A CIGARETTE ROMANCE.

How a Young Husband Was Brought Back to His Loving Bride.

"You would never think that there could be any sort of a romance connected with a cigarette picture, would you?" asked a gentleman connected with one of the Boston theatres of the writer a few days ago, and, receiving a negative reply, he went on to tell the following story, which is true in every particular, and from which, for obvious reasons, the names of the parties concerned are withheld:

"Several years ago a young man, at that time one of the lesser lights in the theatrical profession, married a young lady who was in the same business, and the pair settled in a cozy up-town flat in New York.

"Everything went on finely for a season, but at last when the theatre season opened, they were obliged to part, for the husband was to go in advance of the company, while the young wife played a part in another play.

"At first letters were exchanged every day. Then they dropped to once a week and finally to once a month. Rumors floated to the effect that the young wife about the actions of her husband and vice versa, so that when at last the season closed and the pair returned to their little flat in New York, a coolness which could not be explained by either had sprung up between them. The husband joined a club and passed nearly all of his evenings at the club, and the wife, left alone in this manner, sought the company of friends.

"In this manner the breach widened, until at last the husband went to live at his club, while the wife remained at the flat, and a separation was agreed upon, although for what reason they wished to be separated neither could tell.

"Another theatre season had opened by this time, and the husband came to Boston as the manager of his company. He had a few days to spare, and, almost always carries a quantity of a certain brand about with him. After staying here a week he packed his valise and started for New York. On arriving at the depot he had not a single cigarette to smoke on his way over in the train. There were no other passengers, and he felt that he had a chance to get a few. He looked about for a while, and finally he saw a man in a dark suit and a top hat, who he recognized as one of the actors of the company.

"The young manager hurried out and, after a few moments, he saw a man in a dark suit and a top hat, who he recognized as one of the actors of the company. He looked about for a while, and finally he saw a man in a dark suit and a top hat, who he recognized as one of the actors of the company.

MISS BERNIE EARL has gone to South Haven, for the Fourth.

W. G. GEORGE, for many years a prominent attorney at South Bend, died quite suddenly, Friday.

The gas well digger in Royalton struck gas at forty-five feet, but that was too easy and they will go deeper.

MISS OLLIE ALLEN, of Niles, is visiting with her aunt, Mrs. Chas. A. Howe, in this place.

The Legal Document company gave an entertainment in the opera house, Tuesday evening.

HARVEY ROYGH has been South the past week, in the interest of the wagon works.

THREASERS are getting ready for business, which they expect to begin soon.

A FOUR pound bass was caught from South Clear lake last week, by a South Bender.

Mrs. MARY STRAW tripped on a croquet wicket, Monday evening, and fell bruising herself quite seriously.

Mrs. N. B. ARSTIN, of Rensselaer, Ind., is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. Treasler in this place.

Mrs. BANTON is in Ann Arbor having her eyes treated, at the University hospital.

THE camping out season is in full force. A party from this place is at Hudson lake this week.

RETIRE early tonight as you are likely to hear something quite early in the morning.

MR. S. C. REED, of Saugatuck, is here to spend the Fourth with relatives.

W. S. WELLS wants to secure help about housework. He will pay $1.50 per week and hire washing done, out, or will give good wages for all work.

NILES Star nominates O. W. Coolidge for congress. It is certainly an excellent send-off Mr. Coolidge gets, to have the Star nominate him.

BENTON HARBOR will celebrate to the best of her ability to-morrow. Among the attractions will be a bicycle tournament.

MAKE all of your arrangements to be in Buchanan August 6, and then be here. You will regret it if you are not.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Persons died Saturday afternoon, funeral Sunday. This is the first fatal case in the measles epidemic which has prevailed in Buchanan the past few weeks.

MARTIN STEEL picked twelve crates of strawberries, one day last week, for G. Kramer, and counts it a pretty good day's work for a boy.

The first passenger train over the new Vandallia railroad took about 600 hoosier excursionists to St. Joseph, Saturday.

GEORGE DEAN, of Niles, was in this place last week for a visit. Mr. Dean is totally blind, and is just from the state school for the blind, at Flint, where he learned to tune and repair pianos. He is endeavoring to secure work in that line, in Niles and vicinity.

The two wool buyers in this place have managed to gather in about 55,000 pounds of wool this season. Much more than is usually sold in Buchanan. This is the result of sharp competition in the market. Mr. Redden sold his purchases, amounting to 20,000 pounds, Monday.

The hot weather of the past week has been pretty tough on the human family. More cases of sunstroke than is common for a whole summer are reported and a large number are fatal. Forty deaths by this cause are reported in Chicago, Monday.

HENRY LOUGH has quite a number of curiosities brought from Florida, among them is the tanned skin of a diamond backed rattlesnake. The skin is 8 1/2 inches wide and quite long. It may be seen at his jewelry store. It may make you want to go to Florida for a picnic.

THE South Bend Tribune published an interview with Tom Cottrill, on the Michigan penitentiary and the treatment given prisoners. He speaks quite favorably of Warden Hatch and his management of the prison.

CHILDREN'S day was observed with appropriate exercises by the children by the U. B. Sunday school, last Sunday forenoon, and by the Evangelical school in the evening. Notwithstanding the hot weather, both were well attended, and the entertainments enjoyed.

LIST of letters remaining unclaimed for in the post-office at Buchanan, Mich., for the week ending July 1, '90: Mr. Wm. Hoving, Mrs. Amy Lingo, Mr. Walter Payne, Robert Smith.

JOHN GRAHAM, P. M.

We have among us two nuisances of a kind. One talks in a coarse undertone when any entertainment is in progress, when others want to hear. The other persists in pounding the floor with his stogias, whenever he hears any music. You will always find them both present at all church entertainments, or wherever they can go free.

Misses Annie Treat and Lizzie Strausight have finished their course at the State Normal and returned home. They have both contracted to teach in Champion, Marquette county., the coming school year, at good salaries.

LEW BOYLE, Will East and Brink Duncan went to Weaver Lake fishing, and one of them fell into the lake. Lew thinks it would have been fun if the water had not been quite so wet. In fact, it was the wettest water he ever tumbled into.

HENRY EDICK, of Benton Harbor, celebrated his 100th birthday anniversary, Saturday. He is hale and hearty, and has good prospects for an other ten or twenty years. Last April election day he walked a quarter of a mile to the polls, up two flights of stairs, and back home, with the aid of nothing but his cane.

WHAT was at one time the Three Oaks Sun, has taken another change of shell. Its last form was the St. Joseph Pilot, C. C. Heer, publisher. It is now the Weekly Post, Heer & Jennings, publishers. It requires a desperate struggle to keep six or seven newspapers going in this county, where ten might fill the entire field.

A PECULIAR malady appears to have stricken some of the wheat fields in this immediate vicinity. It shows itself by the heads ripening too early. Sometimes only parts of the head will be affected. The chaff turns yellow while the balance of the head remains green. The kernels in this part of the head appear to have died and soured while in the mill, or dough, and made perfectly worthless. We do not learn that this is very extensive. It is certainly a new thing in wheat raising for this part of the country.

THE extremely hot weather we have been having the past week has made it necessary to use the utmost care regarding health. There are a number of alleys about town that have not been cleaned this spring and some of them smell pretty loud. There is also an occasional pig pen that might be cleaner. It is also the habit of some housewives to throw their slops into a hole close by the back kitchen door. These are as perfect disease breeders as is possible to contrive. If you are too lazy to make any other disposal of slops, and must have such a place about the premises, keep a barrel of lime and throw some of it over the place every few days.

THE Kalamazoo Telegraph says that during the period of ten years, expiring December 31, 1889, there were 35,559 real estate mortgages given in the Fourth congressional district, divided among the counties as follows: Berrien, 3,977; Kalamazoo, 5,353; Van Buren, 7,954; St. Joseph, 7,320; Cass, 4,655. In Kalamazoo, during the first four years of the ten there were 3,177 mortgages, and of this number but 30 had been foreclosed at the expiration of the decade—less than 1 per cent.

The mortgages on city and village property in this county largely outnumber those on farm property, both in number and amount, and it is safe to say that at least 75 per cent of the mortgages given during the first four years have been discharged, and that of the whole number given during the decade, not more than one-half are now in force.

SURVEYOR GRAYES has been doing some more work in and about this place for the St. Joseph Valley railroad. He has run a line from the present track in Moccasin bluff, just below the Moon spring. The line follows the river bluff to the river bridge and comes up the creek bottom lands near the Bainton mills, thence to the Michigan Central grounds. This will keep the grade down to an easier incline, besides taking the track to direct and easy connection with all of the water privileges along the creek which are not now being utilized, mostly because they are so far from the railroad and too great an expense incurred in teaming. It will also place the track directly in position to make the most of any improvement in the waterpower in the river. We do not learn how soon the route is to be changed, if ever. Nothing has yet been done farther than the survey.

AN agreement not to sell straw for less than $2.00 a ton in the stack or $4.00 per ton delivered, is being circulated among the farmers and extensively signed.—Niles Democrat.

We notice that when we want a ton of that same straw to make into boxes we have to pay $63 for it, after adding a very thin coating of manilla.

THE RECORD is green with jealousy over the fact that we supply readers of The Enterprise with an eight page paper, "two of which are home print." The RECORD evidently does itself proud with its four pages of home print, two of which are "patent plates" and the other local and editorial. But that organ is incapable of saying a compliment without turning it to revert its meaning.—Enterprise.

A plain statement of facts with no comment whatever, appears to make our German friend feel bad. Some people know when they are complimented, and some have to be told. When he finds two pages of "patent plates" in the RECORD we have a chronicle for him.

ADRIAN's oldest Mason is William Moore, who is 92 years old, and yet attends lodge frequently. Mr. Moore was initiated 69 years ago.—Detroit Journal.

The executive committee of the Young People's Picnic Association met at Hotel Pike, Thursday afternoon last, and decided to hold the next picnic at Buchanan, Aug. 6, the people of that place having guaranteed $150 for prizes, etc. Next to holding the picnic here we are sure our people would prefer to have it at Buchanan. That place will doubtless do herself proud on the occasion, and Niles should send a large delegation.—Niles Democrat.

While $150 was promised nearly double that amount has already been raised, and every arrangement will be made for as successful a meeting as the association has ever had. The large delegation from Niles will be expected, and every effort made to have them not regret having been here.

HARRY SNYDER, son of Peter Snyder, came very near his end Saturday evening, by a runaway on Front street. He had driven up the street to the Detroit street corners, and was coming back down town when his horse shied, and in holding him the reins broke, when Mr. Snyder had no further control of the horse. At the Oak street crossing Snyder was thrown to the ground and knocked insensible by the fall. He was taken into O. S. Fourie's market and medical assistance called. He was taken from there to the home of his uncle, Charles Snyder, where he still remains. He did not regain consciousness until next day, and is still confined to the room. The horse, after being free from his driver, ran to the mill-race bridge on Portage street, and becoming entangled in the harness, threw himself and went no farther. Two flasks of whisky were found among the ruins, and gave currency to the story that Harry was drunk. He had bought the liquor for neighbors, one for Christ, Harman and the other for Mitch, Alexander, and was not intoxicated.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Passenger train No. 5, which is due to pass this place about 6:25 p. m., was over an hour late, Saturday afternoon, and the local freight which carries passengers had run upon a sidetrack to be out of the way. John E. Goss, a young farmer whose home was in Van Buren county, near Bangor, had bought a ticket for New Buffalo and was walking down the track to get aboard the freight. When about fourteen rods below the passenger house, No. 5 struck him and threw him head first against some freight cars on the north side of the main track, killing him instantly. He fell so that his left foot was across the track and was cut off by the train. Nearly every bone of any importance was broken. The remains were taken in charge by officers Palmer and Dick and undertaker Henderson, who identified him by papers found in his pockets. A jury was empaneled Sunday morning which, after viewing the remains and taking some testimony, adjourned to Esquire Dick's office at 10 o'clock Wednesday. Mr. Palmer accompanied the remains to his late home, returning Monday. Mr. Goss was twenty-seven years of age, of excellent connection and standing, a young farmer, taught school, and had spent one year at the Agricultural college, and last year at the State Normal school, at Ypsilanti. He had just finished canvassing Berrien township for the sale of Dr. Chase's receipt book, and was on his way home for the Fourth. At the inquest, Wednesday morning, the engineer swore that his train was going thirty miles an hour; that he did not see the man until he was within four rods of him; that four rods was as far ahead of his engine as he could see the track at that point, on account of the curve; that the man could see his engine up the track over a mile; that as soon as he saw the man between the two rails he was on, he blew the whistle, shut off the steam, and applied his air brake; that the man sprang toward the north rail and then toward the south rail, and was just at the rail when the pilot struck him; that he blew the usual station whistle, which consisted of seven blasts, one a mile out, four at the crossing, and two for the flagman. It is somewhat peculiar that that train should be making but thirty miles an hour. This same train on other days, when it was promptly on time, has been timed over the mile which includes our station, and made it in fifty-five seconds, and this engineer made no effort to slacken his speed until he saw the man on the track. The jury rendered the following verdict, last evening:

That the said John F. Goss came to his death at the village of Buchanan, in said county, on Saturday, June 28, 1890, about 7:30 p. m., and on the Michigan Central railroad, by being struck by the engine drawing train No. 5, running west, as he was walking on the track going to the caboose of freight train No. 27, which was sidetracked west of the Michigan Central railroad warehouse, for which train he had bought a ticket to carry him to New Buffalo, and had been told by the Company's agent, of whom he bought the ticket, that he could have to walk down to the where the train was standing to get on; and we find train No. 5, by which he was run down, was going at a speed of thirty miles an hour, according to the statement of the engineer of said train, and we hereby censure the said Michigan Central Railroad Company for allowing their train to be run through the village of Buchanan at a greater rate of speed than the ordinance of said village allows, which is twelve miles an hour.

This was the same engineer who killed the Alspaugh girl, in Dayton, a few weeks ago. After the train left this place, Saturday, it passed Dayton just as passengers were being exchanged for the Kalamazoo accommodation, and at about the same rate it passed through here, and it was by the liveliest kind of scrambling that the train was kept from moving through the crowd between the station and the accommodation train.

The Benton Harbor Palladium says that Simon Pokagon, chief of the Pottawatamies, is in Washburn, Ind., to see the government school for Indians at that place with reference to sending either some of his people, Chief Pokagon having the palmetto, a letter from his attorney at Washington, stated that the claim of the Pottawatamie tribe in Michigan would be allowed in October, so that they can realize their money soon afterward. The full amount of the claim is placed at $219,100.20, and this large sum will be paid to about 250 members of the tribe.

THE LEAF SHADED RESIDENCES OF SOME WELL KNOWN MEN.

Editor Warner's New Jersey Home—The Farm House ex-Senator Platt Fields Sunday Rest—Cockloff Hall, immortalized by Washington Irving.

[Copyright by American Press Association.] The house of H. C. Bunner, editor of Puck, at Nutley, N. J., stands in a forest of oaks and maples. It has a pretty garden at the rear, and there are other houses near by, although the picture gives the impression of a "lodge in some vast wilderness." Nutley, about forty minutes ride by cars from Jersey City, is the new part of the town of Cranford, a place that celebrated its centenary before revolutionary times, as it was settled in the seventeenth century. Nutley has sprung up within the past four or five years, the land belonging in part to the Stewart and Satterlee estates. It is a picturesque spot. The Orange mountains are in sight; there are bold rocks and sloping plains, and the Yanticaw river meanders through the fertile valley.

Mr. Bunner has lived in Nutley three years. His house is an extremely pleasant and homelike place. There is a veranda across the front. Over the entrance door hangs a horseshoe, which is bound to bring Mr. Bunner peace and prosperity, for it is so placed that the luck cannot escape. But half the people, by the way, know how to hang up a horseshoe properly. The hall is a wide, hospitable one, with the drawing room next Mr. Bunner's study opening from it at either side.

The photograph shows the south side of the house, with the conservatory, which opens out of the dining room. The conservatory is a very pretty structure, with a table in the center of the room has a load of uncut papers and magazines, letters and books. A pretty glass jar holding some freshly gathered ferns just has a foothold among all the literary impedimenta. Mr. Bunner's family is a small one—his wife and little daughter, Nancy, and the dog, "Ridge," the latter so named from an Alfordshire guide. Mr. Bunner used to visit the Essex county region some years ago, but his favorite haunts now in summer are the Maine lakes, as he is something of an Isaak Walton in his tastes.

Ex-United States Senator Thomas C. Platt keeps his suite of apartments at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, the year round. In summer, however, he finds time to spend a day or so each week at his country place, where he owns a farm of about 100 acres—"Ridge farm," as he calls it. This is in the township of Highland Mills, a place near West Point.

The house at Ridge farm, as shown in the accompanying cut, is a low, rambling dwelling, being unpretending in appearance, but very comfortable in its appointments. It stands some thousand feet above the sea level, and has a view beyond which there is an elevation which commands a fine view of the surrounding country. The Catskill mountains loom up in the distance and half a dozen lakes are in sight.

The house is furnished in the Japanese style. There are matting and rugs on the floor, bamboo settees, low creosote covered couches—everything suitable for a summer house, with nothing heavy or cumbersome in appearance. There Mr. Platt has a fine and valuable library. There he keeps his horses and some famous greyhounds, and there Mrs. Platt has quite a family of pet cats, "Julius" being the prime favorite of the lot. He is a cat of many and varied accomplishments, but is chiefly celebrated for sedately sitting up at table in a high chair, with a bit tied about his neck. During the summer Mr. and Mrs. Platt pass some time at the Oriental Hotel, Coney Island, but when Mrs. Platt is at Ridge farm Mr. Platt spends the Saturday half-holiday and Sunday at the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Platt have three sons and two grandchildren. The youngest son, Harry, resides in New York and is superintendent of the money order department of the United States Express company, of which his father, president. The eldest son, Edward, resides at the interests of this company in Washington, D. C., where he lives.

Cockloff hall, immortalized by Washington Irving, still stands in the place to which in Newark, N. J. Fashion has added a conservatory and changed the gable roof into a French one, but the main part of the house is very much as it was built over 100 years ago by the Government of New York and of the Huguenot origin. The house became in course of time the residence of Governor Kemble, a scholar. There, with a retinue of servants to do his bidding, he glared in observing the golden rules of hospitality, which consisted in those days in giving a guest the freedom of the house and crumming him with beef and pudding. Washington Irving was a frequent and welcome visitor of the jolly landlord.

There was a summer house on the place, and in it Irving and his friend James Kirke Paulding concocted the "Salmagundi Papers," which appeared every month "to vex and charm the town." Many of these papers, as the reader knows, are devoted to a description of Pindar Cockloff and his home, Cockloff hall or, more correctly, the house owned by Mr. Novers, whose wife was Miss Whiting. Mr. Whiting bought the place some forty years ago from one of the names. The summer house was sacrificed to the demands of trade a few years back, the office of a lumber company now standing upon the historic spot. The grounds surrounding the house are still spacious, but in Irving's time they extended to what is now Belleville avenue at the rear and sloped down to the Passaic river in front. On the bank of the river was the summer house, which was octagonal in shape, about eighteen feet in diameter, containing only one apartment, with a door leading to the conservatory on each of the other three cardinal points. It was built of stone and had been originally weather bound. It was constructed with great care. The walls were plastered and painted, there was an ornamental cornice and chair board and an arched doorway and cut stone steps. Near by was a fish pond, which Irving accounts for as follows: "Mr. Cockloff thought there was nothing like having things to one's self, and therefore he blew up a large bed of rocks for the purpose of having a fish pond of his own, although the ground ran about five or six feet from the house and was well stored with fish, and he would have a summer house built on the margin of the fish pond, he would have it surrounded with willows and elms, and he would have a cedar dog house and a well and a well house that were wont to surrender their exhibiting contents at the summons of the occupants of the comfortable apartment above. The peculiar position of the building also illustrates the eccentric ideas of Cockloff, who was determined to have all his views on his own land and be beholden to no man for a prospect, he placed the house on a small knoll on the side toward the water, while the windows all looked inland." Mr. Novers has in his possession a copy of the "Salmagundi Papers," one of the third edition. It contains some very curious illustrations which have not been reproduced in later editions. There is a picture of Pindar Cockloff in all the glory of flowered waistcoat, knee breeches and a queue, and one of Barbara Cockloff in a low, dark, flowing dress, unbuttoned and bejeweled, waiting with a gallant. The fashion of this dance in those days was to skip one way and then to jump another, and the illustration does ample justice to the step.

The picture of Cockloff's mansion accompanying this article shows the house as it was originally built, with the exception of the conservatory. The reader must note well the "cherry tree" which is frequently mentioned in the descriptions of Cockloff's mansion.

"An old English cherry tree leans against a corner of the hall, and whether the house supports it or it supports the house, we are in the possession of some difficulty to decide. The tree has long since ceased bearing and is exceedingly infirm." This is Irving's description of the old tree which about two years ago was blown down.

FRANCES M. SMITH.

A BOY WHO IS TREBLY AFFLICTED. Despite His Misfortunes He May Become a Scientist.

No class of unfortunate has so excited the sympathy and interest of people as have the blind deaf mutes. They were once regarded as mentally defective, and less than a century ago the first efforts were made to educate them. Today the methods of instruction have so improved that a person afflicted with loss of sight, speech and hearing can be taught to read and speak by signs and writing in a few months.

The first deaf blind mute to attract attention in this country was Julia Brace, who was educated in signs only, and not in the English language. Then Laura Bridgman, the first one educated in language and signs, came into prominence. These were in the Perkins Institute for the Blind, in Boston, a girl 13 years of age who has made great progress under special instruction. There is also a little boy receiving instruction in Hartford, Conn.

The New York Institution for the Deaf and Dumb sent out three years ago a deaf blind mute named James Caxton, who was a skillful typewriter, and they have since sent out a young man 30 years of age, who lost hearing and sight when 3 years old. This patient also uses a typewriter.

But the most interesting and by far the most promising case known to the authorities has been recently reported from their notice. Orris Benson, a boy now 8 years old, went to the institution last September, a blind, deaf mute who had never received an hour's intelligent instruction.

It is not often that a man between 30 and 40 years of age tries to make up for the defects of early training by going to school with a lot of boys and a trick of that is what James P. Eagle did, and he has no cause to regret his thirst after knowledge, for he has stood him in good stead. He was elected him governor of the other day the Democratic party of that state renominated him for a second term.

Mr. Eagle was a Tennessee farmer lad, born in 1857, who went to school and late on his father's acres until the civil war broke out. Then he considered his musket on behalf of the south and marched away a private. When peace came he returned back home a lieutenant colonel. As soon as he had arranged his affairs he came to New York, where his family might not suffer he trudged off to school in 1870, a private in the ranks of education. After school came college, then public life and political preference. His Arkansas friends had elected him governor of that state in 1872, and in 1885 he was speaker of the house. Next followed his elevation to the executive chair and now he is in the race for another term.

From Poverty to Riches in a Minute. One minute with poverty staring him in the face; the next a rich man for life. That was the actual experience of S. P. Armstrong, who died the other day of heart disease at Butler, Pa. He had invested all his funds in sinking a well in the Thorn Creek oil region of Pennsylvania. It was thought to be dry, and as the neighbors sent him to the legislature the explorer fired a torpedo in the well. Immediately after the explosion the well began to flow at a tremendous rate, a volume of oil being lifted into the air to a height of at least one hundred feet. Not having expected a high well no connections had been made to the tanks, and the oil flowed on the ground, completely deluging the entire neighborhood. After several hours the oil was turned into tanks with great personal risk to the workmen, and the first day's production was 10,000 barrels, the largest well ever opened in the oil country. It was a mine of wealth to Mr. Armstrong, and developed a large scope of rich territory.

Strange and unaccountable noises for a long time disturbed the rest of Wallace Salisbury's family at Little York, Cortlandt county, N. Y. The mystery was solved the other day by the discovery under the eaves of the homestead of over a hundred bats. After the bats had been properly killed and buried no more trouble was experienced.

The hypocrisy of civilization has made choice of the cut will be a great subject which he has learned to recognize by touch and to describe in writing and by signs. Van Tresselt, also a deaf mute, is speaking to him by forming the letters with his fingers. The writing on the board to the left was done by the little unfortunate himself.

At the same manner did he get a pen and a hand saw. About one hundred letters in raised letters of Dr. Moon's alphabet for the blind placed on cards were given him. He recognized them by touch, spelled them on his fingers and then wrote them on the board. Alphabetical blocks with depressed letters were given him and he combined them into simple words like "cat," "dog," "fish," etc. He spelled the numerals from one to ten and wrote them in figures. He has also been taught scripture verses and sentences from Dr. Peter's Language Lessons. On the table the cut will be a great subject which he has learned to recognize by touch and to describe in writing and by signs. The board above the table contains depressed letters and words from which he has first taught to read. His teacher, Professor C. W. Van Tresselt, also a deaf mute, is speaking to him by forming the letters with his fingers. The writing on the board to the left was done by the little unfortunate himself.
