AN EXPENSIVE GIFT.

BY EMORY J. HAYNES.

"Something odd, rich and in good "Expensive, of course," responded the obsequious salesman, with a knowing twinkle in his eye. "Well, you know I don't mind the cost," I enswered.
"I should say not, Mr. Gifford." the man replied, at the same time bowing me along in that body bending sort of way that salesmen seem to think tickles us customers who have big money to spend. "Right this way.

Into our sanctum sanctorium. Yes, yes. Aha! Not every one is invited in here." And he poked me deferentially along into that room with the curtains and gaslight, don't ye know, where they pretend to keep the nicest things in art.

In fact they knew me well at Bolton's. I was a free buyer of anything new and rare that they imported; had been, indeed for ten years, ever since I came into my property.
"What a raft of stuff you gentlemen have worked into my bachelor quarters, first and last," I said to the salesman. "And yet, sir, not a parvenu in your residence! Not a vulgar piece. All ton of the house was one of ours at the club and had been schooled abroad in this virtue business, don't ye know. I was for something delicate but very sincere, as they call it. I had rarely ever been so genuinely moved. I think never in my life. I might heve permitted myself to become actually excited over it, except that I never forgot what belonged to good form. Now that last hurdle at Sheepshead bay will excite most men, especially if they have much up. But I never gave way. Did you never notice me on my cob, statuesque to the finish, and my glasses not even trembling as I put them to my eyes? The fellows always remarked on it, did the dear boys, and envied me. Yes, don't you know. Just so at Le Grand Prix. And you know how hot it always is in Paris in June. Of course the Derby is a bit exciting to everybody, so many there. The fair creature—as they put it in the old-fashioned novel—I never read there new ones about the Laphams, for they make me think of pictures unvarnished, and besides they come too close home, sort o' vulgar photography of Boston people whom I know; and any fellow can manage a camera, but it takes an artist to create and paint a fair creature with real romantic surroundings-well, I met her first in Geneya, where she was at school. Her watchful parents were starving near by at a pension. It was for her that I wanted this present. For five years I had bided my time. That sweet face-but her parents were puritanical sort of people, very wealthy, you know, but very proper. The child was under a duenna of a preceptress, who kept my queen out of reach of such a scapegrace as I was then. I used to manage to meet her however. Don't some young heart thrill as he or she reads this with the memories of those Geneva schools. walking out in such pretty procession Saturday afternoons, with the teachers ahead and alongside and bringing up the rear; and brilliant winter's sun shine, the glorious lake, the long bridge around whose shapely piers the clear waters parted like liquid amber. into which a dreaming idler could stand gazing by the hour? Don't you remember the other fellows who used grand review day very often. Of course they saw us; knew we were Americans; and I am sure we Yankee boys looked as well as the English and German fellows who used to be on the bridge also. Ah, we came pretty near several duels with those foreign chaps! That they should so much as dare look at our girls! Ours were the fairest faces in those schools. The English girls had more color, but they walked like oxen. There were some pretty Egyptian misses in the school with my Dulcinea. But such bright, clear and flashing good looks as the American girls had! We Yankee boys used to boast of it. I believe I did not mention that I was in old Pierre Lombard's boys' school. Dear old Geneva, I salute thee! So does many another who reads these lines. By the way, boys, old Pierre is dead.

He died last year. I was in Heidelberg at the time and went down on in-Well. well. It was in old Geneva that I lost my heart. I met May often later on as the family began to travel a couple of years after her graduation; met at railway stations and hotels, don't ye know. Her dignified father introduced me at last, one day in Brussels. We traveled to Paris together. I knew then that she might some time love me if I behaved. Still there was never anything in Galignani's about me. I candidly review my life at this moment, and in all my continental residence there was never anything beastly bad about me. A lone fellow in this world, a mere boy when my guardian first sent me over there, with too much money, with lots of health and no more religious training than I had had—God forgive me. I'll not reflect on the devil—why I did think that Mary's Presbyterian father might look further and fare worse for a son-in-law. Still, I was surprised, you may believe, on their return to Boston and her coming out, to receive a card! But to my Christmas present. had got on to the point, heaven bless her gracious condescension, that I felt free to risk it. It must be rich, rare and yet very quiet. There was nothing loud in that circle. And that was always my taste too, as everybody knows. I think I never in my whole existence on this mundane sphere gave to any subject so much profound and weary feet and eyes. My happiness for life depended upon it, I then thought and I think so still. I tried the best stores here; I ran over to New York.I plodded up and down stairs in slow-and-sure Philadelphia. "Exquisite, quiet, rich, rare, costly," I kept repeating. If I had had time I would have cabled over a commission, but I was afraid of the steamer in its winter voyages, you know. I was at my wits' end. It is astonishing how singularly cheap all the Christmas presents are in our American shops. It is very difficult to wishes to spend, a sum at all comparable with the heart of the giver, not to speak of the heart of the receiver. I hear it said that poor people always feel very poor at Christmas time. Singular, isn't it? Why, it is the gifts that seem poor to me. You can't buy anything hardly that is worth having. You have to apologize. You have to fill your arms up with so many things, like a toy-wagon at a charity fair, in order to make any kind of an exhibit of affection. My experience is, among other things, that it is a very rare thing, a present that makes any one laugh right out or bring tears of joy,

"My curious genius," I exclaimed, springing half off my chair, "that'sthat's my wish exactly. Who yo are or what you are I—I confess I don't know. But you have hit my purpose to the clip of a polo mallet!" "Then I will direct you," piqued the queer, thin voice.

"Name it!" I gasped.

"Give her a sweet breath without the mingled fumes of cigarettes and fine brandies. Give her a clean mouth, a clear brain, a healthy nerve, an eye with no unnatural watery humors swimming in its affectionate glances. Give her a strong steady hand!"

"Why, my shining garcon," I cried, "I am no drunkard!" "Think of her sweet mouth!" laughed the imp.

"It is indeed charming to think of," sighed. "Try to realize how that long, silken

"Mi bewoy, you'll be breaking her heart by being brought home from your club in a limp, hand-me-down condition within five Christmases even if you get her to come and live in your home. . Do you want to break this lily, petal by petal, as a browsing steer breaks the flowers with his hoof, preferring to eat cabbage? And quicker than I can say it, the Thing, whoever it might be, struck a match on the bronze shield of St. George-the mantel ornament on which he sat astride that minute—and set fire to my respirations. My breath burned with a sickly blue flame, suggestive of a place I had read about in school exercises in Dante. "Put it out! Fire! Quench it!" I screamed, spinning my chair back across the room.

"Exactly. Suppose you put it out yourself," mocked the Thing. The blue flame flickered out of itsef, and I sat with drops of ice on my forehead as far away from the riches of honor and love enough to knock off drinking to please the girl

"Now stop."
"No; I will not stop. I often wonder if the good husbands realize that we, the wives admire manly yigor in them as much as they do wifely grace and beauty in us. How much it adds to our happiness that we are both in perfect health. Perfect health! Oh, God, we thank thee! How rich, full, zest ful is living! Every breath is a delicious sensation! And it all comes to you, you once pale face, from the present that you gave me, your reform of those two habits."

"Oh, that did cost me something, didn't it? No one will ever know what I spent on it. Days of struggle, nights of sleeplessness, watching, fighting, care and prayer. I could never have afforded it had not the Almighty stood behind me and helped me to pay the bill."

The snow is falling amid the great trees on the lawn. It is just such a night as that night in Fifth avenue, But the great windows of this happy home gleam with no Dante's light, I trust. The imp has never come back to mount the St. George and the dragon which I have put on my mantel. But this good flesh and blood angel has bided long by my fireside. She has cleansed my mouth till I think I even talk better. If I am anything of a man I owe it to her. God bless her and bless God for her! Many a man who reads this will say the same. I have given my wife the house in town, settled upon her a fortune in her own right, would in fact, give her everything in the world, wouldn't you? Perhaps you have—in money. But would you, could you make up your mind to give your good wife the breaking off o any dear old habit, even if it half killed you? She would prize it more than many deeds of many lands, yea add much fine gold. Cold Weather Rules.

Always regulate the clothing to suit the temperature; a too heavy wrap induces copious perspiration, thus causing debility, and consequently the danger of taking cold is increased. Always open or throw off a wrap on gong into a warmer atmosphere. Keep the back, especially between well as the chest. Never lean the back against anything cold. After exercising, never ride in an open carriage or near an open car-window. Avoid draughts, in or out of doors. Never stand still in the street, especially after walking, and most particularly when exposed to a cold wind Also always avoid standing on ice or snow. Keep the mouth closed as much as possible when in the open air, particularly upon going from a warmer at-mosphere. By breathing through the the nose the air becomes warmed before it reaches the lungs. A silk handkerchief, a piece of lossely woven woolen cloth, or knitted woolen material, placed over the month and nose, or the mouth only, when in the open air, is very beneficial for persons with weak lungs, and should never be neglected when the temperature is at or below freezing point. Never take warm drinks immediate ly before going out into the cold, and never start on a journey in the morning before eating breakfast.

Housekeeping in Thibet. For a certain number of ponies or raks the Tibetian bride is purchased by her husband, and the only marriage ceremony is a grand spree lasting as long as the bridegroom can afford to keep it up. The wife's life is not a hard one, her domestic cares being few. She makes the tea, it is true, but with that the housekeeping ends; for no one ever dreams of cleaning the kettle afterward, and every one has to mix his own tsamba and lick his own bowl clean when he has finished. Every four or five years she may have to sew a new sheepskin gown for herself or for some one of the family, but certainly not oftener. She cannot herd the cattle or sheep; men must do that, as there is danger from marauders. She passes her time spinning yarn, weaving a coarse kind of cloth out of which bags are made, turning a praying wheel, and—destroying too voracious vermin. Her toilet requires rearranging only four or five times a year-when she visits Kumbum or some other fair; she never washes herself or her garments, and her children cannot outgrow their clothes; they have only to let out a little the folds of the gown, their unique

She's a Cruel Creature. The comedian on the stage had brought a laugh by some allusion to a pression upon his face. 'You vos der undertaker?' he asked. I admitted boy's first shaving encounter with a barber, when the young man leaned over his girl and whispered:

Quite Time. A recent wedding in England was so interrupted that the friends of the wedded pair found special reason to congratulate them when the ceremony was at last over. All went merrily until the bride-groom was called upon to produce the wedding ring. In vain he felt in his trousers' pocket for the indispensible trifle. Nothing could be found except a hole through which the ring had evidently fallen into the high boot, which is affeted by young men of that district. What was he to do? "Take your boot off," said the par-The suspense and silence were painful. The organist, at the priest's bidding, struck up a "voluntary." The young man removed his boot, the ring was found, also a hole in the stocking, and the worthy minister remarked.

An electric light wire had sagged to the tinned roof of her house and the current was conducted by the water conductor on the or side of the house to a trap in the celiar; thence by the waste pipe to the sink on the second floor; the water pipe to the street, so that when the lady put her hand on the faucet of the water pipe she couldn't let go. The Growth of London. One of the most singular facts about the growth of London is its regularity. It is estimated that every month about a thousand houses are added to London. In August of this year 766,577 houses had to be supplied by the water companies with water; in September that number had increased to 767.597. In August of last year 754,464 houses had to be supplied, for 12,118 below the number in the same month of this year. In September of this year the companies had to supply 10.-976 houses more than in September of 1889. This extension is not confined to any one portion of the capitol, but a preference is still being shown for the north and south-west suburbs.

"Well. in this state of mind—I am going to tell it just as it transpired, for I am telling this at a distance and can't hear you laugh or sneer-I threw myself down in my room at the Fitth avenue in New York, on my way back to Boston, disgusted. It was a bitter cold night, I remember. The very wind was frozen. The electric light was frozen is it beat against the outside of my warm window panes. I was tired enough to drop to sleep waiting for dinner.

I looked hard at the imp who was curled up there on the bronze of the mantels. He was surely quizzing me now; a fine sneer was discernible on his old, ebony face. I was sure he thought I could not do it. He wound his snake-like legs about the figure of St. George and the dragon, and dropping his head, began to finger his chin. "Can't afford it, my boy! Well, when I awoke I found the cold gray light of winter at the morning windows. I got off to Boston as soon as I could and resolved to go to work on that present. I had only four weeks to begin it, but now these five years, the coming Christmas, I have been working on it. This truthful narrative of actual fact in a human life I have consented to give to my friend for a Christmas story. I know that truth is stranger than fiction and harder to be believed. All right. The man who had him said he would sell for $50. offered him just half, and after some haggling we settled on $27 as about the right thing, and I took the horse.
I thought I had made a good bar gain. I led the new horse out on Sand creek and he went along all right. The next morning I told the foreman of my outfit that I would try the new pony, as I was going to town again.

The horse behaved so quietly while being saddled that I began to think he was just waiting for me to mount him and then 'buck the stars out of the sky.'
Well, I crawled upon his frame and he never made a move. I spoke to him, but he stood still. Then I gave him a pretty good dig with my spurs, expecting that it would set him to bucking if anything would. But instead of bucking he just started off on a trot, accompaying each step with a terrible groan. Every time I would hit my whip or give him a dig with the spur he would groan till my blood almost run cold. Well, I rode another horse into Laramie that day. I said nothing about my 'Groaner', as I called the new horse.

But I got even with the fellow who sold him to me.

A few days after a young fellow rode into camp. I found that he was the son of the man from who I had bought 'Groaner.' He saw 'Groaner' and got struck on him right away. After a little talk he said he would give me $50 for him. What his dad said when he saw the young man coming home with that horse and found that he had paid $50

Miss Babcock, the young lady who keeps books for Bell & Co., is the victim of a practical joke at the hands of -several young men which may yet turn out seriously for the perpetrators. Miss Babcock was served with a subpoena a few days since by a young man who personated an officer, the writ purporting to be a summons requiring her presence before the grand jury and being duly signed by the judge and county clerk. The young lady took the matter in earnest for a day or two and stood the taunts of her friends and associates, who persisted in "guying" her at every possible opportunity, with commendable stoicism; but it finally became clear to her mind then the tables began to turn. She consulted a lawyer who informed her that she had a clear case against the fellows who had so recklessly disturbed her peace of mind and laid themselves liable by forging the names of Judge O'Hara and County Clerk Carmody and posing in the role of an officer in the law. The boys realize that the laugh is now all on Miss Babcock's side and that she has them on the rack, and they are moving heaven and earth to settle the matter and escape impending prosecution.—B. H. A Wonderful Boy Orator. To hear and see a little six-year-old fellow in knickerbockers deliver a solemn address, laying down large chunks of solid advice, neatly separated by firstly, secondly, thirdly, etc., was droll and the audience, which about halffilled Roberts Park church, last night, laughed repeatedly at the queer effects produced by Irvin J. Steininger, the hoy orator. He paused and took impressive drinks from an oratorical glass of water, and delivered the telling passages with telling gestures. The manner of the boy was that of an effective orator. His emphasis and gestures were all appropriate, but when scathing bits of sarcasm dropped from his lips in his necessarily childish voice, the effect was irresistably funny. He was freely applauded.—Indianapolis News, Nov. 19

A Remarkable Growth.

It is a fact worthy of note that scarcely nine years ago the Birdsell Manufacturing company, of this city, now one of the largest concerns in the state, (and then, as now, the largest manufacturers of clover hullers in the world), began in a small way the manufacture of spring wagons. There were some peculiar features about these wagons that attracted attention and the demand for them grew rapidly It increased year by year, until in 1886 the enlarging of their works became a mat-ter of necessity. The Birdsell's then decided to begin the making of buggies as well as spring wagons, and that year a few Birdsell buggies were put out. Like the spring wagons they became popular at once; indeed they were soon in such a demand that within two years the need of further enlargement became an imperative necessity. It was now decided to begin, in connection with spring wagons and buggies, the manufacture of the now renowned Birdsell Steel Skein Farm Wagon, which at once sprang into such phenomenal fayor that one year later the already enormous plant was entirely overhauled and greatly enlarged. Suffi cient factory room was now added to permit of a still more extensive line of vehicles being made, and a full assortment of fine carriages was added. Few enterprises in the country have grown to such marvelous proportions in such an incredibly short space of time. The shipping house of the Birdsells alone now occupies more ground-it being over 800 feet long—than did the entire factory ten years ago. The two principal factory buildings, one for clover hullers and the other for vehicles, are built around an open square and occupy each about six acres of ground, while the entire floor surface is nearly, if not quite, a score of acres. In a recent interview with the Chicago manager we were informed that the company's business there was assuming large proportions and enlarged quarters would soon be needed there also. Evidently there is great merit in goods of the Birdsell make or they would not in so short a time have achieved this wonderful success.—S. B. Tribune, Jan. 10.

THE NEW DICTIONARY.—The answer of the publisher of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary to the attempt of pirates to steal their thunder by issuing cheap phototype reproductions of the antiquated edition of 1847, is the publication of a new and completely reedited and enlarged edition of the authentic Unabridged, which as a distinguishing title bears the name of In-TERNATIONAL.

The publishers have expended in the last ten years over $300,000 in the preparation of this new book before issuing the first copy, and the improvements of the various editions since that of 1847 have cost over three-fourths of a million of dollars for editing, illustrating, typesetting and electrotyping alone.

This new Dictionary is the best book of its kind in the English language. It unlocks mysteries, resolves doubts, and decides disputes. The possession of it and the habit of consulting it will tend to promote knowledge, literary taste, and social refinement. For every family, the members of which have mastered the art of reading, the purchase of Webster's International Dic tionary will prove a profitable investment, and the more they advance in knowledge and cultivation the more they will appreciate its aid and worth.

The managers of the soldiers' home, at Grand Rapids, have put into force a new rule which confiscates the pension moneys of the inmates. It has been the rule to admit no veterans who were drawing pensions greater than $12 a month, and to allow these who were admitted to draw their own pensions. Hereafter none will be admitted who receive more than $12 a month, but those admitted must turn over to the treasurer of the home all pensions received by them. Each man will be allowed $4 a month for himself, if he draws that much, but the balance may be sent to the family of the veteran, if he have one, or turned into the treasury of the home. The managers say that this plan will be better for the families, as many of them now get nothing from the pensions received by the head of the family.—Detroit News.

Fire broke out in Schaeffer's block of securing foreign investment at this point. This enterprise has finally taken shape, and an iron and steel plant, employing from 1,000 to 3,000 men, is almost an accomplished fact. This means an investment of $1,500,-

THE last issue of the Enterprise appeared Saturday, with the name of McGinty at the head, and is known as the last kick of McGinty. The material will either be divided among other offices in the immediate vicinity or packed up and shipped to Chicago by the Illinois Type Foundry which first sent it out here. From the many proprietors and their friends who contributed largely the company has had about $1,300 out of it, and will now have the plant second hand. Several people in this vicinity have extracted a good stock of experience out of the venture, and will be fully satisfied to not start a third paper in Buchanan, for a time at least.

THE meeting of the Improvement Association, to hear the report of the committee of ten appointed two weeks before, was held in Rough's opera house Monday evening. There was a quite large attendance, and the feeling of confidence exhibited at former meetings was continued. Mr. Worthington, chairman of the committee, made a partial report, and the work of the committee was continued. The committee to whom was referred the question of changing the township lines reported that an adjourned meet ing of the Board of Supervisors will be held February 23, for the purpose of considering the question, and there was at present no question of the work being passed by the Supervisors, giving to Buchanan that portion of Niles township lying within town 7 south. range 18 west, and making a full square township of Buchanan. such as occurs in paintonary cubercolosis. Heretofore the disease has frequently been cured by removing the diseased tissues or by destroying the bacilli by external applications. Following the injection there is a strong constitutional reaction, and the affected parts apparently become inflamed, as do the affected parts in the early stages of typhoid fever. The diseased tissue then becomes "brownish and necrotic." This also occurs in typhoid fever. The necrotic tissue is then thrown off, leaving a healthy ulcer which promptly heals. The same process takes place in typhoid fever .-Dr. Austin Flint in Forum.

That year a fire swept the greater part of the city, which then was one of the most prosperous in northeast Missouri, on the Mississippi. An attempt was made to rebuild the burned district. Scarcely had the work begun when a great rise in the river submerged the place and ruined the crops in the surrounding fields. Since then, off and on, the place has been visited by flood and fire till it has been reduced to a mere settlement of ague racked backwoodsmen. Recently what was left of the business portion of the city was wiped out by fire, with a loss of over $20,000.-Cor. Indianapolis Journal.

Roofing a Mountain Cut. A letter from Los Angeles, Cal., says that a unique piece of engineering is being completed on the Sante Fe line, through the Cajon pass, that will take rank with the famous Tehachapi loop on the Southern Pacific. It amounts in effect to roofing over the mountain. Much trouble was experienced last winter on account of the landslides in this pass, which kept the line blockaded most of the time, and to obviate this difficulty this work was designed.

It consists of a series of terraces, four in number, rising up from the track where the cut is deepest, excavated so as to break the force of the water coming down the slope, and carrying it off laterally by a series of wooden conduits and surface drains. These terraces range from 300 to 500 feet in length, measuring in the aggregate 1,800 feet, and are all roofed over. An army of men and teams have been at work for some months.

A Novel Sign.

An enterprising trunk maker has made a very striking application of electricity for the advertisement of his wares. In the front of his store he has erected a pedestal of polished brass, surmounted by a framework, representing the usual trimmings of an ordinary trunk. Inside this framework is placed a trunk of beveled French plate glass, which is illumined in the evening by electric light, and which constitutes an unique method of advertising. The main part of the sign is spiral in design, and is of solid brass, excepting a small hole through the center to pass electric wires through, and on the base of the structure is conspicuously inscribed the name of the firm.-New York Commercial Advertiser.

Rain-in-the-face, who is now at the head of the hostile tribes, is one of the bravest Indians in the west, as well as one of the worst. He is the reputed slayer of Custer, though that distinction has been claimed by Spotted Tail and several other braves. He is said to be absolutely devoid of fear.

The Windows of the Block. A tired young man stood at the window of his room in his house on one of the uptown cross streets on Christmas afternoon, and looked at the windows in the big, long brown stone block on the other side of the street. He saw on the ledge of a third story window of the house directly opposite a bottle of champagne. It had evidently been placed there to get cool. On the ledge of a second story window of the same bouse he saw a photographic frame with a glass exposed to the light. Another ledge was the resting place of a pan filled with something which he could see was smoking hot. The young man owns a spyglass, and looking through it at the smoking pan he concluded that the girls in that room across the way must have been making molasses candy on a gas stove and had put the stuff out to harden. Turning his spyglass to the window

Lost in a Sewer.

Gustav Larson is employed by the city of Minneapolis in the sewer department. In company with two fellow workmen he proceeded to Twenty-seventh street and Tyndale avenue to make an inspection and clear the sewer of a jam which seemed to exist. He entered the sewer alone, his two companions remaining above ground to give help if necessary. The sewer at this point is sixty-six inches high. His companions figured out that they would not be needed and walked Without a light Larson lost his bearings, and his shouts for assistance brought no answer.

Finally Larson gave up shouting and endeavored vainly to find another manhole out of which he could crawl. There were plenty of them, but they were out of reach. After walking nearly two hours Larson noticed the passageway was growing smaller, and this gave him hope. Soon after he managed to find a hole that he could reach, and by the of the sewer walls reached terra in an exhausted condition. The was made at Fourth street and yenue, about three miles from of entrance. Cor. Chicago

Awkward Occurrences on a Railroad. A few weeks ago the train on this di vision of the Meran-Bozen railway was obliged to come to halt for want of water for the engine, and the passengers had to turn out to help the trainment bring enough water to render possible a completion of the journey. We omitted all mention of this occurrence in the hope that in the future similar inconveniences would be provided against. To our deep regret we are again in the disagreeable position to record such an occurrence, and we feel it our duty this time to lay a description of it before our readers.—Meran Zeitung. Sketching in Parliament.

M. Mars, the well known French caricaturist, was in the house of commons the other evening. He was brought in by a brother caricaturist, Mr. Harry Furniss, but he expressed some surprise when he was informed that sketching in the strangers' gallery was forbidden. Nevertheless he took one or two "thumbnails." In Paris M. Mars is permitted to prosecute his humor from a seat next to the premier of France. Honorable members will perhaps be amused to hear that M. Mars does not consider the house has much individuality in its members. -London Star.

Making Man Consumptive Proof. Dr. Koch's remarkable discovery has already been followed by a further step, which aims not so much at curing people who are afflicted with consumption as at preventing the growth of the disease in those who are healthy, just as Jenner introduced vaccination as a preventive against smallpox. This discovery has been made by Drs. Hericourt and Richet, pupils of M. Pasteur. Their experiments so far have been confined to rabbits, but they are confident of having found out the secret of making man consumptive proof.—London Tit-Bits.

Roast Loin of Elephant. On the bill of fare of the Palace, Cincinnati, one day recently there appeared the rather unusual dainty, "loin of elephant." It was, in fact, part of Chief, the vicious elephant who was shot in the Cincinnati Ecological garden, and was not bad eating, as some of the force of this office can testify. It was without exception the best roast elephant that any of us had ever tasted.—Hotel Mail. A Good New Year's Present.

There is a pompous, fussy old gentleman down town who has managed to accumulate a good sized fortune by close attention to business and by keeping a rigid curb on his generous instincts. This prosperous merchant employs a score of men and boys, and year after year he has been unanimously elected by his employes as "chief bore." He is full of sage advice, which he distributes about the office with a lavish hand. His favorite admonition to every person that is unable to escape him is, "Never lose your nerve and never lose your temper." He says that that is the motto that brought him success. Never has this fussy philosopher been known to make a Christmas or a New Year's present. Great was the surprise therefore among his clerks when on the last day of the year he called them singly into his private office and impressively presented each clerk with a neatly enveloped box about four inches long, two inches broad and an inch and a half thick.

"A scarf pin, by Jove!" was the mental ejaculation of each recipient of one of these boxes. The pompous employer gave with each an admonition not to open it until after office hours. An impatient group of clerks watched the languid hands of the clock as they moved toward the figure V. Finally the hour of release came. Meanwhile the employer had departed. More than twenty boxes were opened then and there with nervous haste, and an equal number of scrolls of paper were taken out, perused hastily and thrown on the floor with scornful exclamations. The office boy who swept up the scrolls of paper is responsible for the statement that each piece contained the words, "Never lose your nerve and never lose your temper." -New York Times.

Bismarck in Berlin.

Prince Bismarck, when passing through Berlin on his way from Varzin to Fried richsruh, was the object of hearty demonstrations at the Lehrter station. His arrival had been announced, and many hurried thither to bid him welcome. When the train arrived the people crowded round the saloon carriage and cheered enthusiastically. The prince, who appeared at the window and shook hands with the people, said in reply to inquiries that he was feeling very well, which was confirmed by his excellent appearance. Pointing to his fur cap he said that it had been very cold at Varzin.

When the multitude became somewhat noisy the police tried to interfere, but in vain. Prince Bismarck, smiling, said: "I have not seen a policeman for a long time. Don't deprive me of that pleasure." The train left the station amid vociferous cheering and the sounds of 'Dentschland, Deutschland, uber Alles." The ex-chancellor appeared to be in excellent health, and spoke in a alive and apparently ugly. It was caught jocular tone with many persons on the platform. Some one exclaiming, "Since your retirement the Bourses have been bad," Prince Bismarck replied, "Never mind; Europe remains where it was." -Cor. London News.

Chicago's Steel Steamships. Two twin steel steamships stand on the stocks at the yards of the Chicago Shipbuilding company at South Chicago. They are nearly ready to be launched into the Calumet river. These 1,000-tonners are being built for the Minnesota Steamship company. As the first steel vessels built so far west as Chicago they are of special interest. They represent the first season's successful work of pioneer shipbuilding company. The vessels, as they now stand, are 308 feet in length over all, with a keel of 292 feet. The beam is 40 feet and the depth 25 feet. At present they do not contain a single stick of timber. The main deck, however, will be floored with lumber and the hold ceiled with the same mate rial. The vessels, when complete, will have cost $210,000. The carrying capacity of each will be 2,500 tons. They are being fitted for the Lake Superior iron trade.—Chicago Tribune.

Snowing on February 4. A gentleman residing near New York city remarked to a friend on the 4th day of February, 1888, "We shall have snow today." There was not a sign of it then, but before noon the white flakes began to fall. When next they met the friend asked, "How did you know it was going to snow that day?" The sad and singular answer was: "Forty-three years ago today I buried my only son. It snowed that day, and has snowed on the 4th day of February every year since, therefore I felt sure it would snow when I made the remark." Let those who fancy that the law of probability is of any value when applied to any particular day ascertain how many chances there are that it would snow for forty-three consecutive years in a certain part of the country on the 4th of February .- St. Louis Republic.

Warsaw's Weird Felines. During the past ten days our town has been the abiding place of a large number of cats, which, from their actions and appearances; have been adjudged mad. Jerry Kudder, an expressman, was bitten by one of the rabid animals, an exceedingly painful wound being inflicted. To guard against all possible danger all cats showing the least symptom are forthwith shot.-Warsaw Riches That Came Too Late. A romantic but tragic event occurred in this city recently. A pine coffin and unshrouded corpse were all that was left to tell the story of a sad life and its end. The victim was John Jemison. He lived what to many would be considered an uneventful life. However, without knowing it, he was heir to wealth greater than that attributed to the fabled Monte Cristo. He died so poor in ready cash as not to have enough to bury him decently.

J. H. Summerlin, a prominent lawyer of this city, was delving in some old, faded and musty letters which had belonged to the deceased when he discovered the secret that makes the heirs of Jemison the owners of many million dollars' worth of property. The letter in question was written in 1836 by one of the heroes of the Texas struggle. He was a Capt. Jemison in the service of Gen. Sam Houston when Texas was a republic. In this epistle, which was written to a relative in Chicago, he says that he will not be able to return to the loved ones at his home, but that he expects to meet the very fate that did be-fall him when some time after he fell on the field, his heart pierced by a shot from the foe.

The man who died here recently was his descendant in a direct line, and of his identity there is not a doubt. The soldier who was his ancestor had property in three different states. These holdings were of comparatively trifling value, and Capt. Jemison was considered a poor man when he died. Some of this land was located in the very heart of Chicago.

A power of attorney has been received by the lawyer who made the discovery, and has been filed with the clerk of the county court here as a preliminary step toward the recovery of some valuable property located in this city. Since the death of Capt. Jemison the property that was his has increased in value to such an extent that today the portion of it located in Chicago alone is estimated to be worth $40,000,000, while the balance is as much more.—San Antonio (Tex. Cor. Chicago Tribune.

A Wild Buck in a Conservatory. Some members of D. M. Carithers' family heard a crashing of glass in the conservatory in the rear of the handsome residence on B street in the heart of Santa Rosa, Cal. Will Carithers, on investigation, found a wild spike buck among the flowers. The animal was trembling in every muscle, and there were bleeding wounds on the neck, caused by the broken glass through which he had Jumped on entering the conservatory. The whole family came out to see the remarkable sight of a wild deer in a conservatory filled with rare flowers.

While some one was thinking about getting a gun, the small boys in the next yard climbed the fence and frightened the deer, which made its exit from the other side of the conservatory, smashing another large glass. The animal dashed past the excited people from the house into the street, clearing the high fence in a graceful leap. It then dashed down through one of the main residence streets, and was finally killed by a crowd of boys near the slaughter house on the outskirts of the city. The animal is supposed to have been chased in from Hood mountain, several miles east, by hounds. When dressed it weighed 120 pounds The damage to the conservatory flowers was between $50 and $100.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

Indian Cunning.

C. H. Russell, an old resident of Arizona, speaking of the trouble among the Indians, asserted that in his opinion the nost intelligent and at the same time the most cunning of the western savages are the San Carlos Apaches. To them, according to Mr. Russell, is due the invention of the centre fire cartridge. "During the outbreak some eight or nine years ago," he continued, "their arms were all Winchester rifles of the rim fire pattern, and they soon exhausted their supply of cartridges. They had plenty of powder, bullets and percussion caps, but they were not available for breechloading guns. The cunning rascals had saved their brass shells, and, with surprising ingenuity, they altered the hammers of their guns, drilled holes through the center of the shells for the caps, loaded them and used them during the rest of the war. It was discovered when they were captured. They were, I believe, the first of the kind in use."—San Francisco Call. An interesting discovery has just been made at the old Cinque Port of Sandwich. The river Stour has lately entered an old channel near its confluence with Pegwell bay, and has Iaid bare a wreck which has probably occupied that position for several centuries. The vessel is one of foreign build, and the wood is in a fair state of preservation, having been imbedded in the sand. Attempts have been made from time to time to cut down the wreck, but the hull is as yet pretty nearly intact. It is believed that the remains are those of the Papal vessel Carvke or Carrick, which sank at this spot in the reign of Henry VIII.-London Standard.

An Owl Kills a Dog. In a Main street window in Pawtucket there is a fine specimen of the cat owl above the Diamon I Hill reservoir in rather a curious manner. One of the residents in that vicinity was in the woods with his dog, a Gordon setter, when the owl attacked the dog, catching it by the throat. The owl succeeded in killing the dog, but its beak or talons were caught in the dog's hair and its capture was easy.—Providence Journal.

Mr. Childs' Passion for Clocks. George W. Childs, the journalist, has the largest collection of clocks in the world. His friends say he is perfectly wild on the subject of clocks. During last year he added over 400 to the collection, making the entire number in his collection comething like 2,000, which are kept going in a room specially built for their reception.-St. Louis Republic

Across the Continent in a Box Car. Fifteen bell boys in downtown hotels under the leadership of James E. Dono hue, have completed arrangements for a novel journey across the continent. The lads, whose homes are in the eastern states, came to the coast at different times in various capacities and ways, and have never been enabled to save enough money to pay their return pass age. All are anxious to go east. They have clubbed together, and by the payment of $10 each have raised a fund sufficiently large to enable them to carry out their project. They have chartered a common box freight car. They will erect cots and bunks in their car. An oil stove, cooking utensils and a supply of provisions will complete the outfit. Donohue and his fourteen com panions expect to start on their journey soon, and anticipate any amount of fur on the trip.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Within the past few years the discoveries of ancient prehistoric relics and Spanish remains in the vast region lying between the Yellowstone river and the Gulf of Mexico have been extensive and important. Those near Albuquerque are being examined by a commission from the interior department and geologists from the Smithsonian Institution. The same parties will doubtless examine the Colorado and Texas remains recently reported. Their official reports will be looked for with interest.

In Texas, near the town of Carnesville, three explorers have discovered an ancient place of sepulture, in which there are many catacombs containing the petrified remains of an unknown race. Among the articles unearthed were ancient pieces of sculpture and weapons of war.

When the east bound Washington express on the New England road, leaving this city at 2:45 a.m., was a few miles this side of Willimantic Thursday, fire was discovered in a Pullman sleeper. It spread rapidly, and the passengers were ordered out and placed in the other sleeper, which fortunately had room enough to accommodate them. It was impossible to extinguish the fire, and at Willimantic the car was cut out and the fire department called. Its services were, however, unnecessary, as the fire was got under control by other means before its arrival. An accident of this kind is very unusual, and though the fire evidently started from the heater, it does not yet appear just how it originated. The wood of the car in which it started was badly burned, and the loss will be great excitement for a little time, and probably did not have a monopoly of unpleasant agitation. They were all got out without accident, and their effects were removed uninjured. - Hartford

A short time ago an amusing incident occurred at Freiburg, in Germany. Two ladies were standing in front of a shop window, examining the wares exhibited for sale, when the owner of the establishment, impatient at their not entering his premises, told them sharply that they had been there long enough and requested them to move on. The ladies walked away without a word of remonstrance. Half an hour later a footman in court livery called at the shop and asked the ill mannered tradesman, on behalf of the Hereditary Grand Duchess of Baden, how much she owed him for having looked in at his shop window. The man's feelings on receiving the message can be more easily imagined than described.—London Telegraph.
