"BEYOND THE ALPS LIES ITALY." A fresh memorial to vanished youth. The sweet girl graduate, with flower face; Hor eyes so full of trust, her heart of truth, so staid. A travesty on life in phrase austere; But youthful confidence is unafraid,

And gladness vibrates in the tones so clear,
"Beyond the Alps lies Italy!"

The joy of triumph and of proud applause. Sweet floral offerings, the music's stirl Fair, sunny slope of youth! Oh, let us pause And linger in this girlhood's glade with her, Ere yet she climbs those rugged steeps of life, Where womanhood with all its mystery lies. Remember, ere you go to meet its strife, Oh, maiden innocent; grown strangely wise,
"Beyond the Alps lies Italy!"

The essay soon will yellow grow with time; The years will string their rosary of tears; Weary and footsore, we the hills must climb, And stumble o'er the stones of cares and The mists of doubt will all the landscape veil, The first of doubt will all the landscape veh The feet may falter and the courage fail, The stern pale lips will quiver then to say, "Beyond the Alps lies Italy!"

Oh, when the hands that helped you up the Shall loose the clasp we cannot always keep: When in the night of pain you upward grope— Blinded by tears, with lagging footsteps creep; Then let your girlhood's maxim cheer your

CHAPTER XIII.

It was the spare yard I had not hold of. It was already late at night, and as dark as it ever would be at that season of the year (and that is to say it was still pretty bright), when Hoseason clapped his head into the roundhouse

"Here," said he, "come out and see if ye can pilot." "Is this one of your tricks?" asked Alan.

"Do I look like tricks?" cries the captain. "I have other things to think ofmy brig's in danger!" By the concerned look of his face, and above all by the sharp tones in which he spoke of his brig, it was plain to both of us he was in deadly earnest, and so Alan and I, with no great fear of treachery, stepped on deck. The sky was clear; it blew hard and was bitter cold; a great deal of daylight lingered, and the moon, which was nearly full, shone brightly. Altogether it was no such ill night to keep the seas in, and I had begun to wonder what it was that sat so heavily upon the captain, when, the brig rising suddenly on the top of a high swell, he pointed and cried to us to look. Away on the lee bow a thing like a fountain rose out of the moonlit sea, and immediately after we heard a low sound of roaring. "What do ye call that!" asked the captain gloomily. "The sea breaking on a reef," said

Alan. "And now ye ken where it is, and what better would ye have?" "Aye," said Hoseason, "if it was the only one." And sure enough just as he spoke there came a second fountain farther to the south. "There!" said Hoseason. "Ye see for yourself. If I had kent of these reefs, if I had had a chart, or if Shuan had been spared, it's not sixty guineas-no, nor six hundred, would have made me risk my brig in sic a stoneyard! But you, sir, that was to pilot us, have ye never a word?" "I'm thinking," said Alan, "these'll be what they call the Torran rocks." "Are there many of them?" says the captain. "Truly, sir, I am naepilot," said Alan,

"but it sticks in my mind there are ten miles of them." Mr. Riach and the captain looked at each other.

"There's a way through them, I suppose?" said the captain. "Doubtless," said Alan; "but where? But it somehow runs in my mind once more that it is clearer under the land." "So?" said Hoseason. "We'll have to haul our wind then, Mr. Riach; we'll have to come as near in about the end of Mull as we can take her, sir, and even then we'll have the land to keep tho wind off us and that stone yard on our

lee. Well, we're in for it now and may as well crack on." With that he gave an order to the steersman and sent Riach to the foretop. There were only five men on deck, counting the officers. These were all that were fit, or at least both fit and willing, for their work, and two of these were hurt. So, as I say, it fell to Mr. Riach to go aloft, and he sat there looking out and hailing the deck with news

"The sea to the south is thick," he cried, and then after awhile, "it does seem clearer in by the land." "Well, sir," said Hoseason to Alan, 'we'll try your way of it. But I think I might as well trust to a blind fiddler. Pray God you're right."

"Pray God I am!" says Alan to me. "But where did I hear it? Well, well, it will be as it must." As we got nearer to the turn of the land the reefs began to be sown here and there on our very path, and Mr. Riach sometimes cried down to us to change the course. Sometimes indeed none too soon, for one reef was so close on the brig's weatherboard that when a sea burst upon it the lighter sprays fell upon her deck and wetted us like

The brightness of the night showed us these perils as clearly as by day, which was perhaps the more alarming. It showed me, too, the face of the captain as he stood by the steersman, now on one foot, now on the other, and sometimes blowing in his hands, but still listening and looking and as steady as steel. Neither he nor Mr. Riach had shown well in the fighting, but I saw they were brave in their own trade, and admired them all the more because I found Alan very white. "Ochone, David," said he, "this is no

the kind of death I fancy."

"What, Alan!" I cried, "you're not afraid?"

"No," said he, wetting his lips, "but you'll allow yourself, it's a cold ending." By this time, now and then sheering to one side or the other to avoid a reef, but still hugging the wind and the land, we had got around Iona and begun to come alongside Mull. The tide of the tail of the land ran very strong and threw the brig about. Two hands were put to the helm, and Hoseason himself would sometimes lend a help; and it was strange to see three strong men throw their weight upon the tiller, and it, like a living thing, struggle against and drive them back. This would have been the greater danger had not the sea been for some while free of obstacles. Mr. Riach besides announced from the top that he saw clear water

"Ye were right," said Hoseason to Alan. "Ye have saved the brig, sir; I'll mind that when we come to clear accounts." And I believe he not only meant what he said, but would have done it; so high a place did the Covenant hold in his affections.

But this is matter only for conjecture, things having gone otherwise than he forecast.

"Keep her away a point," sings out Mr. Riach. "Reef to windward!" And just at the same time the tide caught the brig and threw the wind out of her sails. She came round into the wind like a top, and the next moment struck the reef with such a dunch as threw us all flat upon the deck, and came near to shake Mr. Riach from his place upon the mast.

I was on my feet in a minute. The reef on which we had struck was close in under the southwest end of Mull, off a little isle they call Earraid, which lay low and black upon the larboard. Sometimes the swell broke clean over us; sometimes it only ground the poor brig upon the reef, so that we could hear her beat herself to pieces, and what with the great noise of the sails, and the singing of the wind, and the flying of the spray in the moonlight, and the sense of danger, I think my head was partly turned, for I could scarcely understand the things I saw.

Presently I observed Mr. Riach and the seamen busy around the skiff, and still in the same blank ran over to assist them, and as soon as I set my hand to work my mind came clear again. It was no very easy task, for the skiff lay amid-ships and was full of hamper, and the breaking of the heavier seas continually forced us to give over and hold on, but we all wrought like horses while we could.

Meanwhile such of the wounded as could move came clambering out of the fore scuttle and began to help, while the rest that lay helpless in their bunks harrowed me with screaming and begging to be saved. The captain took no part. It seemed he was struck stupid. He stood holding by the shrouds, talking to himself and groaning out aloud whenever the ship hammered on the rock. His brig was like wife and child to him. He had looked on day by day at the mishandling of poor Ransome, but when it came to the brig he seemed to suffer along with her.

All the time of our working at the boat I remember only one other thingthat I asked Alan, looking across at the shore, what country it was, and he answered it was the worst possible for him, for it was a land of the Campbells. We had one of the wounded men told off to keep a watch upon the seas and cry us warning. Well, we had the boat about ready to be launched when this man sung out pretty shrill, "For God's sake, hold on!" We knew by his tone that it was something more than ordinary, and sure enough there followed a sea so huge that it lifted the brig right up and canted her over on her beam. Whether the cry came too late or my hold was too weak I know not, but at the sudden tilting of the ship I was cast clean over the bulwarks into the sea. I went down and drank my fill, and then came up and got a blink of the moon, and then went down again. Presently I found I was holding to a spar, which helped me somewhat. And then all of a sudden I was in quiet water and began to come to myself. It was the spare yard I had got hold of, and I was amazed to see how far I had traveled from the brig. I hailed her indeed: but it was plain she was already out of cry. She was still holding together, but whether or not they had yet launched the boat I was too far off and too low down to see. While I was hailing the brig I spied a tract of water lying between us, where no great waves came, but which yet boiled white all over and bristled in the moon with rings and bubbles. Sometimes the whole tract swung to one side like the tail of a live serpent; sometimes for a glimpse it all would disappear and then boil up again. What it was I had no guess, which for the time increased my fear of it, but I now know it must have been the roost or tide race which had carried me away so fast and tumbled me about so cruelly, and at last, as if tired of that play, had flung out me and the spare yard upon its landward margin. I now lay quite becalmed, and began to feel that a man can die of cold as well as of drowning. The shores of Earraid were close in. I could see in the moonlight the dots of heather and the sparkling of the mica in the rocks. "Well," thought I to myself, "if I cannot get as far as that it's strange!" I had no skill of swimming, Essen water being small in our neighborhood, but when I laid hold upon the yard with both arms and kicked out with both feet I soon began to find that I was moving. Hard work it was, and mortally slow, but in about an hour of kicking and splashing I had got well in between the points of a sandy bay surrounded by low

The sea was here quite quiet, there was no sound of any surf, the moon shone clear and I thought in my heart I had never seen a place so desert and desolate. But it was dry land, and when at last it grew so shallow that I could leave the yard and wade ashore upon my feet I cannot tell if I was more tired or more grateful. Both at least I was, tired as I never was before that night, and grateful to God as I trust I have been often, though never with more cause.

THROUGH THE ISLE OF MULL. The Ross of Mull, which I had got upon, was rugged and trackless, being all bog and brier and big stone. There may be roads for them that know that country well; but for my part I had no better guide than my own nose, and no other landmark than Ben More. I aimed as well as I could for a smoke

"Was there one," I asked, "dressed like a gentleman?" He said they all wore rough greatcoats; but, to be sure, the first of them, the one that came alone, wore breeches and stockings, while the rest had sailors' trousers. "Ah," said I, "and he would have a feathered hat?"

He told me no: that he was bare headed like myself. At first I thought Alan might have lost his hat, and then the rain came in my mind, and I judged it more likely he had it out of harm's way under his greatcoat. This set me smiling, partly because my friend was safe, partly to think of his vanity in dress.

And then the old gentleman clapped his hand to his brow and cried out that must be the lad with the silver button. "Why, yes," said I in some wonder.
"Well, then," said the old gentleman, "I have a word for you that you are to follow your friend to his country by

Torosav. He then asked me how I had fared, and I told him my tale. A south countryman would certainly have laughed, but this old gentleman (I call him so because of his manners, for his clothes were dropping off his back) heard me all through with nothing but gravity and pity. When I had done he took me by the hand, led me into his hut (it was no better) and presented me before his wife, as if she had been the queen and

The good woman set oat bread before me and a cold grouse, patting my shoulder and smiling to me all the time, for she had no English, and the old gentleman, not to be behind, brewed me a strong punch out of their country spirit. All the while I was eating, and after that, when I was drinking the punch, I could scarce come to believe in my good fortune, and the house, though it was thick with the peat smoke and full of holes as a colander, seemed like a pal-

The punch threw me in a strong sweat and a deep slumber. The good people let me lie, and it was near noon of the next day before I took the road, my throat already easier and my spirits quite restored by good fare and good

Thought I to myself, "If these are the wild highlanders I could wish my own folk wilder." I not only started late, but I must have wandered nearly half the time. True, I met plenty of people, grubbing in little miserable fields that would not keep a cat, or herding little kine about the bigness of asses. The highland dress being forbidden by law since the rebellion, and the people condemned to the lowland habit, which they much disliked, it was strange to see the variety of their array. Some went bare, only for a hanging cloak or greatcoat, and carried their trousers on their backs like a useless burden; some had made an imitation of the tartan with little particolored stripes, patched together like an old wife's quilt; others again still wore the highland philibeg, but by putting a few stitches between the legs transformed it into a pair of trousers like a Dutchman's. All those makeshifts were condemned and punished, for the law was harshly applied, in hopes to break up the clan spirit; but in that out of the way sea bound isle there were few to make remarks and fewer to tell tales. At last, about eight at night, and already very weary, I came to a lone house, where I asked admittance and was refused, until I bethought me of the power of money in so poor a country, and held up one of my guineas in my finger and thumb. Thereupon the man of the house, who had hitherto pretended to have no English, and driven me from his door by signals, suddenly began to speak as clearly as was needful, and agreed for five shillings to give me a night's lodging and guide me the next day to Torosay. I slept uneasily that night, fearing ] should be robbed; but I might have spared myself the pain, for my host was no robber, only miserably poor and a great cheat. He was not alone in his poverty, for the next morning we must go about five miles to the house of what be called a rich man to have one of my guineas changed. This was perhaps a rich man for Mull; he would have scarce been thought so in the south, for it took all he had; the whole house was turned upside down and a neighbor brought under contribution before he could scrape together twenty shillings in silver. The odd shilling he kept for himself, protesting he could ill afford to have so great a sum of money lying "locked up." For all that, he was very courteous and well spoken, made us both sit down with his family to dinner and brewed punch in a fine china bowl, over which my rascal guide grew so merry that he refused to

I was for getting angry, and appealed to the rich man (Hector Maclean was his name) who had been a witness to our bargain and to my payment of the five shillings. But Maclean had taken his share of the punch, and vowed that no gentleman should leave his table it is with us, perhaps as partaking of after the bowl was brewed; so there hospitality, or perhaps because the trade was nothing for it but to sit and hear Jacobite toasts and Gaelic songs till all were tipsy and staggered off to the bed or the barn for their night's rest. religion; and doubtless that is a great temptation to the poor man." drink no more he showed me to a bed, and I lay down in very good spirits, having traveled the greater part of that big and crooked Island of Mull, from Earraid to Torosay, fifty miles as the crow flies, and with my wanderings much nearer a hundred, in four days and with little fatigue. Indeed, I was by far in better heart and health of

The Clever Bheel Robbers. It is said that once, before the English had become used to the maneuvers of the robbers in India, an officer with a party of horse was chasing a small body of Bheel robbers and was fast overtaking them. Suddenly the robbers ran behind a rock, or some such obstacle, which hid them for a moment, and when the soldiers came up the men had mysteriously disappeared. After an unavailing search, the officer ordered his men to dismount beside a clump of scorched and withered trees, and, the day being very hot, he took off his helmet and hung it on a branch by which he was standing. The branch in question turned out to be the leg of a Bheel, who burst into a scream of laughter and flung the astonished officer to the ground The clump of scorched trees suddenly became transformed into men, and the whole party dispersed in different directions the Englishmen could recover from their surprise, carrying with them the officer's helmet by way of trophy.-Harper's Young People.

The Right Answer. A judge, meeting a countryman, said to him, "Where are you going?" "How do I know?" was the gruff reply. The judge, taking it for a piece of impudence, said: "You don't know, you scamp? I'll teach you better manners.

Glucose Used for Curing Leather. "Glucose has grown to be one of the most valuable and indispensable commodities in our business," said T. J. Barnett, representative of a Massachusetts shoe factory. "It is used for curing leather and is of more service for that purpose than any other material we employ. I can tell at a glance a piece of shoe leather that hasn't been subjected to the curing properties of glucose by a peculiar red gloss that distinguishes it from leather that has come in contact with the juice extracted from corn. We get our main supply of glucose from Council Bluffs and Sioux City, Ia., though Kansas and Nebraska also have large manufacturing establishments engaged in its manufacture, or perhaps I should say its extraction. With the increase in the utilization of glucose by the boot and shoe manufactories and the big tanneries of the country, the industry is rapidly growing and promises

The Senatorial contest between Senator Stockbridge and ex-Governor Luce is early assuming an interesting | Eau Claire, died Thursday, Dec. 15, phase. The Senator took occasion to be interviewed by the Detroit News, and the interview brought forth a private letter from Mr. Luce, and since no retraction has been made or reply received, Mr. Luce gives the letter for publication. It explains itself:

COLDWATER, Mich., Nov. 23, 1892. HON, F. B. STOCKBRIDGE, Kalamazoo. Dar Sir:-You are reported in the Detroit News of Nov. 22 as saying that "Mr. Luce led a bolt against Zack Chandler years ago-a result which did not prove the best thing for us." Assuming that you are correctly reported, I ask you to recall the statement as publicly as you have made it. The truth is-and you might have known it, if you did not—that I was not a member of the legislature and had not been for eight years. And you might have known, if you did not, that I was not in the capitol, leading or following a bolt. And that I never induced or tried to induce a member of the legislature of 1875 to go into the Chandler bolt I had nothing on earth to do with it; this is known by all men who care to know the truth. While your dearest friends do not claim that you are much of a statesman or a close observer of passing events, yet they do claim that you are a man the more confidence to deny the accuracy of the interview or to withdraw the charge it made. I have hoped that the contest might be conducted without misrepresentation, slander or abuse. I have frequently seen personal attacks in the papers attributed to you, yet I have not resorted to this method of warfare. And if it is indulged in please remember that you are the aggressor. Awaiting your reply, I remain, yours

EVERY legislature of the past eight years has had a St. Joseph-Benton Harbor squabble on its hands, and it is faithfully promised that the incoming legislature shall not be an exception. Benton Harbor is going to try once more to get possession of the land to the river, and of course St. Joseph will be there to fight it. The duty of the legislature to make one city of the two has not changed.

How any publisher can afford to give so much for so little surprised us. But his Christmas number embarrases us. His other numbers centained 32 pages of music; but this number contains 56 pages and 19 different pieces of music.

Social Strugglers. One of the most interesting phases of American life is found in the struggles for supremacy which are constantly taking place in the ever changing condition of society in the larger cities. Bjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, who spends his winters on Murray Hill and his summers in one of the most fashionable of the Long Island watering places, has written a story for THE COSMO-POLITAN dealing with those phases of American life which are likely to be received with the widest interest. The powerful strokes of the sturdy nouveau riche nowhere been so truly and so wittily presented as in the case of the Bulkeleys, whose fortunes are begun in the September Cosmopolitan. Side by side with the fortunes of those, who have so much money that the most serious concern of life becomes the question of how to spend, is a discussion of those fortun s with whom the question is how to provide the necessaries of life. This is done by Mr. Walker, editor of THE COSMOPOITAN who chooses to view the Homestead cifficulties as an object lesson in the Evolution of a Republican form of government. He considers dispassionately all the dangers to the state arising from the extensive colonies of workmen brought together under our present system of concentration and the growing imperfection in our system E. church here, and the church and his of distribution, and does not hesitate many friends will welcome the addi- to say that reform should come from tion to his help for the work in this the hands of those who fix the laws regulating distribution. The laws of health are taught in the schools; but not in a way to be of much practical benefit are never illustrated by living examples, which in many cases might easily be done.

If some scholar who has just constructed a construction of the process of the construction of the construc tracted a cold was brought before the school so that all could hear the dry, loud cough and know its signisicance; see the thin white coating on the tongue, and later, as the cold developed, see the profuse watery expectoration and thin watery discharge from the nose, not one of them would ever forget what the first symptoms of a cold were. The scholar should then be given Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely, that all might see that even a severe cold could be cured in one or two days, or at least greatly mitigated, when properly treated as soon as the first symptoms appear. This remedy is famous for its cures of coughs, colds and croup. It is made especially for these diseases and is the met reliable medicine known for the purpose. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Barmore.

"In no way can Americans so effectively inform hemselves on the subjects that claim public atten tion from one month to unother as by reading the Yorth American Review."

INATHE North American Review YOU WILL ALWAYS FIND

The Topics are always those which are uppermost in the public mind—in morals, politics, science, literature, business, finance, industrial economy, social and municipal afairs, etc.—in short, all subjects on which Americans require and desire to be informed. No magazine follows so closelt from month to month the course of public interest. All subjects are treated of impartially on both sides.

The Con ributors to the Review are the men and women to whom the world looks for the most authoritative statements on the subjects of the day. No other periodical can point to such a succession of distinguished writers. The list is a roll of the people who are making the history, controlling the affairs, and leading the opinion of the age, such as Mr. Gladstone, the Prime Minister of England; Mr. Blaine; Signor Crispi, Ex-Prime Minister of Italy; Baron Hirschi H. R. H. the Count of Paris; Cardinal Gibbons; Bishops Potter, Doane, Mallalieu, Foss, etc., etc.

The Time when these subjects are treated of by these contributors is the very time when the subjects are in the public mind—not a month or two after people have censed to think of them. The promptness with which the Review furnishes its readers with the most authoritative information upon the topics of the day is one of its most valuable features.

Preceeding Against Dr. Briggs. Haw York, Dec.18.—Before the reguiar ervice in Association hall this morni ; Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., referred to a number of slanderous stories eirabited by a certain class of newspapers in New York. Among other things he

"I have given up as hopeless the task of keeping up with newspaper rumors and lies about myself. For the future I have firmly resolved to adopt Dr. Talmage's plan-'Make no reply to newspaper attacks.'

If there have been ten lines of truth printed about me in the last three months, I haven't seen them. I have read at least fifty columns of baldheaded lies. This sort of thing used to make me furious. I have come to the conclusion that every Christian should be willing to lose lds reputation if need be. It is only a small pride anyway that makes a man care for his reputation-character only counts. And character is within, not without. When my friends in the future hear disturbing reports of me, let them examine the source, and they will usually find there the cause. Hereafter, as for me, I have laid my reputation on God's altar. It is none of my business, and I have no time to look after it."

The review of current events this morning was devoted to the contest between

Byrnes and Parkhurst. He said: Mr. Byrnes has mistaken the issues in the fight for the enforcement of law against vice in New York. He curses Dr. Parkhurst and weeps over the fate of the fallen woman. These tears are very edifying in view of the fact that the whole point of the movement is against police negligence and complicity in growing rich from the tribute of vice

-not against the victims. Let Byrnes dry his tears of compassion for the women who have been taxed so long by his department, if the words of the March grand jury be true, buckle on his armor and perform the duties of the office he has sworn to do. He is a servant of the state—a simple executioner of law. He is not a preacher of compassion. Let him attend to his own business, and then Dr. Parkhurst can go back to his pulpit. We all pity the fallen sinner, and we are trying to proteet this poor creature from police blackmail by making the department enforce

If the law is wrong, repeal it and protect the gamblers and prestitutes. If these reople are worthy of special protection, let the state proceed to charter them; otherwise let the police do less talking and more work. This movement is an age revolution that will result in the larger incarnation of righteousness in public life. Let lawbreakers and corrupt officials see to it. It cannot be staid by threats or lies. It is a genuine revival of the public conscience. There are not knaves enough in office, feels enough in the pulpit or devils enough in hell to defeat it. Its pioneers may blunder, but the work goes on. It is the movement of the God of righteousness incarnating himself in society. "He that falleth on this stone shall be broken, but upon whomsoever it shall fall it shall grind him to pow-

And Jesus prawered and said, Master, we saw one easting out devils in thy name, and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us. But Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not, for he that is not against you is for you.—Luke The recently inaugurated heresy trials that center in New York and in the west have raised in this century in America, with an emphasis never raised before. the questions of occlesiasticism, of tradition, of authority in ecclesiasticism. and of the basis of Protestant Christianity. It is a curious spectacle, a curious condition in which to find the church of Christ today. It is worth the while of any man who loves his fellow man and who is interested in the subject of Christianity to go into one of those churches and watch the proceedings for awhile and review from that standpoint the city with its people-the great, dark, vulgar crowd of men and women that sweeps before the doors of that church with restless feet, with more restless hearts, sinning, falling, stumbling, trying to rise, failing, dying, being lost. Then from that point look back through history at the story of the church of Christ, look out upon the future and the problems that confront it, and seriously ask yourselves the question, Is this the work of the church of Jesus?

What is the matter with those men? A great court assembled, the whole working force of a church-for what? To try two men. What is the matter with the men? Are they infidel, bad men? Does any man believe that they are not Christian men, have never been regenerated? No, I have never heard any man say that they are not true followers of Jesus Christ, with the best light they have. No man has questioned the fact of their regeneration, or personal faith in Christ, or that they are true Christian men. What is the matter with them, then? The difficulty seems to be that they differ in intellectual opinions with certain other men inside of their ecclesiastical body.

NOT AN INTELLECTUAL BATTLE. Does Christianity depend on those intellectual difficulties? No. Hawthorne said, looking at an ecclesiastical library, that if the simplest man can know the Lord and be saved without the use of any of these books they struck him as sublime impertinence—that is to say, the essential point of Christianity is not to be found in these intellectual processes. You are not touching the fundamental questions of Christianity, because men are saved in Christ without your higher or lower criticism, or any sort of criticism, old school or new school. Men are saved by a simple, personal application of the spirit of the living God to their hearts, and it is communicated by a simple man speaking the word of life to another man. That is the essence of Christianity.

Then what is all this noise about-all this concentration of energy on behalf of the church? Well, a man says, it is to settle the question of ecclesiastical authority, so that we will know whether this man-not that he is a Christianbut whether he is a Presbyterian! My friend, you would not mean to say that Presbyterianism is one thing and Chris-Yanity is another, would you? If you to. Presbyterianism is gone up; that is the end of it. If you agree that the discussion is not about the fundamental essence of Christianity, then what is it about?

You know what Protestantism means. Martin Luther went out of the Roman church because that church insisted that its machinery was of supreme importance, whereas Luther said that the Bible, not the tradition or interpretation of the church, is the rule of faith and practice, and man is answerable not to the church first, but to God. Thus he promulgated the great doctrine upon which Protestantism rests — this universal priesthood of believers, with the Bible itself in its original tongues the only rule of faith and practice. If there is a church that arises and says, "We have traditions ouside of the Bible by which a man must be tried.' that church is not Protestant. That church has failed in the fundamental essence of Protestantism, because Protestantism says the Bible alone, and no man's interpretation of the Bible shall be the only rule. The moment you take any standard of human erection you have gone right back to where Catholicism was when Luther came out.

Presbyterianism and Christianity-

what is it all about? My friend, I am afraid it is an awful mistake; that the whole thing is a fatal error upon the part of those who have brought these men to trial, and that there is no basis within the domain of real Christianity for such a procedure.

TOO MUCH CONTROVERSY.

The persecution of any man who is a true Christian in heart and life for difference in intellectual opinions is fundamentally un-Christian and has always disgraced the church of Jesus Christ in the history of this world. What has this spirit of persecution done for us? John came back to Christ and said, "Master, I saw a man casting out devils who seemed to be doing great work, but he was not with us, was not orthodox, and we told him he had no right." Jesus said: "Forbid him not. In this great fight with evil and wrong if a man is not against you he is with you. Let him alone." Jesus rebuked this spirit in one of his disciples and laid down a principle of law that makes impossible any heresy trial on the fundamental grounds of loyalty to Jesus. What has this spirit of persecution done for the church of Christ in the history of the past?

First-It has repressed, crucified and destroyed the noblest ministers of the truth. Those who have been the prophets of God have been tho men thus crucified. Jesus himself was the first great heretic in line. The orthodox church in his day was Judaism, and they crucified him because he was not orthodox. The sanhedrim tried him on the specific charge of thus violating what they said were the fundamentals of the religion of Judaism. It was this spirit that made the tragedy of Calvary possible.

Come down the path of history, and you find that the martyrs in their long procession were men who were thus hunted by that spirit of persecution. John Wesley now has his name in Westminster abbey. Certainly he is enthroned in the hearts of the English world. But what did they say about him when he started? This most innocent and generous man was called a liar, a swindler, the most notorious criminal

Now John Wesley is a saint, not only in Methodism, but in the church of Jesus Christ universal. And just so far as the Episcopal church does not agree with that it is outside the pale of Christianity. It was that spirit-not walking with us, not doing as we do-that persecuted John Wesley on through the ages until long after his death, until he was enthroned in the hearts of humanity. It is this spirit that destroys the individuality of men and keeps men that have character and power from coming up and doing the work of the Lord for fear that some blessed old heresy hunter is sitting there with his blunderbuss ready to open fire on him. In the history of the past whenever a heresy trial has come up it has been the hour for little men to appear; men whose sole opportunity to figure in the history of ecclesiasticism is in the hour when they may accuse some man whose shoes they are not worthy to unlatch. Men who in that hour rise and with the finger of scorn and with vituperation and an arraignment that goes to the very essence of the man's work assert that he is wrong and against the Christ because he differs in opinion from them. It is this process that has crucified free thinking manhood in Protestant Christianity ever since Christ came into the world and be-

THE AGES OF PERSECUTION. Second-It is this spirit that has heaped on the church of Jesus the infamy of the history of the thumbscrew, the rack and torch and flame; that has disgraced Christianity until a Roman Catholic does not dare to mention certain periods of history because the ghosts of all the dead rise np. They try to rub it out and write it over again in fair letters, but the spirits of the dead rise, and the cries of Galileo and Bruno still ring round the world.

It was this spirit that burned Servetus at the stake, and that made John Calvin agree to his execution, the spirit that deluged England with blood and disgraced the name of Protestantism in Christianity along with Catholicism; this spirit that came across the water. and even with the Pilgrim Fathers disgraced them in Salem village, and the pioneers of the south who whipped the Baptists as the Quakers were whipped and killed in England by those who failed to fulfill the spirit of Jesus. There is a story in Harper's Magazine in this Christmas number, written in the form of a drama, about a persecution that occurred in Salem village, and in which old Giles Corey was pressed between two millstones because he would not retract. Dark as hell is the shadow it throws across those early ages, but it is true to life. And all through the history of the ages, wherever the church has been disgraced, you will trace it in the last analysis to that spirit of narrowness and bigotry that Jesus rebuked.

Third-With the most malignant stupidity in ages past this spirit has persisted in arraigning the reason, heart and knowledge of the race against the church of Jesus Christ. When God is truth and knowledge, when to know the truth is to know God, when all the light science and reason can throw is to glorify God, yet there have been men who have persisted in arraigning the church against science, against philosophy, and arraigning reason and philosophy against the church and saying there is antagonism between them, and so driving away from the church men that think and reason and can see God in the dewdrop and the star, in the sunlight and the flower. They have thus persisted until they have driven thousands away, simply because men have believed that it is impossible to know God when they accepted the opinions of such men. "ORTHODOXY IS MY DOXY."

In a certain meeting the other day there was a speech made which another man did not like. He could not hold in. so he arose and said: "Mr. Chairman, I want to give notice in this meeting that I am not going to allow any such utterances to be made with impunity. I am going to fight for the Word of God." He was not going to fight for the Word of God, but for his own personal, stupendous opinions about the Word of

It is one thing for a man to get up every bristle he has and fight for his own opinions about the Bible, and another thing to fight for the truth of God. The man who fights for the Bible and its truth must lay aside his fighting armor and go down on his knees and read those languages until he knows them as a child its alphabet, know what the prophet said when he wrote it in Hebrew or Greek, and then study all history that bears upon it and seek with a devout heart to know what the Spirit thus teaches. That is the man who is trying to hold up the Bible. The man who is trying to hold up his own opinions is altogether different.

Fourth—This spirit it is that has driven out the manhood of the church in this day until it has developed scores of secret societies. I have talked to a great many who have not been to church for vears, and it is the same old story. A man says: "I did not believe fully what was presented when I first went to church. I could not see my way to accept Christianity." I am talking good men, whose lives are moral and upright, and yet who are outside of the church of Christ. "That is not Christianity," I say. "Yes, but that was all that was presented to me."

I talked to a young man the other night who had never become a Christian because of an exposition of Christianity he heard from a certain man which to my mind was a travesty on the name of Christianity. It is this spirit that has driven the manhood of the church out. If you go into the average orthodox church today you will tim five women to one man. What is the difficulty? The women are naturally nearer God. It is harder to drive them out; they won't go. We see the brain and the reason of the race thus arraigned against the church, and manhood thus driven out.

MEANWHILE THY PEOPLE PERISH. Think of the masses of the people alienated from the Christ by these men who have insisted that the one thing to do is not to save the world, but to be extremely orthodox on questions of belief! asked a man one day: "What is the matter with the city? Why do we not save it?" He said, "I will tell you, young man; we are not orthodox."

In one sense this is a fact, of course. Orthodoxy is loyalty to the heart of Christ. If the church were loyal to the heart of Christ, then we would triumph. But to sit down and split hairs whether this creed should read, "He 'descended into' hell, or 'went down into' hell," or to reason about a question of scholasticism, is as far from Christianity as hell from heaven. It is not your creed tinkering but the life that tells. Profession, you say, is important; but the life tells whether the profession is a reality.

What do you want to do with Profess or Briggs? I never saw a man with a truer spirit personally in my life. What good will come of it if you kick him out? Think of it! A man whose life is in harmony—to the limb of conscience to the Christ and his truth. Put him out for a question of opinion! Is not life the real creed of man after all? Twelve young women met last January, and each of them discussed the question of matrimony. They decided unanimously to enter upon the profession of maidenhood, professed an emancipation from What is the result? Eleven months have passed. Nine of them are married, and two of them have breach of promise suits, and the other one is

It is one thing for us to make a profession and another thing to live a life that is in harmony with that profession. After all, you search for the supreme test of creed not in the outer expression of intellectual conviction or opinion or bias, but deeper down in the heart and motive. In the life where you strike the fountain of man's essential being, there you come for your test.

A STRIFE OF TECHNICALITIES. Judged by such a test, what is the meaning of such persecutions today? Oh, the crime of it! What is the point of battle-about what? Not about Christianity, for that is something else. Not about that which saves man from sin. for that is something clse. Not about Protestantism, for this process is the stultification of Protestantism. What is the difference separating Dr. Shedd, for instance, from Dr. Briggs today-in life and heart two noble Christian men? One man means one thing, while the other means the same thing in essence, but uses different terms.

i reminds me of a good old negro preacher in Pennsylvania called "Old Bony." He preached on Sunday and did not get enough to support himself, so went out and collected bones and sold them to a fertilizing establishment. A man who had collected bones on his farm and knew about the old preacher met him one day and told him to come over and get the bones he had. The old man said he was very much obliged and went right over for them.

This farmer's wife came out to meet him. She was a very acrimonious, angular woman, and the old man said, "I have come after your bones." She was very angry and threatened to kill him. She wanted to know what in the world he meant. He said the farmer had told him to come. She had just been railing at him that morning for being so lazy and fat, and took it for granted that he had taken this means of vengeance and raged in a perfect fury at this old man. When he explained, the whole difficulty was settled, but it took her a whole week to get in good humor. It was simply a misunderstanding-not of terms, for the same words were used, but of accent.

What good is to come of this sort of discussion? The old school used to discuss the question, How many angels can sit on the point of a needle at one time? Men were born, lived, died and were lost while they went on with their discussion. Oh, let the prophets of God remember that Jesus said, "The whole law is summed up in this one wordthou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself." And he who puts a stumbling block in his neighbor's way, as these great heresy trials put them in the way of the world, I would not stand in his shoes! Let the church save men, not discuss scholasticism.

Murders in Massachusetts.

"It is surprising," said a guest from Ohio at the Lindell, "what remarkable murders have happened in Massachusetts, not counting the witch executions, the most pathetic of all. But those dark Salem murders, due to superstition, occurred in other parts of the world, and I leave them out. The most dramatic murder sensation this country ever had was that in which John White Webster, the Harvard professor, the chemist and author, was the criminal and his creditor, Dr. George Parkman, the victim. It occurred in November, 1849, at Webster's laboratory, and he was hanged in August of the following year. After committing the murder in his lonely room Webster proceeded so dismember the body and to burn the fragments as fast as he could. But, though he was a chemist and anatomist and had a laboratory where he was safe from intrusion, the job was too much for him.

"Parkman was traced to Webster's room, and parts of the body were found, though not in shape to be identified. The teeth, raked from the ashes, were identified by the dentist who had filled them, and of more than 100 witnesses examined, including Dr. O. W. Holmes, who was questioned as an expert on anatomical proportion, the dentist was far the most important. Then there was Jesse Pomeroy, the Boston 'boy with the white eye,' who tortured and murdered children smaller than himself with a fiendish enjoyment of his cruelty that went beyond what is usually conceived of the devil's own villainy."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Home for Cats and Dogs.

If a certain prosperous business man in this city carries out his avowed intentions there will soon be a well equipped home for forsaken and indigent cats and dogs in this vicinity, with a guaranteed annual income and a provisional endowment of $50,000. The gentleman in question has acquired a comfortable fortune by close attention to business, and have ing no family of his own he proposes to adopt that portion of the cat and dog family which nobody else will own. He has a mania for picking up sick or disabled animals in the streets and carrying them to his home. Sometimes he will have a dozen animals under treatment, and it becomes necessary to employ an attendant. "I believe," says he "that these poor creatures have feelings the same as human beings, and their sufferings when cast into the streets sick and hungry ought to appeal to every heart. I have now more money than I need for my own wants, and I propose to devote at least a portion of it to the amelioration of the condition of a class of unfortunates whom everybody else seems disposed to neglect."-New York Times.

The Good and Bad of Tobacco. Dr. B. W. Richardson has the last word in The Idlers' Club Symposium on the subject of smoking. It is not, he considers, so bad as drinking—if drinking deserves the gallows, smoking deserves penal servitude for life-but it is radically bad. It disturbs the circulation, it often impedes digestion, it interferes with the fine adjustments of the 'you-not only of the taste for whisky, senses, and sometimes it impairs the lenses of vision altogether. Moreover, it generates a craving for itself in the nervous organism, always an evil sign, and indirectly it calls up not infrequently hereditary devils like cancer, which would be latent if left alone. "Think of this when you smoke tobacco," says this authority, "and say is the habit not one more honored in the breach than the observance. Without either malice or uncharitableness, my vote is emphatically ave on that question."-London News.

How Some Republican Boarders Sought to Teach a Democrat an Object Lesson. Among the amusing incidents of the campaign the following may be cited: Several young men connected with the Republican national headquarters had been boarding for the last six weeks at a fashionable place in East Thirtyfirst street, not far from Fifth avenue. The enthusiasm displayed by these young men over their cause was something remarkable. It was certainly infectious, for every last boarder, with but a single exception, could see nothing less than a complete walkover for the Republican

The single exception happened to be a young lawyer with strong Democratic tendencies. These he continued to maintain in spite of all arguments and pleadings to the contrary.

The enthusiastic young Republicans finally began to taunt the lawyer with not being willing to back his opinions with cash. This proposition, however, appeared to suit the latter exactly, for he replied:
"Well, I'm not a betting man, but if it will be any accommodation to you I don't mind going $250 even against Harrison on the general result." This was considerably more than the young men had bargained for, but they were game, and besides, as they were sure of winning, such a sum of money was well worth trying for. Accordingly the bet was made and the landlady chosen as stakeholder.

Then the other boarders, thinking that they saw a "good thing," began offering bets on the Republican ticket at tempting odds. These were duly covered by the lawyer in every instance. Even the landlady caught the infection, and soon her bet of fifty dollars even that Harrison would carry Indiana was recorded with the rest. On the afternoon of election day the boarders held a sort of jubilee meeting. After more or less debate on the subject they finally arrived at the conclusion that the lawyer ought to be punished in some way for presuming to differ so strongly with them in politics. As a result of this determination a collection was taken up then and there for the purchase of a large soup tureen, which was to be placed in front of the lawyer at dinner the next day. The tureen was bought, and amid great rejoicing was placed on exhibition in the parlor. Then came the awful tidings of the Democratic tidal wave. Bright and early on Wednesday morning the lawyer appeared at the breakfast table. His countenance wore an expansive smile. The other boarders were also present, and so were the young Republicans from "headquarters." The countenances of the latter were pictures of mute despair. "Mary," observed the lawyer to the servant, "I'll have a large bowl of oatmeal and milk for breakfast this morning. "And—shem, Mary, you might serve it in that soup tureen which you will find in the parlor. The meal was then finished in silence. -New York Herald.

Her Skill Was Useful. "Talking of feminine courage," said Richard Hepworth, a guest of the Southern, "reminds me of a young lady of Ogle county, Ills., who chanced to be a cousin of mine. My uncle lived on a farm some distance from the town of Oregon, and his wife and daughter were regarded as the most beautiful women in the county. He was frequently absent from home and had taught his daughter to handle a revolver. During one of his absences two of the most villainous looking footpads that ever dodged the gallows called at the house. They lounged up to the open windows of the sitting room and coolly announced their intention of spending the night in the house. They knew the ladies were alone and talked freely of their diabolical pur-

"The mother was overcome by fright and fainted away, but the young lady reached the mantelpiece, picked up a navy 44 and opened fire. She killed one of the intruders and mortally wounded the other. If every man would take the precaution to teach his wife and daughters how to manipulate a six shooter the daily papers would not contain so many accounts of brutal outrages. Every woman who is compelled to pass much of her time beyond the protection of her male relatives should learn to use a pisto' "-St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

ter. 'It serves to bring Cincinnati prominently before the country."-Pittsburg Chronicle. Cured the Wrong Thirst, A most disreputable looking drunkard went to an inebriates' retreat where they squirt sobriety into people's arms and give them whisky dosed with ipecac to get them disgusted with it. He said to the man in charge of the factory; "I have the whisky habit badly and want to get cured. I don't desire ever to touch another drop. "Pay twenty-five dollars a week, sign the bylaws and the thing's done," said the manager.

After three weeks the patient went into the business office looking very sour. "See here," he said, "I find that I'm losing my liking for brandy. How about that? You must have given me the wrong medicine. I came here to be cured of the whisky habit." "Certainly," replied the manager blandly. "Our treatment will relieve rage. "I came here distinctly to be attended to on account of my liking for whisky, and now you've been monkeying with my predilection for brandy. What kind of a skin game is this you're running? Why, I had a brandy thirst on me that I wouldn't sell for $1,000,000. My scheme was to get up a dislike for whisky so's I'd have all my taste to devote to brandy. I've been taken in, sir. The thing's a scheme of the most contemptible order. I'll find out in the courts whether you can go around making people turn against brandy against their will." Society Girls Drinking from Bottles. A young lady, a "society" young lady, pretty as a picture and as fashionably dressed as only young ladies can be who can command means and good taste, taking a good "swig" or a "pull." or whatever one may please to call it, from the neck of a bottle of whisky, is not a sight calculated to please the æsthetic, but it was a common sight at the great Yale-Princeton football game on Thanksgiving day. It was simply another demonstration of the truth of the proverb that "circumstances alter cases." No young man of good breeding would ordinarily, when honored as the escort of a young lady, think of carrying a little brown bottle in his pocket that he might invite his fair companion to "smile with him." The Thanksgiving day football game, though, is no ordinary occasion. It means sitting around in the open air on a November day for several hours, an ordeal that, in spite of warm wraps, is calculated to make anybody feel as though the blood in the body was slowly but surely becoming frappeed.

So the wise young man overcomes whatever scruples he may have when he starts for the football game and puts in his pocket a little brown bottle of ardent spirits. Then after he has become thoroughly chilled he produces it sheepishly and proffers it to the fair one at his side. At first she thinks she won't, but after a little while the chances are that she will think she will. By the time that the first half of the game is over she has become reconciled to the circumstances which alter her case and accepts the proffered flask as a matter of course .-New York Times.

Curious Minerals of Utah. The mountains and valleys of Utah are perfect magazines of odd minerals, some found only sparingly in other places, while a great many kinds are plentiful there that are found in no other locality on the globe. "Teatite," a soft, resinous substance found in quantities in the Bear River mountains, was unknown to the mineralogist prior to 1890. and is even now wholly unknown in other quarters of the earth. Experts who have given it thorough tests are of the opinion that it will finally become amber of the finest quality.

"Ozokerite," a species of natural mineral wax, a rarity elsewhere, is found in large quantities in this locality of queer mineral substances. It is an acid and waterproof, and makes the finest insulating material known.

"Gilsonite," another variety of mineral wax, contains 80 per cent. of carbon or asphalt in its pure form. The Utah vein is almost three feet wide and a mile in length.—St. Louis Republic.

A French Church Revolt At Berdenes, in the department of Gers, France, a priest was appointed by the archbishop whom the parishoners did not like. The townsmen locked up the church. The priest attempted to address them, but was cried down and hooted, and now they have sent word to the archbishop saying they would call a Protestant clergyman unless their wishes concerning the appointment of their priest were heeded. Such a proceeding is altogether unheard of in that part of France, and shows to what extent the authority of the church of Rome has declined, even in France, which was formerly considered the most reliable stronghold of the Roman Catholic religion .-

Chicago Journal. She Dreaded the Examination. A good story is going the rounds concerning the preliminary examinations of pupils at the London Guildhall School of Music. A young and pretty girl presented herself and modestly asked the highly respected principal whether the ordeal could not be dealt with by the lady superintendent. It was then Sir Joseph Barnby's task to explain to the blushing damsel that the much feared 'examination" was not a physical affair, but was merely one in the elements of music in order to determine in which class she should be placed.—San Fran-

Origin of Butterflies. An old story tells that when Jupiter and Juno were married, the wedding was solemnized with great splendor. A feast was given to which all the gods were invited. Many princes and fine nobles from the earth were also invited.

Among the rest came a Persian prince named Chrysalus. He was "rich in golden attire, in gay robes and with a majestical presence." He was attended by a train of gorgeous ly dressed followers, lords and knights and fine gentlemen. But with all his state and riches, Chrysalus was but a foolish fellow, with an empty head and a silly speech. And it is very likely that the osten tatious parade of his rank and posses sions only served to make the fact of his lack of wit more apparent and more absurd.

Seeing a prince come in such pomp and state, all the gods rose to do him honor. They hastened to give him a lofty seat and to welcome him in their midst; but Jupiter, who was no doubt a man of fine perceptions, no sooner looked at him than he "perceived that he was a light, phantastic, idle fellow." In his wrath that such a man should be found in such high place, Jupiter suddenly turned him and all his proud followers into butterflies, and condemned them to rove about forever amusing themselves, but fulfilling no good purpose. - New York World.
