AN ECONOMICAL MAN.

He lived on thirty cents a day—Ten cents for milk and crackers, One cent for dissipation, and And two cents for tobacco.

And if he wished an extra dish, He'd take his pole and catch a fish.

And if his stomach raised a war 'Gainst his penurious habit, He'd go and kill a woodchuck, or And thus he'd live in sweet content On food that never cost a cent.

And, that he might lay by in bank The proceeds of his labor, He'd happen round at meals, the crank And then he'd eat enough to last Until another day had passed.

He bought no pantaloons nor vest, Nor rich, expensive jacket; He had one suit—his pa's bequest— He thought would "stand the racket."

He patched it thirty years, his true, And then declared 'twas good as new. He owned but one suit to his back, And minus cuffs and collar.

He died, and left his nephew Jack In some strange way, and he did not Anticipate such an easy victory.

"Certainly, were I married a dozen times I would hold no man captive against his will," Meta proudly answered.

"You will return to your mother's house, I suppose?"

A shade passed over Meta's face. "I do not quite know; that must depend on circumstances. Why should I return to my mother's house?"

"Oh, I merely wished to know what you decided to do," responded John, with affected carelessness.

"I shall not enlighten you, however," answered Meta. "It is not my custom to tell my plans to a stranger."

John looked at her in amazement. Was it possible his meek Meta had so much spirit?

"I am not your wife, sir; you have discharged me from the situation," she said coldly.

"What suggested that nonsensical idea, Meta?" answered John. "Separation from you would break my heart."

But the look in his eyes belied his words. "John, do you honestly wish you were single?" persisted his wife.

"Well, Meta, I don't like to be free for a while, if only as an experiment. What do you say to a separation?" he added with assumed carelessness.

Mrs. Selden looked bewildered. "Surely you are not in earnest, John?"

"Why not my dear? We shall not be the first people who have found perpetual marriage a failure."

He spoke lightly, but Meta, who knew him well, detected a firm purpose under his words.

"Nonsense, Meta! How like a woman that is—always jumping at conclusions! Who put that notion into your head? Some of your friends, I suppose. If a man holds five minutes' conversation with a woman he is in love with her, according to Madam Grundy."

"I know a great many unkind things are said of innocent persons. I have lately noticed a strange coldness in your treatment of me. Have I offended you in any way? Perhaps you are vexed because I have complained of your being late at lodge; but you must admit that twelve o'clock—"

"You could have come with me if you so desired."

"But I care nothing for lodge meetings; they don't interest me in the least," said John.

"I don't think you really wish to have me go with you. You showed me very little attention on the few occasions when I did accompany you there."

"Behave! that's only your jealous fancy. The fact is, Meta, we think alike on so few subjects that we are drifting completely apart; a term of separation would benefit us both."

Meta was deeply impressed by her husband's manner—something unusual with him.

"But what has changed you, John?" she presently asked.

"I cannot tell; I only know that I am unhappy at a time of married life. Our tastes are not congenial. I like society, you are fond of home. Perhaps I fail to appreciate your worth; but I was a stupid fellow to marry any one."

"You should have thought of that before," replied Meta. "When we were married I gave you my affection for ever, and supposed I should receive the same. Now you are saying that I am not your wife, and I am left alone."

"Well, when a man marries young he does not always stop to think whether the woman he has chosen may prove congenial. The worthy people you know, they were not fully developed when I married you."

"If they had been you would not have married me?"

"I did not say so, Meta, but I think it very doubtful."

Mrs. Selden was silent for a few moments. Surely no woman had ever more cause for thought than she at that hour.

"And so this is the end of your lodge meetings, and your knights and ladies of honor?" she cried at last. "Honor, indeed! You have yet to learn the first principle of matrimony, and you are not liking society. There you are in error; no one can more thoroughly enjoy mingling with refined, well bred people than I. But semi-public meetings of amusement-loving men and women, who assemble together on pretence of business, and that farce over, dance, or flirt, or play forfeits—yes, I have seen that sort of thing, and I despise it. Night after night I have sat here alone, while you were absent at one of your lodge meetings, until after midnight. I have reproached you, sometimes—I admit it. And I suppose this is the head and front of my offence."

Selden had grown pale during his wife's bitter speech. When she paused he said in a tone of repressed anger—

"You see I am right; our tastes are not congenial. The worthy people you sneer at are my very good friends, and in insulting them you insult me. The purity of their motives is too well established to be injured by anything an angry woman can say, however, so I need not undertake their defence."

"Do not," calmly returned Meta; "I assure you it would be time thrown away. Nothing can change my opinion of the lodge; I am too old to be deceived by people—probably owing to the effect of my early training. I never even knew such orders existed until I married you. In the circle in which I lived they were ignored."

"The most violent of them could not have angered John as did this quiet statement of beliefs and facts. He grew red with rage."

"Thank you for reminding me of your great concession in stooping to marry a middle class man like myself," he spluttered. "I'm sorry I don't appreciate the sacrifice more fully. Since the circle you speak of is so congenial to you, I need not reproach myself for asking you to return to it."

Meta drew a long breath. She was a woman, and had given way to anger as a woman will; but she was his wife, and she would not let him go.

"You insist upon a separation, then?" she faltered.

"Yes, for a year. In the interval I will not interfere with you nor you with me. Understand?"

"One would be very stupid if one did not understand such plain language; and with all my faults I don't think you can accuse me of stupidity."

"Oh, you are right enough," he responded sullenly, his vanity still smarting. "But that is not everything."

"Very well, then, I will agree to your wish, and give you your freedom. But first I want to ask a question: Haven't I always endeavored to make home pleasant, and been a loyal and loving wife?"

"He answered shortly. "The answer is yes. I wish to ascertain; I can now carry a clear conscience with me, and have no fear of remorse."

"And you will really consent?" John asked in some surprise, and did not anticipate such an easy victory.

"Certainly. Were I married a dozen times I would hold no man captive against his will," Meta proudly answered.

"You will return to your mother's house, I suppose?"

A shade passed over Meta's face. "I do not quite know; that must depend on circumstances. Why should I return to my mother's house?"

him. Finally he arose from his chair and pulled out his watch.

"Twenty minutes have passed," he ejaculated. "I will endure this no longer."

He opened the door, intending to cross the hall and enter the room adjoining, but stood rooted to the spot, scarcely believing the evidence of his senses. It was Meta's entreating voice that fell upon his ear.

"Must you go, Charlie?" she was saying. Selden listened eagerly for the reply.

"Yes; I am keeping your other caller waiting."

"Oh, that is of little consequence; he can wait or not, as he chooses," was the answer.

The moisture stood on Selden's forehead; he did not move; he felt he had been deceived.

"The gentleman is not in the habit of calling here," continued Meta, "and he won't feel very unhappy if he does not see me. We need not consider him."

Meta was furious. He did not know that the little scene was gotten up by the sole benefit by naughty Sue, who easily won Meta to her wishes.

"I will give her my opinion of a married life," he muttered, stepping back into the parlor and pacing the floor with long strides.

Presently Meta entered the room. John turned and gazed upon her; there was an angry gleam in his eyes which speedily softened, however. Instead of the demure little wife of a year ago, a saucy, smiling woman greeted him.

"I am sorry to have kept you waiting, John," she said, looking at her watch.

John felt it would not be safe for him to give an immediate answer; he was angry. Yet at that moment he felt more admiration for his wife than he had ever felt before.

"Meta," he said slowly and somewhat reproachfully, "you passed me in the street to-day without recognition."

"I did not see you," answered Meta. "It is not in the bond; I was free to be as strangers, you know. And speaking of that, you called me Meta just now; will you kindly address me by my name in the future?"

John was speechless. For a moment. "Really, Mrs. Selden—"

"Oh, no! Miss Winchester—if you please. I have resumed my maiden name, though as yet I have legal right to do so," she said, looking full into his angry eyes.

Up to that moment Selden had had no definite plan in regard to his wife; but now that she was slipping from him, he felt that life without her would be a burden, and was willing to make any concession to regain her favor.

BUCHANAN RECORD.

JOHN C. HOLMES, Editor.

THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1890.

The President has signed the World's fair bill, and now all Chicago has to do is to go ahead with his fair.

It is noted that of the thirteen Senators who voted against the Chicago world's fair bill, thirteen of them are from the south.

A bill appropriating $350,000 for the relief of the Mississippi flood sufferers has been passed by both branches of Congress and signed by the President.

A Denver man has a scheme for building a railroad system extending throughout South and North America, bridging Behring's Strait, and connecting Asia, Europe and Africa.

"What shall we do with our daughters?" is what Mrs. Mary Livermore is lecturing about. The country is filled with nice young men who are standing ready and more than willing to take them off from Mary's hands. She should not worry about it.

The Supreme Court has just rendered a decision setting aside the liquor law passed by the legislature last winter. The house passed the bill; the senate made nine amendments and returned it to the house which refused to concur in all of them. Conference committees were appointed and it was agreed to leave out some of these amendments. It was then engrossed and signed by all of the proper officers, with all of the senate amendments included. The law passed the retail beer tax at $300. A Democratic saloon keeper tendered the rent of the tax under the old law $300, and demanded a license, carrying the question to the supreme court, with the above result.

Three men have been arrested in Wisconsin for the theft of 2,000 chickens. There seems to have been an organized trust for the unlawful acquisition of fowls, and a system adopted was most carefully devised and successfully carried out.—Detroit Free Press.

Here is another evidence of the evil effects of the "robber tariff." Another trust formed on the basis of tariff on eggs. Of course the tariff is to blame for all trusts.

The application blanks for money orders, made by all post-offices in the United States, are printed in the Journal office at Laporte, Ind.—E.C.

If this be true, of what use is the government printing office which the people are taxed to support?—Enterprise.

So the postal cards are made at Castleton, New York, by a man who takes the contract to make the paper and print them cheaper than the government can buy the paper and print them. All right, isn't it?

The following, from Morehead, North Carolina, is a sample of the letters which Postmaster General Wannamaker has been receiving recently:

Sir: One of your "Boons" has been appointed a post office, and if you intend to have a "Coon" fill the office you had better have your eye on another one equally as capable, as the Present incumbent might possibly "disappear at any moment."—W.H. CARS.

A like warning was sent to United States Deputy Marshal Saunders of Florida a short time before he was murdered. So it appears to make but little difference whether the victim be a "Coon" or white man.

Congressman Burrows is entitled to a good share of the credit of placing sugar on the free list in the new tariff bill. When the house reported last December there were only three members of the ways and means committee in favor of free sugar, but Mr. Burrows and his associates were vigorous for removal of all the duty on sugar and when the bill was reported to the House seven of the eight Republicans on the committee were for free sugar. There is no reason why the people of this country should pay $50,000,000 annually to protect a purely local industry which can be equally well protected by a bounty of one cent a pound. It is really the crowning triumph of the bill, and Michigan's representative on the committee rendered excellent and appreciated service by his constant securing the much desired result.—Detroit Tribune.

Moral Weakness of Democratic Treasurers.

The Cleveland Record, moved by the recent appalling exhibit of embezzlements committed by the Democratic Democratic states, has examined the record of the County Treasurers in Ohio. It finds that since the organization of the state two cases of embezzlement by Republican County Treasurers have been reported, but are unaccompanied by substantial proofs. In looking up the Democratic defaulting Treasurers it found an embarrassing number of riches. The following is only a partial list, showing the amounts stolen by Democrats in recent years:

County	Amount	County	Amount
Adams	$15,000	Belmont	$15,000
Ashtabula	$50,000	Brown	$50,000
Cuyahoga	$50,000	Darke	$50,000
Franklin	$50,000	Hamilton	$50,000
Geauga	$50,000	Greene	$50,000
Lorain	$50,000	Madison	$50,000
Lucas	$50,000	Meigs	$50,000
Wayne	$50,000	Wood	$50,000

Every one of these Treasurers was a Democrat, and presumably a Democrat of average intelligence and good character, and yet not one of them could withstand the temptation to steal the people's money. The aggregate of the stealings are about $2,000,000, and it is only a partial list, it is remembered. Of course the amount seems small when it is compared with the huge stealings of State Treasurers or with the millions which were found to have been stolen from the National Treasury by Democrats in 1891. When one reflects, however, that these are the stealings of the Democratic County Treasurers of a single state, and what the appalling list would show if we had the record of the Democratic city and county thieves in all the states, it certainly offers food for very serious reflection. Of course Democrats do not all steal. Some do not have the chance. There are others who can resist temptation, but what is the subtle, mysterious influence in politics that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred leads the Democratic victim to kleptomania? It cannot be in the nature of the man himself, for in that case Republicans might be attacked equally with Democrats. It must be something in the politics, some demoralizing quality in its relations to the Government or in its associations and environments that makes it nearly impossible for a Democrat in an office of public trust not to put his hands into the treasury and filch from the people's money. The phenomenon opens a wide and curious field of investigation for experts in moral and political science.—Chicago Tribune.

Michigan, My Michigan.

On November 30, 1880, the funded and fundable debt of Michigan amounted to $2,388,343.75. Every dollar but $50,000 of that amount had descended to a Republican administration from the "good old Democratic days" so often referred to. The opening of the Democratic rebellion at that time created an emergency which the state was obliged to meet by the issue of other bonds, for war purposes, and two issues were made—one for arming and equipping troops, and the other for the payment of bounties to volunteers who went to the front to fill the quota demanded from Michigan for the defense of the federal Union. The bonds issued for war purposes aggregated $2,555,400 and increased the total indebtedness of the state to the amount of $4,943,743.75. Of the $2,555,400 of bonds issued for war purposes, about one-half were payable at the pleasure of the state. These were long since retired and the interest stopped. The remaining half were payable May 1, 1890, and bore interest at 7 per cent.

The sinking fund provided for the payment of the bonded debt of the state has been paid for ten years past, and efforts have been made to retire the bonds and save interest; but they commanded so high a premium on the money market that all could not be secured. Otherwise they would have been retired before maturity. The state officials, however, who have been (with the exception of governor one term) contracted by Republican administrations, pursued a policy of purchasing the state's bonds from time to time, and by this course interest has been saved to the amount of $1,890,581.02, divided as follows: Two million loan, issued in 1883 to take the old $5,000,000 loan of 1887, made for internal improvements, and matured in 1890, $1,750,000; war bonds (issued in 1865) $1,920,000; renewal loan, $18,000; temporary loan, $32,500. The total amount of the state's debt, including these debts kept tendered the interest of the state under the old law $300, and demanded a license, carrying the question to the supreme court, with the above result.

On Thursday, May 1st, the last of Michigan's bonded debt, amounting to $320,000, will mature, and the bonds will be called in and paid from the sinking fund, which has been so sacredly guarded for years in anticipation of this event. Michigan will then stand forth, almost unique in the sisterhood of this American union, with a happy, peaceful and intelligent population; with state institutions that have for years stood as models for other states; with an educational system that is unsurpassed; with a climate, soil, and natural and developed resources scarcely excelled by any state, and without a dollar of indebtedness.

This is the proud record of 35 years of unbroken Republican policy honestly carried out. It tells its own story. Has any state of this Union ever so prospered under a Democratic administration? It is a glorious demonstration of the soundness of Republican policy and principles, which every citizen of Michigan may point to with justifiable pride.

Michigan requires no change. Republicanism has placed her in the van of the galaxy of states, and secured for her people a position almost unparalleled, is good enough for Michigan in the future. It is good enough for Michigan in the future.

FROM GALEEN.

Mr. John Shook, of Buchanan, visited our village one day last week.

Miss Allen, of Chicago, held forth in the town hall last Wednesday evening. Subject, "What is a Christian."

Mrs. Chas. Clark, who has been spending some time with Mrs. J. Warren Wright during her recent illness, came home on Wednesday accompanied by Mrs. Wright, who has sufficiently recovered to pay her home a visit, though somewhat indisposed as yet.

Mr. Hiram Smith, having disposed of his property in this place to Mr. Henry Pether, of Niles, for a bakery, has gone to South Bend and engaged in another meat market.

Last Monday evening Miss Clara Wilson returned from Chicago, where she had been making a visit. Also combined business with it.

All persons take warning. We have a new man in this year, and Mr. Niles is sworn to do as he likes it is likely he will, let come what may.

There are only sixteen applicants for the position of Principal to Galien High school.

Miss Alta Harner is engaged as teacher in the Elm Valley school in Weesaw township.

Rev. L. Scott's horse moved to Coldwater, Mich., where he will reside for the future.

The party who reported that Mr. Ingalls was dead, better start another term, for the season, as Mr. Ingalls is able to be walking around.

A decided improvement in the weather since Saturday.

There was a great many people in town on Monday and business was booming.

It is rumored that the Congressional minister, Rev. M. Martin, will move to some other place the coming year. He will be greatly missed.

We hear that the Masonic "goat" and Guy E. Drew had a tussle on Monday evening, and we understand the "goat" had the best of it. Guy survived the conflict, for we saw him on Tuesday.

A sad accident occurred in the Whip factory on Saturday afternoon. Herman Kraft, a boy about 13 years of age, fell through the elevator shaft, a distance of 30 feet or more. He was unconscious for some time, but the strangest thing is that no bones were broken. The most serious thing so far as they can discover is the dislocation of one hip, although he was otherwise badly bruised. There is some hope of his ultimate recovery.

A Rev. Mr. Teywell, of London, Eng., who has been a missionary on the island of Jamaica, preached at the Christian chapel on Sunday morning, and in the evening gave quite a comfortable account of life in Jamaica.

New sidewalks in front of E. G. Eby's harness shop, the bakery and Mills & Anderson's store.

The public schools closed yesterday and everybody is sorry.

We understand that Mr. M. H. Nye has given up moving into town, but will remain in his home during the summer at least. We admire his judgment for he has a very pleasant home.

Mr. S. A. Valentine moved to his home in Stark county, Indiana, on Wednesday.

Mr. Benton Stange has moved to Avery.

Quite a number of our people congregate at the railroad crossing, to witness the fast train going west with its electric headlight.

If you would have your clothes that delicate clean white, so desirable, use Russ' Bleaching Blue.

A Decatur woman has drawn $800 in a lottery. The others who bought tickets and did not win have not been heard from.

A rich coal vein has been discovered in Saginaw county. The vein is reported from five to seven feet thick, covered by a heavy layer of solid rock.

Samuel Landis, of Byron, Kent county, is 80 years old, and his wife is 82. The octogenarian's children have been making it warm for the young wife, one son-in-law going so far as to thrash her with a rope.

George Sutton's barn, at Northfield, burned Tuesday, together with four horses, six cows, 30 head of sheep and a large amount of farm machinery. Loss about $5,000; partially insured.

The aggravating feature of the fire is that the tramps who set the blaze escaped with their lives.—Detroit Journal.

Workmen employed in digging a trench for the water works near the Ann Arbor city limits came upon the skeleton of an Indian, which bore evidence of having been there a great many years. With the body was found buried a large quantity of ancient pottery, most of which was broken by the blows of the pickaxes.

A sanctimonious looking fellow, representing himself to be the write-up man of Frank Leslie's Illustrated News, paper, has been doing Manistee and Petoskey. It is announced that the thing is a fraud and that the young man raked in about $1,500 from the merchants who were to figure prominently in the write-up.—Detroit Journal.

W. J. Hampton, a merchant at Tip-top, went to New York recently and there bought $500 worth of "green goods," his purpose being to inflate the currency in his immediate neighborhood. However, when the "goods" came it was the same old story—sawdust. Hampton couldn't stand the loss very well, and he reported to the sheriff of Lenawee county that he had been robbed. An investigation failed to work satisfactorily and Hampton made a written confession of his crookedness.—Detroit Journal.

John Handy, living near Shepherd, received a note from his neighbor, James Vining, with instructions that it should not be opened until 10 o'clock at night. Vining was suspicious and opened the note, and its contents showed that Handy proposed suicide. Vining at once repaired to the old man's home and found him just succumbing to the effects of morphine. He was walked around the country until the effects were worked off and he is all right now. Handy had built a coffin and dug a grave, both of which are dead stock now.—Detroit Journal.

The trouble into which the patrons of industry of Montclair have been drawn is this: In March an agent was sent to Rochester, N. Y., by a committee of six members from the Montclair lodge to get a market and the highest price for their potatoes. The agent was doubly cautioned before going to make no bargains except with the consent of Secretary Backus. The agent received a bid from Farrand Bros. and wired Backus for his consent, which was refused a few hours later. In the meantime the agent signed the contract before he received a reply. Farrand Bros. at once sent men out contracting for the sale of the potatoes at an advance of 20 cents per bushel. When Backus refused to send the potatoes at the stipulated price, Farrand Bros. brought suit against the member of the committee in United States court, claiming a damage of 20 cents per bushel on 10,000 bushels.—Detroit News.

THE Mirror is positive that Niles will be made the division point on the Michigan Central road, and that soon. We trust he may not be mistaken.

A SON was born at the home of Supervisor Beistle, Tuesday. Also on the same day a daughter at the home of David Montgomery. All doing well.

WILL U. MARTIN is now in the city and will remain only a day or two longer. Any orders for tuning and repairing pianos or organs should be left at John Morris' store, at once.

THE deep gutter which crosses Front street at the foundry, should have a tile laid in it and be filled up to a level of the street at either side. We believe this has been referred to before.

A monthly agricultural paper of sixteen pages, to be known as the Industrial Gazette, by the Gazette Publishing Company, is to be published in this place. The first issue is to appear about May 15.

THE new locomotive on the St. Joseph Valley road is a great improvement over those had before. It will take two cars over the entire road without stopping to take breath or spit on its hands.

I DESIRE hereby to return my heartfelt thanks to friends and neighbors for the sympathy and assistance rendered me in my bereavement in the death of my wife.

JAPHET GODFREY.
ATTORNEY A. A. Worthington struck a rich bargain in the law library of the late James Brown, of Niles. The library contains over 600 volumes and was bought by Mr. Worthington for $200.

SERVICE will be held next Sunday at the church of the Larger Hope, morning and evening, conducted by Miss Allen. Morning subject, "The Will of God." Evening subject, "Seeking and Finding." All are invited.

MR. J. L. RICHARDS has taken a contract for the pig factory to manufacture 354,000 straps for a horse collar factory. He says it will take about $1,800 worth of leather, or the skins from nearly 200 steers to do the job.

J. L. RICHARDS is building a barn and otherwise improving his property, on Front street, if the cutting of a driveway through the nice lawn of his front yard may be called an improvement.

THE remains of Miss Mattie Bacon, of Niles, who succumbed by drowning in the lake in Chicago a few weeks since, were discovered a few rods out from the pier Tuesday forenoon, and were brought to Niles Tuesday evening for interment.

MR. T. C. ELSON has received a nicely painted sign for his carriage and cart business, painted by his son in Dakota, and will soon be in place over the door of his carriage rooms. Mr. Elson is selling a large number of carriages and carts.

MR. SAMUEL CHUCE received a telegram from South Bend yesterday afternoon, announcing the death of his granddaughter, the two-years-old child of Mrs. Amos Roberts. The remains were brought to this place to-day for burial.

THE paint brush has extended its work to the S. W. Redden building, and will cover the Reynolds building, occupied by Treat & Godfrey, Roe Bros. block and Dr. Roe's block, and perhaps others. It makes a great improvement.

UNION CITY's defective sidewalks resulted in the an accident and a $3,000 verdict. Sixty new sidewalks are now being laid. Buchanan had the same kind of experience, yet she has poorer sidewalks and more of them than ever before.

EARL WRIGHT has been sent to Ionia for three years, for his friskiness with the money and valuables belonging to Samuel Weaver and family. The greatest surprise to the young man will be the work he will have to do for the state while there.

THE West Michigan depot in St. Joseph is soon to be moved to a point nearer the railroad bridge across the harbor, placing the new passenger house close to the boat docks, and making it convenient for the transfer of passengers between the railroad and boats.

THE following Berrien county old soldiers have been granted pensions since our last issue: Sylvester R. Whipple, Niles; Nathan V. Lovell, Eau Claire; James Wagner, New Troy; Wm. H. Cook, Bainbridge. Reissue and increase, Wm. C. Eby, Niles. Increase, Louis Bell, St. Joseph.

MR. GEORGE ROBINSON, of Vinton, Iowa, and his sister, Mrs. Wm. Reynolds, from Nebraska, who have been here some time, started for their homes yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Reynolds is accompanied by their mother, Mrs. John Buckles, who will spend the remainder of her life with them.

JOHN HAGLEY, an old resident of this vicinity, died at his home in Weesaw township, Friday forenoon, after a short sickness, resulting from the bursting of a blood vessel within the brain. Mr. Hagley was fifty-five years of age, and leaves a widow and two children.

THE "nibbler" is the man who enters a store, runs his fingers into every sugar barrel, then goes to the cheese and cuts off a slice, grabs a few crackers, and perhaps before he makes up his mind to buy a quarter's worth of something, he has eaten up the profits on more than twice that amount. These characters are a pest to business men, and are to be found in any town.

THE Willsons have been conducting an interesting series of revival meetings in this place during the past two weeks. They were started in the opera house, but owing to what seems to be an unwarranted scare about the safety of the opera house with a crowd in it, they were held in the Oak Street Advent church.

MR. CAROTHERS is making more improvements in and about the hotel than is being done by nearly all the balance of the town. The latest is to clean up the back yard of the rubbish which has been the sole occupant there for several years, and it over, arrange flower beds, a fountain, a fish basin for gold fish, and numerous other changes.

FIRE was started in the house next east of the wagon factory, occupied by Ed Stone and family, Monday evening, and did something over $100 damage to clothing, household goods and building. There was no insurance on either house or contents. The fire originated in a closet, and the cause is not accounted for. The fire company was promptly on hand and stopped the fire.

Mrs. H. HOWE, daughter of Samuel Grace, died at the home of her sister in South Bend, Saturday, after a short illness. The remains were brought to this place for burial by the side of her husband in Oak Ridge cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Frye in the Evangelical church Tuesday afternoon, and was quite largely attended.

TO THE PASTOR AND MEMBERS OF THE OAK STREET ADVENT CHURCH, GREETING.—We, the members of the quarterly conference of the United Brethren Church, passed a resolution thanking the friends for so generously offering us a place to worship, while our church was vacated for much-needed repairs.

BUCHANAN, April 25, 1890.

THERE is a movement on foot to build a custom flouring mill of about the same capacity as the one burned for Rough & Fox, a few months since. It is to be hoped that the project may not end in talk, as there are few things that go farther toward the prosperity of a town, situated as Buchanan is, than to have more than one place where the farmers may have their grinding done. There is certainly no lack of idle water power here for such a mill, and it should be improved.

ON Tuesday evening, May 6, at 7:30 p. m., there will be held at the Presbyterian church the installation service of the pastor elect, Rev. J. F. Loba, of the First Presbyterian church of Kalamazoo, will preach the sermon, Rev. Otis A. Smith, of Frankfort, will give the charge to the people, and Rev. J. G. Lowrie, of Niles, will deliver the charge to the pastor. These speakers are energetic, practical and interesting. The public is cordially invited to attend the service.

HILL'S CORNERS, Mich.,

ED. RECORD.—Allow me to say through your columns that the item in the Palladium of three weeks ago, which you declare to be false, I am not responsible for, as I know not who wrote it. Allow me to say also that none of our farmers complain of Mr. Bishop, but we do not like to be subjected to the underhanded penny games practiced by the millers at Buchanan, in the buying of grain.

OTIS STERN.

DIED.—Mrs. L. Godfrey died, at her home in this place, Friday morning, April 25, 1890. She was born in Dansville, N. Y., March 29, 1857, and came with her parents to this county in 1862; was married to Japhet Godfrey in November, 1876. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. H. Buttelman, at the house on Sunday, April 27, and the interment made in Hamman cemetery. The day before her departure to the haven of rest, her pastor said, "Is Christ precious to you in your afflictions?" to which she replied with an emphatic "Yes." Feb. 10, 1890 she, with her husband, united with the M. E. church in this place. She leaves a husband and four small children to mourn her loss.

EAST LOS ANGELES CITY, Cal.,

APRIL 24, 1890.

EDITOR RECORD.—I see in the Record of the 17th, Mr. Bonfrey has a cow, six years old, having seven calves in four and one-half years, and selling over $300 of milk. That is very good for Michigan, no doubt. Now I will tell you what California can do. Mr. Adams, of East Los Angeles, has a cow that has given birth and raised thirteen calves in four years, and the last year the same cow gave birth to four calves, and gave 9,946 pounds of milk during the year. How is that for California. I have lived right here for five years, and know this to be the fact. Yours respectfully,
JOHN L. BAILEY.

ORRIN MONTAGUE'S house, three miles north of this place, was burned this afternoon. We are unable to learn particulars before going to press.

SOME time during Friday night the shoe store on Front street, of John Hastings was entered by a burglar and a number of call skins and perhaps a few pairs of shoes were stolen, all valued at about $40. An entrance was effected at the rear end of the store. No clue.—Niles Star.

THREE two of our local sports were out on a special expedition after dark, and coming down the river above Broadway bridge, so intent were they on prodding everything in the fish line in sight that a good sized snag was run into by the boat, which capsized, and several fine fish that had been speared, the occupants and all went out into the cold, cold water, and a bath was taken of that was not appreciated. The boys are good swimmers and went ashore, a little the worse off, for their expected good time.—Niles Star.

J. M. SOWLE has purchased 1400 acres of land in Arkansas, and is preparing to move his mill there. In the meantime stone, brick and slate are daily arriving on the ground for the brick veneer cottages, of which he will build, this summer, on the ground now occupied by this mill and lumber yard.—Dowagiac Cor.
