[The Country of the Saints.]

CHAPTER I.

of despair. A band of Pawnees or of Blackfeet may occasionally traverse it in order to reach other hunting grounds, but the hardiest of the braves are glad to lose sight of those awesome plains and to find themselves once more upon their prairies. The coyote skulks among the scrub, the buzzard flaps heavily through the air, and the clumsy grizzly bear lumbers through the dark ravines and picks up such sustenance as it can among the rocks. These are the sole dwellers in the wilderness. In the whole world there can be no more dreary view than that from the northern slope of the Sierra Blanco. As far as the eye can reach stretches tho great fint plain land, all dusted over with patches of alkali and intersected by clumps of the dwarfish chaparral bushes. On the extreme verge of the horizon lie a long chain of mountain peaks, with their rugged summits flecked with snow. In this great stretch of country there is no sign of life nor of anything appertaining to life. There is no bird in the steel blue heaven, no movement upon the dull, gray earth. Above all, there is absolute silence. Listen as one may, there is no shadow of a sound in all that mighty wilderness. Nothing but silence -complete and heart subduing silence. It has been said there is nothing ap pertaining to life upon the broad plain. That is hardly true. Looking down from tho Sierra Blauco one sees a pathway traced out across the desert, which winds away and is lost in the extreme distance. It is rutted with wheels and trodden down by the feet of many adventurers. Here and there are scattered white objects which glisten in the sun and stand out against the dull deposit of alkali. Approach and examine them! They are bones. Some large and coarse, others smaller and more delicate. The former have belonged to oxen and the latter to men. For 1,500 miles one may trace this ghastly caravan route by the

An observer would have found it difficult to say whether he was nearer to 40 or 60. His face was lean and haggard, and the brown, parchmentlike skin was drawn tightly over the projecting bones; his long, brown hair and beard were all flecked and dashed with white; his eyes were sunken in his head and burned with an unnatural luster, while the hand which grasped his rifle was hardly more fleshy than that of a skeleton. On the little plateau which crowned the barren hill there stood a single giant bowlder, and against this bowlder there lay a tall man, long bearded and hard featured, but of an excessive thinness. His placed face and regular breathing showed that he was fast asleep. Beside him lay a little child, with her round white arms encircling his brown, sinewy neck and her golden haired head resting upon the breast of his velveteen tunic. Her rosy lips were parted, showing the regular line of snow white teeth within, and a playful smile played over her infantile features. Her plump little white legs, terminating in white socks and neat shoes, with shining buckles, offered a strange contrast to the long, shriveled members of her companion. On the ledge of rock above this strange couple there stood three solemn buzzards, who at the sight of the newcomers uttered raucous screams of disappointment and flapped sullenly away. The cries of the foul birds awoke the two sleepers, who stared about them in bewilderment. The man staggered to his feet and looked down upon the plain which had been so desolate when sleep had overtaken him and which was now traversed by this enormous body of men and of beasts. His face assumed an expression of incredulity as he gazed, and he passed his bony hand over his eyes. "This is what they call delirium, I guess," he muttered. The child stood beside him, holding on to the skirt of his coat, and said nothing, but looked all around her with the wondering, questioning gaze of childhood. The rescuing party were speedily able to convince the two castaways that their appearance was no delusion. One of them seized the little girl and hoisted her upon his shoulder, while two others supported her gaunt companion and assisted him toward the wagons.

"My namo is John Ferrier," wanderer explained. "Me and that little un are all that's left o' 21 people. The rest is all dead o' thirst and hunger away down in the south."

"Is she your child?" asked some one. "I guess she is now!" the other cried lefiantly; "she's mine cause I saved her. No man will take her away from me. She's Lucy Ferrier from this day Who are you, though?" he conunued, glancing with curiosity at his stalwart, sunburned rescuers. "There seems to be a powerful lot o' ye."

"Nigh upon 10,000," said one of the young men. "We are the persecuted children of God, the chosen of the angel Merona. ''

"I never heard tell on him," said the wanderer. "He appears to have chosen a fair crowd o' ye. "Do not jest at that which is sacred." said the other sternly. "We are of those

The name of Nauvoo evidently recalled recollections to John Ferrier. "I see," he said. "Ye are the Mormons." "We are the Mormons," answered his companions with one voice.

is leading us under the person of our He shall say what is to be done with They had reached the base of the hill by this time and were surrounded by crowds of the pilgrims, pale faced, meek looking women, strong, laughing children and anxious, earnest eyed men. Many were the cries of astonishment and of commiseration which arose from them when they perceived the youth of one of the strangers and the destitution of the other. Their escort did not halthowever, but pushed on, followed by a great crowd of Mormons, until they reached a wagon, which was conspicuous for its great size and for the gaudiness and smartness of its appearance. Six horses were yoked to it, whereas the others were furnished with two or at most four apiece.

Beside the driver there sat a man who could not have been more than 30 years of age, but whose massive head and resolute expression marked him as a leader. He was reading a brown backed volume, but as the crowd approached he laid it aside and listened attentively to an account of the episode. Then he turned to the two castaways. "If we take you with us," he said in solemn words, "it can only be as believers in our own creed. We shall have no wolves in our fold. Better far that your bones should bleach in this wilderness than that you should prove to be that little speck of decay which in time -corrupts the whole fruit. Will you come with us on these terms?

"Guess I'll come with ye on any terms," said Ferrier, with such emphasis that the grave elders could not restrain a smile. The leader alone retained his stern, impressive expression. "Take him, Brother Stangerson," he said. "Give him food and drink, and the child likewise. Let it be your task also to teach him our holy creed. We have delayed long enough. Forward! On, on to Zion!" "On, on to Zion!" cried the crowd of the trials and privations endured by the immigrant Mormons before they came to their final haven. From the shores of the Mississippi to the western slopes of the Rocky mountains they had struggled on with a constancy almost unparalleled in history. The savage man and the savage beast, hunger, thirst, fatigue and disease, every impediment which nature could place in the way, had all been overcome with Anglo-Saxon tenacity. Yet the long journey and the accumulated terrors had shaken the hearts of the stoutest among them. There was not one who did not sink upon his knees in heartfelt prayer when they saw the broad valley of Utah bathed in the sunlight beneath them and learned from the lips of their leader that this was the promised land, and that these virgin acres were to be theirs forevermore.

Young specially proved himself to be a skillful administrator as well as a resolute chief. Maps were drawn and charts prepared in which the future city was sketched out. All around farms were apportioned and allotted in proportion to the standing of each individual. The tradesman was put to his trade and the artisan to his calling. In the town streets and squares sprang up as if by magic. In the country there were draining and hedging, planting and clearing, until the next summer saw the whole country golden with the wheat crop. Everything prospered in the strange settlement. Above all, the great temple which they had erected in the center of the city grew over taller and larger. From the first blush of dawn until the closing of the twilight the clatter of the hammer and the rasp of the say were never absent from the monument which the immigrants erected to Him who had led them safe through many dangers.

The two castaways, John Ferrier and the little girl who had shared his fortunes and had been adopted as his daughter, accompanied the Mormons to the end of their great pilgrimage. Little Lucy Ferrier was borne along pleasantly enough in Elder Stangerson's wagon, a retreat which she shared with the Morheadstrong, forward boy of 12. Having rained, with the clasticity of childhood, from the shock caused by her mother's death, she soon became a pet with the women and reconciled herself to this new life in her moving canvas covered homo. In the meantime, Ferrier, having recovered from his privations, distinguished himself as a useful guide and an indefatigable hunter. So rapidly did he gain the esteem of his new companions that when they reached the end of their wanderings it was unanimously agreed that he should be provided with as large and as fertile a tract of land as any of the settlers, with the exception of Young himself and of Stangerson, Kimball, Johnston and Drebber, who were the four principal elders. On the farm thus acquired John Ferrier built himself a substantial loghouse, which received so many additions in succeeding years that it grew into roomy villa. He was a man of a practical turn of mind, keen in his dealings, skillful with his hands. His iron constitution enabled him to work morning and evening at improving and tilling his lands. Hence it came about that his farm and all that belonged to him prospered exceedingly. In three years he was better off than his neighbors, in six he was well to do, in nine he was rich, and in twelve there were not half a dozen men in the whole of Salt Lake City who could compare with him. From the great inland sea to the distant Wahsatch mountains there was no name better known than that of John Ferrier. There was one way, and only one, in which he offended the susceptibilities of his co-religionists. No argument or persuasion could ever induce him to set up a female establishment after the manner of his companions. He never gave reasons for this persistent refusal, but contented himself by resolutely and inflexibly adhering to his determination. There were some who accused him of lukewarmness in his adopted religion and others who put it down to greed of wealth and reluctance to incur expense. Others, again, spoke of some early love affair and of a fair haired girl who had pined away on the shores of the Atlantic. Whatever the reason, Ferrier remained strictly celibate. In every other respect he conformed to the religion of the young settlement and gained the name of being an orthodox and straight walking man. Lucy Ferrier grew up within the loghouse and assisted her adopted father in all his undertakings. The keen air of the pine trees took the place of nurse and his mind as he watched her lithe, girlish figure tripping through the child of the west. So the bud blossom-

Pacific slope. first discovered that the child had developed into the woman. It seldom is in such cases. That mysterious change is too subtle and too gradual to be measured by dates. Least of all does the maiden herself know it until the tone of a voice or the touch of a hand sets her heart thrilling within her, and she learns, with a mixture of pride and of fear, that a new and larger nature has awakened within her. There are few who can not recall that day and remember the one little incident which heralded the dawn of a new life. In the case of Lucy Ferrier the occasion was serious enough in itself, apart from its future influence on her destiny and that of many besides. It was a warm June morning, and the Latter Day Saints v re as busy as the bees whose hive they had chosen for their emblem. In the fields and in the streets rose the same hum of human industry. Down the dusty highroads defiled long streams of heavily laden mules, all heading to the west, for the gold fever had broken out in California, and the overlaud route lay through the city of the NUMBER 12. and bullocks coming in from the outlying pasture lands and trains of tired immigrants, men and horses equally weary of their interminable journey. Through all this motley assemblage, threading her way with the skill of an accomplished rider, there galloped Lucy Ferrier, her fair face flushed with the exercise and her long chestnut hair floating out behind her. She had a commission from her father in the city and was dashing in as she had done many a time before with all the fearlessness of youth, thinking only of her task and how it was to be performed. The travel stained adventurers gazed after her in astonishment, and even the unemotional Indians.

their accustomed stoicism as they marveled at the beauty of the pale faced maiden.

She had reached the outskirts of the city when she found the road blocked by a great drove of cattle, driven by a half dozen wild looking herdsmen from the plains. In her impatience she endeavored to pass this obstacle by pushing her horse into what appeared to be a gap. Scarcely had she got fairly into it, however, before the beasts closed in behind her, and she found herself completely imbedded in the moving stream of fierce eyed, long horned bullocks. Accustomed as she was to deal with cattle, she was not alarmed at the situation, but took advantage of every opportunity to urge her horse on in the hope of pushing her way through the cavalcade. Unfortunately the horns of one of the creatures, either by accident or design, came in violent contact with the flank of the mustang and excited it to madness. In an instant it reared up upon its hind legs, with a snort of rage and, pranced and tossed in a way that would have unseated any but a most skillful rider. The situation was full of peril. Every plunge of the excited horse brought it against the horus again and goaded it to fresh madness. It was all that the girl could do to keep herself in the saddle, yet a slip would mean a terrible death under the hoof of the unwieldy and terrified animal. Unaccustomed to sudden emergencies, her head began to swim and her grip upon the bridle to relax. Cheked by the rising cloud of dust and by the steam from the struggling creatures, she might have abandoned her efforts in despair but for a kindly voice at her elbow which assured her of assistance. At the same moment a sinewy brown hand caught the frightened horse by the curb, and, forcing a way through the drove, soon brought her to the outskirts. "You're not hurt, I hope, miss?" said her preserver respectfully. She looked up at his dark, fierce face and laughed saucily. "I'm awful frightened," she said naively. "Whoever would have thought that Poncho would have been so scared by a lot of cows? "Thank God you kept your seat," the other said earnestly. He was a tall, savage looking young fellow, mounted on a powerful roan horse and clad in the rough dress of a hunter, with a long rifle slung over his shoulders. "I guess you are the daughter of John Ferrier," he remarked. "I saw you ride down from his house. When von see him, ask him if he remembers the Jefferson Hopes of St. Louis. If he's the same Ferrier, my father and he were pretty thick."

"Hadn't you better come and ask yourself?'' she asked demurely. The young fellow seemed pleased at the suggestion, and his dark eyes sparkled with pleasure. "I'll do so," he said. "We've been in the mountains for two months and are not over and above in visiting condition. He must take us "He has a good deal to thank you for, and so have I," she answered. "He's awful fond of me. If those cows had jumped on me, he'd have never got over

"Neither would I," said her compan-"You? Well, I don't see that it would make much matter to you anyhow.

You ain't even a friend of ours." The young hunter's dark face grew so gloomy over this remark that Lucy Ferrier laughed aloud.

"There, I didn't mean that," she said. "Of course you are a friend now. You must come and see us. Now I must push along, or father won't trust me with his business any more. Goodby." "Goodby," he answered, raising his broad sombrero and bending over her little hand. She wheeled her mustang round, gave it a cut with her riding whip and darted away down the broad road in a rolling cloud of dust. Young Jefferson Hope rode on with bis companions, gloomy and taciturn. He and they had been among the Nevada mountains prospecting for silver and were returning to Salt Lake City in the hope of raising capital enough to work some lodes which they had discovered He had been as keen as any of them apon the business until this sudden incident had drawn his thoughts into another channel. The sight of the fair young girl, as frank and wholesome as the Sierra breezes, had stirred his volcanic, untamed heart to its very depths. When she had vanished from his sight, he realized that a crisis had come in his life, and that neither silver speculations nor any other questions could ever be of such importance to him as this new and all absorbing one. The love which had sprung up in his heart was not the sudden, changeable fancy of a boy, but rather the wild, fierce passion of a man of strong will and imperious temper. He had been accustomed to succeed in all that he undertook. He swore in his heart he would not fail in this if human effort and human perseverance could render him successful. He called on John Ferrier that night and many times again until his face was a familiar one at the farmhouse. John, cooped up in the valley and absorbed in his work, had little chance of learning the news of the outside world during the last 12 years. All this Jefferson Hope was able to tell him and in a style which interested Lucy as well as her father. He had been a pioneer in California and could narrate many a strange tale of fortunes made and fortunes lost in those wild, halcyon days. He had been a scout, too, and a trapper, a silver explorer and a ranchman. Wherever stirring adventures were to be had Jefferson Hope had been there in search of them. He soon became a favorite with the old farmer, who spoke eloquently of his virtues. On such occasions Lucy was silent, but her blushing cheek and her bright, happy eyes showed only too clearly that her young heart was no longer her own. Her honest father may not have observed these symptoms, but they were assuredly not thrown away npon the man who had won her affections.

SUNDAY SCHOOL EVANGEL.

EDITED BY REV. O. J. ROBERTS.

SALUTATORY.

Through the kindness of the Editor of the RECORD we are given the use of this column every week to address the Sunday School people of Southwestern Michigan. We appreciate this opportune offer fully, and will endeavor to make this column an "Evangel" of good will and good news, and seck to send lines of the Sunday School army.

Rally Days will be a great feature of our work in '95.

a stirring message each week along the

Niles is planning for a rally of its Sunday School workers, and all its members, in the near future.

Berrien county is the first county in the State to organize a Primary Union, and Buchanan township the first in the county to organize a township Union. We propose to be on the "front line of Sunday School work" in old Berrien.

The idea of the Sunday School is this: Definite instruction in the literature of the Bible, its history, its philosophy, its entire teaching, for the purpose of perpetuating the practice of righteousness, and protecting the interest of society.

The Sunday School workers of the Fifth District, comprising the counties of Berrien, Cass and Van Buren, will hold a conference at Niles, on Friday, April 19th, to plan for a District Sunday School Convention to be held at Crystal Springs, for two days preceding the Camp Meeting. Watch this column for further information.

The Buchanan Primary Union will meet at Mr. N. H. Culver's on Saturday, April 20, at 2 p. m. All pastors. superintendents, primary teachers, parents who have children in the Primary department, and all who desire systematic training in primary work, are earnestly invited to be present. Pastors and Superintendents are hereby requested to announce this meeting on next Sabbath.

The pivotal centre of the Sabbath school problem to-day is the teacher. Give us consecrated, practical, well trained teachers and the question of reaching the neglected youth of our land will be very largely solved. The teacher of a Normal class of 20 members, if he has an appreciative, painstaking class, is influencing 200 persons. Work for teachers is work for the masses which those teachers will reach out after. The person who holds the most important position in the church to day is the Drill Sergeant. The imperative demand of the time, is to have the church converted into one vast training camp. We are not to be considered as fanatical, when we say that what is needed to-day above all things else is trained workmen in the vinegard of the Master, and that vineyard is the world. The fields are already white to the harvest, and our prayer is, that we may be helpful in training reapers to gather in the harvest into the granary of the Lord.

The circumstances giving rise to the modern Sabbath school movement were briefly as follows: Robert Raikes, whilst passing through the suburbs of Gloucester (Eng), one Sabbath morning, was touched by the groups of wretched, ragged, cursing, children. Consequently he at once organized a Sabbath school in their midst, employing four female teachers to receive and instruct all who might be induced to attend. In November, 1783, he published a brief notice of his efforts in the Gloucester Journal, which was promtply copied by the London papers. The article attracted the attention of one William Fox, who was interested in the moral elevation of London youth, and he promptly opened a correspondence with Raikes in regard to his work. The result was the organization of a Society for promoting Sabbath schools throughout the British Dominion. In the next 15 years this Society expended about £4,000 for teachers' wages. From the first the scheme commended itself to the people and many learned and influential laymen became its warm supporters. On the other hand, however, it met determined opposition from certain ecclesiastical dignitaries who questioned the right to existence. One Bishop even went so far as to violently attack the movement, and the Arch Bishop of Canterbury promptly called a meeting of the Bishops of his diocese to see what could be done towards its suppression. Even in good old Scotland Sabbath school teaching by laymen was declared an innovationand a breach of the Fourth commandment. But notwithstanding all this opposition the Society continued to grow and increase until its influence was felt throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and the Continent, and even in this country.

A STUDY IN SCARLET.

In the central portion of the great North American continent there lies an arid and repulsive desert, which for many a long year served as a barrier against the advance of civilization. From the Sierra Nevada to Nebraska and from the Yellowstone river in the north to the Colorado upon the south is a region of desolation and silence. Nor is nature always in one mood throughout this grim district. It comprises snow capped and lofty mountains and dark and gloomy valleys. There are swift flowing rivers which dash through jagged canyons, and there are enormous plains which in winter are white with snow and in summer are gray with the saline alkali dust. They all preserve, however, the common characteristics of barrenness, inhospitality and misery.

There are no inhabitants of this land scattered remains of those who had fallen by the wayside. Looking down on this very scene, support, and yet his tall figure and the massive framework of his bones suggested a wiry and vigorous constitution. His gaunt face, however, and his clothes, which hung so baggily over his shriveled limbs, proclaimed what it was that gave him that senile and decrepit appearance. The man was dying—dying from hunger and from thirst. He had toiled painfully down the ravine and on to this little elevation in the vain hope of seeing some signs of water. Now the great salt plain stretched before his eyes, and the distant belt of savage mountains, without a sign anywhere of plant or tree, which might indicate the presence of moisture. In all that broad landscape there was no gleam of hope. North and east and west he looked with wild, questioning eyes, and then he realized that his wanderings that barren crag, he was about to die. 'Why not here as well as in a feather bed 20 years hence?" he muttered as he seated himself in the shelter of a Before sitting down he had deposited upon the ground his useless rifle, and also a large spandle tied up, in a gray shawl, which he had carried slung over his right shoulder. It appeared to be somewhat too heavy for his strength, for, in lowering it, it came down on the ground with some little violence. Instantly there broke from the gray parcel a little moaning cry, and from it there protruded a small, scared face, with very bright brown eyes, and two speckled dimpled fists. "You've hurt me!" said a childish voice reproachfully.

"Have I, though?" the man answered penitently. "I didn't go for to do As he spoke he unwrapped the gray shawl and extricated a pretty little girl of about 5 years of age, whose dainty shoes and smart pink freek, with its little linen apron, all bespoke a mother's care. The child was pale and wan, but

"Amen, amen!" responded the whole party. They were about to resume their loping up to re-enforce the vanguard. The word "redskins" was on every lip.

"No, nor drink. And Mr. Bender, he was the first to go, and then Indian Pete, and then Mrs. McGregor, and then "Shall I go forward and see, Brother Johnny Hones, and then, dearie, your voices.

"Leave your horses below, and we will wait you hero," the elder answered. In a moment the young follows had dismounted, fastened their horses and were ascending the precipitous slope which led up to the object which had excited their curiosity. They advanced rapidly and noiselessly, with the confidence and dextority of practiced scouts. The watchers from the plain below could see them flit from rock to rock until their figures stood out against the sky die, too?" asked the child, checking her sobs and raising her tear stained face. "I guess that's about the size of it." "Why didn't you say so before?" she said, laughing gleefully. How long will it be first?" "I don't know-not very long." The man's eyes were fixed upon the northern horizon. In the blue vault of the heaven there appeared three little specks, which increased in size every moment, so rapidly did they approach. They speedily resolved themselves into three large brown birds, which circled over the heads of the two wanderers and then

"In course he did," said the companion, rather startled by this unexpected 'He made the country down in Illinois, an he made the Missouri," the little girl continued. "I guess somebody else made the country in these parts. It's not nearly so well done. They forgot this country?

"What would ye think of offering up prayer?" the man asked diffidently. 'It ain't night yet,'' she answered. "It don't matter. It ain't quite regular, but he won't mind that, you bet. You say over them ones that you used to say every night in the wagon when we

was on the plains."

"Why don't you say some yourself?" the child asked, with wondering eye. "I disremember them," he answered. "I hain't said none since I was half the height o' that gun. I guess it's never too late. You say them out, and I'll stand by and come in on the choruses." "Then you'll need to kneel down, and me, too," she said, laying the shawl out for that purpose. "You've got to put your hands up like this. It makes you feel kind of good." It was a strange sight, had there been anything but the buzzards to see it. Side by side on the narrow shawl knelt the two wanderers, the little prattling child and the reckless, hardened adventurer. Her chubby face and his haggard, angular visage were both turned up to the cloudless heaven in heartfelt entreaty to that dread being with whom they were face to face, while the two voices—the one thin and clear, the other deep and harsh—united in the entreaty for mercy and forgiveness. The prayer finished, they resumed their seat in the shadow of the bowlder, until the child fell asleep, nestling upon the broad breast of her protector. He watched over her slumber for some time, but nature proved to be too strong for him. For three days and three nights he had allowed himself neither rest nor repose. Slowly the eyelids drooped over the tired eyes, and the head sunk lower and lower upon the breast until the man's grizzled beard was mixed with the golden tresses of his companion, and both slept the same deep Had the wanderer remained awake for another half hour a strange sight would have met his eyes. Far away on the extreme verge of the alkali plain there rose up a little spray of dust, ver slight at first and hardly to be distinguished from the mists of the distance, but gradually growing higher and broader until it formed a solid, well defined cloud. This cloud continued to increaso in size until it became evident that it could only be raised by a great multitude of moving creatures. In more fertile spots the observer would have come to the conclusion that one of these great herds of bisons which graze upon the prairie land was approaching him. This was obviously impossible in these arid wilds. As the whirl of dust drew nearer to the solitary bluff upon which the two castaways were reposing the canvas covered tilts of wagons and the figures of armed horsemen began to show up through the haze, and the apparition revealed itself as being a great caravan upon its journey for the west. But what a caravan! When the head of it had reached the base of the mountains, the rear was not yet visible on the horizon. Right across the enormous plain stretched the straggling array, wagons and carts, men on horseback and men on foot, innumerable women who staggered along under burdens and children who toddled beside the wagons or peeped out from under the white coverings. This was evidently no ordinary party of immigrants, but rather some nomad people who had been compelled from stress of circumstances to seek themselves a new country. There rose through the clear air a confused clattering and rumbling from this great mass of humanity, with the creaking of wheels and the neighing horses. Loud as it was, it was not sufficient to rouse the wayfarers above them. At the head of the column there rode a score or more of grave, iron faced men, clad in somber, homespun garments and armed with rifles. On reaching the base of the bruff they halted and held a short council among themselves. "The wells are to the right, my brothers," said one, a hard lipped, clean shaven man with grizzly hair.

we shall reach the Rio Grande," said "Fear not for water!" cried a third. "He who could draw it from the rocks."

Mormons, and the words rippled down the long caravan, passing from mouth to mouth until they died away in a dull

the mountains and the balsamic odor of mother to the young girl. As year succeeded to year she grew taller and stronger, her cheek more ruddy and her step more elastic. Many a wayfarer upon the highroad which ran by Ferrier's farm felt long forgotten thoughts revive wheatfields or met her mounted upon her father's mustang and managing it with all the case and grace of a true ed into a flower, and the year which saw her father the richest of the farmers left her as fair a specimen of American girlhood as could be found in the whole . It was not the father, however, who

School work in Berrien and adjoining counties. Rev. O. J. Roberts of the Presbyterian church and Field Secretary of Berrien County Sunday School Union, has kindly consented to take charge of this department. All communications for this column should be addressed to Rev. O. J. Roberts, Buchanan, Mich.

Michael Enwright of Cassopolis has been granted an additional pension.

Michigan Crop Report.

On the first day of April the frost had not all gone out of the ground even in the southern counties of Michigan. The weather during March was cold and dry. The mean temperature was below the normal, and the precipitation very light. Of course wheat and grass made no growth in March; they had not even "greened up" when correspondents mailed their reports on April 1. Following are the figures indicating average condition as estimated by correspondents, but it will be understood that these figures are subject to revision when the weather conditions have changed. Compared with average years the average condition of wheat in the southern counties was S3 per cent: central and northern counties 89 per cent, and State S5 per cent. One year ago the average condition in the State was estimated at 90. In March, 1894, the weather was remarkably warm, with only a moderate amount of precipitation.

The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers in March is $53,697, and in the eight months, August - March, 8,860,315 which is 2,563,281 bushels less than reported marketed in the same months last year. At 33 elevators and mills from which reports have been received there was no wheat marketed during the month.

The average condition of clover meadows and pastures is as follows: Southesn and central counties 80 per cent, northern 89 and State S1 per cent. The continuously cold weather has been favorable for fruit, and the outlook at present is promising for full

Last evening a farewell reception was tendered Rev. I. N. Carman, at the home of Henry Kephart, and it was all enjoyable except the farewell feature. Mr. Carman leaves for his new field of labor in Ohio today. He leaves the parish he has labored with and for during the six years last past in good condition, and better able to go on with its work than when he assum ed its pastorate. Mrs. Carman will not go for a few days. Her many friends will have further opportunity to see her.—Berrien Springs Era.

The Evangelical Conference. The thirty-first annual Conference of the Evangelical Association for this State is being held at the Evangelical church this week and is a very successful convention. The district comprises the entire lower peninsula. There are about eighty preachers in attendance. Tuesday and Wednesday were occupied in the examination of junior preachers and holding of the sessions of various societies. The pulpit was occupied Monday evening by Rev. H. T. Strauch, of Owosso; Tuesday evening by Rev. G. J. Kirn of Jackson, and last evening by Rev. P. Scheurer of Ludinaton.

The first session of Conference proper was opened by Bishop Thomas Bowman, of Chicago, who appoint d Rev Geo. Johnson, of Buchanas, Secretary, who chose as his assistants Rev. G. J. Kirn of Jackson, and Rev. N. Wunderlich of Saginaw. The Bishop delivered an able and inspiring address, after which the examination into the moral and official conduct of the preacters took place. It is a creditable fact that no charges were preferred against Sanday School Missions.

The following paper was read by Rev. O. J. Roberts, at the mesting of the Kalamazoo Presbytery at Allegan, Sunday School Missions! What an inspiration of holy purpose, vast and pressing opportunity and intesity of deed, is wrapped up in this one simple phrase. The very repetition of the words sends a thrill through one's entire being, arousing the whole soul, moving it to a holy zeal to join the Holy Comrade for the glory of God, the defense of the home, and the salvation of our native land. In guiding our thoughts for a short time, I wish to point out a few guideposts set up by our Immancel, the Conquering Hero, who travels in the great. ness of his strength, mighty to save, and let me say: First, That no more important work is before the church today than that represented by the Sunday school department, and the reason for it is found in the conditions that confront us. You ask, What conditions? And I answer in this relation, particularly this condition, is that the ministrations of the pulpit do not reach the children and youth, especially the young men, and therefore this added responsibility upon the Sabbath school department, for a large per cent of the youth who do not attend 'church" do attend Sabbath school. It is vain to condemn the young people because of non-attendance upon the preaching services; vain, because nothing is gained by it: vain, because the church service is often so prosy that the young might well be forgiven for non-attendance, and vain, because it is wiser, by far, to make every preparation to do the most we can for the the youth at the service which they do attend and which they consider distinctively their own. There is a responsibility on the church today, in this matter of bringing the Gospel to the young, that makes one tremble as he thinks of it. It has been said, and very unwisely in my judgement, that if a young person cannot attend both church and Sabbath school, let him attend church. But what are you going to do if he does attend Sabbath school and will not attend church? Beloved, we are are not confronting a theory, but a condition, and it is for us to study carefully the condition, and how best to meet the demands made upon us. Again, The demand today is for the adoption of new methods to train the boys, and in that way save young men and men of all ages. Men's League is all right, but it looks to me very much like operating on the outlet of a stream, instead of going to the fountain head. Men's Leagues are a necessity, simply because they were neglected when they were boys. We ought to be more scientific in our methods. As one says, we ought to study buyology less and boyology more, for almost the greatest thing in the world is a boy, and yet all do not realize it. Mr. B. F. Jacobs says that one time, down in Connecticut, he picked up a magazine

A boy will eat, and a boy will drink, And a boy will play all day;

that had on it a verse that went like

But a boy won't work, and a boy won't think, For a boy isn't built that way. But the sentiment thus expressed is not true. The boy does think, and it is for us to train him to think in the right direction. The chief factor in the proper method to solve the problem is sympathy; not sympathy for, but sympathy with. The way to carry a heavy burden is to get close to it. The power next to heart power is hand power. I have read of clay vessels which could be molded only with the human hand. I also know that Jesus healed with the touch. So must we. especially with our boys. No class appeals to us with more imperativeness today than the boys, for no class is so open to temptation, and all movements thus far have not succeeded in reaching the boys in any measure equal to the demand. The cry of the hour is, "Save the boys." Lastly. There is a Macedonian cry for help, from the region beyond, and not so very far "beyond" either. The darkest heathenism is not in Africa, afflicted with yellows, 600 are being but in Michigan, In every county are | set out. The yellows is under control. outgoing districts where the Gospel is never preached, steadily, and where no Sabbath school is held. As a consequence of the enterprise of Peter English and John G. Holmes in building the dam at Buchanan and the co-operation of Buchanan's citizens, two factories have been located, one the Hatch Cutlery Co. employing over 100 men at good wages, and the Axle Works employing half as many more also at very good wages. Both factories, will enlarge this year, and many new houses will be built to accomodate the new citizens. And yet barely one-tenth of the water power has been used. Mr. Holmes expects soon to have underway the manufacture of brick from a very fine grade of clay, which is found on the west bank of the river, near the dam. Chicago parties have agreed to take the whole out-put and insures a good profit to Mr. Holmes & Company. All in all it begins to look as if these enterprises will soon prove the wisdom of the course pursued in the dam. But it has been a terrible struggle for the company to carry the enterprise through the panic and the dull times

Maitland is well-known to our citizens, on account of former misdeeds, he having been in pretty severe, and he will have considerable trouble to clear himself.—Fri-

Fruit Prospects in Berrien County. Fruit growers are trimming grapes. Many are preparing to set large orchards of peaches and pears. The reports concerning injured buds in the fruit belt are largely false. President Morrell of the State Horticultural Society says that peaches are uninjured and indications point toward a large crop. He also states that where one tree is being removed because it is From 150,000 to 200,000 are set in Berrien county alone yearly. Others confirm the opinion that fruit prospects for the coming season are encouraging.

Business and Money.

If mine-owners may take 50 cents worth of marketable silver to a United Jesus meant. Is it not time for the | States mint and have it stamped one dollar, how is a Michigan farmer to get hold of the dollar? Manifestly by exchanging for it a product of his farm. When he has exchanged a dollar's worth of product for the mine-owner's silver dollar, what profit has accrued to him by the transaction? None whatever. On the contrary he has sustained a loss of just 50 cents on the deal, while the mine-owner has made a profit of 100 per cent! If every farmer owned a silver mine he would be enriched by free coinage. But the process of enriching him would impoverish every workingman who would be compelled to render one dol-of silver. The 50-cent dollar would not get into the hands of merchants except by exchange between farmer and workingman, and by that time the merchant would advance prices to meet the fictitiously advanced money value of silver so that when the workingman tendered payment for his necessaries with the 50-cent dollar, received from the farmer, the purchasing power of his original labor would be reduced 50 p r cent.

The farmers of Michigan have no silver mines and no silver to coin. They must look for their free-coined silver to the mine owners of Colorado and the West. In the ordinary course of trade, it would take several months' time and innumerable exchanges to get that silver into circulation. The mine owners are few and their wants limited. They must have an exchange of products for their silver before they will part with it. It is idle sophistry to contend that they will inject their money into circulation to accommodate the masses

The forgoing reasoning is based on matter-of-fact business premises. There is no way in which money of any kind can be circulated except by exchange of products. Fine-spun theories regarding the effect of free coinage on debts and credits are purely speculative. The hard lines of actual business regulate the ebb and flow of prosperity and depression; money merely facilitates exchange of products.—Detroit Journal

April 9, 1895. The fruit season will be open in about six weeks.

Meats of all kinds have advanced in There were twenty-six bicyclists in one line, last Sunday morning. Only twenty-two of the seventyseven applicants for teacher's certificates passed the recent examination. The new county jail will be built on the north side of the court house, near the bluff. Workmen began excavating last Wednesday. Forty-four children, between the ages of thirteen aud sixteen, were confirmed, last Sunday, at the German Luthern church at St. Joseph.

Miss Farmer was too ill to resume her duties as teacher in the Buchanan High school, on Monday.

A colored gentleman, Samuel Brown, was elected a member of our City Council, last week Monday. There are a great many colored people in the city, and why should not they be represented in municipal affairs, as long as they can furnish a capable and intelligent representative?

A farewell reception, which was largely attended, was given Rev. and Mrs. J. Romig, the evening before their departure to Salt Lake City. His labors here were very successful, and resulted in a hundred accessions to the Christion church. That society is now talking of enlarging their house of worship, on Broadway.

Heath's ship yards is a very busy place, these spring days, and give employment to 130 men, the least skilled of whom receive $1.25 per day, while the more competent get from $2.25 to to $3.00. Several boats are in process of construction, and others are being overhauled and remodeled.

Frank E. Kirby, of the Detroit Dry Dock Co., who drew the designs for the lamented Chicora, is now, it is said, preparing plans for the steamer which is to take her place. It will be a propeller, and one-fourth larger.

There are so many bicyclists in Benton Harbor that seems necessary to make provision for the safety of pedestrians, as well as the riders themselves, so the city claims the honor of being the first in the United States to construct a track along the business portion of the city for the exclusive use of wheelmen. It will be on Territorial street, from Sixth street to Mortou Hill, and will be between the sidewalk and wagon track, six feet wide, made of earth, with a covering, probably of hard clay. This kind of track is something of an experiment, and may be changed.

NEW TROY.

From our Regular Correspondent. April 8, 1895. "Uncle Jim" Spaulding was buried yesterday. He was the mainstay of Sawyer for a good many years. He was the first agent of the C. & W. M. R. R. at that station after it was finished, and used to tackle the train men in great'shape. He was a strong republican, had his likes and dislikes, but was an exemplary and upright citizen and was liked by everybody even his enemics.

Election is over and I guess all parties are suited. It interfered with the fishing to some extent, but we are at the river now as these warm rains are the thing for our business.

Mrs. Peter Umphrey, an old lady, is not expected to live until to-morrow. She is over 90 years old. Old age seems to be the main trouble.

Stephen Earl was in town yesterday hunting for a hired girl. But there is none here. What few girls there are here are all in love or engaged to marry after Eester.

April 9, 1893. Mrs. Peter Umphrey died yesterday aged-92. They moved to Michigan in 1838 and to Weesaw township in 1842. She was probably the oldest person in the township at the time of her death. THE POPE.

HOW JACK PROPOSED

"It's no use," said Jack, throwing himself into my most comfortable easy chair, and looking the picture of misery. "It's not a bit of use!"

"What isn't?" I asked. "Trying to propose to her," replied

"Why isn't it?" "Because I can't!" moaned-or, rather howled—the poor boy, savagely kicking my waste paper basket over.

"Why can't you?" "Because I haven't enough pluck." "Haven't you?"

"Oh, confound your questions!" yelled Jack, tumbling right backward in his desperation. "It's bad enough to be frantically in love with the most beautiful girl who ever lived, and not possess the courage enough to put the question, without having to submit to the cross examination of a Johnny who's reading for the bar and wants to get practice in bullyragging witnesses. I tell yeu, I won't answer your infernal questions. I say, "concluded Jack standing up, and looking like one of the witches in "Macbeth," "I won't submit to it!"

"All right, old man, all right," I said soothingly. "Nobody wants you

"The fact is," said Jack, sitting down again and assuming a sepulchral tone, "if I don't bring it off, I'll—I'll"— "What?"

"I'll die of felo-de-se." This was being legal with a vengeance. Here was my dear chum-six months since the brightest, happiest, merriest fellow in London-deeply in love with a young person called Cissy (I don't to this day know her other name, Jack never mentioned it), and his own terse phraseology. We held ly and said: conversations of this sort about six! times a day on an average, but never before had he threatened to-

"It shall be either by pistol or rope," growled Jack hoarsely, and for the moment I believe he was thoroughly in earnest. I thought I'd try the cynical, man of the world method and scoff him out of his foolishness, so I said: "Fancy being knecked over in this g girl, a weak, silly creature, who isn't even a new wom-

Jack was all on fire in a moment. "She's not a weak, puling, silly creature, and she is a new woman," he shouted, forgetting for the nonce that it is not altogether a desirable thing to be in love with that feminine novelty.

(Parenthetically I may ask, Why is it that people always end up defiances of this kind with these mystic words, "So now." Why is it?)

"Jack," I said, "write to her."
"Splendid idea!" said Jack, who had been thinking of different ways of proposing for six months and now hailed thanks awfully, old chap, for giving me trees, sometimes with thick underthe tip. "

Seizing quite a quire of notepaper Jack scribbled and tore up about a dozen proposals in writing. Then he turned then she'd be sorry, and-and-andwhy was he born?

'My dear boy," I said, laying my hand on his shoulder in the most fatherly way imaginable, "let's talk over the matter quietly. Now, suppose I propose for you?" "No," said Jack. "She'd think I me on the spot. No. I won't write, and robin and a goldfinch. I won't do it by proxy. Isn't there some other way? Why don't you suggest something, you great, long idiot, instead of sitting there and grinning all night?"

Now, I wasn't grinning, and I had been suggesting things all the time, so naturally I felt much hurt. I therefore curled up and was silent.

For some time Jack smoked savagely without speaking a word. After about 20 minutes of this he laid down his pipe and began in a very apologetic tone: "I sav. "Well?"

"Can't you think of any other way of proposing?" "Wear a flower which means I love you.' A pansy or crocus or something. Then, if she wants you, she'll wear one meaning, 'Your sentiments are recipro-"Don't think much of that way," said

Jack. "Know any other?" Now. I have never been in love in my life, and never intend to be, and so I found it rather hard to give Jack advice. However, I racked my brains and at length evolved this startling method: "Propose to her through her father!"

"Oh, you hopeless mass of imbecilityl" yelled Jack, bouncing up and grabbing his hat. "How am I to do that when she hasn't got a father?"

And he flung himself out of the room in a towering passion and did not come near me again for quite a period. Well, how was I to know that the wretched girl hadn't a father? Was I expected to keep a register of all the births, deaths. marriages and divorces which occurred in those families which contained girls Jack was in love with? No. thank you. I had not quite come down to earning my living by being a leve registrar.

Well, you will no doubt want to hear how Jack really did propose. In telling you I must give you plainly to understand that I am only repeating what Tack told me. I was not an evewitness of the heart rending scene. It was like

I was sitting one afternoon trying to find instances of men marrying their mothers-in-law (I never came across one who did yet), under an encyclopedia heading called "Matrimonial Madness, Types of," when Jack suddenly burst into the room with his face all aglow with delight.

I've done it!'' he shouted I shut up the encyclopedia with a bang. No need to go on looking for types of matrimonial madness when I had one in front of me, I thought. "How?" I asked coldly. "How did von do it?"

My manner did not damp him in the

"I did it—this very afternoon, and I'll tell you all about it." He sat down close to me, breathing very hard, and commenced: "You must know that Cissy told me last night that she was going down to Review. Devonshire today to stay with her aunt.

You can bet I felt cut up. Well, after some hesitation, I asked her whether she would allow mo to see her off at Paddington? She demurred a little, and then said, 'Yes.' You can't think what a pretty way she has of saying 'Yes.' Well-don't be impatient, I'm coming to it-you may feel pretty sure that I was at Paddington an hour before she drove up. And when she did arrive you can imagine how I looked after her, and got her ticket, and saw that her boxes were labeled, and bought her all the illustrated papers and a luncheon basket.

her, and all that sort of thing. "She was so awfully nice that I almost went crazy when I thought of her being away for a month, all among a lot of other beggars. Well, she took her seat, and I tipped the guard to lock the door and not let any one else in. I wanted to have that last five minutes all to myself, you see?

and told the guard to keep an eye on

"So she made herself comfortable and told me I looked awfully red, and judging by my feelings I should think I looked quite purple. Well-don't be in a hurry—the guard whistled and called, 'Stand away, please!' and the train began to move slowly out of the station. Just to say 'Goodby' I got on the footboard and put my hand in at the window. I had said 'Goodby' 12 times already, and she looked so pretty and all that that I suddenly screwed up my courage and said:

"Cissy, will you?" "The guard called out, 'Stand away, please, there!' but I kept on the foot board, and Cissy said, 'Oh, get off, please. You'll be hurt.

"The train was going faster by this time, but I stack there and yelled out: 'Will you? Will you?' "She looked awfully scared-all the porters and guards and passengers were shouting at me by this time—and said: Oh, do get off. Will I what?" "We were almost at the end of the platform now, but I still held on, and said: 'Will you? Will you? You know what I mean. "She blushed awfully and said: 'Pray -pray get off! Oh, what do you mean

Will I what? Do get off! "We were just at the end of the platform now, but I was determined not to get off.

"Will you? You know, will you?" " 'What?' " 'Marry me?' "There were about 150 porters rush ing up the platform to pull me off, but in the depths of despair because he I still hung on and waited for her ancouldn't "bring it off," if I may use swer. She looked at me most imploring-"'Do get off, dear Jack, do!" "I shouted out: 'Will you? Say!'

"And she answered, 'Yes.' "I jumped off just as we got outside the station, fell down, and two porters snatched me out of harm's way. I gave them a sovereign each and took a cab here to tell you about it."

"In the event of her refusing to marry you," I said in my best legal manner. "you will not be entitled to any damages for breach of promise, as the defendant's assent was obtained under compulsion. " But Jack didn't care in the least for

The sickening part of it was that the girl really was in love with him and had been waiting for him to ask her quite as long as he had been hesitating. They committed the fatal act the oth er day and have gone to Nice for the honeymoon. Bah!-Million. Mountain Vegetation In Africa. Mr. Scott Elliott has been investigating the botany of Ruwenzori, the giant mountain of central Africa. Up to 7,000 feet he found grass and cultivathat of doing it by post as an entirely one and original idea. "Here goes, and to 8,600 feet, consists of deciduous growth, sometimes quite open, with a profusion of ferns, mosses and creepers. From 8,600 to 9,600 feet bamboos grow, and the predominant feature is round, almost crying, and said that he | the wetness of everything. Only very couldn't do it that way, and he wouldn't, few watery plants grow among the and he'd hang himself, and perhaps roots. Above 9,600 feet tree heather takes the place of bamboo and seems to extend to the snow, which Mr. Elliott could not reach, and even beyond. In one attempt to reach the summit he were all cut to one eye, and the seed found what seems to him the Alpine ends and stem ends discarded. Everylady's mantle. On the mountain birds thing points to the fact that we want and animals are extremely scarce. He high bred potatoes for seed, as much as saw a sun bird, green, yellow and crimwe want thoroughbred animals for was afraid to ask her myself and refuse son, above 10,000 feet, and also saw a

THE MOON'S CLIMATE.

Wir Our Satellite Is Subject to Great Extremes of Heat and Cold. In illustration of the important climatic effects of an atmosphere, I need do little more than cite the case of the moon. Our satellite is practically at the same distance from the sun as the earth. and in its case also internal heat has no present effect on the temperature of its superficial portions. It would therefore seem that, so far as sun heat is concerned, the moon must be in much the same condition as the earth. But if we thence deduced the inference that the temperature conditions prevailing on our satellite bear any resemblance to the temperature conditions prevailing on the earth we should make a great mistake. Observations of the moon's heat show that its surface is exposed to a tremendous range of temperature, extending to hundreds of degrees. It has been demonstrated that the temperature of the moon under the full glare of the sun rises to a point in excess of that of boiling water, while it is equally certain that when the sunbeams are withdrawn the temperature of the moon sinks to a point far below that with which any arctic explorer has made us acquainted. Here, then, is a globe fed just as we are, with dous vicissitudes of climate, surpassing any changes endured by the earth. The climatic difference between these two neighboring globes is certainly connected with the fact that the moon has very little atmosphere, even if it be not completely destitute thereof. Our atmosphere acts as a climatic regulator. It reduces the degree in which the intense fervor of the sun affects the earth, and it mitigates the rigor of the cold to which the earth would be exposed when the sunbeams are withdrawn. Such an sunbeams, and yet undergoing tremenameliorating agent is absent from the moon, and hence arise those violent extremes of its climatic condition. We thus see what potent factors the existence and the extent of an atmosphere become in determining the nature of the climate that a planet is to have. We do not know enough regarding the atmospheres of Mars, Venus and Mercury to be able to draw any certain conclusions with regard to their climates. But this we may at least affirm, that it seems quite possible for the different influences we have named to go a long way toward neutralizing the contrasts that the climates of these globes would otherwise present in consequence of the different supplies of sunbeams that they receive at their actual solar distances. So far as mere climate is concerned, it seems quite possible that appropriate atmospheres and land distributions might be adjusted on the earth and Mars, Mercury and Venus in such a manner that certain organictypes might be common to all the four globes.—Sir Robert Ball in Fortnightly

FOR SPRAYING OUTFITS.

A New and Unpatented Device For Thoroughly Agitating Spraying Compounds. The great difficulty experienced by everybody who sprays in keeping spraying liquids in suspension has led Professor S. T. Maynard to experiment on an automatic agitator, with the result that one has been made that will keep any liquid fungicido or insecticide thoroughly agitated. This contrivance, as illustrated by Rural New Yorker, is made for use with the barrel lying on its side and consists of an arm (A) of flat iron one-eighth inch thick and seven-eighths inch wide, attached to the handle of the pump and entering the barrel about six or eight inches from its head. This arm is attached to an elbow (B), with arms 6 inches in length, which is fastened into a socket about 4 inches in length, that is bolted to the head of the barrel at C. At the lower end of the elbow is attached a short arm (D), which is joined to the long arm that carries the dashers or agitators (E). This joint is necessary in order that the dasher may lie on the bottom of the barrel, and to be lifted up at every stroke of the pump. With the movement of the pump handle, the dashers move backward and forward over the entire bottom of the barrel, thus keeping the liquid in constant motion. In order that the liquid that may have settled on the bottom may be stirred thoroughly before starting the

AN AUTOMATIC AGITATOR. handle by a slot (F), so that it may be quickly slipped off and worked upward and downward a few times- before beginning to pump. All the parts are made of flat iron one-eighth inch thick by three-fourths inch wide and can be made by one having facilities for cutting such iron and drilling holes to fasten it together. The parts are held together by short stove bolts. The dashers are fastened to the rod by a screw passing through it. In the adjustment of this apparatus to the barrel, the pump must be brought near enough to the end of the barrel to allow of the full sweep of the pump handle, and the rod (A) fixed to the handle so as to give a full sweep to the. elbow (B), that the dashers may be carried forward and backward to their fullest extent. No patent has been applied for on this appliance, Professor Maynard wishing all the fruit growers to have the benefit of it.

Seed Potatoes. The studies of The American Agriculturist's potato tests give some interesting points. While the reports from farmers who raised big yields show wide difference in the quantity of seed used, upon one leading point there is great unanimity among all growers-viz: The careful selection of the potatoes used for seed. In every instance fair, smooth, handsome, well shaped potatoes were chosen. Not always were they large, but they were always of uniform size and weighing usually from six to eight ounces each. In one case 26 bushels used in seeding an acre were selected from a choice lot of 50 bushels of fair, merchantable potatoes. The range in the amount of seed used was very greatfrom S to 66 bushels, the average being 2114 bushels. The amount of seed used in preparing for the three largest yields reported were, respectively, 26, 66 and 13 1/2 bushels. A curious thing about this seeding is that in the first instance the crop was 974 bushels, in the second 847 and in the last 738 bushels. Another curious fact is shown by a further study of the returns. In New York a planting of 40 bushels of seed yielded a crop of 441 bushels, and in Maine a seeding of but 10 bushels gave a yield of 537 bushels. In this last instance the potatoes breeding, and the same care in selection should obtain in the one case as in the other. By all means reject undersized, imperfect, badly shaped potatoes for seed, says American Agriculturist. At the Wisconsin Station. Pig feeding has been made a special study of the Wisconsin University station. In those experiments nearly everything ever recommended for pigs was given at some time, including skim milk, buttermilk, whey, barley, potatoes, hard wood ashes, bone meal, oats whole and ground and cooked and uncooked foods, wet and dry, of all conceivable kinds. The few inflexible rules drawn from these experiments are briefly that young pigs should be fed heavily through the dam and early taught to eat from a trough, and that the best gains are always made with young animals. lu feeding an exclusive corn diet produces excessive fat, with weak bones, while shorts, bran and corn give more lean meat, stronger bones, larger livers and a more rapid growth.

Electric farming is no longer a startling suggestion. It appeals with special force to farms under irrigation.

THE MAKING OF A PASTURE. Information of Value to the Farmers of the Northwest. In an address on Nebraska pastures, delivered by J. B. Dinsmore of Sutton, Neb., before the Nebraska Stock Breeders' association, much information was given that is of value in other sections of the northwest. Following are extracts from this address, as reported in full by the Iowa Homestead:

To secure a pasture that will meet the requirements of the stock man, if I had a native sod I would attempt to convert it into a tame grass pasture, for it is only from the tame grasses that I can conceive of the possibility of a profitable pasture. The wild or native grasses, as a rule, are so short lived that one can only have an abundance of grass about three months. They start late in the spring, and by the middle of August they are usually scant in herbage, if not altogether eaten up. The stock that must depend on them for a living is at a standstill, if not, in fact, losing flesh. Profitable pastures must furnish an abundance of rich feed from the earliest possible time in the spring to as late in the fall as possible. I am of seed, a pasture may be provided, the ed from six weeks to two months, to the comfort of the stock and the profit of the owner. Taking the native sod from which allof last year's grass has been burned as a starting point, I would thoroughly scarify the surface with a sharp harrow, or, better still, a disk, crossing and recrossing until the surface was full of small channels or furrows for following seeds: Timothy, two bushels; grazing period of which may be extend-red clover, one bushel; white clover, one bushel; Kentucky blue grass, two bushols. Sow at the rate of not less than 15 pounds per acro. Other seeds may be added with profit. This should be done as early in the spring as the ground is in good cendition to work. The sooner after the frost is out of the ground the greater the chances of success. After seeding again harrow at least once—better twice—to cover the seed and prevent it being blown away or drying up. As the season advances the native grasses will spring up and grow with vigor, furnishing a shade to the young plants that they apparently enjoy. . The grass should never be permitted to be closely cropped the first year. To this mulching of grass there is not the objection that there would be to the sowing of small grain with it as a mulch, which would be removed at a time when the plants were young and their vitality tried to the utmost by the dry weather and hot sun of July, to say nothing of the removal of the shade to which they had been accustomed all their lives. A pasture thus prepared may be grazed to a limited extent the same year it is seeded, but should never carry more than half the stock it would be expected to under other circumstances.

When there is no native sod on which to prepare a pasture, select ground most convenient, plow it with a narrow stirring plow, turning it as deeply as possible, following with a subsoil plow not less than 12 inches deep, harrow down until the surface is a fine, smooth seedbed. Let the preparations be made as early in the season as possible when the ground is in good condition. Seed with the mixture before mentioned, only use rather a more than a less quantity; harrow the surface both ways with a fine tooth harrow, being careful to cover all the surface. If the general ground is dry, a heavy roller to pack the surface may be used with profit. I should not use grain as a mulch or nurse crop. As the weeds spring up and begin to interfere put the mowing machine to work and cut the weeds down, leaving them on the ground unless the crop cut is a very heavy one, in which case it would bo well to remove a part of the weeds where they are the thickest. I consider the use of the mowing machine on a pasture as a decided help to the young plants rather than otherwise. It retards the growth of the top and allows the development of the root that will in after years send up an abundance of herbage much greater than if left to develop the top at the expense of the root. Snap and Lima Beaus. As to varieties, some do well in one soil. but not in another, and then tastes differ about vegetables just as about flowers or clothes. The progressive gardener always gets a few new varieties for trial, but the average man, if he is wise, will depend upon well tried standard sorts for his main crops. Here is a selection from American Gardening: Among snap beaus Valentine and Refugee are good reliable old green podded sorts. Refugee Wax and Challenge Black Wax are fine wax varieties. There is a new Valentine Wax that is worth trying as a novelty.

In selecting Lima beans get Henderson's Dwarf to fill the gap between peas and Limas; then Dreer's and Burpee's Dwarf Limas to sow in rows 21/2 feet apart, but if you want to use poles get Dreer's Lima ov Challenger.

Sheep and hogs are good in orchards -hogs preferable to sheep, because they root the ground over and prepare it for an application of fertilizer.

INCREASING LENGTH OF LIFE.

Modern Heroines at Least Are Longer Lived Than Jane Austen's Were. Is the human race becoming longer lived despite the fret and fever of modern civilization? It is an interesting question, and it may very probably be answered some day by science in the affirmative. The longevity of professional men is now generally considered to be greater than that of farmers or mechanics. In other words, intellectual activity, although in many respects more exhausting than physical, has in the main a salutary effect upon the human frame. It may be the nerves rather than the muscles upon which we mainly depend, after all. It is a commonplace of observation that the big, hearty men are constantly dropping out of the world, while those of far more fragile organizations apparently live on to a ripe old age.

As to the increasing longevity of the race generally, there is no little incidental testimony on this head to be gathered from various sources. Some of the early heroes and heroines of romance are old before they reach what we should call middle life. And at the beginning of our own century Jane Austen, whose testimony is always unimpeachable, speaks of the healthy and contented woman of 40 as having a good prospect of 20 years of life yet. Twenty years! What woman of today thinks of herself as falling into decrepitude at 60? Elsewhere in Miss Austen's pages we run across people who are old with the passage of half a century of life. But now we have Gladstones at 80 and over and think nothing of it.-Providence Journal.

Liquid Compensation.

As illustrating the great value placed on a little whisky by some folks in rural Maine, where "prohibition prohibits," this story is told: "A big red faced fel low, who was suffering from a long spell of enforced abstinence as well as from an injured toe, was brought into the office of a well known physician of central Maine to have the toe amputated. The sufferer objected to the use of other or chloroform, but when the doctor turned out a tumbler of whisky for him to drink he no longer opposed the proceedings, and the toe was cut off without trouble. Reviving after the operation, he looked at the foot meditatively for a moment, and then cocked his eye shrewdly at the doctor. 'Say, doc,' he remarked, 'gi' me another tumberful of that whisky, an you may cut off another toe if you wanter." - Lewiston Journal.

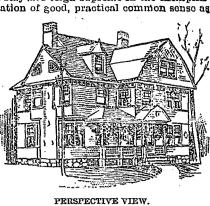

How the Money Goes. It is unsafe to allow any ordinary weman to enter a store with money. She has such a craving for luxuries, such a contempt for mere recessities, that she almost invariably purchases the former and is constantly in need of the latter. goes forth to pure net because she is going to the opera that very night, but her eye is caught by a tea gown, a bargain tea gown, and she buys it. That night some man seated behind a Gainesborough with many plumes swears. She goes out to buy a jacket, needing one sorely, but her erratic fancy is caught by lace trimmed underwear, and before she realizes it she is reveling in new nightgowns and corset covers. She has even been known to go out to buy writing paper and to the lodgment of the seed. Own Your Own Home. Many a man has his first start in life just by a move of this kind. The very simple problem of getting a home together leads up to higher and better things, it acquires good habits, teaches how to save, starts a system that, when once ingrafted in the mind with the result acquired standing prominently forward as a just reward, never stops, but is always going forward and ever seeking to overcome all obstacles, no matter what nature they may turn up in. Now, dear readers, just got on your thinking caps and think out your own problem of life as to the owning your own home, and if you do not come to the conclusion it is worth trying for, it is a forlorn hope indeed, and verily, with you, life can be set down as a failure. Never mind how many obstacles you may see in the way, they are easily moved, only have faith in your own ability and perseverance to carry it out and the battle is won. Some people are given to borrowing trouble, some meet the trouble half way-let every man say none of this is mino, if you please-keep on the right side and if you borrow at all, borrow some money and build yourself a home. It is wonderful what a heap of trouble this kind of borrowing saves, and what a hear of good it does in the consummation of the act. -George Palliser. PLANS OF A BEAUTIFUL HOME. Beld and Massive Yet Elegant Exterior. Built at a Cost of $7,259.

This house is one of the most popular we have planned and is suited to any first class neighborhood and the requirements of a large family.

One reason, among many, why the old time houses are more grateful to the eve than those of similar cost, but modern style, is that they were built of wood hor estly and legitimately used, when wood was on all accounts the most suitable material for building. It is so still, and will be for a long time in many places, for its economy and convenience. Given a fair chance, it may be made very durable, and is even rondered practically fireproof with-out great cost, by kyanizing and various other methods that are adopted for the same purpose. Wood is effective, too, in appearance, when rightly used, which, more's the pity, does not often happen, for of all the materials that minister to human comfort and needs this seems to me the most abused - "Homes and All
