For blessings common in our sight We rarely offer praises. We sigh for some supreme de light To crown our lives with splendor, And quite ignore our daily store Of pleasures sweet and tender. Our cares are bold and push their way Upon our thought and feeling. They hang about us all the day,

Our time from pleasure stealing So unobtrusive many a joy We pass by and forget it, But worry strives to own our lives And conquers if we let it.

There's not a day in all the year But holds some hidden pleasure And looking back joys oft appear To brim the past's wide measure But blessings are like friends, I hold Who love and labor near us.

We ought to raise our notes of praise

While living hearts can hear us.

Full many a blessing wears the guise Of worry or of trouble. Farseeing is the soul and wise Who knows the mask is double. But he who has the faith and strength To thank his God for sorrow

Has found a joy without alloy To gladden every morrow We ought to make the moments notes Of happy, glad Thanksgiving; The hours and days a silent phrase

Of music we are living. And so the theme should swell and grow, As weeks and months pass o'er us, And rise sublime at this good time. A grand Thanksgiving chorus. ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

IN BLACK AND WHITE A THANKSGIVING STORY BY MARY KYLE

DALLAS. [Copyright, 1895, by American Press Associa tion.] "All aboard!" shouted the brakemen, taking the cry up one after the other and making something like the chorus of a glee of it. "All aboard!" Everybody plunged into the cars as though the end of the world had come and this were the last train to heaven. Last of all a very lovely girl with her arms full of parcels and her hands occupied with the inevitable traveling bag and umbrella was lifted, pulled, pushed and otherwise assisted to the platform of the already moving car.

As she entered three young men sprang up at once, as does "Jack in the box," and she had but to choose her seat, with a "Thank you" and a smile, distributed to all three, and the one who was favored by

"YOU'VE TOLD HER, LETTY," HE SAID. other women know it as well as men dothat their own personality strews their way with flowers of courtesy. Mahala's face was, in that sense, her fortune. She had taught in a public school for several years, not from necessity, but in that commendable spirit of independence common to the daughters of New England families. But that was done with now. She had resigned her position and was going home not only to spend Thanksgiving, but to begin the preparations for her wed-

The course of true love had run smoothly in her case. Nobody objected to her choice; there was nothing but good feeling all around. "No one could fail to like Edward Percival or my own people. My own people are so nice," she said to herself. "I am so proud of father, so fond of my darling mother, and Enos, oh, my splendid brother! Sometimes I think he is dearest of them all. And the brightest, best, sweet est little girl in the world is sister Letty. It ought to be enough for any girl to have such home people, and besides that I am engaged to marry a man like Edward Percival. What a happy girl I am! What a happy girl!"

Soon she foll to dwelling on the perfec-tions of her future husband and retracing the chain of incidents that led to their acquaintance. It came about thus: Two or three years previous her brother was asking himself what business or prolession he should pursue, disliking the idea of farming, and certainly that did not seem what Enes was made for. His mother had hoped that he would have a liking for preaching and study theology. "I should like Enos to be a dominie," she had said, and Enos himself was thinking of the law, when a runaway accident occurred, and it came to pass that Enos sayed Miss Adelaide Percival's life at the risk of his own. Mr. Percival, in his gratitude, had offered Enos a posi-tion in the bank of which he was president, and since then the young man had been made cashier, a wonderful thing for so young a man as Enos. Edward Percival had become his friend and had been brought home to visit and fell in love with Mahala—so ho vowed—at first sight. And ah, how fond she was of him! "I think it is because father and mother are such good people that the Lord has blessed their children," said Mahala to herself, smiling gently as she gazed toward the roofs of her native village, now visible in the distance. "Alumbridge!" shricked the brakeman. It was the popular pronunciation of Elmbridge. Mahala gathered up her parcels and stepped out upon the platform. Her trunk stood there, but she saw no wagon waiting for her. "Is the train early, Mr. Doble?" she asked the bagage master.

"No, Miss Mahaly," he replied; "the train is a little late. Your wagon is yonder under the trees." Mahala hurried across the intervening space. A girl's voice came to her from behind the curtains, which were let down: "Mahala, that you, dear? I waited here because Stupid seemed restive. Sorry to give Mr. Doble so much trouble." As Mahala took her seat beside hor sister Letty flung her thin young arms about her neck and gave her a long hug and a lingering kiss, and Mahala felt a tear up-thought most fitting. Then the women knelt, each before a chair, and the old man, standing, lifted his voice in prayer. He had intended to make it a petition for mercy, a prayer for the sinful and sorrowful in general, but his heart was too full, and he soon found himself uttering agonized petitions for his poor, lost boy.

He prayed with his hands clasped, his eyes closed. The sobs of the kneeling women filled the room, and some one who had opened the door stood, one hand on the "O God, have mercy upon my poor, wandering Enos. Though he has brought his parents' gray hairs with sorrow to the Enos stood before him in the doorway, and as he stepped into the room remarked: "Father, that was a powerful prayer, and it seems to have been felt so by the family, but I must ask, respectfully and reverently of course, how came I to need so much praying for and crying over? I'm not aware of having done anything but miss my Thanksgiving dinner, and that

But here he paused, smothered into silonce by embraces, kisses, showers of tears, little cries of rapture. His mother, Mahala and Letty all had their arms about him at

The presence of Enos, his voice, his manner, told them that whatever had hap pened he was guilty of no crime.

The old man, shouting "Thank God!"
over and over again, rested his hand upon his head, and it was Letty who at last lifted her sweet, shrill young voice, putting the explanation into a nutshell. "Why, didn't you know, Enos," she cried, "that the Elmbridge Gazette said that you robbed the Longtown bank, and that Mahala and Ed couldn't be married now? And we all believed it. That's why pa prayed for you and we cried. And a one of his eyes blackened. But he looked triumphant.

"I've fixed 'em," he said. "I ain't no literary man myself, but my brother reads the Alumbridge Gazette constant, and after dinner he showed me that paper full of lies. So I left early and went over to the office where they was all to work for tomorrow, with their coats off, and I took it out of their hides. 'I'm Pynchon's man,' I said. Enos. "He went back into the road after he reached the gate, and as I supposed he had caught sight of Mahala somewhere I ame in without him." At this moment a window was lifted rom without.

Weesaw township is to hold a Sunday School Convention at the M. E. church of New Troy, Dec. 8.

A meeting was held at the Evangelical church last Sabbath afternoon, to hear the report of Delegate O. J. Robberts of the State Sunday School Convention.

Thirty-fifth Annual Convention. The Thirty-fifth Annual Convention of Michigan Sunday School Union convened in the Auditorium, Detroit, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 19, with Pres. T E. Barkworth in the chair, E. O. Excell led in the song service with his usual energy, and the Convention was greeted at this opening session, on a very unpleasant night, by an audience of over 3000. After song and prayer, cordial words of greeting were uttered by Controller Blade on behalf of Detroit, and Gov. Rich on behalf of the state. A very enthusiastic reception was given the speaker of the evening, Gen. J. B. Gordon of Georgia, and his address was inspiring and helpful, emphasizing the relation of Sunday school work to the development of our one common country. The address was intens ly patriotic, from first to last, and it was a touching scene when Gen. Alger and Gen. Gordon stood on the platform before that vast andience and warmly shook hands. There was no "bloody chasm" any longer, except in

At the morning session a very large amount of money was pledged for state work, Kent county taking the lead with $175. Several reports were presented, from which we will give quotations later. In the afternoon, a very interesting incident was the presentation to the convention of Deacon Mills of Galesburg, over ninety years old, who has been a Sunday school worker for over seventy years. Cards were passed through the audience, designed to give an opportunity to all to make a definite pledge for the state for every year for years A very pleasant affair was the reading of a fraternal letter from the Sunday School Union of Ontario, and to Shang-I-Yuen, the only railway in words of greeting from the same by a all China, I found on entering the first delegate. First Assistant Postmaster General Jones has submitted his report. It calls attention to a saving in his branch of the service during the past year of $1, 395,577. Mr. Jones recommends an appropriation of $17,000,000 to cover compensation of postmasters for the next fiscal year and $10,500,000 for clerk hire at first and second-class post offices. The salaries of all presidential postmasters amounted to $5,897,200, and the gross receipts of post offices $60,538,097. The number of presidential postmasters is 3,491, of which 159 are first-class; 700 second-class; and 2,682 third-class. The total number of positions brought within the classified service during the year was 2.395. An estimate of $12,960,300 is made for the free delivery service next year. The money-order report shows that there are 19,691 domestic money-order offices, and orders to the amount of $156,709. 089 were issued and $156,159,689 paid. Statute of Gen. Meade at Gettysburg. The members of the Pennsylvania Monument Commission met on the field of Gettysburg on Nov. 19, to inspect and approve the second equestrian statute, that of General George Gordon Meade, erected by the commission, on the battlefield. It is one of the threeto Meade, Hancock and Reynolds-authorized by the Legislature when it appropriated $10 for that purpos the session of 1892-93. The monument is placed east of Hancock avenue, and some distance west of Meade's headquarters. The horse is nine and a half teet high, seven feet to the withers, and the whole group is fifteen feet high. With the pedestal, it is 25 feet high. The horse is standing as though just brought to a stop. The reins are thrown over the pommel of the saddle, and the General is apparently making an observation. He has a field-glass in his right hand and his hat in his left hand. The hat was thus arranged because it is apt to obstruct the light. The saddle is modelled after the one he used. There was a bullet hole through the flap of the saddle, received in an engagement prior to Gettysburg. His horse was killed by it, and the General's eg was grazed, the bullet making a hole in his trousers. The stirrups are open, and there are neither holsters, breaststrap nor crupper. The horse is a magnificent specimen. It is modelled after an American trotting horse of the Clay-Pilot strain General Meade wears a full beard, and it was the sculptor's endeavor to get his face and figure at the time of the war. He had the use of all the portraits in existence, and his work was subjected to the crit icism of different members of the family. Colonel Meade and his sisters inspected it, and are well satisfied with the result. The figure if standing would measure 11 feet. The horse is relatively in smaller proportions. A working model with life size bust was made a study, and two years were consumed in its completion. The casting was done by Bureau Brothers, of Philadelphia. Mr. Bush-Brown, the sculptor, is a nephew of the Brown who executed the statue of Washington which stands in Union Square, New York. He studied with his uncle, whose adopted son he was, and then in Paris and Italy. This is his first important

A Pickaninny Preacher. Wonderful stories come from the south about the power of a little colored girl who has been converting hundreds of persons both white and colored, from the error of their ways. It is in the Carolinas that most of her work has been done, and the people there call her the pickaniony preacher. Her name is Clerretta Nora Avery, and she is ter years old. Whereever the girl preach ed she stirred up a sort of religious frenzy among the people, and the mere announcement of her name was suffic ient to crowd the largest halls beyond their capacity. What made this the most remarkable was that the girl herself went into none of the ecstacies of emotional excitement so common to revivalists of her race. Her sermons were temperate, dignified, appealing, and her command of language such that it was difficult to realize that a child and not a grown woman was speaking. In her prayers she seemed to be particularly moving, and of those who came forward upon her call for the penitents a very large proportion became converts. In short, no exhorter of such power has been known to the south for many years. Cleretta is now in New York city where she is to preach next week. A Sun reporter thus describes her: "The preacher sat down on a chair, which could't have been very confortable, because her feet dangled clear of the floor although it was a chair of ordinary height, while, the reporter looked at her. He saw a girl about the size one would expect a child of ten to be, rather plump, and clad in a heavy cloak. One of the noticeable things about her is that her head is very large, like the head of an adult person, in fact, with plenty of brain room above the fore head. In the face there is not an African characteristic except the color, which is that of the African negro.

under a broad and high forehead. The nose is rather small, with nostrils by no means thick, and the mouth is sensitive and delicate. There is none of that broadness or flatness of fea tures so generally seen in the negro face. On the other hand, there is nothing distinctive to show the intermingling of Caucasian blood, and, as far as the girl knows, she is pure negro. But hers is a refinement of the type It is no exaggeration to say that she is a very pretty child. In manner she is mediately, and her answers are couched in such terms as might be expected from a well educated woman twenty vears her senior."

THE THREE WISHES.

Three girls sat idly on the heach; One like a lily tall and fair, One brilliant with her raven hair, One sweet and shy of speech. "I wish for fame," the lily said,
"And I for wealth and courtly life."
Then gently spoke the third: "As wife,
I ask for love instead." Years passed. Again beside the sea Three women sat with whitening hair, Still graceful, lovable, and fair, And told their destiny.

"Fame is not all," the lily sighed.
"Wealth fittile, if the heart be dead."
"I have been loved," one sweetly said,
"And I am satisfied." SARAH K. BOLTON.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Junius Henri Browne on the New and the Old Religion [Copyright, 1895, by American Press Associa The New England custom, which has been adopted throughout the United States of appointing a special day, the last Thurs day in November, of Thanksgiving and prayer, is now observed, I think, by every denomination, services being held in the services morning in all the churches. These services are much less attended, however, than they formerly were, because the day has recently lost favor theologically or religiously and gained favor socially. People who feel that they should give thanks to any supernal power may not recognize any one day more than another for so doing, and consequently may refrain from observing any special day. Whatever the cause, Thanksgiving has lost much of its popular hold so far as ecclesiastic ceremony is concerned. But as a day for the reunion of kindred, near or remote, at a bountiful dinner it is highly revered, and the beautiful custom more and more wide ly followed. New England has been called the brain, sometimes the conscience of the vigorous interpretation of certain intensely carnest men who felt themselves called upon to expound the Scriptures. They considered it their bounden duty to be mercilessly logical, whether or not they offended reason or shocked humanity. It mattered not if they portrayed the Deity as a monster He was what he was; what the eternal word declared him to be. There could be no palliation of the word If God appeared pitiless, cruel, malignant, he was really just, good, compassionate, and they, in their narrowness and bigotry, labored to reconcile those glaring contradictions. Thank nature and common sense, this so called religion, the most depraved form of theology, has long since grown obsolete. Its existence at any time seems to the last quarter of the century altogether impossi-During the last 50 years, the whole educated world, the western world especially, has grown less and less theo development. The government of the world, the regulation of the entire cosmos, we now see, is dependent on law, unvarying and eternal. The "special interposition of Providence," of which we heard so much in the beginning of the century, is now generally rejected by the thoughtful. We believe today that a man, whether saint or sinner, will be drowned if he fall into deep water If he cannot swim and there be nobody to rescue him. Miracles are not credited to any extent, although theologians may still proclaim and vouch for them. Consequently special thanksgiving for recovery from illness, for a stroke of good fortune, for unexpected avoidance of evil, is not nearly so common as it has been unless as a ceremonial of the churches. The spirit remains, if the act of thanksgiving has become less frequent, though many mar not know to whom or to what to be thankful, Thankfulness, gratitude. satisfaction, glad-() ness that anything desirable has happened or that anything undesirable has not happened are substantially the same. The sole difference is in terms—the feeling, express it as we may, is universal. But what is desirable to one man may not be to another. What we regard as blessings often prove curses, as apparent curses often prove blessings. Everything must be judged by time. There is a mystery in all events, an inscrutable ness in the happenings of every day. Wo are taught that life is a boon; that we should be thankful, grateful, satisfied, glad (as you will) that we have been born. But everybody does not regard it as a boon, as we are aware from the many who are always destroying themselves, and from the carnest adverse opinions we are ever hearing in respect to it. Life is little in itself-it is what we make of it, what wo think of it. We should all love it, doubtless, if we could have it on our own terms, but how very few of us do or can so have it! Nevertheless, the great majority of men enjoy life and will frankly say as much. Probably they do not think about it; they simply accept it. If they should think about it, they would be discontented. Looking at men's lives in the mass, from a purely rational point of view, they would seem wretched. But they are not. We must take their own opinions on the subject. Every man must judge of life for himself, and his judgment is final, irrevocable. Circumstances do not determine what his life is. His life hangs on his temperament. We all remember the eastern story of the gloomy, hopeless grand vizier who had every earthly possession. He consulted for relief an ancient sage, who told him that he should wear the shirt of a happy mortal. The happy mortal, after wide, diligent search, was found. He was so very poor that he had no shirt. Among mankind there are optimists and pessimists, with hosts between those two extremes of every shade of theory and conviction. Everything that mism, maintains that this is not only the worst world that has ever existed, but the worst possible world that could exist. This is palpably absurd. How could be tell, who, so far as his consciousness ex-tended, had experience of but one world. Despite the assumptions of pessimists, no human being is or can be so miserable that he could not be much more miserable. It is impossible to imagine a case; hence every human creature should be thankful, grateful, glad (this, I suppose, to be the correct theory of thankfulness) that he is not so unfortunate as he might be. For comfort for consolation, he should keep in mind somebody whose condition is more deplorable than his. If he should break one leg, he should be thankful that he did not break both. If he should lose his fortune, let him rejoice that he still retains his health. If his house should burn down, he must not forget that some of his furniture has been saved. If his father should die, his mother survives. If he have a bilious fever, he might have had typhoid. If he has had no food for 36 hours, it might have been 56. He who is born to poverty, with a delicate constitu-tion, with defective senses, with a bad disposition, may still felicitate himself, for ho might not have been born at all or he might have been a twin. There is some kind of comfort in everything, if we look at it rightly. There is cause for thankfulness in all conditions, if we will bring to mind those whose conditions are still more deplorable than ours.

It is vestly better to think well than to think ill of ourselves and our circumstances; to believe that we are better off than most of our fellows; to hold that we have cause for gratitudo and thankfulness. No matter, if we do overrate ourselves ever so much. Overrating helps us in the battle of existence: affords us strength and ity is almost as great a sustainer as hope, which keeps all of us alive. Optimism is a thousand times preferable to pessimism. It is to be doubted if any one is thoroughly a pessimist or can be. To think that we owe something to others, to causes that we have not created, saves us from selfishness, the deepest vice of humanity. Thankfulness is the most fertile source of altruism, the spring by which the world is to be redeemed, and altruism is growing steadily. We may not need a special day to return thanks. All days should be thanksgiving days. They keep our hearts warm and tender and sensitive to the sufferings of our kind. JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE

She was not prepared, however, for what she called the "breakage" in the family. The constant risk to life and limb that five active, sport loving boys were capable of was a new feature in her young life, and she felt that she was in danger of losing her head unless sho prepared herself to meet the different calls upon her motherly In her extremity she appealed to her friend, the trained nurse. "Can't you give me some points," she said. "Tell me of the proper things to do before the doctor comes in case of certain accidents-won't you? Then there are many little things-bruises and burns and things that I could attend to myself without sending for a doctor if I only knew how. Do help me out. Suppose, for instance, one of the boys fell and broke his arm, what should I do before the doctor came?"

"If I were you, I would do nothing but wait, unless the surgeon was delayed. In that case I would simply place the limb in between a folded pillow, fastening the pillow firmly together, thus making a sort of splint. "You will very likely have a sprain or two to deal with. You can either apply cloths saturated with ice water until the swelling disappears, or you may use very hot water with vinegar in the same way. After the swelling has disappeared you had better bandage the limb and let the little patient rest it on a level until it gets strong."

"But I don't know how to apply a bandage," was the forlorn reply, "Then it is about time that you did," said the trained nurse. "Give me a piece of muslin and your bare foot, and

I'll show you how,'' Then the nurse took the piece of muslin and tore it into strips of 3 inches in width. Then saying, "Always begin at the extremity of a limb and work toward the center of the body from left to right," she placed one of the ends of the strip at the instep and made a turn around the base of the toe. Then she carried the band diagonally over the foot, across the point of the heel and back from the other side, until it coincided with the first turn. This was then covered and carried a second turn around the heel half an inch higher than the first. She then continued to make alternate turns under the sole and behind the heel, crossing over the instep until the entire foot was covered. In finishing the bandage she split the last quarter of yard of the strip through the middle, wound the ends in opposite direction around the limb and tied them in a bow. Then the band was all unwound again, and the pupil, trying her hand, was delighted to see what a "firm bandage" she could make after two or three attempts. "In case of dislocation," continued the nurse, "there is always need of instant action. Muscular tension increases rapidly and its reduction becomes more difficult with every hour that passes.

"Fingers and thumbs can be set by pulling in place, but be careful not to pse too much force. A joint is always weaker after an accident and should be strapped in place until strong again.

"Freddie's nose bled awfully the other day and frightened me so because I gould not stop it. It stopped itself after awhile, but what should I have done?" "It is a good thing to press gently the facial artery at the base of the nose and place cold applications to forehead and neck. I suppose you had him lean his head over a basin. Yes; most people do, and that is just the worst attitude possible. You should have made him stand erect, throw his head back and elevate his arms, while you held a cold, damp sponge to his nostrils. If you have an occasion like that again, and the pleeding continues after what I have told you to do has been tried, you had better syringe with salt and ico cold water or a solution of iron.

"In the case of burns or scalds, if they are very bad send for your physician, but slight ones you can very well attend to. The first thing in such cases is to exclude the air. I find that baking soda and sweet oil make a soothing, healing application. If you can't get that conveniently, beat up the white of an egg and apply that with a bandage.' "Will you tell me how to stop the flow of blood in case of cut, and then

I'll let you go?'' "Find the artery that is cut and tie a handkerchief around the limb just over where it bleeds. Tie the handkerchief tightly; then make, say, three hard kuots. In the last knot insert a piece of stick with which you must twist the handkerchief until it is tight enough to stop the flow. The handkerchief and stick make as good a tourniquet, as we call it, as any one would wish."—Philndelphia Press.

Big Bells In China. Besides hundreds of bells weighing from 10,000 to 25,000 pounds, Nankin, China, has four bells which weigh 50,000 pounds each. They are nearly 12 English feet each in height, and are almost 23 feet in diameter. The metal in these monsters averages about 5 1/4 inches in thickness throughout, being about 8 inches on the lower lip, or rim. In Peking there is a chime of seven bells, each of which weighs 120,000 pounds.—St. Louis Re-

Only a Scar Remains

Scrofula Cured-Blood Purified by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: "It is with pleasure that I send a testimonial concerning what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for my daughter. It is a wonderful medicine and I cannot recommend it too highly. Sarah, who is fourteen years old, has been Afflicted With Scrofula ver since she was one year old. For five years she has had a running sore on one side of her face. We tried every remedy recommended, but nothing did her any good until we commenced using Hood's Sarsaparilla. My married daughter advised me to use Hood's Sarsaparilla because it had cured her of dyspepsia. She had been troubled with that complaint since childhood, and since her cure she has never been without a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the house. We commenced giving it to Sarah about one year ago, and it has conquered the running sore, Only a Scar Remaining as a trace of the dreadful disease. Previous to taking the medicine her eyesight was affected but now she can see perfectly. In connection with Hood's Sarsaparilla we have used Hood's Vegetable Fills, and find them the best." The Benton Harbor Motor Carriage Company, a consolidation of several local wagon and machine companies, has turned out the first motor and carriage built by them, the work having been done in profound secrecy. The concern will engage in the construction of horseless vehicles on a large scale, the motive power being gasoline stored in the seat. The carriage has been entered in the races in Chicago, Thanksgiving day, and is designated by the Times-Herald as No. 2. As Joseph Sheeley, a hotel pro prietor, was walking on the street at Galien, abont 9 o'clock Friday night, he was suddenly assaulted by men who had been hiding in an alley and, without warning, knocked senseless with a heavy blow on the back of the neck. The victim had no time call for help, and his persecutors were left unmolested to continue their brutal pounding, until the back of Mr. Sheeley's head was pounded almost to a jelly. When Mr. Sheeley recovered he identified his assailants as Guy and Elmo Swem and Rich Lyons. They assaulted him because he ordered them off the hotel premises one night, thus gaining their emnity.

The Greatest Sin in the World. The above is the title of a very able and convincing essay by Rev. W. W. Wells of this place, and this essay should find place in every home. Mr. Wells treats his subject in a very plain, concise and convincing manner. He takes the ground that the sin of unbelief in the Savior is the greatest sin in world to day and in the volume we speak of Mr. points out the only Wells remedy for this sin and also his idea as to the various steps necessary to apply the remedy. Many of the author's friends have urged him to have the essay placed upon sale and he has in response to this request placed them on sale at the drug store of E. S. Dodd & Son where they can be procured for the nominal price of 30 cents while the limited edition lasts.

Stevensville was arrested in South

Bend on Friday, charged with murdering his wife at Granger, Ind., a little town ten miles south of Niies. Olmstead is a blacksmith and was living at Granger, Oct. 20, the time the alleged deed was committed. Mrs. Olmstead died suddenly, the cause of her death being typhoid malaria, as was supposed. Circumstances since deve!oped, however, indicate an unnatural death. The father of the dead woman swore out the warrant for Olmstead's arrest. He charges that Olmstead administered arsenical poison to his wife, the alleged motive being his desire to obtain possession of considerable property, Olmstead, who is about 32 years of age, denies that he caused his wife's death. The arrest, he declares, is promoted by spite, because he took his son from the custody of his grandfather. Olmstead has resided in Stvensville since his wife's death. He says he was decoyed into Indiana by a let-examined for traces of a deadly drug. Meanwhile Olmstead is in the county Chas. Groves of Buchanan visited in the city yesterday. He is of the opintion that the massacring Turks should be annihilated for their murderous attacks on the Armenians. "Although far away," Charley says, "I believe the United States should assist, and espec ially in the protection of American citizens in Turkey." BUCHANAN, MICH. LITERARY NOTES.

One dollar per year; ten conts per copy.

Of several new stories of Lincoln told in the second installment of the new "Lite of Lincoln," in McClure's Magazine for December, one of the most interesting is that, when Lincoln removed with his family from Indiana to Illinois, he made thrifty use of the opportunities of the journey to peddle out, at a good profit, a stock of small wares which he had bought for the purpose. The whole installmens is rich in picturesque details, and in Lincoln as he undertook life on his own account, first as a flatboatman, and then as a grocery clerk at New Salem, exhibits a young genius and hero, doing wonderful feats of strength, risking his life to save comrades from drowning, and magically winning his way in a new community by his rare integrity, his superior intelligence, and his gift of entertaining speech. Along with the paper are twenty-five pictures, including a faesimile of Lincoln's first vote, portraits of him in 1836, 1857, 1858,, and 1860, portraits of his enrly associates, and pictures of all the important scenes of this period of his life. There could be no guest more welcome at the Thanksgiving festive board—no friend give more pleasure of a healthy kind—than the special double number of The Youth's Companion.

The paper is unique in that it is equally acceptable to all members of the family. There can be no old people in Companion homes, for the paper feeds their interests in the best way, and keeps hearts and minds young.

The Companion becomes a member "in regular standing" of every household it enters and its company is much sought by all of the other members of the family, who await in turn the pleasure is pages bring.

company is much sought by all of the other members of the family, who await in turn the pleasure is pages bring.

The Christmas Ladies' Home Journal by far surpasses, both in literary and artistic excellence, any previous issue of that popular magazine. Conspicuous among the contributors are ex-President Harrison, who gives the introductory paper of the series he is preparing upon "This Country of Ours"; Mrs Mary Anderson de Navarro, who most interestingly tells of "My First Appearance on the Stage"; and Mary E. Wilkins, who gives the first of "Neighborhood Types" papers. Rudyard Kipling's latest and best romance, "William the Conquere" (richly illustrated by W. L. Taylor), is began in the Christmas Journal, as is Julia Magruddr's new novelet's, "The Violette" which Charles Dana Gibson has illustrated, while Mrs. Burton Harrison's fascinating story, "The Holliday Dance at Worrosquoyacka" (pictures by W. T. Smedley), is delightfully concluded. James Whitcomb Riley's tenderly reminiscent poem, "At the Gate" superbly illustrated by A. B. Frost, and Kate Greenway's winsome dainty little people are two page features of the December Journal. "A. $3500 Snburban Home," both illustrated, are very useful articles; the latter gives all the plans and details of construction, and is by a practical architect. The musical feature of the number, a hymn, "Jesus the Very Thought of Thee," is one of Bruno Oscar Klein's best compositions. The artists represented in the Christmas Journal architect.
