked by ruin, desolation and death. Nothing can stop the tornado save the exhaustion of its own inherent forces, therefore those who have studied the phenomenon have directed their efforts to discovering the laws governing its birth, course and velocity so as to formulate rules for minimizing its de-structiveness. Speaking untechnically, a tornado may be said to have its origin in and be maintained by well defined upward movements of air over a limited area at the center of disturbance. The whirling motion of the dreaded funnel shaped cloud depends upon a pre-existing disturbed and gyrating state of the atmospher. To illustrate this one might take a glass funnel, large at the top and with a small lower aperture. Fill this with water, remove the plug from the bottom, and the liquid will run out with no rotary disturbance. But a slight circular movement of the finger at the surface will set the water whirling as it falls with all the semblance of a miniature tornado. Says Lieut. Finley: "The tornado with hardly an exception occurs in the afternoon, just after the hottest part of the day, and generally disappears before the going down of the sun. The hour of greatest frequency is between 3 and 4 p. m. A tornado very rarely, if ever, begins after 6 p. m., but a tornado commencing about 5 p. m. may continue its characteristic violence until nearly 8 p. m., which only means that the tornado cloud may be traveling after 6 p. m., but it does not develop, that is, make its appearance for the first time, after those

Its usual track is from southwest to northeast, its velocity forty to seventy miles an hour, and its width from fifty yards to fifty rods. The tornado season is embraced between March and October. The months of greatest recurrence are May and July. In the southern states tornadoes are sometimes known during the winter and spring months Kansas and Missouri rank highest in regard to frequency of all the states of the Union.

In the practical application of this knowledge lies its value. If a person lives in a region where tornadoes are to be expected, his best refuge in time of need is a specially

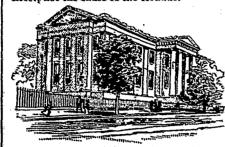

LOUISVILLE TOBACCO WAREHOUSES repared cave situated on the west side of the nouse. If there is no such retreat, and no time to get from the building, he should avoid taking a position in a northeast room, a northeast corner, an east room, or against an east wall. The tornado creates a vacuum outside, and the air inside a closed house expands at the removal of the ordinary pressure, causing demolition by explosion. To prevent this, shut all the doors and windows on the side toward the coming storm and open those on the side away from the storm. A frame building is safer than one of brick or stone, because it is more elastic, holds together longer, and does not so readily crumble and separate into falling masses.

If one has no appropriate shelter at hand he should run either north or south, preferably to the north. Whichever way he slies he will have to face a wind, as the approaching whirl pulls all the air to itself. If there is no other way to avoid the swift rushing terror the person in danger should throw himself face down on the ground, head to the east, and cover the head with the arms. Beware the neighborhood of a tree or stump, and seek a ditch or depression in the ground.

A great many plans have been suggested for breaking the force of a tornado, but none of them is feasible, as the storm is controlled by forces far above the ground. The impression that electricity is responsible for whirling storms is erroneous. Electricity is the effect, not the cause of the tornado.

THE COURT HOUSE.

The map entitled "the storm center" shows the region in which the recent whirlwind displayed its most virulent activity, and indiates the location of former storms of a similar nature, and two of the illustrations are of substantial structures destroyed at Louisville.

Beauty and Utility in Architecture. Each day the spirit of the age seems not only to sanction, but also to demand with ever increasing insistence the union of the beautiful with the useful. This applies, among other things, to architectural and en gineering designs. It involves no more ex--so experts say—to build a house or barn with an attractive exterior than one that only satisfies the requirements for room and comfort and in outline looks uncompro misingly ugly. The same proposition applies to more pretentious structures erected by municipalities or by private citizens for public use. Among these latter are to be numbered water towers. It has been the rule, until recently, to regard the necessary but unadorned iron cylinder as fulfilling all re-

Of late, however, the residents of cities including those who are compelled to gaze daily upon an unpleasing tower, have come to the conclusion that lofty structures of this class may be made ornaments to the land-scape instead of blots. Not long ago the existence of a general but unformed popular opinion in this respect was recognized by Mr. Henry C. Meyer, editor of The New York Engineering and Building Record, and at his own expense he opened a competition for designs for a waterworks pumping station and a water tower. Over fifty architects responded, and the results attained far exceeded what had been expected. The first went to a Milwaukee competitor, the second to a resident of Brooklyn, and the third and fourth to Boston architects. Outside the technical excellence displayed, the chief point regarded as solved by the competition is that of wedding beauty to utility. It was shown that it costs little or nothing more to build a water tower architecturally handsome than one phenomenally hidcous.

Monte Carlo outwardly is one of the most beautiful and attractive places in Europe, but more suicides occur there than at any of the capitals of Europe. The great gaming establishment is responsible for an untold amount of misery, and every gold piece of profit might almost be said to be wet with

The tradition that links the letter R and oysters together can be traced back at least as far as 1599, when Butler wrote in his "Dyet's Dry Dinner:" "It is unseasonable and unwholesome in all months that have not an R in their name to eat an oyster."

AN ANCIENT PYRAMID FOR SALE.

The Great Cahokia Mound Offered to the United States Government. Thomas T. Ramey, of Madison county, Ills., has a unique piece of property for sale and he wishes the United States government to become the purchaser. It is the great ar-

THE BIG MOUND AT CAHOKIA. tificial hill at Cahokia, in St. Clair county, Ills., which is the most stupendous memorial left by the prehistoric people called the mound builders. This hill has an altitude of 102 feet, its base covers sixteen acres and it contains at least 20,000,000 cubic feet of earth. Says Mr. Ramey in his letter to Senator Cullom suggesting the purchase of the gigantic pyramid by the government:
"It is a parallelogram with straight sides, the longer of which are north and south. The top of the mound is flat and divided into two parts, the northern end being four or five feet higher than the southern portion, the summit containing about one and one-half acres. On the southern end, some thirty feet above the base, is a terrace or apron containing nearly two acres of ground. In the middle of this terrace at the base of the mound is a projecting point, apparently the remains of agraded pathway to ascend from the plain to the terrace. On the western side, and about thirty feet above the southern terrace, is another terrace of somewhat less extent. The side of the mound below the western terrace is very irregular and forms projecting knobs. To the northeast corner of this large structure there seems to be a small mound attached. The remaining sides are quite straight. Cahokin is the largest pyra-mid in the world, surpassing the pyramids of Egypt in size."

An Interesting Extract from Advance Sheets of the April Century. Mr. E. J. Of an execution, of which

A SLAVE HUNTER "In this particular instance, the mother of chief having died, it was decided, as usual, to celebrate the event with an execution. At the earliest streak of dawn the slow, measured beat of a big drum announces to an what is to take place, and warns the poor slave who is to be the victim that his end is nigh. selected a suitable place for the ceremony procure a block of wood about a foot square The slave is then placed on this in a sitting posture; his legs are stretched out straight i posture; his legs are stretched out straight in front of him; the body is strapped to a stake reaching up the back to the shoulders. On each side stakes are placed under the arm-pits as props, to which the arms are firmly bound; other lashings are made to posts driven into the ground near the ankles and

"A pole is now planted about ten feet in front of the victim, from the top of which suspended, by a number of strings, a bambooring. The pole is bent over like a fishing rod and the ring fastened round the slave's neck which is kept rigid and stiff by the tension During this preparation a group of dancers surround the victim and indulge in drunken mimicry of the contortions of face which the pain caused by this cruel torture forces him to show. But he has no sympathy to expect from this merciless horde.

"Presently in the distance approaches company of two lines of young people, each holding a stem of the palm tree, so that an arch is formed between them, under which the executioner is escorted. The whole pro cession moves with a slow but dancing gait Upon arriving near the doomed slave all dancing, singing and drumming cease, and the drunken mob take their places to witness the last act of the drama.

"An unearthly silence succeeds. The executioner wears a cap composed of black cocks feathers; his face and neck are blacken with charcoal, except the eyes, the lids of which are painted with white chalk. The hands and arms to the elbow, and feet and legs to the knee, are also blackened. His legs are adorned profusely with broad metal ank lets, and around his waist are strung wildcat skins. As he performs a wild dance around his victim, every now and then making a feint with his knife, a murmur of admira tion arises from the assembled crowd. He then approaches and makes a thin chalk mark on the neck of the fated man. After two or three passes of the knife, to get the right swing, he delivers the fatal blow, and with one stroke of his keen edged weapon severs the head from the body."

The Fortune the First Consideration. If rich American girls are anxious to secur titled husbands, the impecunious descendants of the crusaders and the robber barons of the middle ages are not a wit behind in their desire to bring about a union of republican wealth with European rank. This was shown recently in the widely published exposure of the "International Bureau of Private Transactions, of San Francisco." The proprietor, Ludwig von Romayer, received hundreds of applications for wives from poor but noble foreigners, but before he had time to arrange any bargains and secure his fees the business went to smash and Romayer committed suicide. The eagerness of these titled chevaliers of industry to snap up unwise young women of fortune resembles nothing more nearly than the avidity of the shark. The only difference is that the prey, unfortunately, is too

A GROUP OF RARELY BEAUTIFUL MAIDS AND MATRONS.

The Loveliness of Three Charming Girls Contrasted with That of Three Married Ladies-Baltimore Is Like Paris in One

MRS. JESSIE TYSON. Although the Monumental City has numer ous superb beauties, there are a half dozen to whom society with common consent awards the palm. They are the three young matrons, Mrs. Jesse Tyson, Mrs. Alexander Brown, Mrs. Frank Brown, and the three maidens, Miss Adele Horwitz, Miss Rebecca Williams and Miss Lota Robinson. Other lovely Baltimoreans are Mrs. Alfred Ritchie, she who was Virginia Cabell, Richmond's famous beauty; Mrs. John Van Bibber, one time Mollie Lusby, with amber eyes and rich brown hair; Mrs. William Yates Ferot, brunette, and dashing Lillie May, once the fian-cee of James Gordon Bennett, and Louise Morris, the loveliest debutante of the past

Baltimore is like Paris in that young mar ried women rule society and receive the hom age of the tremendous swells, who pass the artless debutantes by. A young matron whom no maiden can rival is Mrs. Jesse Tyson. Tennyson sawno lovelier in his "Dream of Fair Women." As Miss Johns, of a family partician and old, she had hardly the sucsses of a modern belle. Every one knew

MRS. ALEXANDER BROWN. her to be wonderfully pretty, but she was shy, and it was not until her engagement to the wealthy bachelor, Mr. Jesse Tyson, was announced that they awoke to the fact that the loveliest maiden of the season was to be wed. Mr. Tyson was worth a million or two, and two generations of belles would willingly have laid their hearts at his feet.

Miss Johns was scarcely 18 when the marriage took place. There was a year's sojourn on the continent, and when a year ago Mr. and Mrs. Tyson returned to their stately home, Baltimoreans found that the bride was even lovelier than the debutante. Rather short, but with a perfect figure, an oval face, exquisitely modeled; masses of black hair, dark eyes, soft rather than sparkling; a mouth tender and wistful, of a manner matchless in its dignity—that is the picture of the young matron whom men admire and women commend.

Her voice has the frankness of a child's and the peculiar controlled quality of a high bred woman's. The picture of her given here is by a London artist and in it her chief beauties, color and expression cannot be the rare Ulrich Brunner rose, and her expres sion is at once modest and appealing.

It has been said that Baltimore's beautifu women look alike, either being fair and lily like or unfathomably brunette, was merander Brown, though not resembling Mrs.

Tyson in feature, produces the same effect on the eye, for they both have the same black hair, dark eyes and rich coloring. Mrs.
Brown has been married seven years and has two lovely little daughters. She was Miss Bessie Montagu, Baltimore born and bred, but many men outside her own city were her suitors, and it was said that two or three New York millionaires felt hagrined when they heard that the belle of Baltimore had chosen to marry in her own city. Mr. Alexander Brown is connected with the widely known banking house of Brown & Co., and is the only son of the senior member. Mrs. Alexander Brown looks like a girl of 18. Her figure is fairly perfect, her arms and throat being white, firm and rounded. She wears her black hair a la Bretonne, uncurled and shaped to the forelead. Not satisfied with dowering her with beauty, Nature has given her quick wit, and she is a most excellent dinner companion, quick as lightning in her repartee and—a strange quality in a woman—a good raconteur.

Mrs. Frank Brown, wife of the postmaster of Baltimore, has for several years been considered one of that city's prettiest women. She is of medium height, of a beautifully rounded figure, with a face fair, dimpled and humor loving. Some of the finest entertain-ments in Baltimore have been given at her magnificent homo on Charles street. She is shortly for Europe, where she will remain eighteen months.

The most talked of beauty in the Monumental City is Adele Horwitz. She has a reputation as assured as that of Marion Langdon or Sallie Hargous in New York, and she has won her laurels as the Baltimore beauty par excellence in Philadel-phia, Narragansett Pier and Bar Harbor. She is the only daughter of B. F. Horwitz, a prominent business man of Baltimore, and through her mother, who was the daughter of the world known physician, Dr. Gross, she s connected with the best Philadelphia and Kentucky families. She is tall, fairly slender, and royally carries a head of marvelous beauty on her white shoulders.

The coloring of that head is equal to its grace, for it is produced by the palest rose of the cheeks and the golden brown of the hair. Her color is never high, but always of that pale tint seen in the hedge rose. Eyes blue

MISS ADELE HORWITZ. small and a righte mouth make up the other attributes of the beautiful Miss Horwitz. She has the well groomed look of a high bred English girl, but dresses in the quite fetching ashion of a French maiden. Two years ago when she made her debut, even Baltimore was taken by storm, for her mother, a witty brilliant woman, gave a series of entertain nents in her honor.

There was a luncheon for ladies, a large theatre party the same night and a ba poudre the following evening, and by the three was Mile. Adele successfully launched. She was seen last winter at the Assembly in Quaker City, and was also one of the riders at the Dumblane hunt in Washington, where several little dinners were given in her honor A girl who is considered very lovely in Baltimore is Miss Rebecca Williams, the daughter of an old and wealthy family who have lived for half a century in a fine brown-stone on the historic Mount Vernon Place. Miss Williams has been an invalid for a year past, but her illness has only seemed to idealize and make her more lovely. She is of the MISS REBECCA WILLIAMS. second Baltimore type, that of the pale blonde. In addition to the beauty of soft blue eyes and fair hair, she has as lovely mouth and teeth as one ever sees and a peculiarly winning expression.

She is one of the few lovely American girls whom the great French portrait painter, Alexander Cabanel, consented to paint, and the picture used here is copied from it. At the time she posed for the portrait she was ill, and it shows her more fragile than she is, and with dark circles under the eyes. Miss Williams inherits her beauty, for a Healy portrait of her mother shows her to have been a rarely beautiful woman of the same soft, refined type as the daughter. Both her father and mother are dead, and it is through the former that she is related to the Bonapartes. A younger sister, Miss Charlotte, i counted among Baltimore's pretty girls. Her face is piquant and charming and she has an

Not strictly beautiful, but with an arch and vivacious manner that makes her particularly attractive, is Miss Lota Robinson, daughter of Mrs. John M. Robinson, one of the most famous society leaders Baltimore has had in many a day. Miss Robinson is tall, gracefully formed, and dresses in a style peculiarly becoming to a brunatte. She is a tan, graceitally formed, and dresses in a style peculiarly becoming to a brunette. She is a bit dashing and daring in her dress, but her conservative city seems to like the change from more demure beauties, and she is unifrom more denies.

His Early Education. A St. Paul merchant gives the following to a Pioneer-Press reporter as a reason why he cut a piece of goods in two and sold one portion at a high and the other at a low price: "Twentyfive years age I was a sub-clerk in a general store in Kalamazoo, Mich. The head salesman sent me down social leader. In forty-five minutes it came back from the house with an or-der to change it. What does that head salesman do but shake the tea out of the brown paper, do it up in silk tea paper, tie it with a colored cord and send it back to the lady. It staid this time, and she afterward told me that that was the kind of tea she al-ways wanted to fill her orders. That, my boy, was a part of my early edu-cation."

the greatest storm of abuse that ever poured some orderly sergeant of the regular army It was only a little after his entering on active military service that Schenck's critics original views. The general was engaged in securing possession of the Loudon and Hampshire railroad. At Vienna the train conveying his forces was fired upon, the engineer uncoupled the locomotive and ran away, and Schenck's handful of men had to face a band of very eager and active opponents. The truth of the matter, as afterward established, was that the combatants on both sides dis-

in number. For one he knew the man to be able, aggressive and brave. And again he red himself under great personal obli gation. It may not be generally known, but it is an actual fact that Mr. Lincoln gave Schenck the credit of first naming him for the presidency. In September, 1859, the former addressed a meeting at Dayton, O., on the politial issues of that period. Allusion eing made to the subject of the next presi dency, Mr. Schenck suggested "that if an honest, sensible man was want I, it would be well to nominate the distinguished gentleman from Illinois who had just addressed them. However, if the beginning of Schenck's military career was not glorious, either through lack of experience or want of oppor tunity, he showed conspicuous gallantry and ability later on. At the second battle of Bull Run, while in the thickest of the fight and urging his men forward, a ball struck his right wrist and his sword dropped from his hand. Says one of the historians of the war: "Soldiers still enjoy telling of the general's rage and fearful imprecations at the loss of his sword." He refused to leave the field until he had recovered it. The wound permanently injured his right arm, and for the remainder of his life Gen. Schenck wrote

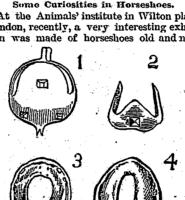

When minister to England Gen. Schenck became the target of a good deal of adverse comment because he was reported to have published a book on poker playing for the use of the English aristocracy. "Poker Bob," as he was afterwards called by his opponents, never took the trouble to deny the charge, but his friends claimed that he simply wrote out the rules of the game in com-pliance with the request of a lady. She had the manuscript put in type and issued a few copies of the pamphlet for private circula-life in absolute retirement. He gathered about him a few old friends, but cared to make no new ones. As one of his biographers says: "His enemies spoke of him as selfish; his friends called him whole souled, generous, big hearted, hospitable."

Some Curiosities in Horseshoes

Some of those displayed were the handiwork of prehistoric man, while others showed the latest developments of Nineteenth century ingenuity. The first illustration depicts: 1 the earliest nailless shoe, from a Roman camp near Mayence: 2. earliest form of shoe used in northern Europe, spiked top, from a Scandinavian tumulus; 3 and 4, two styles of Roman shoes of the time of the early Cæsars. In the second picture are shown: 1 and 2, varieties of the modern nailless shoe; 3, shoe with a rubber frog pad; 4, a non-slipping shoe.

The Buddhists in Burmah do not consider the question of expense in beau-tifying their temples. Here is a description of the new vane of the pagoda at Rangoon: The vane is about three by one and a half feet broad, and thickly crested with precious stones and lovely fans of the red Burmese gold. One ruby alone is worth 6,000 rupees, and there are several hundred rubies alone on this beautiful thing. On the tip of the iron rod on which works the vane is a richly carved and perforated gold ornament called the Semboo. It is somewhat egg shaped and a foot in height, tipped by an enormous diamond encircled by many smaller ones, crusted on like barnacles, All over this exquisite oval object are similar clumps of diamonds, no other stones being used for this part.-Chicago Times.

Anecdotes Which Show His Real Char-

Like all men of strong convictions, aggressive personality and extreme capacity for making warm friends or bitter foes, Gen. Robert C. Schenck, who died recently at Washington, was the object during his life time of much exaggerated praise and an equal amount of undue criticism. Perhaps upon his head fell just after President Lin-coln had commissioned him brigadier general of volunteers at the outbreak of the late civil war. Schenck was a civilian, a lawyer, a successful politician, an ex-diplomate; but of military affairs he knew nothing, and those opposed to him said so in plain terms. His appointment was denounced in one leading newspaper as an outrage on the soldiers, and it was suggested that he be turned over to and "made to drill like sixty for a month." found a new occasion for reiterating their

Dr. Roger Williams has made a careful examination of the hospital books, from which it appears that in ten years chloroform was administered at St. Bartholomew's 12,368 times with fatal results in ten cases, being about one in 1,236. The most important result of Dr. Williams'investigations, however. chloroform had been used during the same period there were only three deaths out of 13,581 instances. Dr. Williams tells us he has long been aware of the greater safety of ether, and he declares his belief that this is the conclusion towards which professional opinion is steadily moving.
