with her, the lieutenant, a troubled light in his eyes, approaches Mme. "Dear madame," he begins, gently,
"I am neither an old nor a cowardly man; but, nevertheless, I beg of you to give up this fancy. It is very tempting, I know, for a woman like you; but do not, I beseech you, compel your host to expose himself and his servants to a risk so terrible. For I give you my word that, with inexperienced horses, at this season of the year, when the wolves are the most ferocious, it is a deadly danger to run. I entreat you not to insist. Our responsibility—"

"Thou, too, Serge!" cried Mme. Novar, with a burst of ringing laughter.
"Away with fear! The more danger

there is, the more one should feel one's self alive; the more sensations one has, the happier one should be." The lieutenant answers her with a reproving gesture: "For one's self alone, yes; but for others?" A big sleigh, in the shape of a half ship, the horses harnessed to the prow, the coachman in the front in his usual place, waits now at the foot of the outer staircase; between the shafts a big black horse, its intelligent face surmounted by long, pointed ears and lighted by large, brilliant eyes, stands ratient and stolid between the Ukraine runners. The right hand horse is gray, the left hand, roan, both of them thin, sinewy, with flowing manes and tails. Timothy, the coachman, with his strong face and eagle glance, perched up aloft, touches his cap to the prince as he slowly descends the steps. Mme. Novar on his arm. She, pale and frail, but smiling, is clad from head to foot in sealskin, her flashing eyes sparkling like flame through her veil, a light rifle flung carelessly over her shoulder. The lieutenant follows, with Andre there!" bringing half a dozen guns. A clear, silvery light floods everything, house and grounds. Each line of the harness, the guns. the eyes of the horses and of the men shine under it with extraordinary brilliancy, and seem to give back to it electric sparks. Mme. Novar runs across the terrace, which the marvellous witchery of snow and moonlight has turned to purest marble. She springs to the sleigh, the men quickly follow; at the same instant, low grunts and squeals are heard under the furs. Andre flings nimself down on the spot whence come the squeals to stifle the sound, and the horses are off at a gallop. Fast as the run is, it is almost noiseless, the fall of the horses hoofs on the soft snow is scarcely perceptible. The bells have been removed from both sleigh and harness. Now and then the coachman's whistle resounds through the stillness like a bird's shrill call. Again, one of the horses sneezes. But ever in this arrowy rush they cross the swelling, undulating plains that stretch out like endless sheets of silver. The plains once passed, they enter a stately wood, where trees form lines, black and waving, of limitless receptive. Timothy halts at a crossroads; the yehicle stands out against the snow like a bit of ebony on a field of pearl. The firs, stirred by the wind, moan and creak dismally, the boughs rub and grind each other with a dull, crunching sound. The horses snort; the smothered cries rise still from the bottom of the sleigh.

"Is it to be here, your excellency," asks Timothy, quietly.
"How far are we from the Green Lake?" the prince responds. "Nearly five miles; this road leads there direct, winds around the lakeedge, and loses itself in the step; e on its way to the high-road, which it joins near the post-station." Mme. Novar, still impatient, interrupts with the order: "Make the pig "It would be better to wait, I think," Andre replies. "This road turns sharply out from here, and the ditches are deep; granting even that we are able to keep on the margin of the pond-" "Peace, fool!" cries Mme. Novar; "do as vou are bid!" And instantly there sounds from the sleigh a hidden medley of squeals, and loud, staggers blindly, whinnies squeals, and ear-splitting grunts, such low and shudderingly falls—never to as only a pig has power to utter, and whether bleeding to death or merely having his ear pulled, his gamut of notes is always the same. Mme. Novar smiles triumphantly; the lieutenant looks at her, then turns his eyes with a slight lift of the shoulder. They run in great leaps, two and three together, greedy, but not yet bold, urged on more by curiosity than ferocious appetite. Mme. The orders of a pretty woman are absolute; I have and horses side by side now, the wolves and horses side by side now, the wolves waiting for the horses to give out. At this close approach of the brutes the Ukraine horses, wild with terror, no longer know what they are doing. The earthly power can save us from the teeth of the wolves if they chance to be numerous. My middle horse is perfect—a wise old trotter; nothing could alarm him—but the other horses! They | time has come—with a sharp crack the guns go off, and four wolves fall, Their comrades fling themselves on their panting bodies and crunch them fierce-

> Meanwhile the sleigh has gained a little, but the smell and taste of blood have made the wolves rabid and filled them with a mad thirst for slaughter; the gap is soon closed between them; again the guns crack; only one wolf falls this time, but falls with a snarl-ing yelp that sends the side horses off in a frenzied run. The middle horse, with the wisdom of an old hunter, though for some time exhausted and panting, and no longer able to control his yoke-mates, allows himself to be borne along.

The prince, white as marble, whispers a low order in Timothy's ear. Mmc. Novar laughs no more; her eyes shine like a cat's; she looks at the wolves and again at the horses. "Superb! Magnificent! horse is simply amazing! His real name, prince, his name?"

"Faust, madame," the prince answers coldly; "also permit me to remind you that our danger is very great." "I know, I know—you need not tell me. If the sleigh upsets—well, nothing will remain of us but our guns and the buttons of our clothes. Pooh! I trust to Faust-he is a marvelous ani-

Seeing something like a sink before him, Faust, with lifted head and wide-open eyes, recognizes the danger confronting them, for he knows, like a human, what his end will be if his maddened comrades drag him over the brink of that treacherous spot. He braces himself stiffly, digs his feet deep in the snow and throws himself to one side, thrust ing the right horse with him and forcing him to keep in the road edging the water. But the left horse slips, scrambles and falls. Now Faust rears, forcing with him the right horse to his baunch es. Timothy, trusting to the instinct of the old horse, holds fast with one hand, stretches forward across the shaft and cuts with one stroke the fallen horse's traces. With a neigh of agony he instantly disappears under a swarm of snarling devils. The sleigh flies on, the lake and wood are passed and the broad highway of the steppes is before them. his race upheld him to the last. Timothy, with bowed head and wet eyes, makes no attempt to hide his sorrow. The prince stands like a man of stone, gazing dumbly at his horse, already stiffening, his legs stretched out, his mouth and nostrils red with blood. Mme. Novar, too, for a moment is speechless; then throws back her head with a gesture of imperious defiance. "It was not to be this time," she murmurs softly. "We are saved saved, Serge, my friend, though all depended upon a horse." And moved, touched, in spite of herself, she turns and impulsively reaches her hand to her lover. But he stands like stone; he does not notice her hand, and his voice is ice itself as he mechanically repeats after her: "As you say, madame—all depended upon a horse." Still she does not understand him; she is a woman and hard to convince, and she speaks again with a tender in-

Hottest Place in Town.

Yesterday, three men sat in the Palmer House trying to decide what was the hottest place in Chicago. Engine rooms, locomotive-cabs, and basements were suggested, but it was finally agreed by the trio that a big laundry was the hottest place in town. One of the men jumped up and declared his intention of going into one just to see what it was like on a hot day. His companions demurred, and he went away on his investigation alone.

But what a Chicago laundry is in side in summer will ever remain a mystry to the uninhabited. The curious man didn't find out how the interior of a laundry appeared. He met a young lady, and gazed in at her over the office desk.

"Can I go in and see the laundry tunning?" he asked. "Well—um—ah," said the young woman, in some confusion, "hadn't you better come around on a cooler day?"
"No. that isn't it," said the man. T've seen laundries on cool days; what I want to see is a laundry on a hot day. You understand?"

Yes, but you see-ah, well, you know-dear me, I don't know what to say," and the girl stammered in great embarrasment. "Oh. you better let me in, said the man, who had an indefinite impression that the young woman was guying him. He made for the door leading to the laundry. The girl screamed. "Don't go in there! For goodness sakes go away, and don't ask any questions." "Look here." said the investigator, "what are you making so much fuss for? Now quiet down and tell me why I can't go in?"

"Well-um-you know, it's awful "Of course, I understand that." "Mm-ah-pshaw! and the girls in there, you know--you see, there are girls in there-in there-oh, please go awav." "I supposed there were girls in there;

I won't hurt them. What about the girls in there?' and the investigator felt very much put out at the young woman's stupidity.
"Oh, dear," said the young woman 'I suppose I must. You see the girls in there; girls you know, in there, the girls-well, it is so bot; you under-

Enormous Production of Beer. The Western Brewer (Chicago) has just published tables showing the total production of beer in the United States during the special revenue ended April 30, 1892. It is seen by the official statistics that the total production of beer during the year upon which revenue was collected amounted to 31,475,519 barrels—a net increase of 1,453,519 barrels over the produc tion of the previous year. The aver age annual consumption is a little less than one-half barrel for every man, woman and child in the United States First in the list of beer-producing States is New York, with a total of 9,512,549 barrels, or more than one fourth of the total production in the United States. Pennsylvania comes next with 3,129,733 barrels Illinois follows with 2.888,364 barrels; then comes Ohio with a production of 2,650,-205 barrels, and Wisconsin is closely in the rear with 2,605,688 barrels. Fo lowing in order, Missouri produced 2,014,086 barrels; New Jersey, 1,757, 033 barrels; Massachusetts, 1,095,966 barrels; and California, 776,050 barrels. In six states of the Union only no beer is produced at all, namely: Arkansas, Florida, Maine, Mississippi, North Carolina, and Vermont. Iowa has an output of 114,523 barrels of beer last year. an increase $.580 barrels over the previous year, in spite of the prohibitory iquor law. The Hope of France. French science has to deal with a peculiar problem, how to prevent the depopulation of the country, which is now going on so rapidly that the deaths exceed the births by nearly 40,000 in a single year. Increasing the birth rate having proved impracticable, the present hope is to diminish the death rate. At a recent meeting of the new Society for the Protection of Children, Dr. Rochard referred to the fact that only eight years ago he was laughed at for predicting that the population would become stationary before the end of the century, and stated that 250,000 infants die yearly, of whom at least 100,000 could be saved by intelligent care. Stringent laws have been already passed to aid in preventing this great aid of life. It is now illegal for any person to give children under one year of age any solid food except on medical advice, and nurses are forbidden to use nursing bottles having rub-ber tubes. Some of Cleveland's appointments, made while President, are very interesting to the patriotic American. There was Alexander R. Lawton, for instance. There was not much further heard from him until Grover Cleveland hunted him out and appointed him minister to Russia, an appointment he could not fill because he was still a rebel, and in order that Cleveland could reward him for his traitorous past he took the oath of allegiance to the government in December, 1885, and was immediately made minister to Austria by Mr. Cleveland. The following persons were placed before the convention for nomination: E. L. Hamilton, of this county; J. J. Woodman, of Van Buren, and Henry F. Thomas, of Allegan. The first ballot resulted. Woodman 34, Hamilton 29, Thomas 16. One hundred and forty-three ballots were taken with varying results, the last one standing, Woodman 35, Hamilton 23, Thomas 21. There being no choice the convention adjourned until yesterday morning. On reassembling four more ballots were taken, the last one resulting in the nomination of Dr. Thomas.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Large shipments of tin-plate are made every week; the goods are eagerly sought after by dealers. Tin-plate is made in Elwood and their factory will soon have the capacity of the largest in the country. Here in the heart of the natural gas region is the place to make tin-plate. It is really amusing to see how some of our free trade merchants clamor for protection when a street fakir begins selling a line of goods similar to their stock. They will sit in their stores and read about the justice of free trade and tariff reform and say "that is right, give everybody a chance; we are no better than an Englishman." But let the fakir begin his little song on the corner, and the crowd gathers around nim, then you can hear these reform men begin to cry. You use his own argument and say, "give everybody a chance," and he will tell you quickly, "that is a different thing altogether. This man has never done anything to help our town. He has no property interests here and I say that it is not right to allow this man to come on our streets, selling goods in direct competition to our own merchants without he pays a heavy license to our treasurer." That is the song that ninety-nine out of every one hundred free traders sing, and it seems very queer that if protec-tion is such a good thing at home on a small scale, that these same men will advocate free trade and "tariff for revenue only," for this country at large. Lower Wages and Mythical Markets.

The London Iron and Steel Trades Journal prints an interview with J. H. Rogers, the managing partner of the firm of E. Morewood & Co., proprietors of the South Wales and Cwmbwria tin plate works, which is almost as interesting reading to the American workman who is asked to vote for Cleve land and free trade next November as a notification of an actual cut in his wages would be,so plain does Mr. Rogers make it that lower wages is what free trade means. Mr. Rogers is chairman of the Wales Tin Plate Makers' Association, and as such is far more interested in the protection of British in dustries than an American. His firm is building a large tin plate mill near Norristown, Pa., and he has just returned from a visit to this country to look over the ground, but he is anxious to keep his Wales works going. He says: We intend to make a hard light to keep our works here and at Cwmbwria running. Our American works are what is called in sporting terms a "hedge," so that if the actions of the leaders of the working people and the House of Parliament make it unprofitable for us to carry on our works in this country, we shall still be able to be large manufacturers.

This is what he said in answer to the reporter's question, "Supposing Mr. Cleveland were elected, what do you think would be the effect of his policy?" I think the result would be that the duties would be gradually lowered, and that wages would consequently fall. The working classes would, of course, not be willing to remain without work, and manufacturers would have to reduce wages to enable them to compete successfully with other countries. Wages in America are at present ABOUT DOUBLE WHAT THEY ARE HERE, BUT IF AMERICA ADOPTED FREE TRADE THEY WOULD PROBABLY BE REDUCED BY ONE-HALF, AND BECOME EQUAL TO THE WAGES PAID HERE. THE QUES-TION OF FREE TRADE OR PROTECTION IN AMERICA IS, THEREFORE, OF FAR MORE IMPORTANCE TO THE WORKING CLASS OF AMERICA THAN IT IS TO ANY CLASS IN THIS COUNTRY. In America the working class earn high wages at present, and the cost of living out there is so little more than it is here that they have much greater comfort and are able to save more rapidly. -- N.

There is caste even in prison circles at Jackson. The burglars and thugs are always together and talk much. Thieving cashiers talk over their experiences and the short term men, for minor offenses, may be seen often in close conversation. There is but one class of men who do not discuss their crimes, and those are the murderers. As a rule they are not very social, but like to be alone.—Detroit Journal.

A New Kind of Diamond.

Jas. S. Kirk & Co., of Chicago, have put upon the market lately, as a result of their half century's experience, their Dusky Diamond Soap, a soap adapted to all household uses. By a happy but peculiar combination they are enabled to use tar in this soap, and there is no one that needs to be told that tar is recognized as the greatest of the healing agents. It also is recognized for its softening qualities, and any one troubled with hard hands, cracked hands, sore hands, will become enthusiastic over the "Dusky Diamond" Soap after once using it. Your grocer keeps it.

THE FIELD OF GETTYSBURG is to the old soldier and the student the most interesting of all the earth's battle grounds. Those who go to Washington to attend the encampment of the G. A. R. in September, will have the best opportunity of visiting (lettysburg by taking the line of the Michigan Central and the Northern Central, which includes a side trip to Gettysburg either going or returning. For Philadelphia, allowing stop-over at Baltimore, Philadelphia and Harris-burg. The stop at Philadelphia will permit of a side trip to New York and return at the low rate of $4.00.

ruff of Wateryliet for Clerk. DROWNED .- Wm. A. Troub, a lad aged fourteen years, four months, fell into the St. Joseph river near his home north of South Bend, Sunday, and was drowned. He and his three sisters, older, went for a walk along the bank of the river, when he ventured out onto a large boulder in the river and slipped into deep water. One of his sisters made a desperate effort to rescue him, and was herself carried into the deep water. Both were taken out by two men who came from the opposite side of the river, but too late to save the life of the boy. The mother, who has been an invalid for several months, had dreamed the night before of seeing her son fall into the river and drown before her eyes.

In this community, as perhaps in all others, there are two distinct classes of inhabitants. When one class is asked to do anything for the improvement or the betterment of the town, they go promptly about it and do the best they can; when the other is asked to perform the same duty they rush to a lawyer to see whether they can be forced to do so or not. This last class is also always ready with an injunction to serve on the first, when they see them attempting to do anything for the benefit of the puplic. Do you know which you belong to? One is the material which makes good citizens and gives life to the community in which they live. The other is the kind of stuff used in making an-

A NEW complication is coming into the St. Joseph Valley railroad business. The right of way once more in the hands of those who own the farms, can be easily secured by whoever will use it for a good road. One point favorable to this move is the fact that the greater part of the right of way has never been paid for. The situation promises to become high-

Fun in Dowagiac. Monday was the eventful day, and the trouble began by Charley, or "Frock" Davis, a lawless colored man, and Harry Kline, a stone cutter, get-ling exceedingly drunk. Their first move was to secure a horse from the merry-go-round and drive around the city at a 2:16 gait. Everything went well until they attempted to drive up an electric light pole, on the corner of Front and Spruce streets, when the carriage and harness were demolished and one of the horse's legs broken. This ended their speeding horses. But the colored man was not satisfied.

"Frock" thought it would be grand amusement to carve Sol, Middleton, the proprietor of the Elkerton, and made boasts to that effect. Middleton heard of the threats made against him, purchased a revolver, as he didn't seem to relish the idea of being hacked into mince meat. To prevent being arrested for carrying concealed weapons, he carried the revolver around town in his band. During the afternoon the two men met on Front street, and Davis attempted to snatch the revolver. A scufile ensued in which Middleton had one of his thumbs nearly bitten off. Both Davis and Kline were arrested by Marshal Jewell. The prisononer were each fined $10 by Justice Michael, in default of which Davis was sent up for twenty days. Kline paid his fine. As Constable Sesor was taking Davis back to jail the prisoner broke loose. He was found by the officer under the porch of R. R. Elliott's house, on Orchard street. Davis has served several terms in prison. A warrant was also sworn out for the arrest of Middleton on the charge of disorderly conduct.

When Kline was released he was not contented and wanted to do something to show his kindness for Davis. Therefore he purchased a bottle of whisky and passed it through the window of the cell to the prisoner. On that charge he was arrested on Wednesday morning and taken before Judge Hammond. After a lengthy examination he was bound over to await the action of the grand jury.—Dowagiac Standard. Buchanan is pleased to note that "Frock" has transferred his operations to some other town. The citizens of this place have become thoroughly tired of his performances. Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock, Johnny Calligan, the nine-year-old son of Mrs. Annie Calligan, who resides on the West Side, was going to Mr. Ballard's after apples in company with several other boys. When nearly op-posite the Gitchel place a load of straw was met and Johnny attempted to jump on the side of the wagon, but lost his balance and fell under the city to attend a class recital given by hind wheel, which passed over his Miss Carrie Walbridge, at her class body. All of the ribs in the right side were broken and one of his lungs crushed. The little fellow got up and started away, but fell down before he had gone very far, with the blood spurting out of his mouth. The weight of the wagon and straw was fully 4, 500 pounds. The man who was driving did not see the boy at all as he was sitting in front right over the whifiletrees and could only see what was in front of him and no blame can be attached to the driver. Henry Fisher was working in a field near by and when he saw the accident he hitched up his team and took the hoy home ly prepared for the task she has under taken, and ready to give them some good piano playing.

He is resting easier today and some hopes are entertained of his recovery although it is doubtful.—Niles Star.

THE RESERVE OF THE PARTY OF THE

THE FAVORITE WEAPONS OF MICHIGAN DEMOCRATS.

The Magnificent Record of the Republican Party Willfully Misrepresented and Traduced for Partisan Purposes --- One Flagrant Instance a Type of All.

A Democratic half truth is worse than a whole lie, for it borrows the livery of the Lord to serve the devil. The Democratic party of Michigan has of late been dealing in half truths by the wholesale, in the expectation that a modicum of truth, or even the barest semblance of truth will serve to sweeten to the taste of the people a nauseating dose of falseh add. The result is what might have been expected by the Democrats. The few doses that went down first have produced a reaction, and the dirty mess of falsehood vilification and personal abuse is being east back at its author.

Recognizing the grand work done by the Republican party in developing and building up the state and recogniz-ing the sterling integrity of the men whom that party has invariably put into the state offices, the L'emocrats could find no mode of attack upon the Republican party and its others better suited to their nefarious purposes than broadsides of personal abuse and specious falsehoods. For some time past they have been publishing alleged reports—generally garbled and always misrepresented—of the doings of liepublican state officials. Those transactions have been placed in every con-ceivable false light before the people without one word of explanati n or reference to attendant circumstances The people have been asked to believe that men who have been honored by them with the most sacred trusts have grossly and deliberately violated those trusts by swindling the state and robbing its treasury, and have then shamelessly recorded the evidences of their villainy in official reports. The most arrant pettifogger would not have the impudence to ask a justice court jury to convict a man of petty larceny upon such evidence, but l'emocratic demagogues have brazenly in-sulted the intelligence of the people by asking them to convict their most trusted officials in the past of petty thievery. No man's personal or official character has been safe from the covert attacks of these political pirates wherever the interests of the l'emocracy could be subserved by a resort to tactics so peculiarly its own. Men of acknowledged integrity, whose honor could not be openly attacked, have been subjected to this Democratic

Let us examine one instance of this Democratic guerrilla warfare, which is typical of their entire campaign. Among the hordes of useless clerks, with whom every department in the state government has been crowded in the vain attempt to appease the Democratic appetite for office, are many who have spent the time for which the state pays a good round price in the manufacture of Democratic campaign slanders. They have worked up this villamous stuff for the Damocratic state central committee to send broadcast over the state, and they have also corresponded for their home papers. which have greedity snapped at these choice bits of Democratic literature. Even the honored name and record of E. O. Grosvenor, of Jonesville, ex-state treasurer of Michigan, have not been proof against the attacks of one of these Democratic ghouls—an appointee of the notorious Dan Soper. This is what he wrote to Dan Soper. This is what the Hillsdale Democrat:

On page 22 of the report of the board of auditors for the year 1858 will be found the otherwise in the year ress with be found the following: "E. O. Grossenor, for personal expenses incurred in going to and returning from Washington, and while there on business for the state, $5.20." There it is, and there is all there is of it. Not a word to indicate what those personal expenses were, or a single item given in the bill. Just one big lump. Now there is not the slightest doubt that Mr. Grosvenor may have been entitled to the amount asked for; but I ven-ture the assertion that if a man in his em-ploy should present a bill for $150 3J to him and ask for payment. Mr. Gresvenor would say: "Please make out an itenized statement and let me see what all this is for and what you have done to be satisfied to this sum of money." That is just what Mr. Grosyenor should have done and what the board now requires of every p rson who presents a bill to them for a service rendered the state. dered the state. The people of Michigan would have been interested in knowing whether Mr. Grosvenor received ten cents a mile for railroad fare as did his colleagues in office at that time, or whether he received only "actual and necessary expens s while away from the seat of government on duty connected with his office." This deliberate attempt to deceive is as cold-blooded a stab in the back as any assassin ever aimed in the dark The people of Hillsdale County-yes, of the whole State of Michigan-would have resented any open charge of dis-honesty made against Mr. Grosvenor, based on so filmsy a pretext as that en-try on the records; but the Democratic assassin hoped to get in his deadly work by means of insinuations. But the slanderer is convicted out of his own mouth. He cites in evidence the mere entry in the report of the board of auditors of that board's action on the bill, but does not cite the bill itself on which the board acted. Whether he failed to notice the original bill which is now on file in the archives of the state, and which is the original voucher for the payment, on account of ignorance or for the sake of willful misrepresentation, is immaterial at present, for either supposition is disgraceful to that party which expects to profit by such

The Republican boards of state au-The Republican boards of state auditors always required itemized statements in bills presented to them for their examination, and if the present Democratic board does the same, it is but following the excellent example set by its Republican predecessors. Those itemized bills are always preserved, but, on the record or journal of the board's transactions, only a mere ninute of the matter is entered. Should the board enter and print at length in ts report an itemized statement of all the thousands of bills allowed, the people would justly complain of the waste of money in unnecessary and expensive

This Democratic correspondent in his urticle written to the Hillsdale Demoerat, has displayed not only his partisan lishonesty and maliciousness, but also ais lack of common information. The iournals of legislative proceedings re-tord only the simple fact of the passage of the most important bills, but speak never a word of the many considerations which moved the members to pass them. The journal of the Circuit Court records the simple verdict of guilty which may consign a fellow-citizen to life imprisonment, but that journal is as dumb as the Sphnix, as to the evi-dence which prompted the jury to render such a verdict. So does the record of the proceedings of the board of state auditors contain only a brief statement of the board's conclusions in each case, but does not show the evidence upon which it acted. But such evidence is always to be found in the original vouchers. Does the Democratic party care to look further and be honest?

Not at all. It prefers to howl. So much for what may be called the technical aspect of the case. But if this landerous correspondent had desired to deal fairly by Mr. Grosvenor, he would have stated what was the fact, that the latter's trip to Washington resulted in the satisfactory adjustment of heavy claims which this state had accumulated against the general govern-ment for war expenditures, and which were in a very unsettled condition at the time Mr. Grosvenor went into the office of State Treasurer. But such a statement would have destroyed the purpose of the article, and so Mr. Grosvernor's private character had to be smirched for the sake of casting reflections upon his record as a Republican state official. Mr. Grosvenor's case is but one out of many Democratic slanders set affoat. The expense accounts of other equally incorruptible state officers, incurred in the transaction of equally important business of the state have been misrepresented and paraded before the people. The bills audited and allowed former boards of auditors, for furnishing the new state capitol, ha e been represented as every day occurrences, as if Republican state o il ers have been uselessly piling up in the capitol purchases of expensive fur-niture, rugs and caroets or fitting no them No miscenresentations have been too gross for the Democrats to make. But it is useless to try to run them all down. The same spirit of muliciousness and indifference to truth pervades them all.

What more do the people want, to convince them of the rottenness of the l'emocratic cause, than this cold-blooded assassination of pers nal reputations? A cause whose advo-cates are reduced to such desperate straits is much better last than wonat least for the people of the state of Michigan. They cannot afford to nut into power, or to keep in power, any party at the expense of the good name and reputation of citizens whom they have loved to honor and respect. Democratic victue is not real in itself, but merely relative, and it can be shown to exist only by proving the rest of the people to be thieves and swindlers, then it is scarcely worth saving. The people would be "paying too dear for their whistle." And yet this is exactly the price that the leaders of the Michigan Democracy are askin the people to pay for another two years of I'em eratic incompetency and fraud. It is too much.

IT COST THE PEOPLE

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR DEMOCRAT GERRYMANDERS.

Republican Faliness Alone Saved the State From Greater Expense---The Greed of the Democratic Squawbucks Receives a Well-Merited Rebuke.

The recent session of the legislature was in every sense an unwarrantable and unjustifiable imposition on the people. It resulted in an unnecessary expenditure of tunds that ought to be tid lying in the treasury of the state. It cost the state $5,377.68 for pay and mileage of members, while the cost of printing laws, journals, bills and maps of new districts will swell the grand total to 88,000. This is the latest item of the waste imposed upon the state by a Democratic administration.

The call of the session was made to pass laws that should have been passed at the regular session, and which would have been passed then had the "squawbuck" legislature had in view the interests of the people instead of the interests of the Democratic party. "Dressed in a little brief authority" the Democratic legislature attempted to steal the state, United States Senator and all. The gross injustice and flagrant unconstitutionality of the ap-portionment acts of 1891 were too much for the Supreme Court to sanction. As well might the honorable tribunal have been asked to protect the thief eaught carrying off his ill-gotten booty. as to justify the apportionment acts of Is91. Those acts were swept aside as too outrageous to be allowed longer to disgrace the statute books of Michigan. Justice Morse, whose loyalty Democracy is unchallenged, said of the House apportionment: "The apportionment act of 1891 is void, because it undertook to dismember Houghton county and because the constitution was also violated in giving [Democratic counties two representatives, having a less population than [Republican] counties which were accorded but one." The words in brackets have been inserted to show the facts and to indicate how the constitution was violated in the interests of Democracy. The unlawful dis-memberment of Houghton county was made for the same purpose. Justice McGrath, the other Democratic member of the Supreme Court, does not hesitate to stigmatize the "squawbuck" grasp at unlawful dominion in Michigan as usurpation. Speaking of the senatorial re-arrangement of 1891, he says: "The purpose of the constitutional enactment is to secure as nearly as possible equality of representation. Any apportionment that defeats that purpose is vicious, con-trary not only to the letter but to the spirit of our institutions and subversive of popular government. Power TSURPED and usurpation of power is a menace to free institutions." For these-reasons the apportionment acts of 1891 were wiped out. What was the result? The state government was left sadly crippled in one of its departments—all on account of Demoeratic misrule. An extra session was made necessary to repair the mischief done by a Democratic legislature, at the behest of the Democratic bosses, who desired to elect one of their number to the United States Senate. The session was called by the Governor and then, as the Lansing Republican graphically describes it: Every employe who was foxy enough to get there, cuspidor artists, clerks, janitors, doorkeepers, pages and a raft of others, all come in on the $3 per diem rule and mileage grab. The services rendered to the state have been in the line of loading and lounging about and keeping on the shady side of the capitol building. The clamor for pay orders on Saturday aftern on was deafuning

And so the expense was piled up. The state has paid dearly for its experience with Democracy.

That the session was not any longer and more expensive to the taxpayers of the state is due entirely to the wise and patriotic stand of the Republican mi-nority. Before the convening of the two houses, the Republican State Central Committee, not in any way dietating action, but acting as an advisory council, suggested to the Republican members an offer of co-operation with the Democrats in the formulation of fair bills, which both parties could support. In accordance with this suggestion the following offer mas made by the Republican senatorial caucus: "To the Chairman of the Democrat sena torial caucus: Sir-Assuming that your self and those associated with you are equally solicitous with us for the early enactment of reapportionment bills in con formity with the opinion and instructions of the Supreme Court, to the end that measures which shall be recognized as fair and just, by all the citizens of Michigan, may be formulated and that the taxpayers be spared the burden of expense attendant upon a prolonged session of the legislature, we are authorized by the Republican members of the senate to submit the following proposition, viz: That a committee fairly constituted to represent the Republican. Democrat and People's parties shall be named by their respective cancuses who shall be charged with the duty of formu-lating bills to be presented for approval of the said caucuses, and upon an agreement being reached, to be presented for action in the legislature. (Signed) "A Milnes, W. H. Withington, Jos. M. Weiss, R L Taylor, A O Wheeler."

The Democrats in the Senate, after vainly trying for a half a day to rally their forces for the passage of partisan measures and finding that they could not use the party whip with success on members enough to pass a bill, finally made a virtue of necessity and agreed to compromise measures. The credit of shortening the session and of securing measurably fair apportionments be-longs to the Republican minority in the Legislature.

The investigation of the Alabama election now being made by the Alliance people is opening their eyes. They say they elected their candidate, but were charted and their candidate, but were cheated out of the election by the rascality of the Democrats. Let the good work go on. Perhaps an election bill won't have such a terrible look to southern people after a few more experiences of Alabama methods. —State Republican.

ANOTHER LARCENY.

HOW IT WAS PLANNED AND DEFEATED AT LANSING.

Fair Re-Apportionment Secured by the Republicans in Spite of the Democratic Bosses--Michigan Saved from Another Disgraceful Gerrymander.

That the State of Michigan has been saved from the disgrace of another par-tisan gerrymander is to be credited to the Republican party.
It became evident before the legislature convened that the Democrats were preparing to go to any lengths to pass a partisan measure, in open defiance of the principles of fair apportionment laid down by the Supreme Court. The state organ of the Democratic party the Detroit Free Press-published labored editorials to prepare its party for an endorsement of another attempt to steal the legislature. For several days prior to the meeting of the legislature that organ teemed with denun-ciations of the Supreme Court opinions in the gerrymander cases as an unwarrantable interference with "legislative discretion." It maintained that legislative districts could not be formed without doing violence to justice, and it framed an elaborate scheme for the evasion of the Supreme Court opinions and the perpetration of another gerrymander. It openly defended the vicious practice, which is so dangerous to the very existence of our free institu-

The Democratic State Central Committee had prepared two bills for enactment, fully as outrageous in their character as the acts of 1891, which the Supreme Court declared unlawful. That committee made no secret of its intention to force those bills through the legislature. Secretary Hosford openly declared at Lansing: "We are not here for pleasure, but to pass bills in our own interests, and by — we're going to pass them." He declared also that they would rush them through before Saturday night and go home. It was also known to be a part of the scheme to prepare for election and act under such laws, although not ordered to take immediate effect. The Democrats, in other words, stood ready to rush through a partisan gerry mander and then perfect their plans to steal the state, under laws not yet in force, as they had not votes enough in either house to give the bills immediate Republicans also had reason to be lieve, even before the legislature convened, that Governor Winans had prepared a grossly partisan message, which was intended as an encouragement to Democratic schemes to saddle "squawbuck" dominion upon the people of Michigan, and the message justified their fears. His message was a defense of the gerrymander and a sneer at the Supreme Court. Like the Free Press, virtually told the Supreme Court that it had meddled with something that was none of its business. Witness this offensive sentence: "That you are again compelled to legislate upon this important matter seems due to your having followed the precedents set by former legislatures, and to your having accepted the theory that the legislature is an independent coordinate branch of the state government, whose province is to de-termine the political divisions of the commonwealth." Everything betokened an attempt to override constitution, law and justice in the interest of another Democratic partisan apportion-

Well knowing that bills could not be lawfully passed as soon as the Demoerats boldly asserted they would pass them, unless Republicans' consented to suspend the rules or the Democrats grossly violated them as they did in 1891, the Republican members of the Senate put themselves on guard to defend the state against any more Demoeratic outrages. Warned by their experiences of 1891, they stood on the watch for treachery.

What was the first Democratic move? It was an attempt to do away with the rules of the Senate that stood in the way of Boss Hosford's plans. scheme was sprung upon the Republi-cans without a word of warning. Not having a two-thirds majority to suspend the rules, the Democrats assumed that the Senate had no rules and then proposed to adopt those of 1891, except one that interfered with their plans. This flagrant and shameless proposi-tion unmasked the Democracy. The partisan rulings of Lieut.-Gov. Strong, made to carry out the scheme, were but a confirmation of the Republican suspicions. The battle against Democratic usurpation was waged until almost midnight, when the Democratic majority, aided by partisan and unjust rulings from Lieut.-Gov. Strong, prevailed against law and precedent. A rule which could be abolished or suspended

only by a two-thirds vote was set aside

by a bare majority.

The Democrats accused the Republicans of filibustering and wasting time, but it was well for the State of Michigan that the Republicans took a manly stand against so gross a violation of law and practice. Never before in the history of the state was a legislative day more profitably spent for the people. Republican opposition was the rock upon which the Democratic gerrymander was wrecked. The struggle over the rules revealed the fact that, while the Democrats had, a majority of the Senators voting, they had not the constitutional majority requisite to pass a bill. They then gave up the fight for a gerrymander and listened to Republican propositions for a fair apportionment. Thus it is that the state was saved by Republican firmness from another gerrymander. The people will in reading.

The request, or rather command, attracted the attention of those who heard it and they looked upon the man with expressions of disgust. But the woman paid no heed to the insolent remark and continued with the little song. The man left his seat and went to the forward deck. He reappeared with a deck hand, who assisted the man in getting through the crowd and to where the little woman still sat singing. "I want you to make this woman stop her noise," said the man, now apparently aroused. "It's against the rules. She's evidently going to ask for alms." The woman had stopped singing and was now looking innocently at the man and the deck hand.

From two or three passengers came the cry of "Shame!" but the man whose nerves were so shaken by the woman's voice and who wanted the rules enforced, seemed to pay no attention to the remarks until the voman addressed him.

"I'm sorry to have disturbed you, sir," she said rather loudly, "but I thought I might be able to gather a little money, which I need."

"Your singing did annoy me exceedingly, but if you are needy I'm sorry I stood in the way of your obtaining money and I'll help you," he raid, taking off his hat and dropping a dollar bill in it. Then he started around the passengers, and one after another dropped silver pieces in the hat until a considerable fund had quickly grown. This the man transferred to the woman, and reseated himself and buried his face behind his paper.

The ferryboat had reached her destination and the passengers left the boat. Five minutes later the man and woman stood on the corner of Liberty and Church streets. "How much did we get?" the man

"Nearly $5," she replied. "Well, let's try the South ferry now," he said, and off they walked

David Copperfield as a Child. Dickens was never more successful in painting a child than in David Copperfield; but David is not a specimen of commonplace childhood. It is needful to remember this if we are to appreciate him properly. From the very first he has about him the air of genius. All children, unless they be abnormally dull and stupid, are full of fancies. They breathe the atmosphere of poetry. They see wonders in the heavens above and in the earth beneath. Tragedy and comedy are ever chasing each other over the stage of their existence. Now they are in the depths of despair; now it would seem as if they and joy were insepadrink ever day is a self-evident fact. As a table drink and a family beverage it is becoming a necessity on account of its healthgiving and refreshing qualities. The bot-tling of beer puts it in a convenient shape to be handled for family use, and today the consumption of beer in the United States averages one-half barrel to every person in the country. Think of this and then say if you dare, that beer is not proving itself a healthful, pleasant drink. No beer brewed in Detroit or anywhere else is better or more popular than the celebrated brands of the Voight Brewery Co.—Rhinegold and Maduro. The Voigt Brewery Co. have for the past few years had their beer bottled by outside parties, but the constant and inor outside parties, but the constant and in-creasing demand for beer as a family bev-erage long since showed them the necessity of having this branch of business under their own supervision. Today they have a new bottling works—as fine as the finest and complete in every detail for handling the bottles and bottling the beer in an expeditions and clean manner. The bottling works is a new buildin; three stories high and basement, directly back of the brew-and basement, directly back of the brew-ery, and has a floor surface of 12 010 square feet. The building is the only absolutely fire-proof building in Detroit and is con-structed entirely of brick and stone for the walls, iron beams and terra cotta lumber. The floors are of rock asphalt and nothing used in the construction of the building is of a combustible nature excepting the window frames and doors. The power of the building is furnished by an immense dynamo the electricity for which is generated by the main engine of the brewery.

The bottling works is under the superintendency of T. C. Purney, Jr., who has had 21 years experience in the beer business and has for years been connected with the Finlay Brewing Co, at Toledo, Ohio. Finlay Brewing Co, at Toledo, Ohio.

The first floor of the bottling works is the floor on which the most of the work is done. Here the bottles undergo the first process of cleansing, and by the time they are ready for the beer they are absolutely pure and clean. They are first put in the two immense soaking tanks, each of which is 18 feet long, 3 feet wide and 3 feet high. These tanks are made of immense stakes of Calis. tanks are made of immense slabs of Cali-fornia redwcod and are filled with hot water For twenty-four hour the bottles are soaked in the hot water and then taken to the Gouldie washing machines. ing machines they are placed on an automatic rinsing machine, 64 bottles at a time. Each bottle is placed over a small hollow cylinder which extends about one-half through the interior of the bottle. Jets of water are then sprayed from the tops of these wind the postle. Then, placed these spindles and the bottles then placed in the bottle carts and taken to the filling machine. The filling to chine is a great improvement over the old method of filling bottles by a lose. The beer is brought dibottles by a lose. The beer is brought direct from the large punchons by a pipe line run through an underground tunnel connecting the great cellars of the brewery with the basement of the bottling works. The pipe is completed by a stand pipe which empties the beer into the filling machine which consists of an almost airtight immense copper basin from which the bottles are filled by syphons and immediately carried to the automatic corking machine. The corks before used are placed inside a large hollow revolving cylinder, called the cork scourer. They are tossed and tumbled about inside of this cylinder for six or eight hours until all the loose porsix or eight hours until all the loose portions of cork and every particle of dust is removed and droppe I out through the open spaces in the cylinder.

The corking machine has the same capa-city as the filler, one corking and the other filling 125 bottles each minute. Each cork that is used has the word Vo'gt branded o one side and the date on which the beer is bottled, the branding being done in the third story. After leaving the corking machine the bottles are taken to the beer tables where the corks are fastened securely by the Champion cork retainer, a circular piece of tin which is used in all the leading breweries instead of wire. After this process the bothed beer is placed in this process the bot. Led teer is placed in the steaming tank entirel; submerged in hot water, so that the beer will keep pure in any climat; and for any length of time. After leaving the hot bath the bottles are ready for the labels and are taken to the second floor, where the labeling is done. Every bot le of genuine Rhinegold has the signature of E. W. Voigt written across the label and appearing directly over the cork. You can't find any revenue stamp on a beer bottle, but it pays the tax nevertheless. Every big puncheon of beer is sealed by a United States revenue officer who securely locks the tank, and only leaves the pipe hole open on which he pla es a government tguage to measure the quantity of beer which passes through. Each time the officer calls be destroys the number of revenue stamps which the quantity of beer drawn off calls for. So you see Uncle Sam they his weather eye open.

The second floor is devoted entirely to labeling and wrapping the bottles in tissue paper, after which they are placed in boxes or casks, and are ready for delivery to all parts of the country. The two brands of beer which are bottled are the Rhinegold and Madara and they are for all and all and Maduro, and they are for sale at all the leading groceries, hotels and bars. The bottles used are the white champagne bottles, a bottle which has been generally used by all the leading breweries of Europe during the past lifty years. The third floor is used for storing beer bottles, cases and casks. The cask will hold six dozen quart bottles and 10 dozen pints and are used principally for bars and hotels.
