strode up the pathway. "I am off, Lucy," he said, taking her two hands in his and gazing tenderly down into her face. "I won't ask you to come with me now, but will you be ready to come when I am here again?" "And when will that be?" she asked, blushing and laughing.

In two months you shall see He tore himself from her as he spoke, and, flinging himself upon his horse, galloped furiously away, never even looking around, as though afraid that his resolution might fail him if he took one glance at what he was leaving. She stood at the gate, gazing after him, until he vanished from her sight. Then she walked back into the house, the happiest girl in all Utah. CHAPTER III. Three weeks had passed since Jefferson Hope and his comrades had departed from Salt Lake City. John Ferrier's heart was sore within him when he thought of the young man's return and of the impending loss of his adopted child. Yet her bright and happy face reconciled him to the arrangement more than any argument could have done. He had always determined, deep down in his resolute heart, that nothing would ever induce him to allow his daughter to wed a Morman. Such a marriage he regarded as no marriage at all, but as a hame and a disgrace. Whatever he might think of the Mormon doctrines, upon that one point he was inflexible. He had to seal his month on the subject, however, for to express an unorthodox opinion was a dangerous matter in those days in the Land of the Saints. Yes, a dangerous matter-so dangerous that even the most saintly dared only whisper their religious opinions with bated breath, lest something which fell from their lips might be misconstrued and bring down a swift retribution upon them. The victims of persecu-

Italy, were ever able to put a more formidable machinery in motion than that which cast a cloud over the territory of Utah. Its invisibility and the mystery which was atached to it made this organization doubly terrible. It appeared to be omniscient and omnipotent, and yet was neither seen nor heard. The man who held out against the church vanished away, and none knew whither he had gone or what had befallen him. His wife and children awaited him at home, but no father ever returned to tell them how he had fared at the hands of his secret judges. A rash word or a hasty act was followed by annihilation, and vet none knew what the nature might be of this terrible power which was suspended over them. No wonder that men went about in fear and trembling. and that even in the heart of the wilderness they dared not whisper the doubts tion had now turned persecutors on their own account, and persecutors of the most terrible description. Not the inquisition of Seville, nor the German

Vehmgericht, nor the secret societies of which oppressed them. At first this vague and terrible power was exercised only upon the recalcitrants who, having embraced the Mormon faith, wished afterward to pervert or to abandon it. Soon, however, it took a wider range. The supply of adult women was running short, and polygamy without a female population on which to draw was a barren doctrine indeed. Strange rumors began to be bandied about-rnmors of murdered immigrants and rifled camps in regions where Indians had never been seen. Fresh women appeared in the harems of the elders-women who pined and wept and bore upon their faces the traces of an unextinguishable horror. Belated wanderers upon the mountains spoke of gangs of armed men, masked, stealthy and noiseless, who flitted by them in the darkness. These tales and rumors took substance and shape and were corroborated and recorroborated until they resolved themselves into a definite name. To this day, in the lonely ranches of the west, the name of the Danite band, or the Avenging Angels, is a sinister and ill omened one. Fuller knowledge of the organization which produced such terrible results served to increase rather than to lessen the horror which it inspired in the minds of men. None knew who belonged to this ruthless society. The names of the participators in the deeds of blood and violence, done under the name of religion, were kept profoundly secret. The very friend to whom you communicated your misgivings as to the prophet and his mission might be one of those who would come forth at night with fire and sword to exact a terrible reparation. Hence every man feared his neighbor. and none spoke of the things which were nearest his heart. One fine morning John Ferrier was about to set out to his wheatfields when he heard the click of the latch, and, looking through the window, saw a stout, sandy haired, middle aged man coming up the pathway. His heart leaped to his mouth, for this was none other than the great Brigham Young himself. Full of trepidation-for he knew that such a visit boded him little good—Ferrier ran to the door to greet the Mormon chief. The latter, however received his salutation coldly and followed him with a stern face into the sitting room. "Brother Ferrier," he said, taking a seat and eying the farmer keenly from under his light colored eyelashes, "the true believers have been good friends to you. We picked you up when you were starving in the desert; we shared our food with you, led you safe to the Chosen valley, gave you a goodly share of land and allowed you to wax rich under our protection. Is not this so?" "It is so," answered John Ferrier.

"In return for all this we asked but one condition, and that was that you should embrace the true faith and con form in every way to its usages. This you promised to do, and this, if common report says truly, you have neglected.

"And how have I neglected it?" asked Ferrier, throwing out his hands in expostulation. "Have I not given to the common fund? Have I not attended at the temple? Have I not'-"Where are your wives?" asked Young, looking round him. "Call them in that I may greet them." "It is true that I have not married," Ferrier answered. "But women were few, and there were many who had better claims than I. I was not a lonely man. I had my daughter to attend to my wants." "It is of that daughter that I would speak to you," said the leader of the "She has grown to be the Mormons. flower of Utah and has found favor in the eyes of many who are high in the land.

John Ferrier groaned internally. "There are stories of her which I would fain disbelieve—stories that she s sealed to some gentile. This must be the gossip of idle tongues. What is the thirteenth rule in the code of the sainted Joseph Smith? 'Let every maiden of the true faith marry one of the elect, for if she wed a gentile she commits a grievous sin.' This being so, it is impossible that you, who profess the holy creed, should suffer your daughter to violate it."

John Ferrier made no answer, but he played nervously with his riding whip. "Upon this one point your whole faith shall be tested. So it has been decided in the sacred council of four. The girl is young, and we would not have her wed gray hairs; neither would we deprive her of all choice. We elders have many heifers [Heber C. Kimball, in one of his sermons, alludes to his hundred wives under this endearing epithet], but our children must also be provided. Stangerson has a son and Drebber has a son, and either of them would gladly welcome your daughter to his house. Let her choose between them. They are young and rich and of the true faith. What say you to that?" Ferrier remained silent for some little time with his brows knitted. "You will give us time," he said at last. "My daughter is very young—she is scarce of an age to marry.

"She shall have a month to choose," said Young, rising from his seat. "At the end of that time she shall give her

He was passing through the door when he turned, with flushed face and flashing eyes. "It were better for you, John Ferrier," he thundered, "that you and she were now lying blanched skeletons upon the Sierra lanco than the you should put your weak wills against the orders of the holy four!"

With a threatening gesture of his hand he turned from the door, and Ferrier heard his heavy steps crunching along the shingly path.

He was still standing with his elbows upon his knees, considering how he should broach the matter to his daugh ter, when a soft hand was laid upon his, and looking up he saw her standing be side him. One glance at the pale, frightened face showed him that she had heard what had passed.

"I could not help it," she said in an swer to his look. "His voice rang through the house. Oh, father, father, what shall we do?"

"Don't ye scare yerself," he answered, drawing her to him and passing his broad, rough hand caressingly over her chestnut hair. "We'll fix it up somehow or another. Ye don't find yer faucy kind o' lessening for this chap, do ye?", A sob and a squeeze of his hand was her only answer. "No, o' course not. I shouldn't care to hear ye say ye did. He's a likely lad, and he's a Christian, which is more than these folk here, in spite o' all their praying and preaching. There's a party starting for Nevada tomorrow, and I'll manage to send him a message, letting him know the hole we are in. If I know anything o' that young man, he'll be back here with a speed that would whip electro-telegraphs."

Lucy laughed through her tears at her father's description. "When he comes, he will advise us for the best. But it is for you that I am frightened, dear. One hears—one hears such dreadful stories about those who oppose the prophet. Something terrible always happens to them."

"But we haven't opposed him yet," her father answered. "It will be time to look out for squalls when we do. We have a clear month before us. At the end of that I guess we had best shin out of Utah.' "Leave Utah?"

"That's about the size of it." "But the farm?"

"We will raise as much as we can in money and let the rest go. To tell the truth, Lucy, it isn't the first time I have thought of doing it. I don't care about knuckling under to any man as these folk do to their darned prophet. I'm a freeborn American, and it's all new to me. Guess I'm too old to learn. If he comes browsing about this farm, he might chance to run up against a charge of buckshot traveling in the opposite direction."

"But they won't let us leave," his daughter objected. "Wait till Jefferson comes, and we'll soon manage that. In the meantime. don't ye fret yourself, my dearie, and don't get yer eyes swelled up, else he'll be walking into me when he sees ye. There's nothing to be afeard about, and there's no danger at all." John Ferrier uttered these consoling remarks in a very confident tone. but she could not help observing that he paid unusual care to the fastening of the doors that night, and that he carefully cleaned and loaded the rusty old shotgun which hung upon the wall of his bedroom.

CHAPTER IV. On the morning which followed his interview with the Mormon prophet John Ferrier went in to Salt Lake City, and having found his acquaintance, who was bound for the Nevada mountains, he intrusted him with his message to Jefferson Hope. In it he told the young man of the imminent danger which threatened them and how necessary it was that he should return. Having done thus, he felt easier in his mind and refurned home with a lighter heart.

As he approached his farm he was surprised to see a horse hitched to each of the posts of the gate. Still more surprised was he, on entering, to find two young men in possession of his sitting room. One, with a long, pale face, was leaning back in the rocking chair, with his feet cocked up upon the stove. The other, a bull necked youth, with coarse, bloated features, was standing in front of the window with his hands in his pockets, whistling a popular hymn. Both of them nodded'to Ferrier as he entered, and the one in the rocking chair commenced the conversation.

"Maybe you don't know us," he said. | edge of the mountains which surrounded "This here is the son of Elder Drebber, and I'm Joseph Stangerson, who traveled with you in the desert when the Lord stretched out his hand and gathered you into the true fold."

"As he will all the nations in his own good time," said the other in a nasal voice. "He grindeth slowly, but exceeding small." John Ferrier bowed coldly. He had guessed who his visitors were. "We have come," continued Stangerson, "at the advice of our fathers, to solicit the hand of your daughter for whichever of us may seem good to you and to her. As I have but four wives and Brother Drebber here has seven, it appears to me that my claim is the stronger one."

"Nay, nay, Brother Stangerson," cried the other. "The question is not how many wives we have, but how many we can keep. My father has now given over his mills to me, and I am the richer man."

"But my prospects are better," said the other warmly. "When the Lord removes my father, I shall have his tanning yard and his leather factory. Then I am your elder and am higher in the church." "It will be for the maiden to decide,"

"Look here," he said at last, striding up to them, "when my daughter summons ye, ye can come, but until then I don't want to see yer faces again." The two young Mormons stared at him in amazement. In their eyes this competition between them for the maiden's hand was the highest of honors, both to her and her father. "There are two ways out of the room," cried Ferrier. "There is the door, and there is the window.

do ye care to use?" His brown face looked so savage and his gaunt hands so threatening that his visitors sprang to their feet and beat a hurried retreat. The old farmer followed them to the door.

"Let me know when ye have settled which it is to be," he said sardonically. "You shall smart for this!" Stangerson cried, white with rage. "You have defiled the prophet and the council of four. You shall rue it to the end of your days."

"The hand of the Lord shall be heavy upon you!" cried young Drebber. "He will arise and smite you! '

"Then I'll start the smiting!" exclaimed Ferrier furiously and would have rushed up stairs for his gun had not Lucy seized him by the arm and restrained him. Before he could escape m her the told him that they were beyond his

While Ferrier was absent preparing his daughter for the approaching journey Jefferson Hope packed all the eatables that he could find into a small parcel and filled a stoneware jar with water, for he knew by experience that the mountain wells were few and far between. He had hardly completed his arrangements before the farmer returned, with his daughter all dressed and ready for a start. The greeting between the lovers was warm, but brief, for minutes were precious, and there was much to be done.

"We must make our start at once," said Jefferson Hope, speaking in a low but resolute voice, like one who realizes the greatness of the peril, but has steeled his heart to meet it. "The front and back entrances are watched, but with caution we may get away through the side window and across the fields. Once on the road we are only two miles from the ravine where the horses are waiting. By daybreak we should be half way through the mountains." ,"What if we are stopped?" asked

Ferrier. Hope slapped the revolver butt which protruded from the front of his tunic. "If they are too many for us, we shall take two or three of them with us." he

Opening the window very slowly and carefully, they waited until a dark cloud had somewhat obscured the night, and then one by one passed through into the little garden. It was as well that his prairie training had given Jefferson Hope the ears of a lynx. He and his friends had hardly crouched down before the melancholy hooting of a mountain owl was heard within a few yards of them, which was immediately answered by another hoot at a small distance. At the same moment a vague shadowy figure emerged from the gap for which they had been making and uttered the plaintive signal cry again, on which a second man appeared out of the obscurity. "Tomorrow at midnight," said the the others. Nine to seven." "Seven to five," repeated the other, and the two figures flitted away in different directions. Their concluding words had evidently been some form of sign and countersign. The instant that their footsteps had died away in the distance Jefferson Hope sprang to his feet, and helping his companions through the gap led the way across the fields at full speed, supporting and half carrying the girl when her strength appeared to fail her.

"Hurry on, hurry on," he gasped from time to time. "We are through the line of sentinels. Everything depends on speed. Hurry on."

Once on the high read, they made rapid progress. Only once did they meet any one, and then they managed to slip into a field and so avoid recognition. Before reaching the town the hunter branched away into a rugged and narrow footpath which led into the moun tains. Two dark, jagged peaks loomed above them through the darkness, and the defile which led between them was the Eagle canyon, in which the horses were awaiting them. With unerring instinct Jefferson Hope picked his way among the great bowlders and along the bed of a dried up water course until he came to the retired corner, screened with rocks, where the faithful animals had been picketed. The girl was placed upon the mule, and old Ferrier upon one of the horses, with his money bag, while Jefferson Hope led the other along the precipitous and dangerous paths. It was a bewildering route for any one who was not accustomed to face nature in her wildest moods. On the one side a great crag towered up 1,000 feet or more, black, stern and menacing, with long basaltic columns npon is rugged surface like the ribs of s petrified monster. On the other hand a wild chaos of bowlders and debris made all advance impossible. Between the two and the irregular track, so narrow in places that they had to travel in Indian file and so rough that only practiced riders could have traversed it at all. Yet in spite of all dangers and difficulties the hearts of the fugitives were light within them, for every step increased the distance between them and the terrible despotism from which they were flying. They soon had a proof, however, that they were still within the jurisdiction of the saints. They had reached the very wildest and most desolate portion of the pass when the girl gave a startled cry and pointed upward. On a rock which overlooked the track, showing out dark and plain against the sky, there stood a solitary sentinel. He saw them as soon as they perceived him, and his military challenge of "Who goes there?" rang through the silent ra-

"Pass, and the Lord go with yon," said the voice from above. Beyond this post the path broadened out, and the horses were able to break into a trot. Looking back, they could see the solitary watcher leaning upon his gun and knew that they had passed the outlying post of the chosen people, and that freedom lay before them.

The importance of Normal training can not be emphasized too strongly. We are sorry that so little attention is given to it in so many of our Schools. Can we not do something to bring about an improvement in this matter? In these days, intelligent teaching is Camp Meeting. Simply entertaining a class is not teaching. Unless you are causing your pupils to think, you are not a teacher. Sunday School work is not a Punch and Judy performance. You as a teacher are not to stand before your class and amuse them by "uncorking a bottle of monkeys" or some clown performances.

You are to teach. By sending iten cents to G. A. Williams, Plantsville, Conn., you will receive a sample package of stencil sheets which will enable any teacher to illustrate the lessons as finely as would the best artist in the land. If you want to know more of them and see the practical use of them, come to the meeting at Mr. Culver's next Saturday at 2. p.

Perhaps the following "outline" of method in study, which the Editor uses will be of help to others. It certainly will if they use it.

The finding of a bottle containing a message from Robert McClure, engineer of the lost Chicora, has occasioned the liveliest interest in the Twin cities. It was thought by many to be another "fake," but is at this writing generally considered genuine. McClure is the one who had a tin box made for such an emergency and would have been very apt to send some word, if it were possible. The message, which is now on exhibition at Howard & Pearl's drugstore St. Joe, was written on a piece of white paper about 3x6 inches evidently torn from a tab such as he was acquistomed to have tacked up in the engine room and had on the reverse side some pencilling, which looked as though they had kept tally at a game of pedro, which they were accustomed to play while in port. It showed that it was moist when written upon. In what dire extremity they must have been, when his poor benumbed fingers traced that last message. The captain and clerk washed overboard, the engines broken and useless, and drifting toward land, so near that it could be seen, but for the blinding storm. Our hearts grow sick again, as we think of the awful suffering of those wretched men. The authenticity or the handwriting had been doubted by William McClure, the engineer's brother, but later developments tend to prove that the note is genuine. The leaf on which it was written was torn from a tablet, the same as those supplied the officers of the boats on which to make memorando reports. On the back of it are numerous pencil marks that were pronounced to be the score of a pedro game. William McClure said his brother was an inveterate pedro player, and he wrote the scores of his games just as the tab slip indicates. The fact that the writer signed his name "McLure" caused William McClure to doubt the signature. But yesterday several vouchers signed by the missing engineer for Second Engineer Wirtz, of the Chicora were compared with the bottle message penmanship and found to be identical. This message is considered of great importance, because it definitely locates the hull of the Chicora, to the minds of of the veteran sailors in the employ of the Graham & Morton Company. Heretofore Captain Graham has held the theory that the Chicora might have sunk at almost any point between New Buffalo on the south and South Haven on the north, a distance of over forty miles. The theory now is that the hull is in comparatively shallow water not very far from South Haven.

After years of study and labor, there has at last been discovered a sure and never-failing remedy. It has been tested on patients, who have despaired of ever being cured, the results have been, in every case, wonderful. GOFF'S RHEUMATISM CURE is unequaled as a positive remedy in all cases of Chronic and Acute Inflammatory Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuralgia, especially Ovarian Nenralgia, Dysmenorrhæ and all kindred affections. It is also a valuable Blood Parifier, being especially useful in Eczema, Psoriasis, Scrofula, all Glandular Enlargements and diseases of the Liver and Kidneys. It is absolutely free from all narcotics. Severe attacks are relieved in from one to three days and a positive cure effected in from five to eighteen days. For sale by Sometime ago the Presbyterian church sent a contribution to the Nebraska sufferers. Last week Mr. N. H. Qulver received a letter acknowledged the receipt of the contribution, and stating that through their board they had distributed $8000 among needy Presbyterian farmers, and that rain had fallen, making the outlook much brighter.

Frank Searles, who was brought from Berrien Springs for examination before Justice Sabin, on Tuesday, decided that the climate of Indiana agreed with him better than that of Michigan, and when last seen by the officers who had him in charge was indulging in some pretty good sprinting n that direction.

It is with regret that the readers of the RECORD will learn that the recent Evangelical Conference, held here, has transferred the Rev. Geo. Johnson to the St. Joseph church. Mr. Johnson has many friends in our town, and his work in the church here has been conscientiously and faithfully done. Mr. Johnson's transfer was made by the Conference with the object of strengthening the work at the Twin Cities. We trust that Mr. Johnson will be abundantly blessed in his new field of and see them.

The Evangelical Conference,

its career in the year 1800, in the state | thinker. of Pennsylvania. The doctrines and church polity are very similar to those of the M. E. church. Though at present, only ninety-five years old, this denomination has the advantage of possessing the progressive spirit of the nineteenth century. This denomination has already twenty-five Conferences in this country, and has gained a firm foothold in Germany, Switzerland and Japan. The work in this state, although only about thirty years old, contains a membership of over 7000.

The session of Conference just closed was one of the most pleasant of any in its history. Rev. Thomas Bowman of Chicago, who was chairman, has won many friends in our village by the genial good nature with which he presided over the sessions and moved among the people.

The Conference opened its session last Thursday at 8:50 a.m., with Bishop Bowman in the chair. The forenoon session was reported last week. J. M. Nyce, L. V. Solden and J. S. Steininger were appointed to report the proceedings to the Bay City, Detroit and Chicago papers.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The committee on worship reported that Rev. H. Mattill, one of the publishing agents of the Evangelical Publishing House, Cleveland, O., would preach, in the evening. The Presiding Elders were then stationed, as follows: St. Joseph Dist., Rev. W. A. Koehler; Detroit Dist., Rev. G. A. Hettler; Flint Dist., Rev. J. A. Frye; Reed City Dist. Rev. F. Klump. The recommendations for the General Conference were then voted upon:

First—The length of time for which a preacher may be the pastor of the same field shall be changed from three to four years. Yeas, 27; nays, 27. Second-The change in the clause in our book of discipline, relative to the selection of place for the General Conference. Yeas, 54; navs, 0.

Rev. Geo. Johnson was elected editor and publisher of the Conference Journal. Rev. C. C. Weber was granted credentials. Messrs. Edwin G. Frye, E. Scott and Wm. Stipe were granted license as preachers on probation. Revs. G. A. Hettler, F. Klump. J. A. Frye, W. A. Koehler, H. F. Strauch and E. Weise were elected delegates to the General Conference. Rev. J. H. Yaggy, Treasurer of the North Western College and Union Bibical Institute located at Naperville, | conference. Ill., was received as an advisory member. In the evening Rev. H. Mattill of Cleveland, O., preached a sermon from Rom. 5:20. FRIDAY MORNING.

Revs. C. C. Staffeld, A. A. Scheurer and G. J. Kirn were elected alternate delegates to the General Conference. The report of the committee on financial regulation was read by C. C. Staffeld. After this the committee on memorials reported suitable resolutions relative to the death of Revs. L. W. Stipe and Wm. Parker, and expressive of sympathy with the families of Revs. F. Klump, N. Wunderlich and W. Berge, each of whom has been bereft of a child during the past year, and with Rev. Nicholas who at present is ill.

Letters from Rev. S. Copley and from the Secretary of the Kansas Conference, were read to the Conference. J. Orth shall be left in the intinerancy one year without work. Rev. Neargarth was received in the Conference on probation. Rev. Wm. Brown was voted his ordination. Collections shall be taken on every charge to defray expenses of the General Conference delegates, before Sept. 1. Rev. F. Klump was re-elected trustee of the North Western college.

Conference was adjourned until 3 o'clook p. m. FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Session was opened with devotional exercises. Mr. W. A. Oldt was granted a license as preacher, on probation. The report of the ways and committee was next read, and its discussion and adoption occupied the greater part of the afternoon. Revs. M. Krueger and S. S. Albert of the Indiana Conference was received as advisory members. Rev. O. J. Roberts of the Presbyterian church was introduced the Conference. Rev. H. Mattill then deining the interests of the denomination. The Treasurer of the Church Extension Society, Rev. J. M. Nyce of preached an excellent sermou. SATURDAY MORNING.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

The large congregation again assembled at 2:30 p m. to witness the ordination ceremony. The candidates for ordination were, W. Brown, J. S. Steininger and E. M. Renner. The ordination ceremony was very impressive. The missionary meeting was also interesting. The amount collected was between $900 and $1000.

In the evening, Rev. Kirkhoofer, President of the North Western college delivered a very deep and interesting sermon, to a crowded house. The pulpits of the various churches of town were occupied by Evangelical minister. At the close of the services, the Bishop spoke a few words of farewell to the Conference, after which a suitable hymn was sung, and the Sist annual session of the Michigan Conference was closed.

The preachers started for their homes on Monday, taking with them many pleasant impressions made upon them by the Buchanan people. The following are the appointments

Has Fun With His Coffee "Some folks can't drink coffee unless it's hot," said Mr. Goslington, "and I don't like coffee unless it is freshly made and served hot, but I like to drink it through all its varying phases from hot to pretty nearly cold. I like a sip of it, when first poured, without sugar or any milk or cream, when its aroma is fresh and pungent and comlivered an interesting address concern- plete and quite unmarred by the admixture of any foreign substance whatever. Then I put in the usual quantity of sugar and of cream, and then you have the cup of coffee in its highest normal state, Wauseon, O., occupied the pulpit and and how delightful it is! Then, as I drink it, I add more cream. The remainder becomes more and more diluted, cooler and lighter and lighter in -color. The coffee flavor becomes more and more attenuated, but it is nevertheless keenly defined, and it so continues

SALIENT POINTS IN IRRIGATION. Presented In an Address Made Before

Convention of Nebraska Farmers.

At an irrigation convention at North Platte President Fort made an address, in which occurred the following salient points: Stoppage of prairie fires and promotion of forestry are intimately connected with irrigation. By comparison with Colorado fully 60 per cent of Nobraska's lands may be irrigated. A large proportion of Nebraska irrigation will be by pumping. The cheapest form is the Chinese system of "sliding water up hill" in a trough with paddles on an endless chain or rope. Horse, wind, steam or any other power may be used for this homemade contrivance. Probably the cheapest power that can be obtained will be the water itself, and hydraulic rams where a light fall can be given so as to work these machines will deliver water cheaper than any other class of water lifting appliances. The bucket elevators are claimed as cheap and efficient.

The centrifugal and rotary pumps will lift large quantities of water cheaply. They are not liable to get out of repair, provided a strainer prevents chunks of wood or gravel from getting into the machine. Either will lift sand, mud or fine gravel, especially the centrifugal. As they are not liable to get out of order and have but few working parts they are to be recommended as good machines for lifting water. They must, however, be worked at a high speed to secure the best results, and must therefore be attached to gearing. Probably the cheapest and most economical water elevator is the current wheel. This has one set of stationary buckets, or paddles, that are struck by the current of the river or creek, that turns the wheel, and a set of adjustable buckets fill with water as they revolve, and on reaching the highest point are tipped automatically, and the water is discharged into a trough, which conveys it to the land. It is doubtful if any cheaper power will be discovered for lifting water than the water itself, unless it be the wind. Now that inventors have secured by proper construction of the frame fully 80 per cent of the pressure applied by the wind to the mill's surface the prospect of a cheap power for lifting water is favorable, and we can hope that within a few years every farmer will own and have at work one or more of these machines that will be lifting water into reservoirs, from whence it can be carried out over his garden, orchards and fields, and in this way safely solve the food question for all parts where the canal may not go. Wherever practical, the canals should be constructed, owned and managed by the farmers themselves. In Utah fully 90 per cent of the canals have been constructed by the Utah farmer, who owns, manages and controls them. This places land and water under direct control of the farmers themselves, making land and water inseparable. In Colorado 95 per cent of the canals have been constructed by the farmers, and from 90 to 98 per cent of all the canals of the west, with the exception of some of the very largest, have been built by the farmer and this without bonds or for-

A Word About Ducks. In mating one drake to six ducks will be sufficient, says one authority. They should be in good condition, but not too fat. Duck eggs hatch remarkably well. They require four weeks to incubate before hatching. Give the setter a warm, clean nest, free from lice, and give her good care, and you will have a good hatch. The day you expect the ducklings to come out do not disturb the mother, she will prefer to remain on the nest, and if she had plenty of food and water the day before she will not suffer by it. When you think part of the ducklings are out, gently remove the mother, take out shells and replace the mother. Let the ducklings remain with the mother, as they will need her vital-

A Cheap Cultivator. As level and shallow cultivation is being practiced more and more each year by progressive farmers, and as nearly every farmer has one or more shovel plows, the sketch originally drawn for Ohio Farmer shows how they may be mada into a very useful tool at small ex-

A SATISFACTORY CULTIVATOR. pense. The crosshead is made of 3 by 5 hard wood, the length to suit width of rows, and filled with two rows of teeth made of old steel havrake teeth. 10 inches long, each row of teeth being 3 inches apart and set so that the rear row will come half way between the front ones, making the teeth to out 11/2 inches each The crosshead should be bolted on rear of front beam and in front of rear beam, so that it will be nearer at right angle

The teeth should incline slightly forward. It may be necessary to change the crosshead some to suit the condition of the soil. The farmer who describes this tool says: "I hit upon this plan of making a practical tool for working my mangles last season, as the garden rake was too slow and the cultivator threw too much dirt. It gave such good satisfaction that I worked a piece of corn on a steep hillside with it exclusively, it doing good work and leaving the ground as smooth as that on the level."

BRUSH AND STONE DRAINS.

Both Are Very Useful and Entirely Practicable Under Certain Conditions. Beggy land cannot well be drained at first with either stone or tile unless there is a plank or board laid in the bottom of the ditch, and if there is a large quantity of brush present by all means use it in the pioneer work, which may be made to result in bringing the land under proper cultivation. Dig drains through the marsh about three feet deep and fill them half full of brush, lopping the branches where they prevent the brush from lying close. Place the tops of the branches down stream. Over all place a good covering of straw or some other coarse material to prevent the earth from sifting into the drain. If, as

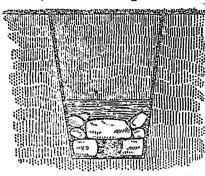

A BRUSH DRAIN. is likely to be the case, this brush is constantly immersed in water, it will last for many years and do the work required most effectually. When the ground has become settled. stone or tile drains should be substituted for the brush. If stone is used, it should be remembered that the ditches must be deeper than if tiled, since in filling the drain the top of it will come nearly a foot nearer the surface than the tile drain, and it might become obstructed if mice and other vermin are present, by their digging down to the top of the drain and allowing the earth and silt to sitt into it. Stone drains, if well laid, as shown, and put not less than 3½ or 4 foot deep, will stand perfectly, and to all intents and purposes are as good as tile. When the only expense of the brush drain is in labor, it all depends upon the financial side of the labor question. By all means, beginning at the lower end of the marsh, try some of these drains, placing them at the most not less than 30 to 40 feet apart, if the land is to be thoroughly and effectually

Of course the brush will rot in a few years if the supply of water from beneath does not keep them fairly well submerged, but this is not likely to be the case, since in such ground the wa-

A WELL LAID STONE DRAIN. ter oozes from the bottom, and since the passage through the drain is slow. Country Gentleman authority for the foregoing, adds that poles and even cordwood are used under such circumstances with success. With the former a throat can be made of fairly good size, which in some respects will look like the stone drain shown.

Height of Bechives.

In many apiaries the hives stand near the ground upon a piece of joist 3 or 4 inches wide, or upon bricks, one under each corner. In others the hives stand a foot high, and again hives may be seen two or three feet high perched on posts. As far as the bees are concerned, it does not matter whether hives be high or low, although, judging by the habits of the bees, the higher the hive is the better they would like it. But the beekeeper is the one to be accommodated by the position of the hive. He will place it at the height where it will be most convenient for him.

It is extraordinary that the hives in the majority of apiaries are not placed to give the beekeeper the best advantage, owing perhaps to the idea held by some beekeepers that it is good-essential-to have the bees near the ground. An Ohio Farmer correspondent says that the, best arrangement for bees is a platform upon posts sunk in the ground at frequent intervals. If the platform have a roof, it makes it all the better for the bees and the beekeeper during the warm weather. The roof should be port-' 's and not be put on before June, b .se.bees want all the sun they can get to that time.

Agricultural Condensations. Alfalfa seed ought to be sown as early in the spring as possible without danger from freezing.

Prairie Farmer urges the importance of arranging pastures so there may be a sort of succession of them on the same farm the same season. One succession suggested begins with rye, then orchard grass, then blue grass, common clover, mammoth clover and timothy or alsike clover and timothy. Overstocking pastures is the great bane of the west. A Missouri farmer writin Field and Fireside says: "When sorghum is raised for molasses, the seed makes from 20 to 35 bushels per acre. A thrasher can thrash 600 to 900 bush-

It has been demonstrated that trees of many kinds can be grown anywhere on the broad prairies of Iowa and Minnesota as soon as the land has been broken up and thoroughly subdued.

THE PERFECT ROAD.

Every one's income is divided into two parts. One of these ho is compelled to make use of in supporting existence; the second part is disposed of in the way which his judgment tells him will be best. This leads to the inquiry whether our surplus is judiciously spent. Are we buying the greatest amount of comfort and permanent good with the portion left at our disposal? Would not model roads be of greater benefit than our tobacco, liquor, tea, circus and other show moneys bring? Would they not more than balance the good times we have hauling our produce the rough miles of mud, at such fearful cost, in extra labor, repairs, horses, oats, in wear and tear of conscience and damages to character?

It is certain that bad roads make weak, struggling churches and poor, ill attended, lifeless schools. They necessitate a life of seclusion which walls the path of social progress.

To sum up, a perfect highway is a thing of beauty and a joy forever. It blesses every home by which it passes. It brings into pleasant communion people who otherwise would have remained at a perpetual distance. It awakens emulation, cements friendships and adds new charm to social life. It makes the region it traverses more attractive, the residences more delightful. It stimulates a spirit of general improvement. Fields begin to look tidier, shabby fences disappear, gardens show fewer weeds, lawns are better kept, the houses seem cozier, trees are planted along its borders, birds fill the air with music, the world seems brighter, the atmosphere purer. The country is awake, patriotism revives, philanthropy blossoms as selfishness fades and slinks from view. The schoolbouse and the church feel the magic influence—the wand of progress has touched even them, the old are young again, the young see something now to live for, and to all life seems worth the living. The daily mail reaches each home. The rural cosmopolitan "feels the daily pulse of the world."

Paper Cables Under Water.

For many purposes paper, next to wire, is an excellent insulation, and it has of late come extensively into use in telephonic and other cables. But it is not generally known that such an insulation has been tried under water. This is, however, the fact, and one such cable is now doing excellent work at the bottom of the Hudson river at New York, right in the track of all the domestic and scabound traffic. Of course the cable is lead covered and otherwise protected, but it depends for its insulation, electrically, on thin spirals of paper around each stranded interior wire. The laying of such a cable in such a plac few years ago, have been considered little short of suicidal, but experience has demonstrated the perfect practicability of the scheme. In considering the laying of such cables in such situations the fact is important that a 100 pair, paper insulated, lead covered cable can be bought for 50 cents a foot, while the rubber insulated cable would probably cost not less than $3 per foot, while, figured on the basis of equal electrical effectiveness, the price would be 50 or 100 to 1 in favor of the paper cable, other considerations left out. - Cincinnati Enquirer.

About Fur Overcoats-An Aged Sullivan County Hunter Tells Some Experiences Illustrating This Queer Fact.

"A bear or a panther can't stand the sight of a wolfskin or a coonskin overcoat," said an aged hunter of Sullivan county, "and both also dislike the looks of an overcoat made of buffalo skin. They become onraged when they see a hunter striding through the woods with a fur coat on. They will start for him the instant they get sight of him, and unless he stops them with a rifle ball or a charge of buckshot they will invaria-The bridal voil is a survival of the bly tackle him. One very cold morning I put on my snowshoes and started for the head of Kitchen's creek to hunt panthers and wolves. The snow was three feet deep in the woods, and the wolves and panthers were slaughtering the deer at a frightful rate. in a spruce ravine to the right of the creek I saw a movement in an evergreen tree and raised my rifle for what I thought might be a panther. "I hadn't been standing a minute when I heard a twig snap back of me, and before I could turn half way round something struck my back and drove me forward on my hands and knees. Of course I instantly realized that a panther had landed on my back. It stuck its claws into my shoulders and began to kick with its bind feet, snarling and tearing at the coonskin with its teeth. I knew in a second that the only thing for me to do was to throw myself backward, and this I did at once, burying the panther in the snow beneath me. The panther then started to scream, but the anow and my weight kept it from making much noise. It continued to claw great rents in the coonskin coat until I stabbed it three times in the side, when it stopped kicking and began to gasp. I knew that the point of the knife had touched a vital spot, so I lay still till the panther stretched out dead. Then I got up and pulled the beast out of the snow by the tail. I'd hardly dropped it on the surface than there was another movement in the evergreen tree. "This time I spied a pair of eyes on a limb about 15 feet above the snow and blazed away at them. A panther tumbled out, began to pitch and dive in the snow, soon turning up its toes. Then I pulled off the overcoat and discovered that the panther had ruined it. The claws hadn't touched my flesh, though, for I wore three thicknesses of deerskin and two of wool under the overcoat. On that trip of three days I got five panthers and four wolves. "The same winter I surprised a pack of wolves that had cornered three deer in a pen up in the Mehoopany country. I had on a wolfskin coat, and the wolves legged it out of the pen tho moment they got sight of me. I pulled off the coaand put it behind a tree, and the wolves, when they stopped to look back, acted as if they had been scared by a false alarm. When they saw that the overcoat wasn't in sight, they didn't care any more for me than for a sapling. They immediately returned to the deer pen as bold as you please, and I shot the whole five as fast as I could load and fire.

"One winter Joel Wright, who used to hunt and trap all the way from the Loyalsock to the Mehoopany, rolled up his coonskin overcoat and placed it on a log in the woods till he could go over a knoll and look at one of his traps. When he got to the top of the knoll on his way back, he heard a bear bellowing fown in the hollow, as if it was challenging another bear to fight with him. In a minute Joel caught sight of the noisy bear, but couldn't make out where the other one was. The challenger was slouching toward the log on which the coonskin overcoat lay in a bunch, and Joel made up his mind that the bear had got scent of the coat and was about to tackle it. "Joel had a better fur coat at home, and he didn't care much what the bear did with the one on the log. Anyhow he was going to watch the bear, and, if he got the better of the coat, all right. He could see that the fellow was angry before he got within ten rods of the log. Rushing up to the log, the bear seized the overcoat in his paws and began to squeeze and shake it as if it was a thing of life that he held an old grudge against. Joel tramped down the knoll then to see all the fun at short range, and pretty soon the bear gave the coat a dreadful hug, let out a yell, fell over backward and went to sprawling and rolling in the snow. Jeel knew what the trouble was, but he didn't say a word. The bear'd had his own way, and he was as dead as a flint when Joel got to him. Joel's hunting knife was in a pocket of the overcost, and the point of it had pierced the heart of the angry animal when he hugged the coat to his breast in a fit of rage."-Scranton Letter in

New York Sun. A CHICAGO TRICK.

But Somehow the Drummer Couldn't Seen: to Make It Work. "I saw a queer trick in Chicago the other day," said the drummer as he lighted a fresh cigar and pared his nails with his pocketknife.

Of course two or three of the group

wanted to know all about it, and he continued: "One of you let me have a clean $1 bill for a moment. Ah, that's a daisy of a bill-just off the press last week. Now, then, I lay the bill face downward on the floor-thus. The chap who did the trick was not a professional juggler, but he did it with neatness and dispatch. I don't say I can do it myself,

"But what is the trick?" "Why, I take my knife and cut the bill lengthwise-so. Then I cut it crosswise-so. That divides the bill into four equal portions, doesn't it?"" Every one in the group answered that it did, and the drummer gazed at the pieces awhile and said: "The trick is to blow the pieces together so that the edges will unite. The Chicago man did it, but just how I couldn't find out. Let's see. I will now blow. Ah, they do not unite. I will blow again".—

"What in the Old Harry are you trying to do?" demanded the owner of the "Why, I'm trying to blow the pieces together," innocently replied the drum-

"But you can't do it." "No, I see I can't. The Chicago man did it, but I'm not on to the trick. Here are the four pieces, and I guess you'll have to get a bottle of mucilage and a sheet of paper and paste them together. Awfully cute trick, but I can't do it.

Wish I could, but I can't.' And, strangely enough, the owner of the bill looked at the pieces, and from the pieces to the drummer and back, and then called the drummer a double dyed idiot and walked off with the declaration that he'd like to punch somebody's head.—Detroit Free Press.
