DR. LAMBERT, the general medical director of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, said:
"There is no doubt that the whole tendency of life insurance now is toward liberality. There are comparatively few attempts to work any great scheme of fraud upon us, but we have to be on the watch. Two years ago a man wanted to insure for a very large amount. I suspected that he had kidney disease, and discovered that my suspicion was well founded and rejected his application. A few months later he committed suicide, and stuck insurance companies to the extent of $300,00."
"We reject sixteen per cent of the applications made to us for insurance," said Dr. Lambert, "and I have saved the entire expense of this medical department by the rejection alone of applicants who had diseased kidneys, and who died within two years after I rejected them."—NEW YORK SUN, Feb'y 18, "30.

very different, you see.

Mr. Thompson was a working farmer; and as all his people had worked, ne expected his wife to do so. She took to it gleefully; she had not been brought up with high notions, and at first the work did not seem so much. But every experienced lady knows how the labor seems to accumulate in a plain farmer's household. There were plenty of men and boys about, but only one woman servant was kept; and Mrs. Thompson soon found that she helped at nearly everything save perhaps the roughest of the labor. In place of ounging in elegant foreign studios, or gliding down canals in picturesque gondolas, she had butter and cheese to make, poultry to rear, dinners to cook in the long, low-ceiled kitchen, and the thousand and one cares upon her small shoulders that make up a busy house-

With things a little different she would not have minded the work so much—if she had had nice carpets, tasteful furniture, books, flowers and a few pretty pictures. The home was hard and practical and its surroundings shabby. Old Mrs. Thompson had not cared to be smart and nice; Robert had not thought about it, and what though he had? It is only natural for men to assume that what had done for a mother would do for a wife. They met for entertainment as well as for sewing—tea in the forenoon, and a grand meal later, when the stitching

Their stock of plates and dishes consisted of a few odds and ends of cracked delf that had once been a kind of mulberry color. Life seemed bare and homely to Jane Thompson that hot summer day. It was a long round of toil unrelieved by any of the graces that might make even toil pleasant. She did not often think of it, but she remembered that day with the faintest air of regret that she might have been far differently situated; and as she looked up to the pretty little French cottage on the hill, em-bowered in a forest of blossoming vines, caught the cool gleam of urn and fountain, something like a sigh

Mr. Thompson always wanted his dinner boiling hot, and she hastened to lay the cloth in the cool room off the kitchen. Frank and Charley, her two boys, came rushing in from school, each striving to claim her attention. She was tired heated and

It was not that the proverb was new she had read it scores of times; but there was in its appropriateness something that fell like a cool, sweet wind on her heated pulses.

"I will have it ready in a moment Robert," she said. Mr. Thompson looked up. Evidently he hadn't expected so pleasant a reply. If the truth must be told he had thought a good bit that morning about the white

He was watching his wife's face; there was in it something he didn't understand—a kind of hopeless, patient look, as if she no longer cared to struggle onward. The old mulberry ware did look dingy on the snowy tablecloth—almost too bad for his friends to sit down to; he wondered he had never thought of that before. Robert passed into the kitchen when they were going out again—how hot and stifling it felt with that big fire. His wife had been in it cooking; that must have made her face scarlet. It after all, if you had hot work to do. Perhaps the work was too much for his wife, who at best was but a delicate woman, was the idea that flitted the south as he went out, but the sun was burning hot still. He waited to wipe his brow, and in that moment the voices of his comrades came toward him from the other side of the hedge, where they stood in the shade.

"Grover will have to keep 'em for | get even a thank ye for it from Thompson. He's a good fellow, but uncommon down upon the work. Strong as a horse himself, he thinks that women must be the same." "Though Bob's a sterling fellow, Jane Laurence made a mistake when she

Tenderly had she done it, too. Could it be she was wearing out her life in hard work for himshe, the mother of his boys-whom he loved in spite of his curlishness? Robert Thompson stole away; he could bear his thoughts not a minute longer, and he felt that he could almost kill

Edible Birds' Nests.

Travelers going from Hong Kong to Bangkok or Singapore by steamer pass along the coast off Annam and near a group of islands that are at once picturesque and curious. Behind them is Tourane, an ancient French settlement, the stopping place of steamers bound for Hue and Haiphong, and destined to be an important commercial port in a not very distant future. Several of these islands produce an mportant article of commerce—that is, the edible birds' nest, which have caused considerable learned discussion among scientists. They are as dear to the Chinese palate as to the Chinese purse. It is a singular fact that Annam is the only country that produces them. Why the swallows select this locality as a habitation, and no other, when there are islands apparently as eligible scattered all along the Asiatic coast from Sumatra to Korea, is a mystery that the scientists who have given the subject so much attention have never attempted to elucidate.

Had Banquo lived in these times, he might have given an explanation as poetic and reasonable as that which he gave to Duncan for the preference manifested by the Scotch martins for the pure and delicate air that bathed Macbeth's castle. The swallows' nests are a source of riches to the region. Their value is said to have been discovered some hundreds of years ago, during the reign of Gia Long who promised a liberal reward to any one who would discover a new and profitable article of export within his realm. The nests discovered on the island of Nam Ngai were presented to the sovereign, who, faithful to his promise, offered a patent of nobility to the finder. This was respectfully declined, and instead a monopoly of the harvest was accepted by the discoverer for himself and his lescendants. This privileged family was to pay yearly eighty pounds to the emperor as royalty. On the other hand, they were to be exempt from personal taxes, from military service, and from contributions of personal labor, such as are common in Oriental countries. They formed a family league of forty or fifty men, elected two of their number as leaders, under the title of gnan and doi, and founded a village convenient for their commerce, which still exists under the name of Yen Xa-"Village of the Swallow's Nest." The must have made her face scarlet. It nesis are the product of a saliuary sewas not so comfortable in the house, cretion of the birds. As to their mercantile value, they are divided into three distinct categories. The most valuable are those into which there enters a certain proportion of the blood. These are called yen huyet. Singular enough, they can only be produced by the birds affected with a exhaustion, or of consumption in its advanced stages, before the end of the time for observation, it is not known whether this disease is peculiar only to a part of the birds or whether the salivary secretion that causes the malady causes the death of all of them after a year or two of existence. The smallness of the quantity of these smallness of the quantity of these nests annually gathered—which is on-ly three or four pounds—would seem to indicate that the disease is only partial and peculiar to those possessed of the weakest lungs. All other nests (yan soo) are classed as second quality. Nothing but the saliva of the bird enters into their construction. They are gathered in the spring, summer, autumn. The spring harvest is the most valuable because it includes the two qualities. Two nests of the first quality weigh one ounce, and are worth at the place of production five Mexican dollars at current value in Annam. Those of the second quality are worth little more than half so much. The summer gathering is entirely of nests of the second quality. They are smaller and less compact. It requires more of these to make an ounce, which is not worth more than $1.20 to $1.40. Experts express the opinion that this third gathering should be dispensed with, since it is worth so little and there is danger of destroying the eggs. Nearly all the nests are sold to the Chinese living in the cities of Annam and Tonquin or sent to Chinese ports. Only the Chinese and some high mandarine of the Court of Hue, who pre-fer the Chinese cuisine, can afford the luxury. They are eaten by the Chinese cooked with flesh or with sugar, having first been cleaned of all extraneous substance by a liberal application of hot water When cooked with fowl or game, fruit of the water lily is ad-

colonists not having yet had sufficient

they have curative qualities of the kind mentioned, they probably share them with other alimentary substances containing more or less gelatine. The good qualities of the nests are esti-mated no doubt in proportion to the price. It is certain that, as an article of diet, they have made little impression on Western nations. The harvest is made in a manner simple and picturesque. Sections of bamboo are thrust into the holes in the side all the way up the precipice, forming an immense ladders by whose rounds the coolies ascend, detaching with a knife as they go the neets glued to the walls.

One of the family which monopolizes the industry watches meanwhile anxiously below to see that the laborer does not in gathering detach some portion of the previous nest and secrete it about his person. The operation is full of danger, and annually costs several lives. The monopoly is at this moment in danger of passing into other hands. A rich Chinese company of Hong Kong which is building a handsome European hotel at Tourane, and which has branch houses in the principal cities of Annam and Tonquin, is offering the Hue government a handsome bonus for the privilege of gathering the nests. The monopolists are greatly excited at the prospect of losing it, and in support of their claim are offering in evidence the very document given to their ancestors by the Emperor Gia Long. Money is needed at the court of Hue, and the ancient manuscript will be critically scrutinized by Annamese officials to discover if it is indeed a grant in perpetuity or whether there is not a chance to make a good round sum by the transfer. In the meantime the swallows, instead of seeking haunts free from invasion. come back punctually with every recurring season, regardless of their health and this increasing spoliation. Other swallows in other countries can return peacefully to their last year's nests in the ensuing spring. These swallows of Annam must keep on pandering to an aristocratic desire, building and rebuilding their homes and

As lumber is now sawn, every board but one will warp and cuil up in the process of seasoning. The reason for this is plain. If the board be sawn from the side of a log, the grain rings of the wood lie in circles, which have a greater length on one than upon the other side of the board. A board cut from the very center of the log has grain circles of equal length upon each side, and will lie perfectly flat when seasoned. When selecting the lumber for a tool chest or some other fine job, pick out boards which show that they came, as near as possible from the center of the log. A method is in use which compensates for this tendency to curl in seasoning. This is known as quarter sawing, and quartered oak, of which so much is used at present, is sawn by this process.

The Perils of Quicksands. A remarkable example of the dangers of working in quicksands occurred recently at Woodside, N. Y. An intelligent man. Mr. James H. Parsells, undertook to build a well near his house. The well was fifteen feet deep in the center of quicksand. Mr. Parsells went into the well to repair a pipe when the sides caved in, partly burying him. When he was discovered, his head and a part of his body was still above the sand, which was slow ly pressing around him. He did not seem to be much injured, for he was cool and self-possessed, and with a calm voice himself directed the villagers, who were eager to rescue him. Stephen and John Parsells, aged fourteen and nineteen, worked desperately to save their father's life. Dozens of men with shovels worked around the well, while others fastened ropes under Mr. Parsells' arms. Ten men pulled on the rope from the second story of the new house, until deep ridges were made by the rope in the window sill, but all the efforts to pull out the man failed, and the sand packed itself more solidly around his form. It continued to rise, stealing up over his shoulders, and about his head. Stimulants were given to the doomed man, and a rubber tube was placed in his mouth to supply him with air.

Meanwhile the rescuing party fought the dead sands desparately. They could not dislodge the body from the tenacious grip of the sands. Then the sands rose quickly, bubbling up like the waters of the spring. They surrounded the, man's head and covered him entirely. John Parsells stood at his father's head, and with a shovel worked furiously for nearly two hours. Three times he succeeded in clearing the sands from his father's head, but they rapidly covariations. ered it again, being forced up, no doubt, by the crowds that pressed closely about the well. Electricity Taking the Place of .~

Prof. Elihu Thompson, in speaking on "The Problems of the Future," says: In the near future railways will be run by electricity; not the small roads, I mean, but really the large ones connecting cities, and there is no reason why we should not expect higher speeds than we can attain at present with our steam locomotives. There we have reciprocating parts that must be put in motion, stopped, and reversed continually, while in the electric locomotive we have the simple rotary motion, which is all we need, which makes it possible accordingly to run at a much higher rate of speed. Although the steam locomotive has been very much improved, yet it can hardly compare with the economy of stationary engines, placed where they can have an abundant water supply for condensing purposes. We can, therefore, by employing stationary engines and electric roads, do away with a great deal of unnecessary weight, and the moving parts being symmetrical, we can attain a much higher speed, say a hundred miles an hour. This would be a grand step forward, which would save us a great deal of time. It might even be possible to reach a speed of 150 miles an hour. It simply depends upon finding the method of applying sufficient power, and building the locomotives to suit, arrangements being adopted to keep the cars on the track.—Scientific

Armstrong County, Mo., has a jail which cost $12,000, but it is five years since it held a prisoner. Everybody is so good that the Sheriff has nothing to do, and the lawyers couldn't pay their board if they didn,t gamble. There is no boom in Armstrong County. Things are simply running along smoothly. A locomotive working under a presssure of 140 to 165 pounds to the square inch may move a railway train at a velocity of 60 miles an hour, which we are liable to think of as a wonderful speed. But it is slow compared with the rate of motion of the prejectile from a modern great gun. Some projectile flies at the rate of 1,365 miles per hour, impelled by a pressure of 35,000 to 40,000 pounds per square inch.

The matter today which had put her so much out was this: A sewing club had recently been established in the neighborhood. One of the leaders of the Republican party will contribute to the July number of the North American Review an adverse criticism on the action of Speaker Reed in congress. The article is an unusually striking one, but every effort is to be made to conceal the identity of its author.

It is the former that the people want to attend to public affairs.

It is now announced that an English syndicate has bought the Union Stock Yards, in Chicago, the national outlet of all the live stock transactions of the west and northwest. The Tin Plate Record editorially asserts that every tinned plate importer in the country has been assessed $10, 000, and the English syndicate which controls the manufactories and mines in Monmouthshire and Cornwall has augmented this sum to nearly $1,000. 000 in order to defeat the tin plate clause in the McKinley tariff bill.— Associated Press dispatch from Pitts-

Every little while some Democratic paper with more zeal than information, set up a howl about the extrava gance of state expenses and appropria-tions under the Republican management. The increasing rates of taxation are their especial subject of agitation. And yet it is an indisputable fact that the highest rate of state taxation in Michigan was in the good old days of Democratic economy and reform, in 1848, when the rate amounted to over one-half of one per cent. The highest rate during the past ten years has been but two-fifths of that amount, and the average less than one-third. The rate from 1848 to 1852, inclusive, under the Democratic rule, was more than double the rate during the past five years, and yet all our great public institutions have been built up since 1852, and a wa debt of $4,000,000 has been paid. There is nothing like a few Republican facts to knock out a multitude of Democratic falsehoods.—Grand Rapids Telegram-Herald.

Here comes the British Manufacturer, a London journal, of June 2, 1890,

A great many iron-works in Russia have commenced the manufacture of plows since the tariff duties on ma-chinery have been increased. These plows being cheaper (than those pre-viously imported) begin to compete with even those of German make. In the article from which this is quoted it was written concerning the Russian trade for the year 1888: At Rostov-on-Don, the chief empor ium for agricultural machinery in this part of Russia, about 6,000 plows, most ly of German origin. 1,000 reapers, 500 mowers, 500 hay rakes, 200 horse gear thrashers, and 55 steam thrashers, with engines, were sold during the year. All the steam thrashers were of English make; the reapers, mowers, and hay rakes were supplied by the United States; but English and American, especially American, plows can not compete with the German as regards price, being much too expensive.

"But in one year the import duties having been increased," the Russian iron works are making cheaper plows than could be had from Germanywhich, as we have just seen, was the cheapest foreign market in which made by Rev. Albert Clow, Messrs.

Russia could buy them. Now, we propound our old ricdle to the free trade press, how can it be said that "tariff is a tax," "tariff duty is added to price," when, "the import duties having been increased," the Russian maker sells a Russian plow for the benefit of the Rev Mr Clow for less money than the German plow was sold for under lower duties?.-Chicago Inter Ocoan.

Perhaps it is Murder.

Bainbridge, this county, probably has a murder case on hands. About a week ago three young men, two of them the McCloskey boys, and the other Will Claypool, a nephew of Noah Claypool. who suicided at Berrien Centre four years ago, became involved in a quarrel, and young Claypool whipped the two McCloskeys. On last Saturday evening the McCloskeys came along the road and commenced blackguarding Claypool, who was in his yard, and dared him out into the road to fight Young Claypool had prepared a blue beach club, about three feet long, with a heavy knot on the end of it. Taking this club in hand he went out into the road and struck one of the McCloskey boys over the head several times, mash ing the skull in a fearful manner. Mc-Cioskey fell down unconscious and lay in the middle of the road three hours, when he was removed to the house of Mr. Bateman, a little over two miles south and east of Bainbridge Centre, and is still there. He has remained unconscious ever since, with blood ooz ing from his ears continually, and no hopes are entertained whatever of his recovery. Yesterday afternoon he was reported dead, but at nine o'clock last evening was still alive. The boy Claypool is under arrest, and Hon. Thomas Mars, county agent, was at Benton Harbor to-day to investigate the case. The boy Claypool is a trifle under 16 years of age. - Niles Star.

wish to tell you of the case of a girl 16 years old, who had been sick with suppression two years. Her father had paid over $300 for doctors' bills, still she was failing. She had the worst countenance that I have ever seen, a kind of greenish yellow, she was emaciated, had constant bowel trouble, and had to take morphine every night in order to sleep at all. All who knew her thought she would die. Her parents said they had done all they could. I repeatedly urged them to try Zoa-Phora, but they were strongly preju diced against "nostrums." Finally the mother said, "We must do something, and this is as likely to help her as anything." She and I persuaded the father to let the girl try it. As a result, in tour months her functions were established and regular, and in six months she was the picture of healtha living wonder to all who had known

In a recent work on Heart Disease Dr. Franklin Miles—the noted specialist-gives many new and startling facts. Thousands of people are slowly poisoning themselves, weakening their hearts by the use of tea, coffee and alcohol. These are HEART WHIPS, causing it to beat rapidly, thus gradually wearing it out, producing shortness of breath when exercising, pains in side and shoulder, hungry and faint spells. Finally heart failure and sudden death. For weakened and irritated hearts the press everywhere highly recommend the New Heart Cure discovered by Dr. Frank in Miles, which is for sale at Barmore's.

He Invented the Jointed Pipe, and the Second Centennial of the Discovery Is. to Be Marked by Several Celebrations. Where We Get Our Drugs.

[Copyright by American Press Association.] One night, two centuries ago this year, the learned Dr. Vikarius, of Vienna, returned home from a round of calls among his patients tired, wet and slightly out of sorts. Things had gone badly with him during the day and a few people had dared to question his surgical skill-among others the newly made widow of Rittmeister Schwacken gin, who insisted that her husband's death was due, not to disease, but to the

THE PIPE OF LUXURY. fact that the physician had eased him of six quarts of blood in order to reduce a fever. There, too, was Hans Schmel, the sword maker. Hans had recovered unexpectedly from a dangerous illness, and the doctor attributed the artisan's restoration to the use of a peculiar infusion of Rhenish and powdered spiders' webs. But in the presence of a crowd of acquaintances the ungrateful Schmel had announced that he "took none of the ever-to-be-cursed decoction" and therefore was alive.

Thinking of these things the learned Vikarius doffed his cloak, filled his pipe and lit it from the tiny lamp spluttering on his table. The earnest suction of his lips brought no responsive volume of smoke. This was the last straw of annovance to complete the wreck of the doctor's overburdened temper, and he dashed the pipe to the stone floor, shout-

"Thou, thou, too, beast that thou art, insultest me." There followed a clearance of the mental atmosphere, and remembering that he had no substitute for his shattered friend Vikarius stooped and picked up the fragments. The bowl was intact, but the stem was shivered beyond repair. What was to be done? The doctor looked about and saw the bundle of wheaten straw that was to be his pillow

THE PIPE OF PEACE. golden tube, joined it to the pipe bowl and cemented the union with moistened bread crumbs. The subsequent smoke scothed his nerves and increased the activity of his mental faculties. From out his reverie an idea was born, which on the morrow took shape as a discovery, and to that discovery he owes his fame. As a Viennese empiric Vikarius would have found oblivion coincident with death's summons, but he lives today in history as one of the world's lesser immortals because he invented the jointed pipe. The blood letter, the player of fantastic tricks upon the stomachs of suffering humanity, is well gone from the world's wide stage, but the man who gave an added enjoyment to the use of tobacco deserves, in the opinion of many. honorable recollection, and for that reason the second centennial of the discovery made by Vikarius is to be cele brated with due observances in at least three of the capitals of Europe—Bucharest, Vienna and Berlin.

The vogue obtained by the jointed pipe since the day of its invention is something remarkable. Even the Indian, the original devotee of the smoke goddess, accepted the improvement, and the dreamy Turk found in the doctor's constructive principal a means for add-

PIPES OF COMFORT. ing to the luxury of his solitary or social hours. The calumet and the hookah alike are elaborations of the Viennese surgeon's idea. So, also, in its many forms, is the modern pipe that sticks from the hatband of the immigrant or reposes in the velvet lined case of the millionaire.

It is curious to note in this connection the varying views of different sections regarding the use of tobacco. In some cities of the United States it is against the law to smoke on the street; in others there is no restriction. Certain localities regard the habit as a masculine one and prohibit by the unwritten code of custom any feminine participation in the use of the weed; elsewhere, particularly in the Anglo-Spanish or Anglo-French regions of the south, the fair maiden and her lover violate no social ethic if they wander about arm in arm, each smoking the corn husk cigarette, which the young gallant rolls with all the dexterity of long experience. But it is in the mountain districts of Kentucky—the so called "moonshine area"—that the most peculiar inhibition is placed on the tobacco habit. There no woman is allowed to smoke until after marriage, and a recent traveler records the sad case of one Sal Ronyer, a maiden now 70 years old, who is still frantically engaged in husband hunting, "not that I'ze stuck on the men, but caze I want ter git some good outen a pipe 'fore I die." | gate at the foot of the hill. Has it ever occurred to the reader that the Caucasian race is indebted—if that word may be used—to the so called instimulating or narcotizing the mental and physical faculties? We have taken nation has always revenged itself by in-ducing the conqueror to employ its pet riage. This house is owned by the generdrug. Tea and coffee of course are gen- al's son, Mr. John Watts Kearny, who erany held to be beneficial and narmiess, and opium and quinine have a high place as remedial agents, but none of the four can be used inordinately without relentlessly demanding toll from a weakened and disorganized system. It is said of Vikarius' invention that the jointed pine with separable tube and monthpiece "has added considerably to the comfort of smoking and to the protection of smokers from nicotine poisoning. Considering the vast number of pipe smokers in the world the discovery of the German professor is one which almost entitles him to recognition as a minor benefactor of humanity."

The Active Career of Sergeant-at-Arms Valentine.

Hon. Edward K. Valentine, of West Point, Neb., who has been elected by the Republican senatorial caucus sergeantat-arms of the United States senate, to succeed Mr. William P. Canaday, whose resignation will take effect at the close of the fiscal year, is a pleasant, genial man. He was born at Keesauqua, Van Buren county, Ia., forty-seven years ago. He is a printer by trade; and worked on The Burlington Hawkeye before Frank Hatton

At the breaking out of the war he enlisted in the Sixty-seventh Illinois infantry and was promoted to be a second lieutenant. Being honorably discharged he re-enlisted in 1863 as a private in the Seventh Iowa cavalry, and was promoted to be the adjutant of the regiment. He served until June, 1866, having been twice breveted for "efficient and meritorious services." He went to Nebraska in 1866 and was appointed three years later register of the United States land office at Omaha. While in this position he finished the study of law and was admitted to the bar and engaged actively in practice until the fall of 1875, when he was elected judge of the sixth judicial district. Three years later he came to congress and served through the Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh con-

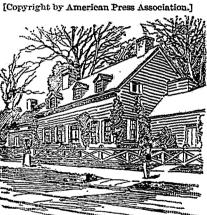

Discovery of a New Violet. A new violet has just been discovered by Mr. A. P. Gordon-Cummings on his place near Sykesville, Md. The foliage leaves of this violet are longer than those of the ordinary wild or cultivated violet. The flower leaves of the new violet are a soft white, striped or mottled, with light and dark purple. Unlike the other cultivated violet, the new one is a single violet. All the cultivated violets have hitherto, without exception, been double. Single violets, until this discovery of Mr. Cammings, have been without perfume, but the Sykesville cultivated single violet, says The Court Journal, has a wealth of rich perfume that cannot be surpassed. Those sweet plants, Daphne Odora and Oleo Fragrans, do not give off more delightful odors than this new violet.

A Pugnacious Sparrow's Punishment. The female sparrow, it appears, resents neglect as spiritedly as the Nineteenth century American woman. The story comes from Scranton, Pa., of a pair of English sparrows that began housekeeping recently in a little box fastened to the top of a pole. The head of the family went away one morning and didn't return till sunset, leaving his wife to look after all the work. When he got back his tail feathers were gone, and he bore general evidence of having been whipped in a fight. The female sparrow promptly divorced him, got a new husband and went on with her summer's task of raising a nestful of little

THE OLD KEARNY HOME. One of the oldest houses in the state of New Jersey is that belonging to the Kearny estate in Newark. It is a low frame building, and was the boyhood home of Gen. Philip Kearny. The house was built by the general's grandfather, and is now owned by a member of the family who lives abroad. It is generally spoken of as the Ogden house, as it has been occupied by the Ogden family for over a quarter of a century. The upright part of the house, with the wing at the left of the entrance, is a rather recent addition. The old Dutch lloor is just as it was made years ago, when a street door was so constructed that Mein Herr could open one half and take his ease leaning upon the other. In the interior there have been few changes: there are the wide, old fashioned fireplaces, with fender and andirons, in every room, with the high white mantels characteristic of colonial architect-

THOMAS A. EDISON'S RESIDENCE. In this house are many interesting souvenirs of the general. There is also a bronze bust inscribed:

Gen. PHILIP KEARNY, Natus 1814. Obit 1862.

Presented to Mr. John Watts Kearny by the Veterans of the New Jersey Kearny Brigade. The house where a real, live American count lives cannot fail to be interesting. When the house happens to belong to the Chevalier Edison, grand cross of the legion of honor and wizard of Llewellyn park, Orange, it is of interest because he lives in it and also for the reason that it is quite a castle in itself. "Glenmont," it is called and, as the photograph shows, it is a handsome residence of imposing appearance. The lower story of the house is of brick, the remaining part of wood. One thing struck me as particularly novel about the place and that was its six towering chimneys, only two of which show in the picture. Over the roof of the conservatory in summer is stretched an awning and here, with a beautiful view spread out before

THE EDISON DRAWING ROOM, to this spot and regaled with a cup of tea. The grounds are not extensivejust large enough to admit of a pretty lawn in front of the house, a fairly good sized garden, with a handsome carriage house at the rear and a poultry yard.

The interior of Mr. Edison's house is naturally quite elegant in all its appointments. There is a spacious and lofty drawing room at the left of the hall as you enter. There are some handsome paintings upon the wall, many rich curios, a little Florentine table, a cabinet with an array of Sevres vases and Dresden figures. Many charming and valuable bits of china were purchased last summer by Mrs. Edison while abroad. The furniture is of crimson satin, with rick damask hangings at doors and windows. The beauty of the drawing room is the corner where the piano stands, with a dainty little figure in white marble near by; just over it hangs a painting of Capri, one of the really good paintings in the house. The piano is a beauty in rosewood, with much ornamentation.

The dining hall is a stately room on the north side of the house; here are the conventional oak wainscotting and high oak mantel; the furniture is also oak, the chairs being upholstered in dark green velvet: the oak floor is nearly covered with a Persian rug. Mrs. Edison's sitting room on the second floor is such a charming room with its low, luxurious divan piled high with cushions, its easy chairs, pretty work table and writing desk that it is no wonder the family call it the pleasantest room in the house. Livingston, Staten Island, is famous in two ways: here are the cricket grounds and here lives the genius of Harper's "Easy Chair," Mr. George Will-

As you take in the house with its surroundings you think for the moment that you are looking at a bit of English scenery, everything is so trim and complete. There is a high arbor vite hedge about two sides of the place, many evergiven trees carefully pruned and trimmed, with a brook pursuing the even fenor of its way through one part of the lawn, and every inch of ground occupied in being either useful or ornamental. Mr. Bonner's estate adjoins Mr.

THE HOME OF GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS. father-in-law, Mr. Shaw, upon the other. A carriage house and stable are at some distance from the house, and in an inclosure grazes a Jersey cow.

Mr. Curtis is a great pedestrian, taking long walks about Staten Island, nearly the whole of which he has traversed at one time and another. Mr. Curtis' Staten Island farm is where he spends the winter: in summer the family go to their other home at Ashfield, Mass. There he has a much larger house and a vast number of books. His library at Staten Island is a goodly sized one, the walls of his study being lined with bookcases reaching half way up to the ceiling. Drawn up to the desk where Mr. Curtis does most of his writing is an easy chair and near by a comfortable lounge. Comfort and convenience rather than elegance are the characteristics of the place. In the study are some interesting souvenirs—a photograph of Thackeray which he gave Mr. Curtis, the first publication of the "Sketch Book" and one of Bryant's first volumes. Mr. Curtis spends one day in the week at the Harper building in New York, but the place is too noisy and too crowded for him. He prefers to do his work at his own FRANCES M. SMITH.

MR. KRAFT'S NOVEL TIMEPIECE. F. T. Kraft, a German resident of Brooklyn, while walking down Broadway, New York, one day some six years ago, saw in the window of a jeweler's store a clock of peculiar construction The owner, who refused to reveal the principle of its mechanism, told him that the timepiece was unique, and had been made in England twenty-five years ago. Mr. Kraft went home resolved on working out the problem for himself. The result of his determination is a timepiece supported by four polished columns. Beneath it stands a small brass platform balanced on two pivots. A groove cut into the surface of the brass runs zigzag from one end to the other. In this runs incessantly a steel ball the size of a rifle bullet.

When the ball has gone from one end of the platform to the other it strikes a steel wire. The platform tilts up, the ball rolls back, and the process is repeated at the opposite extremity. Mr. Kraft explained the principle of his clock the other day as follows: "The two wires which the ball strikes against at the end of each trip are fastened above to a long rod. From the upper side of this rod runs a strip of steel, which rests against one of four pins on an escapement wheel in the works. When the ball strikes the wire it releases this wheel, which makes a quarter revolution to the next pin. On the same axis is a cog wheel whose teeth fit into those of another of half the circumference. The smaller wheel makes a half revolution while the other is mak ing a quarter. To the axis of this wheel fastened a rod, which is attached at its other end to the platform, which is pulled up or down according to the wire which the ball strikes. It takes the ball just five seconds to make the trip, a half second for each section of the groove The platform acts as a pendulum, with a five second swing."

The Neighbors' Club, Washington. Professor Powell, of the geological urvey, whose descriptions of the Grand canyon of the Colorado are among the finest pieces of scientific writing in the world, is an enthusiastic member of "The Neighbors." Professors Mendenhall and Loring, Statistician Dodge and other government specialists are fre quent guests. Gen. Greely, of the weather bureau, tall and dignified, is often at the club. One of Gen. Greely's peculiarities is his unwillingness to talk of his Arctic experiences. All attempts to draw him out on this fascinating subject are politely and skillfully parried. Professor Elliott, the Smithsonian employe, who has told the world nearly all it knows of the interior of Alaska, an enthusiastic traveler and student of nature, is one of the remarkable men to be seen in "The Neighbors" gatherings. Old Admiral Porter, who will doubtless keep on writing till the breath leaves his body, is another member. The old admiral is growing very infirm, but he still turns out an astonishing quantity of manuscript. He disdains the use of stenographers and typewriters and has no patience with steel pens. The good old goose quill is the only implement that can rouse his inspiration.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cur, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitional remedy on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials Address,

Dr. F. B. Brewer: - I received your last box of medicine all right. I think I am much better than I was a week ago. I commenced to gain strength as soon as I got the chills and fever broken up, I don't have those nervous spells any more. I don't cough and raise as much as I did what I do raise looks pretty bad, but no blood just clear corruption. I have not vomited up my food for about a week. My victuals begin to taste natural. I have a splendid appetite.
