"Yes, sir that bicycle's haunted, and that's all there is to it. I don't know a thing about spirits and things like that, but if you ever catch me riding that whee! after midnight I won't know it."

Thus did George Springwell vehemently declare that the supernatural had taken hold of his bicycle. The tale that Springwell tells is certainly a queer one, and one that is apparently vouched for by a number of his friends. They declare that any one riding the wheel after 12:30 o'clock on any night will wish he hadn't. The sensations experienced by such a rider are described as startling in the extreme and accompanied by manifestations that are of the hair raising variety.

Springwell lives in a modest little house on Lombard street and is a clerk in one of the large dry goods houses. He came to Buffalo last July from New York and just before he left the metropolis he bought a secondhand bicycle from a reputable dealer. This he took to Buffalo and has ridden it steadily to and from his place of business. He is not what would be called a bicycle crank, using the machine merely as a means of locomotion between his house and the store. It was only a few weeks ago that he was aware of the supernatural qualities of the wheel, and this he discovered in a startling manner. He was accustomed to leave the wheel in a small room in the rear of the kitchen every night. One day he bought a cyclometer, and with the aid of the instrument he found that the wheel was

He took careful note of the miles registered on the little machine and soon began to see that there were small discrepancies, periods of exactly three miles, for which he could not account. Every night as he looked at the cyclometer he took careful note of the amount registered, and every morning it was just three miles more. This bothered him considerably, but he dismissed everything with the thought that the instrument was defective in some way

But a few weeks ago he rode out into the country for the first time in the evening. He took a trip to the Falls, spent the evening there and wheeled home in company with a friend. He reached Tonawanda about 11 o'clock, and waited there till midnight. Then he slowly pedaled over the brick boulevard toward home. He was somewhat tired, and his friend, a man named Zeiler, being more of a wheelman, was about a sixteenth of a mile ahead. Just as Springwell reached the clump of trees on this side of Kenmore he began to experience what, if his story is true, is something distinctly marvelous. He declares that as he was riding along moderately he struck a chill blast of air. This was on an August night, and he could not account for the extreme cold. Then something began to work in his throat. Before he was aware he was a prey to a most horrible and vague fear -horrible because of its vagueness. Something terrible he felt was about to happen. He glanced from right to left. Nothing could be seen or heard. He thought he would call to his friend ahead, but felt powerless.

Then, as he was riding, a powerful something seemed to suddenly wrap itself about him. He could feel cold hands suddenly seize his hands as they guided the machine, and he could not release them from the iron grip. He knew that he was in the power of some supernatural monster and that the machine had passed from his control. He wavered from side to side. The wheel described curious curves and he thought for a minute he was going to be thrown to the ground. All this time he did not have any control of the wheel. He tugged with all his force at the handle bars, but this did not deviate the wheel from its path a single inch. Terrified beyond description, he could not shout. He felt a sickening sensation sweep through him. He felt that something immeasurably monstrous had complete control of every action. Of a sudden the pedals began to revolve with a rapidity that he declares was nothing short of marvelous. He flew up the stretch that intervened between him and his friend with inconceivable rapidity, some unknown power having its ghostly feet on the pedals. On he flew. His friend was passed as though he were standing still. He tried to cry out as he passed him, but could not. On into the gloom beyond till the city line was reached, then on again over the asphalt. The long stretch of smooth pavement flew from under him. He jumped car tracks, hardly feeling them as he passed. Under the white glare of the electric lights he passed with his demon companion. He could feel that the ghostly rider behind him was panting under the exertion. He could feel a clammy breath on the back of his neck that sent terrible shivers through his whole body.

Springwell declares with an expression that is indubitable evidence of his honesty that he will never forget this awful ride till the last moment of his life. The sensation accompanying this mad flight he says he is powerless to describe. There was not only the horrible thought that he was in the power of the supernatural, but other emotions that he says no language can ever portray were concomitant. His very soul was swayed by their intensity and seemed to be in a shadow of something inexpressibly terrorsome and ghoulish. On he flew, and he could make out a shadowy something dancing before him, something vague of outline and white in color. It danced now here, now there, and he felt rather than saw that it was mocking him. On in the leadership of this phantom he flew. He crossed the Belt line tracks with a bound then felt he was slowing up. But still he kept on until the curve that Delaware avenue takes before it reaches the culvert where the Park road passes over it. Ahead he could see the white shimmer of an electric light illuminating its dazzling circle beneath it. He felt the icy hands that had never relaxed their pressure from the moment he had first felt them loosen a bit of their grip. He was regaining control. But the machine seemed to be dragging something behind it. He felt he could now turn and see the ghostly monster behind him. He craned his head a bit, and at that moment he felt a terrible blow over the head. Stunned, he dropped from his wheel and lay on the pavement. He describes the half glimpse of the thing behind him as something too inexpressibly monstrous to attempt to portrav. He lay on the pavement for some five minutes, when Zeiler came up. He was riding like mad. Zeiler stopped when he saw his friend and helped him to his feet. When Springwell told his story, at first Zeiler thought he was joking, but he was finally convinced from the look of abject terror in Springwell's face. They revisited the place next day, Springwell unstrung and hardly able to wheel. From the spot where he first felt the power of the something to where he was hit is exactly three miles and a few rods over. Springwell wrote to the man from whom he bought the wheel, and he received an answer that is certainly queer. The dealer said that a man brought the wheel in in good shape and asked a very small price for it, and that he, the dealer, thinking it had been stolen, would not buy it. The man swore it had not been stolen, and offered to let it remain there until he was satisfied. He had kept it through the winter and never a sign of any claimant; hence he had Springwell is at a loss to account for the strange occurrence. He is utterly unable to say what could have been the cause, save on the hypothesis that some man was murdered while on it, and that it has thus become haunted. However that may be, the fact remains that the cyclometer registers of its own accord a little over three miles every night .--Buffalo Express.

Mystic Attributes of Number Nine. It is by nines that eastern presents are given when made on a scale of great magnificence. "To the nines" expresses a state of perfection, as "dressed up to the nines." Chancer, Haywood and Shakespeare speak of a nine days' wonder; a cat has nine lives; a tailor is the ninth part of a man; Shakespeare makes Hotspur cavil on the ninth part of a hair; it was a number of magical power dear to witches, as we read in "Macbeth:" Shakespeare again has the "Nine Sibyls of Old Rome;" we have the games of nine men's morris and ninepins; the butcher bird is called the nine killer, from its habit of impaling nine of animals on which it feeds before it begins its meal: the nine of diamonds is called the curse of Scotland; there were nine muses, nine planets; nine orders of angels-angels, archangels, virtues. powers, principalities, dominions, thrones, cherubim, seraphim; the Etruscans had nine gods, who alone had the power of hurling thunderbolts; the Novensiles were the nine Sabine gods; the novendial ashes were the ashes of the dead buried on the ninth day; the nine worthies were Hector, Alexander, Julius Cæsar, Joshua, David, Judas, Maccabæus, Arthur, Charlemagno and Godfrey of Bouillon; there were, too, nine worthies of London, v/hose chronicles were written by R. Johnson in the sixteenth century; every ninth wave, as Tennyson sings, is said to be the largest, and last, not least, possession is nine points of the law. Pythagoras made three the perfect number; nine was consecrated by Buddhism and is revered by the Moguls and Chinese. -Westminster Gazette. Leather Covered Pianos. A decided novelty in the way of piano casing—the invention of a Milwaukee music dealer-is on exhibition in the University building, Broadway. After several years of study and experiment the inventor hit upon leather as the most attractive as well as the most durable article for incasing pianos. The instrument was built in Buffalo. The color of the leather selected for the first specimen instrument was a rich black, handsomely embossed, giving the impression of exquisite carving. Not only does the imstrument thus incased present a most attractive and dignified appearance, but it has the advantage of being something in finish that cannot be marred or spotted. -Milwaukee Wisconsin.

All This Half Savage Father Lives For Is to Kill Walrus. "Did you ever hear of a strong, able bodied man going crazy from grief?" asked Captain Debney of the steamship

City of Puebla, on the water front yesterday. "I don't mean one of your highly sensitive creatures," continued he, hut a man 6 feet 4 inches in his stockings, and as strong as an ox. Of such a man I heard during my last trip to the sound. He is a Russian Finn and is sensible on every subject save one. He has a vendetta against the walrus, and his cabin in the wilds of Alaska is built up with their skulls. "According to the story told me by a passenger who came down with me from the sound, this man settled in Alaska years ago. He married a native woman, and she bore him a son. A few years later the mother died, and all the affection of the half savage father centered on the son. Nothing was too good for the lad, and everything in the way of hunting and fishing lore was taught

"When the boy was old enough, his father took him out on all his hunting expeditions and soon the youngster began working on his own account.

The hours never went so slowly as they did during the week that the Englishman waited for the night that was to bring him glory and a settlement of his board bill. At last the fateful evening came, and the man from across the sea hied him to the saloon where in a big back room the mill was to be decided.

He stood up in the center of the ring and bowed gracefully as a seasick elephant, The master of ceremonies bellowed, "Mr. Bill Lambkin of Birmingham, England." and then, "Mr. Henri Pijette of Montreal." Duchess and Fishwife, An old fishwife, one of the order that was more frequently seen a dozen years ago than today, and who runs about barelegged in a very brief tartan petticoat, with a creel of fish upon her shoulders, had been often promised by an ally in the servants' hall that she should some time see the young duchess in her own home. E. work h, I know that every Endeavorer has answered this question by saying that the business meeting is a part of the C. E. work. The plans for securing new members are still more necessary in the C. E. than in other societies. For it seems much easier to get any one to unite with a society where they study about some noted lecturer, author or country, than it does to study the life of our Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. We need our officers, for every society must have a head. If each one did not have their work assigned them; I am afraid very little would be accomplished, for you know the old saying, What is every one's business is no one's business What is the business of our Commitbring them what they earned, but after tees? Each one has its duties to perall their endeavors, they have been disappointed and the prize has gone to men of inferior merits, as if in contempt form, and they are all very important toward helping to build up the society. Prayer meeting committee, to provide leaders and see that the meetings are made interesting. I have heard of but one church society where they did not appoint a leader. This was in a Sabbath school where they did not have any officers or teachers, but they depended upon the inspiration of the honr to move some one to speak - I have often thought that if we waited, in our society, for some one to lead without preparing before the meeting we would accomplish but little . This committee is often called the guiding spirit of the society. Then we might put the lookout committee next. This is the strengthening committee, and upon it a great deal depends wheth, er your society is moving on or falling backward. The missionary committee must stir the society up along its line of work. For it seems more difficult to have people interested in something that they cannot see. For instance, Foreign missions. Our society is turning its attention to home missions, just at present, such tar buying wood and providing clothing for some of the less fortunate ones in our midst. Then the social committee, last but not least by any means. To help keep up the social life of the society; to welcome strangers, to make them feel that we need them and want them to come again. These are the four principal committees. Of course we have a few minor committees that we could not get along without. For we must have the united efforts of all. We must have the same aim, act at all times and be united. This is not work just every day in the year. Each one can do a great deal of the Lord's work alone. But by having our business meetings, we plan together, pray to gether, and bring our united efforts to bear upon one great object, bringing members into the Christian Endeavor, and this means saying souls. for Christ. Each Christian Endeavor should make it their business, at all times, to hold up the Cross and

The Christmas edition of the Kalamazoo Daily Telegraph reflects great credit upon a daily that is second to none in the state.

The suggestion that Gov. John T. Rich be one of the delegates at large to the National Convention at St. Louis, is meeting with great favor throughout the state, and it is eminently fitting that one of the delegates should be our chief executive of the state.

Senator McMillan has received a letter from Col. Fred Grant, son of the late general, accepting an invitation to speak at the coming banquet of the Michigan club at Detroit, on Feb. 21. His subject will probably be "Our Country," Senator Burrows has received an invitation to make an address before the Lincoln club, at Columbus, O., on the date of their annual banquet,

The Monroe Doctrine

"With the existing colonies or dependencies of any Europe n power we have not interfered and shall not infere. But with the governments who have declared their independer coand maintained it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States.'

Speaker Reed's Committees. The committees as made up by Speaker Reed were announced Saturday. The Michigan appointments are Bishop, on military affairs, and private land claims; Corliss, on interstate and foreign commerce; Snover, on claims, and also on agriculture; Aitkins and Crump, on mines and mining; Spalding, on banking and currency, and on militia; Avery, on war claims; Stephenson, on public lands, and on river and harbor; Milnes, on District of Columbia; Linton, on post offices and post roads; Thomas, on elections, on invalid pensions, and expenditures in navy department; Crump, on manufactures.

THE STATE TAX,

Why it is Higher than Last Year. Our tax payers who have paid their taxes are wondering at the increase in the state and what has caused it. Gov. Rich, in an address before the State Grange at Lansing, last week, gives the following explanation as to the cause of the increase:

On Dec. 31, there was a minus balance of $66,894, and that $300,000 had to be borrowed to bridge over until the taxes could be collected. This was attributed to the vastly inadequate appropriations of the legislature of 1891. and the fact that the legislature of 1893 made appropriations of $172,000 without including taxing clauses in the bills, so that this amount could not be included in the tax levy. The legislature of 1893 was not aware of the condition of the treasury, or it would doubtless have remedied the matter at that time. As it did not, the last legislature found it necessary to provide for all deficiencies, as the honor of the state demanded that the debt be canceled at the earliest possible moment. R. G. Dun & Co's Weekly says: The strong Americanism of the President's message has given its character to the week. Popular feeling was profoundly moved, but excepting in stock and cotton markets, business was remarkably dull and scarcely affected Selling of securities held abroad was a natural first impulse, though the selllers are not unlikely in time to discover that no other securities are safer from international complications than the American. About 60,000 shares were sold on balance, making with bonds an aggregate market value of about $4,000,000. Cotton has declined a quarter, and wheat about two cents. The markets in this country do not set upon the theory that any interruption of foreign relations is to be expected, and European sellers of securities apparently set to insure themselves against apprehensions of their own. Coming at a time when nearly all product markets are inactive and industries unusually dull, the disturbance has affected values much less much less thin might have been ex-Nevertheless exchange rise; and as large exports of gold were anticipated this week prior to the President's message, it is not surprising that the outgo has been even larger, amounting for the week, it is now ex-good as new, at the lowest possible expenditure of money. There is, of course, a species of house cleaning in the spring, but it consists mainly in taking down bangings and taking up carpets and rugs, and in fact stripping the interior of everything except the articles of furniture of barest necessity. There is nothing left to obstruct the passageway of air through the window openings and through the rooms, and in fact after the spring undressing, as it may be termed, the house has a cooler appearance, and this is a great consideration in a cli-

All the furnishings and bric-a-brac which is now required in a fashionable interior are stowed away, and the winter clothes are also packed out of sight, and camphor is used freely. The family, or such fragments of it as remain in the city during the summer, then proceed to "camp out" in the denuded house.

Everybody, of course, is not out of town during the summer, although that is the common belief. A great many people spend the large proportion of the heated term in the city and enjoy the comforts of their home. But whether they go away or remain the practice of preparing the house for the summer, as above described, is a uni-

It can be readily understood that the task which confronts the housekeeper on her return to the city in the fall is rather a formidable one. This is what the society leaders are looking forward They must be replaced.

Unless one has the fortune of a Gould, and the recklessness of a "coal oil Johnny", a great deal of the time and thought must be devoted to the fitting up of a house for the fall and winter. It may be necessary to secure a new corps of servants, and to make other changes in the domestic arrangements. All this requires personal supervision, and the home coming of the society marks the beginning of a time of considerable anxiety and a good deal of hard work. This condition is common to all, whether they are a the head of a large estab ishment or one of rather humble dimensions.

It will be the object of these letters not only to briefly sketch the pest and present of the Hawaiian Islands' but to carry the reader directly into the private life of the people who inhabit them: their past and present government, the overthrow or monarchy, and the setting up of a republic will be narrated from a 1 or -political standpoint In this respect they will have a peculiar interest because in the coming presidential contest the question of annexation will be agitated. In the year 1889 he and his faithful companion went West with the hope of bettering his then fast declining strength, returning to Buchanan in the spring of 1894, with unimproved health, and strength nearly gone. But under the careful nursing and tender care of his loved companion and children, God spared him yet a little while to them, till fast Sabbath evening, Dec. 22, 1895, be passed from this world to be forever with the Lord. Death had no terror for him. The only sad thought associated with death was, that he would have to be separated from his loved ones for a little while, till God called them, too, home. Yet he longed to go to be at rest. Thus, with an unshaken trust and confidence in a savior's love and abiding presence, he lay down the "implements of warfare", at the age of LITERARY NOTES. A new and unique book entitled "Our Family," is coming from he press of Word and Works Pulishing Come My, St. Louis. It contains a new and novel form of family record, the invention of Rev. Irl R. Hicks. A number of bright essays by young people on "The Ideal Young Man" and The Ideal Young Woman" make up a part of the book. The book is well illustrated, the trontispiece, entitled "nto the Ibird and Fourth Generation," being a triumph of art. This book should be in every family. It is bound in full cloth with gold embossed design on cover. Price, $1.50.

The January number of Harper's Magazine contains the first installment of a new biography of Washington by Professor Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University. The opening paper is sumptuously illustrated from drawings by Howard Pyle. It is concerned chiefly with the condition of the colonies, more particularly with the condition of Virginia, at the time of Washington's birth. Professor Wilson has the historian's sense of persuactive but he supprographs his subject with a

A Surprise.

The Evangelical Church held their prayer meeting last night as usual, but there was something the matter with the people. They seemed anxious to get away, and the sequel was revealed afterwards. After Rev. F. C. Berger, the pastor, had returned to his home he was called upon by Rev. W. A. Koehler who had something very important to say to him. He was followed soon afterwards by about 40 or 50 of his members who brought a good supply of the necessaries of life. It was intended for a surprise and so it was. After about two hours of pleasant entertainment the party dispersed having assured the pastor and his wife of their good will and hearty wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New past seven months. If his statement had been carried back to January 17, 1894, the day the plant was started, the difference would have been still greater. On the other hand the expense account included what is paid Mr. East for keeping the books for the receiver, and several other items which do not belong to the necessary running expenses. Should the village purchase the plant, they would be safe in fignring for running expenses, two men at the station, $100; one man to trim lamps, make collections and keep books, and he can be hired for $70.

Nightwatch to open and close arc light switches, $1; carbons, $18, and incidentals, $7, A total of $196 per month, or $2352 yer year. Less than was shown by Mr. Graham's report, by making one man, for $70, do work now done by three at over $100. The plant now has 84 cousumers who pay $530.32, or for 12 months $6363.84, leaving a balance of $4011.84 as possible, net increase with the present rate of consumption. Of this balance, the village is now paying $1800 which being deducted leaves $2211.84, besides free
