the free edges lie in the direction away from the skin. The surface of a hair, therefore, is like that of a piece of fur or cloth covered with nap. Rubbed from root to tip it is found to be smoother

This being the case, it is evident that particles of matter in contact with a hair must find their direction of easiest motion to lie toward the tip end of the hair and away from its root. So by virtue of the peculiar structure of its surface the hair serves gradually to remove from the skin which it covers all foreign particles which may have found lodg-

The oily secretion emanating from the follicles of the hair probably assists this action by gathering up tho fine particles of extraneous dust and of scales from the skin, and thus enabling the hair to retain them, so to speak, in the grasp of its curious system of brushes.

Every movement of the hair, however produced, must tend to set the particles sticking upon it in motion, and as we have already seen, that motion can be in only one direction. -Youth's Companion.

For Wearers of Diamond Studs. When the last race had been run and the result announced at Latonia. there was a big rush for the train standing opposite the grand stand. In a trice the cars were filled and the platforms crowded.

The train had just started when a man on one of the forward cars convulsively clutched at his shirt bosom, and then the air was rent with that old squeal, "My studs have been pinched!" and a well dressed man slid off the train, which passed rapidly on, leaving him standing on the end of the platform. His name was not learned by the reporter.

Detectives Rohan of Chicago and Crawford and Schnucks were standing on the platform of another car and soon heard of the little episode. They went through the train, but could recognize no dips and so could do nothing.

"Well, it seems to me," said Detective Rohan, "that if any one has got a good stone, which is the same as money, he should take care of it. There is no use in having stones pinched."

"Some of the late settings have screw fastenings, so that a dip to get them must cut the twist, and few dips are going to carry pliers," said Detective Crawford. "I'll tell you something that is better than that," said Detective Rohan. "When a man puts his diamond stud in his shirt front, if he will only screw it into a little wad of cotton at the back no clip can get it out. A little cotton batton would save many a fine stone."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Definition For the Art of Doctoring. It is the individuality of cases, the fact that to one patient we must give a teaspoonful of medicine, while tho next will take two, that is at the basis pail turned upside down and set out of the ultimate failure of all "cure in the street. She was bent nearly alls." And, oddly enough, it is this very individuality of cases, bringing with it to the physician so many hours of anxious thought, that makes him reach out and welcome the new treatment. He is so terribly anxious to relieve his patients, to do them good, that in the blind maze of uncertainty in which he finds himself he hails with delight anything that promises hopefully. The practice of medicine might be defined not unfairly as a succession of conundrums presented for solution, with death to the patient as the penalty for failure. Who, then, may blame the physician for welcoming that which calls itself the key? It is the fashion to blame physicians for their ready adherence to the new, but it is an unjust fashion when the facts are considered.—Cv-rus Edson, M. D., in North American Review. . The Primeval Atmosphere. An article by Dr. Phipson in The Chemical News contains a bold suggestion that at remote periods the atmosphere contained a very large amount of carbonic acid, and, in fact, consisted principally of that gas, nitrogen and vapor of water. The crust of the earth may thus have possibly cooled and solidified in an atmosphere containing a large proportion of carbonic acid. In volcanic regions enormous quantities of this gas are still given off, and the hypothesis is largely supported by the important part which carbonic acid is known to play in the formation of many crystals. Extreme Courtesy In a Studio. "Dear me, I have rubbed some of the color off your picture onto my wrap! I don't know whether to feel worse for you or myself," said Miss Harkaway to Smecre. "How much did the wrap cost?"

This has resulted in an unwritten law that every player shall "field" or throw back to its owner every ball which strays from its proper court into his court. The reply for the courtesy is invariably, "Thank you!"

The next step from this was easy. Not knowing your neighbor's name three times out of a hundred you are unable to call his attention in any very graceful manner to your ball, which has rolled into his court unseen by him.

is not dignified. To call out "Mister!" or "Oh, mister!" is stiff. To yell, "Oh, ma'am!" is dangerous, for she may be a miss or vice versa. So players have fallen into the way in such cases of shouting, "Thank you!" with the emphasis on "you," at the same time indicating the person addressed by pointing with the racket. The player so pointed at understands that he is being thanked in advance for returning a ball which he has not yet seen. But the absurdity comes in when

At this interview the count said: "I have read your book, or at least the greater part of it. But I must tell you at once, and frankly, that I entertain a general dislike to all poetry, and for this reason—that it prevents one from giving a clear, intelligent and comprehensive expression to one's thoughts and ideas. Why should we laboriously strain to conform our expression to the rhythmical and metrical rules of versification when we can the better and more clearly convey our thoughts in simple and lucid prose? It is as if, instead of permitting me the free use of my limbs, you tether my legs and make me hobble around the object of observation. "In order to be succinct, concise and comprehensively expressive I always strive so to construct my language that every reader, even he of the scantiest intelligence, can, without the slightest trouble or reflection. at once grasp my meaning. If I vrote in verse, my primary and distracting labor would be to conform to the laws and rules of versification, and my readers would be left to sift out for themselves the thoughts and ideas I wished to convey. If I may be perfectly frank with you;" said the count, with a peculiarly bitter expression on his face, "I would say that verses are generally the production of literary wantonness, literary frivolity and literary insolence."— London News.

The Mean Man Heard It. A young fellow dining in the suburbs the other night endeavored to make himself agreeable by a succession of "good stories" which he had gathered in the city. When we are so situated as to be able to confine sound waves, as in a tube or pipe, a very slight disturbance can be heard for a long distance. In the cast iron water pipe of Paris, which forms a continuous tube with only two slight crooks, and these near its middle, the lowest whisper at one end can be distinctly heard at the other, although the pipe is 3,120 feet in length. A Wandering Burglar Breaks the Lock and Is Thanked For It. Two gentlemen, a journalist and an artist, were about to leave a small hotel in one of the avenues leading from the Arc de Triomphe, where they had spent the evening. Unfortunately the concierge could not find the key. It was impossible for the visitors to get out or for the tenants of the house who were abroad to get in. It was about 11 o'clock, and there were but few passersby. The two men, who knew a tenant on the ground floor, got out by one of his windows and promised to find a locksmith. All the shops were shut, however, and never a sergent de ville could be found. Failing to find an officer they asked where was the nearest police station. The one in the Ternes had been shut up for a couple of hours, the one at Batignolles the same, and at the third they were simply sent about their business. Meanwhile it was 1 o'clock, and a long line of benighted tenants was drawn up before the fast closed door. Their would be deliverers were beginning to lose courage when a suspicious looking individual stumbled against them. The artist, who had all his wits about him, stopped the man quietly, and taking off his hat said, "I beg your pardon, sir, but you don't happen to have a jimmy and a set of false keys in your pocket?" The man looked at them suspiciously for a moment and then whispered, "Is it to crack a crib?" "Alas!" replied the journalist, "we know of no one whom we can rob at present. Our friends are all at the seaside." And then the artist explained to the night wanderer what was the service they required of him. "All right, but get the inquisitive people out of the way. I don't want to give free lessons." They returned to the house, and the two friends announced that a locksmith had been found, and begged the benighted ones to make way for him. They let him pass, and the burglar opened the door in the twinkling of an eye, amid a per-

"Sir, among pals!"-Pall Mall Bud-Giving Fido an Airing. A new and rather embarrassing occupation has been found for domestic servants. It seems that a young woman who is engaged as a "maid at tendant" at a salary of £2 a month is sometimes called upon to take her mistress' dog out for a walk in the streets at 12:45 in the morning. Such at least was the story told by an aggrieved plaintiff at the city of London court, and it is hardly surprising that she declined the duty of personally conducting the pet at such an hour. Thereupon she was discharged, but her mistress said that the reason of her dismissal was her "excessive insolence." The learned commissioner in the result held that the servant could claim a month's wages, but the delicate question of dog law which had been raised in the course of the case was unfortunately not decided. It therefore still remains a moot point whether it is permissible to ask Mary Jane to take Fido for a walk before bedtime, and, if so, whether what is reasonable at 10 or 11 o'clock becomes unreasonable a couple of hours later. Perhaps the best solution would be to let Fido take a walk by himself and defy the dog stealers -London Telegraph.

Married and Proud of It. It was on a train going through Indiana. Among the passengers were a newly married couple, who made themselves known to such an extent that the occupants of the car commenced passing sarcastic remarks about them. The bride and groom stood the remarks for some time, but finally the latter, who was a man of tremendous size, broke out in the ors: "Yes, we're married-just mar-Christmas time. The Dlue Glass Fad. Perhaps the queerest fad of modern times was that which placed the clixir of life in blue glass. That the color of light has certain influences on life. especially life of the lower sort as in plants, is a fact. Plant life is undoubtedly affected by the color of light, and animal life needs light. If an animal be deprived of light, it will become what is called anæmic, but exactly why no one knows. Reasoning from the observed effects of blue light upon some plants, the inventor of the fad prescribed baths under blue glass for all. You were to strip yourself, I remember, and lie down under the blue glass for many hours each day. And the queerest thing about the whole business was the fact that some of the devotees not only declared themselves benefited by the treatment so long as they believed in it, but were unquestionably so benefited. I say so long as they believed in it, for I do not think there are many-if in fact there be one-who bathes in blue light now.-Cyrus Edson, M. D., in North American Review.

Four years ago a pair of robins built their home on the top of the farm bell of W. H. Weemer in Donegal township, and notwithstanding that the bell was in daily use, they remained and raised their family. During the ringing of the bell the female would remain on the nest, swinging to and fro apparently as unconcerned as though she were hatching in some secluded spot. Whether it was the swinging that pleased the robins or whether it was the instinct implanted in the breast of every migratory bird to return each year to the same nesting place must remain a mystery, but it is a fact that every year since the supposed same robins have returned and built their nest on the same old bell.

—Greensburg Times. Factors In the Development of Beauty. Clean streets and pure air for our towns, pure water for our reservoirs, better light in cities, reasonable hours of labor and freedom from avoidable uncertainties of life and income-these are all factors in the

The Dog Overheard It. Mrs. Reed of Benton owns an old shepherd dog that has quite a reputation for sagacity. He happened one day to be in a neighbor's barn where two or three men were talking, when one of them remarked, "There's Mrs. Reed's sheep in my field." He did not think of the dog when he spoke and made no advance movement himself, but no sooner were the words out of his mouth than Rover dashed out of the barn, away to the field and drove Mrs. Reed's sheep home.—Lewiston Jour-

—Somerville Journal. Interesting Scenes In Tangier. Tangier's beauty lies in so many different things-in the monklike garb of the men and in the white nuffled figures of the women; in the brilliancy of its sky and of the sea dashing upon the rocks and tossing the feluccas with their three cornered sails from side to side, and in the green towers of the mosques and the listless leaves of the royal palms rising from the center of a mass of white roofs, and above all in the color and movement in the bazaars and streets. The streets represent absolute equality. They are at the widest but 3 yards across, and every one pushes, and apparently everyone has something to sell, or at least something to say, for they all talk and shout at once and cry at their donkeys or abuse whoever touches them. A water carrier, with his goatskin bag on his back and his finger on the tube through which the water comes, jostles you on one side, and a slave as black and shiny as a natent leather boot shoves you on the other as he makes way for his master on a fine white Arabian horse with brilliant trappings and a huge

A cyclone struck Pomeroy, Iowa, and neighboring towns, Friday, and demolished buildings and killed people by the wholesale. Seventy-five people were killed, a large number seriously injured, and over two hundred families rendered homeless.

The rottenness of royalty comes to the surface at nearly every turn. Prince George, the heir to the British throne next to the Prince of Wales, was married last week to Princes Mary of Tuck, notwithstanding the fact that four years ago he married the daughter of a British naval officer of high standing, and who is the mother of two of his children. He ought to go to the penitentiary for the bigamy, just the same as if he were not the grand son of Queen Victoria, but he will not.

Congressman Jerry Simpson of Kansas, proposes a combination of the populists, free silver men and Republicans, to elect Congressman Burrows as Speaker of the House in opposition to Speaker Crisp, who appears to be the only Democratic candidate. Mr. Burrows as speaker of a house with 150 Democrat majority would be in position and have the ability to give the country an entertaining Congress. There is probably no man in Congress, with the possible exception of Thomas B. Reed, better able to keep the animals stirred up.

Twelve firemen and twenty-one of the Columbian guards are supposed to have perished in the flames. The building was erected by the Hercules Ice Making Co., a private concern, and was in no way a part of the exposition proper.

How To Restore Confidence.

Congressman John F. Lacey, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, in answer to a letter from the President of the Board of Trade of Cincinnati, on the present financial and industrial condition of the country, says:

"If the Democratic majority could at once resolve and satisfy the country that they would let the tariff alone and stand by the former system under which the country has enjoyed great prosperity, we would have no difficulty. Everybody expects legislation hostile to American production. The Democratic party is pledged to such a course. There can be no revival of confidence until that materials as the course. until that party satisfies the country that it will not carry out its pledges. A systematic and wide spread attempt is being made to blame everything on the silver law. But the silver law made no trouble until the Senate and Presidency went to the Democrats. It was not until that party became assured of the power to destroy Protection that confidence became impaired. It is not legislation that the country needs, in my opinion. The situation is a "forced and unnatural one," as you say, and grows out of the fear of legislation. What the country needs is as. lation. What the country needs is assurance that there will be no legislation. The present lack of confidence is the sober second thought of the country. Last fall the nation resolved on the reversal of the policy under which it had prospered. It is now showing that its sober business sense is more to be relied upon than its hasty political judgment. It is impossible to consider the question without reference to politics, because it is the change of policy resolved on in a political contest that has brought about the present uncertainty and lack of confidence."

During the quarter ending December 31, 1892, the output of American tin and terne plate was 19,756,491 pounds. The figures for the quarter ending March 31, 1893, show such a marked increase that the free trade Administration is trying to suppress them. The American Manufacturer, a thoroughly reliable journal, has received reports from all the in plate manufacturers in the country, except four, containing the same statistics that were furnished to the government. These reports prove that the manufacturers sending them in produced during the quarter ending March 31, 25,-219,154 pounds of American tin plate.

FROM BERRIEN CENTRE. July 12, 1893.

Many interesting and important events, worthy of publication, have transpired here and passed by unnoticed since our last communication, for want of time, strength and energy on the part of your correspondent.

The program for Children's Day, in Mars' beautiful grove, June 17, was fully carried out. The day was beautiful and the gathering was the largest of the kind ever held in Berrien township, The schools came in large deleshooting while the other gets in the gations with flags and appropriate banners, and were escorted to the speaker's stand in the grove by the Berrien Centre cornet band under P. E. O'Brien, marshal of the day. The exercises were opened by singing: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name", followed by prayer by Rev. Wm. J. Funkey. The address of welcome, the most cordial ever listened to, was given by Hon. Thos. Mars who said: "I welcome you to these beautiful grounds; to the hospitalities of my home; to the freedom and enjoyment of everything necessary to your complete comfort and happiness. I welcome you, children, because you are of Berrien township, where not a drop of liquor has ever been sold. I welcome you because I love you, and because you belong to all the churches assembled here today and united as one in the convention for your interest and enjoyment". In behalf of the Association, President, C. B. Groat thanked Mr. Mars for his warm welcome and cordial greeting. The recitations, dialogues, and pretty songs of the little ones, the addresses and papers of the larger ones, the beautiful music, vocal and instrumental, and other exercises of the day, all so pleasantly conducted and beautifully rendered, combined to make this convention a grand success and one long to be remembered. Each and every rendition was worthy special mention, but time and space will not permit an extended notice. The seventh annual reunion of the Berrien County Battallion of G. A. R. and S. O. V. will be held at Berrien Centre, in Camp Mars, July 25, 26 and 27. The Libby Prison War Museum. Of the many attractions outside of the World's l'air in Chicago, there are but few in which there is so much interest centered as there is in the Libby Prison War Museum. In 1889 this celebrated prison was removed from Richmond to Chicago and converted into a War Museum. The project was undertaken by a syndicate of the best known business men? of the city whose enterprise was conceived in a commercial spirit, but has attained a national reputation. A project such as this was never before heard of. To move a brick and stone building the size of Libby more than a thousand miles, across rivers and mountains, was an enterprise that many of the best known contractors in the West refused to undertake at any price. But the move was made with success. Then the famous old structure was fillied with war material that represents the work of a lifetime and the expenditure of half a million of dollars. A terrible accident occurred on the arm of R. B. Kinney last Monday forenoon in which Mr. Kinney's sevenyear-old boy, Robert, had his right foot nearly cut off. Mr. Kinney was cutting hay with a mowing machine on a piece of ground that was quite rough and bushy. He had left the boy at a gap in the fence to keep back the cows and supposed he was doing as he was told, when just as the machine passed a little clump of bushes the boy stepped out from behind them right in front of the sickle bar and before the team could be stopped his foot had been nearly cut off. The father took the boy in his arms and carried him to the house. sending immediately for Drs. Cronin and Fergusin, who pronounced the injury too serious to save the foot, so they amputated it at the ankle and the child is doing as well as can be expect ed. – Watervliet Record.

One of Whittier's Letters. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, in a paper on Whittier in The Century, quotes the following extract among others from the poet's letters to her:

Thus far the summer has not brought me the release from pain and weakness which I expected. I am only comfortable when body and mind are idle. Time passes so swiftly, there is so much I want to say and do, and this enforced leisure is so barren of results! I have been reading Samuel Johnson's "Oriental Religions"-the last big volume upon Chinese ethics and faith, if faith it can be called. I am more and more astonished that such a man as Confucius could have made his appearone amid the dull and heavy con monplaceness of his people. No wiser soul ever spoke of right and duty, but his maxims have no divine sanctions, and his pictures of a perfect society have no perspective opening to eternity. Our Dr. Franklin was quite of the Confucian order though a much smaller man.

Wonders from a Well. On July 7, 1890, workmen engaged in sinking an artesian well in Sandy valley, near Niria, N. M., struck an open stream from which a cold stream or current of air rushed with such force as to remove a 12pound rock that bad been placed over the opening. This current of air was charged with millions of small bugs, each having but two legs, no wings and a small red circle on the back. They lived but a short time after coming into light and warm air.—Columbus Dispatch.

A common question asked is "Will the new railroad utilize the St. Jo. Valley track?" Hard to tell. Nobody and this company may not. No one man has yet been found who could do business with the owners of both interests in the road at the same time. Whomever one faction would sell to the other would have nothing to do with, If these tactics continue, the new road will not go very near the St. Joseph Valley track. The RECORD is informed that the locomotive was stabled Tuesday morning, and dismantled, for a long rest. The coach still lies in the constant diminishing of her fortune the ditch (last ditch), and the general appearance is that the road has that "tired feeling". Whether it will be recuperated or not, is with the future.

REV. THOMAS DIXON'S SECOND SER-MON ON MONEY AND CHRISTIANITY.

It Is Not Money, but the Undue Love of It. Which Is the Great Evil-Heartless Prove erbs of Hard Hearted Money Seekers. Murders In Trade.

CAPE CHARLES, Va., July 9,-Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., preached on Cobb's island today the second sermon in the series on the question of money and its relation to the gospel of Christ. The proprietors of the hotel on the island have arranged a schedule of three boats on Sundays to convey the people from the mainland to the island to attend the services. The text chosen for the discourse today was the proverb, "He that hath an evil eye hasteth after riches," the specific subject being the "Money Ma-

It is not a sin to be rich if our riches are righteously obtained. And yet a thousand dangers beset the man who sets out with the determination to be rich. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. He is almost sure to reach the crisis in his experience when he will say, "Soul, take thine ease; I have much goods laid up for thee in store," and enter upon a downward course from that moment. The determination to get rich at all hazards may be termed a modern disease. It is a money mania. It is the evil eye of the closing days of this century. It has thrown its spell over millions. It is a disease which sweeps before it the whole nature of man, that lays waste not only the fairest hearts and what might be the fairest homes, but that lays waste what might be the gardens of the nations. It is this modern disease of the evil eye of haste for riches that is one of the most withering curses of our age. First-It denies and abrogates the paramount law of industry. In the sweat of man's brow shall he eat bread, decreed the eternal God, echoed the eternal nature. And yet men in modern times have said that they will do nothing of the sort. They will eat bread without labor. They will eat bread by trick, by chicanery, by overreaching, by swindling, by cheating, by humbug. This abrogation of the paramount law of industry brings us face to face with the submerged millions in the industrial world, with the countless thousands and hundreds of thousands who cry for bread, who are caught in the vicious undertow of this angry sea of human avarice and are dragged to the bottom of the deepest sea of human misery. In the mildest developments of this mania it is simply gambling, and its necessary corollaries are hard times, panics and the periodical disturbances of the industrial world which result in thousands of

COTTAGE BY THE SEA. Second-It leads to a thousand crimes The desire and the determination to get rich, and that shortly, is the power that leads the man intrusted with money to risk that money in questionable transactions. It is this haste to be rich that sketches for your cashier and your merchant and your bank officer the wild dreams of luxury which lead at last to an outer act of criminality. The cashier from his desk dreams of a palace, of horses and carriages, and the cottage by the sea, a magnificent mansion in the city. He is not willing to obtain his money by the slow process of work. He believes that he can stake a certain sum and win; with rich in a day. He stakes other people's money, and the result is crime. These crimes are but simply eccentric and æsthetic developments of the older crimes against person founded on the same prin-

A highwayman is a highwayman because he determines to be rich suddenly. The burglar is a burglar because he desires to get rich in a night. And the murderer destroys his victim for his money because he desires to be rich immediately. Highway robbery, burglary, murder for money, are the originial brutal elements out of which the more æsthetic modern developments of hasty riches have sprung. It is this mania that leads to a thousand crimes today against society. The dive, the gambling den, the saloon, the brothel, have as their fundamental inspiration the desire for sudden riches. There are individual idiosyncracies that develop them, but there are thousands of lives drawn to this whirlpool of vice and crime by the attractive power of the evil eye of money. A man believes that he can become rich rapidly by keeping a saloon. He is willing to trade in human hearts and human blood to accomplish that purpose. A man is willing to debauch his fellow man in a gambling hell, believing that he may suddenly acquire a great fortune. THE BEST MAN.

Third—This mania as it grows in men emphasizes and develops all that is central in self. It necessarily makes a man mean and selfish. It causes a man to enter his heart's affection upon that one thing. He esteems that to be his treasure of life. Where a man's treasure is, there will his heart be also. It will harden and make mean the poor man who is afflicted with the mania as well as the rich who have gone beyond the hope of recovery. I heard of an old farmer in Maine who sent a son into the war. He was killed in battle. The old man afterward expressed his regrets. He said that he had made a great mistake; that he ought to have had a substitute. He said that he could not get a man anywhere in the country to do as much work on the farm as that boy and that he was the smallest eater he ever saw.

An old man who had emphasized this thought in his life above all others went to a meat market and decided to content himself with a bone for sonp. He asked the market man—a big, fat Dutchman, jolly and good natured—the price of a bone which he eyed wistfully. The market man told him nothing at all; take the bone along if he wanted it. The old man, who was a little hard of hearing, put his hand to his ear and asked, "Cannot you knock off a little?" The market man laughingly replied, "Yes, he would take 10 cents for it." The old man paid the dime and went away chuckling over his great bargain. It is necessarily true that as we develop this principle in life we overreach ourselves. It attempt to develop self is sure in the process to destroy self.

Fourth—This mania surely and thoroughly destroys Christian life. The man afflicted with it begins at once to cultivate these delightful mottoes, old but awful in their meaning: "Dog eat dog."

"Devil take care of the hindmost." "Business is business." "The best man is the man that gets

"Resolved. That we will love ourselves as our neighbor loves himself, and we will make it hot for any man that tries to outdo us in this labor of love." He prays only that familiar prayer, "Lord, bless me and my wife, my son John, his wife, us four and no more." A man died the other day in the fellowship of a Christian church. He possessed millions, but he wrote that prayer out in his will when he left the earth: 'Lord, bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, we four and no more. Amen. The devil take care of the bal-

CURNER IN CROWNS. I do not know what a man who makes this principle the ruling one of his life will do if he ever gets to heaven. They say that some of these men who live money, who think money, who breathe money, are going to heaven. Their names are on the church books. What they will do when they get there I cannot understand. Sam Jones declares that if some of them get there the bal-little one and led the child back to the ance of the people will have to sleep with their nocketbooks under their pillow. I am not sure but that he is right. How a man who has spent his life in the supreme effort to create a corner in various commodities and prey on the necessities of his fellow men, how he can enter the kingdom of Jesus Christ and be comfortable is more than I can understand, even with Christ who is love and peace and righteousness. His life means corner. It means to get his neighbors at a disadvantage and to prey on his necessities. He lives in corners, he thinks in corners, he moves in corners. When he dies, ho will die in a corner, and if he over gets to heaven he will sit down in a corner, and there will be a corner in crowns within 24 hours after he gets there if they turn him loose.

It is very easy to say that this is a superficial view of the modern methods of the commercial world and is based upon impractical education and impossible ideals. It is very easy to say that the person is talking, and he does not know what he is talking about. Again I repeat, any hen can lay an egg. While cannot perform that feat, I am a better indge of eggs than any hen in the world. Moral judgment is not dependent upon any intimate knowledge of technicalities. Great moral truths are so simple that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein. A lie is a lie. Theft is theft. Gambling is gambling. Δ spade is a spade. And that is all there TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

Fifth-It is this mania that reduces life to the standard of a miserable commercial dividend. Men afflicted with this disease refuse to enter upon any work that does not pay in a commercial sense. The first question they ask is, Will it pay? I ask a man to give money to save the heathen. He says: Will it pay? Does it pay? I ask him how. "Well," he says, "how much money did you spend on the heathen last year?" I tell him $10,000,000. "How many did you save?" I tell him so many thousands. He says: "It don't pay. They cost too much. They come too high. They are not worth it. Too much money a head." This is the man who refuses to subscribe money to buy the new hearse, because he said he never had any use for the old one, and he gave $10 for that. The idea of a commercial dividend applied to life invariably reduces it to an absurdity. No work of love pays. Eliminate love from life, and there is nothing left but death. A workingman left his anvil and watched by the bedside of his dying wife. She was a little, withered, tired woman, her face pinched and wan and overwrought with long years of toil. He was a great, broad shouldered, strong limbed, muscular giant. He gave days and weeks and months to the tenderest ministry of love by her bedside. He lost his position, his place in the ranks of a difficult trade in which to maintain himself. He ran the risk of being a tramp, but he never left her bedside till the end With streaming eyes he followed the preacher to the door and asked if there were any hope. He lost his wages for months. He was brought to the verge of starvation until he had to accept the charity of strangers. It did not pay. No work of love pays. But shall love cease to minister to its loved one?

Children do not pay. It does not pay to have children. They are a constant expense. They add nothing to the income of the household while they are children. Yet shall chlidren cease to be born? My boy has never paid a cent. He has done nothing but spend. He has been a constant expense for doctor's ls, nurse's hills clothes shoes hats He asked me for 5 cents as I went out of the house last trip. He has cost me more than $1,000 in bills for doctors. He grows more and more expensive every day. He has never added one dime to my income. He has been a constant drain, a constant expense. But as I take him up into my arms and look into his face I would not sell him for the world piled with gold to the stars. And yet he does not pay. The truth is that life does not consist in the abundance of things that a man may possess. SHEAVES OF LOVE.

Dr. George Shrady, the great physician, left his rich patients and went on a vacation in the mountains for absolute rest. He left orders that he should be called on no account: he would answer no call as a physician. While resting in the hammock at the country house a little barefoot, ragged urchin came up to where he was lying, accompanied by a grandmother. The little fellow looked wistfully up at the great physician, while the grandmother explained: "I could not keep him away, doctor. He heard that you was here; that you was the greatest doctor in the world. He said that you could cure him and make him like the other boys. I told him he had no money and he could not come; that you would not be bothered with him. He said he knowed you could cure him, and he would come. So here he is, sir."

The doctor, moved by his simple faith, by his helplessness, by his poverty and rags, hastened to prescribe for him. He gave him two weeks of personal attention, and at the end of that time he was romping in the fields strong and well with the other boys. Thanksgiving day the doctor received by express a rude box, and when opened found in it a large turkey, on one leg of which was tied a card on which was scrawled: "Dear Doctor—Here is a big, fat turkey for you. It's the best I could send, but I know he is young and tender, for I raised him from the egg myself." Signed by the boy's name. The doctor treasures this gift above all the gifts from millionaires, above all the treasures of money ever received. Life does not consist in the abundance of things which a man

Sixth—It is this passion for money in itself and money at all hazards and money quickly that brutalizes the human. For it man trades in the lifeblood of his fellow man. It is the most brutal war that the earth ever saw. Martial war is brutal enough. It is a horrible thing to butcher men with swords and bayonets and guns and cannons, but it is more inexpressibly brutal to butcher men and women commercially and cast them into the pit of hunger and want and starvation and despair. It is kind to kill one quickly. It is brutal to kill them by a lingering death.

If a man wrecks a train, they offer a premium for his life. We say that lynching is too good for the man who would wreck an express train loaded with men, women and children. But in this war for money men sneak into the Stock Exchange, and with a lie and a trick and a subterfuge wreck a whole railroad corporation from end to end of the line, destroy a thousand homes, drag down into the ditch, into the pit, into the grave of a lingering death, thousands of women and children, and he is crowned, forsooth, as a modern Napoleon of finance instead of being hung to the nearest limb. MARTIAL WAR. In martial war soldiers are kind to one another, even to enemies. There was a picture on exhibition in the National Academy of Design last year which represented a scene on the field of battle between the northern and southern armies. The Confederate soldier in his gray uniform lay wounded nigh unto death with his broken arm folded under his body and the broken leg that made it impossi ble for him to move. He was crying for water. Near by was a wounded Federal soldier in blue uniform. He was stricken to the earth with a terrible wound, but he was crawling over the rough ground extending his canteen in his strong arm as far as possible toward his wounded enemy. A little child wandered between the two lines of battle in the late war. Instantly both lines ceased firing at the sight of that little bit of white clothing. Two men stepped forward from either of the ranks and seized the mother in her cottage. And after the child was safe they returned to their ranks, and again the awful volleys of lead began their deadly work. In martial war men do not kill women and children. They do not kill a wounded enemy. Even a Turk will not fire on a hospital. But in this modern war for money maniacs fight. Madmen do battle. They kill women and children without mercy, and a wounded friend is the supreme opportunity of the crisis of battle. They spring on his body and tear him limb from limb. Such a life is the abrogation of civilization, the denial of love, the denial of the basis of Christianity itself. No Christian civilization can exist while these forces are dominant.

Experience of an English Woman Mrs. Jane Cobden Unwin sailed for England last week, leaving a delightful impression upon all who met her. This lady had a singular experience a few years ago in the London county council. Mrs. Unwin, then Miss Jane Cobden was elected a member of the county council, at the same time as Lady Sand hurst. In the case of Lady Sandhurst the defeated candidate contested the election on the ground that a woman was not legally eligible. The court sustained him, and Lady Sandhurst was unseated. But in Miss Cobden's district the defeated candidate was a man who believed in having women on the council, and he declined to contest the election. In England if a year is allowed to elapse before an election is called in question it must be regarded as valid, and no contest can be raised later. Miss Cobden allowed a year to pass, and then the legality of her election not having been contested she took her seat. This made a troublesome case for the courts, but she was finally unseated and was fined for illegal voting for every voteshe had cast as a member of the council.— Philadelphia Ledger.

Curing a California Snake Bite, The hand and arm were first thoroughly cleansed in a hot, medicated wash, and the places where the rattlesnake's fangs entered were lanced, so that the poisoned blood might escape. It was again washed clean, and a 331 per cent oily solution of camphorated phenic acid was injected into some 25 places in the hand and arm. The only remaining treatment was to keep the parts perfectly clean. Any one bitten by a rattler should immediately suck the wound and spit out the blood. Then tie a handkerchief tightly above the wound and open it with a clean penknife to let it bleed. While this is done, not a moment should be lost in getting to a surgeon. The snake may also be killed while you wait .- Pomona

Remarks on a Recent Invention. Mr. Louis Gross of Philadelphia should be investigated. He is too smart by half, or he is a fearful liar, which is worse. Mr. Gross claims that he has invented a hand-me-down egg, and right here this machine made business should stop Man is a creature of environment, and if something is not done a fearful catastrophe may befall humanity. Today man stands surrounded by wooden nutmegs, sawdust flour and steer butter. He wears false teeth, glass eyes, wigs, wooden legs, cork hands and padded coats. while his wife wears crinoline that is full of guile at 60 cents a yard. The fabric of society is frail and full of deceit, and man is rapidly adjusting himself to his surroundings. The advent of the tailor made egg fills the last niche in the circle humanity. If this is not checked, very soon there will be "no joy nor beauty nor loveliness" that "continueth in man. All will be "vanity and vexation of spir-

This is of course the selfish human side. But what about the hens and their kin? Have they no rights that human beings are bound to respect? If this eggmaker is allowed to flood the market with his "false, fleeting, perjured" eggs, what can a self respecting hen do but withdraw her product indignantly from sale? Can hens be expected to go into the marts of trade to compete with pauper egg plants and support indigent and improvident roosters on the mere pittance that the machine article can be made for? Most certainly they cannot, And if the hens are to be insulted and driven from America, where will spring chickens come from?—Kansas City Star.

Royal Bones. that in one of the storerooms of the museum of the Louvre there is an old dusty box filled with bones that belonged to the kings of France. The bones are pitched there in confusion, and every time that the box is moved they are necessarily tossed about and mixed together. The Vie Contemporaine was the first paper to notice the existence of this deposit. Thanks to the information which has been given to us by the director of the fine arts, we can affirm that these bones which are now treated with such odious disrespect are the remains of our kings. In 1793 the tombs of St. Denis were violated, and the bones were given to M. Ledru, the mayor of Fontenay-aux-Roses, the father of Ledru-Rollin, by Alexandre Lenoir, his intimate friend, who was present at the exhumation in the capacity of inspector, and who preserved a quantity of the precious objects. The relics were finally transmitted to the nephew of Ledru le Maire, who in 1864 gave them to M. de Niewerkerke, who was charged by Napoleon III with the duty of organizing at the Louvre the "Museum of the Sovereigns," and the relics have remained neglected from that

We ask for the bones of our kings, the remains of the founder of the Capetian dynasty, of the conqueror of Marignan, of Charles V, the king that saved the country from the yoke of England, and of Louis XII, "the father of the people," a little of that respect which nobody in France denies to the mortal remains of the humblest citizen.-Figaro.

Why Not Commit to Memory? In an age so full of busy activity as the present, so diffused with and interpenetrated by the spirit of utilitarianism, committing to memory seems rather behind the times and is, except in juvenile recitation rooms, almost obsolete. Yet there is something to be said in its defense. It is a great convenience, if nothing more, to have the skeleton of a historic period in the shape of a few important events and dates firmly in one's mental possession, locked so to speak, in a canny drawer or cabinet of the brain and ready to be produced at a moment's notice. Given such an outline to aid memory, and the facile servant easily and deftly fills it up with the throbbing flesh and blood of marners, customs, incidents and epi-

Any one of us may lose hearing or sight, wholly or partially, and arrive at days when it is a comfort unspeakable to remember delightful and helpful stories, verses which we have loved and chapters from the treasure house of the Sacred Word. Mapping the Aurora. In connection with Engineer Peary' arctic expedition, Dr. Veeder of Lyons has prepared for an auroral survey of the northern hemisphere. Blanks have been supplied to Engineer Peary, and he will observe the aurora during the entire period of the arctic night. Blanks have also been supplied to observers in North America, northern Europe and Siberia. The easternmost station of observation is at Irkutsk. The Russian astronomers at Pulkowa observatory have been making observations for some time and will continue them during the stay of Engineer Peary in the north.

Dr. Veeder expects to locate with considerable accuracy the regions where the aurora is seen and to note the frequency of the displays. The observations will eventually be compared with solar observations. There are reasons for beieving that the aurora is a local phenomenon. If this prove to be true, it must follow that the influence of solar disturbance is localized so far as the aurora is concerned. We believe this is the first effort to make a survey of the aurora and to map it.—Rochester Dem-

The Duke Returns a Check. While in Chicago the Duke of Veragua wrote an article about his ancestors for The North American Review. He sent it to General Brice, and he received a check in return. This was more than he expected, and he returned the check and asked that it he contributed to some charitable use.

THE BEST BATHS OF ALL.

Summer and Tepid Bath In Winter. There is talk about a new fashion of flower baths. It is not exactly a new fashion, because baths of herbs, baths of crushed fruit, baths of flowers, baths of leaves, baths of powdered roots, have been in use from time immemorial among ladies who wish to preserve their beauty. There were also at one timebut these are gone out of favor-baths of earth. Fancy lying up to your neck in garden mold, with a few worms, centipeds and such things squirming about your ribs! Then there are the sun baths At a certain place—perhaps there are a dozen-in Switzerland and Germany the patients lie in little rooms with glass roofs enjoying the warmth of the sun. After an ordinary English summer dare say a sun bath would prove efficacious in every kind of disease that can be imagined. And there is something poetical in a bath of crushed fruit-one of crushed raspberries, for instance, should impart a delicate pinkness to the skin; but, after all, the fruit would be more useful for the promotion of health in a currant and raspberry pie-pie, please, not tart. A bath of violets would make one go about for an hour or so suggesting the immediate neighborhood of a penny bunch of violets, but perhaps the flowers would be more lastingly useful in a vase And, when all is told, I am quite certain that the finest bath in the world is one of water, either hot or cold, and I always recommend as a physician hitherto unlicensed and uncalled all my patients to take a cold bath every morning in summer, and a tepid bath every morning in winter, and a hot bath whenever one has got a cold or feels low. It suffuses the cheek with a delicate bloom like that of the common or garden peach. It brightens the eyes and clears the complexion and keeps the loveliest woman young till she gets old.-Walter Besant.

A Rose Party. It was on a pretty lawn in the month of June, on old Prudence island, that one of the sweetest, quaintest and most enjoyable of lawn parties was given. The hostess, her friends who helped her to receive and even the attendants were dressed in a way that made one think of wild roses at once. They wore rose colored skirts, pale green bodices and wide vellow belts, with cunningly fashioned caps like veritable wild roses; but there was this difference—the attendants wore cheesecloth and the others cashmere silk or challis. The house was profusely decorated with these roses, which grow there by the acre. Pasteboard fans painted to imitate a rose were mounted on little bamboo handles, tied with a wide rose colored ribbon and handed to each arriving guest. The Japanese bas kets in which the nankins were passed about were covered with rose petals, and in each napkin was folded a souvenir consisting of a strip 4 inches long of wide white satin ribbon, fringed on each end and painted with a rose or some falling petals and an appropriate quotation or couplet.

When you turned this over, you found that it was backed with rose colored ribbon, forming a little bag well filled with dried rose leaves. Mine lies before me now, and the "scent of the roses clings round it still." The ices were rose colored and pressed into rose molds, cakes were iced with pink icing, and the lemonade had a tinge of pink imparted to Strange as it may appear, it is a fact at in one of the storerooms of the muican Agriculturist.

> A Quaint Dress of Japan. The oldest dress in the world is probably that described by a French traveler in Japan. It belonged to an empress of Japan who lived in the thirteenth century, and it has been kept all these centuries in a temple near Yokohama, where the priests sometimes exhibit it for a sufficient reward. It is kept in an old coffer, and it is shrouded in white silk. The robe, or robes, for there are seven of them, are described as a diaphanous mass, crumbling at the edges with decay. The material is crape or some filmy stuff, and the effect must be like that worn by Loie Fuller. It is made with a long train, pagoda sleeves and a high collar like a medicis cuff.

> The upper layer was once white, and is now the color of ivory, embroidered with flying birds the size of crows, with dragon's head, green, blue and violet. Then come seven layers of the silk muslin, yellow, blue, violet, old gold and green, on which seem strange animals, all in flight. The seventh, which touches the body of the long dead empress, is violet, embroidered with figures like phantoms. The embroidery on this wonderful robe is said to be as transparent as the gauze. The effect of the whole is smoke colored.—Indianapolis Journal.

> Compelling Obedience. It is no infringement of dignity to explain to the child the why of a difference in judgment, and when we cannot clearly define a better reason or motive than actuates the child as our reason for exercising the governing power we should hesitate lest in calm and careful examination of our own motive we find ourselves unjust and tyrannical. If we force submission on unworthy difference, we are endangering the will of the child to render obedience only to that which is high and holy. The fearlessness to do what is right, simply because it is right, with no motive of expediency as the determining inducement can be developed only when the individual judgment has been carefully nurtured from infancy and the will strength ened by being called to support the judgment.—Housekéeper.

A church at Fostoria, O., has decided to purchase 400 little wineglasses, that each communicant may receive the wine out of a glass no other person has used, in order to avoid microbes. THE KING AMUSES HIMSELF.

He Is Happiest When He Thinks He Has Killed a Peasant With His Gun. The one insane monarch who now occupies a European throne. King Otho of Bavaria, shows no symptoms of recovering from his mental malady. I am told that he has lucid intervals, which are very brief and occur but rarely, and it is as well, for these fleeting gleams of reason only serve to make the poor man miserably unhappy, for while they last he realizes his own wretched condition to the full. Everything is done to amuse and interest him in his ordinary state. which is that of hopeless as well as dangerous insanity. He spends, his days in unceasing occupation of an insignificant and mechanical nature.

At one time he worked from morning till night in rolling cigarettes. Then he took to peeling potatoes, and bushels upon bushels of them were provided for his amusement. Of late his favorite pastime is by no means of such an inoffensive nature. He has taken to shooting peasants and will sit all day long with his gun at the window waiting for this new kind of game on which to exercise his skill. Even this freak his guardians have contrived to satisfy without injury to any one of his subjects. His gun is loaded in his presence, as he always insists upon seeing the powder and shot duly put in, but for the latter his attendant substitutes dry peas.

Orders have been given that no person shall be allowed to pass along the road in front of his dwelling lest King Otho should fire upon him or her and be driven quite wild by seeing his intended victim walk off unhurt. But at stated intervals a man in a peasant's garb makes his appearance on the road. The king takes aim and fires, and the man drops down to all appearance dead. The supposed body is removed by two of the guards, and some hours later the performance is repeated to the immense satisfaction of his majesty. The make believe peasant is a figurant from one of the minor theaters of Munich. Generally he simply drops on hearing the shot and remains motionless, but occasionally he varies the performance by dying very hard, turning round two or three times before he falls and then expiring in terrific convulsions, a catastrophe that always greatly interests the royal maniac .- Paris Cor. When the Navajoes Kill a Bear. With the Navajo Indian the bear holds the very first rank among beasts. According to the credulous savage, this wisest and most powerful of brutes even surpasses man. There is only one case in which a Navajo will meddle with him, and this is when he has killed a Navajo, and the Indians know exactly which bear is the murderer.

Then a strong, armed party, headed by the proper "medicine men," proceed to the bear's cave. Halting a short distance in front of the den, they go through a strange service of apology which would seem entirely ludicrous to us, but which to them is unutterably solemn. The praises of the bear, commander of beasts, are loudly sung, and his pardon is humbly invoked for the unpleasant deed to which they are now driven. Having duly apologized beforehand they proceed to kill the bear and then go home to fast and purify themselves. Their greeting is:

"I beg your pardon and hope you will bear no resentment, but we are compelled to kill you," which is quite as upny as the phrases of an old New polite to his wife, but always addressed his oxen thus: "Now, if you please, whoa, hish, Bary! Also Bonny! There! Thank you!"— Charles F. Lummis.

She Went Home. "And who, pray, is Doris?" was the question that startled Mr. Brown, who is addicted to that ill conceived habit of talking in his sleep as he awoke the other morning and found his devoted better half sitting up in bed with an interrogation point in one eye and a note of exclamation in the other. "Doris, Doris—Doris who?"

"That's precisely what I want to know. You've been repeating the name over and over again during the night." "Oh-ah-yes, yes, of course. It's Charley Jones' new collie dog. Oh, she's a perfect beauty. I'd give anything for ier." "Indeed!" "Rather she's the sort of dog"---"You ought to own? Certainly—you appear excessively fond of her. You asked, you will be pleased to hear, this 'collie dog' to put her arms around your neck and kiss you. Then you told Mr. Jones' dog that you 'loved her with all your heart,' and when you came to die that if you could only 'lay your head' on Jones' dog's bosom you could 'breathe your life out sweetly there.' Then you asked Jones' dog to have another ice cream' and if the watch you had given her kept good time. Under these circumstances, Jethro Brown, I think perhaps you had better go to Jones' collie dog, as I am going home to my mother."

Women's Legal Rights In Kentucky. The Kentucky legislature is likely to take still another advance step in regard to the property rights of women. The lower house has passed by a large majority a bill providing that a husband on the death of his wife shall inherit only one-half of the surplus of the wife's personal estate instead of the whole, as now. Even this would be a larger share than the wife receives of the husband's estate upon his death. The Kentucky Equal Rights association hopes ultimately to secure the equalization of courtesy and
