SHUTTING DOWN THE MILLS. Well, the worst hev come to the worst, wife,
The mills they shut down tonight:

For the company's been a-losin Their money clear out uv sight. And they ain't no orders a-comin, And the market is dreadful slack,

And the whole consarn, the super says, Is jest a-goin to wrack. So they closed the doors tonight, wife. And I couldn't keep back the tears, To see them shuttin the doors for good Thet had swung for so many years. But it isn't so bad for us, wife,

For we've nary chick nor child; But Jim and the rest uv them fellers, They wuz everlastin wild. I've worked by the side of Jim now Fur a dozen years and more. And I never see him look so beat And so despritelike before.

Thet's in no better trim:

Jest think uv them little children, And his sickly, ailin wife! Wouldn't change places no how with Jim This night, you kin bet your life. Well, they's plenty and plenty uv others,

I can't see straight fur ourselves, but I vum, I keep a-thinkin uv Jim. But if you haven't the heart, wife, Uv a blazin angel uv light! We'll do es you say, help Jim's wee kids, While we hev the sup and bite. Tho' the mills hev shet down, my own wife, God's hands they are open wide; And as we share with the poorer than us, upon the treacherous and entangling rungs, and ere he could recover himself the noiseless stranger had fairly whizzed into space and vanished in the darkness up the road. Chester sprang in pursuit. He heard the startled challenge of the sentry and then Leary's excited "Halt. I say! Halt!" and then he shouted: "Fire on him, Leary! Bring him

Bang! went the ready rifle with sharp, sullen roar that woke the echoes across the valley. Bang! again as Leary sent a second shot after the first. Then as the captain came panting to the spot they followed up the road. No sign of the runner. Attracted by the shots, the sergeant of the guard and one or two men, lantern bearing, came running to the scene. Excitedly they searched up and down the road in mingled hope and dread of finding the body of the marander or some clew or trace. Nothing!

Whoever he was, the fleet runner had vanished and made good his escape. "Who could it have been, sir?" asked the sergeant of the officer of the day. "Surely none of the men ever come round this way." "I don't know, sergeant; I don't know. Just take your lamp and see if there is anything visible down there among the rocks. He may have been hit and leaped the wall. Do you think you hit him, Leary?" "I can't say, sor. He came by me like a flash. I had just a second's look at him, an-sure I niver saw such run-"Could you see his face?" asked Chester in a low tone as the other men moved away to search the rocks. "Not his face, sor. 'Twas too dark." "Was there-did he look like anybody you knew or had seen-anybody any one except I tell you or you have to before a court." "I promise, sor."

"And I believe you. Tell the sergeant

I will soon be back." With that he turned and walked down the road until once more he came to the plank crossing and the passageway between the colonel's and bachelors' row. Here again he stopped short and waited with bated breath and scarcely beating heart. The faint light he had seen before again illumined the room and cast its gleam upon the old gray wall. Even as he gazed there came silently to the window a tall, white robed form, and a slender white hand seized and lowered the shade noiselessly. Then, as be-

was awake. Waiting one moment in silence, Captain Chester then sprang up the wooden steps and passed under the piazza which ran the length of the bachelor quarters. Half way down the row he turned sharply to his left, opened the green painted door and stood in a little dark hallwav. Taking his matchbox from his pocket, he struck a light, and by its glare quickly read the card upon the first doorway to his right, "Mr. Howard F. Jerrold, fore, the light faded away, but-she

----th Infantry, U. S. A." Opening this door, he bolted straight through the little parlor to the bedroom in the rear. A dim light was burning on the mantel. The bed was unruffled, uniched, and Mr. Jerrold was not there Five minutes afterward Captain

Chester, all alone, had laboriously and cautiously dragged the ladder from the side to the rear of the colonel's house, stretched it in the roadway where he had first stumbled upon it, then returned to the searching party on No. 5. "Send two men to put that ladder back," he ordered. "It is where I told you-on the road behind the colonel's."

CHAPTER III.

When Mrs. Maynard came to Sibley in May and the officers with their wives were making their welcoming call she had with motherly pride and pleasure yielded to their constant importunities and shown to one party after another an album of photographs-likenesses of her only daughter. There were little cartes de visite representing her in long dresses and baby caps; quaint little pictures of a chubby faced, chubby legged infant a few months older; charming studies of a little girl with great black eyes and delicate features; then of a tall, slender slip of a maiden, decidedly foreign looking; then of a sweet and pensive face, with great dark eyes, long, beautiful curling lashes and very heavy, low arched brows, exquisitely molded mouth and chin and most luxuriant dark hair; then others, still older, in every variety of dress, even in fancy costume, such as the girl had worn at fair or masquerade.

These and others still had Mrs. Maynard shown them, with repressed pride and pleasure, and with sweet acknowledgment of their enthusiastic praises. Alice still tarried in the east, visiting relatives whom she had not seen since her father's death three years earlier, and long before she came to join her mother at Sibley and to enter upon the life she so cagerly looked forward to-"'' 'way out in the west, you know, with officers and soldiers and the band and buffalo and Indians all around you''there was not an officer or an officer's wife who had not delightedly examined that album. There was still another picture, but that one had been shown to only a chosen few just one week after her daughter's arrival, and rather an absurd scene had occurred, in which that most estimable officer, Lieutenant Sloat, had figured as the hero. A more simple minded, well intentioned fellow than Sloat there did not live. He was so full of kindness and good nature and readiness to do anything for anybody that it never seemed to occur to him that everybody on earth was not just as ready to be equally accommodating. He was a perpetual source of delight to the colonel and one of the most loyal and devoted of subalterns, despite the fact that his locks were long silvered with the frosts of years and that he had fought through the war of the rebellion and risen to the rank of a field officer in Maynard's old brigade. The most temperate of men ordinarily, the colonel had one anniversary he loved to celebrate, and Sloat was his standby when the 3d of July came round, just as he had been at his shoulder at that supreme moment when, heedless of the fearful sweep of shell and canister through their shattered ranks, Pickett's heroic Virginians breasted the slope of Cemetery Hill and surged over the low stone wall into Cushing's guns. Hard, stub-born fighting had Maynard's men to do that day, and for serene courage and determination no man had beaten Sloat. Both officers had bullet hole mementos to carry from that field, both had won their brevets for conspicuous gallantry, and Sloat was a happy and grateful man when, years afterward, his old commander secured him a lieutenancy in the regular service. He was the colonel's henchman, although ho never had brains enough to win a place on the regimental staff, and when Mrs. Maynard came he overwhelmed her with cumbrous compliments and incessant calls. He was, to his confident belief, her chosen and accepted knight for full two days after her arrival. Then Jerrold came back from a briof absence, and as in duty bound went to pay his respects to his colonel's wife, and that night there had been a singular scene. Mrs. Maynard had stopped suddenly in her laughing chat with two ladies, had started from her seat, wildly staring at the tall, way, and then fell back in her chair, fairly swooning as he made his bow. Sloat had rushed into the house to call the colonel and get some water, while Jerrold stood paralyzed at so strange a reception of his first call. Mrs. Maynard revived presently, explained that it was her heart, or the heat, or something, and the ladies on their way home decided that it was possibly the heart, it was certainly not the heat, it was unquestionably something, and that something was Jerrold, for she never took her eyes off him during the entire evening and seemed unable to shake off the fascination. Next day Jerrold dined there, and from that time on he was a daily visitor. Every one noted Mrs. Maynard's strong interest in him, but no one could account for it. She was old enough to be his mother, said the garrison, but not until Alice Renwick came did another consideration appear. He was singularly like the daughter. Both were tall, lithe, slender. Both had dark, lustrous eyes: dark, though almost perfect, skin, ex-slender subaltern who entered the gate-

quisitely chiseled features and slender, shapely hands and feet. Alice was "the picture of her father," said Mrs. Maynard, and Mr. Renwick had lived all his life in New York, while Mr. Jerrold was of an old southern family and his mother a Cuban beauty who was the toast of the New Orleans clubs not many years before the war. Poor Sloat! He did not fancy Jerrold and was as jealous as so unselfish a mortal could be of the immediate ascendancy the young fellow established in the colonel's household. It was bad enough before Alico joined them. After that it was well nigh unbearable. Then came the 3d of July dinner and the colonel's one annual jollification. No man ever heard of Sloat's being intoxicated. He rarely drank at all. but this evening the reminiscences of the day, the generous wine, the unaccustomed elegance of all his surroundings, due to Mrs. Maynard s taste and supervision, and the influence of Alice Renwick's exquisite beauty had fairly carried him away. They were chatting in the parlor, while Miss Renwick was entertaining some young lady friends from town and listening to the band on the parade. Sloat was expatiating on her grace and beauty and going over the album for the twentieth time when the colonel, with a twinkling eye, remarked to Mrs.

"I think you ought to show Major [By act of congress officers may be ad dressed by the title of the highest rank held by them in the volunteer service during the war. The colonel always punctiliously so addressed his friend and subordinate, although in the army his grade was simply that of first lieutenant] Sloat the 'directoire' picture, my dear."

"Alice would never forgive me," said madam, laughing, "though I consider it the most beautiful we have of her." "Oh where is it?" "Oh do let us see it, Mrs. Maynard!" was the chorus of exclamations from the few ladies present. "Oh, I insist on seeing it, madam," was Sloat's characteristic contribution to the clamor.

"I want you to understand it." said Mrs. Maynard, pleased, but still hesitating. "We are very daft about Alice at home, you know, and it's quite a wonder she has not been utterly spoiled by her aunts and uncles, but this picture was a specialty. An artist friend of ours fairly made us have it taken in the wedding dress worn by her grandmother. You know the Josephine Beauharnais 'directoire' style that was worn in seventeen ninety something. Her neck and shoulders are lovely, and that was why we consented. I went, and so did the artist, and we posed her, and the photograph is simply of her face and neck, too, but when Alice saw it she blushed furiously and forbade my having them finished. Afterward, though, she yielded when her Aunt Kate and I begged so hard and promised that none should be given away, and so just half a dozen were finished. Indeed the dress is by ne means as decollete as many girls wear theirs at dinner now in New York, but poor Alice was scandalized when she saw it last month, and she never would let me put one in the album."

"Oh, do go and get it, Mrs. Maynard!" pleaded the ladies. "Oh, please let me see it, Mrs. Maynard!" added Sloat, and at last the mother pride prevailed. Mrs. Maynard rustled up stairs and presently returned, holding in her hands a delicate silver frame in filigree work, a quaint, foreign affair, and inclosed therein was a cabinet photograph en vignette-the head, neck and shoulders of a beautiful girl, and the dainty, diminutive, what-there-was-of-it waist of the old fashioned gown, sashed almost immediately under the exquisite bust, rovealed quite materially the cause of Alice Renwick's blushes. But a more beautiful portrait was never photographed. The women fairly gasped with delight and envy. Sloat could not restrain his impatience to get it in his own hands, and finally he grasped it and then eyed it in rapture. It was two minutes before he spoke a word, while the colonel sat laughing at his worshiping gaze. Mrs. Maynard somewhat uneasily stretched forth her hand, and the other ladies impatiently strove to regain possession.

"Come, Major Sloat, you've surely had it long enough. We want it again.' "Never!" said Sloat, with melodramatic intensity. "Never! This is my ideal of perfection of divinity in woman. I will bear it home with me, set it above my fireside and adore it day and

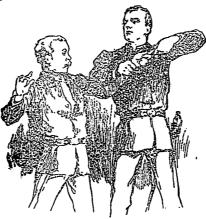

"'Nonsense, Major Sloat!" said Mrs Maynard, laughing, yet far from being at her ease. "Come, I must take it back. Alico may be in any minute now, and if she knew I had betrayed her she would never forgive me. Come, surrender!" And she strove to take it from him. But Sloat was in one of his utterly asinine moods. He would have been perfeetly willing to give any sum he possessed for so perfect a picture as this. He never dreamed that there were good and sufficient reasons why no man should have it. He so loved and honored his colonel that he was ready to lay down his life for any of his household. In laying claim to this picture he honestly believed that it was the highest proof he could give of his admiration and devotion. A tame surrender now meant that his protestations were empty words. "Therefore," argued Sloat. must stand firm "

"Madam," said he, "I'd die first." And with that he began backing to the Alarmed now, Mrs. Maynard sprang after him, and the little major leaped upon a chair, his face aglow, jolly, rubicund, beaming with bliss and triumph. She looked up, almost wringing her hands, and turned half appealingly to the colonel, who was laughing heartily on the sofa, never dreaming Sloat could be in earnest. "Here, I'll give you back the frame.

I don't want that," said Sloat and bogan fumbling at the back of the photograph. This was too much for the ladies. They, too, rushed to the rescue. One of them sprang and shut the door; the other seized and violently shook the back of his chair, and Sloat leaped to the floor, still clinging to his prize and laughing as though he had never had so much entertainment in his life. The long Venetian windows opened upon the piazza, and toward the nearest one he retreated, holding aloft the precious gage and waving off the attacking party with the other hand. Ho was within a yard of the blinds when they were suddenly thrown open, a tall, slender form stepped quickly in, one hand seized the uplifted wrist,

One hand scized the uplifted wrist. the other the picture, and in far less time than it takes to tell it Mr. Jerrold had wrenched it away and with quiet bow restored it to its rightful owner. "Oh, I say now, Jerrold, that's downright unhandsome of you!" gasped Sloat. "I'd have been on my way home with it." "Shut up, you fool!" was the sharp, hissing whisper. "Wait till I go home if you want to talk about it." And as quickly as he came Mr. Jerrold slipped out again upon the piazza.

Of course the story was told with varied comment all over the post. Several officers were injudicious enough to chaff the old subaltern about it, andhe was a little sore headed the next day anyway-the usually placid Sloat grew the more indignant at Jerrold. He decided to go and upbraid him, and, as ill luck would have it, they met before noon on the steps of the clubroom. "I want to say to you, Mr. Jerrold, that from an officer of your age to one a piece of impertinence." "I had a perfect right to do what I did," replied Jerrold coolly. "You were taking a most unwarrantable liberty in trying to carry off that picture." 'How did you know what it was? You had never seen it!"

"There's where you are mistaken, Mr. Sloat" (and Jerrold purposely and exasperatingly refused to recognize the customary brevet). "I had seen it—frequently. Two officers were standing by, and one of them turned sharply and faced company commander. Jerrold noted the symptom and flushed, but doggedly. "Why, Mr. Jerrold! Mrs. Maynard said she never showed that to any one," said Sloat in much surprise. heard her, did you not, Captain Ches-

"I did, certainly," was the reply. "All the same, I repeat what I've said," was Jerrold's sullen answer. have seen it frequently, and, what's more"- He suddenly stopped. "Well, what's more?" said Sloat sug-ter?"

"Never mind. I don't care to talk of the matter;" replied Jerrold and started to walk away.

But Sloat was angry, nettled, jealous. He had meant to show his intense lovalty and admiration for everything that was his colonel's and had been snubbed and called a fool by an officer many years though not so many "files" his junior. He never had liked him, and now there was an air of conscious superiority about Jerrold that fairly exasperated him. He angrily followed and called to him to stop, but Jerrold walked on. Captain Chester stood still and watched them. The little man had almost to run before he overtook the tall one. They were out of earshot when he finally did so. There were a few words on both sides. Then Jerrold shifted his light cane into his left hand, and Chester started forward, half expecting a fracas. To his astonishment, the two officers shook hands and parted.

"Well," said he as Sloat came back, with an angry yet bewildered face, "I'm glad you shook hands. I almost feared a row and was just going to stop it. Se he apologized, did he?' "No, nothing like it."

"Then what did you mean by shaking nands?" "That's notling—never you mind," said Sloat confusedly. "I haven't forgiven him, by a good deal. The man's conceit is enough to disgust anythingbut a woman, I suppose," he finished

"Well, it's none of my business, Sloat, but pardon my saying I don't see what there was to bring about the apparent reconciliation. That handshake meant something." "Oh, well-d-n it! We had some words, and he-or I-well, there's a bet, and we shook hands on it." "Seems to me that's pretty serious business, Sloat—a bet following such a talk as you two have had. I hope"-"Well, captain," interrupted Sloat, "I wouldn't have done it if I hadn't been mad as blazes, but I made it and must stick to it. That's all."

"You wouldn't mind telling me what it was, I suppose?" "I can't, and that ends it."

Captain Chester found food for much thought and speculation over this incident. So far as he was concerned, the abrupt remark of Sloat by no means ended it. In his distrust of Jerrold he, too, had taken alarm at the very substantial intimacy to which that young man was welcomed at the colonel's quarters. Prior to his marriage old Maynard had not liked him at all, but it was mainly because he had been so negligent of his duties and so determined a beau in city society after his arrival at Sibley. He had indeed threatened to have him transferred to a company still on frontier service if he did not reform, but then the rifle practice season began. and Jerrold was a capital shot and sure to be on the list of competitors for the He would be ordered in for the rifle camp anyway, and so the colonel decided to keep him at headquarters. This was in the summer of the year gone by. Then came the colonel's long leave, his visit to Europe, his meeting with his old friend, now the widow of the lamented Renwick; their delightful winter together in Italy, his courtship, her consent, their marriage and return to America. When Maynard came back to Sibley and the old regiment, he was so jolly and content that every man was welcomed at his house, and it was really a source of pride and pleasure to him that his accomplished wife should find any of his young officers so thoroughly agreeable as she pronounced Mr. Jerrold. Others were soldierly, courteous, well bred, but he had the air of a foreign court about him, she privately informed her lord, and it seems indeed that in days gone by Mr. Jerrold's father had spent many years in France and Spain, once as his country's representative near the throne. Though the father died long before the boy was out of his knickerbockers, he had left the impress of his grand manner, and Jerrold, to women of any age, was at once a courtier and a knight. But the colonel nover saw how her eyes followed the tall young officer time and again. There were women who soon noted it, and one of them said it was such a yearning, longing look. Was Mrs. Maynard really happy? they asked each other. Did she really want to see Alice mate with him, the handsome, the dangerous, the selfish fellow they knew him to be? If not, could anything be more imprudent than that they should be thrown together as they were being, day after day? Had Alice wealth of her own? If not, did the mother know that nothing would tempt Howard Jerrold into an alliance with a dowerless daughter? These and many more were questions that came up every day. The garrison could talk of little else, and Alice Renwick had been there just three weeks and was the acknowledged queen of hearts at Sibley when the rifle competitions began again, and a great array of officers and men from all over the northwest came to the post by every train, and their canvas tents dotted the broad prairie to the north. One lovely evening in August, just before the practice began, Colonel Maynard took his wife to drive out and see the camp. Mr. Jerrold and Alice Renwick followed on horseback. The carriage was surrounded as it halted near the range, and half a score of officers, old and young, were chatting with Mrs. Maynard, while others gathered about the levely girl who sat there in the saddle. There came marching up from the railway a small squad of soldiers, competitors arriving from the far west. Among them—apparently their senior noncommissioned officer — was a tall cavalry sergeant, superbly built, and with a bronzed and bearded and swarthy face that seemed to tell of years of campaigning over mountain and prairie. They were all men of perfect physique, all in the neat, soldierly fatigue dress of the regular service, some wearing the spotless white stripes of the infantry, of mine I think your conduct last night others the less artistic and equally destructible yellow of the cavalry. Their swinging stride, erect carriage and clear and handsome eyes all spoke of the perfection of health and soldierly development. Curious glances were turned to them as they advanced, and Miss Renwick, catching sight of the party, exclaimed:

"Oh, who are these? And what a tall soldier that sergeant is!" "That sergeant, Miss Renwick," said a slow, deliberate voice, "is the man I believe will knock Mr. Jerrold out of the first prize. That is Sergeant Mc-Jerrold as he spoke. It was his former Leod."

As though he heard his name pronounced, the tall cavalryman glanced for the first time at the group, brought his rifle to the carry, as if about to salute and was just stepping upon the roadside, where he came in full view of the occupants of the carriage, when a sudden pallor shot across his face, and he plunged heavily forward and went down like a shot. Sympathetic officers and comrades surrounded the prostrate form in an instant. The colonel himself sprang from his carriage and joined NUMBER 28

the group, a blanket was quickly brought from a neighboring tent, and the sergeant was borne thither and laid upon a cot. A surgeon felt his pulse and looked inquiringly around: "Any of you cavalrymen know him well? Has he been affected this way before? A young corporal who had been bending anxiously over the sergeant straightened up and saluted:

"I know him well, sir, and have been with him five years. He's only had one sick spell in all that time-'twas just like this—and then he told me he'd been sunstruck once." "This is no case of sunstroke," said the doctor. "It looks more like the heart. How long ago was the attack you speak of?" "Three years ago last April, sir. I remember it, because we'd just got into Fort Raines after a long scout. He'd been the solidest man in the troop all through the cold and storm and snow we had in the mountains, and we were in the reading room, and he'd picked up a newspaper and was reading while the rest of us were talking and laughing, and, first thing we knew, he was down on the floor, just like he was tonight ' "Hm!" said the surgeon. "Yes; that's plenty, steward. Give him that. Raise his head a little, corporal. Now he'll come round all right."

Driving home that night, Colonel Maynard musingly remarked: "Did you see that splendid fellow who fainted away?" "No," answered his wife; "you all gathered about him so quickly and carried him away. I could not even catch a glimpse of him. But he had recovered,

"Yes. Still I was thinking what a singular fact it is that occasionally a man slips through the surgeon's examinations with such a malady as this. Now, here is one of the finest athletes and shots in the whole army, a man who has been through some hard service and stirring fights, has won a tiptop name for himself and was on the high road to a commission, and yet this will block him effectually." "Why, what is the trouble?" "Some affection of the heart. Why! Hello! Stop, driver! Orderly, jump down and run back there. Mrs. Maynard has dropped her fan. What was it, dear?" he asked anxiously. "You started, and you are white and trembling." "I-I don't know, colonel. Let us go home. It will be over in a minute. Where are Alice and Mr. Jerrold? Call them, please. She must not be out riding after dark." But they were not in sight, and it was considerably after dark when they reached the fort. Mr. Jerrold explained that his horse had picked up a stone and he had had to walk him all the way.

CHAPTER IV. There was no sleep for Captain Ches ter the rest of the night. He went home, threw off his sword belt and seated him self in a big easy chair before his fireplace, deep in thought. Once or twice he arose and paced restlessly up and down the room, as he had done in his excited talk with Rollins some few hours before. Then he was simply angry and argumentative or declamatory. Now he had settled down into a very different frame of mind. He seemed awed, stunned, crushed. He had all the bearing and mien of one who, having defiantly predicted a calamity, was thunderstruck by the verification of his

In all his determined arraignment of Mr. Jerrold, in all the harsh things he had said and thought of him, he had never imagined any such depth of scoundrelism as the revelations of the night foreshadowed. Chester differed from many of his brotherhood. There was no room for rejoicing in his heart that the worst he had ever said of Jerrold was unequal to the apparent truth. He took no comfort to his soul that those who called him cynical, crabbed, unjust, even malicious, would now be compelled to admit he was right in his estimate. Like the best of us, Chester could not ordinarily say "Vade retro" to the temptation to think, if not to say, "Didn't I toll you so?" when in everyday affairs his oft disputed views were proved well founded. But in the face of such a catastrophe as now appeared engulfing the fair fame of his regiment and the honor of those whom his colonel held dear, Chester could feel only dismay and grief. What was his duty in the light of the discoveries he had made? To the best of his belief, he was the only man in the garrison who had evidence of Jerrold's absence from his own quarters and of the presence of some one at her window. He had taken prompt measures to prevent its being suspected by others. He purposely sent his guards to search along the cliff in the opposite direction, while he went to Jerrold's room and thence back to remove the telltale ladder. Should he tell any one until he had confronted Jerrold with the evidence of his guilt, and wringing from him his resignation send him far from the post before handing it in? Time and again he wished Frank Armitage were here. The youngest captain in the regiment, Armitage had been for years its adjutant and deep in the confidence of Colonel Maynard. He was a thorough soldier, a strong, self reliant, conrageous man, and one for whom Chester had ever felt a warm esteem. Armitage was on leave of absence, however-had been away some time on account of family matters and would not return, it was known, until he had effected the removal of his mother and sister to the new home he had purchased for them in the distant east. It was to his company that Jerrold had been promoted, and there was friction from the very week that the handsome subaltern joined. Armitage had long before "taken his measure" and was in no wise pleased that so lukewarm a soldier should have come to him as senior subaltern. They had a very plain talk, for Armitage was straightforward as a dart, and then, as Jerrold showed occasional lapses, the vaptain shut down on some of his most cherished privileges, and, to the indignation of society, the failure of Mr. Jerrold to appear at one or two gatherings where he was confidently expected was speedily laid at his captain's door. The recent death of his father kept Armitage from appearing in public, and, as neither he nor the major (who commanded the regiment while Maynard was abroad) vouchsafed the faintest explanation, society was allowed to form its own conclusions and did to the effect that Mr. Jerrold was a wronged and persecuted man. It was just as the Maynards arrived at Sibley that Armitage departed on his leave, and, to his unspeakable bliss, Mr. Jerrold succeeded to the command of his company. This fact, coupled with the charming relations which were straightway established with the colonel's family, placed him in a position of independence and gave him opportunities he had never known before. It was speedily evident that he was neglecting his military duties, that Company B was running down much faster than Armitage had built it up, and yet no man felt like speaking of it to the colonel, who saw it only occasionally on dress parade. Chester had about determined to write to Armitage himself and suggest his speedy return when this eventful night arrived. Now he fully made up his mind it must be done at once and had seated himself at his desk when the roar of the sunrise gun and the blare of the bugles warned him that reveille had come and he must again go to his guard. Before he returned to his quarters another complication, even more embarrassing, had arisen, and the letter to Armitage was post-

He had received the "present" of his guard and verified the presence of all his prisoners when he saw Major Sloat still standing out in the middle of the parade, where the adjutant usually received the reports of the roll calls. Several company officers, having made their reports, were scurrying back to quarters for another snooze before breakfast time or to get their cup of coffee before going out to the range. Chester strolled over toward him.

"What's the matter, Sloat?" "Nothing much. The colonel told me to receive the reveille reports for Hoyt this week. He's on general court martial.

"Yes, I know all that. I mean, what are you waiting for?" "Mr. Jerrold again. There's no report from his company." "Have you sent to wake him?" "No; I'll go myself and do it thoroughly too." And the little major turned sharply away and walked direct to the low range of bachelor quarters, dived under the piazza and into the green doorway. Hardly knowing how to explain his action, Chester quickly followed and in less than a minute was standing in the selfsame parlor which, by the light of a flickering match, he had searched two hours before. Here he halted and

A drowsy, disgusted yawn and stretch finally rewarded his efforts. Mr. Jerrold at last opened his eyes, rolled over, yawned sulkily again and tried to evade his persecutor, but to no purpose. Like a little terrier, Sloat hung onto him and worried and shook. "Oh, don't, d-n it, don't!" growled the victim. "What do you want anyway? Has that infernal reveille gone?' "Yes, and you're absent again, and no report from B company. By the holy poker, if you don't turn out and get it and report to me on the parade I'll spot the whole gang absent, and then no matinee for you today, my buck. Come, out with you! I mean it. Hall says you and he have an engagement in town, and 'pon my soul I'll bust it if you don't come out."

And so, growling and complaining, and yet half laughing, Adonis rolled from his couch and began to get into his clothes. Chester's blood ran cold. then boiled. Think of a man who could laugh like that and remember! When, how, had he returned to the house? Listen! "Confound you, Sloat! I wouldn't rout you out in this shabby way. Why couldn't you let a man sleep? I'm tired half to death." "What have you done to tire you? Slept all yesterday afternoon and danced perhaps a dozen times at the doctor's last night. You've had more sleep than I've had, begad! You took Miss Renwick home before 'twas over, and mean it was of you, too, with all

You are persecuting me because they like me so much better than they do you," he went on, laugh-ingly now. "Come, now, Sloat, confess, it is all because you're jealous. You couldn't have that picture, and I could.' Chester fairly started. He had urgent need to see this young gallant. He was staying for that purpose, but should he listen to further talk like this? Too late to move, for Sloat's answer came like a

A Winning Ticket. Just as we predicted weeks ago, the members of the Republican party of this State are far too loval to be captured by any such feelishness as the "one term" theory. At Grand Rapids a harmonious and businesslike session of the State convention was held and a winning ticket was nominated. It is Monday and Tuesday.—Vandalia Cor. gratifying to know that men like Col. A. T. Bliss of Saginaw, whose aspirations for a nomination had led him to leave no stone unturned to achieve that result; yet when he had that coveted honor denied him, he has nobly risen above all personal feelings and in a speech that was a feature of the convention, left no ground to doubt that he was above everything else, a

> The report of the crop situation, as issued by the United States Depart> ment of Agriculture, is as follows: The continued drouth over the principal corn producing states of the Central Vaileys and north-east states has resulted in great damage to the corn crops. Very unfavorable reports as to the conditions of crops are received from South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri and Oklohoma, while less unfavorable reports came from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, the crop in those states suffering greatly on the uplands In the Southern states corn is generally in excellent condition, and in Georgia the heaviest crop in many years is predicted. Reports as to cotton continue very favorable, although some injury has resulted from excessive cloudiness and heavy local rains in portions of South Carolina and Floriday. Tobacco is doing well in Tennesses and in some portions of Maryland, Virginia and Kentucky, but reports from Ohio are unfavorable.

MURDERED BY REQUEST.

An Aged Frenchman, Tired of Life, Hires a Boy to Stab Him to Death

A strange boy murderer is Francois Bertholier, a lad of 16, who has been tried before the Aix assizes for killing an old man named Blanchard at the latter's request. In the dock he related his crime with grim composure. He

"On Friday, Oct. 18 (mark the uncanny day and date), the day before the arrival of the Russians, Blanchard and I went to Toulon. He then spoke to mo for the first time of his intention of putting an end to his life. He dwelt on this topic for several hours, telling mo about his lamentable physical condition and entreating me to deliver him from his suffering."

"Did you ask him why he hesitated to commit suicide?"

"He told me he could not bring himself to the point and that he had religious scruples. A couple of days later he came into my bedroom and woke me up. He said: 'Francois, I count on you for today. I wish it to be all over by this evening.' I was very astonished. He added: 'I am going to sign a bill for 1,800 francs for you. You may cash it at my notary's at Carpentras.' "

'This sum of 1,800 francs caused you to make up your mind?" "It did. I bought a sheet of stamped paper and made out the bill, which Blanchard signed. Then we went to Joliette (to Marseilles) to take the steam tramway. Just before starting we went to a cafe, where my friend made mo drink glasses of peppermint. "Yes. He leaned forward a little, heaved a sigh, and that's all." "What did you do next?" "I had a little blood on my fingers.

I washed them in the sea." "Did you feel no remorse, no terror" "A little, yes."

The jury brought in a verdict of not guilty on the ground that Bertholier had acted without knowledge of crime, but age of 20.—Paris Journal.

SEAGOING HOBOES

Ships Sailing From San Francisco Are Carrying a Full List of Stowaways. Nearly every ship that has gone out one or more stowaways on board. As a rule, captains do not object to one or two, but when it comes to half a dozen or more it is a serious matter. The coasters to northern ports have been most patronized by stowaways, and now it is the usual thing for the captains of hold of their vessels to make sure that they will not have more of a crew than they can feed.

On the last trip of the Enoch Arden north nine men were stowed away in her hold when she was towed out of port, and they did not show themselves until the tug was well out of hailing distance. When the vessel reached Seattle, she was nearly bare of provisions. The stowaways on ships north are all bound for the lumber regions of Washington or the mines of British Columbia, where they hope to get work. Those who manage to get away from San Francisco on ships bound elsewhere seem to have no definite end in view except to keep moving if it does not take too much exertion.—San Francis-

An English Nail Eater.

A remarkable surgical operation was performed this week at the Lancaster County Lunatic asylum upon William man some time ago took to swallowing things, and on Monday morning he ate 192 flooring nails, which naturally upset his digestion. An operation was decided upon without the remotest chance of saving the man's life. During the operation, which lasted two hours, the surgeon took from his stomach the 192 nails aforesaid, varying from 11/2 to 3 inches in length, a half of a screw, a piece of wire, two buttons and a mass of matted hair. The nails alone weighed nearly two pounds. Fitzpatrick is expected to die. - London News.

Private Letters Made Public. There has been much speculation over the appearance in the auction mart recently of private letters to prominent persons still living. Thus nine letters from Motley, the American historian, to Bismarck were sold this week for $300. One was marked "private and confidential" and was addressed "Dear Old Bismarck." There is no doubt that these letters are genuine, but the natural query is, How did they get into the public market?-London Standard.

His Apology.

Editor Meacham delivered a speech at the banquet of the Kentucky Press club at Frankfort and published the thing in full in the next issue of his own newspaper. He thus apologized to his readers: "This is not done at anybody's request nor to fill a long felt want. In fact, we have no good excuse of any kind for publishing it. But, as it is labeled, those who wish to escape are not obliged to read it."

Tuberculosis In Cattle.

Tuberculosis in cattle is winning attention as one of the most common agencies for transmitting consumption to the human race. New York and Massachusetts state cattle commissioners are moving actively against it. Now the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture has been provided with an appropriation.

HOW EDDINGER DIED.

The California Murderer Threw Up His Hands With a Pistol In One. The particulars of the killing of F. S. Eddinger, the man who robbed Teamster Otto Hampton of Jose & Ellery's freight money and the murderer of his employer, E. W. Jose, whom he had shot and fatally wounded on the night of June 10 at Lewiston, Trinity county, while the latter was trying to arrest him for the robbery, show that the fugitive was shot through the heart with a rifle ball fired by Deputy Sheriff

After Jose had been shot Sheriff Bowie of Weaverville, Trinity county, took up the trail of the murderer at Lewiston and tracked him to within five miles of Redding. He came into Redding and notified the officers here that he was certain that the robber was heading for the railroad, and that he was positive that he was on the right track.

Constable Pleisch and Deputy Sheriff Chase took the trail, proceeding to Cottonwood, Shasta county, until within a mile of that place, where the road crosses the railroad track, where they stopped, each taking one side of the road. Soon they saw Eddinger coming down the road and commanded him to halt. When the robber stopped, Chase said, "Throw up your hands.'

The robber answered, "I have done There came a shot from Pleisch's gun Leveling his rifle, Chase said, 'Drop that pistol," when the robber lowered his hand and at the same time commenced firing.

After two shots Chaso fell on his knees, and the robber, thinking he had killed his pursuer, turned and commenced shooting at Pleisch. QUITE A CHARACTER.

Denth of the Last Slave Sold at Auction In New Haven.

Mrs. Lois Tritton, colored, died at her home in this city Monday at the ago of 95. She has long been a local celebrity from the fact that she was the last slave sold at public auction in this city in 1825. The original papers of this transaction are in the possession of ex-Governor Ingersoll and show that its purpose was to give her her freedom. The sale was by the sheriff under an exthe tribunal ordered that he should be ecution issued on a former judgment sent to a house of correction until the against her owner, human goods and chattels having been levied on to satisfy an execution. The sheriff's return is dated March 10, 1825, and recites that on the 5th of March, 1825, by virtue of the execution, he sold Lucy, the mother, and Lois Tritton, the daughter, as the of port in the past two months has had property of the defendant, to Anthony one or more stownways on heard As a P. Sanford for $10. A deed of manumission from Mr. Sanford accompanies the documents.

Mrs. Tritton was born in Halifax on Christmas eve. 1799, and visited this city with a family named Tritton in 1820. It was from this family she rethe ships to make a tour through the ceived the name of Tritton. She returned to Nova Scotia, but came to New Haven again in 1824 or 1825, and after being sold to Mr. Sanford was given her liberty. She has resided here ever since and was a member of Trinity Episcopal church.—New Haven Special.

Loyal Deputation of Thieves.

Manufacturing popular support for royalty has awkward effects sometimes. The other day a so called loyal deputation of subjects waited upon the king of Servia to thank him for trampling upon their liberties by suspending the constitution. According to the ancient custom, they were entertained at a luncheon, at which sladko, the national dish, was served to them on gold plates. After their departure it was discovered that some spoons, which were also of gold, had disappeared. The men were followed, and the spoons were found in their pockets. It seems that the deputation consisted of men picked up on the highways, who were paid by the police to Fitzpatrick, one of the inmates. This play the par of admiring subjects.-London Letter.

Those Ancient Coins.

The treasure in ancient coins lately discovered by masons at Mouleverd is believed to be important, the coins belonging to the last centuries before the Christian era and being extremely diverse in character, representing all the emblems of the ancient colony of Tarantine. The treasure seems to have been that of an army on the march, probably that under Hannibal, and from the different coins it contains the route of the army can be determined, as money was requisitioned on the way.

Drums of Aluminium.

The uses to which aluminium is put are constantly extending. Thus far three entire regiments of the Prussian guards are furnished with big drums made of the new metal, and not only are a number of regiments of the line shortly to be provided with them, but it is expected that they will gradually be introduced into all the military bands. Aside from the important advantage of lighter weight, they have proved to emit a fuller and richer sound.—Paris Ameri-

Vice President Stevenson. Adlai Stevenson is working his presidential boom to its utmost capacity. It is noted that strangers go into his room behind the senate chamber, perhaps a little nervous at the prospect of meeting a vice president of the United States, possibly the first they have ever seen, and they come away so delighted with the man they have met that they have almost forgotten that he is the vice president. Ho never fails to thank a stranger for honoring him with a call nor the friend who brings him for giving him the privilege of seeing him.-Chicago Tribune.

Praised For a Kick.

Nothing so stirs up the indignation of the average adult as to see a little child abused by a grown person, yet when Fireman Nelson kicked a 2-yearold boy in Elkton, Md., a day or two ago, so hard that the mark of his boot remained on the child's forehead for hours he was praised by all who saw it and warmly thanked by the little one's parents. Nelson was standing on the pilot of a swiftly moving locomotive when he kicked the boy, and his kick knocked the child off the track and saved its life, - Exchange.

FIFTY OFF FOR CASH. Application of the Cheap John Principle In a Chicago Police Court.

"Well, if you want to pay the fine, it will be $5. If you don't want to pay, it will be $10. Now, which will you have?"

This is the way in which justice is dispensed in the Desplaines street police court. A dicker is made, if possible, with the prisoner in the dock, much on the same principle as goods are sold on the bargain counter of a Cheap John store. Last night Thomas Gibbons, a teamster, bought a chicken sandwich from peddler at the corner of Desplaines and Meridian streets, and after eating the same refused to pay for it. Officer Ullmacher felt called upon to arrest him, and he was arraigned before Justice Doyle in the Desplaines street court this morning. After telling all the details of the transaction the officer said: "And when he was searched at the station he had two $5 bills, your honor." At this remark Justice Doyle bright ened up, and grasping his pen said:

"Is that so? Did you have $10?" Gibbons pleaded guilty to the charge of having an unusual amount of money for a Desplaines street prisoner, and the court continued:

"Well, I'll make it $5 if you want to pay, but if not the fine will be $10. Which will you have?" "If I have been guilty of any wrongdoing, I am willing to pay, but"-"That will do. Take $5, Mr. Clerk." "But I don't think I am guilty, and I don't propose to pay a fine, '' remarked the prisoner. "Oh, very well," said Justico Doylo 'You can make it $10, Mr. Clerk. Take him down stairs," and the prisoner was led away to await the arrival of the bridewell bus.—Chicago Dispatch.

AN EXPERT SWINDLER.

Woman With a Remarkable Record Just Sent to Prison In England. Mrs. Annio Frost, alias Mrs. Gordon Bailis, who was sentenced to prison in London the other day on a charge of fraud, has had an extraordinary career as an adventuress. Sho is described as a woman of very propossessing appearance, having a good figure, pretty eyes and a pale complexion, although she is now past 40. She victimized people all over the continent, in Scotland, Australia and New Zealand. She has assumed, at one time and another, over 40 different names. Her system usually consisted in renting some large house, living in an extravagant and lavish fashion and posing as a woman of large wealth and distinguished family. She would, while in Scotland, speak of her immense possessions in Australia. After becoming fixed in a new place and her credit established she would proceed to run up bills, borrow money and get possession of everything of value possible. The place would become too hot to hold her, and she would disappear and seek new fields for her peculiar talents.

At one time she obtained assistance from an old baronet to the amount of £5.000. Mrs. Graham was victimized for £3,000, and no less a personage than Professor Blackie of Edinburgh fell a victim to her guileless ways. She had just completed a five year sentence in prison last October and apparently has lost no time in getting back there. For a time at least the tradesmen will be safe, as her sentence was for seven years. —London Truth.

Scheme of the Russian Government. The Russian government conte platos buying up the railways in the southwest of Russia, amounting altogether to about 8,000 miles. The question of constructing a railway to the Polar and White seas is to be considered by a special commission. The scheme of constructing a line across Finland from Uleaborg to Moorman coast, on the Arctic ocean, seems to have been abandoned. It is proposed, however, to construct a railway connecting St. Petersburg with Kemi, on the extreme north of the gulf of Bothnia, via Ladeinoe Polje and Petrozavodsk, a distance of some 600 miles. This might be afterward extended to one of the open harbors on the Moorman coast, which would furnish Russian warshins with a naval station. Another scheme is for a line from St. Petersburg to Vologda to place the capital in more direct connection with the Transsiberia railway and to develop the resources of the northern governments. - St. Petersburg Correspondence.

A CHINESE PUZZLE.

What Will the Treasury Department Be With the 3,000 Unregistered Orientals? A question that is causing the treasury department considerable bother just now is what to do with unregistered Chinamen. According to the official report made by Commissioner Miller, 107, 000 had complied with the extended Geary law and registered. Official esti mates place the number of Chinese in this country at 110,000, so that it would appear that there are now in the United States 3,000 unregistered Chinese, every one of whom, according to the law, must be sent out of the country.

There is no money appropriated for the purpose, and as it costs fully $75 per head to send Chinamen back to China from the United States the aggregate amount required for the purpose will be quite large. In the meantime, under circular instructions sent out by the treasury, any citizen can appear before a United States commissioner and make complaint against an unregistered Chinaman, and United States marshals and customs officers are by law directed to do so. Secretary Carlislo and Attorney General Olney have the vexed question under consideration and will probably make some official announcement on the subject shortly.—Washington

A discharged messenger boy in Cleveland did a land office business by writing telegrams and addressing them "collect" to well known guests at hotels. The clerks would receive them and pay charges, but exposure has come. A theatrical manager received a message reading: "Why did you not answer my last telegram? Mother and the rest of us are all well." For this he paid 46 cents. Another man, a bachelor, paid 89 cents for a message reading: "Baby has cut a new tooth and is doing well. Mary." The Western Union company has refunded a number of these payments and is investigating the case.-

English Army Sheets. A resolution was recently introduced in the house of commons of the British parliament by Mr. Hanbury to provide each private soldier with a pair of clean sheets fornightly instead of monthly. To this Mr. Campbell-Bannerman seriously protested upon the ground that it would involve an increased expenditure of £10,000 a year. He thought that the money might be spent to the greater advantage and comfort of the soldier in Ex-Speaker Reed has set a new fashion. The other day he donned a suit of Kentucky tow, very cool, but very baggy. His trousers were beautifully creased, but-shades of Berry Wall-they were creased on the sides instead of the front! The result was very funny. Mr. Reed's capacious legs looked as if they had wings on them, for the creases in the sides stood out conspicuously and with generous expansion. And the west of it was that everybody had somethig to say to Mr. Reed about the way .e wore his trousers, so that by the tile the house adjourned he was a very til d amateur clubs.—Saturday Review.

An Extraordinary Explosive. Among the most wonderful and dangerous of all explosives is iodide of nitrogen. For many years chemists have been trying to determine its precise composition, and in doing so have sometimes fairly taken their lives in their hands, for the substance explodes on the slightest provocation. A more draft of air passing over it will cause an explosion. The least shock or friction is equally disastrous. But Dr. Szuhay of Budapest has not been deterred by any danger from trying once more to ascer-tain what the iodide of nitrogen contains, although he has had some of his apparatus pulverized in the winking of an eye. And he has succeeded, too, in his attempt, having recently established the fact that the extraordinary explosive, which he produced in the form of a fino powder, contains hydrogen as well as iodine and nitrogen. This fact had been suspected, but never proved. To the general reader it might seem hardly worth while to risk one's life in order to find out a thing like that, but to the man of science, devoting all his energies to investigations that the busy world never dreams of noticing, the discovery of such a fact is as thrilling as the finding of a gold nugget would be to a half starved miner. And his reward is greater than that of the fortunate gold secker, for his name goes upon the honor roll of science to be read perhaps hundreds of years in the future. -

Millionaire With No Faith In Wills.

Youth's Companion.

P. D. Armour, the millionaire packer, strolled into a dining car on the St. Paul road the other day in his usual breezy and wholesome way. The train conductor came along, and Mr. Armour handed over a commutation ticket to be punched. Though he has a desk full of annual passes, he never travels on a pass, even on roads of which he is a director. The millionaire was bound for the home of his son, P. D., Jr., at Oconomowoc, where he spends what few hours he can spare from his business during the summer months. After he had given the waiter his order Mr. Armour turned to chat with a friend. He is a great talker and keeps at it all the time. "Yes," he said, "if I live a few years longer, as I hope to do, I shall die a comparatively poor man. To my two sons I am turning over my fortune as fast as they show ability to handle it. I don't tell you this for the purpose of talking about my money, but to show you just where I stand. I want to see my money cared for while I am alive to direct the boys. I am doing now what Field and the others are waiting to do at their deaths. There can be no squabble over my estate in the courts after I am gone, as the estate will be comparatively small. The two boys are shouldering it rapidly, and they are demonstrating their ability to care well for it."—Chicago Times.

Died of Horror. A few mornings ago some herders on the Clay Bank ranch, lying north of this place, came across the body of a man lying in a little hollow among some rocks. About his neck was coiled a large rattlesnake. While another huge monster had crept in at the open collar of his flannel shirt. The men attacked the first snake and killed it without being aware of the presence of the second. but when one of the party tried to slip his hand under the shirt in order to ascertain if the man was really dead the snake raised its head and struck at him, giving him only time to hastily snatch his hand out of reach of the creature's

On examination it was found that the man had only been dead a few hours, and from his healthy appearance it is believed that he lay down to sleep in the hollow when the snakes, crawling from the rock heap close at hand, had coiled themselves about him for warmth, the nights here being still cold. The body indicated no bite from the reptiles, and the man's wide open eyes, full of a silent horror, give the impression that he woke to find the snakes upon him and died of terror. The man was decently dressed and had a silver watch with the initials "W. J." engraved on the inner side of the case.—Del Rio (Tex.) Dispatch.

WRITES IN A TRANCE. The Singular Case of a Kansas City Woman

The medical profession is much interested in the singular case of Mrs. Edith Morford, the wife of George Morford, a grain speculator who lives at 1208 North Twelfth street. Mrs. Morford went into a trance Thursday evening, and all efforts to arouse her have failed. Mrs. Morford has been studying Christian science for about a year, and this mental exercise, the doctors say, probably produced a peculiar nervous condi-

Thursday evening Mrs. Morford, who had been at home all day with her sister, Miss Bertha Erwin, went to her room and retired. Her husband returned home about 10 o'clock. He attempted to awaken Mrs. Morford and failed, called in Dr. Richards and Dr. Martin, who remained all night working with the woman, who, while apparently sleeping like a child, could not be aroused. All day yesterday, last night and today she has remained in the same condition. The most peculiar feature of Mrs. Morford's case is that she occasionally rises from her bed and walks about the house while in her prolonged sleep. Yesterday afternoon she went to the table and ate a few morsels of food and then drew a glass of water. No heed was paid by her to members of the family, and not a word has passed her lips. Last night Mrs. Morford arose, and after arranging her hair attired herself in a black dress and went to the parlor. She seated herself at her writing table with a Bible open before her, and began writing, and, though her eyes remained closed, the lines she penned were as straight and the words as correctly formed as though written by a good penman with both eyes open.

Dr. Richards and Dr. Martin are among the oldest practitioners in the city, and they assert that this is the most singular case of its nature that has ever been brought to their notice. They express the belief that the woman will soon come out of her trance or prolonged sleep and do not think any harm will come of it. - Kansas City Dispatch.

CHESS CHAMPIONS.

Lasker Has Completed the Greatest Record Ever Made by Any Player. Lasker, the new champion, has every reason to plumo himself on this result, which is almost identical with the result of Steinitz versus Zukertort in 1886-10 to 5, with five draws. Lasker has beaten the man who had beaten all the world for 30 years or more. He has played in the past five years 189 recorded games in matches and tournaments, of which 35 were drawn and only 17 lost. It is enough to say that nobody has ever shown such a record as that. Steinitz, in his matches and tournaments, has played 259, of which he drew 78 and lost 81. He has played against stronger players, especially in tournaments, and has played a more open and without reckoning by how much. No close comparison is possible be tween Lasker and Morphy, the less so because our fixed idea of Morphy recalls him as a youth of most subtle and fortunate imagination, which seemed to picture not only the natural effects of his own moves, but the choices and misapprehensions of his antagonist. His style was above everything picturesque and we are losing the picturesque in chess or should be losing it if it were not for the brilliant eccentrics of the Apples as Medicine. Chemically the apple is composed of vegetable fiber albumen, sugar, gum, chlorophyl, malic acid, gallic acid, lime and much water. Furthermore, the German analysts say that the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorous than any fruit or vegetable. The phosphorous is admirably adapt ed for renewing the essential nervous matter of the brain and spinal cord. It is perhaps for the same reason rudely understood that old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this fruit for renewing their powers of mind and body. Also he acids of the apple are of signal use for men of sedentary habits, whose livers are sluggish in action, those acids serving to eliminate from the body noxious matters which if retained would make the brain heavy and dull or bring jaundice or skin eruptions and other allied troubles. Some such an experience must have led to our custom of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose and like dishes. The malic acid of ripe apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat. It is also the fact that such fresh fruits as the apple, the pear, the plum, when taken ripe without sugar, diminish acidity of the stomach rather than provoke it. The vegetable sauces and juices are convert ed into alkaline carbonates, which tend to counteractacidity.—Southern Sleeping Car Berths. Five years ago all berths on sleepers were made up with feet to the engine, unless the reverse was ordered. Today nearly all berths are made up the other way on the main lines, and it is the exception that the old position is retained.

No one of our correspondents have given a reason for this, save one that on an elevator no one objects to go ing up, though a descent is often disagreeable. There is the additional reason that whatever draft is created is more agreeable if it comes from behind the head than if it blows in the face. The change has also come since the porter's or the sleeper's rules, one or both, were less stringent as to closing windows in lower berths. If a window is open an inch or two, the passenger's comfort is greatly increased, and the open window is naturally at the rear end of the berth, and as naturally the berth is made up with the pillow at the head. Whatever the cause, the curious fact remains that a habit of making up berths with heads to the rear has suddenly been altered by the general consent of travelers, who have all found out what a few discovered 10 years ago-that the way to be comfortable on a sleeper is to take a lower berth. have the head to the engine and wedge up the rear window of the berth an inch or two, so as to let in fresh air.—Railroad Gazette.

Artist and Amateur. A critic who was recently asked to define the line between artist and amateur stated that an amateur's sketches were labored and finished up to invite favorable criticism while the artist's sketches were broad and unfinished, suggesting much to himself only. Could not the dividing line be better defined? The amount of time spent on a sketch often depends upon opportunity. When the time is not needed elsewhere, one quite able to sketch in the boldest, most rapid style may prefer to go on and produce a picture, trusting to the inspiration of the present rather than that of the future and to vision rather than to memory. If something greater is to be subsequently developed from the work, it will be no less suggestive because of its finished character.

It may not be easy to define the dividing line between artists and amateurs, but it is easy to point out a well recognized one that is identical with it—the one that is drawn between poets and mere writers of verse. - Art Amateur.

The Burglar Came. It was an agent for a big manufac turing concern who was talking. "I once got out a poster," said he, "which started in: 'Keep your eye on this. A burglar is coming.' This I distributed broadcast in the towns in the northern part of the state. Among other places it was hung conspicuously in a small grocery and dry goods store in one of the towns in that section. "One morning the proprietor, when he opened up shop, found that my notice had been amended to read: 'Keep your eye on this. The burglar has come.' The correction was made in pencil marks.

"And sure enough the burglar had come, and he had carried off about $600 in money and goods."—New York Sun.

Argus Eyed and Hydra Headed. The term "Argus eyed" means watchful. According to the Grecian fable, Argus had 100 eyes, and Juno set him to watch all of whom she was jealous. When Argus was slain, she transplanted his eyes into the tail of the peacock. "Hydra headed" is a term derived from the fable of Hercules and the Hydra. The Hydra had nine heads, and Hercules was sent to kill it. As soon as he struck; off one its heads, two shot up in its Hace.—St. Louis Republic A Thoughtful Empress One evening Catherine II of Russia had dined in one town and was to return to her palace in another some miles distant. These journeys were made with much ceremony and magnificence. The great sleighs were ready to start for home. Catherine sat alone in the imperial sleigh. She inquired if the drivers and the footmen had had dinner. Receiving a negative reply she at once left her sleigh. "They have as much need of dinner as we," she said to her party, and she waited patiently until the servants had dined.—Youth's Companion.

A Natural Mistake. A Chicago clergyman having performed the marriage ceremony for a couple undertook to write out the usual marriage certificate, but being in doubt as to the day of the month he asked "This is the ninth, is it not?"

"Why, parson," said the blushing bride, "you do all my marrying, and you ought to remember that this is only the fifth."—Texas Siftings. A registered letter that was received at the Portland (Me.) postoffice the other day bore a stamp of the $4 denomination. It would have gone for the usual 10 cents fee and postage. The stamp collecting fad was suggested as an explanation, the stamp that had been used being regarded by enthusiasts as more valuable than an uncanceled one.

Important Food Tests. How to Produce more Economical and Healthful articles for the Table.

The official food analyses by the United States and Canadian governments have been studied with interest. The United States government report gives the names of eighteen well-known baking powders, some of them adver tised as pure cream of tartar powders which contain alum. The report shows the Royal to be a pure cream of tartar baking powder, the highest in strength, evolving 160 6 cubic inches of leavening gas per single ounce of powder. There were eight other brands of cream of tartar powders tested, and their average strength was 111.5 cubic inches of gas per ounce of powder. The Canadian government investigations were of a still larger number of powders. The Royal Baking Powder was here also shown the purest and highest in strength, containing fortyfive per cent more leavening gas per ounce than the average of all other cream of tartar powders. The figures are very instructive to the practical housekeeper. They indicate that the Royal Baking Powder goes more than 33 per cent. further in use than the others, or is one-third more economical. Still more important than this, however, they prove this popular article has been brought to the highest degree of purity-for to its superlative purity this superiority in strength is dife-and consequently that by its use we may be insured the purest and most wholesome food. The powders of lower strength are found to leave large amounts of impurities in the food. This fact is emphasized by the report of the Ohio State Food Commissioner, who while finding the Royal practically pure, found no other powder to contain less than 10 per cent of inert or foreigh matters.

The statistics show that there is used in the manufacture of the Royal Baking Powder more than half of all the cream of tartar consumed in the United States for all purposes The wonderful sale thus indicated for the Royal Baking Powder-greater than that of all other baking powders combined-is perhaps even a higher evidence than that already quoted of the superiority of this article, and of its indispensableness to modern cookery.

The radical reduction in the price of Romance, from 25 to 10 cents a copy, resulted immediately in a great increase of its sales, four editions of the July issue being required to meet the demand. It is safe to predict still larger sales of the August number, as the public only needs to know of such an opportunity to buy the best of stories ten of them, for a dime, and it is sure to improve it. The special feature of this issue is a group of Mystery Stories, the first of which is the famous Heaphy ghost story, unknown to this generation, but the source of much wonder and delight thirty years ago. The two other tales of this group are original and striking. Besides these there are one of Alphonse Dandet's charming fantasies, a pretty summer love story by Herbert D. Gallandet, an extraordinary tale of Stanley J. Weyman, a boy's story by Hetta L. H. Ward, and others equally attractive. Romance is issued by Romance Publishing Company, Clinton Hall, Astor Place, New York, and is sent for 10 cents.

We are pleased to be able to annouce that the publisher of THE INTER OCEAN has made a special offer on the weekly edition of that paper during the present political campaign. He will send The Weekly Inter Ocean for six months to any subscriber of the RECORD on receipt of thirty cents. This is a very low price for one of the best and ablest Republican newspapers in the country. Good Republicans should try to increase its circulation. Subscriptions will be received at this price from June 1st to August 1st. After that the regular prices will be restored.

This is what Bill Nye says about political matters: "Go where you will in this country today, and you will find men talking about the tariff and tax on raw material, when they hadn't had a mouthful of raw material in their house for weeks, except as their wives have earned and brought it home to them. The country is full of men who have fought so hard for the commonwealth that the seat of their trousers shine like the dome of the Massachusetts state house."—Ex.

In the August number of HARPER's MAGAZINE will appear an article descriptive of Monmouth County, New Jersey—long famous for its oysters, trotting hores and apple jack. It is written by Julian Ralph, who discusses not only important historical matter, but also numerous watering-places where, in winsome variety, the American girl dominates. This particular phase is charmingly illustrated by W. T. Smedley.

The Right Hon. Sir John Eldon Gorst, M. Secretary of the Interior Hoke Smith contributes to the August number of the North American Review an able article dealing with a question upon which he is peculiarly well fitted to write—"The Resource and Development of the South." It is an important addition to the surfes of article by Cabinet Ministers which the Review has recently given to its readers.
