A SILENCE BROKEN.

The summer fields bested with flowers—The summer grasses dotted with dew—Serve but to calendar the hours.

Love, had that dreamed, in these gray calms—Or quiet pulses and leaden peace, That time had brought his healing balsam

Though he dreamt, that did not know—Who hath one soul—and may not sing—Dear, you would weary of a lute

THE TRUMPETER. "Margaria!" "Here!" came a child's voice from beneath a linden heavy with bloom.

Franz Henig entered the shade where Margaria, with a sleek yellow coat, sat on the grass, and looked at him.

"What is that?" the lad asked. "A stocking, stupid. Hasn't that not eyes?" the child answered, affecting impudence.

"You are, then?" Franz captured the needles and scrutinized the work with covert amusement.

"They were to be thin, but they grew so small I'm afraid they will be only large enough for the cat," Margaria said.

"So! Well, little one, thou shalt knit me stockings another time." He looked dreamily across the garden to the quaint old house which for three years had been his home.

Three years of preparation for the university, three years of unremitting kindness from the busy housewife and her aged mother, who had opened their doors to the lonely student, three years brightened by the enthusiastic devotion of a little child. Now this chapter must close.

From down the village street came the rattle of drums, a bugle note and the sound of cheers.

"It is a band!" shouted Margaria, seizing pussy and preparing to leave the shade.

"Wait," Franz said, with a thrill in his voice. "I have something to say to the liebhens. Dost thou know what the drum is crying? It is war!"

"War?" she responded, with childish indifference. "The mother said this morning that the soldiers were going to France. But why dost thou care, dear Franz?"

"Hear Steiner returns to the army today," he said gravely. "The mother will be no more lessons on the beautiful trumpet for thee! I am sorry. But don't mind. Thou wilt have me."

"Margaria," he said sorrowfully, "I shall not see thee, for I go too." "Thou! Thou! She started wide, incredulous eyes. "Surely, not thou!"

"Liebhens, wouldst thou have me idle at home when the rest are going? Wouldst thou have me a coward? I have no father or mother, no sister to mourn for me, while many go from dear ones who will miss them."

"Thou hast the mother and grandmother and thou hast me!" she sobbed. "True, I have thee, and thou wilt be a brave little German maid and make my going happy."

"When wilt thou go?" she asked, bravely trying to suppress the sob. "This afternoon."

"And who will ride thy horse, Franz, when thou art gone?" "Prinz will go with me, for I shall try for the cavalry, as my father did before me. He had to go to the trumpet. If I might go as trumpeter! To sound the charge—that would be glorious! But it is not possible, of course. I hope I shall be near Steiner. But come; it is still I will go with thee."

The hours crept away with rapid preparations and ready partings. Through the little town sounded hurrying feet, eager voices, snatches of war songs, rolling drum or bugle's blast. In the midst of the turmoil Margaria was missing.

"Where can she be?" queried Franz, Krummer anxiously. "Margaria, Margaria, Franz is going!" "Not a childish cry," responded.

"We must go," cautioned grandmother, trying her bonnet strings with trembling fingers. "Come, Lotte."

"Margaria!" shouted Franz, with only a mocking echo gave answer. With a gasp he passed once more about the dear home, then turned away.

At the little station all was confusion. Fearful women clung to the fathers, brothers, sweethearts, who laughed and joked with heavy hearts. The loud train was laden with weeping, further south, all pressing forward to join the crown prince's army at Landau. The moment for departure was at hand.

"Oh! Wiederschen, then, dear friend!" said Franz, pressing a hasty kiss upon the cheeks of the two women who had taken him into their hearts.

"Margaria, you will give her my dear love, I wish!" cried a small voice, and Margaria clutched his arm.

ing sounded the trumpets in response. With a great clatter the cavalry swept up the hill to plunge into the fiery rain below.

"There came a shrill singing through the sulphurous air, a deafening crash, and a shell had exploded to the right. Before it fell Holze, the further trumpet.

"Steiner's horse reeled, then plunged heavily forward, throwing his rider over his head. In an instant Steiner was on his feet and running by Franz's side. Behind him came thundering line upon line of galloping squadrons.

"Up!" cried Franz. He checked Prinz's pace an instant, and the trumpeter was mounted behind him. The sight of battle had entered the cavalry horse, and down the hill he clattered under the double load, soon fully abreast of the squadron.

"Fat your arms around me, so." A dimness spread before the keen eyes of Steiner. There was a humming in his ears. The heavens were growing black.

Again came the trumpet call. With a wavering effort Steiner raised his instrument, but found no strength to blow.

"Franz," he groaned, "sound the charge!" There was no time for question. Seizing the trumpet, Franz raised it to his lips. Clear and strong his repetition of the call rang out above the turmoil.

"Now let me drop." Steiner's hands loosened their grasp. His strength ebbed fast. But Franz caught the heroic hands firmly in his left and drew the limp form closer to his broad shoulders. He dropped the bride rein upon his pommel, thrust his right arm through the cord of his trumpet, grasped his saber with that hand, and so met the foe.

Nightfall found the army of the crown prince gathered in and around a French village, far from the ground on which Franz, after the first charge, had delivered Steiner to the ambulance, the nurses and the doctors. Through the successive actions of the day the young student had served as trumpeter.

Shouting, foraging for provisions, cheering, singing and laughing as though on a holiday, the Bavarian troopers surged through the little captured town. After darkness had come on Franz, pushing his way through the crowded thoroughfares, found himself before a small inn.

A MODEL DWELLING.

Cottage of Eight Rooms and Bath, With Spacious Closets—Costs $2,850. (Copyright, 1894, by Palliser, Palliser & Co., Architects, 34 West 43d St., N. Y.)

The "model" style of architecture, as it is termed among the architects, is we are glad to say, exhausted. The saved brackets, scrolled gables and the French roof are things of the past.

Far away sounded strains of martial music. The troops were passing around the old town wall. There was an eager movement in the throng. All faces turned by a common impulse toward the Brandenburg Thor. Yes, they were coming.

Carefully holding the blue wreath of cornflowers, Margaria craned her small neck, but alas! could see nothing beyond a sea of heads. Tears of disappointment rose to her eyes.

"Forgotten in the general rejoicing! The journey would be in vain! It was not to be borne.

Slipping unnoticed from Franz's grasp, Margaria, wrapped her head through the crowd until she stood behind the police who mounted guard along the way.

Trusting her head out as far as possible, she bent her head to the sky blue uniforms of the Bavarians fixed by cat's paw. Among so many could she find Steiner?

"Dear Franz!" It was not a finished speech, but it served its purpose, for a loving welcome shone in the child's face, and high above his head she held the cornflower wreath.

All sadness faded from Franz's eyes. "Margaria, liebhens!" he cried, and with a quick movement bent and caught her in his arms.

Bear in mind that the question of paying $70,000 for new buildings at St. Joseph is one of the questions to be decided at this election on Nov. 6th. Let every voter keep this fact in mind.

It is evident that the editor of the St. Joseph Press has been "consulting Webster." In the daily issue of Oct. 18, he very gravely stated that "Buchanan has another new and rapidly growing industry in the way of a moulder and sand bank, etc." Verily, Webster is great and the St. Joseph Press is its prophet.

The Daily and Weekly Eagle of Grand Rapids, last Friday, passed into the hands of Hon. Nelson Dingley, Jr., of Lewiston, Maine. A new company will be organized by which the publication will be continued.

Dr. Conklin Returns.
He Tells a Strange Story of His Abduction.
Dr. A. B. Conklin, of Cassopolis, who mysteriously disappeared on the night of Sept. 2, returned last Friday to the house of his family now living in Manchester, occupied at that time. He was slugged in his office by two colored men and carried off. He was kept in durance and his mustache shaved off. He was turned over to two white men wearing masks and traveled with them till he was released Tuesday near Cincinnati and at once started for home. He looks completely used up. He says he was told he must stay out of Michigan for a time. His appearance immediately after the acquittal of Dr. Anderson of Traverse City, who was charged with abortion, is significant, as he was understood to be a witness in the case.

BURROWS
SPEAKS AT ROUGH'S OPERA
HOUSE FRIDAY TO A CROWDED HOUSE.

Friday afternoon was a memorable occasion to the citizens of Buchanan and the people residing in the vicinity of our town. The occasion was the fact that Congressman Burrows was to address our citizens on the issues of the campaign, at that time.

It had been arranged to hold the meeting out of doors, at the grove on the Niles hill, provided the weather was favorable. The day proved threatening, and it was decided that it would be advisable to hold the meeting in Rough's opera house. Although it rained several times during the day, yet it did not in the least deter the people in coming from all directions, and early in the day the streets of the town presented an animated appearance and crowds of people could be seen at every hand. By half-past one, although over half an hour before the time announced for the speaker to commence, the hall was well filled and crowds of people were waiting on the streets for the arrival of the speakers. Shortly before two o'clock the Niles delegation came over, bringing with them their former friend Gies Club, and all were heartily greeted.

Owing to some unforeseen accident, Dr. Thomas was delayed and was unable to be present. This caused a delay, as Mr. Burrows had counted on Dr. Thomas opening the meeting and timing his arrival to reach here on the 3:13 train. However, the crowd did not seem to mind the delay one bit and waited for Mr. Burrows, being entertained, in the meantime, by the Niles Glee Club and the Buchanan Band.

When the train bearing Mr. Burrows pulled into the station, Mr. Burrows was met by Messrs. Bishop and Worthington, of the Reception Committee, and upon learning the situation insisted upon going immediately to the hall. Upon his arrival there he stepped upon the platform amid the cheers and applause of the assemblage. After a selection by the Niles Glee Club, Mr. A. Worthington introduced Mr. Burrows to an enthusiastic and appreciative audience.

Mr. Burrows spoke earnestly and eloquently for over an hour. After a graceful apology for having kept the crowd waiting, Mr. Burrows stated that he desired to speak at this time on the issues at stake; treating them as a business question and not as a partisan one, expressing a hope that there were a great many members of the democratic party present, as at this important period of the history of our country all were interested in the welfare of this great nation, and in aiding to restore to its people its prosperity. There were times when party lines were forgotten, as in 1861, when they saw our beloved flag shot from the skies and trampled under foot, they knew no party or party tag, but acted as one people, and the republicans and democrats rushed alike to the defense of their beloved land, realizing that their interests were identical to the nation's life.

Mr. Burrows to the result of the last Presidential election, stating that he would have hazarded anything that Benjamin Harrison would be elected, but for some reason, the majority of the voters desired a change. He hazarded the opinion that a desire for a change still continued, and requested that if any one was in the audience who did not desire a change, they would kindly indicate by rising, stating that he would exchange postmasters and office holders, as he knew that they did not want a change (applause).

In referring to the change, Mr. Burrows stated that two years ago, when the election was held, there was no reason for a change. There never was a time when our country was enjoying such unexampled prosperity as on that fatal November morning, when the voters declared in favor of a change. The exports for the year had reached the total of $2,000,000,000 in round numbers, and domestic manufactures and consumption reached the enormous aggregate of over $500,000,000. Many mills were running at their utmost capacity, mines were operated to their fullest extent, and the laboring classes had laid aside an accumulation of over $2,000,000,000 in the savings banks of our country. The workman was receiving magnificent wages, and in many cases owned their own homes; were enabled to provide their families with many of the comforts and, in many instances, the luxuries of life, on that very day we voted for a change, and here it is. The $2,000,000,000 of savings have been exhausted, having gone to support the families with the bare necessities of life. The mills are closed everywhere, although here in Buchanan, I am told, that you are busy and that everything is going so fast that you get all have to hang on to keep things from running away from you (applause). At this time there are two million working men tramping about our beloved country begging, not for bread, but for work and a chance to live. It is time since 1861 that the laboring man is receiving food at the hand of charity. It has been pointed out that the Democratic policy has been the means of starting one new industry in our country, and that is the American soap house (laughter and applause).

Now, friends, the practical question is just this: "What has produced this?" "What do you know the cause of, and cannot apply the remedy. We say it is the change from the policy of protection. For 32 years the Republican party has solidly maintained a policy of protection, and from that period that policy of protection has brought unbounded prosperity. There have been times when the Democratic party have had either a president or some part of the legislative body, but at no time during that period have they had sufficient power that they could in any way change the Republican policy of protection. You will all agree that 32 years ago we had a reduction of the public debt, and rebuilt industries was not the result of a policy changed from protection to free trade.

Briefly, I will endeavor to point out to you the difference between the policy of protection and of free trade: It is the policy of the Republican party to raise money for necessary expenses of our government by laying duty upon the goods that come from foreign countries and placed in competition with the product of our own factories, and the result of our own labor. We say to the foreign manufacturer, "You can dispose of your goods in our country, but in order to do so you must first pay to our government a sum that is sufficient to make up the difference between the cost of producing the goods in your own country and the cost of producing that same article in America. In other words, you must come into our market exactly on the same level as the American manufacturer." To illustrate the matter, we will take this knife which I hold in my hand. The foreign manufacturer wishes to sell this knife in our market. Our protection policy says to him: "You can sell your knives in America, but you must pay 5 cents for each knife you bring here, to compensate for the difference in the cost of production." The foreign manufacturer sends a shipment of knives to this country, and when they reach our ports an official comes and inspects them. "What have you in this shipment?" "Knives," "How many knives?" "The manufacturer says, 'Two million.'" The official tells him that he must pay the government $100,000 in duty, and is allowed to sell them in this market. Now that's all there is to protection, and yet some free trader will take you aside, in an alley and scream at you, and try to make you know as little about it as he does (applause).

The free trade policy—mind you, I do not say democratic policy, for there are many democrats who do not believe in free trade—is to let every man do what he does, and let everything we do produce come in free. Every such system is sure to bring disaster. In 1877, free trade brought disaster on every land. In 1891, the Republican party said, by its policy, we will let tea, coffee, and everything we cannot produce come in free, but we will put a duty upon everything we do produce. We do not mean that duty just high enough to make the difference between the cost of production in our own country and the cost of production in foreign countries. We will let the mother stand on the other side of the anvil, with her child in one arm and a hammer in the other, making nails, and making by this arduous and trying labor a pittance of 20 cents per day. We know that every man who is allowed to enter into open competition in our markets would result in one of two things: they would either drive us out of business, or our labor would be controlled by a few capitalists who would place them upon a level with that cheap labor.

So it is, our policy as protectionists is to levy a duty on coal and iron ore, because there are places where coal and iron ore are in cars to the shafts, for a miserable pittance, and if we allow that coal and iron mined by such labor, to come in free, we will be compelled to go out of business, or that kind of labor will drag our people to that same level (applause). When we have places where labor is living in hovels and not in homes and only existing on the bare necessities, we said we will never consent that our labor should be brought to that level (applause). We said that if we had this cheap foreign labor, you can come into our markets, but if you people receive 20 cents a day for making chains, you may sell those chains in our markets, but you must pay us a sum equal to the difference between your wages of 20 cents a day and the wages that our chain manufacturer pays to his workman, and we say to you now, that while you are on our level you shall not drag our labor down to your level (applause). If you are paying $1.00 for labor that costs our manufacturer $1.50 you shall pay us for that difference the sum that will compensate for that difference. Let me illustrate: Now, under the Wilson bill which has just come into effect, a bill I confess I don't understand, the Wilson bill will control the sum on the free list; what does this mean? It means China and Japan make bagging, and China and Japan pay 6 cents per day for labor, and with bagging free we cannot run our mills to compete with China and Japan unless our people are willing to take the 6 cents per day. Consequently we must go out of business, our mills are shut down and the workmen turned out. That is the difference between protection and free trade.

Take wool for another example. Under the protective tariff, duty was levied on wool of about 10 and 11 cents per pound. Under the Wilson bill it is free. What is the effect? In Australia, land can be rented for 1 cent per acre per annum. Think of it, my friends, I venture to assert that there are 100,000 acres in Berrien county that can be rented for like sum (applause). This Australian land is used for sheep grazing, and the wool is clipped by cheap labor, and as a consequence can be put upon the market much cheaper than our farmers can raise, and the Wilson bill says you shall enter the market on a level with the Australian wool. Under protection our sheep had increased until, 1892, they would never see 75 cent wheat total of 50,000,000 sheep. In one year our production of wool increased $1,000,000,000, and in 1892 it reached a total of 385,000,000 pounds. The price of wool has steadily declined until now it has declined 20 per cent, since the inauguration of Cleveland, in March 4, 1893. Under the protective tariff a duty of $4 per ton was placed upon wool in order to protect our farmers and make it profitable for him to raise hay. A few weeks I met a gentleman whose business was that of buying hay and shipping it to the Boston market. He told me he had enjoyed a profitable business for a number of years, but now his firm had told him orders to stop buying hay, telling him that since the Wilson bill had reduced the tariff on hay, he must pay $2 per ton, there had been 600 cars of Canadian hay shipped into that market and sold cheaper, and the hay of the American farmer was left on his hands. Yes, my American farmer, you can burn yours or use it for bedding, and you can stop business and enjoy free trade (applause).

Take soda: The soda manufacturers of our own country are producing soda in the American markets $2 a ton cheaper than in England, in order to break up the soda industries that were made possible in this country by the protective tariff.

There is one thing that the democratic party promised the last campaign that has been fulfilled. They promised the farmers, if they voted for a change they would never see 75 cent wheat again, and they haven't (laughter and applause). But we don't seem to be satisfied to take anyone's word for any of these things, we seem to want to learn the truth. The young man who believes his father (applause). I knew more at 21 than I have ever known since and every day I live I know less (laughter). If this is not true as you as a people, why did we try this free trade policy four different times and away in 1787 what was said of the result of this policy. Listen, and I will read to you our domestic industries were protected. The weaver, the cooper, the hatter, the saddler, the ropemaker, and many others were reduced to bankruptcy; our markets were glutted with foreign products; prices fell; our manufacturers, generally were ruined; our laborers beggared; our artisans without employment; our merchants insolvent, and our farmers necessarily followed all these classes into the vortex of general financial destruction.

In 1816 a new generation comes up and another object lesson is necessary, so we go out of business again and Senator Benton of Missouri says in writing of this period "No price for property; no sales except those of the sheriff and the marshal; no purchasers at execution sales, except the creditor, or some holder of money; no employment for industry; no demand for labor; no sale for the product on the farm; no sound of the hammer, except that of the auctioneer knocking down property. Distress was the universal cry of the people; relief, the universal demand, was thundered at the doors of all Legislatures, State and Federal."

BENTON HARBOR.
From our Regular Correspondent.
Oct. 23, 1894.
The post office closes now at 7.30 p. m.
New furnaces have recently been put in the Baptist church.
Another foot-ball team has been formed by the students at the college.
Senator John Patton Jr. delivered an address at St. Joseph last night.
The Y. M. C. A. is fitting up a room for meetings, reading, gymnasium, etc.
Rumor has it that John Hess, formerly of Buchanan, is to be married to-day to a Miss Kaiser.
The steamer May Graham made her last trip yesterday and has gone into winter quarters.
The M. W. A. gave a log-rolling social with musical and literary program at their hall Saturday night.
The report that parties from this place are to start a basket factory in California proves to be a fake.
Hon. J. C. Burrows gave a rousing speech to five hundred people at the opera house Friday night following his address in Buchanan in the afternoon.
Victor M. Gore, of this city, was highly complimented by being invited by J. C. Burrows to accompany him to Dowagiac last Saturday and occupy part of the time at the big meeting held in that place.
The fire alarm was sounded Thursday evening caused by a fire in Contractor Mills yard among the poles used for sawing into paving blocks. Hose No. 1 responded promptly and soon had the fire out. Messrs. Pearl and Mills presented them with a check for $10 as a reward for their prompt work.
One of our street car conductors was robbed Friday night. He went to his boarding place about midnight and after eating lunch began making his report and counting the money received during the day. After counting out $10 he fell asleep with the money, before him on the table and on waking at 3 a. m. it was gone. No clue to the thief.
A dastardly attempt was made to wreck the passenger train on the Big 4 about 2 p. m. last Friday. While rounding the curve and coming down the grade eight miles from this city, the engine struck an obstruction which from its position had evidently been put there to stop the train. Fortunately the engine tossed aside a part of it and jumped over the rest without leaving the rails thus averting what might have been a frightful accident. No damage resulted except to break the hose and let all the water out of the tank. It is a pity the soundrels could not be caught and severely punished.
Three tramps were hanging around the yard at Spencer, Barnes & Sturdt's yesterday and stealing wood. Some of the workman remonstrated when one of them threw a brick bat at the teamster. They were arrested on a charge of stealing wood.

Last week the Atkinson Brothers paid our farmers $10,000 for hay which they shipped east at a profit. Now they have quit hauling and are obliged to load two cars which have been on the siding for some days awaiting an offer which would cover the cost. Cause, the cars in question with Canada, admitted under the new tariff at prices below those which our farmers are, as yet, willing to take.—Cassopolis Vigilant.

ABSORPTION PROCESS.
 Wonderful Method of Curing Cancer Without Knife, Blood or Pain.
 The absorption process of curing Cancer is undoubtedly a world wonder that is attracting the attention of eminent physicians and specialists everywhere. The grand results obtained in numerous cases have been closely watched by medical experts and have awakened their curiosity and admiration to such an extent, that Dr. Hess, of Grand Rapids, the only physician who possesses the secret and employs it in his practice, is in constant receipt of letters of inquiry, or personal visits from different ones to find out if possible, more about this evident success. Frequently physicians after learning of the grand results from his mode of treatment, have placed members of their own family under his treatment both for cancer and consumption. When the brightest medical men seek his advice and assistance after failing in their own capacity, and go to him as a last resort to save the life of some of their loved ones, this must certainly create thought for the intelligent. You who may feel skeptical regarding these grand assertions, please investigate for yourself. All the necessary proof to verify this can be produced.

TARIFF ON WOOL

Out of Their Own Mouth Will I Judge Them, Thou Wicked Servant!

The Detroit Free Press of September 26, 1894, published in its Washington dispatches an interview with Minister Zeballos...

PRICE OF WOOL GOES UP.

EFFECT OF OUR NEW TARIFF LAW IN THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

REMARKABLE STIMULATION OF THE INDUSTRY HAS RESULTED.

HEAVY ADVANCES IN THE MARKETS OF THAT COUNTRY.

Trade With America Expected to Reach $6,000,000 This Year.

The Argentine minister and the Free Press seemed to be particularly joyous over the effect of the Gorman tariff law on the wool industry of the South American nation...

Under the McKinley bill this difference in price was paid into the U. S. treasury by the Argentine wool growers...

Democratic Hatred of Pensioners. The results of Cleveland's placing the United States pension department under Confederate influences are continually developing...

ROADS IN MINNESOTA. Although Rich and Enterprising, Her Highways Show Lack of Wisdom. The light-colored gravel of Minnesota serves to draw out the nails driven by the cars of business...

Such proceedings on the part of the Democratic-Confederate pension department show a selfish hatred of the Union soldier. The latter has learned that he must meet with ballots this year...

At Sulphur, Ky., fire swept away the entire central portion of the town, resulting in a loss of $100,000.

SUGAR TRUST IS GRATEFUL. Wholesale Price Not to Be Raised Until After Election. Washington: Special Telegram.—The Democratic campaign managers have entered into an agreement with the sugar trust...

A BIT OF MINNESOTA SORBERY. The leading business men of the state, including the best farmers, are ready for an advanced step in the road reform movement...

With all her natural wealth and beauty Minnesota has not shown great wisdom on the subject of road improvement.

Enthusiastic Democratic Influences. The state of Michigan was fortunate in getting rid of the Democratic administration as soon as it did. Had it continued two years longer the state would have been bankrupted...

CASTORIA for Infants and Children. Castoria cures Cough, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Eructation, Kills Worms, gives sleep, and promotes digestion, without injurious medication.

Castoria is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach.

For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results.

Going to Buy a Watch? If so, buy one that cannot be stolen. The only theft-proof Watches are those with Non-pull-out.

Non-pull-out. Here's the Idea: The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the groove, and the bow is held in place by the collar.
