

The Republican State Convention will be held in Detroit, April 14.

This Copper Journal published at Hancock, thinks that Joseph F. Ham Biter Cashier of the Superior Saving Bank ought to be the republican nominee for State treasurer of this State.

Two young men in Chicago have agreed to try to swim across Lake Michigan, a champagne supper for twenty persons to be paid for by the fellow who first cries "Hold, Enough!" They are to be supplied with Boyton's patent swimming suits. A pretty cool undertaking.

The Detroit Journal has been purchased by Ex-Senator T. W. Palmer and William Livingston, Jr. and it is announced that no effort or expense will be spared to make it the most complete afternoon newspaper in the west. Mr. Livingston, who assumes the active management of the Journal, is a representative republican whose experience in newspaper work and management covers quite a period of years.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

On the evening of Feb. 17, the pastor of the U. B. church concluded to call upon a family, the father of which could be met in his home only on the evening. After one hour's visit, he returned to the parsonage when, lo, the house was filled with human forms varying in size from three to six feet. At once there flashed across his mind some years of existence each of which had a beginning and an ending—Anniversaries—birthdays. He tried to say something but—ah, well, the people know. The company were having a good social time when lo, one stood up in their midst, and in a voice recognized to be that of Rev. J. F. Bartness, began to tell the assembly of the anxious toil and effort necessary to successful pastoral work. He also spoke of the backache of the pastor as he sat day after day over his study table in his earnest endeavor to blend together into practical sermons, facts gathered from theology, ethics, and history. Then becoming more bold he became very personal and with authority not to be resisted commanded the pastor to stand forth, which he did, then in a very neat and appropriate manner presented a very handsome study chair, in behalf of numerous friends. Of course a speech of acceptance was expected, so in a few jumbled words something was said, but at the same time there is one more thing to say it is when in such a tender way he is made the object of love and esteem. Many other tokens of love were left with the family amounting in all to about $25. Many, many thanks.

FROM GALEEN.

Again the shadow of death is over our town. The beautiful, the talented, the beloved Mrs. Lena Kelley died at her home, in Ypsilanti, Feb. 22, 1922. Five years ago Mr. P. H. Kelley, then Principal of our schools, brought his young bride to this place, and for four years she taught as his assistant, endearing herself to her pupils and all who knew her. Her death was sudden and unexpected. Smilingly she welcomed a little daughter, but soon sank into convulsions, from which no human skill could rescue her. The funeral services were held at Benton Harbor, by the Elder who pronounced the ceremony that made her a happy bride, with many of her former pupils, and other friends, from this place, with flowers, and with tears, went to Benton Harbor, Tuesday, to sympathize with the bereaved, and to take a last look of her so tenderly loved.

A most heart-rending accident occurred in the family of Ed and Ada Barnhart, of three Oaks, Saturday. Mrs. Barnhart left her two children playing on the bed in her bedroom, while she went to take an oil can to a neighbor to send to town for oil, being gone only about twenty minutes, but in her absence, little Louise Conant, her oldest boy, in playing with some matches which were on the table near by, set fire to his clothing and the bed clothes. The little fellow, though only three years old, had presence of mind enough to put out the fire on the bed and tore part of his own burning clothing from him, and when his mother came in, a few minutes later, found him out in the kitchen sitting in a tub of water. The clothing was all burned off of him except a band around his neck, and his body was nearly burned to a crisp. Death released his suffering after twenty-two hours.

Nathaniel Swank's little girl, who was bitten by a dog several weeks ago, was followed by blood poisoning, is thought to be beyond danger, now.

For the accommodation of the public, J. P. Jones has placed in the lobby of the post-office a complete stock of stationery, books, tablets, pens, ink, etc. Also the leading dailies and best periodicals may be bought there.

One after another in rapid succession the old pioneers of Berrien township are passing away, and very soon none will be left to relate the struggles, privations and hardships of fifty years ago.

John Smith, the subject of this notice, was born in Ohio, Feb. 1808, and died Feb. 22, 1892, aged 84 years and 4 days. He came to Michigan territory in 1829, and located on section 13, where he lived 63 years, and by industry and economy, made for himself and family a pleasant and comfortable home.

The writer knows of only one person now residing in Berrien township, whose statement here attests that of the deceased, viz., Mr. James Smith, a nephew of the deceased, whose father, Isaac Smith, located in 1829, on section 24, where James still lives.

There is Room at the Top. This world of humanity, knot together by the common ties of creation and brotherhood, remind us of a vast plain stretching out before us on every hand covered with life and motion.

Standing in clear view, like the Goddess of Liberty enlightening the world, is the ladder of fame upon whose rounds we all may step and upward climb.

As long as we are willing to stand together on the open plain at the foot of the ladder, all is well. No persecution and opposition. But let an individual break out to grasp a round of this ladder, that will lift him above his fellows and the plans upon which all have stood, leading him onward and upward, still higher, where room is more plenty and humanity far less in numbers, how soon his form is discovered by the surging mass below; how soon the engines of persecution, jealousy and envy are turned upon him to bring him down and back again to the same level of existence, grade of thought and action as themselves.

If successful they are content and happy with the result. But he who may have to stand forth in the crowd, to be greeted and pleased mass of humanity, grasping even the first round of this ladder, and although a crowded world with the cry of no opportunity and over-production are standing beneath him on the vast plane below, has already learned the fact that there is room at the top for more noble thought and action; and the higher he climbs the greater the space, smaller the numbers, and far grander the opportunities.

Our success in life will depend largely upon four fundamental principles: First, Honesty of purpose. Second, Independence of character. Third, Energy of action. Fourth, perseverance in the work undertaken.

"Take care of your business and your business will take care of you," is an old saying. But says the unsuccessful farmer: "Farming is over-done. Over-production is the cause of my downfall." Let us see.

"How many acres of land have you here?" "I am the owner of over 200 acres, and at one time was out of debt, but now the mortgage will soon close in upon me, and the farm is gone."

"Over production, you claim, is the cause of your failure?" "Yes," "How many bushels of wheat is the usual yield per acre, on this farm?" "About twelve." "Of corn?" "O, perhaps twenty-five or thirty." "Oats?" "Well, about twenty-five." "How much hay?" "O, I raise a little timothy, for the horses during seeding. I have not raised any clover for a good many years. It don't pay." "How about the potato crop?" "I buy our potatoes. For years the bugs destroyed the vines, and so I quit trying to raise them."

"Are your hogs and sheep doing well this year?" "I have neither hogs or sheep on the farm. They consume more than they are worth to any man, every year he keeps them." "What farm paper do you take this year?" "I do not take any. I don't believe in book farming, with all their new fangled notions. I farm just as father taught me years ago." "Poor man. You can never teach him anything more. Let us take a walk over this man's 200-acre farm and see if we can learn the cause of his failure. As we pass out for a stroll over his broad acres, we enter his front barn yard, and find fully exposed to all the frosts, and heat, and the destroying elements that 263 days can bring upon them, all the implements of husbandry necessary for the running of this farm, except the binder. Where can this be? Out in a forty-acre field, just where he finished cutting his oats. As we pass out of the barn yard, we enter the orchard, and as we go along we see something lying near an apple tree that stands close to a large stack of wheat straw, threshed last July. "Neighbor, I thought you had no sheep. Then what is that lying at the roots of that apple tree?" "I do not know; let us go and see." As we near the object we discover, it is a grain sack filled with something. The farmer hastily unties the sack and nervously counts out fifty sacks, that last August this farmer bought and had never used. "There," said he, "are the sacks that we missed when we began to thresh." This farmer, for years, has selected his seed wheat from grain threshed from the shock, not knowing that wheat is as susceptible of injury from heat as corn from cold. He selects his seed potatoes from a small growth, not having learned that an eye of a potato is but the outer end of a branch which, like a branch of a tree, reach back to the center, and that the larger the potato the larger and stronger the branch, if properly cut and out from the center, thereby adding strength and a more vigorous growth to the new plant that is impossible to procure from a small growth of seed. He also neglects to properly care for his seed corn in the fall, thinking he can do so well to take it from the crib, in the spring, when needed, not knowing that twenty or less below zero will destroy its germs, if in a damp condition when they frozen. The consequence of this neglect and ignorance is this: His corn crop is a failure and now, at the end of years of unprofitable farming, the farmer exclaims "Over-production and bad luck is the cause of my ruin." Is it bad luck or bad management that this farmer is struggling against?

Brother farmers, could we more fully realize the fact that there is yet room nearer the top for better and more successful farming, it would add new strength and vigor to our life. There is room at the top for more farmers to stand where Solon Robinson once stood.

Regular Democratic Trick.

For low-down, contemptible meanness the democracy can carry off the cake basket every time. Chairman Springer's committee on ways and means Tuesday adopted the tariff bills for free wool, free binding twine, and free cotton ties. The free traders at the same time notified the minority that their report must be adopted on Tuesday night by Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania is ill and unable to take the entire burden devolves upon Mr. Burrows to prepare the report in secret Tuesday afternoon. The tariff party's meanness comes in sight here. The democrats well knew Mr. Burrows had long been contemplating a trip to Michigan next week and was Tuesday afternoon he was to deliver an address at the Michigan club banquet Monday night. They have spoiled the trip by giving him but this short time to make his report. And again the democrats know that Mr. Burrows is the only man in Washington at present to do this important work as the representative of the entire republican party of the nation, and they have used every means of judgment by limiting him as to time, but Mr. Burrows will surprise these crafty demagogues on Tuesday next.—Lansing Republican.

The opponents of local option in Eaton county have found irregularities in their proceedings sufficient to prevent the election which has been called for February 25.

A years days ago Robert Brown, of Grand Rapids, was a prosperous miller with a handsome wife and happy home. Now he is an inmate of the Kalamazoo asylum and the handsome wife died last night in a free hospital. Whisky for two.

An Ashley girl, passing a barber shop the other day, thought she saw her favorite beau getting shaved. Opening the door she thrust her head into the shop and whispered a few endearing epithets. When the bearded and astonishing face of a stranger was turned she shrieked and fled precipitately down street.

Mrs. Alfreda Hodgkins began a $10,000 suit against the city of Kalamazoo today for damages inflicted in a runaway caused by her horse falling into a ditch left by street paving. It is claimed no warning lights were displayed, and that the electric light was not yet lighted. The evening was sufficiently dark to prevent Mrs. Hodgkins from seeing the condition of the street.

Two young married women of Manistee compared notes, concluded that they were tired of conjugal bliss, and struck out for Chicago. At Holland they were overtaken by one of the deserted husbands, and the wife weakened and returned with him. The other woman concluded her husband didn't care enough for her to come after her and setting her face resolutely to the south, went on alone.

Cadillac has recently acquired a big propeller whistle and an ordinance. When the whistle sounds, which will be at 8 p. m., the ordinance goes into effect, and all children must scurry to their homes or the marshal will lead them to the orphanage. The Earl of keeping children away from temptations after dark has also caught on at Stanton and Lakeview, and when parents realize that a child can learn more sin in a single hour on the street after dark than a Sunday school can eradicate in a year, there will be a general movement all along the line of Michigan villages. Sin, once acquired by a child, may not be practiced, but it can never be forgotten.—Detroit Free Press.

One of the things which every property owner should do is to familiarize himself with the conditions of his insurance policy. That this is important is evidenced by a decision of the supreme court which was handed down last Monday. In this case the insured lost a dwelling house by fire upon which a $400 policy was carried. The company was notified at once, but proofs of loss were not furnished within 30 days as required by the printed conditions of the policy. The company refused payment and suit was brought in the circuit court to recover. The loss itself was not disputed, but the company claimed it was not liable for the amount because the requirement referred to was not complied with by the loser, and judgment was rendered in favor of the company. The case was appealed to the supreme court and that tribunal affirmed the decision of the lower court, stating that every policy holder is presumed to be familiar with its provisions. Read your insurance policy and then comply with its provision if you desire protection in case of loss.—Dowaglaa Times.

BURIED IN SLIDING SAND.

While a gang of men from Sandwick were working on Champlain street, near the corner of the new building, a sand pit, was thrown and buried in his shoulders by a landslide on a face of sand some thirty feet high. In spite of very exact and emphatic directions as to how to proceed with his back to the bank and his barrow between him and the exit. The falling sand buried the barrow, and the man's right leg was bound fast over the left hand. The other leg hands ran to the rescue, and the man was rescued by the barrow, and delivering the man's right leg, could not move him an inch. The danger was that more sand might slide and bury his victim alive, for there were already cracks in the sand visible and one or two huge boulders which might come down any moment. The boulders had just been disclosed by the sand slide.

It was soon apparent that without much delay the man would certainly perish by exhaustion or be smothered. The neighbors were raised. Among the new comers was Daniel Lee, of the beach who afterward said he had once seen a man buried in a well and by some means he was able to get out. He dared to have a plan where an error might cost the trapped man his life and perhaps the lives of others, he was called to direct. First of all he was to dig a hole in the sand, and to place from the top and carefully placed some three or four feet above the man below, and between him and the sand face, and across the sand bank.

Then he ordered planks to be sawed across the hole, and the man was to be placed upright inside the horizontal plank and facing in and toward the bank and a man to hold each plank steady and to stand to it if another slide came. He then ordered short oak planks to be laid across the hole, and above the upright line of planks, to catch and stop the sand which momentarily was sitting down. The whole structure was then braced at each end by a heavy plank, and a man to hold each sort of shield. Then, with the men holding the planks, the others tried to dig the man out. His left foot and lower trunk seemed held as in a vise. A shovelful of sand taken out seemed instantly replaced by the sand sitting down from the hill. Hands were thrust instead of shovels and some stones under him removed. But it was slow, hideous work for the strongest men. And came the crisis.

The rafter's right hand above with the pine-logs it was moving—was sliding down. A shout among the men to hold fast—a second or two of the terrible drift of earth—a second shout—and the deadly man was free. The plank barrier so far had saved. But the man in peril had now been some four hours in a situation, the peril of which he knew, not expecting, as he afterward said, boys, that they had been carried home a box, and though bearing up bravely, was very much exhausted. He must be released speedily or perish. Of all traps, sand under such conditions is the most relentless we ever saw. The men were ordered to get a man to pull the man out failed. A new way was suggested by Mr. David Ellis.

A strong rope from one of the bog screens was brought. A stray woman's shawl, left by some chamberlaine, was used as a rope. The man was found and the sharpness of the rope against the man's flesh in hauling, the rope was fastened tight under his shoulders and arms, as God willed, with strong men pressing him back and forth, and the sand hill settling down every moment, the man was pulled out, not a scratch! The place where the man lay four hours in deadly peril was the next day covered by the four feet of sand.—Cape Cod Independent.

An Ancient Bog Bath.

Remains of ancient bog baths or sweat houses still exist on the island of Rathlin, on the northeast coast of County Antrim, Ireland. The Rev. D. B. Mulcahy describes one he visited on the farm of Widow McCurdy, in the townland of Knocknash, Mrs. McCurdy said she had used it fifty years ago, and that it had been used by the islanders from time immemorial. A heap of ashes lay outside the doorway showing it had formerly been heated by a fire.

Mrs. McCurdy said further that previous to a bath a fire was kindled inside, and when it was sufficiently heated the ashes were swept out. The people came to be cured of rheumatism. There was a large tub to let out the smoke and admit light. A stool or a saw on the floor was used to sit or stand upon in a stooping posture.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Aurist's Prescription for Earache.

"I am afraid I have greatly interfered with my own practice," said a celebrated aurist, "by giving the following advice to many of my friends: At the first symptoms of earache let the patient get on the knees and put the palm of the right hand over the ear; then take a teaspoon full of the ear with warm water. Continue doing this for fifteen or twenty minutes; the water will fill the ear orifice and flow over on the towel. Afterward turn over the head, let the water run out and plug the ear with warm glycerin and cotton. This may be done every hour until relief is obtained. It is an almost invariable cure, and has saved many cases of acute inflammation. The water should be quite warm, but not too hot."—London Tit-Bits.

What One Man Saw.

Blake, a distinguished English painter, who was liable to disordered sensations, described a fairy funeral which he saw in the night. He was walking in his garden one night, when he apparently heard a low and pleasant sound, and at length saw a procession of creatures of the size and color of grasshoppers bearing a body laid out on a coffin. They were dressed in white and then disappeared.—Youth's Companion.

LAST Tuesday evening, while training the ponies, Mr. Rob Blake's collar bone was broken by one of the ponies falling upon him. Dr. Bailey reduced the fracture. BURT F. BAILEY was drawing Mr. Stryker's children in a small express wagon, Saturday, and slipped and fell, spraining his knee. He cannot walk without the aid of crutches.

A BARBER at Sawyer uses chloroform when his razors get dull.—Star. He will do to go along with the dentist who pulls teeth without pain. No pain to the dentist. MR. GOTTEL KOOL sold a dressed hog to O. S. Tourje, Tuesday, that weighed 305 pounds. If any farmer in this section has raised a heavier one we would like to have him report.

A DETROIT dispatch in the Kalamazoo Telegraph says Roscoe Dix of Berrien Springs is talked of for the nomination for Representative in Congress in this district. C. a few days ago since, while suffering from an attack of the grippe.

THE Era thinks Mr. Dallin's great railroad and steel plant scheme too large to be realized. Perhaps the lack in the Era's realizing capacity is where the trouble lies. A correspondent in the Palladium thus speaks of these workers: "Rev. Klump, who evidently won the confidence of the people from the first, has met with a hearty welcome and the people of this church feel grateful to God for sending to us one so able, devoted and faithful in the cause of Christ to help us in this our time of need. Owing to the demands of his own congregation at Buchanan he will be unable to be with us again before next week. However, his place will be ably supplied by Rev. J. A. Frye, presiding elder of this district, who will conduct the services during the absence of brother Klump."

THE box social held at Geo. W. Rough's on Monday night, Feb. 22, under the auspices of the Sylvia Chapter, No. 74, O. E. S., was a grand success. It being leap year, the gentlemen furnished the boxes, and the ladies did the bidding, which was very fair, getting for the treasury, about $15.00.

ACCORDING to the Palladium there is a full sized healthy kick in Benton Harbor because Circuit Court Commissioner W. C. Hicks, reduced Lewis Robb's bail to $3,500, after Justice Plummer had decided that it should be $7,000. Such acts are not common, to say the least. When this is compared with the bail of $7,500 required of Frank Wh'eman of this place, in a suit for damages, it appears somewhat ridiculous.

THE coroner's jury, in the case of John Harrison, the deaf man who was killed in the yard at Benton Harbor, on Monday, by being run over by a locomotive, returned the verdict because Harrison did not hear him whistle.—Detroit Free Press. Two Minden City ladies who were weary of waiting agreed to propose leap year matrimony to the man they loved best, and they did. A Creswell bachelor received both letters. He would like to accept both offers, but is afraid it will lead to trouble.—Detroit Free Press.
