The following is the address delived by Prof. P. H. Kelley, at the me morial severices held at Galien, Mich. Sunday, March 1, 1891: "When a great man dies, the nation mourns" is a maxim, the truth of which has been demonstrated over and over again in every civilized nation ince the foundation of the world. Sherman enshrouds not only this nation with sadness but casts, a gloom over the entire civilized world. We, then, with sadness in our hearts. with reverance for his name, and through a sense of duty to his memory, meet to pronounce whatever eulogy we may be able to do, upon his life, and draw some lesson of loyalty and devotion to country, from his deeds. W. T. Sherman was born in Ohio in February of 1820. This great soldier first breathed the incense of American liberty while the immortal Henry Clay was speaking in thundering tones in the halls of our national Congress against the extension of negro slavery; upon a bright Sabbath morning, reverberating from shore to shore, such words as—"Liberty and Union, Now and forever, one and inseperable." "The Union it must and shall be pre-While Sherman was quietly passing

He saw the institution of slavery in the full vigor of its strength; he saw the black man on the "auction block" in the "slave pen" and at the "whip-ping post"; he saw human beings tracked through tar gled swamps and forests by blo d hounds of destruction; he saw all; he comprehended all; and being a lover of liberty his heart swalled in his breast with the bleeding of the bondmen. The question, "Ilas a state a right to secede." was one which he had heard discussed by the ablest men of the century-this, with the slavery ques tion, has been the prominent question before the illustrious man from the time he was rocked by a mother's gentle hand, till he ceased to be rocked upon the turbulent billows of civil strife, and I may say that these great principles, which were only discussed by Webster and Clay, remained to be settled by Lincoln, Grant, Sheridan, and Sherman. Upon the election of Lincole, as you all know and as some of you well remember, tile South carried out her threat, and eleven states, almost at once, withdrew from the Union. The cloud burst with all its fury. South Carolina, the "hot bed of the rebellion", opened fire on Fort Sumpter. Says a historian,- these shots were heard round the world. Sherman joined the army, and haying a military education and natural ability equal to any soldier of moders times, rose rapidly to distinction. Grant says, "Sherman saved Union forces at Shiloh, one of the bloodiest battles of the war. Had you been on that gory battle field about noon the first day you would have found our hero, his arm in a sling, his hand bleeding, his horse dead, himself covered with dust and his face besmeared with powder and blood; and during this ent re battle he was ever seen where duty called, issuing orders, cheering his men or erecting breastworks; wherever the battle raged fiercest, there Sherman was to be

In a letter to the War Department General Graut says: "General Sherman, at the battle of Shiloh, on the first day, held with raw troops, the key point of the landing. It is no disparagement to any other officer to say, I do not believe there was another division commander on the field who had the skill and experience to have done it; to his individual efforts I am indebted fo the success of that battle. In a dispatch to Secretary Stanton General Halleck said: "It is the unanimous opinion here that Brigadier General W. T. Sherman saved the fortune of the sixth, and contributed largely to the gorious victory on the seventh; he was in the thickest of the fight on both days, having had three horses killed under him, and being wounded twice." Gen. Nel on, a few days before his death, in conversation with several gentlemen, said: "During 8 hours the tate of the army, on the field of Shiloh, depended on the life of one man: if Gen. Sherm in had fallen the army would have been captured or destroyed."

Gen. Boyle, in speaking to a crowd of men in Washington, said, "you do not know how to appreciate our military men. If Napoleon Bonaparte had commanded at Shiloh, he would have made General Sherman a Field Marshall on the field of battle"

Much more might be said of his courage and his skill in the battle of Shiloh, but why should we confine our story to a single battle, when his whole war record is a story of brilliant generalship. Let us let him tell his own story after having followed the rebels into Corinth and delea ing them on the ground of their own selection. Immediately after the battle of Corinth he wrote to Chief of Staff Hammond: "But a few days ago a large and powerful rebel army lay at Corinth wit out posts extending to our very camp at Shiloh; they called to their aid all their armies from every quarter, abandoning their sea coast and the great river Mississippi, that they might overwhelm us with numbers in the place of their own choosing. They had chosen leaders, men of high reputation and courage, and they dared us to leave the cover of our iron-clad gunboats to come to fight them in their trenches and still more dangerous swamps and ambuscades of their Southern forests. Their whole country from Richmond to Memphis and from Nashville to Mobile rang with their taunts and boastings, as to how they would immolate the Yankees if they dared leave the Tennessee River. They boldly and defiantly challenged us to meet them at Corinth. We accepted the challenge and came slowly, and without concealment, to the very ground of their selection; and they have fled away! We yesterday marched unopposed through the burning embers of their destroyed camps and property and pursued them to their swamps, until burning bridges plainly confessed that they had fled and not marched away for better ground. It is a victory as briliant and important as any recorded in history, and every officer and soldier who lent his aid has just reason to be proud of his part." Again we find Sherman the trusted Chief and aid of Gen. Grant in the great expedition against Vicksburg. He was with Grant when Gen. Pemberton surrendered the greatest army that had ever been either captured or destroyed in anc.ent or modern war

Ladies and gentlemen, it was a fitting spectacle to behold upon a bright 4th of July morning a rebel army of 40,000 soldiers drawn up in line and surrendered to the protectors of American Institutions on the anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, 87 years after our nation "had been conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. "I fancy I see the Revolufrom eternity, to the patriots who were trying to uphold the principles of eternal justice even at the point of the bayonet. I seem to see the father of our country smile his satisfaction as Grant and Sherman receive the sword from Pemberton. I hear again the words of Webster spoken when Sherman was a mere boy:

ever keep green. I will only mention the prominent part he took in the Battle of Bull Run, in the battle above the clouds, and his other glorious victories in Tennessee, and will pass to the great expedition known as Sherman's March to the Sea." The ablest war critics of modern times pronounce it the boldest and most daring cam-paign anywhere chronicled in the history of ancient or modern warfare.

AND THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PART

Starting from Tennessee, what a great spectacle it must have been to see a mighty army of 100,000 strong commencing a campaign without precedent in modern warfare and only equaled in ancient to the campaigns of the great Carthigenian Gen. Hanibal, who sustained a powerful army in the enemy's country for 13 years. Listen to what an eye witness says of this wonderful march: "On a bright summer morning soon a'ter daylight the white topped wagons were wending their way through the forest and over the hills and through the valleys of Georgia, On they went, along the yellow dirty roads, through plowed fields, where grew green hills of ripening grain, never to be harvested, through gardens and door yards whence flowers were plucked only to adorn the soldiers' dirty caps, over rocky, gravelly, sandy soil which reflected the scorching heat of the sun and gave forth clouds of yellow dust, past wells and springs where there were ten thirsty soldiers eagerly clutching at every cup full of water, over stony hills and through shady dells, amidst the grateful foliage of the odorous young pines and broad leaved elms: where woodbines flaunt their gay floral clusters and the more modest gums peep above the gravelly slopes and hide behind the graceful fronds of the blooming fern. Regiment after regiment, brigade after brigade, division after division, infantry, cavalry, and artillery-red, white and blue-start in one glorious galaxy, pursue their resistless course across the sacred soil of Geor gia-a rand and hopeful sign to us but, oh one full of dire portent and ominous of desolation to the instigators of this reckless rebellion." Bridges were quickly ou It where necessary, rebel armies were dispersed as leaves before a gale. On! on! they went, till the great Sherman, devoid of ambicion, incapable of envy, brave, gallant, and just, could telegraph to Lincoln, "Atlanta is ours and justly The South thought they had a Napoleon at Moscow. But alas, no! neither did they stop at Atlanta, but on and on to the South, capturing post after post until they finally reached and can tured Savanah, that city built like Jerico of old, without resistance. Its gates were opened and the conqueror marched in. And a little later Sher man was able to telegraph to President Lincoln, "I present you the city of Savanah as a Christmas gift." He afterward marched back through the wlings and immediately after th surrender of Gen. Lee to Grant, the Rebel army under Johnson rendered to Sherman. Thus ended the bloodiest civil strife anywhere recorded on the pages of history. In his own words, "the holiest fight ever fought on earth is closed. A larger measure of results was accomplished by that war than any of the Napoleonic or Casarian wars. We made peace on a continent, we raised the standard of our nationality a thousand fold, we made our credit better than that of England, but slavery." In this great struggle Sherman did was through a sense of duty rather than glory. Napoleon was ever talking of glory. He invoked glory as the inspiration of his soldiers. on you," he said to them in Egypt, drum was silent; and he never failed to inspire others with the same feeland cowardly; modest and unassum-

Dr. Talmage said of him: "The century has no grander soul to surrender into the eternities than the one who just passed away from us. Frank, honest, brilliant, gallant, patriotic, Wm. T. Sherman. I have no part in the question which is being agitated as to whether he was a Catholic or a Protestant. I heard his profession of faith on a memorable occasion and under peculiar circumstances. In New York, at the New England dinner three years ago, I sat with him four hours. He on one side and the immortal Henry W. Grady on the other When in conversation he expressed bis respect for the religion embraced by his wife and his own faith in God, and his confidence in the future. Simple as a child, brave as a lion, sympathetic as a woman, firm as a rock wrathful as a tempest when aroused against great wrong, lovely as a June In peace General Sherman was as

man. He strove not for civil honors. To be a soldier was good enough for him. Most great soldiers ask civil reward for services rendered in time of war. Cæsar wi hed to be direct r, and was made so. Napoleon wished to be Emperor and his boon was granted. Cromwell wished to be protector and the title was conferred upon him The people crowded civil honors upon Washington, Jackson, Taylor and Grant, and would have done so with Sherman had be consented, but he did not. To me this is one of the evidences of his greatness. He has made a record that may well be envied by other heroes, and we, the guardians of his memory should be thankful that he never allowed his fame to be tarnished in the whirlpool of political strife. He goes down to his grave, honored and respected by all. His grave is wet with the tears of all religious faiths, of all sorts of parties, of all conditions tionary fathers beckoning a God-speed of men, of old and young alike, of across the gulf which separates time those who knew his justice and of of men, of old and young alike, of those who had felt his mercy. of such exalted sentiment that for a time the majesty of death seems to over-top the sublimity of life; the traffic of a busy city almost entirely suspended, public offices closed, the pursuits ordinarily deemed imperative and indispensable, temporarily abandoned, emblems of sorrow fluttering from the housetops and the city's people crowding from their homes to do reverence in slow-moving procession or in steadfast throng. Such a scene and such devotion to the dead, honored through a long life, awakens the noblest qualities of human nature to a s ate of religious activity the loftiest and most benificent. Yes, Sherman is gone. He has fought his last battle and is quietly sleeping, waiting the time when the archangel's trumpet shall call the dead to judgment. To the remaining veterans this loss will fall most heavily. The Grand Army of the Republie has lost its most illustrious member. Next to Gen. Grant he was the greatest soldier of the Republic in his generation. The debt of gratitude which the nation owes him cannot be easily paid. His country, in whose service he gaye his best years and efforts, will always cherish his memory as one of its choicest treasures. To you, veterans, his memory will be especially

He always found a delight and pleasure in associating as a comrade with all loyal men who had followed his star and obeyed and loved him as children, thereby making it possible for him to cover his own name high on the marble of fame and do a lasting service to his country. You doubtless had wished that Sherman might remain with you as long as a single veteran remained. but the Father of us all directed otherwise, and we must reverently bow to the order which he was compelled to General Sherman has passed out of the busy presence of men and things, but he has mo more passed out of our lives and thoughts and aspirations than have Washington or Lincoln, and he will be with us until the stranger may with difficulty decipher the name carved upon his tomb and until the Republic he rescued has perished. Our war heroes are vanishing: the brightest lights bave already gone out and the stars that remain are twinkling toward extinction. The veterans, too, are passing away, one by one, soon they will all be gone, but their cherished memory will ever remain. And ever as the 30th of May, with its fragrance, re-appears we will as is now the custom with the surviving band, scatter flowers upon the graves of those who wore the blue. May each and every one of the boys who gave or offered his life on the altar of his country, with Sherman, Grant, Logan, and the rest, be present in the celestial kingdom to answer "Here" as his name is called by the Angel in charge. -40 b

As a rule, far too much blacking is used on stoves. A cake of blacking, such as is sold for eight cents, ought to last a year for blacking one stove. If more blacking is used it will not be rubbed into the stove as it should be, but remain as a fine dust to be after ward blown about the kitchen and cause a generally grimy appearance so often seen in uncared-for kitchens. A fresh coat of black should not be applied oftener than once a month, when the flues should also be cleaned out and the interior of the stove thoroughly brushed out. Before putting on new blacking the old blacking should be washed off.

Vitality of the Tall Hat.

Despite the rhetorical bricks which are continually cast at the silk hat, it still holds its own, and its centenary has recently been celebrated abroad. It is worn by old men and young men, and will be for some time, judging by appearances. You may slightly modify its contour, alter its width or curl of its brim, but, like the violin, it remains substantially unchanged. Other fashions come and go, but the high hat remains placid, majestic, unconquerable.

A Prophecy. While reading the book of the Vision of Nahum, the Elkashire, a student came across a passage that seemed tohim to be a prophecy of the discovery of the use of electricity as a motive power in the electric railways of the present days. The passage is from Nahum II 4, and reads as follows: "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches; they shall run like the light-

MY PRICES HAVE NOT ADVANCED,

Told the "Johnny" Where He Was Going.

Many are the stories told of that march to the sea, and occasionally the general would tell one himself. Here is one of his own narration: On one occasion he had halted for rest on the piazza of a house by the roadside, when it came into the mind of an old Confederate who was present that he might pick up a bit of valuable information by a little careful quizzing. He knew by Sherman's dress that he was on officer, but had no suspicion as to his rank. When he heard a staff officer use the title cf "General!" he turned to Sherman in surprise and said: "Are you a general?' "Yes, sir," was the response. "What is your name?"

"Sherman. "Sherman? You don't mean Gen. Sherman? 'That's what I mean." "How many men have you got?"

'Oh, over a million." "Well, general, there's just one question I'd like to ask, if you have no obiections.' "Go ahead." "Where are you going to go when you go away from here? "Well, that's a pretty stiff question to ask an entire stranger under these circumstances, but if you will give me your word to keep it a secret I don't mind telling you." "I will keep it a secret; don't have no fear of me." "But there is a great risk, you know. What if I should tell you my plans, and they should get over to the ene-"I tell you there is no fear of me."

"You are quite sure I can trust vou?" "As your own brother." The general slowly climbed into the saddle and leaned over the to expectant Confederate, who was all eyes and ears for the precious information. "I will tell you where I am going. I am going —just where I please." And he did and there was not enough power in the South to stop him.

They Came D-d Near Missing Corse.

Gen. Hickenlooper of Ohio tells a story illustrating Sherman's dry wit, rather at the expense of Gen. Corse In the fight at Altoon, a rifle ball took Corse alongside the head, making a slight wound that, at the time, was thought to be a great deal more dangerous than it really was. When the word reached Sherman it had been greatly magnified, and he was informed that Corse's ear and cheek were gone, but that he would still hold his position and fight it out. Meanwhile Corse had tide up his head and gone on with the business he had been sent there to do. As soon as possible Sherman hurried over, full of anxiety as to the amount of damage done his officer. Nothing would do but that the bandage must come off, so that he might judge of the damage for himself. The surgeon carefully took off the cloths and revealed a slight gash across the face and a hole through the ear. Sherman looked for a moment, and then dryly said:

"Why, Corse, they came d—d near missing you, didn't they?"

A Devotee of Music The public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony orchestra are very popular, as the following incident taken from a Boston paper will show: "Symphony goers are well aware of the great crush and scramble for seats at the Friday rehearsals, but Fred R. Comee, assistant manager of the Symphone orchestra, gives the best illustration of a woman's anxiety to get a good seat .So anxious was she that she clambered up stairs at a gait which assisted by the crush, caused her to shed some fine plumage in the shape of an overskirt. 'Here, madam,' exclaimed Mr. Comee, in coaxing tones, as he held aloft the overskirt.

'Keep it for me,' was the reply, and she sped on her journey to secure a seat."

Sparing the Rod. The parent who flies to the rod to correct every trifling fault or misdemeanor, says The Lades' Home Journal, will have no influence with her children when they are too old to be governed by force. A child should never be struck in anger. A box on the ear may rupture the membrane that forms the drum, and cause permanent deafness. A hasty blow may do mischief that years of repentance cannot undo. Punishment is for discipline, not for revenge. It is to teach the child to avoid evil and to do right. It never should be a vent for the angry passions of the mother. Love, patience and firmness are the instruments she must use to mold the child's character. Punishment is a means to an end; let her pray for grace to use it wistly. Course of a Counterfeit.

Despite the utmost vigilance, no small amount of counterfeit money is in circulation, probably because its detection does not always cause its destruction. A grocer, for instance, who finds a five dollar counterfeit bill in his money draw at night, is liable to argue that he cannot well afford to loose the amount, and also that a counterfelt that was good enough to deceive him is good enough to deceive some one else. The next day some customer gets it in change, and ten to one it is passed through a dozen hands before the discovery is again made that it is bogus. But its mission does not end here. Perhaps the last holder of the bill can tell who paid it to him. If so the counterfeit starts to retrace its course, but it rarely goes very far before it stops and the whole scheme is worked over again.

THE Detroit Evening News is not at all enthusiastic over the working qualities of the present legislature or its method of work. The people are looking for great reforms from this first Democratic administration in Michigan in thirty years, and by the News' story there is likely to be great disappointment. There is a picnic at Lansing. Geo. Friedlinger, the man the Democrats put into Senator Morse's seat while the Republicans were attending the state conventions, turns out to be a bigamist, having married Mary Petosky, daughter of Chief Petosky, of the Ottawa tribe, in 1859, and fifteen years ago married a white maiden, who has borne him three children. The squaw wife appeared in Lansing Tuesday, to share his senatorial honors. He is to be arrested and while he is absent settling up his crookedness, it is expected that Mr. Morse will be given the seat which belongs to him. The Detroit Free Press calls it a scurvey trick. MISS MARY ARTHUR, an old citizen of this place, died at her home Sunday, March S. She was born in New Glasgow, Prince Edward's Island, in 1824; came to Niles in 1259, where she remained one year. Since that time she has been a citizen of Buchanan, the most of the time engaged in active business. The funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church yesterday, and the remains interred in Oak Ridge cemetery.

On the evening of the 6th of March Mrs. O. L. Davidson, of Grand Rapids, Worthy Grand Matron of the Order of Eastern Star, instituted "Sylvia Chapter" of the Eastern Star. There were thirty-five members present, who were instructed in the mysteries of that ancient and honorable order. There was a great degree of interest manifested by all present. The perfect and elegant manner in which the instructions were given by Mrs. Davidson made a most favorable impression upon all the members, and before closing Mrs. Davidson made a few appropriate and elegant remarks. The following officers were installed:

Worthy Matron, Mrs. Stephen Scott. Worthy Patron, Mr. S. A. Wood. Associate Matron, Mrs. Anna Butler. Secretary, Mrs. C. O. Hamilton. Treasurer, Mrs. M. M. Knight. Conductress, Mrs. F. Stryker. Associate Conductress, Mrs. S. A. Howe.

A Well Paid Poet. It isn't every man, or woman either, for that matter, who can get from $250 to $350 for a poem. Will Carleton is one of these. I see him often in Brooklyn, where he lives on Greene avenue, and he is as much unlike a poet in appearance as one could imagine. In years he is getting well along toward the fifties. His hair seems to be prematurely gray. He is about medium height, and his figure is stout and robust, which leads to the belief that he is something of an athlete: He carries himself with a soldierly bearing. His head is well shaped and is poised gracefully on a pair of broad shoulders. His face is clean shaven, except for a small gray mustache. In fact he has a jaunty air. He seems to have none of the notions about dress and mannerisms that poets are usually supposed to have.

Mr. Carleton is a busy man. His work is always in demand, and orders for his poems increase so rapidly that ho is enabled to charge the figures l have quoted above. He lives in a plain old fashioned house of brownstone, similar in all respects to hundreds of others in his immediate vicinity. His library and workshop is a curious place. There is row upon row of books, no end of pictures, and desks and tables littered with all sorts of papers, magazines and writing utensils. He has no particular hour for work. He gets up tolerably early, and after breakfast goes at once to his desk, where he remains busily at work until midday. His afternoons he devotes to visiting his publishers, walking, writing, driving or visiting. He knows the value of good health, and spends a fair share of his time in making brawn. In addition to his literary work Mr.

Carleton is well known on the lecture platform. He is a thorough Yankee in the matter of money, and is one of the most practical business men that you will find. And thus it comes that his bank account is large and is constantly being added to.—New York Press.

Boys' Battles in the Revolution When the British occupied Philadelphia during the Revolutionary war with an army numbering-nearly 20,000 men, there was a bitter enmity between the British drummer boys and the boys of the city. What aggravated this feud was the fact that there were several conspicuous Tory families in the place, the boys of which made common cause with the English drummers. Besides this there were numbers of cabin boys from the great English fleet of transports and merchant vessels in the river who often came on shore and gave aid and comfort to their drumming friends. As a great many of the patriotic families were absent, and as Quaker boys are not allowed to fight, there was something like an equality of numbers between the two parties. The fights between them were of almost daily occurrence. The town boys had their headquarters in an old brewery a little way out of the city, the entrances and approaches to which they fortified as strongly as they could.

In those fighting days scarcely any one had any serious objection to the fiercest conflicts between boys, provided they fought only with the weapons that nature had given them and conformed to the rules of the ring. But one day an English drummer boy was so badly hurt in an encounter between the American boys and those adhering to the king that he died soon after. This led to the suppression of the fights by the provost marshal.—Youth's Companion.

Some Good in "McGinty." Although the McGinty song has become a chestnut the publishers say that over 250,000 copies have been sold. The song has served both author and publishers well. Flynn, who wrote the song, is a variety comedian. At the time the song was written he and his partner, Sheridan, were carning $60 a week. When the musical news arrived that McGinty had gone to the bottom of the sea the salary of the comedians rose to $200 a week. The publishers. too, came in for a material share of the

At the time the song was published these two young Germans were dragging out a precarious existence in Brooklyn trying to sell pianos on the installment plan and dealing in cheap music. Their store was poorly furnished, and the money taken in every day was conmust each night in the attempt to pay current expenses. Along came Flynn with his manuscript of McGinty. It swept the town. Orders came in from orehestra leaders for orchestral arrangements. The press was kept busy night and day to supply the demand. The young Germans smiled. Lafcadio Hearn says that the reptile is of precisely the color which will enable it to hide among foliage or the roots of trees. Sometimes it is of a bright yellow, and one can searcely distinguish it from the bunch of bananas within which it coils. 'Again it may be black or yellowish brown, or of any hue resemblingtropical forest mold, old bark or decomposing trees. The iris of the eye is orange, with red flashes, and it glows at night like burning coal. In Martinique the fer-de-lance is absolute lord of the forest by day, and at night he extends his dominion over parks and public roads. The only safety lies in remaining home after dark, unless one lives in the city itself, and it is always dangerous 'to enter the forest even at noon without an experienced escort. At any moment a branch, a root, a bunch of pendant fruit may take life, writhe, spring and strike death to the heart.—Youth's Companion.

Spiders as Detective Agencies. Robert F. Smith, turnkey of the Ulster county, N. Y., jail, finds that spiders are useful in ascertaining whether prisoners have been tampering with iron window bars or not. It is not easy to discover the cut of a fine saw in an iron bar, especially when such cut has been carefully closed with blackened bread. Even running a knife blade along the bar does not always disclose it. Spiders weave their webs over these windows, running their threads from bar to bar. A prisoner cannot work on a bar without breaking down the webs. When the officer sees the web has not been displaced he considers it good proof that the window bars have not been sawed. If the web has been brushed away he makes a careful examination.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE farmers who live between "Whalebone" Prairie and South Bend are in high glee because of the capture of one of South Bend's old offenders in the chicken thieving business. It has been the experience of these farmers to raise a large flock of chickens each year only to have them as regularly carried off to South Bend by some night prowler.

By order of the Council the election called for Tuesday was adjoured one week, and will most likely not be held until we get our new charter or learn that we are not going to have it. In case of the passage of the new charter there will be an entirely new

The dam which they are to build is to be 158 feet long, of stone, and with earth work at the ends 1100 feet long. THE RECORD learns that a remonstrance to the division of Niles township, was circulated at the Stark weather sale on Tuesday, and pretty generally signed by those present. Should the citizens of Niles succeed in balking the movement, it will not necessarily be fatal to our proposed improvement in the river, as the only bearing the change can have upon that is, that in case any property be placed on that side of the river, it would be taxed for the benefit of Niles township instead of Buchanan township, affecting township tax only, This question and that of placing the bridge in control of Buchanau township are the only ones bearing upon the point. If the village build the dam it will not likely be done with any view to building up that side of the river very much until the lands on this side are occupied, which will most likely be

Now Neckwear for Men. The correct collar for this season will be that of moderate height, either with the turn over flaps, vulgarly known as "white wings," or that cut straight with in inch spacing in front. The points rield to the natural pressure of the chin. which has the effect of giving one a collar with natural turn over ends. The turn down collar will certainly have its place, but not prominently until the summer season has set in. For spring groper the two shapes we have mentioned will be those most generally seen on the well dressed man.

In neck dressings there has been quite a reaction, which can trace its origin to the vulgar extremes attained by the dude in his efforts to be ultra-fashionable. The small two and one-fourth inch fourin-hand tied tight, and its counterfeit. the made up knot, in neat, small knots, as well as the moderate size puff scarf, will be among the correct things. The scarf should be of such a size that a little of the plain, white shirt will show on either side of it. It is not considered good taste to cover one's entire shirt bosom with a splashy lot of silk.

The Ascot scarf, in moderate widths, is also a good shape. In neckwear silks. extracted twills and simple fabrics of light texture, with refined colored grounds, such as navy blue, white and other neat colors, with effects that are neither large nor loud, but run to fine, delicate traceries, small dots of wee, little conventional designs, will be most correct.-Haberdasher.

When You Need Your Brain No Longer. If, when you epen your mail, dear reader, you receive a polite request for your brain, do not be astonished. The explanation is this: A number of scientific men have formed an organization the purpose of which is to take the brains of distinguished persons after death and study them, with a view to fuller knowledge both of medicine and mind. Dr. Joseph Leidy is president of the organization and Dr. Pepper secretary. Both are of Philadelphia. A large number of persons have already promised to allow their brains to be examined when they have no further use for them, and among these persons is the Rev. Phillips Brooks, of Besten.

Letters requesting brains have been sent out to nearly all the notable men and women of the country. Next summer, at the meeting in Washington of the congress of physicians and surgeons. this organization will be perfected, and associate members in the different cities will be authorized. When that is done you can do your family physician a special honor by bequeathing to him your brain, which he will examine and report on or perhaps forward it to the specialists in Philadelphia.—Pittsburg Times. A Mayor on His Knees.

Has the ancient city of Moscow gone down on its knees to the merchant Jermokoff? This is the question now agitating Moscow society. It seems that a subscription for a certain charity was being raised in Moscow, and of the million rubles required there was a deficit of 300,000. The mayor bethought him to make an appeal to a rich merchant of his acquaintance for the required sum. He did so; the first time in vain. But on another visit the merchant said: "Go down on your knees and beg me to give you the money." "And why not?" returned the mayor. Like Lady Godiva, he sacrificed his pride and gained the money for the town.

And now society is much concerned to know if its honor was lost, and casu ists are arguing on both sides of the question. Moscow has got something to talk about in the place of Mme. Patti, who refuses to come and sing .- Cor. London News.

A Martyr to Love. A negro by the name of Alex Wood, a freight hand on the Brunswick and Western train, met a sudden and horrible death near Sumner a day or two since. The train was going toward Albany and had just pulled out of Sumner. Wood was on top of the cars and walking backward talking to some negro girls who stood near the track. One of these girls was Wood's sweetheart, and while he was feasting his eyes on her charms as the train moved off he reached the end of the car on which he was walking, and before he could realize his danger had fallen between it and the next car to the ground, and was crushed to death almost in an instant .-Savannah News.

Prayer in a Jury Room. Something novel occurred in connection with the jury in the late Duncan case. After the case had been submitted to them and they filed into the jury room to consider their verdict it was suggested that the jury engage in prayer before taking a ballot. This suggestion met with favor, and the jurors knelt down on the floor, while R. J. McArdle, the tailor, petitioned the Throne of Grace for divine guidance in their deliberations. At the conclusion of the prayer the jury took a ballot and the doom of Anthony Duncan was sealed.—Lexington (Ky.) Gazette.

Times Are Hard. I am told that there has not been a time in years when so many persons have been out of work as now. I know one big company that, in consequence of the recent money stringency, has reduced its clerical staff $25,000 worth yearly, and this is but one of many fostances. In spite of this state of affairs there are fewer street beggars about than usual, which shows, I think, that people who have worked and want to work do not descend to promiscuous begging.—Brook-gaking Salas Dressing Between Courses. The pretty fashion of making the salad dressing on the table obtains among fashionable people at small informal dinners. Before the preceding course has been removed the servant brings the hostess a shallow silver bowl, into which are broken the yolks of two eggs. Before her are also placed the oil decanter, two tiny silver pepper boxes holding white and cayenne pepper, a small mustard pot with the unmixed mordant, and a bit of lemon on a plate or a second miniature decanter of tarragon vinegar, as the taste of the hostess prefers. Then, while the plates are being changed, the mayonnaise is concocted. Into the unbeaten yolks are carefully measured first a saltspoon of salt and another of dry mustard, a good pinch of cayenue and a better one of white pepper, then with a silver fork the stirring process begins. Drop by drop the amber oil does its work till, thick, golden and velvety, the mayonnaise is ready for the touch of acid from lemon or vinegar, and afterward to be sent around the table as aroused to a fit of intense anger by the the salad is served. > A Large Price for a Flower. I saw a new variety of plant for parlor decoration in a florist's window the other day, the price being marked at the modest figure of $100. In the passion for this sort of display, which is now rampant here in Boston. I am told that the money expended is out of all proportion to the intrinsic value or beauty of the product, some rare specimens being sought for in preference to one in which the attractions of form and color are conspicuous. This sort of interest recalls the Dutch tulip mania, and though there is perhaps no danger that our Yaakes flower fanciers will lese their heads, as the old Hollanders did, yet it is worth remembering that the latter were hard headed, matter of fact people, and it is such, by the way, who are apt to be most unsettled by a gust of excitement.—Boston

Lack of Men Who Dance. The complaint is made that the dancing men in society are scarcely beyond the age of knickerbockers, and a call has gone out for more men of years, weight and discretion who are willing to make themselves generally useful at the small dances of society. There has never been a year in the history of New York when balls occurred in private houses so frequently as this season. Two or three dances a night have been the rule. As a majority of the men in society are also in business, it is difficult to see how they can be expected to sir up until 4 o'clock in the morning every night in the week and still go to their offices at the accustomed time. Apparently there is another long felt want in society which the conditions of New York life make it impossible for men to fulfill.-New York

Wanted to Complete His Trade. Charles Drum, 20 years of age, who pleaded guilty to snatching a purse from a lady on Jackson street, got three years and a half in the penitentiary. The judge was about to sentence him to the reformatory when Drum spoke up and informed the court that he had once before been convicted, the first time for burglary. Drum's counsel let the cat out of the bag by saying that his client preferred Stillwater to St. Cloud because he desired to complete his trade. that of a tinsmith. Electrical Treatment of Sewage. A paper on "The Electrical Treatment of Sewage" was read by Mr. W. Webster. F. C. S., at a meeting of the Society of Chemical Industry, in London. This gentleman has devoted some ten years to experiments on the problem, and has carried out some experiments on a large scale with the sewage of Salford, which is of an exceptionally complex character. He has succeeded in reducing the albuminoid ammonia to .14 parts per 100,000, thus leaving an effluent which may be turned into any stream or river. He uses cast iron electrodes, finding that platinum is too costly, and carbon disintegrates in the presence of nascent oxygen and chlorine. He places the electrodes in a shoot eighteen inches deep, two feet wide and 200 feet long. Twenty-five pairs are connected in series, and a pressure of 1.8 volts is used between them. Sir Henry Roscoe had entire control of the experimental works for about a month, and found that from 70 to 80 per cent. of the organic matter was precipitated as a sludge. From the experiments on 20,000 gallons of sewage it is estimated that to deal with 10.000-000 gallons in twenty-four hours at Sal ford 400 indicated horse power will be necessary, as for each gallon .37 ampere hour is required. Experiments made during the lecture on London sewage showed that a flocculent precipitate was formed within a few seconds. If sewage sludge be of any value as manure it should be economical to use that produced by this process.-New York Tele-

In southern Egypt, near the Nubian border, there lives a rich retired Parsee whose sole ambition is to enlarge a collection of skeletons of eminent persons. In his tropical garden, amid fountains, flowers, rare exotics, statuary and bowers of equatorial verdure, stand dozens of skeletons of famous warriors, statesmen, kings, queens, lawyers, ecclesiasts, etc. This earthly paradise (barring the presence of the skeletons) is four acres in extent, and is surrounded by a high stone wall provided with four grated iron doors. It is believed that he keeps a score of men in every community in the world constantly on the lookout for rarities in his ghastly line. Broke a Muscle in Stretchmg. The Rev. Ezra H. Yocum, D. D., pastor of Graco Methodist Episcopal church of Harrisburg, injured himself in a peculiar manner Tuesday morning. Upon arising from his night's rest the reverend gentleman threw his arms back over his head and stretched himself. Suddenly there was a rather loud r as of something snapping, and Yocum fell to the floor. He managed to reach the bed and lay on it unconscious for a time. Members of the family discovered him there and sent for a doctor. After making an examination the physician stated that, in the act of stretching. Mr. Youun had snapped a muscle back of his ear which had connection with the shoulder, and this caused the loud report. It is a painful injury, and will require an absolute rest of some days before Mr. Yocum can resume his pulpit duties.—Philadelphia Press.

The Father of Engine Drivers. Adrien Poncet, the father of engine drivers in France, has had the Cross of the Legion of Honor awarded him by M. Carnot for long and meritorious service. In 1832 this veteran drove the first locomotive made in France, over the line from Saint Etienne to Rouen. and also conducted the first engine on the railroad from Paris to Saint Germain. Poncet, who is 75 years of age, has had forty-eight years of engine driving .-London Tit-Bits.

Robert Coleman, a farmer's boy, of Little Britain, Lancashire county, Pa., caught in a steel muskrat trap recently. it is reported, a fine fish of the bass species, which on measurement was found to be 131 inches long and one pound six ounces in weight. The creek had risen during the night and the water flowed over the trap.

There is some talk of Bishop Hare's elinquishment of his work as missionary pishop of South Dakota in order to take charge of a field of religious labor in Japan, but the clergyman himself says that his visit to Japan may not result in his giving up his work in Dakota. Bishop Hare belongs to an eminent Philadelphia family.

The surviving Union generals who commanded departments during the war of the rebellion are Gens. Banks, Buell, Butler, Rosecrans, Sigel, Lew Wallace, D. N. Couch, C. C. Augur, J. M. Palmer, N. J. T. Dana, J. J. Reynolds, H. G. Wright, G. M. Dodge, Scho field and B. F. Kelley.

Soap and Steel. The steel manufacturer is subjected to some rather singular annoyances at the hands of his customers. For example, the other day a Pittsburg manufacturer received a complaint from a firm which uses a good deal of his steel that there was something wrong with the last consignment of steel sent, inasmuch as the men alleged that it was soft. This surprised the manufacturer, as large quantities of the same steel had given satisfaction elsewhere, and he himself went to investigate the matter.

He vas still more surprised when he found that the steel was soft after heating and submission to the usual bath. The blacksmith before whom he made the test and the other workmen standing around took little pains to hide their enjoyment of the expert's discomfiture. "You see, it is soft," said the blacksmith, with a grin, and for a moment the manufacturer was at a loss what more to do. Then an idea struck him. "Is this bath all right?" he asked, and without waiting for an answer he plunged his hand into the trough and fished up a good sized lump of soap. No steel will harden in a soapy bath, and the mystery was at an end. Of course the blacksmith, who had played the trick, was discharged, and he confessed a rival manufacturer of steel had given him $50 to put the soap in the bath.—

Mr. Freeman Two Fingers Short. A passenger on the 10:25 o'clock express for Boston, which had just arrived, was standing in the doorway of one of the coaches, one of his hands resting in the groove where the door closes. A gust of wind or the swinging of the car caused the heavy door to close with considerable force, catching two of the man's fingers. The sharp edge of the door or the edge of the metal lock amputated the fingers almost as smoothly as would a surgeon's knife. The second and third fingers were taken off at the first joint. The injured man was Martin Freeman, a New York business man. He was taken up town by Hackman Dunlap, who was requested to drive to some physician's office as soon as possible. The offices of Drs. Mailhouse, Bissell, Russell and Bacon were visited, but all were out. Finally Dr. Hawkes was found at his office, and he dressed Mr. Freeman's wounds.—New Haven Register.

An Old Directory. John McPherson's directory of Philadelphia, published in 1785, has been unearthed. Among the prominent names it contains are these: "Franklin Benjamin, his excellency, 1 Franklin court; Morris Robert, merchant, 101 Market street; Rittenhouse David, 109 Arch street; Hamilton Alexander, 855 Second street." Although on the title page Macpherson spells his name in that manner, in the body of the work his name appears as John Mc. Pherson, broker, 7 Chestnut street. That all the people of the town were not in sympathy with his work is inferred from these entries: "I shall not give my name," 43 Stampers alley. "I won't have it numbered," 478 Green street. "I won't tell you my name." "What you please," 49 and 59 Market street.—New York World.

Masonic Aprou to Go to Jerusalem. The Rev. Dr. H. M. Wharton received a Masonic apron from South Carolina, which he is to present to the master of the lodge at Jerusalem, the birthplace of Masonry. Some time ago the Jerusalem lodge sent a gavel made of olive wood to the South Carolina Masons, who now send the apron in return. The present, a valuable one, is of lambskin, bordered with black velvet and fringed with silver. The square and compasses and the all seeing eye are stamped in gold. Dr. Wharton is a Mason, and expects to have a pleasant time with the members in Jeruselem. He sailed with his party for Palestine Wednesday.— Baltimore Sun.

The Grip in Japan. One remarkable peculiarity of the grip in Japan was its prevalence among the upper classes, whereas the cholera selected its victims among the poorer people. Some idea of the extent of the epidemic may be gathered from the fact that at Yokohama the sufferers officially reported numbered over 50,000, and it is estimated that the unreported cases throughout the prefecture were nearly twice as great. Of the 130,000 inhabitants of Kobe, 25,000 were attacked by the disease. In Tokio the epidemic raged with great virulence, and similar reports come from some of the Chinese cities .-San Francisco Call.

A case of interest to school teachers came up in Crawford county court recently. A teacher in one of the schools, Miss Alice Bentley, attempted to correct a boy named Guy McClintock, who was smearing ink over another boy's face. Young . McClintock picked up a slate and struck the teacher in the face, seriously injuring her and incapacitating her for school duties. The board of di-rectors disposed of the case by suspending the boy for one term. Friends of Miss Bentley then had the case brought into court. It was tried and a verdict of guilty of assault was rendered .-Meadville (Pa.) Tribune.

Adventure of a Sagacious Muic. Mollie, an old pichald mule, had a remarkable adventure in Cincinnati. Her owner, Charles Cole, had led her into the stable yard. Suldenly the treacherous earth caved in and buried the animal under a mass of rock and dirt twenty If " r into the smilled mes ment bod leds throng as and mouth of a sewer only two and one-half feet in diameter. She was assisted in emerging for it the sewer. She had been almost succeed alive. Her rough him was a ame I and dotted with numberless gashes from which the blood flowed. Great bruses appeared on her sides and abdomen, while her less were so strained that she could hardly stand.

Nevertheless Mollie was very much alive, as she betraved by a "Yee-haw-w!" of trimmph and a nenchalant twirl of her short tail. The solinal had can and d in a ravine near G., at avenue, her trip through the rock bound sewer was somewhat a led by the downward slope of the channel and by the slight stream of water which lubricated the masonry of the lower side. Nevertheless, Mollie's escape was a more sending one, and probably near equalication the line of animal adventure. - Cincinnati En-

He Didn't Like the Dead March. Among those who watched the Sherman funeral procession was a little boy to whom soldiers are a delight, but too young to see in the Grand Army veterans anything except a lot of tiresome old fellows whose endless lines were so long in getting by that his mother took him home before he had seen the glittering uniforms for which his soul hungered. This of course displeased the boy, and that night he bitterly criticised the arrangement of the procession. His father's attempt to explain matters availed nothing. Other processions, he said, were much better, for in them the soldiers came first and the Grand Army last, and little boys and their mammas didn't lose anything by going home early.

"I could have stood it," he said at last, "if those old men hadn't made the'r bands play over and over a tuze that sounded like 'You've got to see us! You've got to see us! You've got to see us!' That made me mad!"—New York Times.

Mr. Redpath's Sympathies. The truth is James Redpath was a man of intense feelings and strong sympathies, which were always ready to go out to all whom he believed to be wronged and oppressed. He was an ardent abolitionist. Few men ever labored more for the cause of the Irish people. His regard for President Davis was of the same sort. It was sympathy for the one southern man who was disfranchised and proscribed for a political act in which he had been engaged in common with many thousands of his countrymen. Mr. Redpath in all he did was consistent with his own ardent nature and overpowering tenderness for the weak and the oppressed. He never violated its unities, no matter how strange his conduct in some instances may have appeared. He was true to his own heart all the way through.—New Orleans Picaynne.

Hunts Foxes Though an Old Man. Brisbin Skiles lives at the Gan, Lancaster county. He is at least seventy five years of age, and is yet able to sit well in the saddle, and when he goes fox unting which is almost daily at thi season of the year, he eats but one meal and then dashes off with as light a heart as the next one and only eats again when he returns late in the evening. He always makes it a rule to never eat between meals. He has now twenty-seven foxes penned up. He usually catches from thirty to forty in a season and then lets them out in the spring. He has been as successful this winter as in any winter past. There are few who can ride better or have a keener sense of the fun which fox hunters experience in a hunt or chase.—West Chester (Pa.) News.

Marriage of Two Blind Persons. The Rev. William G. Herbert, pastor of the High Street Methodist Episcopal church, was called upon Thursday night to unite a blind couple in wedlock. They were Mr. W. Tuck Levely, of Annapolis, and Miss Mary Lee, of Baltimore county. The marriage was performed at the bride's home, and was witnessed by several relatives. Mr. Levely, the groom is young and has a beardless face. He is a piano tuner. The bride is young and handsome. She is an accomplished performer on the piano and is well educated. Both were educated at the Maryland School for the Blind, and it is said that the courtship began while they were in that institution.—Baltimore Sun.

Pity the Blind. A blind man who plays sacred music upon an accordeon is perambulating the streets of Windsor. His affliction attracted some time ago the attention of her majesty the queen, who while taking a drive saw him in the street and compassionately gave him a gratuity. He now bears upon his breast a placard with the rather ambiguously worded inscription:

"Blind from inflammation. Assisted by her majesty the queen."-London Tit-

Workmen are just finishing what is claimed will be the longest board fence in the country. It surrounds J. O. Stuyvesant's new deer park at Tranquillity. N. J., and will be when completed twelve miles long. The sawmill at Allamuchy has been running continually cutting out the boards. The fence is ten feet high, and is made of hemlock an inch and a half thick. It will cost $20,000.

A doctor in Paris was called to attend a popular actress whose face had been sadly damaged by a carriage accident. He came to the conclusion that to preserve her beauty it was necessary to repair the lady's face with a piece of human skin, and accordingly he provided the remedy by removing a portion of his own.

Poor Cholly. Maud-Ethel is very conceited. Cholly--I never thought her so. Maud-But she is. She told me last night the names of all the fellows who proposed to her last summer. Cholly (very much embarrassed)-Ier—am afraid I—er—must be going. Important engagement. Good night.-Harper's Bazar.

He Wants His Price. A West Virginian claims to have discovered a cave filled with boxes of gold, liamonds and rubies—enough to load: two freight cars—but he won't give it away for less than $5,000 cash down. He doesn't want to be mean, but he just won't do it, that's all. Detroit Kree Press.

A Faithful Love.

They relate to us from Boulogne sur Mer, in France, a remarkable incident of fidelity. A Danish princess, one of those fairy beauties of the north who seem to draw their peculiar charm from the melancholic splendor of their climate. one of those Ophelias, with limpid eyes as the bluish crystal of the Scandinavian lakes, had a friend, faithful, devoted, loving, patient, whom she has deserted in a moment of forgetfulness. Leaving suddenly, when ascending the outside bridge to the steamer, she forgot her friend, the most faithful companion of her youth, a splendid black dog, with beautiful dark shining hair; from that time the poor animal, standing erect over the fences of the mole, barks furiously after the waves, jumping joyously as soon as can be perceived afar the smoking shaft of a steamer, which he always thinks will bring back ashore his beloved owner.

the beautiful and romantic English misses who gave him sweet names, calling him "Oh, you dear, faithful friend. Sweet boy." And over there, afar, afar in the north, the fairy Scandinavian feels some inexplicable want. Something it missing to her; she does not regret of in machful companion deserted afar.—Baltimore American.

Subscribed or Superscribed. Many are the pitfalls which lie in the path of the man who sits down to make his will. In a case recently tried in the probate court the witnesses were stated in the usual words to have "hereunto subscribed their names," but it happened that these witnesses' signatures were written in the margin and somewhat higher than these attesting words. Hence arose the grave question, Could a signature be said to be subscribed when, strictly speaking, it was superscribed? It is easy to conceive a judge of rigidly logical tendencies who would have decided that there had been in this case no proper attestation.

For mately für C. Parker Butt, fortified by a decision of Lord Campbell, decided that though it might seem a strange interpretation to put upon the word "subscribe," to hold that writing the witnesses' names above the testator's signature in the margins was a compliance with the act, yet in the eye of the law the word "subscribe" "simply means signing the name without any reference to its position on the document."—London News.

Boston's Fast Speaking Preacher. Two hundred and forty words a minute, four words every second, is a rate of speed which seems almost beyond the power of articulation, yet that was the measure of the torrent of eloquent exposition and appeal poured forth in St. Paul's church Monday by the Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks. Try to equal it reading from a printed page in a conversational tone, and then imagine the immensely increased difficulty of the task in a large church, before a great congregation, and without the guidance even of a written note. The business men, for whom the service was especially designed, had been assured that the discourse would be short, and so it was in time, for it was finished in twenty-five minutes, but the report made by two stenographic reporters covered 6,000 words and gave the extraordinary averages with which this paragraph opens.-Boston Journal.

Novel Bird Story. When Mr. Andrew Young returned from Alaska last fall he went out to his ranch on Young's river to dig his potatoes. Passing a hollow tree he noticed several bushels already gathered. He looked around the patch, but saw no signs of anyone having disturbed the ground, and to solve the mystery watched the tree. He was soon rewarded by seeing a flock of bluejays alight on the tree, and each bird had a potato in its bill, which was dropped into an opening in a limb and passed on down to the ground. He procured sacks, and as fast as one was filled another was put at the place, and in this way the birds harvested fifty bushels of potatoes for him from various patches around the country.-Astoria (Ore.) Express.

A Maskrat Trap. Jim Candee, an old Lyme trapper, has ught an unprecedented number muskrats this year. He sinks a half barrel near the runs of the rats to the level of the ground, half fills it with water, and then on floating pieces of boards in the tub places small pieces of carrots. When the muskrat jumps in after the bait he can't get out, and he leaves the trap set for another victim. Mr. Candee has caught as many as six rats in a single barrel in one night.—Hartford Times.

Waked from IIIs Winter's Sleep. A Ledyard boy on Monday discovered a woodchuck in a heap of leaves in an old tree and pulled him out. He was curled up, with both forepaws pressed closely over his eyes. When his paws were pulled off his eyes he did not open them, but yawned and gaped as a heavy sleeper might be expected to do. The animal could not be aroused from his dormant condition until he had been in a warm room for several hours.-New London Telegraph.

A Homekeeping Youth. Mr. David Hembree, Jr., son of Mr. David R. Hembree, of Crossville District, Millen county, is 18 years old, and has lived all his life within four miles of the Chattahoochie, but has never seen the river. He is the best working boy in the district, and has all his life staid at home and worked .- Alpharetta (Ga.) Free Press.

In Rome the Easter eggs are taken to the parish priest, who blesses and sprinkles thme with holy water, and the nuns afterward paint and sell them. They must be placed on the table with the flowers and other decorations, and enten as the first course for the Easter dinner. ' LITTLE WRECKS.

> I saw a dainty violet In bloom upon the hill.
> Close by the bubbling streamlet That turned the village mill. One day a naughty urchin Came wandering long that way, And plucked the cainty violet And dropped it on the clay. The plant that bore the blossom Bled for its stolen child, The leaves in sadness bent their heads, The restless stream grew mild;

But what is that to you or me? Such little griefs must always be. I knew a little maiden Vho was so kind and true, But sorrow met and claimed her, And how, I'll tell to you. I know you'll call her foolish, And say she might have known: But let me tell you, reader, The blossom bud was gone: And now I think my story I scarcely need to tell, For if a maiden's heart can hea Flowers can rebloom as well. But what is that to you or me? Such trifling griefs must always be And what is it to this great world

If we are grave or gay?
It will not vanish when we're gone,
Or tarry when we stay;
Our easy sail will doubtless cease
And ill winds drive ashore And leave us there a stranded wreck-It cannot harm us more. The violets by the bubbling stream, The maiden in her prime, They both return unto their dust-Likewise my idle rhyme. But what is that to you or me? Such trifling wrecks must always be.

In Boston and its neighborhood the 17th of June—the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill-is regularly and enthusiastically observed by cessation from labor and by public rejoicings. Of recent years the celebration of this day has been slowly extending through the environs of the city, and it is hoped by some that the observance may finally become national.
