DR. LAMBERT, the general medical director of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, said:
"There is no doubt that the whole tendency of life insurance now is toward liberality. There are comparatively few attempts to work any great scheme of fraud upon us, but we have to be on the watch. Two years ago a man wanted to insure for a very large amount. I suspected that he had kidney disease, and discovered that my suspicion was well founded and rejected his application. A few months later he committed suicide, and stack insurance companies to the extent of $300,000."

"We reject sixteen per cent of the applications made to us for insurance," said Dr. Lambert, "and I have saved the entire expense of this medical department by the rejection alone of applicants who had diseased kidneys, and who died within two years after I rejected them,"—New York Sox, Feb'y 18, 69.

BY EDNA MARIE BOOTH. The sun is setting in all its splendor, sending soft, gleaming shadows over the foliage on the river's bank, as Harold Dunlap and Alfred Stanton row towards the former's stately house. As their boat grazes the private wharf the young men spring lightly out. An old negro comes hurrying to meet

"I thought you were not coming, Al," she says, "and I have such charming Stanton smiles as he looks down upon the bright, happy face raised to his own, for this is by no means an un-usual welcome; Myrtle usually has something to relate to her lover that is "Are your words so precious that

"No danger of that; he's a man," sponds Lillian, rather sleepily; and then the two conspirators nestle into the pillows as though no plot was on hand. The MacDermonts come, and with them a large party of visitors The young people all seem bent on having a gay time; excursions, picnics and driving parties are formed for every pleasant day.

Harold is Lillian's constant attendant, but his face grows dark when he hears her merrily laughing with Hugh MacDermont; and as the days go on becomes decidedly jealous. She does not heed this in the least, and a coolness springs up between the pair, who seem bent upon playing with edged Myrtle watches them in some alarm; her little plot is ending badly, she fears. Lillian turns a deaf ear to her remonstrances, and Harold frowns when she tries to make her friend the subject of conversation. Meanwhile the two drift further apart.

Affairs are in this state when one morning a party is formed to visit an old fort at a considerable distance. Lillian is leaning against the rail of one of the many balconies that adorned the house at Glenwood. A quick step, a short whistle, and Hugh MacDermont is at her side. "Ah, Miss Lillian, what luck! Can't stop a moment-wanted to know if you would favor me with your company to day. We go to the city in boats, you know—I have a fine one." Lillian hesitates. Harold has given her no invitation, and treats her with stern coldness. She will not humble herself to him by coaxing him back. Meanwhile she needs an escor', and Hugh is better than no one. Before she has time to say yes, however, there is a slight rustle, and Myrtle, followed by Harold, steps through one of the low windows. "Good morning, Mr. MacDermont," she says with a little nod; and then to Lillian. "We have been looking for you eyerywhere." "What for?" asks Miss Chester.

"Harold wants you to choose a boat for yourself and him. You are going with us to day, Mr. MacDermont?" "Yes, of course; just ran over to say so, and only found Miss Lillian. How are you, Harold, old fellow? Will see you later." And MacDermont leaps over the low railing and disappears, with the belief that Lillian's hesitation "Thank you; I am sorry I cannot say Dunlap is leaning against the railing with a peculiar smile on his face. "Of course; do I not always want to see you? Therein lies my misfortune, he answers, half mockingly. Miss Chester grows nervous, wonders why he glances so often at Myrtle, whose figure is shaking to an alarming degree. Trying to be quite self-possessed, she speaks again.

"But what particular need of me

Little Things That Count. In every line of business, no matter whether conducted upon a large or small scale, it is the small things that count. The little expenses, the little wastes, the little economies, are the ones that turn the balance of accounts, either for profit or loss, and it is these little things that need the closest attenten. The larger, more important details of every business are carefully looked after; there is very little chance for neglect, carelessness or oversight. The workman who spoils a costly piece of machinery, or causes a loss of considerable account is held responsi ble and is generally very careful in this respect, but in little things he is not so prompt in exercising care and economy. and these little things are looked upon as one of no consequence, and as having no real value. We have heard it asserted by a man who, beginning on barely nothing, succeeded in building up a large and profitable business, and retiring with a considerable fortune, when asked how he had managed, what was the secret of his success, he replied, by saving what other people wasted, looking after the little things and seeing that not a thing was thrown away or cast aside as too small or insignificant to be of any value. A few cents here and a few there make up quite a sum in course of a year, and it is hy paying careful attention to the little details, by looking after the cents, that I have made my dollars. There is a great deal more in this than most people would be willing to admit. They are in too much of a hurry to make dollars to look out for cents. A poor and incompetent or disinterested workman is not only a poor man to employ because he is this, but because he is wasteful and careless about small things. Take some of our very large manufactories, where hundreds of employes are engaged, and. unless the most watchful care is exercised, the amount of waste that is lost would go far toward paying running experses. In these times of close competition when it becomes an absolute necessity that every possible item be carefully turned to account, the exercise of economy in small things is being more rigidly cultivated. Profits at best are only small, and these are made considerably less by the wastefulness of un-thoughtful men. Nor is it alone in the factory or workshop where the necessity of looking after these things makes it selfapparent. The workmen of today, with his wages scarcely sufficient to provide for the comforts and necessities of life, has the most need to practice economy in small things, and it is surprising to note what an amount of waste is made by those who have the most need to practice economy. A few cents here and a few there seem mere trifles, and are not regarded as any particular consequence, or as having any material relation to the annual expenses, but if a careful account were kept in a single year, the result would be astonishing, and just here is where the difference lies between individuals and corporations. The latter have learned by a comparison of the strict accounts which are an absolute necessity with them, the lesson of economy in small things. Everything is put down and can be looked over and studied, and its effect upon the total noted, and this is a lesson that should be learned by inlividuals, and workingmen especially. By them, as a rule, no account of daily expenses, or even any expense is kept They receive their money, and it is spent. At the end of the year not one of them can tell where his money has gone, or for what purpose, whether he has made a profit from the time and labor expended, or not; and for this reason, as well as that he may see where and how he may economize and save something, even if only small amount, the workman should keep a strict and careful account of daily expenditures and receipts. Such a course would not only result beneficially to him personally, but would make him a more careful, painstaking and valuable employe. Carelessness at home or of one's personal interests breeds carelessness of others' interests, and there is nothing which an employer notices more quickly, and is more ready and willing to appreciate and reward, than the display of care and interest in the little details by a workman.

It cannot be expected that a man who is careless of his own welfare and interests will exercise any more care than he is obliged to do under the watchful eye of the foreman or proprietor, or care for those of his employer.
It is, then, all-important that every individual exercise this watchfulness of the small things in business and in lessness of his employes. The employe should be equally vigilant in his own personally interests, and all should remember that it is the little things that count.—Manufacturers Gazette.

The Histoy of Zero.

A writer in the N. Y. World suggests that this is just the time of year that we all begin to think about "zero". It is the part of every thermometer that is most watched and dreaded in this changeable climate of ours. The word is from the Spanish, and means empty, hence nothing. It was first used on a thermometer in 1709 by a German physicise named

As that day was the coldest day that the oldest inhabitant could remember, Gabriel was the more struck with the coincidence of his little scientific discovery, and hastily concluded that he had found the lowest degree of temperature known in the world.

either natual or artificial. He called the degree zero, and constructed a thermometer, or rude weather glass, with a scale graduating up from zero to boiling point, which he numbered 212, and the freezing point 32, because, as he thought, mercury contracted the thirty second of its volume on being cooled down from the temperature of freezing water to zero, and expanded one hundred and eightieth on being heated from the freezing to the hoiling point.

Time showed that this arrangement instead of being truly scientific, was as arbitrary as the division of the Bible into verses and chapters; and these two points no more represented the real extremes of temperature than from "Dan to Beersheba" expressed the extremes of Palestine. But Fahrenheit's thermometer had been widely adopted, with its inconvenient scale, and none thought of any better until his name became an authority, for Farhrenheit early in life abandoned trade and gave himself up to science. Then habit made people cling to the old system of cumbrous fractional money. The three countries using Fahrenheit are England, Holland and America. Russia and Germany uses Reau-

Remains of a Great Mastodon Skeleton of a mastodon found at Higate, forty miles west of St. Thomas, Canada, is on exhibition in that town. The area of the grave where the monster's bones were found is 35 by 21 feet. The bones were scattered over it, one joint fitting into the other in a bed of gray marl about six feet below the surface. Over the marl is a thick layer of black, loamy soil. The length of the animal, gauged by the measure-ments of the bones already found, and allowing for those that have not yet been discovered, is, from the point of the nostril to the root of the tail, about twenty-two feet. This is greater than that of the celebrated Mastodon gigan teus discovered near Newburg, N. Y. in the summer of 1845, and the skeleton, as a whole, is larger and more complete than any that have been found in Kentucky, Ohio, Missouri, Califonia or Oregon.

A Fearful Heritage.
The transmission of BLOOD TAINTS entail fearful consequences, and those so afflicted have urgent need to purify the blood thoroughly every spring. Neglect of this often leads to fearful complications of disease. A gentleman whose family was greatly afflicted writes us thus:

GENTLEMEN: My wife and baby, fourteen months old, and a boy of five have suffered for years from hereditary scrofula or King's evil, and would frequently break out in sores. I have employed the best physicians, but found nothing to relieve them until I tried Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. Have used fourteen bottles, and find to my astonishment they are entirely cured. Words cannot describe the value of your medicine as a blood purifier. I shall recommend it to all who are tronbled from impure blood.

It is early morning. Harold Dunlap is mounting a wild wooded hill to see the sun rise. How many times he has made the ascent in company with Lilian Chester! He angrily asks himself why he is always thinking of her; if on her first yisit she has made a fool of him she shall not do so on her second. He walks on angrily, kicking stones, sticks, anything in his path. "I wish she were not coming," he mutters. "I believe I'll go away and avoid her.' Even as he speaks the bushes on one side of him are parted, and he sees a pair of roguish eyes, a saucy nose and pretty mouth, a great black hat, under which is a lot of unruly hair, and a slight, girlish figure steps into the path. "Oh," she cries, and a bright smile lights up her face. "I was lost, and what a tramp I have had! I quite thought I knew the way, but I didn't, and I am so glad I found you—it, I mean." People do not appreciate what the amount of an income of a man like Mr. Gould means. It will be readily seen that he cannot commence to use for his own personal uses even a small part of the interest which the dividend money alone would yield. He must reinvest it, and he does reinvest it. It will be interesting to see whether the Democrats of the next Congress will claim that a member may sit in his seat and still be absent.

Unless the United States government takes some decided steps toward stopping the slaughter by Englishmen, the seal trade will be in the same condition as the buffalo stock in a very few years.

Democratic members of the Michithat the first thing to be done is the rethis state. This comes from the member of the Senate from one of the Saginaw districts.

The South will own and run the next national house of representatives, 121 of the 216 democratic members are from the states that tried to split the nation. It might be interesting to see what they would do if they had the same control of the senate and White House, but they haven't.

The large packing houses have advanced one cent a pound on canned meats, claiming that it was necessary on account of the addition of twotenths of a cent a pound to the tariff on the tin in the cans, and immediately the Chicago Tribune sets up a cry for the repeal of the tintax by the present congress. If congress does anything in the premises, it should be to break the monopoly in canned meats wide open. This act of theirs is but little short of robbery.

J. A. Mohay, as his name would suggest, is a Kansas farmer, and he is elected judge in a judicial district by the farmers' alliance. He has never studied law or had anything to do with court business in an official way, and so his lodge has made up a purse to pay for 60 days' worth of law at Ann Arbor.—Detroit News.

This is a fair sample of the lack of good sense displayed by the American citizen when he comes to vote. He would not think of employing a blacksmith to doctor his family, but will yote for a farmer to conduct his law

The Board of County Canvassers met at Cassopolis on Tuesday for the purpose of canvassing the vote of the county, and are still in session. A protest was entered against counting the vote of Calvin, Volinia and Porter townships for Hon. J. C. Burrows and also for the county ticket, but of course the county canvassers can take no action on this as it is a matter of the House of Representatives and the State Legislature and the courts. The charges of irregularities are in the main not true; if any of them are they are mere technicalities and there is no question as to who is elected. We believe that the better element of the few who are seeking a little cheap notoriety in this manner. While all this may be true it is not safe to pin your faith too strongly to what a Democratic House may not do, when such a Republican as Julius C. Burrows is in question. If Yaple asks for his seat they will give it to him. Mark the prediction.

The Boston Herald, which is an active supporter of the free trade Democracy in Massachusetts, has this: The convicts of the State prison received the news of the election of Russell with cheers of approbation, but were in the whole quite considerate of the feelings of the Republican officials

THE official vote on Governor shows that Turner received nearly 70,000 less votes than Luce did for the same office, two years ago, and Winans 35,000 less than Burt, or in other words over 100,-000 in Michigan failed to vote this year, and over two-thirds of them are Republicans. THE Democratic barbecue Saturday was not what the managers had expect ed, the crowd being kept to rather small dimensions by the rain, although as we heard one good Democrat remark, it was just the thing as the Democrats are a dry crowd and need rain. He made Democratic party does not uphold a the Republicans, especially Speaker Reed, out a pretty bad lot. That of course is what he was here for, and he could not do otherwise and fill his contract with the committee. Theox was roasted by an expert from Niles, but some of the Democrats remarked that they had eaten more palatable roast beef. It would doubtless have been better but for the rain. Buchanan and Berrien Springs bands furnished part of the music. The balance was Democratic whoops by the crowd. A dance in Rough's hall in the evening, and a goodly display of fireworks closed the exercises of a momentous day for that party in Buchanan.

Two English Authors.

I reached London just too late for the annual authors' dinner, which is one of the events of the season there, and on this account, and because my time was almost entirely taken up by the law business about which I had gone over, I did not meet as many of the literary men as I should have liked to meet. saw a good deal, however, of Edmund Gosse, who is one of the most polished and delightful of men, and has always been very kind to me. His house is a sort of center, his Sunday evenings being delightful occasions where one may meet a score of writers, sculptors and Occasionally I met him at lunch at his club, where he would get Austin Dobson, who is, like himself, in an official position in Whitehall, and obtains therefrom the substantials of life which enable him to cultivate the muses on something a little better than "oaten reed." Both Dobson and Gosse are directly in line for the laureateship when it shall fall vacant, though no one knows who will get it. I am indebted to both of them for much personal kindness. Gosse is a good sized, handsome man, of the blonde English type, with the cheeriest face and voice, and wherever he goes it grows warm and comfortable. Dobson is somewhat older. Both of them strike me as being among the most cultured men I ever met. They have English literature at their fingers' ends, and dwell in an atmosphere which is redolent of the masters.—Thomas Nelson Page in Richmond Times.

Stole Busts from a Cemetery. That too ingenious person who stole bronze and marble basts from the cemetery of Montparnasse, touched them up and sold them as effigies of famous heroes, statesmen or orators, has at last met with the punishment which his lugubrious labors deserved. Moreau, for so the new kind of "resurrection man," to adopt the phrase of Dickens, is called came up before the eighth tribunal of police, and was soon sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

The singular thefts perpetrated by Moreau in the cemetery long passed unperceived. He was accordingly able to make some money by his dismal and deplorable transactions, and it is considered probable that many of his transformed busts now adorn not only the humble homesteads of artisans in Paris. but also the libraries and museums of some provincial towns. On one occasion he is said to have sold the efficy of a worthy professor of the Sorbonne as that of a famous general of the revolution, while on another he passed off the bronze presentment of a departed grocer as that of a Demosthenes.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Rare Fortitude in a Dog. Many of the sportsmen of Wilmington will perhaps remember Sailor; the fine pointer dog of Mr. J. A. Brown, of Chadbourn. He was an extraordinary hunter and retriever, with almost human tact, and his owner valued him at several hundred dollars. A few days ago this fine dog was run over by the

was crushed off, leaving a piece of the bone protruding. Mr. Brown hated to kill his valuable and faithful dog, so he got Dr. A. Mc-Kinnon to amputate the crushed member. When the operation was performed Sailor obeyed the command to lie down, and never even gave a whimper when the work was done. The poor animal's muscles were contracted with pain, but with a few sympathetic caresses from his master he lay perfectly still until the amputation was performed.—Wilmington Messenger.

In one place the marsh is underlaid at the depth of twelve feet by an impervious stratum of blue clay, above which are found three successive and distinct eras of forest growths. The bottom layer is of deciduous trees that grow only on uplands, such as beech, oak and maple. The second layer is of soft swamp woods. such as elder, basswood and degwood. The upper layer is of coniferous trees. such as pine, hemlock and spruce. The puzzle to the naturalist is the finding of upland trees at the bottom of the marsh. with the trunks and larger limbs and abundant specimens of leaves and beechnuts in a good state of preservation. Another wonder unearthed by the excavations is the finding, at a point five feet below the surface and among the trunks of the coniferous trees, of a flat stone about five feet square which had been ntilized as a fireplace. The blackened stone, the large collection of ashes and cinders, and the bits of crumbling bones of animals indicate that long ages ago somebody cooked food there. That somebody must have been man in the strictly primitive and savage state, for no trace of any utensil or tool. not even a sharpened flint, has been found among the debris of the fire.-Albany Journal.

America the Bourne of the Emigrant The degree to which America offers prominent advantages to the emigrant is just now shown strikingly by the existing conditions in Iceland. It is said that that country is gradually becoming depopulated owing to the constant emigration of its people to the shores of Canada and the United States. These emigrants send back such favorable accounts of their new home that others quickly follow. It is estimated that 20,-000 natives, nearly one-quarter of the whole population, have left the country in the last year. The emigrants are said to be chiefly from the northern and eastern districts, where labor is carried on only under great difficulties, besides which recent harvests have been very bad and have entailed much suffering.-New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Frog Child. A child was born in Birmingham, England, on Sept. 20, which bears a strong resemblance to a frog. Its skin is warty and cold and clammy to the touch: when it exies it makes an unearthly croaking noise. There are three fingers on each hand and four toes on each foot. Besides the points enumerated it has many other characteristics of a frog, even to huge, knotty looking, lidless eves. The parents are almost distracted over the occurrence and hourly pray for it to die. There are two other "frog child" cases on record, one the offspring of a Piute squaw in Nevada, which was born about ten years since, the other a monstrosity which first saw the light of day at Goshen, Ind., in January, 1889.-St. Louis Republic.

The Age of Indian Outbreaks Is Past. There is not the smallest danger of a serious Indian outbreak in the north west. The conditions existing in this region have been entirely changed by the building of railroads and the establishment of means of rapid communication among posts. It is quite impossible to organize an Indian outbreak under the eve of the agent on reservations without the conspiracy becoming known. With existing means of communication and transit an outbreak could be crushed in its incipiency by a rapid concentration of troops. There are elements which might once have been dangerous in the situation at Standing Rock-a heaven sent prophet and a meddling womanbut the age of Indian ontbreaks is past. Portland Oregonian.

Dead in the Saddle A special from Payson, U. T., says John Bolton accidentally killed himself while going horseback from Payson to Salem. In the middle of the forenoon he left town to visit his sister in Salem. taking with him a double barreled shotgun, with which he shot himself. He was found on horseback with half the right side of his head blown off. He was sitting in the saddle leaning his head over the horse's neck. Apparently the horse had not moved since the gun exploded. It is believed that he had been dead in the saddle two hours.-Cor.

Too Good to Sell. In his life of Horace Greeley, James Parton tells of an old newsdealer who could not be persuaded to sell the last copy of The Tribune remaining on his stand until he had had time to read it. A similar measure of independence anpears to lie in the character of the Italian who trundles his fruit truck to the curb in front of The Sun building every night. For a week or two he has been selling the California imitation of Tokay grapes, and his boxes are emptied very soon after dark. The other evening three customers stood at the curb waiting their turn. One asked for half a pound, and the Italian snipped a cluster in two and placed it in a brown paper horn which he rolled deftly over his

The second customer also took a half pound and got the second half of the eluster. That cleared the cart-save for one luscious, heavy cluster lying against the back rail. It was perfect in form, richly ripe, and untouched by decay on even a single grape. The third customer reached over and picked it up. He was about to say "How much?" when the Italian angrily exclaimed:

"What are you doing with that? Put it down!" As the customer was not speedy in obeving the vender seized his arm and took the cluster away, after which he laid it gently upon a piece of brown

"But I want to buy it," protested the customer, feeling for his silver. "You can't do it," said the Italian bluntly. "Think I no want any grapes? That's for me." And he pushed his truck away from the curb and started down Park row toward Mulberry street.—New Ouger Seed from a Crane's Craw. A truly wonderful plant is at the Allegheny conservatory. No one knows to what class it belongs or anything about it. It is the subject of much speculatron among botanists, and they anxiously await the development of a bud that is forming. Then, they say, they can place the plant. The botanists have a suspicion that the plant is a tropical one, and Superintendent Hamilton is treating it on that supposition.

The history of the plant so far as known is a unique one. During the summer one of a party of gunners brought down a crane. It was a beautiful specimen, and the taxidermist of the party set to work to mount it. In the bird's craw were found several seed. With a view to learning if the seed was killed by the bird eating it they were placed in water. In a few days the seeds spronted. They were planted in loam and kept in a warm room. Edward V. McCandless took charge of it. The plant was an object of interest to Mr. McCandless and his botanist friends, and its development was closely watched. Last week it was transferred to the conservatory. The leaves are long and broad and heavy, not unlike a species of

I have noticed with some surprise the number of people who have been bitten recently by spiders, and the case of the death of a girl in Jersey City from this cause is fresh in mind. Within a week I have met three acquaintances suffering, as they told me, from spider bites, and one of them had a hand so badly inflamed that he was afterward obliged to have it lanced. In this connection a housekeeper has shown me two specimens of "thousand legged" bugs that were found in his house.

The Ballot Law Eclps the Printer. One of the most appreciable effects of the new Australian election law is the re markable boom it has given the job print ing business. Never before in the Listory of elections have the printers been called upon for such vast quantities and vari cties of campaign cards and campaign literature generally. Under the new system the personal canvass is the most likely to tell, and hence the use for cards of all dimensions. The confusion exist ing as to boundary lines of wards and districts has been of benefit to the printer in supplying cards with mans on the back, and best of all is the rage among the candidates to have their portraits printed on their cards.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Joko Saves a Life. George Busch, of Newark, N. J., was overcome by coal gas a few nights ago while in the cellar attending to a furnace. -Good News. A Strange Wager in Vienna.

A curious wager is at present occupying the attention of such widely separated classes as our young noblemen and the Association of Hotel and Restaurant Waiters in Vienna. Several of the younger scions of the highest Austrian ristocracy, who were accustomed to dine in an old hotel of high repute in the Karnthner strasse, took exception to the practice of the waiters, most of whom have seen twenty or thirty years' service, in dressing their mustaches in just the same fashion as the "noble swells" they had to serve. One of the high born customers accordingly laid a wager with some of his friends, which was immediately accepted, that within a given time the chiectionable adarmment should disappear from the upper lips of the waiters in all the fashionable hotels and restaurants in Vienna, otherwise the proposer himself was to shave off his own embellishment for a given period.

In order to effect his purpose the latter commenced by trying to persuade the hotel keeper in the Karnthner strasse to forbid all his servants wearing mustaches on penalty of losing his aristocratic customers. In this case he succeeded, but the waiters, who were mostly married men, one after another gave notice to leave their places. They were at once replaced by younger men, who for a consideration submitted to the imposed humiliation. The same thing happened in a number of other hotels and restaurants, and the wager was nearly won by the layer when the proprietor of the Hotel Imperial, the first hotel in Vienna, flatly refused to comply with the whim of the Vienna jeunesse doree, whom he told outright that if they de serted his house he should readily find better customers. The case was also taken up, "as matter of right and honor," by the Association of Waiters, which threatened to expel from the society any member degrading himself by humoring aristocratic caprice in this matter. Thus the matter stands at the present moment. The bet appears likely to be lost, and then will come the triumph of the waiters, who expect soon to have the satisfaction of seeing their would be dictator instead of themselves going about with shaven lip -Cor. One on Mr. Denew. They say that when Mr. Depew came recently from Europe the usual swarm of yarn spinners gathered nightly in the smoking room to tell stories and chat about things in general. Every soul save one in the party kept his end up. The exceptional member of the party did not laugh or indicate by even a twinkle of the eyes any interest in the funniest jokes, and was as silent as a door knob at the best stories. This conduct began to nettle Mr. Depew and the other spirits, and when the final seance came around they had lost all patience with the reticent and unresponsive stranger. Mr. Depew was selected to bring him to terms. They were all comfortably seated and in came the stranger.

"See here, my dear sir," said Mr. Depew. "won't you tell a story?" "I never told one in my life." "Sing a song?"
"Can't sing." "Know any jokes?" persisted Mr. Depew. "No." Mr. Depew and all were prepared to give it up when the stranger stammered and hesitated, and finally made it known that he knew just one conundrum. "Give it to us," said Mr. Depew and the others in chorus "What is the difference between a turkey and me?" solemnly asked the stranger. "Give it up," said Chairman Depew. "The difference between a turkey and me," mildly said the stranger, "is that they usually stuff the bird with chestnuts after death. I am alive."-Illustrated American. Double Cabbed Engines. At the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company's shops at Utica eighty men, mostly skilled me chanics, are employed. At the present time they are working on a peculiar locomotive known as the culm burner. The engine is queerly shaped, having two cabs, one for the engineer and one for the fireman. Under the boiler and firebox the machine has six large driving wheels. The weight of these great mogul engines is between thirty-five and sixty tons each. They are made to haul heavy freight trains. The machinery is so arranged that the steam is never exhausted. They are valuable also for the reason that their fuel is the refuse coal from the mines, which could not other-

When the Nurnberg-Furth line, the first railway on German soil, replaced the old Thurn and Taxis yellow post, a yellow stripe was painted on every car, and for fifty-five years it has remained a unique reminder of the ante-railway age. The Bayarian gov-ernment, however, has just ordered that this stripe be painted out, in order that the Numberg-Furth cars may conform in appearance with all other railway

Bird Dog and Bird Disappear While some quail hunter: were gunning near Edinburgh, Ind., wrining some young setter pups a large gay eagle pounced down upon one of them, for which the owner had paid $100, lastening its talons in the dog's back and soaring away with its prize. The owner of the dog fired two or three shots at the "noble bird," but without avail.-Cincinnati Enquirer.

Exorcising a Ghost with Holy Water. For some time there has been a great deal of talk regarding a haunted house which stands on the Oregonia and Harveysburg pike, about eight miles from Morrow, O. The house is the property of Dan Gallagher, who is one of the noted characters of Warren county.

The fame of the ghost rapping in the house spread far and near, and investigating parties were organized, which sat up to meet the ghost. The rappings' invariably occurred shortly before midnight, and continued several minutes. Some of the boldest of the investigators rushed out to the window, but could see nothing. The tapping, however, would at once cease on their approach.

Finally Gallagher declared that he sel containing holy water from the church at Oregonia, and the ghost was exorcised in the presence of many curious spectators, several of whom had come from a distance. The scene was a most dramatic one. Dan approached the window and removed his hat, which was the signal for the others to uncover. Sprinkling the window profusely with the holy water

Dan in tragic tones thus addressed the invisible visitor: "If you are a bad spirit depart hence and never return. If you are a good spirit come forth and show yourself." Several minutes of profound silence elapsed, but there was no response. Dan again sprinkled the window and repeated his invocation. Still no ghost appeared, and it is said that no more tappings have disturbed the rest of the Fries family, and the ghost or mischievous neighbor has certainly stopped rapping.-Cor. A Race Between Two Great States. Ten years ago Kansas and Nebraska entered on a race for supremacy. It is not over yet, for Nebraska — and perhaps Kansas - has yet broad lands awaiting the settler's plow; but we are enabled by the recent census to note the results so far. It was not an equal contest, for Kansas had many advantages; she had already in 1380 more than twice the population of Nebraska-996,-096 to 452,402-and she was almost the best advertised state in the union. How does the comparison stand now? Kansas' population today is 1,423,485; increase, 427,389, or 42 10-11 per cent. The population of Nebraska is now 1,056,-793; increase, 604,391, or 1331 per cent. And still we grow. Ten years ago Kansas stood twentieth of the states of the Union in population; today she is in the same rank, or at most nineteenth. Ten years ago Nebraska, with her less than half million population, stood thirtieth in the list. Since then she has distanced three of her competitors, and now stands twenty-seventh. -Lincoln Journal.

Provisions for a Long Trip. "Have you any mince pie" he said, bustling up to the proprietor of a Nassau street restaurant and letting his autumn tinted nose harmonize with the cranberry tarts. "Certainly, sir."

"Little early, isn't it, for mince?" "Oh. no." "Aren't remnants or markdowns from last year, are they?"

"Of course not," answered the proprietor indignantly. "Well, you do me up a whole pie. I'm going to start for Omaha at 5 o'clock and I want a stayer for the trip. You see," he added, leaning confidentially on the cake rack, "when I went west last year I eat half a mince pie before I started. Well, sir, I never seen anything stand by yer like it. Couldn't eat a mouthful of anything till I got to St. Louis. This year I'm buyin' a whole pie, and I reckon she'll see me clean into the state of Nebraska."-New York Tribune.

They Just Stepped Off the Train. A tragedy happened on an east bound Texas Pacific train about two miles east of Paris Sunday afternoon. Among the passengers on the train were two negroes seeking employment as cotton pickers. They had never been on a train before, and seeing a great deal of cotton in the fields they were passing desired to get off and hunt work. So they walked out on the platform and jumped off. The train was stopped and backed down to where they were lying. One was crushed and the other was badly injured.—San Antonio Express.

Steamship and Whale in Collision The steamship Queensmore. Capt. Trenery, has arrived from Liverpool with a general cargo. On Saturday, Oct. 25, the Queensmore paralyzed a big whale. Capt. Trenery tried to steer out of the way, but the whale was too close on and the ship gave it a stunning glancing blow. The whale did not move, and the water soon became stained with blood.—Baltimore American.

One of the shortest names in the country is possessed by Mr. Ye, who is secretary of the Corean legation at Washington. Mr. Ye has just been made happy by the arrival at his home of a little daughter, and the child has been christened "Washon Ye," which in English means "Washington." This child is the first born of the Corean nationality in this country.

The revenue cutter Rush, late from a northern Pacific tour, brought home a walrus skin over fourteen feet long. It was captured by some junior officers on Walrus island, and will be sent to the Smithsonian institution at Washington, where, after being properly prepared, it will form one of the Alaskan exhibits at the World's Fair.

He did so, and upon extracting a piece of the rind about 100 wasps flew out and made things lively about the

It seems that the melon was somewhat overripe, and while lying neglected in its bed a family of wasps had bored a small hole in one end of it and taken up their abode therein. The man who brought it to town rushed out of the place with several of the insects settling lown upon his face, and in his hurry he knocked over an Italian fruit stand, fell on a cat, which was nearly crushed to death, and nearly knocked two policemen into the dock. The strange story, told on good authorty, of the ruins of a great fortified city, built of dressed granite blocks, found on the Mashonaland plateau, in South Africa, has given rise to a great deal of curious speculation, for its history is wholly unknown. Many of the walls are completely covered by the dense jungle, and very old trees grow on the top of the ruins. If the city or fort was built by natives it must have been in remote periods of time, when there was a higher civilization than now, but it is just possible that the fort was constructed under the direction of early Portuguese explorers and by the aid of cheap slave labor. Only a superficial view has been made of the ruins, but light may be thrown on the mystery when the houses themselves have been explored. Light is being rapidly turned on the Dark Continent, and the stories that come from it are as interesting as those sent to Europe from this country 300 to 400 years ago. Then, however, the news was not widedisseminated. Now every one who chooses can learn from day to day what is going on in Africa as in other parts of the world.—Exchange.

One Man Against a Pack of Wolves. Andrew Phillipot, a farmer living near Sallisaw, I. T., set out to visit a sick neighbor half a mile distant Friday night, and while passing through a lonely woods on his return home was attacked by a pack of wolves. He was unarmed, but seized a large stick, and as the wolves came closer and closer he kept them at bay while he hallooed for help. A big wolf sprang at him, but he beat it off, wounding it, and made a break for a tree. The wolves followed. snarling and snapping at his heels. Again Phillipot drove them back and ran to another tree. In this way he succeeded in getting in sight of his house, and his cries brought assistance. The rescue was timely, as Phillipot fainted from exhaustion just as help reached him.—Cor. Dallas News.
