HELEN'S HOUSEKEEPING

CARLES LA CAMPANNA CAMPANIO

Chicago Herald.

"Mother writes that Helen will start for Minnesota on Monday next," said Alfred, folding the letter that Neighbor Wilde had just tossed in at the door

BY D. A. II.

"Indeed!" I did not say "I am glad," for that would have been fals. I was afraid of my sister-in-law. We were living on a homestead in a very different manner from any thing to which she had been accustomed. I was not strong, and it was impossible to keep my work up nicely at all times It was harvest time, and the extra labor kept me busy from morning till night. Mother Grafton and Helen are the most perfect of housekeepers. They have a large, roomy house on the outskirts of a village, furnished, as good eastern dwellings are, with every convenience for Our house is a one-story affair with four rooms. We have no cistern, no closets, in fact the house was thrown together hurriedly but Alfred thinks he will be able to build a larger one next fall, so as Neighbor Smith says, "We're jest stayın', not exactly livin', Helen contributes articles to various periodicals on "Home Topics," and Beware of Counterpairs made in St. Louis. judging from their tenor she is a veritable "Miss Ophelia" of Uncle Tom's Cabin fame, in her contempt of "shiftlessness." What would she think of poor me? I sometimes failed to wash on Mondays, and often my ironing would drag all through the week. Sometimes I could not keep the children or myself in the fresh, immaculate costumes in which Helen's heroines always figured. I would not have had Alfred know how I felt for the world.

I determined that the house should be in order when she arrived, at all events, but, alas, my plans went all I began to think with the "aglev." Widow Bedott that "we poor mortals can't calkerlate." for the day before she came, Mrs. Kirby visited me. She came at eight in the morning and staved until late in the evening. Only five of her numerous olive branches accompanied her but I thought they would drive me crazy. They are surely the noisiest, rudest, most meddlesome children I ever saw! Tramp, tramp, tramp, up stairs, down stairs, through kitchen and dining room all day long went sixteen muddy feet! I dared not check my three little ones for Mrs. Kirby is very sensitive and would have resented my interference with my own little ones as whipping hers over their shoulders. It was a damp day, and the rich, black, tenacious Minnesota soil lay in little heaps on the chair rugs, on the carpet, and my clean kitchen floor was a "sight to behold." The meddlesome young torments ransacked every thing; my work-basket was upset, books and papers scattered here and there; and I, looking on, dared not open my lips or even look my displeasure. Mrs. Kirby is a good neighbor in times of sickness and I owed her a heavy debt of gratitued for nursing me through a fever, otherwise, repears I could not have otherwise, perhaps, I could not have borne so much annoyance from her children.

I was so worn out at night that I could not rest, and awoke with one of my terrible headaches. It was a dreary task to restore my rooms to any thing like decency, feeling so giddy and sick as I did. Alfred returned from the station with Helen before I was half through with my scrubbing. I had not changed my dress which was soiled and torn, my hair, which is rather fluffy, had been blown about my face as I had rushed hurriedly in and out of the house without stopping to don my sunbonnet.

Helen gave me a sisterly kiss and her manner was bland, but I knew she was mentally ejaculating, "Shiftless!" as her eyes wandered from my sloyenly figure to the disordered room. If I could have stolen away and had a good hearty cry it would have been a relief. As it was, I tried to smile and speak cheerfully, eyen after Alfred announced that he had two extra hands in the harvest field and that they would expect a lunch at ten o'clock.

I was obliged to excuse myself and return at once to the kitchen. The extra work upset my plans for dinner, and in the midst of my perplexities Nellie cut her finger and I had to take her up and "baby" her a little. One calamity seems always to follow another, my bread burned slightly and the steak was somewhat overdone in consequence of Nellie's interruption. I rose half an hour earlier than usual the next morning, just as the August skies flushed with the first pink dawn, in order to gain time so that I could take Helen to drive. Alfred could not leave the field, and I wanted her to see something of our pretty, pastoral scenery, just then at its best. Helen was profuse in her offers of assistance and did all I would permit her to do. There never was a more companionable person than my sister-in-law, and I would have enjoyed her society thoroughly but for the feeling that she noted all my deficiencies. Once or twice I fancied she was on the point of giving me a "real good talking to". She found an opportunity after she had been with us a week. "Have you taken up a special course of reading, Alma," she asked one day. I replied that I had not, indeed it seemed almost impossible to find time for the reading of our newspapers and an occasional new book.

"You do some fancy work, I sup-

"No. very little," I confessed. "My dear Alma," she began, in her soft, sweet tones. "I would not wound you willingly, but don't you think that by systematic management you could find time for reading and an occasional piece of fancy work? Don't think me unkind, dear, you will forgive me if I offer you a few suggestions. Now, suppose you were to make a program for each day and carry it out strictly. You washed on Wednesday this week; now, mother and I invaribly wash on noon. And, dear, you really should deyote more thought to your personal ap-mother to assist, while every thing here dress to suit your taste if I could find wish you could be placed in my posi-tion for one week, Helen, only one

I demurred at the plan, but she was obstinate, and on Monday morning she stood at the wash tub in a neat, dark print with a linen collar fastened at her throat by a tiny crimson knot of ribbon. My sister-ip-law was an esthetic soul. She looked charming in her simple suit, but I thought with a smile of malicious pleasure that the collar would be pretty limp before noon, with the thermometer in the nineties. She looked a little aghast at the heap of soiled clothes on the floor.

"Alma, how very dirty these things are!" she exclaimed. "The children's especially; and these sheets!" holding out a pair for my inspection. "Those are from the hired man's bed," cleanly,"

"But you or Alfred should talk with him in regard to his habits. I do not see why you allow him to sit at the table with your family. He is positively disgusting."

"He is a very independent young man, and if we dared to criticise his manners or ask him to sit at a separate table, we would be minus help at a season of the year when we needed it most; and the neighbors, how they would talk! No, Helen, it would never do for us to banish our help from the Helen had barely filled her first boiler with clothes when a carriage rolled up the lane. I saw it from the sitting room and rushed excitedly into the kitchen, exclaiming, "We must put away this washing at once! The Bur-

"Certainly. The Burleighs are south-ern people. They live in that pretty house on that great farm we passed in our drive yesterday. The ladies know nothing of work, but they are charming people. Do run up stairs and dress They are used to seeing me in the kitchen, but I want them to see you at your best."

I "hustled" the tubs into the cellar and met my visitors in the sitting room. Helen came down looking every inch a lady, and we all chatted cosily for an hour. Helen obstinately insisted on getting dinner, but I would not she borrowed it last Friday. And Alfred forgot to bring home the vanilla extract I ordered, oh, dear! But never pudding, and some berry pies for dessert; with green corn and lima beans, and our light bread and good butter." "But we haven't any steak, and it's too late to kill a chicken!"

My sister-in-law was hardly equal to the situation. 'Fried ham will do. You know we are so far from town that we cannot

She recommenced her washing on Tuesday, rather late, as it was a pet hobby of hers to have the kitchen in apple-pie order before commencing a more arduous task. The day was intensely hot, the wind blew and did not look over clean, her hair was disordered and her face was actually dirty, for our much-lauded soii, when borne about by the wind, is as streamlets down her cheeks. was inexorable. The washing over, she donned a light gingham, and with hair re-arranged and her face cooled to its natural hue, looked very nice and pretty. I would help her regardless of her protests, and together we succeeded in getting a nice dinner. Helen was not herself while Mr. Woodbury remained, and I knew she felt relieved when he took his departure. My mortification at the awk-ward episode of the morning was quite equal to hers. We had cherished a secret hope, Alfred and I, that these kitchen for a cookey for one of the babies. "Do you associate with people of that class? I suppose so, for you seemed quite delighted when you met them at the door. That horrid old woman with her pipel ugh! And those fat, dirty bables. And they're so offensively familiar. Why do you submit to such an infliction? I would not have asked them to remove their wraps -sunbonnets."

"Alfred is a candidate for represenknow," I answered. "Were I to treat these people coldly it would affect his popularity with that class, a large one in this yicinity. I don't like to be hypocritical, dear, but I want Alfred to be elected. It might prove a stepping stone to some higher office. Such visits are an annoyance, but in a new country one must submit to many things which are unpleasant."

I had touched a venerable point with Helen. She was not satisfied that Alfred should "hide his light under a bushel," leading the quiet, plodding life of five years past. So she made herself agreeable to my guests, talking quite learnedly of the crops, admiring the old lady's blocks and giving the younger helpful advice in regard to coloring and striping her carpet. "Yer sister-in-law's a right peartgal," the old lady confided to me. "I 'lowed she might be stuck up, but la! she's jest ez common's can be."

Thursday two girls came to be instructed in the intricacies of the Kensington stitch, for the fame of my sister-in-law's wonderful fancy work nad spread through the neighborhood. Friday afternoon the new Methodist preacher and his wife came, stopping with us until the Sabbath. It was rather late on Saturday evening when Helen placed the last piece of ironing on the clothes bar. I had just finished scrubbing the kitchen floor, by the way. I forebore to make any sarcastic remarks upon the success of my sister's experiment. She looked so tired, poor girl, that I pitied her and forgave her for the criticisms which had wounded me so.

"Alma," she burst out suddenly, as we seated ourselves for a little rest, "can you forgive my foolish, unkind remarks? You are right. I knew nothing of the hard work, the annoyances and discomforts of life in this new western country. You're a dear, brave little woman, and I only wonder how you have lived through five years of such grinding toil with so little to cheer and enliven it. It's a shame that Alfred has allowed you to perform all this drudgery alone. He must hire a girl for you."

My husband, obtuse in some things as he is acute in others, was greatly astonished when Helen depicted in graphic words the hardships which fell upon me. He looked troubled, as she compared my pale face and thin form with the rosy countenance and plump figure of his bride of five years ago. had long cherished a little bard feeling against Alfred, because he had failed to notice that household cares were bearing too heavily upon me. I had never complained; for I thought, "If he loves me, why can he not see how tired I get? Why is he so indifferent?" I think many women work beyond their strength, bearing fatigue as well as pain, silently, yet cherishing hard thoughts of the husbands who suffer them to bear such burdens. A girl was soon domiciled with us, one with stout, brawny arms and a willing spirit. Helen and I assisted in the lighter and finer work, gaining abundant leisure for sewing and fancy work, for reading, walking and driving. We were not raided quite so much by visitors, as often we were fortunately away before they could put in an appearance. Helen insisted that the girl ish bloom was returning to my cheeks, and that I grew younger every day.

She writes for the household magazines yet, but instead of her former severe denunciation of women who fail to do an unlimited amount of. housework, and fill in the interstices with reading, fancy work and music, she offers some really helpful suggestions to the large class of overworked, unappreciated wives and mothers. She will soon be married to Mr. Woodbury, for, as Mrs. Kirby says, "A bad beginning makes a good ending." his wife she will probably be spared such trials as Inhave borne, but I think she will never forge and round experiment of housekeeping on a west-

One of the earliest settlers of Livingston county, Missouri, has for twentyfive years been the victim of a queer hallucination that has kept him confined to his bed. In 1865, during a slight illness, he was seized with a fear that he would die of heart disease if he attempted to stand up or rise his head above a certain level. Every possible means was resorted to by his family to out success. He stubbornly stuck to his couch, and refused to be coaxed or frightened out of it. On one occasion his wife had a lot of straw piled near the house and then set on fire. The stirred out of bed.

The Persecuted Chinaman.

We add our protest to others against the Chinese census bill which has passed the House of Representatives, and is pending in the United States Senate. This bill requires the Superintendent of Census to give to every Chinaman in the country a certificate, which, after ninety days from the date of the beginning of the enumeration, shall be the sole eyidence of his right to remain in the United States, and in the absence of which he shall be liable to deportation or to imprisonment for five years. We are glad to see that the committee of the Senate proposes to omit the clause making the right of a Chinaman to remain in this country dependent upon the certificate. But this is only a mitigation of the wrong threatened by this bill. We do not deny the right of the nation to sift out, or even to exclude by proper legislation, imigrants whose coming the nation believes to be dangerous to its well-being. But, the Christian Union says, to select a certain class who have come, and put them under special restriction and requirements and render them subject to exile from the land of Tobacco.

The amount of tobacco annually consumed in the United States is estimated by an apparently competent au thority of 310,000,600 pounds. Seven ty million pounds are utilized in the production of domestic c!gars; 222,-000,000 pounds of chewing and smoking tobacco are consumed; $,000,000 pounds are used in the manufacture of snuff; 6,000,000 pounds are required in the production of cigaretts; and 4,000,-000 pounds of cigars are imported This would make an average annual consumption of five pounds for every person in the country. But as not more than one-fifth of our population use tobacco, it follows those who do, consume, on an average, twenty-five pounds each per annum. Opinions differ as to whether this article should be designated a luxury or a necessity. In speaking of the cost of the tobacco habit, an exchange says: If the tobacco users of the United States would abstain for a period of two years from the chewing, smoking, and snuff-taking habit, and place the money they would spend for tobacco in that period in a common fund, there would be enough money in the fund to almost wipe out the entire national debt, and five years abstaining would give the head of each family in the United States enough money to invest an eighty acre homestead farm in the far Western states and territories; or it would give us a navy of fifty firstclass war vessels, fully equipped, and create a fund that would man and maintain them and the Navy Department for at least twenty-five years. It can thus be seen what is the mag-nitude of the tobacco trade of the United States, and what a milititude for a habit which gives them so much consolation and comfort, if nothing else.—The Price Current.

Odds and ends of uniforms were issued these extemporized companies, and some ludicrous effects in attire was the result. I remember, the writer adds, the trousers assigned me had one leg three inches shorter than the other, and I have often felt that the wear and tear of feeling I suffered because of my diversified appearance ought to warrant my application for what I would call a pentionette. THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1890. Some years ago a few Chinese pheasants were imported into Oregon as a game novelty. They have increased and multiplied so rapidly as to become a nuisance, and farmers are killing them in spite of all game laws. A white bull dog had a number of savage fights in South Bend last week, and was afterwards shot a tew miles south of that city, having every symptom of rabies. There is considerable anxious watching in South Bend for symptoms of rabies in the pet canines of the city.

The latest from the chivlarous south is that Mr. Rich, a Boston traveling man who sells a patent smoothing iron to colored washer women, had been given a flogging by a mob of masked men in Laurens, South Carolina, and all because his customers are among the negroes and he talks to them.

Senator Beck had hardly been cold in his coffin before a spirited contest for his seat was set up in Kentucky. There is much uncertainty coupled with the contest at present, but the outlook is that congressman J. G. Carlisle will get the place. He is the party's leader in the house of representatives, and the democrats may conclude that they do not want to spare him from that place, Cleveland is beginning to conclude that he is like the Maine farmer's calf. If given enough rope he would hang himself. He has been given plenty of rope by the reporters and is beginning to feel the coils tighten. So in the last interview attempted the reporter was told "Get out of here," as soon as he had made known his business. That ended what might have been on eloquent discourse upon economic questions, given in Mr. Cleveland's most lucid language.

The friends of the Atlanta (Ga.) University have made an appeal to the public for aid to enable this institution to continue its work during the coming year. Because of the presence of a few white pupils in the college, children of instructors, the State of Georgia has withdrawn its annual appropriation of $8,000, the trustees having nobly refused to violate agreements made in the foundation of the university by recognizing any color line in the admission of students. As it has most wholly on voluntary contributions the loss of this appropriation seriously cripples it. It has over 600

If C. A. Pillsbury, the great Minne-apolis miller, is reported correctly, within four or five years, at most, foreign markets will have ceased to exercise the least influence over the wheat crop of these United States, even admitting that they do now. Mr. Pillsbury calls attention to the fact that the maximum acreage of wheat was reached during the five years ending in 1880, and the increase was about 44 per cent. During the next four years the increase was less than 4 per cent and in 1889 there was a decrease of 3.4 per cent. In this country consumption increased from eight to ten million bushels an nually against a decreasing supply. Mr. Pillsbury does not regard India as a competitor, as the crop is uncertain there. Russia is our only formidable competitor. He thought the yield of Dakota and Minnesota might be doubled, and believed that within five years more wheat would be ground in Minneapolis at one dollar a bushel than under that figure.—Lansing Re-

Whatever estimate is placed on the effect of the McKinley tariff bill by their free trade allies in this country, the British manufacturers well understand that the measure is not framed in their interests. The Birmingham Post says:

The bill has yet to pass the ordeal of Democratic criticism, but as the Demo-crats are in a minority they are not likely to effect any further material mountain in it; and if the measure lief which it can give to English steel rail producers will not much exceed $4, or 16s per ton. * * * In other lines our position is likely to be worse under the new bill than under the old one, and our manufacturers of woolens, worsteds, carpets, etc., can hardly fail to suffer severely under the augmented duties recommended by the ways and means committee.

Exactly. The Birmingham editor understands that the reduction of the duty on steel rails will be an advantage to English manufactures while the increase of tariff on woolen goods will be injurious to British interests.—Detroit

Another Democratic county treasurer has joined the long procession of those who couldn't square their accounts. The political upheaval in Delaware brought a Republican treasurer into office in Sussex county. He proceeded to "examine the books." The examination showed that his Democratic predecessor had received $82,822 for which he was entirely unable to account. Besides this a thorough investigation recently concluded shows that under the odious assessment and election laws, by which the Democrats have yearly disfranchised Republican voters, the county has lost $33,710.76 in taxes. Overcharges of $13,606.97 were paid for collecting the taxes. The deficit, the loss in taxes and the overcharges give a total loss of $84.104.44. Had the money collected been properly applied the county would have been saved the sum of $24,480 in borrowed money and interest. In other words, the county lost $108,620.44 in 18 years of Democratic control. Other southern counties that have long been under Democratic rule might find it to their advantage to "turn the rascals out" and let the Republicans "examine the hooks."—Detroit Tribune.

Inter-State Traffic in Liquor.

The full text of the decision of the Supreme Court in the "original package" case clears away a number of incorrect opinions which had been formed on the basis of the abbreviated reports sent by telegraph. The original opinion of the Tribune, however, that the ruling related only to the right of individuals to secure liquor for their own use and did not afford saloonkeepers any shelter from prohibitory or high license penalties, is now shown to be correct in every particular. In endeavoring to protect freedom of interstate commerce the Judges have gone no further than was necessary, and have taken care to lay down no doc-ive liquor laws of the states. Individuals who think the "original package" decision will permit them to engage in the sale of liquor without regard to state laws may find themselves in serious trouble.

cision gave the impression that the court had over-ruled the doctrine established in the original "license cases" forty years ago. Such is not the fact. The old doctrine that a resident of a state could not import liquor and sell it even in the original package unless permited to do so by state law is left unchanged, but the court now holds that the rule does not apply to a "nonresident importer." It is for the state to say whether its citizens may manufacture or traffic in liquor. The provisions respecting inter-state commerce do not apply until the article is manufactured and placed in the original package for shipment, and the power of the United States then goes with it only until it reaches the hands of the purchaser. Liquor manufactured law-fully in any state is a legitimate article of interstate commerce, and the producer has a right to ship it to a purchaser in any other state, but when once delivered it is subject to local law. The privilege of importation and sale is secured only to "the foreigner or non-resident importer." This is as far

Practically the decision of the Supreme Court means that individuals living in prohibition states can get liquor from other states for their own use, but not for sale. It is only the outside brewer or distiller who is permitted to sell in the original package, but he cannot if forbidden by state law dispose of liquor to be drank on the premises. If, however, the Prohibitionists desire to abandon their old fight against the saloon and attack liquor-drinking as wrong under all circumstances, and thus attack the individual, they must make a new issue. The present prohibitory laws were adopted in the belief that they were directed against the saloon as a rescrt and a place for tippling, treating, and excessive drinking, but it was not understood that the purpose was to prevent the use of wine or beer on private tables. With anti-dramshop laws the recent decision does not interfere. It protects liquor only while it remains in the "innocuous desuetude" of the original package, but from the moment the keg is tapped or the cork drawn local law prevails. The transfer from the original package to the human stomach is a matter to be regulated by state law exclusively. While the United States guarantees the right to import the state can tax the rental traffic high or low or forbid the sale in dramshops or not as it sees fit.—Chicago Tribune.

No organizations in the United States have multiplied more rapidly in the past ten years than the sick-benefit, funeral-aid, death-benefit, and other kindred societies.

As they are generally confined to those who are in the humbler walks of life, the good they have done is incalculable, carrying substantial aid to thousands of stricken families and inspiring those who are fortunate enough in being members with a courage which might not exist in their hearts without them. The members of these organizations will be glad to learn that Hon. Robert P. I know the noise she created in getting into this receptacle for sweets must have been heard several rows, for people in two rows ahead of me looked back and grew nervous. This woman of whom I am telling you, and I wish I had my hand in her hair, was not satisfied in making the bag rattle with her own hands, but having gor-ged herself she presented it to the other woman, who seemed to think she would not be doing her duty unless she made more noise than the first woman. He went at it like a dog digging a hole in the ground. Having gotten his grab he proceeded to crunch the sweets with his open mouth. This racket was kept up until the candy was exhausted, and by that time the lecture was over. A PECULIAR and painful accident happened to Mr. J. F. Hahn and a Mr. Norton, who was visiting here, on Thursday last. They were in Mr. Hahn's high wagon, which he uses in his business, and coming out of the alley just north of Front street into Qak street, seph Valley track, but the locomotive the wheel of the wagon was caught in some way in the bridge over the gutter and the wagon stopped with a suddenness that threw both men out over the dash board. Mr. Norton fell upon his head and shoulders and when picked up was unconscious, and it was thought very severely injured. He was however, able to start for his home in Maine on Tuesday morning. For The Record. Destructive Insects.

The season is about at hand when the gardener and fruit-raiser must commence their annual warfare against the great army of insects, which infest their vegetables and fruits and will nearly kill them if something is not done to prevent them from doing so.

To many people it must seem strange that destructive insects are so much more numerous now than they were years ago. At present nearly every fruit and vegetable, from the current to the apple, from the cucumber to the squash, the pea and cabbage, as well as nearly all the grains, have their destroying insects, many of which were unknown until the past few years. It has been said that 'Eternal yigilance is the price of liberty," and it might as truly be said it is the price of nearly everything we raise for neces sarv food or luxury.

Many of the insects that prey upon our crops were brought here from for eign countries. Such as the Codling Moth, Clover root worm, Hessian Fly, etc, which no doubt are a greater curse to our country than all the paupers, daughter Carrie have gone to attend anarchists and Chinaman they ever sent over here.

Many insects that once lived upon the leaves of forest trees now live upon our cultivated plants, and the birds which used to be much more plenty than now, kept many kinds of insects in check. U. S. MARSHAL JAMES CLARK goes out looking for timber thieves in the vicinity of Kalkaska, disguised as a fisherman. He sauntered around over the country the other day with a fish basket over one shoulder, a bamboo rod over the other and a knapsack full of revised fish stories which he fired off in cases of emergency. When he returned to Grand Rapids he reported a catch of four first-class thieves who gave bail to appear for trial.—B. H.

handle air guns or fire arms of any character was again made painfully manifest yesterday, by an accident to Charlie Crawford, the eleyen-year-old son of Mr. J. A. Crawford, who received a severe wound in the temple just above the right eye. The little fellow came around the corner of the barn just as his older brother, Allie, discharged a gun carrying a "double B" shot, the latter having aimed at a mark in the barn, not seeing his brother. A physician was called and dressed the wound, probing it unsuc cessfully half an inch in depth for the ball, which probably struck the bone and bounced out.—B. H. Palladium.

SOME NEW YORK WOMEN WHO ARE BOTH WISE AND WINSOME.

One Writes Books, a Second Edits a Paper, and the Others Hope to Achieve Success on the Stage in Various Roles. How They Live and Look.

MARQUISE CLARA LANZA. In selecting half a dozen New York wo-men of acknowledged fairness of face and intellectual vigor I thought first of the Marquise Clara Lanza, a well known wo-man of the world, the heroine of a romantic marriage and the anthor of half a dozen clever novels and innumerable book re views and letters on current topics. In a sunny, second story room in one of the bijou residences on the streets running bijou residences on the streets running crosswise to the upper portion of Central park I found her. She is a decided blonde. Indeed, her fluffy hair, lying in short, boyish locks against forehead and neck, could scarcely be a paler yellow, her skin of a more unvarying pallor. She has lovely eyes, of a rare, bluish gray, and regular features, but her charm lies chiefly in the mobility of her expression, her sympathetic, breazy manner and a refreshing lack of breezy manner and a refreshing lack of affectation. It is much in these days of artistic poseurs to meet a woman as simple and winning as this young matron.

QUIRA VASCO. Literature with her is neither a fad nor a makeshift to kill time. There was nothing of caprice in her appearance or sur-roundings. She was seated at a large writing table, as austerely business like as a lawyer who is blessed with a multiplicity of briefs, and quite alone except for a Chinese dog of most alluring ugliness, which "shivered and shook" on a mat at her feet. In this dainty literary den the marquise writes systematically from 10 until 1. For breakfast an egg and a cup of strong coffee are all she finds necessary for the support of an active imagination and a plump, shapely body, but to use her own expression, she "eats all she can get at luncheon." Her last book, "Basil Mortor's Transgression," is a realistic study of the artistic bohemian side of New York life, daringly handled, and abounding in exquisite pen pictures of chance bits of city life and coloring. For absolutely flawless beauty few women in New York can compare with Quira Vasco, the young society woman who, strictly incog., makes her debut in the fall in the stock company of the Madison Square theatre. Her photograph gives but a meager idea of her tropical, brunette

MME. DE FONTENILLIAT. send the critics' pens traveling ecstatically. As if nature had not been over loving in giving her a face of such bewildering beauty, she is tall, exquisitely rounded, distingue, and graceful as a young palm. Her manner is in keeping with this attractive ensemble, her voice of liquid and pene-trating sweetness. Withal she has undoubted talent for the profession she has chosen. This praise in cold black and white sounds fulsome, whereas it is only the simple truth.

There was a stir in New York society about a year ago when Mrs. W. K. Van-derbilt's sister wedded M. de Fontenilliat, during a holiday in Europe. The marriage, like so many others between American belles and impoverished foreigners, was a failure, and now Mme. Julie de Fontenilliat never sees her whilom husband. She is bent on carving a fortune in the way her talents direct, and will soon be seen behind the footlights. Dion Boucicault is her master, and he considers her a most prom-ising pupil. In delicate comedy Mme. de Fontenilliat is strikingly good. Following the example of most society women who step almost from the drawing room to the stage she will appear in a new play, specially written for her. She has a character face, what artists are fond of calling a "type," and theatrical people a "fine stage face." A profusion of silky, golden hair lies in natural waves all over her shapely head. Her large, gray eyes meet your own clearly and directly. She has strikingly white teeth and good, boldly cut features, which will not become insignificant in the trying glare of the calcium light.

MINNA GALE. in New York as leading lady of the Booth-Barrett combination, particularly two winters ago, when they played the re engagement of "Venetian Nights," includ-ing only "Othello" and "The Merchant of Venice." She is well born, well bred, well educated, dainty and cultured to her immaculate finger tips. Like Rosalind, she is "more than common tall," but her proportions are so perfect she does not look her many inches except when she shows a good half head above an actor of medium height. For this reason she wears heelless shees and flat, wide hats upon the stage. Theatre goes are familiar with her in a copper colored or blonde wig, but in reality the is a pale skinned brunette with straight black hair and deep brown eyes of remarkable brilliancy. Her features are delicate and biquant, her smile slightly sarcastic, made girl, carrying her small head as proudly poised as the Duchess of Leinster. She lives with her mother and sister in an artistic apartment on Gramercy square, not a stone's throw from the new Players' club. As Shakespeare's heroines she has achieved different degrees of success, but critics have agreed in pronouncing her Des-demona ideal and altogether lovely. In the clinging, white crepe gowns and Cenei like turbans, and with an expression of wondering innocence in her large eyes, she was so grinsny atturing that one sympa-thized fully with poor Othello's tortured cry when, framing her soft face in his brown hands, he moaned:

Oh, thou weed, Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet That the sense aches at thee—would thou hadst Nobody needs an introduction to Elita Proctor Otis, amateur actress, member of Sorosis, artistic bohemienne, literatteur, etc. New York knows her challenging dimples well. Here she is as she recently appeared at the Lyceum theatre as Lady Teazle in "Powder and Patch," smiling her merry defiance at Sir Peter. Nothing but praise has followed her when for dif-ferent charities she has appeared as the lashing Lady Gay Spanker, Constance in "The Love Chase," or Kate Hardcastle. Managers have been hoping for years to see her enter the profession, but instead she has become a journalist and her name, as editor, appears upon the cover of the ELITA PROCTOR OTIS. news of the theatrical world. Her blonde face is decidedly irregular, but she possesses a personal magnetism which many classical beauties lack. Merriment follows in her wake. Diablerie lurks in her smile. She is as capricious as a fashionable Paris ienne, and one of the most popular, much talked of women of New York.

No ingenue on the stage has a face more soulful, more winning than Anne O'Neill. Her beauty is of the ideal, spiritual order. She has fair hair, with eyes of that peculia brown filled with shifting, golden lights. Her skin is pale and smooth as a white rose petal, her lips a vivid red. While lunching at the Cafe Savarin recently she made an exquisite study in color. A soft, dark velvet hat with a shadowy brim shaded her face, a striking contrast to her pale, shining hair; a smocked, belted waist of red silk suffused her neck and chin with a rosy glowr the vellow suplicit stole in a bread glow; the yellow sunlight stole in a broad band through the window beside which she sat, and, reflected in a mirror before her, framed her in a circle of light. She is petite and slender, and when in New York

THE CLEVELAND-DANA FEUD. How a Reporter Got Mixed Up in the

Quarrel. For the benefit of those who have not followed the details of the latest difference between Grover Cleveland and Charles A. Dana the following summary of the matter is presented:

Not long ago The New York Sun published a Washington telegram in which it was stated that ex-President Cleveland suffered from a constant increase of flesh and had been compelled to place himself under avoirdupois. Frederick C. Crawford, a reporter for The World, called on Mr. Cleveland the day of The Sun's publication to secure his state-created a sensa-tion. The expresident was many severe editor of The Sun, and the latter promptly opened fire with a literary gatling gun. The World a F. C. CRAWFORD. gatlinggun. Then The World an-ment regarding the matter. The interview printed

ounced that its reporter's version of his talk with Mr. Cleveland was inaccurate, and published an explanatory statement from its manager's point of view. Mr. Crawford immediately resigned, and gave to the public through the columns of Frank Leslie's his story of the whole affair. In this he asserts that the ex-president said much more than was printed as coming from him, and used epithets of the most vigorous sort in denouncing Mr. Dana. The Ianguage attributed to Mr. Cleveland in-cludes such phrases as "senile old liar and thief," and the intimation that the editor of The Sun suffers from paresis.

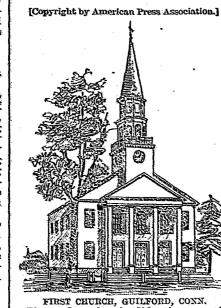

Memory Failed Him on the Rostrum. Judge William H. West has for years been known as the "eloquent blind man of Ohio," and his public utterances long ago established his claim to the title. Although sightless, he gained a rank and reputation of which any one might be proud. Now, in his old age, however, he is called on to endure a great sorrow—the loss of memory. The other night at Pittsburg, Pa., he appeared before a crowded house to address the Western Theological seminary students and was given an enthusiastic welcome. After an acknowledgment of this compliment he attempted to begin his prepared address, but found that he could not remember a word. His son was unable to give him the cue, for the manuscript was mislaid. Observing the predicament of the famous old orator, the audience struck up a hymn while the judge tried to recall his address. But the words would not come. Then the organist entertained the people and once more the blind man took the stand, only to fail. He could not even make an off hand talk, as was suggested by the sympathetic audience. Finally his son found the manuscript and read it, while Judge West sat by, the picture of despair. He afterward came forward and explained that such a thing had never before occurred to him. A Decision of Large Importance. ision recently Justice Fuller, of the supreme court of the United States, has to do with the liquor question and would seem to settle at least one point of that important issue. Beer was sent from Illinois to Iowa and sold as it came. Officers seized the beer. The owner sued and got judgment, but the decision in his favor was reversed by the supreme court of Iowa. When taken to the Federal tribunal the beer seller scored an ultimate victory. The decision means that liquor can be taken to any state in "original packages," no matter how small, and sold to consumers. It is based on the ground that congress has the power to regulate commerce between the states, and that a state has no right to pass a law that

EVOLUTION IN THE BUILDING OF HOUSES OF WORSHIP.

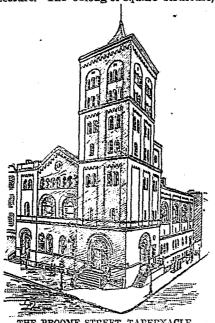

The Places Where Our Grandfathers Attended Service Compared with the Edifices of Today-Talmage's New Taber-

FIRST CHURCH, GUILFORD, CONN.

The modern church edifice is an evolution due to an equally striking evolution in the popular conception of what a church is.
The old time meeting house, of which an admirable type is seen in the First church of Guilford, Conn., was a place where the flock met weekly to secure spiritual strengthening. The modern church edifice is in many instances—the number of which is rapidly increasing—the center for daily, almost hourly, gatherings that have for their object spiritual culture and men-tal, physical and social betterment. Our great-grandfathers and our grandfathers, when they departed from the sec-ond service on the Sabbath, did not expect to enter the sanctuary again for seven days. Our fathers made an advance over this and went to a midweek lecture or prayer meeting. Now there is hardly an evening when some members of the church going family are not present at a gathering in the

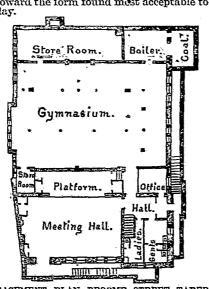

For a long time there was no decided development either in church life or architecture. The oblong or square structure,

THE BROOME STREET TABERNACLE. with its one assembly room, served the necessary purpose adequately. Here and there a church added a smaller apartment for the weekly lecture or prayer meeting, but generally speaking the "plant" consisted of one room.

With the advent of the Sunday school one room for both services nor the holding of the Sunday school in the basement met the requirements. Then churches began to build chapels, either attached to or detached from the main building. In these the Sunday schools found homes, as did the prayer meetings, and occasionally provision was made for the pastor's study. But it was not until the realization of the fact came that the church is to be not only the spiritual but the mental, social and physical culture center of influence in the community-and that too every day in the week—that society began to evolve rapidly toward the form found most acceptable to-day.

BASEMENT PLAN BROOME STREET TABERNACLE, Business men questioned the wisdom of putting enormous sums in a "plant" that was only productive one day in the week. Others said: Why not have church parlors where the church family can meet occasionally? Why make the clergymen travel from a distant parsonage to his work? Why not furnish him a home next door to the church or under its very roof? Why not attract the young people into the church by innocent games and wholesome reading? Why not (this in city churches surrounded by wage earners) teach the multitude that toil is emobling and "clean-liness next to Godliness?" In answer to these questions the typical modern church has come. It is built not for show and exclusive use on Sunday, but for every day needs. It has attractive reading rooms, a gymnasium and baths possi-bly, parlors, a kitchen (with pantries) and all the culinary utensils, linen, crockery and table ware necessary to feed a multi-tude. Under the same roof—and if not there then in a parish house adjoininglive the pastor and his assistants. Of course, the great proportion of such churches is to be found in the larger cities and towns, and as yet form a very small fraction of the churches of the country, but enough exist to serve as pioneers and landmarks in the evolution of an edifice fitted for the work of the ideal church. In many minor points the modern house of worship differs from the old. Then the reacher occupied a lofty box and preached down at his people. Now he walks out on a broad platform, but slightly elevated above his hearers, and talks with them. Then the choir was usually located in a loft in the gallery behind the congregation. Now singers and organ are placed before the audience, where they can laad in fact as well as in name. Then the pews were private property, to be sold, bartered and bequeathed as a personal or family chattel. Architecturally speaking, they were high and square, and uncomfortable. Now they are low, com-fortable and so arranged that the occupant of the back row has as satisfactory a view of the preacher as the one in front, and the pews belong to the church, not to the in-dividual.

Then there was a more or less potent feeling that it was sinful to spend much money in adorning the place of worship. Now the notion prevails that not only is the Lord to be worshiped in "the beauty of holiness," but in the holiness of beauty. Therefore more and more costly become the buildings erected and more and more artistic their external and internal appoint-This evolution is not confined to any particular locality. There are as fine and admirably equipped churches in the interior and west today as in the east. Minneapolis, Denver, St. Louis, Kansas City have buildings that are not surpassed for external beauty and adaptation for modern church life. The First Baptist velopment along this line in the great west In the picture and diagram of the lower floors of the Broome Street tabernacle. New York city, are seen the outlines of a building admirably adapted for the work of a modern church among the humbler classes. It was built by the City Mission society a few years ago, at a cost of $140,000. It serves as a home for its pastor; it has a large and comfortable auditorium surrounded by class rooms that can be thrown into the main audience room; it has a gym-

NACLIL are freely used and greatly appreciated by the toilers; it has a well stocked library and reading rooms, and inspection of its running schedule shows that at some time each day some part of the church is being used for some good purpose.

Still another type of the modern church is to be seen in the new Tabernacle which is to be built for the Rev. T. DeWitt Talnage, of Brooklyn, N. Y., after plans designed by J. B. Snook & Sons, of New York city. Here the demand is for large seating capacity and the utilization of every inch of room. Norman in its style of archi-tecture, to cost $150,000, planned to furnish seats for nearly 5,000 people and standing room for nearly a thousand more, this great church will in many respects be the most remarkable in the country.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, CHICAGO. Rising above the seats on the body of the loor there will be two galleries with a seating capacity of nearly 2,000. At the left of the auditorium on the ground floor there will be a spacious corridor and in the rear foyers, in which those people can stand who are not fortunate enough to obtain seats. On the right there will be a perfectly appointed Sunday school room, separated from the main apartment by folding doors, which can be thrown open, enlarging the capacity of the auditorium 1,200 seats. The pulpit will be 35 feet in width, elliptical in shape and 15 feet deep. At the left of the pulpit a spacious study for Dr. Talmage has been planned, while elsewhere are lecture rooms, class rooms, parlors and all the modern necessities.

The interior of the church in many respects will be like that of most modern theatres. The sloping floors, the great double tier of galleries, the boxes at the side of the rostrum, the peculiarly constructed and brilliantly decorated organ and the stage like pulpit will give it that appearance.

AN INFANT IN CUSTODY.

Why Pretty Little Nellio Rudd is a Nellie Rudd is 3 years old, and a pretty, innocent little child, yet she is an inmate of the Will county jail, at Joliet, Ills., and must remain in custody of the sheriff for some time to come. A trial is pending for her possession between her mother, Kate Nelson, and her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rudd. Nellie was born in the poor house. Three months after that event Miss Nelson signed the baby over to Mr. Van Arsdale, superintendent of a Chicago foundlings' home. He in turn transferred his charge to the Rudds, who have raised it thus far and have grown much attached to the winsome little thing. Nellie's father recently died and left $1,500 to the mother for the benefit of the child. Miss Nelson's first move was to abduct Nellie. The foster parents with officers followed the woman to Chicago, thence to Mokena and Utica and back to the poor house, where the child was recovered. The claim ants then sought the courts. Nellie lay asleep in Mrs. Rudd's arms when the court ordered her into the possession of the sheriff pending the trial. When a deputy sheriff took the child in his arms to carry it to the jail residence both women burst into tears. The foster parents failed to get an order of court when they adopted the child, relying on the papers signed by both the real mother and Superintendent Van Arsdale.

Babies "Hoodooed" by Reporters. "Hoodoo" is a word that is generally thought to have its origin in the African term "voudoo." At any rate, no matter what its genesis, the expression implies the possession of malefic powers. A hoodoo is like one endowed with the evil eye-whatever attracts his attention meets disaster.
The latest phase of the hoodoo business has to do with newspaper reporters, more particularly those pencil experts living in Cincinnati. The superintendent of the zoological garden at that place, Mr. Stephen by name, recently asserted in unambiguous language that the reporters killed babies. He recovered his listeners from their shock of surprise and horror by the supplemental statement that the babies were not human, and that the journalistic method was one of indirection. Then he continued: As soon as any of our young animals get written up they die. Look at our giraffe. And when the grizzly bears were born we said not a word about them in public. One we left with his mother and the other I took and began to raise One day one of the newspaper men car and saw the grizzly baby getting its bottle. He wrote it up at length and the little thing couldn't stand it. It died at once. And so when we have more babies out here we will keep them under cover until they get big enough to stand the hoo-doo of newspaper publicity.

A Physician's Estimate of Quinine.

Dr. William B. Clarke, of Indianapolis Ind., well known as an alienist and authority on all matters relative to insanity, re-cently prepared a paper which he entitled "A Study of Suicide." One paragraph in the article cannot fail to be of general interest. It is this: I feel confident that a frequent cause of suicide has been generally, if not entirely, overlooked, and so am impelled to utter a word of warning regarding it, via., the rethiess use of quining, especially its use unauthorized by a physician. Any one who knows the pathogenetic ability of quinine, or rather its ability to cause symptoms or perturbations in the well or nearly well person. or perturbations in the well or nearly well person; especially brain and nerve symptoms, cannot deny that it possesses the power to produce a condition nearly allied to insanity, if, indeed, it practically falls at all short of insanity. In large doses it is a depressant, instead of a stimulant, contrary to the popular belief, and it is the most popular and universal every day amateur remedy. Everybody seems to take it, and for any and every allment. It is reasonably easy of proof every ailment. It is reasonably easy of proof that many insanities, suicides and murders can be traced directly to the ill advised and inordi-

Chicago's New Sub-Treasurer. Uncle Sam is to have a new sub-treasurer at Chicago to look after the piles of money stored in the big government building. His name is Dan-iel Dustin. He was born at Tonsham. Orange county, Vt., nearly seventy years ago, and was the seventh in a family of thirteen children. He graduated from Dartmouth colticed medicine four years, and GEN. DANIEL DUSTIN. then went to California, where he divided his time between doctoring, mining and politics until 1858, when he became a resident of Sycamore, Ills. He entered the civil war as a captain of volunteers, and when the contest ended held the rank of brigadier general. He has been an office-holder in DeKalb county, Ills., continuously since 1855. ously since 1865. Military Training of Dogs.

The French have found a new use for their dogs. They are being trained to act as sentinels. Two soldiers lead a dog to a place a mile from the starting point. Then one of the men turns back, and the canine is taught to track him. In scouting they are also expected to prove useful, for they search the fields and thickets indefatigably—soldiers in foreign uniforms being hidden as decoys during the lesson—and on finding an enemy at once run to their keepers, showing every sign of agitation. When the dogs are on drill they are objects of wonder and interest to all the vagrant curs of the neigh-

A Change in Floral Fashion. Old fashioned flowers are coming into avor again with the residents of the big cities. Orchids and rare roses now have rivals in the daisy, "bachelors' buttons," "hen and chickens," the columbine, larkspur and hollyhock. It seems quite appropriate for society leaders to welcome back the flowers of their childhood and give them the place they so well deserve.

"Morally imbecile" is now said to be the correct phrase for describing men and woen who are criminal or vicious.

Known as a "Desirable Lunatic." In the insane asylum at Kankakee, Ills. they have what the attendants call a "desirable lunatic." A visitor took dinner recently at one of the tables set apart for "mild cases." During the progress of the meal a patient at another table arose, care fully deposited his napkin at the side of his plate, and, walking over to the next table, caught another patient with a powerful upper cut under the ear. "There!" he cried, "that'll teach you better than to eat with your knife." In a moment more the aggressor was seized by alert attendants and hurried away to his own room. It was explained that this was his one hallucination. He became wild whenever he saw a man eating with his knife.

Some Old Time Statesmen The men who were the political giants of the United States in the days before the war are nearly all dead, and those who live are now beyond the period of activity. Six only survive who held cabinet positions be fore Lincoln's time. They are: George Bancroft, secretary of the navy under Polk; A. H. H. Stuart, secretary of the interio under Taylor; James Campbell, Pierce's postmaster general; Joseph Holt, Horatio King (each of whom was a postmaster general), and P. F. Thomas, secretary of the treasury in Buchanan's day.

Well Meant, but Fruitless. Paris sees many peculiar things, but it never before beheld anything projected along the same lines as the recent convention of "Christian hearted landlords." The object of the meeting was to discuss what measures should be taken in order to relieve the difficulties of poor rent payers. As the "Christian hearted landlords" arrived at no decision, tenants will have to "pay or get out" in the future as in the Snow Fighting Prairie Fires. That must have been a novel sight indeed the first Sunday of May in the great state of Minnesota. Only think of it! An unseasonable snowstorm raging over hundreds of miles of territory and a thousand preachers and their congregations praying for its continuance. It did continue, and it did its work, for it put out prairie fires that threatened to do immense damage.

A Quincycle for Street Use. Parisian promenaders were very much astonished the other morning by the appearance along the boulevards of a new machine called the quincycle. The machine, which is propelled by steam and has five wheels, was watched with great curi osity as it threaded its way swiftly and silently amid the numerous vehicles.

The Human Factor in Slums Mr. Frederick Greenwood, in a discussion in The Nineteenth Century of "Misery in great cities," maintains that the slums and squalid dens that abound in London and other enormous cities "correspond far more than most kind souls are willing to perceive to the measure of depravity and weakness of the human mind; and at the same time to the proportion of incapables in a state of society which does not allow its incapables to perish." Every village and town has its bad spots and its centers of degraded population, corresponding in extent with its size; and it is only the vast extent of the mischief in London, commensurate with the dimensions of the city, and the appalling magnitude of the problems which it suggests, that excite so much commiseration and alarm. Hence it may be concluded that any local and spasmodic efforts to ameliorate the evils that exist are destined to only a very limited success, and that permanent advantage is likely to accrue only from measures that tend to raise the general social condition.—Washington Star. The Growth of Trees.

In the parish of Winfarthing are two magnificent oak trees, one of which is known as the "Winfarthing oak;" the other is little inferior to it in magnitude, but appears to have been generally passed over in favor of the more celebrated tree first mentioned. These trees were inspected by Robert Marsham, F. R. S., the friend and correspondent of Gilbert White, and a great agriculturist, in the year 1744; and he has left in his diary accurate neasurements of both.

The larger tree measured at that time 38 feet 7 inches in circumference. and the smaller just 30 feet. In the year 1874, when these trees were measured according to Marsham's method, the larger tree was just 40 feet in circumference, and the smaller 30 feet. It will thus be seen that one tree had increased 17 inches in 130 years, whereas the other had remained in statu quo.-London Standard.

Deafness Can't Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness. and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflamma tion can be taken and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by tak-

RAYMOND, FEB. 28, 1888. Dr. F. B. Brewer:-I received your last box of medicine all right. I think I am much better than I was a week ago. I commenced to gain strength as soon as I got the chills and fever broken up. I don't have those nervous spells any more. I don't cough and raise as much as I did; what I do raise looks pretty bad, but no blood, just clear corruption. I have not vomited up my food for about a week. My victuals begin to taste natural. I have a splendid appetite. MRS. A. F. BERDAN, Raymond, Dak.
