Papa and mamma went out to row, And left us alone at home, you know.-Roderick, James, and me. "Now, dears," they said, "just play with your toys, Like dear little, good little, sweet little boys, And we will come home to tea."

We play with our toys the longest while! We built up our blocks for nearly a mile. Roderick, James, and I.
But, when they came tumbling down, alas! They fell right against the looking-glass, Oh, how the pieces did fly.

Then we found a pillow that had a rip, And all the feathers we out did slip, Roderick James, and I. And we made a snowstorm, a glorious one, All over the room. Oh, wasn't it fun,

As the feathery flakes did fly? But. inst as the storm was raging around, Pappa and mamma came in and found Roderick, James, and me. Oh! terrible, terrible things they said, And they put us all three right straight to bed With the empty pillow-case under my head,

And none of us had any tea.

"Sweeter Than all the Roses."

It was beginning to snow. But, not-withstanding that, a little girl thinly clad, with dark, entreating eyes, stood on theicy pavement and offered flowers for sale, singing,— "Sweet violets; sweeter than all the roses, "Freighted with fragrance, sparkling with dew." Colin Eyre was coming up the street behind two ladies, one of whom kindly stopped to buy, while the other passed on selfish and unheeding. "Only ten cents a bunch, sir," said the child, as she paused in her song and held out a fragrant bunch to Colin like those with which her basket was "What a study for Bougereau," he thought as he took in with the eye of a connoisseur the picturesque details of the child's shabby clothes and unconsciously graceful pose.

"The fair Lucile is fond of violets," he mused. "I suppose she knows they are very becoming to one of her style. Yes, little one," he added aloud, "I'll take your flowers. You won't m nd sellind all your lovely stock to one customer. I suppose, will you?"

"No, indeed," was the eager reply.
"I am glad you like them, sir. My sister says violets are the sweetest of flowers, and I like them because they are just the color of her eyes." "Your sister must be very proud of her eyes," said Colin, smiling as he put two silver dollars into the child's hand, and wondered if there could be an older and higher type of beauty than that before him. "Pray, what is your name, little one?" "Rose," she answered; "and sister's is Violet. Papa used to call us his pretty boquet. But," with a sad drooping of the head, "he went away last "Where?" asked Colin, twisting the paper of violets around his finger. "To heaven."

"Oh!" He would have said more, but just then a gentleman slapped him familiarly on the shoulder. "Hello, Colin, old boy! I thought you were in England. When did you get back?" "I came by the Servia and landed this morning. How are you, Dick? I'm awfully glad to see you. But for Heaven's sake don't say you saw me here. I haven't been anywhere yet." "What! Not been up to pay your devoirs to the lovely Lucile? What a barbarian! You're not afraid of be-Colin shrugged his handsome should-

"We understand each other, we two. We are engaged, under an agreement not to love each other with sentiment, and all that sort of thing, you under-

"Then you feel quite free," said Dick Weathers; "and you might as well dine with me at the club. Come along." Colin turned to look for his little flower girl, but she had disappeared. "Thanks; if you can make it an hour hence I'll join you," he said.

Being a man of indefinite leisure Dick Weathers could always make it any hour that anybody wanted; and they parted to meet again at the club

Colin; meanwhile, went and purchased a little gilt hamper into which he had the violets coally packed, and tied up with a broad white satin ribbon, a sweet offering. "Incense on the alter of love," he muttered with a smile that was half bitter as he took from his pocket a card and wrote on it,—

"Return of the native. My compliments, and I will call this evening."

The flowers were sent forthwith to the home of Miss Van Wert, the young lady to whom he was engaged.
"Oh," she said carelessly, glancing at the flowers "Colin is home, is he? I wonder why he did not stay longer?

Everything is so slow in this sleepy old place. "Miss Van Wert," said the timid voice of a servant, "Miss Vinton is here and she has brought your dress.

"Oh, she has come, has she?" "Yes, miss," "Lucky for her, for if she hadn't finished it by six o'clock she might have kept it. I shouldn't have paid her a dollar. Tell her to come into the drawing-room with it, at once." In a few minutes a beautiful young girl of seventeen, shabbily dressed, entered with an immense box.

"I could not get the dress done a moment sconer, Miss Van Wert," she said breathlessly. "You might have worked nights, I should think," said the rich girl, fretfully. "I can't paint in the evening," answered the poor girl; "but I rose every morning at the break of day." "Is the paint dry?" "I am much afraid that in one or two places it is not quite."

"Well, let me see it."

Miss Vinton opened the box and ifted out a costume of rich creamwhite satin. As she shook out the long train Miss Van Wert could hardly repress a cry of admiration. In all her intercourse with French dressmakers never had she seen anything so perfectly executed. The court train was encircled with a border of violets exqusitely painted. There was a bunch on either shoulder so natural that they seemed to be exhaling the fragrance that issued from the perfumed lining of the dress. There were panels at the side of the skirt literally covered with violets, while the vest and front were similarly ornamented. The costume, set off with trimmings of cobweb lace, was ravish-ingly beautiful.

"Isn't it pretty?" Miss Vinton said, half shily. "I took especial pains with it. I am very fond of violets. They are my namesakes, you know."
"How much did yon say it would be?
asked Miss Van Wert, coldly. "I did not think fifty dollars too much," said the girl.

Miss Van Wert, though so rich, was enurious in the extreme.

"I made it as low as I could. It took

"Isn't that rather dear?"

I done!" she cried, clasping her hands in affright.

In trying to display the folds by holding them out, her arm had brushed against part of the painting that was still wet, and had made an ugly smear across the front breadth of the skirt. "You awkward thing!" screamed Lucile; and in a transport of rage she struck Violet in the face. "You have ruined my dress. I won't pay you a

"Why, Miss Lucile!" cried the maid in surprise. "It isn't burt much. You've got plenty of lace, and if you'll just draw a bit over this way, you can't notice it."

"It's ruined, I tell you! You sha'n't have a cent," cried Lucile, angrily.
"I don't want a cent," answered Violet, with all the dignity of insulted womanhood. "You may keep your money, Miss Van Wert. But don't dare to speak to me again!"

Lucile laughed mockingly; and the girl, beside herself with disappointnent, indignation and grief, furned to leave the room. But she found herself suddenly brought face to face with a gentleman who was standing in the doorway, who appeared struck dumb with amazement, for he had heard every word that had been said. "Pardon me," he said at length, "but you will wait one moment-

'Who are you, sir?" she asked. "I was engaged to marry that-that woman," he said scornfully. "I came in unannounced, as I was well known to the servants. But I would die sooner than make her my wife now.

Permit me to pay you the money she "Certainly not," said Violet, drawing herself up proudly. "I am obliged to you, sir, but I cannot accept your

She was gone in a moment. Colin Eyre followed her to the door, but she hurried away from him, and he had too much delicacy to pursue her.

"What a heavenly tace," he murmur-ed as he turned his back on the Van Wert mansion. "And what eves! To think that Lucile-good heavens! And came near marrying her!" Colin had not dined at the club, for Dick Weathers had failed, for some reason, to keep his appointment, and Colin had called to see Miss Van Wert sooner than he had intended to. That night he wrote her a letter which she never forgot. It put an end to their engagement. Lucile shed bitter tears of vexation, for Colin Eyre was the richest man in her set, and to have become his wife would have been to achieve a brilliant social triumph. Meanwhile poor Violet had gone home with an aching heart and burning cheeks. She had not a cent left She was ready to break down when Rose came to meet her. "I told you so," cried the child, gleefully. "You didn't want me to go out in the street and sell flowers; but just see, sister! I have sold all the violets is the money." The girl burst into tears as she clasped Rose to her heart. "Little comfort," she whispered fondly; and she thanked God that they need not face the worst just yet. "Darling," she said, later in the evening, "I am going to try to do something higher than china decorating. I am going to paint a picture that will sell, I hope."

"Oh, yes; you can afford to try now," said Rose, gaily. "To-morrow I shall get more violets to sell, and we can get along very well until your picture is Violet patted her cheek fondly. 'I am going to paint you, Rosebud."

"Yes, you. If I can paint you as you are, I know I shall make myself fa-The next day the picture was begun. Violet had her little sister pose in a faded dress, with an apronful of flowers. She bent her whole mind on making the child look just as nature formed her, and she worked with zeal of love and enthusiasm. That night Colin Eyre went to the Academy Ball, and saw Lucile in her satin dress, which filled him with won-"That is not the work of a daubing amateur," he exclaimed. No one but a orn artist could create anything so The exquisite flushed face of Violet Vinton came back to him, and he determined to know more about her. But the wish did not insure its accomplishment. Miss Van Wert said, reply to a formal note of inquiry, that she could not furnish Miss Vinton's address. Colin knew this was not true, but he could not force her to tell him: and after spending some time in unavailing search for Violet he gave up the quest. Several months afterward he was wandering through a picture gallery. eying with disfavor the paintings exhibited there.

"Daubs, daubs, all of them!" he exclaimed contemptuously. But suddenly a different look dawned in his eyes as they rested upon a small picture hung obscurely in one corner. "What's this?" he exclaimed. "Why, it's my little flower-girl-to the very life! By Jove! that is a gem. I must have it if money will buy it."

The dealer asked a hundred dollars for it.
"Ridiculously low," Colin said to himself. Then, aloud "Who is the artist?" "A young girl by the name of Vinton," was the reply; and Colin knew that he had found her at last. That very day he called upon Violet. and found her hard at work painting. "I have bought your picture—the little flower girl," he said, by way of introduction; and the girl's glad face made him strangely happy. "It is charming. You certainly are an artist of no mean ability, Miss Vinton. I came to ask you to paint me a companion to it." Violet was overwhelmed with joy. The companion piece proved more popular than the other. It represented a handsome boy with a hatful of cherries in his hand; and so beautifully was it executed that society began to inquire about the young artist whom Colin Eyre was patronizing.

Orders poured in upon Violet. She grew comparatively rich. Pretty furniture filled her rooms, bric a-brac, wat rcolor sketches, etc. Rose was neatly dressed and sent to school. Violet was happy, for Colin Eyre came to see her almost every day, giving her the benefit of his criticisms and suggestions. One bright morning when Colin call ed he found her sobbing bitterly, with her face in her hands.

"Then I consent," she said softly. Rose came in from school soon after, and found them together, and Rose who, young as she was, understood a great deal, only smiled. Mrs. Colin Eyre is famous now, both for her beauty and for her genius. And Rose is the happiest child the sun shines on, for her new brother adores her, and every wish of her heart is gratified. And Colin? Well, he finds

The New York Sun relates the following story: There were only half a dozen people in the police car all day long, and after dinner, when the man who had been sleeping and reading in seat No. 12 came over to me for a chat, I welcomed him with open arms. He said his name was Saunders, and that he had a patent or improvement on some part of a locomotive. He was going through to Cincinnati to have it perfected or adopted, or something of the sort. He had been in partnership with a mean man-a man who had tried to swindle him out of a fortune. To get even, he had stolen the patent and run away. He had it with him in a valise. That was all he said just then, but later on he confided to me the fact that at a town about thirty miles away this wicked partner of his might possibly be on hand to board the train and attempt to wrest the treasure from his keeping. He wanted my advice, and I offered to take charge of the valise. He thanked me with great effusiveness' and as we approached the town he shut himself into the smoking compartment. As the train drew up I saw an old acquaintance on the platform. and while we were talking a posse was hunting the train for my friend, They didn't find him, as he had dropped off and struck out for the country. I went on to Cincinnati, taking his valise along, and although I was there four the form of roots, by which this mass days he didn't show up. I arranged to leave it with the landlord, and it was carried to the office, to be opened by a meddlesome clerk. Instead of a patent, it contained wedges, drills, a brate, fuse, and other neat little devices for successfully working a burglar's job, and it cost me two days of the hardest kind of talk to satisfy the chief of police that I wasn't in ir. I had ridden over 100 miles with a fullfledged burglar, and who had made his mark, and I must say he was a better talker and more of a gentleman than the sensus of Alaska has been issued by the U.S. Census Office in the form of a bulletin. It comprises a prelimin ary report by Mr. Ivan Petroff, special agent in charge of the Alaska division and embodies a vivid picture of the difficulties encountered in getting results of the northernmost regions of the United States. After a preliminary trip in the mail steamer, a second trip was undertaken from San Francisco to the shores of the Bering Se at Nushegak, in a leaky steamer of only 25 tons burden. Special agents for different sections were appointed and sworn in on these voyages. To reach one special agent a voyage up the Nüshegak river was undertaken, but failed, owing to his recalcitrant Indian paddlers. On returning to Nnshegak, the U.S. Fish Commissioner's steamer Albatross took the party on board, and after six days landed them on an inhospitable shore, with a crew of Indians, mostly sick from pneumonia. The work, in spite of all obstacles, was accomplished, Mr. Petroff having divided the territory into six districts and organized a force of special agents familiar with the many languages spoken there. His jourueys aggregate some 12.000 miles, while the special agents will probably travel over five times as much ground of territory.

who would certainly wear the "palm-embroidered coat" were there an American academy of "immortals." The veteran historiographer contributes to this periodical the second of his papers on 'Oliver Hazard Perry and the Battle of Lake Erie," portraying with rare ability incidents of the flagship Lawrence. In watching the vivid scenes depicted here the reader is deeply impressed with the phenomenal activity of the nonogenarian, enabling him to rise superior to physical infirmity, and like another Titian, continue to cover his canvases to the admiration of mankind. Amelia E. Barr, author of several much-admired stories, begins in this number "The Beads of Tasmer," a novel of prime interest, whose scene is laid on the shores of West Ross, off the coast of Scotland. Between William Black and Mr. and Mrs. Pennell the Land of Mist and stormy Minch seem familiar localities. A beautiful Christmas story of a West Jersey village is "A Happy Leaf," by Marion Harland, a writer who never fails to touch some secret spring of happiness, and set it vibrating for all to hear.

Mr. James Russell Howell's is upheld, and those all or nearly all, "My Brook," was written especially for this paper, and is a feature of prime importance; in recognition of its value the publishers print it as a supplement in a loose leaf, with a series of appropriate illustrations by Willson de Meza. In "My Brook" the poet reverts to the days of his youth when the hours were so many, the duties so few," and sings some of the

The closing stanza implies a reconciliation with the Fate that had changed the rural stream, with suggestions of naiads and water-lilies, into a poor dredge, supplying "power" prosaic factories. But the memory of the old joyous days abides with the poet:

The new apportionment bill has been passed by the House at Washington, giving Michigan twelve congressmen instead of eleven as at present. It will now be of interest to note the ingenuity of the Democratic legislature in arranging those districts so they can elect twelve Democrats in a Republican state. It remains yet to be seen whether Michigan legislature contains so high a grade of artists as did the Ohio legislature two years ago. Redistricting was a fine art with them.

Senator Stanford has a bill before the Senate which proposes that the general government shall go into the business of loaning money at two per cent interest on real estate security. If any one ever conceived of a foolishly wild scheme for a government to engage in, it certainly could not equal the many different farmer combinations showing themselves upon the surface at present, Michigan State Grange opposes the scheme. It also opposes the other wild scheme that the government shall convert itself into a warehouse for the storage of vegetables and other farm truck. A scheme about on a par with the two per cent

Kingsly S. Bingham was a representative in congress from Michigan from 1847 to 1851. In those days it was usual for the opposing candidates to vote for each other. In his first race Mr. Bingham was elected by one vote. Upon reflection he called to mind the fact that he had failed or neglected to vote, and was elected by the vote of his rival. Being a man of a high sense of honor and propriety, he declined the certificate, stood for a new election and won with but little opposition.—Wash-

Protection for Wool Growers. President Rich's address before the Michigan Merino Sheep Breeders' Association, at Lansing, was short but pithy. It dwelt largely on the successful efforts of the officers of the National association to secure adequate pro-tection in the McKinley bill. He said: "While with the McKinley and the administration bill our interests are fairly well protected, there is no doubt that means will be found to evade some of the duties."

Mr. Rich further stated that an attempt would be made to remove the present protective duties on wool he had not the slightest doubt. "but we are now in," said he, "and it takes less effort to prevent legislation than to secure it, so that we are in possession of an advantage not to be despised, yet if we neglect our interests this advantage is liable to be lost."

Hon. Wm. Ball in the course of his remarks gave an important illustration of the working of the McKinley bill and how it effects the wool industry, and was of the opinion that the policy of protection would prevail

The wool growers of Michigan are not only in favor of but actually de mand protecton. If, as is probable the democratic majority in the 52d congress frames and passes a tariff bill, it will contain a free wool clause. To such a proposition the Michigan merino sheep breeders are bitterly opposed.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Congressman Taylor, of Chicago, has ntroduced a bill in congress to remove the duty from tin plate, while under the encouragement given by the Mc-Kinley tariff the Norton Bros. of Chicago, extensive manufacturers of tin cans and tin lard pails, started a plant in operation Saturday, and made the first tin plate ever made in America which was turned to a practical use. In speaking to the Inter Ocean of their new enterprise, Edwin Norton says:

"We are satisfied that we can manufacture tin plate cheaper than we can mport it, and with much more satisfactory results. The plant by which this plate," holding up a sheet of shinng tin, "was made we imported from Wales. Some of our workmen also came from there, and we are paying them two and three times as much as they received over there. Still we have dready effected a great saving. For instance, in Wales the cleaning of plates after they are made is done by hand, women being employed for the work. We have already invented, and have in working order, a machine that does this work and saves the labor of tifty women. Again, the English manufacture only two sizes of plate these plates for some purposes, especial ly in making lard pails, or which the packers use so many, there is considerable waste, yet if you order a special size from the English manufacturer he charges you just as much as he does for the larger or standard size. By making our own plate we can cut it in sizes to suit the purposes for which we ntend using it, thus saving all that waste which, when the number of cans or pails you turn out runs into the tens of millions, is a matter of no in-consiberable account.

AGAIN, BY MAKING OUR PLATE at the same place at which we manufacture it into useful forms, we save the cost of boxing and packing; we also save the cost of transporting the street steel of which the plate is made from England, as it can be bought as cheaply here in Chicago, and above all we avoid the annoyance as well as extra expense of doing business with people 4000 miles away from us. In this latter point we have had but one experience. Of the hundreds of tin plate manufacturers in a little valley in Wales, there are but four or five with whom we have been able to do business satisfactorily and not always with them. We have had to deal through middlemen in New York and when we placed an order for ten thousand cases of tin-plate we always knew that if any of it was inferior in quality, as it often was, we had to bear the loss. as the Englishman would not. We had to make it up out of our customers, as the tailor forces his cash customers to pay for the ones which default. But making our own plate, we are sure of good quality of plate, and this element of loss is thereby eliminated."

"TO SHOW YOU." said O. W. Norton, "the difference between English and American methods. take our business. Ten years ago it was said that all cans used for cooked meats must be made by hand. The meat is cooked after it is sealed in the cans and they have to be made very strong as they are practically small boilers. The cheapest they could be made was $5 a thousand in addition to cost of material. We introduced machinery that does the work at a cost of 50 cents a thousand and uses less solthis in its wildness. Notwithstanding all losses by breakage of the cans, innaing the value of the meat spoiled. besides paying better wages than when the work was done by hand."

The first dive the Democrats make when getting back to Washington. flushed with a temporary victory, is at this new industry. There is no telling to what end they would carry this assault upon American industries, if they should by any misfortune happen to come into full control of the government in all of its branches.

Thousands of people are slowly poisoning themselves, weakening their hearts by the use of tea, coffee and al-cohol. These are HEART WHIPS, causing it to beat rapidly, thus gradually wearing it out, p oducing shortness of breath when exercising, pains in side and shoulder, hungry and faint spells. Finally heart failure and sudden death. For weakened and irritated hearts the press everywhere highly recommend the New Heart Cure discovered by Dr. Frank in Miles, which is for sale at Barmore's.

SUICIDE,-Edward Woodruff, son of John Woodruff, of Niles, committed suicide by shooting himself, on Monday evening. THE question of improving the water power in the St. Joseph river is uppermost in the minds of Buchanan people and should be kept there until the work is accomplished. There is no chance whatever of any possible argument on more than one side of that question. The committee appointed to make a survey to determine the amount of fall to be had, and how much and what lands will be overflowed or damaged by the back water, made their survey Monday and Tuesday, find that there is a fall of ten feet, which could be increased to fourteen feet, if necessary, without overflowing more than forty acres of land. There will be another meeting of the improvement association, next Monday evening, to take the next necessary steps toward the consummation of the work at the earliest possible moment in the best possible manner, and at the least possible expense. Appoint the right men on committees and let the work go on legally and in a proper manner.

Spurious Money in the Northwest. Secret Service Agent Harris returned to this city late Thursday evening after an absence of about two weeks in Washington and Oregon, where he had been sent by the treasury department to look after a gang of counterfeiters who were flooding, that part of the country with bad paper money. Mr. Harris was in Portland for several days locating the counterfeiters, who were raising five-dollarnational bank bills to $20. The work was cleverly done, and is considered as neat a piece of "raised" work as has yet been seen.

The detective got a clew, and followed his men to Whatcom, Wash., where they were taken into custody, but were relessed for want of sufficient evidence. On Nov. 15, at Tacoma, Mr. Harris ran across counterfeit ten-dollar bills with the vignette of Daniel Webster, and had one of the gang shadowed and arrested. but his trial has not yet come off. Counterfeit five-dollar pieces are also in existence, and Mr. Harris states that the entire country has been flooded with the spurious coin. While in Portland Mr. Harris arrested one Professor S. Brown for issuing his advertisement on a bill similar to a bank note. Brown was fined $100.—San Francisco Alta.

The Clock Stopped When He Died. The sentimental and superstitious who are given to tracing the laws of coincidences will find an interesting subject for their attention in the recent death of a jeweler in Bucyrus, O. For many years it has been the office of a skillful German watchmaker, named Frank Kehrer, to attend to the town clock, which is in the steeple of the court house. During the past few months the health of Mr. Kehrer has been poor, and the clock, deprived of his careful attention, has been keeping indifferent time. Monday morning the timepiece struck 5, and a few moments later it stopped.

Early risers who heard the chime affirm that there was something indescribably weird and peculiar about it. Later risers, noticing the clock hands pointing to 5:05, commented upon the subject and its aged guardian. Later in the day the news spread that Mr. Kehrer's condition had suddenly become worse and that he had died at 5:05 that morning. The hands of the old town clock still point to the identical time when the active mind and skilled hand of its master were paralyzed in death.—Jewelers' Weekly.

His Half Dollar Was Glass. A striking illustration of the quantity of bogus coins now in circulation in this city was given in a downtown store recently. A customer who had made a small purchase tendered a fifty cent piece in payment. The clerk pushed it back across the counter and shook his head. "That half dollar's a little too new," he remarked. "What do you mean?" demanded the customer. show you," replied the clerk, picking up the coin and then letting it fall sharply on the counter. The shock caused the counterfeit to fly into fragments. It was a glittering sham composed of glass, with a thin veneer of metal. There seems to be good reason for thinking that a gang of counterfeiters and their accomplices are working Chicago. An astonishing quantity of bad coins is now out among citizens, and apparently its volume is increasing rapidly.—Chicago Willed $10,000 to a Polite Bartender. A respectable looking man, who said to was a lawyer from Allegheny City and administrator of the estate of Mr. Hughes, a millionaire, who recently died there, called at Green's hotel, Eighth and Chestnut streets, recently, and said that he had come to hunt up a bartender who waited on Mr. Hughes last summer. Mr. Hughes in his will bequeathed to the young man $10.000. Mr. Hughes on dying did not know the bartender's name, but gave a full description of his appearance.

The visitor questioned all the bartenders about the length of time they had been at Green's, and if they had known Mr. Hughes. James Cleary, the head bartender, gave him the names and description of all those who worked there during the past year.—Philadelphia Times.

Royal Coffins Rotting. The royal tombs in the abbey of St. Denis, Paris, suffer considerably from the damp, which destroys the wooden coffins ranged on biers in the vaults. Not long ago the Duc d'Aumale obtained permission to place the remains of his Conde ancestors in fresh receptacles, while last week some government officials inclosed the old worn out coffins of Louis XVI and the Duc de Berri in new strong oaken coverings. The inner lead coffin was quite intact, so the dead were not disturbed.—Paris Letter.

Three young men were seen to empty the contents of a sack on a lot in San Francisco the other day. The contents consisted of $850 counterfeit silver dollars. Some children found the coins, and in a short time that section of the city was so flooded with bogus money that even genuine silver dollars were refused by tradespeople.

The opening of a bank in Hardinsburg, Ky., brought to light a $500 bill that a farmer living near there had had stored away in his house for twenty years. This amount put out at simple interest for that length of time would have brought the owner $600.

The wreck register for twelve months shows 4,272 casualties, a third of them being collisions. The lives lost on the coasts of England, Scotland and Ireland numbered 457.

Gen. Booth's Successor. I have always thought that the weak spot in the Salvation Army is that Gen. Booth places his children in high positions, and evidently contemplates the generalship being hereditary in his family. Now, the odds against the son of a remarkable man being the person best fitted to succeed him in arbitrary sway over a vast organization are great. We do not dream of judges' sons succeeding judges, or prime ministers' sons succeeding prime ministers, although possibly the fathers may think that the sons are more fitted than any others to carry on their work.

In a letter the general explains that the general of the Salvation Army for the time being is to have the fullest powers of administrative and executive control over the property (i. e., the funds subscribed), and that in the deed regulating this provision will be made for the appointment of his successor at his death. But he does not explain how this successor is to be appointed. If the funds are placed in the hands of Gen. Booth a committee should be appointed to whom he would himself be responsible, and which committee would have some voice in the appointment of his ssor, and have some sort of control over him. - London Truth.

Electric Lights on a Railroad Track. The line of the Pennsylvania railroad from Frankford creek on the south to Poquessing creek on the north, at Torresdale, a distance of nearly seven miles is soon to be lighted by electric lights ranged along at intervals, so that for that distance the tracks will be as light as Chestnut street. The contract for this latest great feat in medern railroad management for the security of the lives of passengers and employes, and the avoidance of loss by the smashing up of freight trains, has een awarded

The stretch of railroad to be lighted is through a populous district, and has long been noted for the frequency of accidents on it. There is little doubt that the electric lighting will greatly reduce or almost entirely do away with this danger. It is understood that in time the electric lighting system will be extended along the railroad, and may in time extend all the way between Philadelphia and New York. In this way the track would be made almost as bright as day. -Philadelphia Record.

A Clever Smuggling Scheme A string of sausages floated idly around in an eddy between two Pacific coast steamship docks two hours the other day. They popped up from somewhere, nobody knew where. The City of Pueblo had been thoroughly searched and nothing contraband discovered. Customs Inspector Critcher, standing guard on her deck, suspected nothing, but fretted by the persistency of the sausages in floating in the slip instead of following the tide, called to two boatmen to take them out of the water. The boatmen did so, and it was found that every 'sausage" had a fine silk fish line tied to it, at the end of which dangled a box of opium wrapped in oiled silk. There were 2,200 boxes in all, worth nearly $3,000. The "sausages" were scraps of cork wrapped in tarpaulin and linked with cord, each link being loaded with sufficient salt to sink it about a foot under water.—San Francisco Letter.

Both Elopers Wore Gowns. A novel elopement which occurred Saturday was that of Mr. J. T. Higdon, a young printer, and Miss Rosalind Bush, the 14-year-old daughter of Samuel T. Bush, a well known carpenter of Owensboro, Ky. As the girl could be gotten away from home only during the daytime, the groom conceived the idea of dressing in female attire and getting out of town without creating any suspicion. Accordingly he so dressed himself, and, calling at the house of a friend for the girl, they escaped in a buggy to Rockport, Ind., where they were married. Too late the father ascertained that he had been outwitted, and swore he would kill, etc. He is tamer now, however, and the young people are happy.—Cor. Louisville Courier-Journal.

Game at Small Expense. The crew and passengers of the Pittsburg were treated to a game dinner on the way down the river a few days ago. While between Keokuk and Quincy the river was filled with wild ducks. During the night a hailstorm set in and disturbed the birds, and they flocked around the boat, many being dashed to death against the cabins and masts and falling upon the decks. A sufficient number was picked up by the crew to feed everybody on the boat.—Louisiana (Mo.) Press.

The Biggest Texas Wheat Field. A company of capitalists has purchased 10,000 acres of land on the railroad at Vista, and will convert the entire body into one immense wheat field. Much of the land can be broken this winter. Twelve gang plows have been ordered, and the breaking of the land will commence as soon as these arrive. A wheat field 10,000 acres in extent is so far unknown in Texas.-Cor. San Antonio Express.

About the beginning of the century the London clearing house was established, while that of New York, which Mr. Shapleigh. They also decided to set is the oldest in the United States, came into existence in 1853. Last year's clearances of the New York institution amounted to about $35,000,000,000 and est. The lawyers say there was never those of London's $34,000,000,000.

The will of Charles Peck, which has been probated in New Haven, Conn., consisted of pages of paper so pasted as to make a sheet twenty feet long. It is thought that Mr. Peck's idea was to prevent substitutions or interlineations.

A new blacking brush is so made that the blacking may be located in its back same car inquired whether there was and completely hidden from view when not in use, means also being provided for Mr. Hanson told him he resided there, conveniently drawing the blacking out from the back of the brush.

An Engineering Feat in India. The attention of the engineering world is said to be just now fixed upon the Bombay presidency in India, where is being constructed one of the greatest pieces of solid masonry the world has seen in modern times. As the present water supply of Bombay depends upon defective works. A huge dam has been designed to inclose the watershed of the valley which drains into the sea south of Bombay. Solely with the aid of native labor Engineer Glover, a Scotchman by birth, b gan this gigantic structure, which, it is expected, will be completed in March next. It is 2 miles long, 118 feet in height and 103 feet wide at the base. The roadway on the top is to be 24 feet in width, and the stone work will cost half a million sterling. The lake of water which this dam will imprison will be eight square miles in area, so that Bombay need be under no apprehension once the viceroy has officially declared the sluices open and the pipes of sixty miles long are in working order. Mr. Glover has 12,000 Hindoos, all of whom he has trained to this special work, employed on the dam. To his thirty years' labor among the natives is due the fact that there are in India today 500,000 men, all capable stonemasons, carpenters and navvies, who have been employed on his contracts for great public works.—Pall Mall Gazette. Cool Work by a Robber.

A man of commanding appearance about 23 years of age and nicely dressed, stopped at the residence of George Hottel, a farmer, who lives south of Mascoutah, Friday morning, and asked for a breakfast, which he said he was willing to pay for. While the farmer was preparing breakfast the stranger pocketed gold watch and a small amount in money which were lying on a bureau in an adjoining bedroom. Mr. Hottel subsequently went to the room and discovered the theft. He charged the gentlemanly stranger with having them, and the latter promptly covered him with his revolver and ordered him to keep his mouth shut on penalty of being

The farmer's wife then attempted to assist her husband out of his predicament, but was promptly knocked down by the stranger, who made Hottel and his wife sit opposite him at the table, with their hands behind them, while he quietly enjoyed his breakfast. Having appeased his appetite he coolly shook hands with the farmer and his wife, bade them an affectionate farewell, took to the woods with his plunder and has not been heard from.—St. Louis Republic.

Deserting Iceland. They have been taking a census in Iceland recently, and they are in trouble there, too; but their trouble is not about the congressional representation. It is something even more serious. It appears that so great has been the hegira to Canada and the United States it has taken away from the island fully 20,000 people. This does not seem such a very number, except when one consi ers that the original population was only about 80,000. One-fourth of the entire population then has emigrated! The result is disastrons. Taxes have been greatly increased, while properties have become reduced in values. The harvests, too, have been greatly lessened. There seems to be but one way out for the Icelanders They must all follow the vanguard and abandon their island to the walrus and bear. Perhaps a few centuries hence some Professor Horsford will discover evidence of human habita- with perfect sincerity, and, seeing sustion at some pre-historic age in Iceland.

Opening a Combination Look. Minnehaha, S. D., has just finished a iew court house at a cost of $125,000. Over $10,000 worth of vaults were ordered in, and recently the company making the contract was notified that the safes could not be accepted. The understanding was that no one could open the vaults unless he had the combination or was an expert at safe blowing.

A Feat in Photography.

Templar, Hartford, have made arrangements with a photographer to take an immense composite photograph of the members of the commandery. There will be between three and four hundred in the photograph, the front ones being about three-fourths size. The picture will be 51 by 101 feet. It will take about a year to finish it, and the cost will be

$1,000. When completed the photograph will be placed in the commandery room.

It is said that Marshal Prim was disgusted with his portrait on horseback painted by Henri Regnault, and asked the artist why he had made him look like a coal heaver. The painter packed up his canvas and left for Paris. Prim was assassinated and Regnault was killed by the Germans before Paris. Now the artists are so fond of the picture that there was a sensation the other day be-

The Astor Residences.

Where the present Astor will affix his historic doorplate remains to be seen.

At present he lives in a modest house almost under the shadow of the big mansion which he has torn down, and which was not the sort of house that would please a man of taste of today, having nothing but its size to recommend it. It is the custom of every Astor to build a new house upon coming into the family millions. The original John Jacob lived opposite our postoffice, his son lived in Washington square and the late John Jacob lived in the house now just torn down. The regular procession up town

A peculiarity of the Astor investments is that these Astor mansions have always been built upon property which when bought was away out of town.

The Astor estate now holds several blocks of lots on the Riverside drive, the superb avenue which runs along the bluff on the edge of the Hudson river from Seventy-second street to Harlem

This line will unquestionably be some day the finest place for dwellings in the country, and it would not be surprising

if the present Astor were to settle there himself. The view from anywhere along the drive takes in miles and miles of the noble Hudson. Foreigners say that there is nothing in Europe so superbly situated as our Riverside drive, yet because it is a mile away from the fashionable thoroughfare it is deserted.—New York

Cheap Incandescent Lamps.

It is reported that an English chemist has discovered a practical substitute for plantinum in the manufacture of incandescent lamps. If this be true, and the rumor is said by a reliable electrical journal to have substantial foundation, it is a discovery of great importance. At its present price plantinum forms one of facture of the incandescent lamp. In each sixteen candle power lamp there are from four to eight grains of plan-

Assuming an average of six grains per lamp, an ounce will be sufficient for eighty lamps. The demand for sixteen candle power lamps for 1891, based upon reliable data, will be 10,000,000 sixteen candle power lamps, which would give a demand for 125,000 ounces of platinum, which at present price ($14 to $17 per ounce) would amount to about

$2,000,000. The probable income from these lamps will not amount to more than $6,000,000, while the cost of one item alone is one-third the total income.

Hence it will be seen that a bona fide substitute for the platinum wire ought

Last week Edward H. Sannders, plumber, not over 17 years old, entered the county clerk's office while the clerk was endeavoring to open one of the new vaults. The combination had been lost, and finally the clerk gave up the job. Young Saunders, who was standing by, said he could open it. County Commissioner McKer offered to give Saunders $10 if he could open the safe. The proposition was accepted. The young lad placed his ear to the door, listened to the fall of the tumblers, and in a few moments the door swung open. Saunders was turned out of the room and the combination was changed. Another trial was given the young genius and again the door flew open. The chairman of the county commissioners has informed the safe company that their safes would not be accepted, and awaited their further orders. Saunders has since opened a vault of the Hall make in one of the leading banks of the city as easily as if he knew the combination. In one of the letters that passed between the commissioners and the safe company the latter agree to forfeit $10,000 if the lad can open any vault without first knowing the combination.-Plumbers' Trade Journal.

Capt. Watts' Gift to Thomaston. One of the most pathetic scenes witnessed in this state for a long time marked the exercises attending the presentation of the new building to the town of Thomaston, Me., by Capt. Samuel Watts. The old captain had a falling out with the town a number of years ago, and he cleared out, with all his taxable property, going to Boston. In later years his heart changed and he made the town the munificent gift. Said he, when he made his little speech: "I am human. I have my likes and dislikes, which is applicable to most of mankind. I have lived to the age of more than threescore-and-ten-eight years more. Mr. Chairman and citizens of Thomaston, I say to one and all, I stand before you willing to forgive and ask to be forgiven. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say before taking my sent that my desire is, at the end of my earthly career, I shall be laid in yonder cemetery side by side where my wife and most of my children lie moldering in the dust." The brave old mariner said a few words more, and then had to give up, overcome by his emotions. The neople of Thomaston are full of warm and affectionate words for him.—Boston Journal. A Singular Partition.

A case which is believed by lawyers to have no parallel in legal history has just been brought out in the Norfolk county court at Delham. The late R. W. Shapleigh, of Brooklyn, N. Y., died leaving an estate of $700,000 for thirty heirs, with no provision as to its disposal that would stand the test of the courts. There was found, however, in an old wallet a paper in his well known handwriting, but without his signature. which disposed of about half of the property to individuals, mostly nearest relatives. Some of these would not get a penny if the estate was settled by process of law. A family meeting was forthwith held, and it was agreed by all to abide by the apparent wishes of the late apart a sum to maintain a cemetery at West Lebanon, Me., in which Mr. Shapleigh always had a deep personal intersuch a case brought to their notice before.—Springfield Republican.

Trusting a Stranger. A queer story is told about a Maine character who recently won an unenviable notoriety. While a well known Baptist clergyman, Rev. C. V. Hanson, was coming from Lewiston by train about a year ago, an elderly man in the any one present going to Skowhegan. whereat this man counted out $500, and gave the same to Mr. Hanson to deposit in the First National bank.

The circumstance passed from his mind until one day looking over his papers Mr. Hanson discovered by the receipt given him by Cashier Page that the man who intrusted him with the $500 was none other than Micah W. Norton, of New Portland. Either Norton is a pretty good reader of physiognomy or thinks he is.—Somerset Reporter. ----

A Costly Cow. To prove the ownership of a $15 cow the cests were $75 in Squire Schwab's court Monday afternoon. It took from 2 o'clock to 7 o'clock to examine the seventy-five witnesses. It seems that Frank Groneman, a West End dairyman, lost a cow, and found her in the stables of Fred Koester, his neighbor. A replevin of the animal followed, and the jury gave Groneman his cow, with $1 damages. The cow, covered with ribbons, was hauled in glory to the squire's office. -Cincinnati Times-Star.

A Timely Discovery. A new insulating material, having all the properties of guttapercha, but with a higher dielectric resistance, is claimed by Dr. Parcell Taylor, of London. It is to be called "purcellite," and is said to be exceedingly tough and elastic, capable of being given any color, and of being made either flexible or rigid, and to be only one-fortieth as expensive as guttapercha.—Arkansaw Traveler.

A Big Sunflower. The biggest sunflower on record has been raised this year by Mrs. Penchower, of Cloverdale, Colo. The stalk is 6 inches in diameter at the ground, it stands 12 feet high, and the flower measures 9 feet in circumstance. Omaha Queer Contents of His Brain. Alliance, Box Butte county, Neb. furnishes a case for surgeons and scientists to study over. Sunday Adelbert Higby, a boy, 16 years of age, residing in that place, was out hunting with a rusty old shotgun. The gun exploded, striking the boy in the forehead just above the right eve, crushing the skull. Through the aid of a companion who was with him the lad was taken home and Dr. W. H. Smith was summoned.

At sight of the wound the doctor was surprised to find the boy alive, but judge of his amazement when, probing the wound, he found an old rusty screw that had been in the stock imbedded fully an inch and a half in the brain. Further probing brought to light two pieces of the boy's hat brim and four pieces of the skull bone, the largest of which was nearly the size of a silver dollar. In the operation the doctor also found it necessary to remove about half an ounce of the brain itself. It is something no surgical authority has recorded as possible. But here it is proved. The injured boy has been conscious ever since the accident, and unless blood poisoning sets in he stands every chance of recovering. -St. Joseph News.

The Kindly Mastiff Spoke for Her. That was a fine passage between the executive of Kentucky and the wife of the condemned man, who went to Frankfort Friday to ask for a pardon. She had presented her papers and sat breathless while the arbiter of her fate perused them; and, as she waited, a mastiff, the playmate of the governor's little son-a beast not given to strangers-uncoiled himself from the rug, where he had been lying, and came up in that friendly way which only dogs know how to affect. pense and pain in the agitated features gists.
