Anyone who has an idea that the democratic party is not the saloon party, pure and simple, had better read the platform of the party in Iowa.

Two members of the squabuck legislature have received appointments by the governor, one as deputy oil inspector, supposed to have been given him in payment for special services rendered.

Now comes the governor of that great commonwealth of Iowa accusing our Democratic governor of not only refusing to grant the requisition of a fugitive from justice, charged with fraud, but actually telegraphing, at the expense of the state, a warning to the criminal that the officers of the law were on his trail.

Two aeronauts from Paris brought a monster balloon to Chicago, where they were calculating upon amassing wealth by letting people ride the machine to the height of 1500 or 2000 feet, and drawing them back to the earth by means of a windlass and cable.

That "bankrupt treasury" which democratic organs are howling about goes on renewing its 2 1/2 per cent bonds for 2 per cent. It is a remarkable case of "bankruptcy".

The Republicans in Ohio and in Iowa should never miss an opportunity of demanding from Democratic speakers an answer to these questions: Where are those "higher prices on account of the tariff" which your party predicted so constantly during the campaign of 1890?

Why is it that your party never ceases to cry "higher prices on account of the tariff" which your party predicted so constantly during the campaign of 1890?

An Englishman in Chicago wants a Pull, so he can send letters home.

A plain looking Englishman who is at the Palmer house asked so many questions of the people about the hotel since his arrival that the clerks here and there in the office. Yesterday morning he cornered Thomas O'Brien, the room clerk, and asked where the postmaster lived.

"Can't tell you, sir," replied the clerk. "The postoffice is at Clark and Adams streets."

"Then the postmaster is apt to be there?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who is he?"

"Col. Sexton."

"None better."

"I want to transact some business with him, and would rather know a bit about the man before going over to his office."

"You will find him a thorough gentleman."

"I say, won't you kindly jot down a line to him recommending me? Your recommendation would be of great value to me, and I am sure he will be glad to accommodate me."

"I don't like to refuse you," said the clerk, "but it is against the rules of the house to indorse any paper for the postmaster."

"But I don't want that, you know. I want a letter of introduction which will answer my purpose. You see, I wish to send home a few letters about my family in the States, and I'd not like to have the officer in charge of the post refuse them because I am a stranger, you know."

"The clerk would not have been more surprised if an actor had registered at the hotel without asking for cheap rates or some other favor."

"You mean to say," asked the clerk, "that you want to mail some letters, but you are afraid they won't go unless you have a letter of introduction to the postmaster?"

"Quite so." You can dash off a few lines in a minute."

"Yes, but it is not necessary. Just put your initials in the lower left hand corner of the envelope. The postmaster knows you are stopping here. He will recognize the initials when he is assorting the London mail, and your letters will receive the best of care."

"You are kind," said the Englishman, "perfectly satisfied with this assurance. I'll do that, thank you."

"The clerk signed as the guest walked away. "There is plenty of cleverness in England," he murmured; "but that chap is like the man who fell out of a balloon—he isn't in it."

Rats Killed by a Horse. Roscoe Franklin, Brockton, Mass., owns a horse known by the name of a soldier, and he has been carrying about the country for exhibition, a certain New England village was thrown into great commotion by the news that an elephant was to be exhibited in a neighboring town.

The village which is the scene of my story was not large enough to hold the exhibition, but it was so small that the road lay through it. Now an elephant could not be packed away in any manner he kept out of sight. His journey must be made in full view, and everybody could get a look at him, and everybody was excited accordingly.

Day after day passed—no elephant. The exhibition had been advertised for a Monday, and Saturday night had come, with no tidings of the famous traveler. Sunday morning! The "sound of the church bell" summoned the people. Parson Adams had begun a "long prayer" and the congregation stood devoutly attentive to all appearance. But there was at least one exception, for Dr. Dobson's pew, near an open window, commanded a view of the highway, and Dr. Dobson's eyes, wide open, were fixed upon the prospect. A cloud of dust arose, then slowly above the hill opposite the window the head of a huge beast came into sight. The eager doctor forgot time and place, and shouting, "The elephant's coming! there he is!" he was out of the window like a dart. Off rushed the congregation, and whether Parson Adams finished his prayer that day is not told.—Wide Awake.

One Young Man's Bad Break. I try to keep fairly up with the new books of the day, and though I don't want to be pedantic I occasionally say a "long prayer" and the congregation stood devoutly attentive to all appearance. But there was at least one exception, for Dr. Dobson's pew, near an open window, commanded a view of the highway, and Dr. Dobson's eyes, wide open, were fixed upon the prospect.
