MY ADVENTURE.

Years ago, when I was a young man with only the shadow of a mustache...

Early in the fall of 1856 my father, Judge B. who was president of the old Scioto bank, where I was making myself useful until the college term commenced, summoned me to his private office.

"George," said he, "I find that we will need an extra fifty thousand dollars to-morrow when the bank opens. Now, it is necessary that some one should immediately go to Columbus, and get the money, which is to be made to me before the bank closes. Let me see," said he, "bring out an old-fashioned watch and glance at it, 'twenty-five miles in a little more than three hours.' You can do it with Dick and Dolly, can't you?"

"Yes," I replied, "I can do it, but I'm not sure I can do it in the time you want."

"No one need know anything about this money," I must have it," he replied, emphatically, "and it is safest to send you."

For some inexplicable reason I disliked to do it, though I would not for any consideration have had my father know I felt about it. Certainly, I will go, father," I replied, but there was something so unnatural in the tone of my voice that my father gave me a searching look and turned to his desk, revolving, as I thought, some other scheme.

"You will have to go, and you will have to go, and you will have to go," he said, "and you will have to go, and you will have to go, and you will have to go."

"You will have to go, and you will have to go, and you will have to go," he said, "and you will have to go, and you will have to go, and you will have to go."

"You will have to go, and you will have to go, and you will have to go," he said, "and you will have to go, and you will have to go, and you will have to go."

A Bird Boarding House.

Riding along sixth avenue of a surface car while in New York, my attention was attracted by a sign which read: "Birds Boarded Here."

Disembarking from the car, I entered the establishment in which the din or bird music was somewhat distracting. A middle aged woman seemed to be the presiding genius of the place, and to her I addressed some inquiries:

"What's the sign outside says; and you can see for yourself we ain't lackin' for canaries," replied the woman, dryly.

"Most of them belonging to other people," she said.

"Yes, we only have about a dozen of our own. You see, when folks go away in the summer to the seaside, or to the mountains and shut up their houses, they have to get somebody to take care of their birds while they are gone. That's the reason we are in this business. My husband—his wife with rheumatism—she calls this the Canary House."

"How many feathered guests have you at present?"

"Over four hundred. Some of them belong to pretty rich and high-toned people, too. One of the Vanderbilts, I know, has a lot of birds. He has a lot of birds, and that bird there in that blue caged cage belongs to one of the big guns of Wall Street. Folks are so particular about their birds. Some want us to look after their birds, and finally stop some want white, and others want it mixed. One man told us to give his bird a fresh piece of cuttlefish every morning. There's a woman who would have a bird with blue feet, and a great water, which she said made it coarse. Then some people give their birds the queerest names. Do you see that big necked canary who is asleep on his perch in that cage? He's usually called Ripper. This one over in the corner is called Mary. This little beauty's name is Kathleen Mavourneen. The people she belongs to have gone to Europe. In the back room is a bird named Santa Claus—his is so old."

"What are your charges?"

"Oh, that depends on how long we keep a bird, how much he eats, and how long he stays. We usually charge from two to six dollars a month, sometimes eight dollars a month. We have charged more than that to rich folks that put on airs."

One Thing at a Time. Early in life I learned from a very simple incident a wholesome lesson, and one that has since been of incalculable benefit to me.

When I was between twelve and fourteen years old my father broke up a new field on his farm, and planted it with potatoes, and when the plants were up he had me to hoe. He gave me a hoe, and the ground of that piece was hard to till; it was matted with grass roots and sprinkled with stones. I hoed the first row, and stopped to take a rest, and when I had done so, he came to me, and he said to me: 'Grass as high as the potatoes was everywhere, and looking at the whole from any point it seemed to be a solid mass. I had the work to do all alone, and as stood staring at the broad expanse of weeds, I felt a good mind not to do anything further than with it. Just that minute I happened to look down at the hill nearest my feet. The grass didn't seem just quite as thick as it used to be, and I can see this one well enough.'

When it was done another thought came to help me; I shan't have to hoe but one hill at a time, at any rate. And so I went to the next row next. But he said to stop, and he looked
