She crept away by herself and sat down, feeling, in spite of her efforts to conquer the sensation, hurt and sore at heart. It was nothing, she told herself; she surely didn't care what Mr. Lewis thought about her, or said, either. And then came a sigh as she thought he did not care for her, or he could never have ridiculed her in any way, even to his sister. And then, though she was not vain, she had always looked upon her hair as a sacred birthright bestowed by her dead mother, and had ever associated the beautiful constellation "Berenice" with thoughts of her mother in heaven: a childish fancy, but it had clung to her as childish fancies will cling to us

That night, before retiring, she braided her hair in two long braids, and in the morning she combed it out and left it flowing, only drawn away from her forehead, and banded by a

The traiding had made it wavy, and it fell in bright, heavy golden ripples, like a mantle of "cloth of gold," far below her waist. Fred smiled, half triumphantly, when he saw it.

Berry observed his peculiar smile, and the wrath appeared on her cheeks. "I wonder if I am wearing my heart u on my sleeve?" she asked herself. And then she told herself, in a little comforting whisper, "Wait."

Not long afterward Fred sat down to the table and began writing letters. Presently Berry came flying into the hair in the same style, and all the morning Fred was on the bokout for another hos'ile attack. None came, however. In the afternoon they went out to have a row upon the lake. After rowing awhile Fred rested his arms and his oars at the same time, under the pretence that it was nicer to fluat slowly along. He took out a cigar and lighted it saying he must make the most of it, for it was his last. He asked for some music while he puffed away, and the girls began a vocal duet.

In the midst of the song Berry took versation.

"I'm tired of this one sided warfare!" he said to himself, reflectively. "Of course I take a lively interest in it, wondering what she will do next; and then she's sure to act when I'm entirely off my guard. I believe l'il surrender at once and throw myself upon the mercy of the enemy!"

she had promised to read aloud to Mrs. Eaton, she passed into the house. Berry was about to follow her, but Fred came quickly forward. "Berenice, will you never forgive me for that unlucky speech?" he said

"To what speech do you refer, Mr. Lewis? I was not aware that you were an orator." "You cannot help knowing what I mean!" he cried. "And you are still unforgiving, though I acknowledge it was both ungentlemanly and unkind." She was silent for a moment, a hush seemed to hover over her, whether from anger or excess of emotion he

I know you love each other, and yet you never agree upon any subject." Leaving Fred to ponder on her words she went into the hotel to try and comfort Berry, and succeeded so well that before many minutes had elapsed the two girls came out together. Berry was anxious to show Fred how indifferent she was, and the starlight told no tales of the evidences of tears. "Come, Fred," said Nora, "don't sit musing by yourself; it's awfully dull this evening." S) she gradually drew them into conversation, and then withdrew to the opposite end of the terrace, making an excuse to listen to some singing in the adjacent rooms; and Fred, without losing a moment of time, began the con-yeastion where it left off before. "Berry," he said softly, "cannot you see how wretched I m? Do forgive me!" he entreated.

"Hush!" she exclaimed, under her breath. "Nor: will hear what you are saying"-her heart all in a flutter. "Whatever you may think of what I have done and said," he continued, dropping his voice a little for her sake, "I love you dearly-dearly. And"here a little strategy crept in-"it almost drives me wild to know you dislike me so much "

"I -I didn't say I disliked you!" And she seemed so troubled, Fred drew nearer and passed his hand caressingly over her flowing hair. "But I know you do!"—still clinging to artifice, since its use resulted favor-

"In the White Pine Mountains, the Toyabi, the Hyko, and the Pahranagat ranges it is quite common to see the trees, houses, and everything out in the valleys gradually ascends up the mountain side, and, becoming crystallized, the minute crystals attach themselves to anything in sight. This phenomenon affects human beings in just the same manner, and when the fog passes by, the frozen particles will adhere to there. Light Food Before Retiring. The value of a light gruel or other food just before retiring is not generally appreciated. People who enjoy a night supper are quite apt to do it surreptitiously, as if they were doing something which was not quite proper from a hygienic point of view. As a matter of fact, however, when the powers of the body have been taxed beyond the usual hours of retiring food is necessary. It should not be heavy food, of course, such as will induce restlessness or a leading sleep full of unhappy nightmares, but light, wholesome food taken just before retiring. This is a very excellent thing for women of a delicate, nervous physique, who are inclined to sleepless-

A great many people who eat sparingly at their meals require such food as this before they retire, and require also a cup of coffee before they rise in the morning, and such extra food will do more to build up their strength than a dozen tonics. A great deal of sleeplessness is said by physicians to be caused by an unconscious craving for food, which a light broth at bedtime will satisfy.—N. Y.

A correspondent of the Newcastle Chronicle described a striking scene he witnessed in the breaking up of the Gothenburg City, on St. Mary's Island, coast of Northumberland, I was one of a party that went on board that illfated vessel a few days before she broke up and saw a sight to be remembered. I shall never forget it. To all appearance, as we approached her, the vessel might have been sailing comfortably out of harbor, save for the absence of any apparent life on board of her. But we had no sooner put foot on deck than we were immediately attacked in such a manner that such of us as had got on board had to make tracks for the rigging, while the rest fell back into the boats. Rats! I never saw so many in my life, and never hope to again. Great, hungry, lanky lean looking rats, many of them with their tails chewed off, swarmed up from below in never-ending thousands, squealing over one another in a manner sickening and horrible to behold. particularly to those of us up in the rigging. At last we cut off some loose ropes, knotted them into convenient lengths, and so armed we descended and attacked the rodents, and eventually succeeded in beating a passage to our boat. Any one would have supposed that they knew by instinct the impending fate of the vessel, for they no sooner saw us over the side than they began to swarm down the ropes and try to enter the boat, and it was only with difficulty we were able to beat them off before casting the boat clear; and they squeaked in a horrible manner in their augush and mad frenzy as we rowed away from the vessel's side. They were too far both from the island and the main land to swim to shore. Smoke Turned Into Money.

In bis inaugural address to the North-East Coast Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders the other day, Mr. Wigham Richardson referred to the chemical treatment of smoke He said: "We know how the heated nitrogen and the carbon oxides, which used to be belched from the blast furnaces, are now used to raise steam in the boilers which supply the blowing engines; but Mr. Lunwig Mond, of the firm Brundder, Mond & Co.-the same who has introduced the Solway process for making soda, and in so doing has hit many of our friends so hardhas, as I understand, gone much further. He burns his coals with artifificial draught, and, conveying the gases into a chamber, he washes them with water spray, which causes every particle of soot or smoke to be de posited, and at the same time condenses and recovers the ammonia (a product of nitrogen and hydrogen) as well as the sulphurous fumes. I trust that I have not misundrstood Mr. Mode's figures; but I gather that to men do. get an equal efficiency of steam-raising power ne has to burn 125 tons of coa in place of 100 tons, and for every 125 tons of coal burned he recovers four

In response to a letter of inquiry, Supervisor Jud. Peck, of Niles, has received the following reply, which was published in the Niles Sun and will be of interest here. It was through the effort of Representative Aleshire that the law exempting the mortgages of Building and Loan Associations from taxation was passed and now comes this opinion that another law passed by the last legislature repealed it. There is no decent reason why these associations should be any more exempt from tax than any other money

JUDSON A. PECK, Esq., Supervisor, Niles, Mich., Dear Sir:—Your favor, asking whether mortgages owned by loan associations should be deducted from the assessed valuation of the real estate, is received.

It is my opinion that, by reason of the enactment of the present tax law which provides that all laws inconsistent with that act shall be repealed and which makes real estate mortgages for the purpose of taxation a part of the real estate, the law of 1889, exempting real estate mortgages held by loan associations, would be repealed: and such mortgages should be taxed corporations. Respectfully, A. A. ELLIS, Attorney General.

At the meeting of the Common Council, Friday evening, a petition from the ministers and others was presented, asking for the passing of an ordinance prohibiting the licensing of saloons in this place, as is provided for by the village charter. There is nothing peculiar about the above, but when coupled with the fact that the ones who presented it knew before doing so that the council could not do anything of the kind, so as to be effective as against saloon business for this year, because of lack of time to act upon the petition before the liquor bonds must be approved, it somewhat obscures the the meaning of the above. It succeeded in causing the members of the council to record themselves on the question, although there was no necessity for their doing so. Perhaps that was the meaning of the petition. Perhaps it was intended to give some one something to talk about. If either, it was successful. Following is the petiliquors in said village. Your petitioners further respectfully pray that your honorable body, in connection with said ordinance and in aid thereof, absolutely refuse to approve any and all liquor bonds which may be submitted to you for approval by any person or persons whatever. The undersigned then most earnestly request the co-operation of your honorable body, in their effort to protect the morals of the community against the Trustee Dodd moved that the prayer of the petitioners be granted. This was seconded by Trustee Reynolds. The vote stood yeas, Dodd, Reynolds and Beistle; nays, Richards, Sanders, Morris and President Rough. Mr. Rough changed his vote to yea and proceeded to other business without announcing the vote. After a few minutes Trustee Beistle changed his vote to nay, and the vote was announced. The action of Village Councils in suppressing the sale of liquor, or the approval of bonds, is governed by the

Also: A dealer's bond must be executed and approved before the first day of May: and a village council will not be excused from approving it, by the passage of an ordinance taking effect after that day prohibiting saloons in the village.—Warner vs. Lawrence, 62

These sections define pretty clearly just what a council may do and may not do, and by the latter it will be seen that the council could not, if it felt disposed, grant the prayer of these petitioners, to take effect before the first of next May.

HERE is a picture from the Kalamazoo Telegraph, which will be painfully familiar to many in Buchanan and Niles:

It was given out here that a friend of Henry went to Battle Creek a few days ago and ar- ties, was presented. ranged for the match, which was to be a "square deal" to test the merit of the two men as sprinters. Yesterday, after arriving at Battle Creek, a certain man, more honorable than the rest, gave the scheme away to the Kalamazoo boys, who had been "roped in" and had $1,000 ready to put up against a pool of $1,000, made up by Battle Creek sports. The plan had been cleverly laid and had it been carried out Kalamazoo admirers of Henry would have come home "broke." It was discovered that Dell Cook and William Henry were professional runners, and that places by working in collusion together. Henry is said to be one Huff, who played a sharp game of the same nature and "fleeced" the people of Buchanan out of $800 some time ago. A few days ago a friend of Henry placed $250 in the hands of a banker at Battle Creek as a guarantee that Henry would lose the race, and in case he should win the money was to go to Battle Creek parties. Acting on this the Battle Creek parties who were in on the deal prepared to "take in" the Kalamazoo sports. The race was run at the driving park and all of the Kalamazoo men were warned and only four refused to take heed. One man bet $40, another $10, and two others $2.50 each. The runners made two false starts as a bluff, and at the signal made a good race until the finish, when Henry (or Huff) slacked and allowed Cook to pass and win by a few inches. It is understood that the same parties have arranged to work the game at Three Rivers in a short time. Henry did not return with the crowd of his admirers (?) last night.

The numerous creditors of the Berren Centre forger, are offered 25 per cent., but are waiting for better terms or nothing. That one so genial, kind, sociable, friendly, and so universally esteemed, has fallen so low, fills our hearts with sorrow which nothing earthly can heal, and yet, while we sorrow for the fallen man, and deeply sympathize with the grief-stricken family, our verdict is that Samuel, the forger, is guilty, and should suffer the penalty of the act.

Regarding Jim as efficient, worthy and deserving, his many friends all over the county are anxious to honor him with their hearty support, hence the frequent mention of his name for the position.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Emma Peck and little daughter Blanch will leave us and move to Buchanan. We are reconciled to the change, only through the hope that their interests will be better subserved by the removal.

Does Its Own Talking. "The tariff is doing its own talking," said Governor KcKinley. It is a happy aphorism that may do good service during the campaign.

The tariff is doing a great deal of talking on its own behalf. It is saying, for example; "here's your sugar, twenty pounds for a dollar; used to be 8 cents a pound before I went to work upon it." Or, "here are your American-made carpets, really and truly as good in juality and as elegant in design as any of foreign make, and they are selling as cheaply in Chicago as English carpets of like quality sell in London. The free traders told you that the tariff would make carpets dearer, but you see they didn't know anything about it; they are cheaper than ever!" Or it says 'inst look in the store windows, just read the advertisements in the newspapers, and see what I am doing for The free traders told you that dry goods and clothing would be 'dearer on account of the tariff, but you remember what you paid for a dress or a suit of clothes a year ago, and you know what you would have to pay for articles of like quality to-day; I have not made them dearer, rather cheaper.' Thus tariff talks on its own behalf.

Two years ago a well-informed pro tectionist wrote a series of papers for The Inter Ocean and called them "tariff talks," but to day there is very little need that any one should talk on behalf of the tariff, Nowadays, as the Governor of Ohio truly said, "The tariff is doing its own talking." And very pleasant talk it is for the American wage-earner and the American purchaser of goods.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Tariff Pictures. A year ago the people of Cuba were buying most of their flour from Spain. The receipts of Spanish flour at Havana for the three months ending March 31. 1891, were $5,374 bags. The reciprocity clause of the McKinley tariff took effect as regards Cuba on January 1, 1892. For the quarter ending March 31, 1892, the imports of Spanish flour into Havana were 450 bags, while the amount of American flour sold in Havana increased-from 6,571 bags in January, February and March, 1891, to 101,060 bags in the same months of 1892.—N. ### An Important New Publication.

The issue of "King's United States of Today; a Handbook of all the States and Territories," marks the completion of a great enterprise. It is a marvelous summary of every fact covering the beginning, the growth and especially the present development and resources of each state and territory. Prof. Greenwood, a prominent educator, says it is "the most complete, compact,-solidified, instructive and useful mass of information of all the states and territories that has ever been published." It is commended in similar terms by such men as Pres. Dwight of Yale, Pres. Patton of Princeton. Wm. M. Evarts, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Cardinal Gibbons, and many others. It contains complete maps of every state and territory, and about 3,000 me engravings, showing the chief objects of interest, including grand scenery, chief cities, public buildings, educational institutions, manufactories, etc., etc. These with the array of statistics and vivid, concise narrative, present a glowing picture with pen and pencil of the greatness and glory of our Republic, while the mass of information given is just what is needed for quick reference in every office, store, factory, shop and home in the land. It is sold by subscription, and as the price is only $2.50 it must meet with an immense sale. Agency may be secured by addressing C. H. Beach & Co., Publishers, Lakeside Building,

Practical Reciprocity Results.

For the eight months ending March 1, 1891, the exports from this country to Cuba aggregated in value $2,797,079. For the eight months ending March 1. 1892, under the operations of the new reciprocity treaty, the exports were increased to a valuation of $4,005.168. The principal exports are flour, tallow, lumber and timber, salted and smoked meats, crude and refined petroleum and sewing machines. An increase of sales of these and some minor articles to Cuba, amounting to $1,268,089, in eight months under reciprocity is a practical result of the greatest significance.—N.

ABOUT GOOD CIGARS

YOU CAN READ A MAN FROM THE KIND OF CIGARS HE SMOKES.

Some Familiar Names of Cigars—How Men Act When They Choose and Light the Fragrant Weeds-Characteristics of Do you smoke? If you do, why not, at leisure, have a little chat about cigars, cigarettes and smokers. But I do not advise you to praise the brand you are just now smoking. It is too dark it smells of yesterday's damp atmosphere, its ashes are black as a traitor's

The treasures of Havana, formerly the exclusive enjoyment of the opulent classes, are now within the reach of almost every one, and when crops are short in Cuba, Mexico, Virginia and the Carolinas supply the deficiency. There are cigars of many different titles, most of them highly sounding, like the Spanish hidalgos by whom they were named. There are Cayados, Prenrados, Trabucos, Londres, Regueros, Princessas Caballeros, Crevas, Principes de Galles, Flor Finos, Esparteros, Comerciantes, Cazadores, Medias, Regalias, Simples, Regalias de la Reina, Jenny Lind, Adelina Patti, Divina Sarah, Imperiales, Imperadores, Conchas, Bolivar, Libertadores, Conquistadores, etc.

It is for the "connoisseurs" to exercise their preferences and to contend for the very best. There are degrees in tobacco as in wine, and the Havana brand has its pedigree as has Chateau Yquem and Chambertin.

The "Figaro" or the "Henry Clay" has each its peculiar aroma. In the kingdom of tobacco as in the empire of love, among eigars as among women, there is always the eternal and inevitable rivalry between the blond and the brunette, the dark and the light, the strong and the mild; but in the smoking world, as elsewhere, if the brunettes are generally strong the blonds are not always mild.

HOW SOME MEN SMOKE. A true smoker must never select a moist cigar, but at the same time he must not take a too dry one. As the Latin philosopher said, "In medio tutis-

The supreme felicity of the smoker depends also in great measure upon the manner in which he lights his cigar. To verify its peculiar aroma one has first to draw the smoke through the nose. To recognize a regular smoker is an easy task-his lips always betray him. The man who resolutely puts his cigar deeply in his mouth is a firm, decided man of action, quick in movement, perhaps brusque, but generally good hearted. The youngster who cuts the end of the cigar with the teeth is rather insouciant. careless of future dental sufferings. The baldheaded young man who calls for a penknife to cut the end of the cigar is a man judicious in council. methodical in his ways and well bal-

The one who places his cigar in an amber holder is recherche in his tastes and stylish in his habits. The man who holds it with a silver clasp is a dude. The man fond of light shaded cigars is fond of the ballet, light performances, Offenbach music, comic opera and shepherdesses in water colors. He is also probably fond of fishing and boating, is generally romantic and is considered as passionate waltzer.

LIGHT AND DARK SMOKERS. The one who prefers dark shaded cigars may be supposed a daring and fortunate gambler, an audacious and successful lover, rather fond of Leonold Robert and Regnaut's vivid pictures and Verdi's music; he is partial to racing and wild hunting. The man who buys his cigars without examination and only because they are tied in packages with ribbons perfumed by the Cuban peddler's wife is of confiding disposition, presumably an obedient husband and a credulous stockholder. The one who smokes his cigar almost to the end is by all means a persevering character, a faithful friend and a constant lover; the one who throws it away when only half smoked is blase.

The man who allows it to extinguish itself often and lights it again is absentminded, thoughtful but indulgent, a good fellow, inclined to tolerance, taking men for what they are, women for what they are not; taking times as they come, he lets the stream of life flow gently by. The "connoisseur" must be very care ful when cigars show little yellow spots. If spots appear in consequence of unequal drying, the cigar is horrid. If made by small worms, the brand is generally exquisite, as worms prefer to attack the best flowers, the best fruits.

The Original Silhouette. The name silhouette was derived from Etienne de Silhouette, a French minister of finance in 1759, who introduced several parsimonious fashions during his administration called a la Silhouette, a name which continued to be applied to the black profile portraits. Silhouettes were executed in various ways. One of the simplest is that of tracing the outlines of a shadow's profile thrown on a sheet of paper, and then reducing them to the required size either by the eye or by means of a pantograph. The camera obscura and camera lucida are also occasionally used for the purpose.— Mechanical News.

of congressman, or any other officer. THREE years ago Mr. Doersam was killed, in Niles, by a flagstone in a sidewalk breaking and letting him fall into a cellar with the stone on top of him. His widow brought suit for $5,000 damages, in the U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids, and last week the case was settled by the city paying to Mrs. Doersam and her children $1,000, each party paying his own costs. In this case a man's life cost the city $1,000, while Buchanan, at the end of a suit, was made to pay $3,000 for a scratch on a woman's leg.

A FEW months since Benton Harbor came before the board of supervisors and asked to have the question of removal of the county seat to Benton Harbor submitted to a vote, and offered three lots valued at $1,500, boom value, on the "middle ground" between the two cities. There is on file in the probate office, at this time, a schedule of real estate, in which these same three lots are valued at $1 for the three lots. There is no telling what a real healthy boom will do for prices, on paper. This schedule was made by appraisers for an estate since the county seat question was discussed.

THE installation services of Rev. O. J. Roberts, as Pastor of the Presbyterian church at Buchanan, occurred on Tuesday evening, May 3. Rev. W. W. Wells presided and asked the constitutional questions; the Rev. J. G. Lowrie, of Niles, preached the sermon from Acts 5: 20; the Rev. J. G. Inglis, Woodlawn Park, Chicago, charged the Pastor, and the Rev. Geo. E. Hunt. South Englewood, Chicago, charged the people. The services were of a very interesting character throughout, the tine music by the choir and the floral decorations by the ladies adding much to the interest and pleasure of the oc-

PROF. BURTON & Co's. Equine and Canine Carnival will open in Buchanan about the 23d of this month. Prof. Burton is now in Buchanan and his tent will arrive today or tomorrow and be set up that the seats may be painted and the whole interior arranged for performances. They have two cars, a Pullman palace car and a property car in which to travel from point to point, and the whole show is arranged in first-class style. An interesting episode is reported from Galien this week. It seems that Elmer E Day, at one time a citizen of this place, had, since moving to South Bend from here, separated from his wife but not divorced, and had been discovered by her at Galien working in Redden Bros. grist mill, and living with another woman who claimed, to his wife, to have been married to him. His wife No. 1, after satisfying herself of the condition of affairs, came to Prosecuting Attorney Roe for a warrant for their arrest for bigamy, but before the warrant was forthcoming Day suddenly left for a more healthful climate, and took pains to not leave very many tracks.

MR. HENRY OSLER, of Niles, gardner for the Michigan Central, is here with his helpers to make the contemplated changes and improvements about the passenger house. The lots on the west and east ends of the passenger house are to be sodded, and laid out in flower beds. The bus and express stands will be changed to the north side of the building, the roadway set out to the north line of the company's grounds, and a door and passageway for the expressman cut through from the north side into the baggage room. Mr. Osler gives as his opinion that all walks about the company's grounds about the passenger house will be made of cement, and the whole property made as pleasant and tasty in its surroundings as a first-class residence. This will be pleasing news

Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., So Characterizes a Prominent Editor Who Prostitutes the Power of the Press and Panders to Vice and Municipal Corruption. NEW YORK, May 1.—Before his sermon in Association hall this morning, Mr. Dixon reviewed the subject of the vicious tendencies of a certain class of American newspapers. He said: There are to be found black sheep in nearly every fold. So American journalism has its Black Cat. The animal seems to have grown in size of late. The unusual amount of rich offal seized by it as food in the anomalous temporary developments of our political and social life doubtless accounts for this growth. The development of such a monstrosity is a serious and interesting fact.

The position of an editor of a newspaper of today is as solemn a trust as that of a minister of the Gospel. The press, in fact, has absorbed many of the functions of the minister of religion. The responsibilities of such a position are greater because the number of lives directly effected is greater. He has the power to poison the minds and unnerve the arms of tens of thousands daily with hatred, lies, slanders and appeals to the basest instincts of the animal, or to lift the world from the slumber of the night to the duties of a new day in the arms of love, truth, courage, hope and faith.

THE MODERN JUDAS. There is no man of modern times who speaks with such supreme power as he who dictates the management of a great newspaper. The secret of the power to bless or the power to damn the life of man is his.

He is the minister of the most high God charged with keeping the sacred fires of truth burning along the world's highways that sweep through darkness into the infinite and eternal.

He who betrays this solemn trust is the Judas Iscariot of modern times. For, charged with the life of those to whom he ministers, he betrays innocence and weakness for the sake of filthy gain. Charged with protecting the wayfarer, he is the friend of highwayman and assassin. I wish we could say that no such paper throws its accursed shadows across our daily life. But we have them. We certainly have at least one conspicuous example in New York, and there are many smaller lights that trim their lamps by its standards. It is the evil genius in fact that, with its single red eye, has thrown its spell over thousands of bright minds. What are the simple facts in the history of this journal which finds its way even into many Christian homes in our midst? It is a great daily Police Gazette. Crime, slander, scandal and criminal "sport" are the staple. These fill the choicest positions. The record of a prize fight takes are ecedence over the words any statesman or philanthrop anst.

THE FRIEND OF CRIME. This paper poses as the exponent of civic and political virtue. The record of its columns shows that it has been the friend and public champion of nearly every great thief and scoundrel who has figured in the disgrace of New York during the past generation. It even proposed to canonize its ideal statesman. William M. Tweed, before his death, But Mr. Tweed left his country for his country's good before they had time to make the cast of his image for the ped-

During this period it has sought to assassinate the character of every great man, upon whose success its malignant eye has rested, if it dared. And there are but few things in this line it has not dared. The greatest compliment ever paid a distinguished president of the United States is that this editor hates him so intensely that he publicly curses him every day in the year. Future generations, therefore, even more than his own, will "love him for the enemies he has made." To be praised by such a power is to be damned. To be cursed and slandered by it is a sure index to honesty, integrity, worth, manhood. AN INTELLECTUAL PROSTITUTE.

It poses as the friend of the workingman, and in every battle for life and progress it is found on the side of the strong against the weak. It is the self styled defender of womanhood, and yet fills its news columns with such unutterable filth that no decent woman can touch it without contamination. Its news is gathered with consummate skill and edited with unquestioned genius. It is therefore the most brilliant example we have of a shameless, intellectual prostitute.

It has much to say on religion. It champions ultra-orthodoxy, knowing that its readers have long since abandoned such positions, hoping thus to destroy the faith of man and deceive the feeble minded.

A BRILLIANT SUNFLOWER. It studies the brightest dreams of the social and religious reformer, that with the hot breath of materialism it may blast every aspiration of man for a larger and fuller life.

In other words, to change the figure, it is the most brilliant sux-flower that blossoms today in the dung heap of modern civilization. Its color is as gorgeous as its perfume is fetid. Its roots take hold upon the saloon, the gambling hell, the dive, the brothel, and from them draws their richest life. When the streets and sewers of our civic life are flushed with pure water it will disappear with the filth from which it sprang.

It is unnecessary to mention the name of this paper. If you have ever seen it you will recognize it from this description. If you have never seen it you are fortunate, and I have no desire to introduce you to vice.

Suffice it to say, Christian men and women, you should no more take such a sheet into your home than you would tear the festering rags from the dead body of a leper and wrap them around the body of a newborn babe.

WHY WE KNOW THAT JESUS ROSE FROM THE DEAD.

God, having of old time spoken unto the fathers in the prophets by divers portions and in divers manners, hath at the end of these days spoken unto us in his son, whom he appointed heir of all things.—Hebrews i, 1, 2.

We have seen that the morality of the Bible is its final morality, and that the sum of this moral teaching is found in Jesus Christ. The Bible and the Bible tlone is the religion of Protestants, because the Bible records for us the life of Jesus Christ. We have just celebrated the most joyous festival in the calendar of the Christian year. We have proclaimed in song and prayer that he has risen. In notes of joy and triumph we have celebrated this the gladdest event in the history of the human race. This note of joy and of triumph over the resurrection of Christ is in perfect harmony with the early thought of the followers of Christ. Early Christianity was pitched in the key of highest joy person of Christ. The disciples were swept for the moment outside of themselves by the overwhelming joy of the thought that Jesus-their Friend, their Saviour, their Master-whom they had thought dead, had risen again. Their hearts leap with gladness, with inex-

in the person of Christ. They were not pohic adherents or admirers. They were friends, followers, lovers of his person. They rejoiced because their master and friend had risen. "CHRISTIANITY IS CHRIST."

A short time ago we are told that a great apostle of positivism astonished the world by declaring that he had been a Christian in his youth and had given up Christianity. He then proceeded with the utmost simplicity to disclose that by being a Christian in his youth he meant that when he was a boy he held certain metaphysical dogmas regarding the creation of the universe and the nature of the soul. The trouble with the man simply was he never had any Christianity to abandon. A man cannot give up what he has not. No, the fact is that "Christianity is Christ." To be a Christian is to possess the spirit of Christ to partake of his nature, to be a partaker in the most divinely intimate sense of his personality. He is the very essence of Christianity. In him is life and light. He that believeth into Christ is a Christian, and only he who believeth into him, who partakes of his life and purpose, and is thus a personal follower of the person of Christ, can lay any claim to a knowledge of Christianity. And if this personal revelation be thus the essential element of Christianity. around the person of Christ clusters all the great problems of the Christian world and the Christian heart. And before the events of his life we must stand and confront all the questions asked by human philosophy and human science, and men have asked today with bald earnestness the question, "Did he rise from the dead?" With all my soul I believe it. And I believe that every Christian should be able to give a reason for the hope that is in him.

Let us simply review then, this morn ing, briefly the reasons why we know that Jesus Christ did rise from the dead.

We know it. First-From invincible, historic testimony to the fact of his life, crucifixion, death and resurrection. We have historical evidence in the history of the Hebrew race in the first place. The history of Israel is a miracle in the story of humanity. View it from whatever point you please, there is no theory of mere rationalism or of mythology that can explain the simple facts of Jewish history. There is but one sano explanation, and that is that the people of Israel were a chosen people. Their history is unique in the history of mankind. It has no parallel and cannot be interpreted by the ordinary laws under which nations have had their rise and development. THREE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-THREE PROPHECIES FULFILLED. Far back in the past there rose the race of prophets whose language pointed forward to the coming of this mysterious personage. We read the Twenty-second Psalm and find the description of his death. You must leap the chasm of a thousand years from the date of the mat Psalm to find the explanation of its phraseology.

In the Life of Jesus Christ there were fulled three hundred and thirty-three groups of prophecy from the ancient history of the Jews. Three hundred and thirty-three distinct groups of prophetic utterances were fulfilled in his life, and within these separate groups there were smaller groups of specific prophecies which were literally fulfilled, which would raise the possibility of such events happening by chance to such a point that it passes the power of the mind of man to believe such things could happen by chance. And then we have the witness of his followers, who were at first surprised at the thought of his resurrection. They tell the story with the utmost simplicity. Without entering into minute details, without straining for effect, without making any effort to impress the world with its dramatic importance, they stand forth as the simple witnesses of facts which they observe. They declare that during forty days he appeared on distinct occasions, under different circumstances, to different groups of the disciples, on one occasion to as many as five hundred. These facts were proclaimed through the First century of Christianity and remained undisputed. They remained undisputed until centuries afterward, when before them was written the question mark of the skeptic, who had no sympathy for or knowledge of the Christ, or of the truths which he taught, and was therefore utterly incompetent as a critic.

JESUS SAID SO. Second-We know that Jesus rose from the dead, because he said he would rise. It is so because Jesus said so. The witness of such a man is invincible evidence of truth. There are certain tests which render testimony invulnerable. By every such test the word of Jesus stands. In the first place, there is unity and consistency in the whole of his testimony. The story of his life presents a uniform and consistent unfolding of a sublime principle of a kingdom invisible, eternal, which he came to establish on the earth in utter conflict with all the powers of his day. He was perfectly willing to die by that teaching as he had lived by it. And when the hour came he calmly turned his face toward Jerusalem in spite of the protests of his followers, was tried, condemned and crucified.

His behavior on the witness stand, in which his life and truth hung in the balance, stamps his testimony as the essence of truth itself. We judge a witness as to credibility by this test—his behavior. See him, as he stands before the Sanhedrin with his life in his hands, with his life hanging upon the answer that should fall from his lips. The high priest puts to him the Jewish oath and on his oath asks him the question, "Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?" and with every word sealing his life in a death of torture he calmly replied, "I am." And they judged him worthy of death. There is in his demeanor the accent of truth. There is around his personality the atmosphere of truth. When we hear such a man speak, we know by an intuition deeper and truer than any process of reasoning that the truth has been spoken.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S DECISION. We remember the old story of the young woman who asked President Lincoln for a pass through the Federal lines that she might go into the south and see her wounded brother. The papers were made out, and as she was about to depart the president suddenly paused and said to her, "Of course you are loyal?" She hesitated for a moment, her lips quivered, the tears began to gather in her eyes, and turning full upon the president she replied firmly, "Yes, loyal to the heart's core—to Virginia!" The president was surprised; but there was that in her demeanor, in her words, in the character that stamped itself upon her face, and in her response under this supreme crisis, that convinced the president that she could be trusted. Without a moment's hesitation he handed her the papers and she departed on her errand of mercy. It needed no argument to convince him of her sincerity and truth. It was in the accent of her life, it was in the atmosphere that surrounded her personality. A CHILD'S SONG. was confined in a prison in Paris the the center of the great amphitheater. Marchioness de Bonchamps and her little daughter. The little girl approached the judges with much gravity and said, "Citizens, I have come to ask von for mamma's lettres de grace." The judges chatted pleasantly with the child for a few moments and said they would give her the letters if she would sing them her prottiest song. She wanted to please them, and she thought the brightest song she had was one she had heard always gladly applauded, so sho sang it with the greatest enthusiasm. The burden of it was:

HIS GENERAL CHARACTER. Besides, he fulfills every test of a creditable witness in any court of jus-The character that he brings makes him worthy of the highest confidence. His general reputation in the community was that of a prophet, a great and wonderful man of divine ower: some said Jeremiah, some said Isaiah, but the common expression of opinion was that he was a prophet. The testimony of his enemies as to his character is equally explicit. Pilate, the corrupt Roman politician who condemned im to death, said of him, "I find no fault in this righteous man." The executioner charged with carrying out the sentence of the court, who stood on Calvary and watched him die, said of him, "Truly, this was a righteous man!" The testimony of his friends certainly give him the best character. John declared, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world!" Peter said of him, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Judas, who betrayed him for silver, we see rush into the temple and cast down the silver with the despairing cry, "I have be-trayed the innocent blood!" By every test that makes human testimony invincible as to credibility, Jesus meets every requirement. I believe therefore that he rose from the dead because Jesus

THE CALENDAR OF TIME. Third-I believe it and know it because it is the only key "htkaer" ... ma of history. Jesus ... rise changed the calendar of the world. I can understand now Julius Cæsar could make the world's calendar. I can understand how the foremost man of all the worldmaster of Rome and therefore master of the world, with all his powers of genius, clothed in absolute autocracy-I can understand how such a genius could give to the world its calendar. But I cannot understand how a century afterward one condemned as a malefactor, crucified between two thieves, a poor, deserted peasant-I cannot understand how he could change the calendar of Julius Cæsur and reset the history of the world save that he was what he professed to be -the Son of God, and that the grave could not hold his body. Here is a racle in human history that deman explanation. Think of it for a moment and explain it if you can. As the ages lengthen, the more overwhelming becomes the testimony of the ages to the divinity of this unique person. There is no other key that unlocks the mystery of history than this key divine of the cross of Calvary and the broken tomb on the third day. THE CROSS. Take your stand outside the walls of Jerusalem on the day of his death. Toiling up the hill you see him, a frail, friencless peasant, weak in body, unable to bear the cross. They nail him to this cross and lift him between heaven and earth. Here you have an intensely realistic, pathetic scene in human history. Round him stand the Roman soldiers under the edict of the Roman governor of Judea. They are gambling over his garments. The rabble stand by, watch ing the last act of the drama of his life, scoffing or laughing and joining with the high priest in mocking him. He is dying-poor, despised Nazarene, rejected, betrayed by his own chesen friends, deserted by his disciples, who swore to stand by him-his life a failure, going out in apparent darkness and despair. We hear his cries, so weak and helpless, "I thirst." So unutterable in anguish "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" He taught scarcely three years-a man without high culture it. the traditional methods of education, save by the light of the divine law within, poor in this world's goods, the friend of no great man, crucified as a criminal between two thieves. THE CROWN-A FRAUD? Yet come with me a hundred years from that day, and the historian tells us that there is to be found on the face of the earth not a nation or a race or a tribe that gathers at a camp fire, even of a wandering arab, that you do not hear songs and prayers to this Jesus of Nazareth thus crucified. He molds the wills of millions in his own. Martyrs court death for his sake and count it gain. The history of the world is his. The calendar of time is reset to the hour of his birth. There is no history of the world since Calvary except the history of Christianity. Kings baptize their children in his name. The brightest monuments of earth, in gleaming marble with glittering spires, poems of architectural beauty, speak the glory of his name. The cross, the emblem of shame, becomes the symbol of triumph. It has conquered all. The history of Greece and Rome, all the civilizations of the past have flowed into the stream of history from the cross, and in it have been lost. Is there any human explanation of this phenomena of history? The only key that can unlock it is the mystery of the divinity of this lowly man of the people who died under the reign of Tiberius Cæsar and Pontius Pilate. A fraud could not have changed the calendar of Julius Casar. A fraud could not have rewritten the history of the world.

NERO'S TORCHES. The only possible explanation of the triumphs of early Christianity is found in the simple fact that the early Christians were living men whose lives were thrilled and sustained by the touch of a living Christ. The persecutions through which they passed can be accounted for in their last results only by that fact. The prison, the scourge, the torture, were the accompanying events of the everyday history of the Christians through the first centuries. How could these men endure what they did unless sustained by the living touch of the living Christ whose religion they professed? If the history of the Roman arena alone be written and accounted for it would establish the truth of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Down into the sands of the arena they led Christians, 10,000 During the French revolution there | in a day. See the crouching group in They kneel on the sands for a word of prayer, and some old patriarch rises and lifts his voice and thanks the Great Father for the privilege of dying with Christ. Every heart beats in love and in the triumph of martyrdom. The bolts fly back from the cages, and into the arena spring the fierce Numidian lions, gaze upon this group of men, women and children—and then they are torn to shreds. Their mangled bodies are removed, while the sand drinks up the blood and the sea of human-brutes cry for more sport. Personal devotion of living Christians to a living Christ is the only possible explanation of such a history, especially when we remember the triumph that followed. They bore the ark through these years of blood and suffering in triumph to a worldwide victory.

PEACE, BE STILL.

Fourth-We know that he rose from the dead because he lives today. We have met him. We have seen him. We have heard him. We have felt the touch of his hand, the throb of his heart. His name is the one living power today in the history of our civilization. I walked down Broadway on Good Friday by the door of the pit of modern commerce, and from that roaring hell there issued no sound. It was still. I cannot understand how a dead peasant, who died 2,000 years ago and was not what he professed, but a fraud, could lay his nand today on this howing mob of gambling maniacs and say to them on this Friday, "Peace, be still." His name is the one power that presides over the councils of nations and of empires today. It is the power that touches living hearts, molds and fashions living characters. I am not talking about theory, but facts. I can call this morning upon this congregation and from among you a thousand witnesses will rise and testify to the fact that Jesus Christ has risen from the dead, because you personally know him as the living friend and companion of heart and life.

Awed a Whole Troop. Through Passenger Conductor Burke of the Pittsburg and Western, taught some very, very fresh theatrical people a lesson not long ago. They were en route from Alleghany to New Castle, and twelve male members of the troop were in the smoking car and acted not only as if they owned it, but the entire road and a good slice of the earth. They doubled up several seats and proceeded to indulge in a boisterous game of draw ooker. Assistant Superintendent Williams chanced to be on the train, and in passing through the car noticed their conduct and remonstrated. They paid little attention to him except to abuse him, and applied a vile name to him after he had passed out. Somebody reported this to Conductor Burke, who tips the beam at 220 and whose muscles are hard as iron.

He went back to where the barn stormers were holding high revelry, and walking up to the crowd, broke out: 'You fellows called Superintendent Williams a dirty name when he was not in hearing. Now I am here and I want you to understand you can't call me that and that I won't permit such conduct on this train. I am running it, and I intend to run it, and I will allow no interference from such a gang as you. Why, I can whip the whole crowd of you one Ju octhe. "IT you don't believe it I will sidetrack the train and any one of you can step off and I will show you.

Why, there isn't a man among you. 1 want you to understand this noise has got to be stopped, and you will have to behave as gentlemen." Not one of the ranters dared lift a hand against the sandy conductor as he towered above them and administered the tongue lashing, and from that on they were quiet and not another card

Castle Junction .- Pittsburg Post.

York for the murder of his wife was marked by one peculiar feature. Many of the details of the evidence were too gross and horrible for any womanly woman to wish to read, even courtroom was crowded with women not of the criminal class, but of wealth and education, who listened to every word given by witnesses or lawyers with keen interest.

It is becoming the custom in large cities-a very bad custom, which has long been followed in England and France-for women of this class to frequent courts whenever a sensational criminal trial is going on, no matter how tragic or questionable the circumstances revealed may be.

So peculiar a movement in social life demands some investigation. We do not believe that it is caused by any immoral tendencies in these women. Licentious books do not circulate among educated American women, and they certainly have betrayed no murderous proclivities. There is no country in the world in which affection, modesty and mutual respect are found more dominant in the home life than here.

How can we account, then, for this morbid, unclean taste in matrons and young girls whose own lives are inno-

This aphorism explains as well why foreign princes take to gambling for pastime, and why those titled ladies of Great Britain who seek only a diversion flock to the high court of justice, as it explains why American women are beginning to do the same thing.—Youth's Companion.

An Infamy. All my life I've heard that women cannot keep secrets; all my life I've known this popular opinion to be false because I've kept many secrets and other women of my acquaintance have done the same. It never occurred to me to doubt the infalibility of masculine honor in this respect until recent events forced upon me the conviction that so called gentle men can descend into slums that none but the most abandoned of my sex would approach. I refer, of course, to the sale of a confidential correspondence by which the world has been invited to contemplate a scandal that would have remained unknown. No good is done by its publication; infinite harm is done to a woman and her innocent children That there should live an American low enough to barter his own infamy and thereby betray the weakness of a woman whom he has pretended to love! So base an act becomes a crime for which there is no name. Such moral lepers should be shunned by every man and woman possessed of one atom of self respect. If women in society receive the worst of criminals they are lost indeed to all sense of decent dignity.-Kate Field's Washington.

DANGEROUS BOSTON CRANKS. hristian Science Mothers Send Children

Out to Spread Contagion.

With how much violence that vagary known by an assortment of names such as "Faith Cure," "Mind Cure" and "Christian Science"-for despite the fine distinctions which the followers of these fads make among themselves there is no question that in the end all these things come to about the same thing, despite whatever dissimilarity of title-has broken out in Chicago I have no especial knowledge, but a phase of the matter which has recently presented itself to Boston is likely to cause a good deal of trouble and not a little hardness before all is said. There has been some wonder expressed at the spread among the children of the city who are most carefully guarded from contagious diseases of such ailments as scarlet fever, chicken pox, whooping cough and the like.

It is now evident that the chief factor in the distribution of these troubles has been the children of the Christian Science theorists. There are a number of instances known in which persons whose children have been afflicted with contagious diseases have let them go unrestrictedly among their usual comrades "because of course there is no real disease and there can be no such thing as contagion. The children imagine that they are sick, but it would be foolish to encourage that fancy in them by shutting them off from others." On this beautiful basis of logic is based the plan of allowing the children to spread contagion unrestricted. A fine scene was enacted in an electric car coming into town from the suburbs last week. A woman who is of social standing and whose husband is a man of wealth started to come into town. Her little daughter had a slight case of scarlatina, the mother, of course, insisting that there was really nothing the matter except that the child's imagination was somewhat astray; and wishing to keep the patient under her influence Mrs Blank took her along into the car bound for town. Unluckily for the Christian Scientist, when she got into the car she found there a physician who lives close by her and who was aware of the state of the case. There were children in the car, and when the mother and daughter appeared he sprang up and called to the conductor to stop.

"Mrs. Blank," he said, "you cannot bring that child into this car. She has the scarlatina and should not be out. You shall not expose the other children here if you do not choose to take proper care of your own child.'

The sensation may be imagined. Mrs. Blank at first refused to leave the car and the other mothers began incontinently to nury weas inspiring out at the most remote door, but the physician stood his ground. "I am very sorry, Mrs. Blank," he said, "but I cannot let this thing go on. I shall be forced to call a policeman if you persist, and I beg that you will not force me to do that."

She attempted to explain that the child really had nothing the matter with her beyond the distortion of her fancy, but he still insisted that the child's disordered fancy should be taken home and put to bed. The conductor joined in roughly, declaring that the car could not wait forever, and that if the doctor did not call a policeman he would. In the end Mrs. Blank had to return home, where she was soon visited by a health officer, who put her in quarantine. She probably looks upon herself as a martyr in the cause of truth, but there is a general feeling against her which would possibly make her anything but comfortable were it made manifest to her. Fortunately, the type of all these diseases for the last two years has been light here, a fact for which the Christian Scientists take all the credit to themselves. Parents whose children have had to lose their schools for the winter through the willfulness of these cranks however, are not inclined to accept this theory as a sufficient compensation for the damage done.—Boston Cor. Chicago

The Ideal Woman. The ideal woman will be far more free, in the right sense of freedom, than women are now. Love will be free, but freedom will mean a deliverance from inner bondage, rather than from outer social restraint. Very much of the talk at present about slavery and bondage means merely that the person is hindered from unlimited passion-or waste of affection. The only love that is worth our while is that which beautifies and purifies and helps. When you will use the word love in that sense it cannot be too free.

The coming woman, I do not doubt, will have great purpose and strong will to help; and let me assure you that there is no power ever manifested in this world like that of a clean hearted wholesome woman. She will not prostitute her body in marriage, nor out of it, and marriage will not mean power to any one over the body and soul of another. Bondage that destroys is subservience to forms and pretenses and fashious. Over half of woman's time and mind is given to matters of dress and social rivalry. Out of this we shall rise and are slowly rising. There will be a transition era of unstable views of individual duty and social duty; but the finality will be that honorable character and beauty of spirit will win the day.— Mary E. Spancer in St. Louis Globe-

Why Not Let Well Enough Alone. A woman missionary in a talk before a woman's club the other afternoon sought aid to bring civilization to some South African peoples, among whom she had been. She described them as gentle, trustful folk, honest, affectionate and moral, not wanting in fact in the simple elements of character. To her earnest appeal for their rescue from heathenism and savagery a witty woman present replied with perhaps as much of philosophy as wit:

"Why should we take these people out of such Arcadian simplicity? Is it to give them corse's and the catechism?"— Her Point of View in New York Times.

Louise Michel. Louise Michel is at present in London, having crossed the channel chiefly to consult som books in the library of the British museum. Here she may be seen daily working hard. Her face is large, heavily lined, worn and pale; suffering is there and signs of sacrifice: likewise the light of enthusiasm, which those who differ from her would describe as the indication of madness. With dress or outward appearance she has little concern, but her old, battered, black felt hat and her shabby black gown are forgotten at sight of her remarkable countenance.—London Star.

The remarkable statement is made that there are 10,000 suicides a year in the Austrian army. Either the emperor's soldiers hold their lives very cheap or there are two ciphers too many in these figures.
