Pingree claims that he has a solid delegation of "one termers" from Detroit.

The Kalamazoo Telegraph, Congressman Burrows' home paper, is out with the announcement that "Barkis is willing" to be induced to accept the position made vacant by the death of Senator Stockbridge, and being filled just now by Hon. John A. Patton, Jr.

No punishment can be too severe for the miscreants who are guilty of deliberately causing the wreck of last Monday morning. No person has any right to imperil the lives of a passenger on a train for the purpose of venting their spite against a railroad company. It is no way to obtain the support of the public on the side of the strikers in the present difficulties.

R. G. Dun & Co's Weekly Review says—When circumstances are duly weighed, the strength and soundness of business in this country during the last two weeks are amazing. With the second city in the country in the hands of a lawless and murderous mob, besides many other cities and towns, with railway traffic almost entirely stopped over the vast area between Toledo and the Pacific, with Presidential proclamations declaring the existence of an insurrection, and the passionate answer ordering half a million men to stop work, with a prolonged strike of coal miners not fully ended in many States, and with differences between House and Senate on the tariff question so wide that duties affecting mining and manufactures can not be anticipated, industries and trade have nevertheless gone on with sublime confidence that the people and their Government would soon restore order. The shrinkage of business and the depression of values have been unexpectedly small, the failures relatively few and unimportant, and there are even signs in some industries of actual progress toward recovery from previous troubles. It is a good foundation for hope that firm and wise action by the Government has been upheld by the loyal people, that order has generally been restored and the blockade of transportation has nearly ceased, and that the wage earners in the main refused to arrest industries at the dictation of leaders.

Congressman Conn of Elkhart leaves the Democratic Party.

Col. Charles Girard Conn, of Elkhart, now the democratic member of congress from that district, has written a long letter to the committee on notification declining to accept the renomination tendered him at the democratic congressional convention at Plymouth June 27. In this long letter he says he declines the nomination because he is not in touch with the democratic policy on the labor question. He defines his position on this question and appears as a champion of labor.

Utah is in the Union.

The President has signed the bill for Utah's admission. The bill admitting Utah to statehood, which has been a matter of such interest to western people in its various phases of progress toward enactment, was signed Tuesday night, without any ceremony and in the ordinary course of business. It came before the president about midnight, along with several other bills, some applications for pardons and other routine matters. Although it is customary to refer each bill before signature to the interior department for careful examination, the Utah bill had been so drawn to the President's attention that he was sufficiently well acquainted with its terms to waive this proceeding, and accordingly gave it his approval on the same day that it reached him. The pen and point with which it was signed are now the property of Delegate Ravilins and will pass into the keeping of the new state and be preserved as a historical relic.

Work on John L. Reddick's new spinning mill will commence immediately. This mill will give employment to several more workmen, and will be a helpful addition to our manufacturing industries.—Niles Daily Star.

In Line for Rich.

Chippewa, Montclair and Clinton counties all elected solid Rich delegations, last Friday. The "one term" club may as well shut up shop and join in increasing the boom for the renomination of a man who has fearlessly carried out the laws and served the state with honors.

A Narrow Escape.

Yesterday afternoon, Maud Otto, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Frank Otto, who lives about 1 1/2 miles west of Three Oaks, was struck by train No. 20 on the Michigan Central, and was badly bruised and cut, but is not believed to be seriously injured. She had been in the habit of running to the railroad track and seeing how long she could keep her foot on the rail while a train was coming, and this time kept her foot there too long.

A Great Race.

Last evening there was great excitement along the banks of the St. Joseph river. A boat race between Wm. Trenbeth and Wm. Burke, for a stake of $10, was the occasion of the excitement. Mr. A. A. Lamb officiated as starter, and Harry Smith was referee. John Manover acted as coxswain for Trenbeth, while Wm. Hurlburt performed the same office for Burke. After a long and exciting struggle, Burke came in a winner in 27 minutes. Opinions differ as to the distance, Burke claiming it is about 3 miles, and Trenbeth thinks it couldn't be less than 6 miles. Another race will be rowed next Wednesday.

OWZ. The July Cosmopolitan marks the close of the first year since the revolutionary announcement was made that the price of that magazine, already low, had been cut to one-half of three dollars a year. All sort of predictions have been made as to the long run of the year—it would be impossible to maintain the rate—the quality would be lowered—the size would be decreased. But even severe critics admit that with each succeeding number there has been a betterment in the quality of articles and illustrations, and the size has remained unchanged, except the always growing advertising pages. The magazine printed, for the six months ended in July, more than a million four hundred and nineteen thousand copies, an entirely unapproached record, and has doubled its already large plant of presses and binding machinery. The wall of the magazine's new home are rapidly rising at Irvington-on-the-Hudson. Artistically designed by McKim, Mead & White, the new building, with its eight great porticoes, will be 270 feet long by 70 feet wide, and one of the most perfectly lighted buildings in the world, having 100 large windows, each nearly double the size of the ordinary window opening.

They Rendezvous Detroit Preparatory to a Trip.

The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Michigan Press Association opened in the parlors of the Fellowcraft club, at Detroit, and the program, which is somewhat elastic in its make-up, will extend over a two weeks' trip of the members down the St. Lawrence to Quebec, the White Mountains, Portland, Boston and numerous other eastern cities. The meeting Monday evening was in the nature of a reception, but a number of interesting papers were read by members of the association, interspersed by music by local talent. Those who furnished papers Monday evening were W. C. Sprague, of Detroit; V. J. Tefft, of the Alton Recorder; C. T. Fairfield, of the Benton Rapids Journal, and J. C. Videll, of the Alpena Argus. Tuesday the party left over the Grand Trunk under the special guidance of Col. D. S. Wagstaff.

Old Glory.

Thousands of Michigan school boys now float our country's flag. A sight that never fails to cheer the heart, brighten the eye, and thrill the soul of the loyal American, is to see the folds of our banner wave proudly above the schools, and the group of boys and girls take pride in the flag that is offered to them so liberally here in our own dear America. The district schools are not behind in this excellent movement, but hundreds and hundreds of them now glory in the stars and stripes.

Not only should each school have a flag to fly to the breeze on every day memorable to our history, but on the walls of every school room there should be a banner in the colors of the colored sketches of flags on the boards.

But should our patriotism end with this, we would be no better than the heathen bowing to his idol. Let the lessons of the flag be taught appropriately to every grade.—Extract from Report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The Niles Daily Recorder announced its last issue Wednesday, July 11th, stating that it would suspend the daily edition for the present, and in all probability it would be permanent. We regret that editor Ross has found this step necessary, but a daily paper is almost an impossibility as a paying institution in a small town like Niles.
Marshal John Shook desires us to call the attention of the readers of the the town authorities. We would urge all our readers who have noticed this troublesome weed on any of their lands to take prompt and effective steps toward the extermination of it.

We have received through the mail a very pretty account of a party given to sign her name, consequently we cannot take any notice of the communication. Communications sent the

ABSOLUTELY PURE

FARM-FIELD AND GARDEN PROTECTION FROM LIGHTNING.

Information furnished in a Circular Issued by the Department of Agriculture.

There is more danger in the country than in the city, the network of telegraph and other wires through the streets offering opportunities for surplus lightning to be drawn off and dissipated. All barns, houses and other exposed buildings should have rods, which should be of either iron or copper. Buildings on hillside, or especially liable to be struck.

The top of the rod should be plated or in some way protected against rusting, and it is better if made with several points extending in different directions. The base of the rod should be sunk deeply enough to reach moist ground or water. If the conductor goes near large main drains, it should be connected with them. But it is unsafe to have the rods go near small gas pipes. The lightning might melt them and would of course set fire to the gas.

There is no such thing as a definite protected area from a single rod. The very heaviest bolts of lightning cannot be entirely carried away by an ordinary rod. Iron rods weighing 33 ounces to the foot are advised as the best protection, as on the highest part of the building there should be a number of points springing upward, which may be smaller and connected with a rod of this weight. Lightning generally, but not always, follows the point of least resistance. The exceptional cases are where the discharge is too great to follow the line prepared for it. A metal rod, if small, may be disregarded when the electricity following a wire is so great. A gorge between two highlands is less safe than on the localities higher up where the air does not get in streams, which, being larger, make a better conductor than any small metallic rod can be.

Fortunately these discharges of lightning too large to go through rods are exceptional, and a good lightning rod well connected with moist earth or water furnishes sufficient protection in most cases.

The nature of the ground has much to do with liability to lightning strokes. Land of chalk formation is less liable to attract lightning. Clay soil has seven times this attraction for lightning, and sand has nine times as great attraction. A building near a running stream of water is more likely to be struck, as the water attracts the lightning in that direction. While rain is falling, slight discharges of lightning are carried down to earth without injury to trees or buildings.

There is no danger in carrying small metallic articles, as knives, watches or pens, about the person. The greatest metal to have any influence in attracting the lightning. Neither can safety be found by going to bed and trying to insulate one's self in feathers. The general rule for safety is not to stand under trees in storms, nor in the doorway of barns, or close to cattle, near chimneys and fireplaces. Avoid places where there is any draft of air, as it is most likely to be the path taken by lightning discharges.

Destable Poultry.
At the Rhode Island station experiments have been conducted in crossing pure bred fowls. The various crosses, both bred and dressed, from this station were exhibited at the Rhode Island poultry exhibition. The judges pronounced the cross of Indian Game on Light Brahma the best specimen of dressed poultry, followed by the crosses of White Wyandotte on Indian Game, White Wyandotte on Light Brahma and Indian Game on Golden Wyandotte and Dorking on Dark Brahma. The judgment was made in accordance with the popular demand for yellow poultry.

Tenard Farming.
Statistics for 1933 furnished by the census bureau led the Springfield Republican to the conclusion that we are actually facing the unpleasant possibility of the planting in this country of a land system of wide and increasing extent. The aggregate number of farms in the New England states has not increased materially in the past decade. But in Massachusetts the number of freehold farm families declined from 32,216 to 29,370, while in New Hampshire it decreased from about 8,100 to 5,968. In Maine the 2,780 tenant families had increased in the decade to 4,781, and the freehold families had declined from 61,528 to 57,381. Iowa in the decade gained 3,821 owning cultivators and over 1,000 tenant cultivators. Georgia lost 3,844 owning cultivators and gained 39,006 tenant families.

Wants 'Up on Cows.

It is said to be a true story of an English gentleman that on his appointment to a country living he went about from house to house asking why the good wives did not go to church on Sunday afternoons. "Milking the cows" was the universal answer. On Sunday morning, therefore, he spoke his mind. "If I have found you parish," he said, "and find you all make the same excuse. Now, I have only one thing to request, and that is that you milk your cows the last thing on Saturday night and the first thing on Monday morning."—Youth's Companion.

"HUMPH!"

Thrilling Rescue of a Bicycle Girl Who Hadn't Learned How to Stop.
The shades of night were getting in their work, and the peace of a righteous moon was filtering through the atmosphere. Brown and Jones were enjoying their last cigars and conversing on stocks. There is nothing frivolous or flighty about Brown and Jones.

Suddenly there came a swirl of feminine skirts, a scurry of bicycle wheels, and through the darkened air a shrill wail faltered. "Oh, won't you please help me!" Then a bicycle at full tilt sped across the street crossing, and Brown and Jones started at each other.

"What in thunder does she want help about?" gasped Jones.
"She wasn't tipping over!" cried Brown.
"The wheel was all right!"
"No one was pursuing!"
"Help!" floated back to the crossing. With one wild gasp of alarm, two cigars were flung to destruction, and two reputable citizens went spinning down Lake Avenue.

With an extraordinary spurt Brown and Jones caught up, grabbed the handle bars and stopped the wild progress of the modern Flying Dutchman.
"What?" began Jones. "How?" gasped Brown, who was stout and unpolishedly conscious of something ridiculous in the whole proceeding.

"Oh," quavered the feminine rider, who was not young and not fair, "oh, how can I ever thank you? Oh, my goodness, what a scare I can ride, you know—just in the way you can't stop!"
"You can't stop?"
"No, I can't stop, and I can't stop my wheel, and I was getting farther away from home every minute, and, oh, dear, what would I have done if?"

Jones coughed. In her excitement the distressed lady was reposing against his shirt front. It was a fresh shirt front, and her act disturbed him.
"Shall we get you started for home?" queried Brown, who always had presence of mind.
"How do you would," said the distressed lady, and then the two reputable citizens put her on her wheel, turned it around, pushed her half a block and saw her disappear in the darkness, leaving a trail of inarticulate gasps, thanks, protests and exclamations in her wake.

Slender, but not fat, Brown and Jones stuffed their handkerchiefs into their collars and looked at each other meditatively. Suddenly Brown went into convulsions. He grabbed Jones' arm.
"How do you started, 'how, I say, is that fool woman going to stop when she does get home?"
Then they sat down on the curbstone to recover and incidentally to calculate whether the woman who hadn't learned how to make the wheel stop going round and round would reach the north pole or be drowned in Lake Superior.

"And yet," Brown says scornfully when he tells the adventure, "yet some misguided mortals claim that women have sense enough to vote and decide the fate of the nation. Humph!"
"You're doing it," says "Humph!" makes the hearer wish right away—if the hearer is a woman.—Chicago News.

The Weas of Carvers.
The blunders of carvers are historic. One of the most amusing specimens chiefly concerns a spruce young lawyer who led a blushing damsel as a bride from her rural home and returned with her to the hospitable mansion of her father-in-law to enjoy the honeymoon festival. He was called on to carve. The turkey was overdone and was somewhat tough withal. The spruce young lawyer struggled with it, but the bird wouldn't yield. An enormous pudding stood beside the turkey and was in the lawyer's way.

OHIDA'S ECCENTRICITIES.

Her Impromptu Act on Lord Salisbury and How She Repaid His Courtesy.
Ouida and Jimmy Whistler have caused the Londoners to feel overwhelming spasms of fear at the near approach of literary persons. Perhaps the greatest celebrity enjoyed by literary people in the big English metropolis. What Mr. Whistler writes and says always attracts more attention than the things he paints, while the stories of his manner which Ouida has so handsomely and so deftly narrated have been hissed and boomed the people who have tried to be civil to her as innumerable. The last time she was in London she was wandering along St. James place, when a big yellow house up a side street caught her eye. She walked up the footway and in front of it she was a queer figure of a small, shrunken woman of advanced years, with a seamed and wrinkled face, old fashioned ringlets hanging in front of her ears, an old little bonnet cocked on her head, and a pair of old-fashioned congress garters.

She lapsed forward on her big umbrella and gazed at the house for a long while. Finally she beckoned a policeman to her and asked him who lived there. The policeman, looking at his cap and remarked that it was the town house of the prime minister. Thereupon Ouida walked up to the door, rang the bell and told the flunky who opened the door to announce to Lady Salisbury that she was there. The flunky looked her over carefully and sent a second footman up stairs with the message, while he kept his eye upon the odd looking visitor.

Lady Salisbury, like most English women, had closed Ouida's door several days, and she came down stairs and set about the work of making the novelist welcome. She was out short in her speech, however, by a terselying from her visitor concerning the prime minister.

"I should be greatly obliged if you will bring him down, and I will look at him. I have never seen him, and as I am going away from London shortly I shall probably never have another opportunity of seeing him unless you bring him in with you."

She seemed to regard the Marquis of Salisbury as a sort of prize pig to be exhibited, and she talked about him in such a curious fashion that Lady Salisbury went back to her study and brought in that excited personage. Ouida looked at him for a moment, her spectacles had the same air of examining a prize exhibit that was suggested in her talk and finally ended by expressing her approval of the premier.

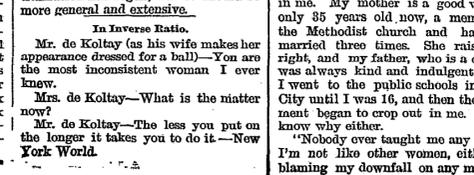

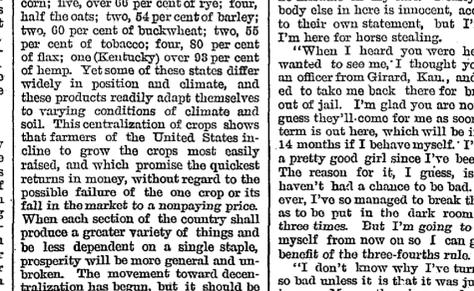

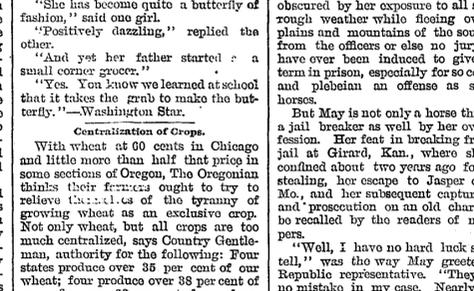

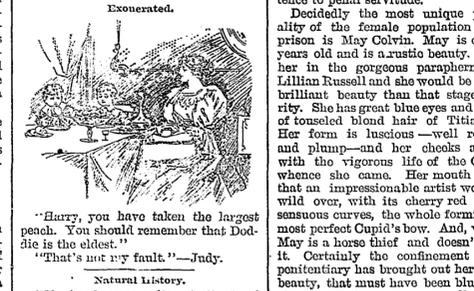

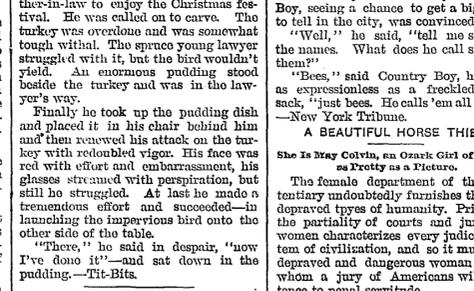

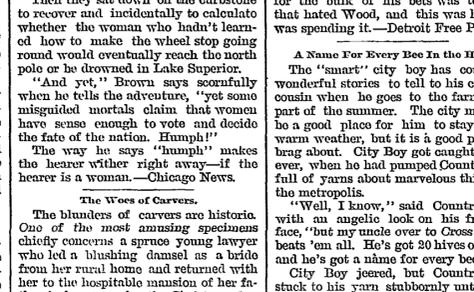

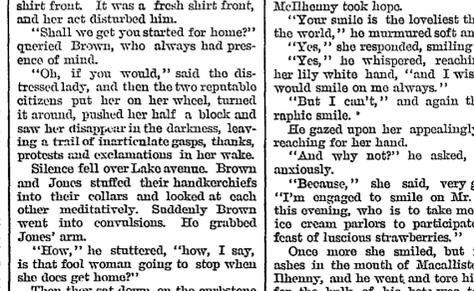

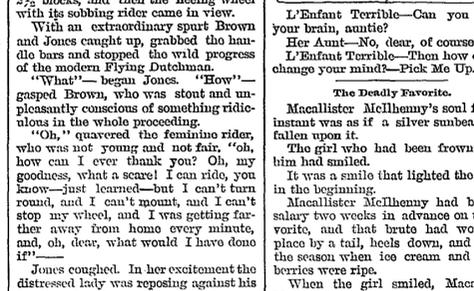

She was invited to come and dine in an informal way two nights later, and the prime minister, who had been enormously tickled by the interview, invited a number of lofty personages to his house that night. The dinner hour came, but no Ouida. The guests sat down and talked about the novelist, but not a word was heard of her. It was not discovered until the following day that she had read a speech of the Marquis of Salisbury on the morning of the day of the dinner, and it had displeased her so much that she had decided to have nothing to do with the Salisbury household.

At the present time Ouida is in a pitiable condition. Her house and all her personal property in Italy have been sold to pay her debts, and she is almost destitute of money. Her eccentricities have become more and more pronounced, and she has been brought into contact with her kind almost impossible to retain their composure under the sharp and biting comments which she makes upon them.—London Letter.

White Perch.
Not every angler knows that one of the best ways to take white perch is with an artificial fly. It is not only a good way to make the catch, but it gives more sport than other ways, and you get bigger fish.

The first time I ever knew that white perch would take the artificial fly was three years ago, while my family were spending the summer at Asbury Park," said an old fisherman recently. "My boys had been on an excursion and there had caught some of each kind of fish there were in the pond. They had a few trout flies in their fishing kit, and one day, just for lack of something else to do, one of the boys put a gray hackle fly on his line and showed it to the fish. The fish was crawling slowly along the lakside under the shade of the big trees that line the upper part. All of a sudden there was a sharp bite, and the boy pulled in the biggest white perch he had ever seen. The boys wrote me up the fish as a record, and I was open for sport. They continued the skittering and brought home the nicest mess of big perch that up to that time I had ever seen. Day after day they kept up the fishing until that fall and caught a lot of fish. They tried other flies, but the gray hackle proved the best."—New York Sun.

He Refuses to Move.
Nobody likes to move, but there is one man in San Francisco who won't move. He lives in a tenement house down on Rausch street, and every few months his family move. They pack up all the household goods while he is at work and transfer them to some new abode. He has got used to it and is again moving, but he refuses to budge from his bed. He just buys some crackers and cheese, goes to sleep in one cracker and waits for the folks to come back. They always come in a short time. The other members of the family cannot support him and he has to be taken care of, and when they move they don't get it.—San Francisco Post.
