The Ghost in the Cellar.

BY ARTHUR L. MESELVE. "Come in, mister-never mind the snow. It won' hurt the old lady's floor a bit to have a little water on it. Stand still until I get some off you. I should think you had been wallowing in a drift up to yer armpits. Nancy, where's the

"In the sullerway, Bill Perkins. Where do ye suppose it is? Lying right round here on the floor under yer nose? I don't leave my things about as you do."
"I might have known where it was without asking ye, old woman. It come near, many time, of sending me from the top star to the bottom. There-I guess you're all right now. What's the news? "There ain't much," I answered, "The latest thing I've heard is that they say the old Wilson house is haunted."

"How you talk! Has any body seen ghost hanging about the primises?" "No, they haven't seen anything, but people who pass by it after dark say that they've heard strange sounds ins de. It seems as though there must be something in it, as so many tell the same story. Even the elder heard something which made him use his legs faster than common."

"I'm glad there's anything that will put a little life into him, mister. For a young man and an elder, his match for laziness was never seen. Even the wimmen folks have to own up to this. Why is it, mister, that female critters always seem to hanker after a minister? "You will have to ask somebody wiser than I, Uncle Bill. But I guess the elder got a good scare."

"Why didn't he lay the evil spirit is there's one hanging round? I thought that was a part of their duty. It used to be in old times." Here Aunt Nancy muttered some thing about his "being better than those that talked about him," and this seemed to have the effect of bringing the old man's thoughts back to her. "Wal, if they try to find out about the ghost, I hope they won't fare so bad as I did when I tried to find the one that haunted Nancy. I like to have got my neck broke in the scsape."

"Did you see a ghost, Uncle Bill?"
"Yes, and heard one, too." "Where?"

"Rite here where we be; or rather it vas down suller in the tater bin."

"Wal, I don't mind telling ye about he scrape. Keep still, old woman," he "What I'm going to tell is the gospel truth." Aunt Nancy, who was about to speak, obeyed the mandates of her helpmate, and Uncle Bill went on:-"Long arter bare ground in the spring, Nancy ses to me one day at dinner time that thar was one thing she couldn't understand for the life of her. I told her that I would bet thar was more than one that she couldn't get through her noddle, whereupon she called me a fool, which is a kind of pet name she has for me when in the rite state of

"'Wal, Nancy, what is it?' said I. "'This 'ere house is haunted,' said she.

"I've known it this long time, old woman. The rats are pesky thick. You must stop stuffing Black Tom, or he'll g t so lazy that he'll never catch another. All he wants to do now is to eat, and to sleep in the best place he can find.

"' Tain't rats. Don't you suppose I know them critters when they are kiting about? Thar's a spirit, a ghost, or something of that sort, hanging round here. I've heard it nigh about every day this two weeks.'

"'Have you seen anything?" "'No, but I've heard lots of strange

"'Where do they come from?' "'Down suller, round in the corner where the tater bin is. It's enough to make yer har stand on end to hear 'em when you're here alone.' "I should like to hear something that would make my hairstand on end old woman.'

"'So should I. Bill Perkins. Thar ain't a spere there more'n you can put on the back of a toad." "Nancy was about right, but she needn't have twitted on facts. I am as bald as a goose egg, but I don't like to have a body tell me of it. But she hed got my curiosity riz a little about the ghost, so I let the matter drop where it was.' "'What does it sound like, old lady?" "'Sometimes one thing and some times another. Now it's a banging round like somebody a-pounding. Then thar'll be a choking, like our old cow when she got that green pumpkin stuck in her throat. Then thar's awful groanings, as though somebody was a-dying."

"It's ail bosh, old woman. believe in spirits and goblins. But I'll keep an eye on the suller, and if thar's a ghost thar I'll lay it in no time.' "I determined to watch that yery night. Long before dark I went down and hunted round, but could see nothing. Then I went out into the tater patch and planted as long as I could Then Hiram Parker came along and histed himself up on a stump and talked until it was so dark that you couldn't see yer hand afore yer face. He never knows when to stop when he gets a-going. Then all at once I remembered the promise I had made to Nancy to lay the ghost that night if it put in an appearance; so I cut the old critter short and started for the house.

"I hadn't got more'n half way from where I had left Hiram when I heard something a-coming, blowing and that she come near tumbling me head over heels onto the ground. "'Where on earth are you going to, Nancy Perkins? said I.

"'Arter you,' said she. 'The ghost has come again!"

"'Where is it?'

"Down suller, where I told you it always stays when it makes a visita-"'Come on, old woman, and we'll lay ghost is one thing, and doing it is another.

"I 'spected that something would rise right up afore me in the middle of the ki chen floor when we got thar. Nancy hadn't left a candle burning when she went out, and I said,— "'Strike a ligh, old lady. We couldn't see a ghost if there was one standing right afore ye.

"She started for the mantel to take down a candle, and at that very moment I heard a noise down suller. "'Lord-a-mighty, it is the ghost!" "Sure enough, thar was a thumping sound, then a gurgling, as thou h something was choking, then a long, deep groan, like some kind of a critter giving up the ghost fer good and all.'

"Hurry up, Nancy, and light that ere candle. If there's a ghost down there I'll make short work of it.' "'What do you want a light fer? A body can see a ghost in the dark bet-ter than in broad daylight.'

"I didn't want Nancy to think I was afraid arter I had boasted of my courage and what I would do; so I crept along to the suller door, opened it, and began to feel my way down over the steps. I didn't know what I should see when I got to the bottom. It might be the Old Nick himself fer all I knew.' "I landed at the bottom at last, and stood still and listened. Thar wa'n't a sound to be heard above or around. Nancy didn't move above my head, and not so much as a mouse scampered around me. I would have given a week's work if I had had a candle, for I could feel my hair crawling on my head, and my heart beat a mighty sight faster than it ought to. Still I hadn't seen a thing to be afraid of, and hadn't any faith that thar was anything of the kind thar.' "I was jest a going to call Nancy to come and find her ghost if she could, when I heard a sound that nigh took me off my feet. It came from the tater bin right beside me, and sounded as if somebody was pounding upon the walls with something hard and heavy. Then there came the sound Nancy had told about, and I felt a cold chill run up and down my back bone, and if I hadn't known that Nancy was standing right above my head I should have turned tail and put fer the kitchen as fast as I could make my feet carry me there. I had half a mind to start, but then I thought I might as well face the spirit as her arter I had promised to lay the ghost. So there I was betwixt two fires, and not knowing one minute what would happen the next.

"Then thar came a groan, as though something was in awful distress. What little courage I had I felt crawling out the ends of my fingers; but jest then I happened to remember that ghosts were not in the habit of talking like live folks if anything ailed 'em. thought made me feel as bold as a lion, and I crept up to the edge of the tater bin and said in a loud voice which I meant should reach the ears of Naucy, so that she would know how bold I "Get out of here you varmint! You may scare the wimmen folks, but I want you to understand you can't me.'

"Who I was talking to I hadn't the least idea in the world, fer it was as dark as a stack of black cats. I held my hands out before me so that I shouldn't hit agin anything, and pretty soon they touched the side of the bin, which came up about three feet from the ground. A minute afterward something hit me a blow in the stumich, and I went head over heels backward onto the bottom of the suller. "'Nancy! Nancy!' I yelled as I lay thar on my back. 'Come quick and bring a light!' 'I guess Nancy was nigh about as skeered as I was, for I heard her flying around over my head, and then I saw her feet, by the glimmer of the dip, coming down over the stairs.

"'What is it, Bill? What has happened to ye?' she cried, holding the candle aloft. "That ghost has knocked me over and nigh about broke my back,' said I.

".Where is it?" said she. "In the tater bin. Help me up, Nancy, and we'll see what we can find. "'Wait till I have a look,' said she. "She wanted me to think that she was mighty brave. The dip didn't give much light, and she couldn't see into the bin till she was close to the edge. The next minute I see something that was all head, hair and horns rise up, and the next minute I had company on the bottom of the suller, fer the critter had knocked Nancy 'longside of me. "Then I seed that the ghost was old

Hi Parker's big ram, that had a habit of traveling off by hisself when he took it into his head to do so. The bulk-head had been left open to let in the air, but the taters had not been brought out, and the old critter, smelling 'em, had got in a habit of going in and helping bisself, and it was his champing and eating that had made such a noise as come near scaring Nancy out of her wits.

"The ghost was laid, but Nancy and me were so crippled that we had all we could do to crawl upstairs, and we didn't get over it fer nigh about a month. "I sent word to HI Parker to come and get his ram and to take care of it hereafter, or I would come onto him for damage. He took good care to do this, and we wern't troubled with the ghost in the tater bin arterward."-Waverley Magazine.

____ A Remarkable Woman.

Mrs. Deborah Powers, head of the banking firm of D. Powers & Sons and of the great oilcloth manufacturing firm of the same name, died at her home in Lansingburg, N. Y., on May 28, at the age of 101 years. She had resided in Lansingburg for seventy-five years. She left an estate valued at two millions of dollars. She retained her mental faculties unimpaired almost to the very last.

Mrs. Powers was born in Hebron, N H., on August 5, 1790. For eight years priors to her marriage earned her livelihood by tailoring and spinning. On February 22, 1816, she married Wm. Powers, whom she had known from childhood, and who was a school teacher in Lansingburg. Soon after their arrival in Lansing-

burg, Mr. Powers had his attention attracted by a piece of floor cloth in the bottom of a carriage, and, having some knowledge of the manufacture of table oilcloths, determined to attempt the manufacture of the article. His exwheezing like all possessed, and Nancy | periments were attended with so much run whack up agin me with such force | success that he soon abandoned school teaching. free from debt, and a large sum of money. Mrs. Powers spent hours every day in the office and factory until about twenty years ago, when she surrendered the personal control of the business to her son. In 1877 Mrs. Powers organized the private bank of D. Powers & Sons, and its patronage was soon large and lucrative, everybody having confidence in Mrs. Powers' ability. It is now one of the most popular banks in that part of the state, and Henry L. Lamb, at one time superintendent of banks, is the cashier.

A Touching Incident.

There is a family in one of our large cities dependent upon a little child for their present sunshine. A few weeks ago the young wife and mother was stricken down to die. It was so sudden, so dreadful, when the grave family physician called them together in the parlor, and in his solemn, professional way intimated to them the truth, there was no help.

Then came the question who was to tell her. Not the doctor. It would be cruel to let the man of science go to their dear one on such an arrand. Not the aged mother who was to be left childless and alone. Not the young husband who was walking the floor with clenched hands and a rebellious heart. Not-there was only one other. and at this moment he looked up from the book he had been playing with, unnoticed by them all, and asked hravely:

"Is mamma doin' to die?" . Then, without waiting for an answer, he sped from the room and up the stairs as fast as his little legs would carry him. Friends and neighbors were watchng by the sick woman. They wonderingly noticed the pale face of the child as he climbed on the bed and laid his little head on his mother's pillow. "Mamma, is you 'fraid to die?"

The mother looked at him with swift intelligence. Perhaps she had been thinking of this. "Who-who-told-you-Charlie?" she said, taintly. "Doctor, and papa, and gamma-everybody," he whispered. "Mamma, dear little mamma, don't be afraid to

"No, Charlie," said the young mother, after one supreme pang of grief: "no, mamma won't be afraid." "Just shut your eyes in the dark, teep hold of my hand—and when von open 'em, mamma, it will be all light there." When the family gathered awe-stricken at the bed side, Charley held ap his little hand saying, solemnly; "II-u-s-h! My mamma doin' to sleep. Her won't wake up here any

And so it proved. There was no heart rending farewell, no agony of parting; for when the young mother awoke she had passed beyond, and, as baby Charlie said: "It is all light there!"

Few people are aware, says M. Felix

Hement, that besides size, shape and color, their eyes differ in visual force and power of accommodation; and also that some faults affect only one of them. It is an established fact that we all use one eye—the right or the left — in preference when looking through a glass or taking aim with a gun. We are right or left-eyed as we are right or left-handed or footed. If we do not perceive this ourselves, oculists and opticians remark it. The ignorance of most people on this subject is illustrated by their buying glasses at the optician's without takng account of any difference between the eyes. Thus only one of the eyes is helped, while the other one, being less called into exercise, becomes less and less useful, and loses its power as a tool rusts when it is not in use. Yet both our eyes are needed to see well. It becomes, therefore, highly important to observe bow the child uses its eyes, in order to correct those attitudes which tend injure of the sight as well as the health. Children, in writing, rarely fail to give the head an in-clination by which the eyes are placed at unequal distances from the paper. They are also apt to incline the head too far, and acquire the habit of breaking it too near, as when trying to accommodate themselves to a feeble light. Not sufficient attention, we think, is given to these matters, especially when we consider the consequences of such habits in mature age. A large proportion of our defeats originate in want of proper care during childhood. We do wrong to such wonderful tools as our senses when we do not give them the education they need. It is not surprising that parents who are so particular about the way their children hold their fork or spoon, pay so little attention to the way they use their eyes.—Popular Science Monthly.

Water and Wind.

The latest news from Germany shows that a definite contract has been made for transmitting power electrically from the falls of Laussen to Frankfort-on-the-Main, a distance of 112 miles, for service at the electrical exhibition which is to be opened at that place on June 15. At Hartford, Conn., a similar transmission of power is successfully made for a distance of 22 miles for lighting purposes. In several places in both Europe and America, electric power is transmitted distances of five to ten miles. At Coronada Beach, Cal., a company has invested and successfully applied an apparatus to a section of the surface of the sea, by which its ceaseless motion is converted into electric energy; and this is transmitted through a cable to the point where it is needed for the usual service of an electric current. Thus, not only is the application of electricity rendering available a multitude of water falls in stream and tide which have hitherto been useless for mechanical purposes, but wind power on every hill top can be gathered in by the blades of the windmill, and thence conveyed to more accessible plain. It will not be long ere fuel of all kinds may be to a large extent superceded in dwellings, and its uses performed in a better manner by the new household servant-electricity. Thus, possibly, we may be saved from the tyranny of the coal mine and the wood pile, and from their final exhaustion, by the utilization of an exhaustless power which everywhere pervades the universe.—Practical Electricity.

An Easy Solution. The Northwestern Mechanic is responsible for the following: "A man who wanted to learn what profession he would have his son enter, put him in a room with a Bible, an apple, and a dollar bill. If be found him, when he returned, reading the Bible, he would make a clergyman out of him; if eating the apple, a farmer; and if interested in the dollar bill, a banker. interested in the dollar bill, a banker. When he did return, he found the boy sitting on the Bible, with the dollar and then said: "I'dess I can't give it old goose and gander. It was so dark | business, with such success that in 1842 | bill in his pocket and the apple almost | back to you, for I can't tell which one that 'we couldn't see a dozen steps she had a fine business, a large factory devoured. NUMBER 21

On the Ascending Grade. recent writer in the Atlantic Monthly states that in twenty-six year: the financial condition of the blacks in the Southern States has improved to such an extend that their property has an estimated value ranging from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000. All of this wealth has been created since 1805. If white people, having the discipline of centuries, had accumulated this property in a quarter of a century, it would have been considered a creditable achievement. Is it less so because six millions or more of blacks, having nothing to start with, and having a the same time, to encounter social and business prejudices, have made this advance?

But the accumulation of property is not the only evidence of progress among the colored people of the Southern States. The desire to obtain wealth is not greater than the desire for edu-There have been many discouraging reports from time to time of the social and intellectual condition of the black population of the South. One hears about their indolence, improvi dence, their neglect of sanitary conditions, the low standard of morality among them, and so on. There is probably a good deal of truth in all these statements. But it is not the whole truth. A people who are eager to acquire property and education, and who are continually making advances on these lines are surely on the ascending grade.

The Youngest Pensioner.

In the person of Wm. F. Lingohr, Monroe can claim the citizenship of the youngest pensioner in the state, if not in the United States. Mr. Lingohr is but 19 years old and has drawn a pension for the past two years. He is the son of Edward Lingohr, who was shot in this city about fifteen years ago. At the death of his father he was thrown upon his own resources and succeeded in getting into the navy, where he served four years as an apprentice. He sailed on the Michigan, New Hampshire, Portsmouth, Constellation, Constitution, Jamestown, Kearsearge and Minnesota. During his four years in the navy he had his arm broken six times, leg once shot through the knee, received a scalp wound from a spear on the coast of Africa and suffered an injury to his back which disabled him for the service and for which he is now drawing a pension. Mr. Lingohr is engaged in the barbering business for J. Bordeau on Front street.—Monroe Democrat.

Edison's Dispatch.

Edison's accomplishments are not all in the electric line. He can tell a good story capitally. He told one the other day about an experience he had recently in an up country town in Pennsylvania, on Sunday morning. He had been out to see some iron works. A cold rain was falling and he got soaked through. When he reached his hotel the first thing he did was to order hot Scotch.

"Can't give it to you," said the clerk, "Eh? Can't give it to me? Why "Because it's Sunday. We can't sell anything to drink on Sunday."

"Well, but I'm wet through," said Edison, "and cold. I want a drink." "Well, I'll tell you what we can do," replied the clerk; "we can give you a "What's a kodah?" asked Edison.

"You just go to your room and press the botton. We do the rest." Edison got the drink.

Ladies, Stay in Bed.

Polly Peppers says that early rising wears out women too fast: "I noticed that our thrifty great-aunts and grand-methers had a habit of dying early and giving their husbands an opportunity of leading two or three blushing brides to the altar. Now, I don't propose to leave any chance for my husband to get any double or triple bliss as that. don't intend to have any other woman walking around in my shoes, appropriating my kisses and doing other disagreeable things which I would object to. I mean to take care of myself so as to last as long as my other half. No woman has any business, ordinarily, to get up and go to work at four or five o'clock in the morning. If there is anything in the world that a woman needs is plenty of rest. If she feels tired and languid in the morning and hates to get up, it is a sure sign that she is overdoing and wearing out. Six o'clock is as early as anyone ought to get up and go to work.—American

A Yankee Catches the Waste. Waste electricity is being gathered up and used by a clever Bostonian. In front of his house is one of the iron posts which support the trolley wire of an electric railway. It has long been a source of annoyance to the company that much of the electricity generated was lost by leakage of the current down these poles. A waterpipe leading into the house of the ingenious citizen was found to be electrified, so it was connected promptly with a storage battery, which was soon com-pletely charged. With the power thus obtained the Boston man lights his house and operates a system of electric bells and burglar alarms. The railroad company makes no objection, as the power would otherwise be wasted.—Kate Field's Washington.

Paper Horseshoes.

It would be hard to make an announcement of a new use of paper which should cause any lively surprise. And yet the introduction of horseshoes made of paper in the cayalry service of the German army seems extraordinary enough to excite interest. Several cavalry horses were first shod with paper shoes, and the effect was observed. It was found that not only did the lightness and elasticity of the shoe help the horse on the march, making it possible for him to travel faster and further without fatigue than horses shod with iron, but that the paper shoe had the property of being unaffected by water and other liquids. It is now proposed to replace iron with paper horseshoes in the entire German

When Boldness Won.

A Russian exile told this story of a desperate artifice to which he once resorted. A police official searched his house for compromising papers. At the time there was in his possession a certain document, the discovery of which meant serious danger not only to himself, but also to his friends. Volkhovsky was desperate, for it was quite certain that the document would be found. But a daring trick saved him. He coolly handed the document to the official, who scarcely glanced at it and handed it back. Thus, after the most minute search, the official, his nose blackened with soot and his hair decorated with feathers—for he had even examined the stovepipes and the bedding—had to depart empty-handed.

Perpetual Motion.

When a perpetual motion inventor applies for a patent he is always requested to supply a working model, and that settles him. The profession-al model makers do not consider it their business to criticize the devices of their customers; so long as they are paid, they are entirely willing to embody in wood or metal anything you please, no matter how absurd it is. But their best efforts in perpetual motion models do not go. Not a day passes that people do not apply at the Patent Office for patents on inventions long antedated on the records. The most pathetic spectacle to be seen in Washington, not even excepting the disappointed office seekers, is the would be patentee who has come to the capital with a wonderful idea and finds that it has been thought before.

Old Soldiers.

No president of the United States was ever re-elected unless he was him self a soldier or held a chief executive office during a war period. Washington, a soldier of the Revolution; Jefferson, a governor of Virginia during the Revolutionary War; Madison, president at the outbreak of the war with Great Britain: Monroe, a Revolutionary officer; Jackson, a soldier of the war of 1812; Lincoln, a soldier, and president during the Civil War; Grant, a soldier of the Mexican and Civil War.

Disappearance of Rivers.

An apparent disappearance is a phenomenon that seems to have taken place with some rivers. The Upper Paraguay, as if absolutely lost for many miles, has been known to flow beneath a matted covering of living and dead vegetation several feet in depth. In the year 1858, one of these growths, under the influence of an extraordinary inundation, broken loose and drifted two thousands miles, bringing up at Buenos Ayres with many animals and reptiles that had taken refuge upon it.

Growth of the Hair after Death.

The body of E. M. Haskell, who has been dead for over twenty years, was recently removed from his grave at Northfield, Minn., it being purposed to put the body in another lot. When his body was exposed it was found that he had a beard over twenty-three inches long. His wife said that before he died he had been shaven, and all his hair must have grown after burial.-

The Chicago Times says that Farmer Ingalls drives into Atchison nowadays in a farm wagon clad in worn clothes and with his trousers stuffed into his boot-tops. It is generally conceded by the democracy that the ex-Senator was eccentric, but we hardly expected to see them charging him with dressing his wagon in that style.

The Curculio.

That fruit pest known as the curculio is causing the growers no little trouble and damage this season, and the fruit raisers are at their wits ends to know how to exterminate the destructive little insects. Messrs. D. Boynton and Stephen Cook, of Riverside, have found that jarring the trees frequently is more effectual than any other method they have tried. They spread white sheets under the trees and tap the trunks with a mallet, which causes the insects to fall off on the sheets, when they can be easily killed. Mr. Boynton found 2050 specimens on 25 plum trees within a week. The curculio does not attack other varieties of fruits if there are plum trees near, until it has first preyed upon the latter. Mr. Boynton has also found that common salt applied around the base of the tree will kill the apple borer and he is now experimenting on the peach borer in the same way.—Palladium.

Interesting Facts About the Great Sheep

Walks of Australia. It is a remarkable thing, the construction of one of these station houses. This of Blythevale is one of the smallest in the rich western district of Victoria, comprising only about 20,000 acres and carrying the same number of sheep, but is one of the best and, relatively, most prosperous in the colony. The inexperienced visitor would never suspect the wealth that is produced by these brown acres, without crops, without trees, unwatered, seemingly want ing in nutrition for all grazing beasts. The thousands of fat sheep and sleek cattle, however, show the unsuspected value of the soil-in even a small station like this is worth at least '$300,000 without counting the flocks and herds, or the buildings and improvements, and the product of it is gathered with a degree of labor which our New England farmers would consider no labor at all. In spite of droughts and other drawbacks the life of the Victorian station owners is about the quietest and most secure that one could desire. They rear large families in luxury, send their children to Europe to be educated; they themselves spend a great deal of their time in the city, for the station, with an overseer in charge, after the early years of hard work, practically runs itself. COUNTERFEITER PETE M'CARTNEY One of the Most Successful Crooks in the History of Crime.

The cleverest thief that ever I had any thing to do with while connected with the secret service department of the United States treasury department, said Maj. Thomas E. Lonergan, was Pete McCartney. He was born and raised in south ern Illinois, and could not boast any education. Yet he was in every sense a picturesque figure in criminal annals. He was the only man I ever met who educated himself so as to be able to do everything connected with counterfeiting. He could engrave a plate, make his own inks and paper and print the complete note. McCartney had been arrested many times prior to my arrest of him, and had always managed to escape. I captured him at Venice, Ills., on Bloody island, the famous old dueling ground of that section of the country, which was a little north of East St. Louis. This was in the fall of 1871. I took McCartney to Springfield and turned him over to United States Marshal Routt, who was afterward governor of Colorado. McCartney was charged with counterfeiting United States money and committed to jail in default of $500,000 bail. Negotiations were entered into by the treasury department that McCartney should turn up certain plates for counterfeiting notes, and that in return his bail should be reduced to $25,000. The agreement was carried out on both sides. McCartney gave up the plates and $80,000 in counterfeit money. He had to go to Decatur, Ills., where he had buried it, to dig it up.

During the time that this notorious counterfeiter was out on bail he was arrested in St. Louis, and was seriously shot in the fracas that followed the attempt to arrest him. While in jail on crutches he broke out and left, taking with him four other counterfeiters who were confined at the same time. A few weeks subsequently he was again arrested in Texas. A big reward had been offered for his capture. The sheriff who arrested him telegraphed for the United States officials to come and take possession of him. To make his escape impossible this sheriff and his posse camped out all night with McCartney, but he got away before morning. He was again arrested shortly after this by another Texas sheriff. To secure him effectually this time this official manacled McCartney's arms and legs and started for Austin. When the train reached Austin McCartney had made his escape. During the war he was arrested on some charge in Indiana and taken to Washington heavily ironed, hand and foot. He escaped from custody by throwing himself out of the car window as the Pennsylvania train was passing Horseshoe Bend. This is the most dangerous point on the whole road. He dislocated his shoulder, but suffered no other injury. Finally he was captured in Indiana, convicted and sent to the penitentiary at Michigan City. He is an old man now, but in his best days was one of the most slippery fellows that I ever heard of .--Chicago Post. Not Wanted.

MR. ELMER DAY, formerly employed by Rough & Fox, in this place, now one of Hill Bros', millers, of South Bend, while tearing down an old flume fell from a scaffold across the water wheel Tuesday, a distance of six or at seyen feet, and broke two of his ribs on the right side and cracked the bone in his right arm.

SATURDAY morning about five o'clock horse came running into town by continue his business in boots and Front street, and north on Detroit street, with a road cart with one wheel off, and as no one followed, those who saw it were somewhat scared. It was afterwards learned that John Broceus had started to go to the circus. He secured another rig before going. No one was seriously hurt.

Our own and only little George, who represents this district in Lansing, has got into a tiff because the house refused to lock up the Detroit Tribune correspondent, and has resigned from the special committee appointed to investigate the charge of bribery against Munthe and Doyle. He doesn't propose to play unless the boys will do as he says. So, there.

THE Common Council is having an excellent job done at the brow of the hill at the front of the M. E. church, by cutting it down about two feet. Besides greatly improving the appearance of the street it will make the grade much better. The dirt is being used to fill the hollow on the cross street running east from that point, making ---

THE wide walk leading from the notel to Spencer & Barnes' factory has been condemned by the Common Council as unsafe, and notices warning people against walking over it exceptng at their own risk, posted. If this be sufficient to protect the village from suit it may serve its end, but the fact remains that less than half of the strangers who pass that way are in any way protected by the notices.

THERE was a peculiar looking individual in this village Tuesday purporting to represent a company that is publishing a Directory of Northern Berrien county. He may have represented a bona fide concern, but as he wanted "advance payment" for cards to be inserted in the Directory it is believed our people postponed "catching on" until some more convenient season. It is well to "go slow" in handing out money to such traveling characters.— Watervliet Record.

TREAT & GODFREY.

Fashion's Freaks. The fashionable young man now writes with a quill pen, the feather parts of which bear pansies, violets or lilies, painted thereupon by his best girl. The effects are charming. Sometimes the whole pen, feathers and all, is dyed a delicate pink or blue or green. Then the effects are still more dainty. Before your girl goes away this summer, young man, she ought to give you a couple of quills, bearing respectively pansies (for thoughts) and forget-me-nots. If she does, and if she's just about the nicest girl on the footstool, wade right inwade into ink, that is; and don't doubt but that she'll be glad to get your let-

But quill pens are not the only hand painted novelties. Imagine a man wearing, with a dress suit, a shirt the bosom of which bears work in colors! Of course it is horrible, vulgar, barbarous. But still the fad exists, and grows, too. Not long ago a rich westerner appeared at a dinner in Germantown with a water color picture of Pike's Peak delicately painted on his shirt bosom close to the edge of the waistcoat. The tints were softened, and the clouds gradually faded away until the white expanse of natural shirt began again near the lower stud, Of course the innovation created a good deal of talk, and is hardly to be followed by residents of a civilized land; but, all the same, the idea originated a year ago at Paris,—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Howells in New York. Mr. William D. Howells' determination to take up his abode in New York city is due less to any dissatisfaction with Boston than to his discovery that New York is the place to make money, even for a realistic novelist. Though Mr. Howells does not believe in sentiment, professionally, yet it has had a powerful influence in keeping him in Boston. He has also been led to overcome his aversion to the public press, and has joined the number of those who sell their literary products to the syndicates. One of his stories is to appear in one of our Sunday newspapers serially, and he got a bigger price for it than he has for half a dozen of his novels published in book form. Yet it is something of an experiment to lay Mr. Howells' writings before average newspaper readers. Those who admire him admire him immensely, and make up by the intensity of their devotion, perhaps, for the smallness of their number. One of his books an edition of only 1,500 copies was printed, and had he not received a good price for it from the magazine in which it appeared the time that he had spent in writing it would have been worse than wasted.— E. J. Edwards in Philadelphia Press.

On Thursday morning Mr. John C. Condon, of Belfast, caught the king of lobsters in the waters of Penobscot bay. The lobster was caught southeast of Moose point, in a line with Brigadier's island. The monster was too large to enter the trap, but as the trap was drawn up he became entangled in the heading and was safely landed in the boat. The lobster was perfect in all his parts. He measured 37 inches from the end of the tail to the end of the longest claw, 20 inches around the body and 17 inches around the large claw. When taken from the water he weighed twenty-three pounds, but after boiling shrank to seventeen. Mr. Charles E. Sanford, of New York, offered Captain Bramball five dollars for the lobster, but he would not take it. Saturday Captain Bramhall boiled the lobster in strong pickle to preserve it. The captain expects to realize a handsome sum from the crustacean. Williamson's "History of Belfast" mentions the capture of a lobster at City Point many years ago that weighed twentytwo pounds.—Belfast Journal.

One of the Ways of a Queer Old Town Passengers who take the 2 o'clock car on Walnut street every morning enjoy a decidedly novel treat, through the kindness of the driver, a policeman and a baker. The car passes a bakery at a certain hour, and just before it gets opposite the door a policeman standing near whistles shrilly, the grating is raised and a flour dusted arm hands out a hot loaf of bread. This the policeman hands to the driver, whose invariable form of thanks consists of the words, "God bless you, old man." Then the driver ties the lines around the brake, enters the car, and divides the bread with the passengers. There were eight solemn looking passengers in the car on a recent morning, and a man getting aboard at the Baltimore and Ohio depot was visibly astonished when he saw every one of them munching hot bread and talking politics.-Philadelphia Record. Blocked the Game. A well known Main street business man of Holyoke received a telegram a few days ago bearing the signature of his brother-in-law, asking him to send him fifty dollars, as he was "strapped" at Chicago. The telegram did not give the Holyoke man's full name, but it named his business and Main street address. After thinking the matter over a few moments he concluded it was a bunco game, and sent a telegram to his brother in-law in St. Louis asking if he was at home. He soon received an affirmative reply and the invitation, "Come and see me." It was a shrewd game, but it did not work,-

It is reported that a thief has been identified at St. Louis by a blind man, whose hearing was so acute that he was able to identify him by his pronunciation of "Good morning." Strange to say, the blind man's assertion was conclusively proved by the accused confessing his culpability.

Has Been Fattened for Soup.

A man with a remarkable story has turned up in Dallas. His name is W. F. Yates, and he says he is the son of J. C. Yates, a missionary who went out from Jacksonvilla Miss., in 1848, and was deyoured by cannibals in 1875. He was reared in missionary camps, and as he grew up he took to the work himself. and has been engaged at it twelve years in Africa. He relates stories of personal adventure of thrilling interest.

In 1876 he went on an expedition to Lake Albert Nyanza, where he and two others were captured by cannibals. They were imprisoned in a hole in the ground and covered with logs. Here an attempt was made to fatten them for the feast day by throwing them human flesh and bread fruit. Eight days they were thus confined, when Henry M. Stanley came up with a posse, routed the natives, killed forty of them, and freed the captives He then joined the Stanley party and went with them to Livingston river, where he took charge of the Rooves

Grove Baptist mission. Here he remained until 1878, when the natives suddenly formed a dislike for him and confined him in a mud house to fatten. One day they took him out to exercise, and he began amusing the two guards by playing tricks. He snatched the club of one and brained them both. and again eluded the soup. Afterward he engaged in exploring and establishing missions on the Congo river. He speaks thirty-six of the languages of that country, and he claims to have had a personal acquaintance with David Livingston He was born in Tankatango, in the southern part of Congo, and was raised principally on Lake Morocco.

His story is credited, as there are peon ple in Dallas, among whom are Dr. S. A. Hayden, edifor of the Texas Baptist and Herald, who are acquainted with his Mississippi connections.—Texas Cor. Memphis Appeal-Avalanche.

An Idea for a Country Place. The points of the compass are always a mooted question at country houses, particularly on the shores of bays or lakes. where each curve and indenture of the land changes the frontage to the water. Really acrimonious discussions have been held by near neighbors on their respective verandas, where, without a reliable compass to guide them, each man held to his own opinion with dogmatic persistence.

"I have lived in four different country houses with you," said the wife of one of the disputants laughingly, "and in every place there has always been this discus-

"It is always a much argued question." answered their visitor: "some one invariably starts it every summer wherever there is an idle group of people. There is always a decided difference of opinion; and oddly enough no one ever seems to have a compass."

"Well, this is what I mean to do," said the lady, "and I think it will be a very pretty decoration as well as a useful one. I intend to draw on the floor of the veranda a large and clearly marked compass in red outline, verifying it, of course, by the real instrument. It will be the greatest convenience, and will look very well, too, if neatly done."-New York Tribune.

The Best Recipe for Rest. There is nothing which will give a chance for rest to overtired nerves so surely as a simple religious faith in the overruling, wise and tender Providence which has us in its keeping. It is in chafing against the conditions of our lives that we tire ourselves immeasurably. It is in being anxious about things which we cannot help that we often do the most of our spending. A simple faith in God which practically and every moment, and not only theoretically and on Sundays, rests on the knowledge that he cares for us at least as much as we care for those who are the dearest to us. will do much to give the tired nerves the feeling of the bird in its nest.

Do not spend what strength you have, like the clematis, in climbing on yourself, but lay hold on things that are eternal, and the peace of them will pass into your soul like a healing balm. Put yourself in the great everlasting currents, and then you can rest upon your ours, and let those currents bear you on their strength.-Anna C. Brackett in

A Heroic Rescue. Herbert Murphy, a three-year-old child, was playing about a bonfire near his home on Eleventh street, Long Island City, when his clothing caught fire, and he was speedily a sheet of flame. Charles Crowley, aged thirty, who lives next door, saw the child's peril, and without an instant's hesitation grabbed blanket from his bed and sprang out of the second story window, at which he was standing, and went to the rescue. He speedily smothered the blaze with the blanket, and probably saved the little fellow's life, although both victim and rescuer were badly burned, the boy terribly. The window from which Crowley jumped was thirty feet from the ground.-Philadelphia Ledger.

It has been found that relic hunters nave committed considerable depredations at Pilgrim Hall, Plymouth, absolutely skinning the covering from old heirloom trunks and carrying off plecemeal nearly half the leather covering of the seat of the John Hancock sofa. Other articles have been attacked, and it has been found necessary to put up warning cards for this class of thieving visitors that if caught at their nefarious business they will get a taste of the law. —Cor. New Bedford Standard.

Burned While Shaking Hands. A well known dentist of Oakland has had an unpleasant experience. He was carrying in his vest pocket a bottle containing chlorate of potash, and, while shaking hands with a friend in the Athenian club, the friction caused combustion of the potash, and it set the doctor's clo hes on fire. His waistcoat and other garments were badly burned before the fire was extinguished, and he got a blistering. -San Francisco Alta.

Dynamite in a Lailway Accident. It has leaked out that one of the pas sengers on the train wrecked had with him twenty-five pounds of dynamiteenough, had it exploded, to have blown the whole train into fragments. He bought the stuff of a dealer in this city and to insure greatest care carried the package in his hands. He was in the smoking car when the crash came, and the next few moments were to him the most terrifying of his life. When the front end of the car lifted from the wheels and tilted into the air he expected it would follow the locomotive and five cars ahead down the embankment and the crash would explode the dynamite, but he also realized his greatest safety lay in keeping the dangerous compound in his lap.

As quick as the car stopped he made a dash for the door, holding the package at arm's length. Once on the ground he bolted for the woods, carefully laid the dynamite on the ground and hurried away. Then he breathed easier, for even after the danger of being crushed in the car was over he feared the locomotive boiler might explode and the concussion explode his burden. Without question had the smoking car followed the others into the ravine the dynamite would have been ignited and not only caused much loss of life, but added another mysterious feature to the affair. Naturally every one would have connected the dy namite with the plans of the men engaged in the act, as the owner of the stuff would not be alive to tell his story. -Springfield Republican.

Stephen Venard, famous as a hunter of highwaymen, has died at the County hospital after a lingering illness, at the age of sixty-seven years. He came to Nevada City from Ohio in the early fifties and engaged in merchandising. Subsequently he mined and did police duty here, and was for a time engaged in cattle raising in Nevada.

On the morning of May 15, 1866, the stage from North San Juan in this city was stopped a few miles from here by George Shanks, alias Jack Williams; Bob Finn, alias Caton, and George W. Moore, who cantured $7,900. Venard, who participated in the chase a few hours later, came up with the highwaymen in one of the wildest and most inaccessable portions of South Yuba canon, where they divided the spoils. An encounter ensued, in which Venard, with a rifle, killed all three, and escaped unhurt.

Governor Low appointed him lieutenant-colonel on his staff for meritorious service in the field, and the Wells-Fargo Express company presented him with a valuable rifle. He was a man of modest demeanor, thoroughly temperate, of the strictest probity, and not afraid of anything.—Cor. San Francisco Bulletin.

The Corinth Canal. That great engineering work, the Corinth canal, which will sever the Peloponnesus from the mainland of Greece, and will permit the largest ships to pass directly from the Gulf of Athens to the Gulf of Corinth, is said to be rapidly approaching completion. The canal will have no locks, but is level from end to end and perfectly straight, the width being ninety-six feet and the depth thirtysix. At the Corinth end it is crossed by a railroad bridge 164 feet high, under which the tallest ships may pass without lowering their topmasts.

With the exception of a short space in the center, the channel, it is stated, has been excavated down to the sea level, and water has been admitted for some distance at the Corinth end, as also at the other approach. It is assumed that about 300 vessels from Trieste and Fiume. and about the same number from Italian ports, will pass through the canal annually, while it is calculated that between 700 and 800 Greek ships will use the canal—a total, say, of more than 1,200 vessels annually, averaging 1,500 tons each.—New York Sun.

Interesting Autographs. Several interesting autograph letters have been sold at the rooms of Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods, the prices obtained showing that rarities in this line are always sure of finding a ready market at sums which steadily advance. A letter from Robert Burns to his father sold for £53, and five verses in the same handwriting brought £21. Oliver Goldsmith's manuscript has been steadily rising in value of late, a letter from his hand to David Garrick inducing a collector to bid as high as £41 for the document, at which price it was disposed of. An epistle from Dr. Johnson-Goldie's friend and patron—only reached the sum of £10 15s. Two letters of Alexander Pope went for £17 10s. and £6 10s. respectively, and one from Jeremy Taylor brought £8 8s. A communication from Queen Elizabeth to a correspondent abroad which her majesty had dictated to Roger Ascham, sold for £16 16s.—Galignani's

Live Lobsters in Demand. There is now a strong demand for live obsters. The restaurants, boardinghouses and many of the families that used to demand boiled lobsters now order them alive, because it is the whim of the moment to eat them after they have been broiled alive. The idea is that the flesh is half a dozen times more succellent then than if they are killed first Humanitarians need not shudder. There never was any human method of killing a lobster. He used to be boiled alive, and now he is broiled. It is doubtful whether, if each lobster could be ques tioned, many of them would care which way they were treated.—New York Sun.

The Longest Electric Railroad. North Carolina is to have a forty-one mile electric railway, running from Asheville to Rutherfordton, for which the power operating the electric works is to be furnished by water. The road, when completed, will be the longest electric railroad line in the world, and the only one built to operate both freight and passenger ears. Though Rutherfordion is 112 years old, it never had a railroad of any kind until within the last two years .- Savannah News.

Lost in the Colorado Desert. John McGrath has received a letter under date of May 19 from Walters, on the Colorado desert, telling of the terrible fate of a miner who had lost his way on the desert. From the letter it is learned that two parties of prospectors, Miller and Masters and Bowen and his partner, were together, and that on May Miller, as he was known, started from Cottonwood Springs for Walters to hunt his burro, which had gone astray. He had with him five quarts of water and provisions for one day. Nothing was thought of the matter, and no one dreamed but that he got through all right. On the 11th the balance of the party went to Walters, and reaching there learned that Miller had not been seen. They immediately put back to search for him, and found his tracks where he took a cattle trail which would lead him to the Colorado river, in a direction directly opposite to Walters. As they had no provisions they could not follow the trail and returned to Walters. He has been given up for dead, as since the 4th of the month, if he had reached the river, he would have had time to return or to have written back to his companions.

Bowen sent to Los Angeles to Miller's friends to have them come and search for the missing man, but up to the date on which the letter was written no word had been received from them .- San Bernardino Times-Index.

Drinking Water in New York. The foul condition of the Croton water that has been served to consumers in certain sections of this city within the past few days has caused much anxiety and comment. In some houses and apartments it has flowed in streams alternately black and green. A waggish German girl employed by a family in West Fiftyseventh street attributed the polluted condition of the water to neglect of the janitor in taking proper care of the tank on top of the building, not being aware of the fact that the same kind of water was flowing through all of the pipes in the neighborhood. She filled a pitcher with the black fluid one very hot afternoon last week, and seeing the janitor in the courtyard called to him: "Me-Carthy, would you like a cup of cold

"Indeed an' I would, wid many thanks to vees," answered Mr. McCarthy. The pitcher was tipped, a good sized cup was filled, and McCarthy drank it. He made a very wry face, and as he handed the cup back remarked: "Be me soul, that tastes just loike the water we're after gettin' these few days back." -New York Times.

Bride and Groom Very Wet. The bride of Mr. Charles Harvey, of Newport, owes the fact that she was not drowned in the Mississippi at St. Paul to the heroism of her "own hubby." The twain were married on Wednesday and came to St. Paul to spend a portion of their honeymoon.

They went down to the dock to take a Diamond Jo steamer for the south. They were not ready to go on board and walked along the dock to look at the broad side of the craft. All of a sudden wifey gave an earpiercing scream and went headlong into the river, having stepped on a loose board, which flew up at the other end. The new husband leaped into the river, striking the water almost as soon as she did, and clasped her in his arms, holding her head above water until help was at hand. A plank was thrown to him, which he seized, and being a swimmer soon reached the shore with his precious burden.

No damage was done aside from the wetting. They went to the hotel they had just left and changed their clothes.

—St. Paul Pioneer-Press. Who Is Rembrandt?

Great excitement has been caused in the artistic world of Germany by a book entitled "Who Is Rembrandt?" by Max Lautner, who contends that a great part of the paintings attributed to Rembrandt are the work of one of his scholars, Ferdinand Bol. With a new photographic magnifying process, invented by himself, he discovered, he says, on a great number of works bearing the name of Rembrandt the clear traces of the name of Ferdinand Bol scratched in the original fresh paint, and under the varnish. Thus, in the case of the celebrated picture "Joseph and Potiphar's Wife," purchased at a high price by the Berlin museum, the photographic apparatus has discovered a very clear impression of Bol's name to the left of the raised foot of Potiphar's wife, on the pedestal of the seat on which she reposes. - Galignani's Messenger.

opposite Roseburg was being used in paving the streets of that city. A gentleman who was there at the time examined the rock, and found it contained silver as well as tracings of tin. He surprised the people by showing them what a valuable style of pavement they were using Investigation shows that silver rock which is well worth working abounds in that vicinity, and efforts are being made to have it utilized. Traces of tin have been found in sufficient quantities to warrant a thorough prospect of the vicinity, which will doubtless be made.-Portland (Ore.) Telegram,

There is a fashion in the color of car-

A Skeptic About Color Photography. A Boston expert says: I, for one, do not believe that the photographing of colors will ever be successfully accomplished, notwithstanding the reports circulated periodically to the effect that tints have been reproduced with permanence by the camera. Why not? Simply because there is no such thing as an effect produced by certain light rays upon the eye. The most beautifully iridescent mother of pearl, showing every hue of the rainbow, has no colors of its own. They are made solely by the wave like surface of the material, which decomposes the light as a prism does. Parallel lines scratched close together a thousand or more to an inch—on ordinary glass will obtain the same result. Indeed, it is not true to say that anything is red, or blue, or green in itself; it is simply that the surfaces of the objects in question are respectively of materials so constituted as to reflect rays in certain wave lengths. Ilnon the length of the light waves depend the tints. . The most distinguished authority on this subject that ever lived, Dr. Helmholtz, is of the opinion that the eye actually receives but three primary color impressions, which by an ingenious internal arrangement of the organ are differentiated into a multitude of variations. There is no possibility of reducing such phenomena to a mechanical basis: and therefore color photography will never become a realized fact.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Unconquerable Foes. The time is near when gunpowder shall have rid this planet of man eating mammals, but ages may pass before science will 'wise any protection against the attack of carnivorous sea monsters. A few days ago Senor Garcia and his mulatto servant were standing on the beach of San Lazaro, near Havana, Cuba, when a teamster entered the bay to treat his horses to the luxury of a cool bath While the two men were watching the horses the rider was seen to disappear. and in a moment the water was discolored with his blood. The water was agitated for a short time, and then all was

There is no doubt that the man fell a victim to one of the numerous sharks which infest the bay. He was about thirty yards from the shore when a huge fish seized him, and the tragedy was so sudden and unexpected that it was impossible for the two observers on the beach to render the doomed man any assistance. The harbor of Havana is not the only tropical seaport infested with man eating sharks. They are exceedingly numerous in the Bay of Aden, of Bombay, Arckland and Batavia, and make bathing in the shorewater of Singa-Times.

Bathing in the Park Fountain. The policemen in the City Hall park have their hands full now that the warm weather has arrived, and with it the consequent flow of water in the fountain. About noon each day forty or fifty youngsters, mostly newsboys, gather about the pool and amuse themselves by sticking their heads and feet in the water. while others with sticks, strings and bent pins endeavor to snare the fish which some of them believe exist beneath its surface. One youth was sousing his head while, as he thought, the policeman was patrolling the opposite side of the

Another boy seized the bare legs which stuck up in air and pushed the bather's head about a foot under water. He was so engaged in this pleasing homicidal effort that he did not see the approach of the gray coated guardian until a rattan descended with telling effect. The immersed youth got a similar tanning, to the intense delight of the other boys. The officer says that it is a common thing for these boys to bathe in the fountain at night. As they have only two garments to get into, they can take a plunge, dress and get away before the guardian, who may be a block away, can reach them.—New York World.

Jockey Superstition. For some reason or other the average colored jockey is so brimful of superstition that he can hardly get down to weight. Jack Crittenden, the wellknown colored jockey, now living at Gloucester, would rather lose every race for a year than see a snake or a bullfrog. The stable boys discovered this the other day and one of them placed a dead snake in Jack's bunk. The poor little fellow, when he touched the clammy reptile, grew ashy in his terror, flew out of his stable into the night and no inducement strong enough has been found for his return. He firmly believes that the dead snake was an evil omen, and that he is hoodooed. Yesterday somebody slyly placed a dead frog in Jack's pocket. The jockey firmly believes that the frog jumped into his pocket and died. To prevent a recurrence of this kind he cut every one of his pockets out yesterday afternoon and sewed up the openings .-Philadelphia Record.

Earrings and Bracelets in the Daytime. Earrings worn in the daytime are said to be, and have been said to be for some time, hopelessly out of fashion. It takes more strength of mind than the average woman possesses, however, to leave her diamond soli aires at home when she is dressing for a day among the shops, and in consequence one sees a great many fashionably appearing women wearing carrings by daylight. Bracelets are really not worn while the sun shines any more, but when the innumerable lamps -fairy, piano, boudoir and bouquetare lighted, milady's slender wrists will scarcely hold the innumerable jeweled manacles with which she loves at the moment to adorn them .- New York Times.

A Big Alligator.

A large specimen of the alligator tribe was killed near Selvan Groves, Kan. It measured nine feet in length and weighed 680 nounds. A farmer named Williams discovered the animal while working on his farm. The hage monster snapped at his leg and bit it off just above the knee joint.—Cor. Salt Lake Times.

Several persons have been drowned in the Withlacooche river while diving for treasures. A colored man named Abrams is the last victim, and his case is a very peculiar one. A party was sounding the bottom of the Withlacooche for phosphate, and when an extraordinary bone or tooth was discovered Abrams would dive down and bring it up. At last he saw a very large bone and dived for it, but remained at the bottom. Waiting a few moments, and seeing his body at the bottom, grappling hooks were obtained by his comrades and his body was brought to the surface. As he came up a huge horn or tusk was seen sticking out of his head. Upon examination it was found that in diving he had struck head first a huge elephant's tusk that was standing on the river's bed in an upright position. It had pierced his brain, causing instant death. The tusk was over four feet long.-Sumpterville (Fla.)
