col. Latimer, the squire's son and heir, inherited little of the peace-loving temper of his father. The first time he found his fences thrown down and the cattle in his fields, he armed himself with a heavy riding whip and went about nursing his wrath till his opportunity should arrive. Meeting Jeff Bynum in the street of Tregarthen, the indignant colonel proceeded to mete

The Colonel proceeded to meta out a measure of out to the yourger man such a measure of chastisement as he thought the case demanded, jaying for his ratisfaction a few days later with a broken arm, shattered by the bullet of an ambushed enemy. This incident was conducive to another interval of peace, for two reasons-it taught the colonel that unless he were willing to adopt the unscrupulous tactics of his antagonists he was likely to lose his life in an unequal contest; and the Bynums were restrained from further immediate aggressions by a fear of some such consequences as had overtaken their father. Col. Latimer was quite as popular in there had been ominous threats of another outburst of public indignation after the breaking of the colonel's arm -threats which were loud enough to cause the elder Bynum to disappear for a time, rumor said in Texas, The fire of enmity, however, was never suffered to die. There were fitful bursts of flame from time to time, and fresh fuel was added when the sleepy village of Tregarthen awoke one morning to find itself the headquarters of the Tregarthen Coal & Iron company. All of the coal and iron land on the mountain belonged originally to the Latimer estate, but the Bynums had disputed with the colonel the ownership to one of the coal veins which cropped out near the boundary of Me-Nabb's cove. They were defeated in the litigation that followed, and the old feud lost pone of its rancor by the deeision of the courts. When its right to the McNabb vein had been established the company had endeavored to open it, but the overhanging stratum of sandstone proved to be singularly intractaable, and the further development of the vein was postponed until such time as the depth of the other workings would make it less costly to timber the Me Nabb tunnel. Opinions varied as to the cause of the difficulty in the McNabb. Expert mining engineers had declared that the sandstone forming the roof of the tunnel was as tenacious as that overlying the other veins, and that there was no apparent reason why it should require timberir: but the indubitable fact remained: While "he work of development was in the labor of a week undone in a single night by a caving of the roof which Ludlow had its own theory about these mysterious accidents, but he kept it to himself. It was suggested by the smell of black powder which he detected one morning when he was examining the debris that had fallen during the miners were using dimamite; and it led to a series of casual inquiries among the dwellers in Harmony Valley near-progress, the miners frequently found filled the tunnel with broken rock. previous night. It struck him as being curious, because he knew that the est to the entrance to McNabb's Cove. The replies were not entirely convincing, because the nocturnal noises heard by the valley folk might have been nothing more than the concussion of the falling rock; but Ludlow heard enough to make him believe that when it became necessary to take coal from the McNabb vein a night-guard at the tunnel would possibly avert disaster more efficiently than the most elaborate system of timbering. It was during the progress of the law-suit that Jeff Bynum returned to the farm in McNabb's Cove; and the rumor which had pointed to Texas as the objective of his migration was confirmed by his own story of his wanderings. Not contented, however, with this tribute to its veracity, gossip again busied itself with his affairs, and there were vague hints of a lawless sojourn in the Lone Star state, coupled with a still more indefinite intimation that his career in the west had terminated in open crime. One other element of discord had been added by the passing years to the Latimer side of the feud, in the person of the colonel's son Henry. The boy's mother, to whose gentle influence the fireside gossips of Tregarthen ascribe the cessation of feudal strife during her short life at "The Laurels," died while Hester and Henry were children; and the boy had early learned the lesson of vindictiveness from the lips of overloyal servants. Uniting with a hasty and imperious temper a contempt of restraint curious in a descendant of the conservative old Virginian, his rashness became a constant menace to the precarious truce existing between the two families; and as Henry grew to manhood, the colonel was often reluctantly compelled to take the side of peace for the sake of setting an example before his son. In the case of the daughter, education in a boarding-school, where she had spent the greater portion of her girlhood, and, later, association with the Ludlows, had done much to modify her childish ideas of feudal vengeance; but she was still enough of a partisan to be very warm in her defense of the Latimer rights, and, in common with her brother, she could never believe that anything but vindictive malice | he ever did, nohow." actuated the doings of the family in McNabb's Cove. "Don't you think you are a little inclined to judge them harshly, my dear?" Mrs. Ludlow had once ventured to ask, when Hester had been expressing her contempt for the Bynums and everything connected with them. "No, ma'am, I'm not. If you knew them as well as we do, you wouldn't ask such a question." "I don't know them at all, but from what you tell me I gather that they are poor and ignorant, and that they have had much the worst of the fight all along. Can't you be a generous enemy?" "They never give one a chance to be generous. You've no idea how mean they are. I've heard old Aunt Betty tell how mamma tried to make peace when old Mrs. Bynum was sick. Mamma sent a basket of jellics and dainties down to the cove, and the next morning the basket and everything in it was found on our doorstep, smashed into

"That was certainly vindictive—and childish. Still I think you might forgive even that." "It isn't a question of forgiveness. You don't understand, because you've never been brought in contact with such people. And as to their having had the worst of it, there is a question about that. They made poor Grandfather Latimer's life miserable, and I shall always believe that John Bynum killed him at last. Besides that, they've always been annoying and worrying us in ways that forbid retaliation because we couldn't demean ourselves to pay them back in their own coin. No. I don't think they've had the worst of it." When Mrs. Ludlow reported this conversation to her husband he smiled and said: "I wouldn't meddle with that quarrel, if I were you; it's pretty deeply ingrained on both sides, and I shall be surprised if it doesn't come to a pitched battle some day. If the colonel had a suspicion of what I found out about the trouble in the McNabb tunnel, I wouldn't care to answer for the consequences; and as for Henry, it'll be a miracle if he doesn't get himself killed in the row. He has the courage of a veteran, joined to the rashness of a headstrong boy; and he's as good n hater as any of the Bynums."

"It's a great pity," rejoined peaceable

Mrs. Ludiow. "It gives one an uncomfortable feeling of living over a volcano that may burst out at any moment. Isn't there any way to put a stop to it?" "Only one that I can think of, and that's been tried. It occurred to me some time ago that the family in the cove might be peaceably deported if the Bynum farm could be purchased, his way as had been the squire; and | and I suggested it to some of our peoule in New York, with the caution that the colonel mustn't be told of it until the purchase was a fact accomplished. They put the matter in the hands of our attorneys and told them not to haggle about the price. I don't know how the negotiations were conducted, but I imagine the Bynums found out that the company was in the deal and they refused point-blank to sell at any price. That settled it, and it means that they propose to stay and fight it out. There'll be a fight, too, when we try to open the McNabb vein; and I hope we can keep the Latimers out of it." "But you mustn't get into it yourself, Tom," interposed Mrs. Ludlow. Ludlow smiled grimly. "You think I wouldn't cut much of a figure as a fire eater, don't you? Well, now, you just wait and see. When the time comes I'll not go out of my way to pick a quarrel or to avoid one; but if those fellows interfere with the work they'll have to stand from under. And they'll find that they haven't a whole-souled. irascible, generous southerner to deal with, either." It was during the summer of Ringbrand's visit to Tregarthen that the question of resuming work in the abandoned tunnel came up again. Jeff Bynum heard the news in the store in the village, and he told his brother Jed when they were driving back to the cove in the evening. "Does you-all aim to 'low hit?" asked the younger Bynum. "Not much!-they-all done beat us out o' the coal mine, but it ain't gwine do them no good." "What d'ye 'low for to do, Jeff?" "Nev' you mind; you-all jest wait an' see. Ye can be plum shore o' one thing, though; they-all ain't nev' gwine take no coal out o' that vein.'

"Don't ye reckon ol' Latimer's put 'em up to do hit?" "I dunno an' I don't keer; but I jest tell ye that thar crowd up on the mounting's gwine to let on like they heard somethin' drap; we-all 've kep' quiet for a pretty tol'able spell, now, an' l reckon Latimer 'lows we done forgot.' "I reckon Jule wouldn't let nobody forgit; she does hate the Latimers right; but then she'd ought to-she was big enough to rie'leet when daddy was killed." Jed Bynum was the youngest of the three brothers, and he had never quite shared the bitter animosity of the others. "I can ric'lect on my own account I reckon," rejoined Jeff, sullenly, a dull flush reddening his sallow checks. "I ain't likely to forgit the day when Latimer put the cowhide on to me, an' I low he remembers bout the broken arm, too. I nev' could tell what made my han' shake that thar time. I didn't nim to break his arm." "I s'pect hit's sort o' lucky ye didn't aim no better," replied Jed. "Thar was a heap o' talk about gettin' ye for what ye did do." The talk was interrupted by their arrival at the farmhouse in the cove, but it was resumed again at the supper table when Jule and Bud were told of the threatened resumption of work in the McNabb tunnel.

"That's some more o' Latimer's doin's, ye can jest chalk that up on the do'!" exclaimed the woman, vindictive-"Thar'll ney' be no peace for weall 's long as thar's ary one of 'em left!" "Thar's like to be one more of 'em 'fore they's any less, I reckon," said Jeff, making a harpoon of his fork and spearing another corn pone from the dish on the other side of the table. "How d'ye make that out?" inquired

"I done saw a young feller a-ridin' round with the colonel this evenin', an' when I asked Jim Dobles bout him he said he was mighty thick with the timers-'lowed maybe he's a-shinin' up to the gal." "I didn't see him," said Jed. "What for kind o' lookin' feller was he?" "Sort o' biggity-lookin', like he mought 've jest got out of a ban'-box; has a middlin' heavy musstache, an' wears his beard whittled down to a p'int. That's about all I notice', 'ceptin' that he looks at ye mighty hard, sort o' like a catfish. Seem like I done met up with him somewhars afore, but I cayn't ric'lect when 'r whar." "City feller, I reckon." said Jed, with contempt in his tone. "Oh, sure; don't believe he ever did a lick o' work in his life; don't look as if "I don't see what a gal like Hester Latimer 'lows to find in a feller o' that sort," said Jed, passing his cup for more coffee. "What do you-all know bout Hester Latimer's likes an' dislikes?" demanded his sister, pausing with the cup and coffee-pot suspended. "A good deal less 'n nothin', I s'pose:

but I've got eyes, an' I reckon I can use 'em same's anybody." "Well, don't ye go an' forgit that they ain't no sheep's eyes," retorted Jule, angrily. "You ain't got no call to be th'owin' 'em round at anybody that's kin to

A ravenous silence followed this remark, and when Bud left the table he said to Jeff: "Want to see ye bime-by: come outside when ye get th'oo." Jeff lighted his pipe a moment later and followed his younger brother to the barn. "What was ye wantin', Buddy?" he asked. "'Bout that thar city feller-don't ye reckon we-all could give him a sort of a scare that 'd run him back whar he

"I dunno. Why?" "Oh, I jest reckoned hit'd be better. If we-all ever do what ve was talkin' bout a spell back, hit'll be some easier if they ain't so many of 'em." "You're plum right about that; but then thar ain't nothin' shore 'bout what Jim Dobles was a-savin; he only 'lowed maybe that's what was a-goin' on." "That don't make no difference, nohow," argued Bud. "If he's got any fight in him, he'll stand up for his frien's, an' if we can run him out'forehan' we're jest that much ahead. You're plum shore he ain't a revenuer?" "Oh, I reckon not; from what I could pick up down at the settlement, I 'lowed bo's some feller that Tora Ludlow 'd knowed back in the north; he's a-stoppin' at Ludlow's now. Talkin' about revenuers, though, hit moughtn't be sich a bad idee to let on like the boys done took him for one; hit 'd sort o' make the scare come more natchel like."

The brothers smoked in silence for a few moments, and then began to discuss a plan suggested by the younger. While they talked the stars came out one by one and the shadows deepened in the cove until they lay black and brooding over the thickets on the sides of the mountain. With the drawing of the curtain of darkness the noises of the right began—the drone of the jar fly passing with the fading light into the chirping of the cricket and the shrill song of the tree-toads. Threading the irregular voices of nature with the measured pulse of human effort, the rhythmic beat of the blowing engines at the Tregarthen furnace vibrated upon the still air; and at intervals a dull red glare appearing above

"Who's that?" queried Jeff, peering intently into the darkness. "Hit's only Jed, I reckon," was the reply. "Whar's he goin' at this time o' night?" "I dunno; goin' to soak his haid in the creek, maybe. I more 'n half believe, sometimes, that he's gettin' foolish 'bout the Latimer gal; he nev' did have much sense, nohow. But, as I was a-sayin'--" And the talk dropped back into the channel from which Jed's appearance had diverted it.

The two men sat on a log behind the barn, facing the cliff at the head of the core. Had they been gifted with the visual powers of the owl which hooted dismally from the top of a blasted oak standing in the adjacent corn-field, they might have discerned, half an hour later, a black speck zigzagging up the bace of the apparently inaccessible cliff. It was Jed, and when he reached the summit just under the shadow of the tree that years before had borne such ghastly fruit, he turned his face southward and walked rapidly toward 'The Laurels." "Do you know, Mr. Ringbrand, that I've always had a persistent and hauniing impression that we've met somewhere before?" Ringbrand was spending the evening at the Latimers as usual, and they were all sitting in the starlight on the veranda of "The Laurels."

"You mean before I came to Tregarhen, Miss Hester?" "Yes, it might have been ages ago." Ringbrand smiled under cover of the darkness. "Perhaps it was. Do you believe in transmigration?" "I think not," she answered doubt-fully. "I believe in the creed." "May I ask what creed?" "I'd think you'd be ashamed to, when there is only one-or, at most,

"I stand corrected. Would it be her-again, do you know that I have an exactly similar one? I am almost positive that you are right. Can't you help me solve the mystery?" "What's that you-all are talking about?" inquired the colonel, knocking the ashes from his long-stemmed pipe and crushing a dry tobacco leaf in the palm of his hand for a fresh charge. "Miss Hester was just saying she thought we'd seen each other somewhere before I came to Tregarthen, and I'm almost sure she's right. We were trying to locate the time and place." "Oh, I reckon it's just imagination," replied the colonel, packing the tobacco dust into the bowl of his pipe. "That is,

JACKSON, Mich, April 8.-Four Addison, Mich., married men fixed up a story about being called to Moscow, Mich., on business. One of the men's wives happened to know there was a masquerade ball that night at Moscow. She hired a livery rig and had the Lill charged to her husband. Then she drove around and told the other three women what she suspected They got into other garments at once, drove to the town, purchased masks and went to the ball and danced all night. Although the Judge Says the Evidence Is Positive of Guilt.

DETROIT, April 2.—No conviction was had in the United States court in the trial of John C. Bodewig, George W. Johnson and Earnest M. Jewett, three of the men who are alleged to have been concerned in the wrecking of a Chicago and Grand Trunk train at Battle Creek July 16, 1894, during the great American Railway Union striko. The indictments charged the respondents with having conspired to delay the United States mail by pouring soft soap on the track of the railway and by removing a rail from the track, which latter resulted in a wreck in which Fireman Thomas Crowe was

The jury retired at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and at 8:30 announced that they had agreed to acquit Jewett, but disagreed as to the other two. Judge Swan sent them back, remarking that the evidence was positive and convincing. At 10:30 last night the jurors again announced inability to agree and were dis-

Favor of E. M. Jewett. DETROIT, April 2. - The jury in the case of the federal government against John C. Bodewig, George M. Johnson, and Ernest M. Jewett, who were charged with conspiracy to obstruct the mails during the great A R. U. strike in 1894, Thursday returned a verdict declaring Jewett not guilty and disagreeing as to the other two defendants. Judge Swau in charging the jury said that the court regarded the evidence in the case convincing. This case grew out of the wreck of train No. 6 on the Grand Trunk railroad just west of Battle Creek at 3 o'clock in the morning of July 16, 1894. It was claimed that strikers had unbolted the fishplates and thus caused the wreck. Afterward Bodewig, Johnson and Jewett were arrested upon United States warrants charging them with conand July 16.

Charges Against an Alderman DETROIT, April 2.-Colonel E. E. Myers, a well-known architect, and his son, George W. Myers, have made affidavit that Alderman John C. The percentage amounts to $40,000. The Meyers refused and another firm, J. E. Scott & Co., secured the plum. The alderman denics the charge strenuously. An official investigation is on Normal Sunday School Lesson. APRIL 12, 1896. Luke 14:15-24.

Central text, verse 17. Lesson topics, rejecting Christ. I must limit my notes in this very important lesson to a brief statement of what I consider its main points:

1. The broad invitation of the Gospel, "A great supper and bade many," God is anxious that all men be saved; whesoever will may come.

2. Special preparation has been made, "Come, for all things are now ready." Salvation, through Christ, is full, free and complete. Men and women are lost, not because of any preparation. power or willingness on God's part, but because of their own willful rejection of Christ.

3. The very fact that men are so ingenious in framing excuses is, in itself, a proof that they are convinced that they ought to come to Christ. It is only when the heart has become thoroughly hardened that men defiantly and boldly reject salvation. 4. Property, business and pleasure, are the three great hindrances in the way of souls today. Men foolishly put the paltry values of a day over against the sclemn destiny of their immortal souls, and are lost. It is surprising how trifling are the things that men put between men and themselves and Christ, selling their birthright for a mess of pottage.

"A finger's breadth at hand may mar A world of light in heaven afar, A mote eclipse a glorious star."

5. It is the holy duty of the church today, to press Gospel invitation upon he attention of all men. Men and women today are perishing for the want of the Gospel, and Christians are not doing what they ought to do, in going out into the highways and hedges. How true it is, that we were more importunate with God in prayer, Kilduff, Ia., was kicked by a horse and and more importunate with men in personal invitation, many would be brought into the Kingdom. God help us to do our full duty in this work.

A Wake-Up, A Chicago boy has set an example well worthy of imitation; or, rather, his new-found calling suggests a need in a great many spheres. A man engaged this boy to come to his house and wake him up regularly every morning. Another man heard of it, and engaged the boy to wake him up. This is a sufficient hint for the young American with an eye to business. He solicited, and soon secured numerous "customers". He has given up his position and devotes his time now to waking people up. Suppose we create a new office, that of a Waker up. Is it possible that any of our religious or church bodies need such an officer, to go about waking up watchmen who have fallen asleep on the towers of Zion? Could it be possible that there are pastors who would like to employ such a person to call upon some of the church officers and other members? We are quite certain there are some Sunday school superintendents who need such services. Perhaps in some of our backward states the cause of the backwardness would be found in the fact that the Wakerup has not passed their way since some of the officers fell asleep two or three liary adapted to this position; in fact, there are persons who are good at stiring people up, and we should utilize them even if they are insufficient in other service. Concurrent Resolution No. 6, approved Marc: 26, 1885, requests the Governor to call the attention of the peoble of this state to the importance of planting trees for ornament, by nam ing a day upon which this work shall be given special attention, to be known as "Atbor Day."

In accordance with the above resolution and with the long established custom of our state,

FRIDAY, MAY 1, 1896, is hereby designated as "Arbor Day." The people are earnestly requested to observe the day by setting out trees, shrubs and vines about their nomes and upon our highways and public

The exercises in our public schools upon that day should be of a character that will impress upon the minds of our youth the material benefits derived from its observance. By precept and example our teachers should lead in a work that will not only bring its re-ward to them, but remain as an incentive for future generations to beautify and adorn our fair state. Our rapidly diminishing forests and the increased demand for shade and ornamental trees has caused the organization of 'Forestry Associations', whose purpose is to preserve the forests and educate the people in the science of forestry. The organizations deserve encouragement, and it is to be hoped their numbers will multiply. This occasion is taken to urge the pre sentation of tie shade trees which now stand along our country roads. They may damage the growing crop slightly, but in beauty, shade and protection frem the winds, they repay the damage they do many times over. GIVEN UNDER MY HAND, and the Great Seal of the State, at the Capital, in Lansing, this twenty-sixth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninetysix, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and Four hundred have professed noted workers; has held meetings in most of the large cities in this country England and Scotland, and presched sometimes to audiences of three thousand. He is a man of great humility and faith in God, and his plain, solemn preaching is full of the holy spirit, and very effectual. While singing one of the hymns, Sunday night, he asked all in sympathy with it to wave their leon Bonaparte, Gibbon's Decline and ald, peo, 91, S Bradley, peo, 86, H Nei- handkerchiefs. From our Regular, Corresponden.t April 8, 1896. The funeral services of A. B. Wright were held at the house, Monday, at 10 a. m. The body was interred in Forest Lawn cemetery.

The last entertainment of the Lecture Course was given, last evening, by home talent. It was a complete success, and was pronounced the best or the season. The township election at this place went off quietly. There were two parties in the field, the Republican and the Peoples. The result was a victory to the Republicans, their entire tickets with exception of Highway Commissioner being elected, with majorities ranging from 12 to 70. The following officers officers were elected: Supervisor, D. H. Beeson: Clerk, Isaian Rynearson; Treasurer, H. L. Hess: Justice of the Peace (full term), Geo. L. Stevens; Justice of the Peace (3 years, fill vacancy) James M. Otwell; Highway Commissioner, F. L. Thaldorf; School Inspector, F. F. Platt, Clarerce Morton, Wm. Noller and Wm. II.

The Rev. Geo. Johnson. The Rev. Geo. Johnson finished his first conference year here yesterday. His stay has been marked with many improvaments in the interior of the church, a parsonage has been built, the membership of the church increased nearly fifty per cent, and the attendance sixty per cent. But above and beyond the material improvements to the property under his special care, it must be conceded that be is one of the most popular partors of the city, and his capacity for doing good is second to no man's. Rev. Johnson is every inch the man whom to know is to respect and honor. He has been willing, even anxious to accept every opportunity to render spiritual comfort to al., the rich and poor alike, the righteous and criminal, and his kind and sympathetic words of consolation have often been heard above the remains of the loved one about to be consigned to the lust from which all mankind sprang. We feel that we are just beginning to get acquainted with Rev. Johnson, and his mesticds and desires to heal the wounds of the soul, and we sincerely hope that his labors in the Master's vineyard may be as harmonious and successful wherever he may be called, as they have been in this city, and that he wid still remain in the city and be one of us for many years to come.—St.

Joe *Pres*s March 31. A Pension Bill of Interest to Old Soldiers.

Our member of Congress has introduced in the House a bill in the interest of the old soldiers, Section 1 of the bill provides that in all cases of application for an increase of pension where the applicant shall file with the same the proper testimony he shall without delay be entitled to a medical examination, and if the application be favorably received his increase shall date from the time of filing the claim. Section 2 provides for full reports by the medical referee in such cases to he commissioner. Section 3 makes the testimony of the attending physician effective in establishing the claim "unless the medical referee shall show by pathological reasons, supported by medical authority, that such resulting disabilities (or cause of death in applications by widows and minors) were in all probability the result of something else not of service origin." Section 4 provides for the granting of claims of widows and minors in cases where the soldier dies of any disease not determined yet which in all probability is due to his enfeebled condition caused by ailments, injuries or wounds received in service. In section 5 the phrase "total disability" is construed to refer to "a total disability for the performa ce of manual labor requiring severe and continuous exertion." This act is designed to make it eases for really deserving ex-soldiers to sccure Government aid in their declining years and its passage would be only common justice towards the fast aging

A Paying Investment. Values of the Properties Enhanced by Village Improvement.

"The property owners of a village cannot make a better paying investment than in the maintenance of a well-organized Improvement Society," writes John Gilmer Speed in April Ladies' Home Journal. "Through such a society the value of every piece of property in a village, and the neighborhood thereof, may be enhanced alue; village life may be made to tal on new interests and new dignities; stagconversion. He has labored with nation may be kindled into an exhibitanting Moody, Talmage, P. P. Bliss, and other activity. Let the people become interested in a Village Improvement Society and they gratifying alertness. They will discuss how best to secure a public library; they will talk over the ways and means of get ting running water into the town; they will argue over the best way of establishing a fire department; they will study drainage and sanitation; they will recognize the value of street lights when the moon is shining on another part of the world: and when they vote on these questions they will vote with entire intelligence, and they will go away from the meetings what they have done."

ESTES & LAURIAT, Publishers, Bostox, Mass)

The Arl Amateur for April appears in the form of a special Blue and White Easter Number; a new design, incorporated with the old, gives to the cover, which is printed in a range of Delft Blues, a remarkably effective and handsome appearance. The Supplements and the advertisements are also printed in blue. The contents are appropriate to the season of Easter; a beautiful head of The Christ forming the frontispiece, and the supplements containing designs for an Easter Stile, an Alms Dish Mat, and for the decoration of Easter Eggs. The entire number is furthermore permeated with spring motives in every department of decoration; good examples for wood-carvers and workers in bent iron, with full descriptive treatments abound. The color supplements, one by Mrs. F. V. Redmond, a brilliant lesson in "Still Life' will be popular with students of water-color, and the other a blue and white picture "In the Scheldt," by C. Volkmar, will be welcomed by china painters and others, fully eustain the reputation enjoyed by The Art Amateur in this department. Altogether the April number is parti-ularly "live" and "up to due?" and shows that now is the time to avail of the special $2.00 offer which the proprietor is making to sy mountles subscribers. A pastime in which all the cats delight is hide and seek behind the pil lows of a bed or sofa. In the drawing room there are some old fashioned divans against the wall with several cushions set upright, which have been the playground of generations of pets; the mothers begin by playing with their kittens, the kittens keep it up together, and teach it to younger sets. The point of the game is which shall see the other first and surprise her by a cuff on the nose, which stands for "I spy." When two play, it is simple enough, but when there are three or four one always remains outside the cushions to seek, and by degrees the little pink nosed white faces peep between the cushious with the inimitable and provocative expressions of a kitten at play, and the seeker is surprised by a tap. If she be on the alert, the hider sometimes vanishes, and sometimes they try which can get with-

She would hide on the window sill behind the long winter curtains which are dropped in the evening, and would peep out at one side or between them and mew, popping back again as we called, "I see you." She never tired of this slipping unseen from window to window to vary the surprise until we had more than enough of it. -Temple Mrs. McSwat's Husband's Suggestion. "The Woman's club is going to discuss parliamentary law tomorrow evening, Billiger," remarked Mrs. McSwat,

"and I don't think I shall go. I don't take any interest in it." "Parliamentary law, Lobelia," said Mr. McSwat magisterially, "is something you can't know too much about. You ought to familiarize yourself thoroughly with its usages. A clear understanding of parliamentary law," he went on, warming with his subject, "would be useful in all the relations of life. If I were asked to name one thing, Lobelia, that is calculated to add self reliance to character, assist in solving the problems that arise from day to day, and make the burden of life less''-"Now, what is the use of your going on like that, Billiger?" interrupted Mrs. McSwat. "What good would it do me to study parliamentary law, I'd like to know? "You would learn not to talk when you are not in order," replied Billiger, burying himself in his newspaper again And Mrs. McSwat went out to the kitchen and talked in a loud and expostulatory tone of voice to Bridget for the next 15 minutes. - Chicago Tribune.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Votes Cast in Michigan, Iowa, Ohio and Illinois.

CONTESTS OVER LOCAL ISSUES.

Republicans Show Gains in Some Towns in Ohio and Michigan, and in Others Democrats Poll an Unexpectedly Large Vote and Carry the Day-Samuel Dickie, the Prohibitionist, Elected Mayor of Albion. Mich.-The Result in Iowa.

DETROIT, April 7.-Fine weather and a big vote is the consensus of the reports received from township and city elections throughout Michigan Monday. The voting during the earlier hours was much heavier than usual at the spring elections. All Michigan cities elected officers with the exception of Detroit and Port Huron. The elections resulted in Democratic gains in many of the smaller cities, and in some cases unexpectedly decisive Democratic victories. The townships, for the most part, retain their Republican majories, although these were also cut down in a few cases. Although local issues predominated in many towns, politics cut a decided figure in nearly all cases, and Democratic gains were the rule, generally speaking.

Dickie Elected Mayor. Professor Samuel Dickie, the Prohibitionist national leader, was elected mayor of Albion, by 13 plurality over McCutcheon, Democrat, the issue being between the Prohibition and liquor elements. In Saginaw the Democrats elected their entire city ticket, and seventeen aldermen, Baum for mayor receiving a majority of 1,700. Kalamazoo and Owosso went Republican by decisive majorities. Sault Ste. Marie elected all Republicans, a reversal of the result of a year ago. Manistee, Flint, Grand Haven, Stanton, St. reversing last year's majorities. Escanaba elected Gallup, Rep., by 800 majority. At Other Places.

everything in sight, with the possible exception of mayor. The result on the head of the ticket is very close, and will require the official count to determine. The city of Downgiac elects W. D. Jones, Dem., mayor, majority, 160; A. M. Moon, Dem., recorder, majority, 176; Richard Holmes, Rep., treasurer, majority, 240. At Bay City the R publicans elect Allan, justice; Smith, bridge commissioner: six aldermen, seven supervisors and six constables. The Democrats elect Marsac, recorder; four aldermen, five constables and four supervisors. Jackson elected Richardson, Rep., mayor by 176 majority; Caldwell, Dem., recorder, 165 majority; Wood, Rep., justice by 288 majority.

Average Democratic Gains Shown Over Last Fall's Election. CINCINNATI, April 7. - Exceptionally

pleasant weather prevailed over southern Ohio Monday for the municipal and township elections. Women voted for members of school boards, and some of | They Attack the Italian Native Battalion that sex were elected, but the percentage of women voting was small. The returns show on the average Democratic gains largest Republican plurality. No political issues were at stake anywhere outside of the control of local affairs. Some towns and townships have gone Democratic for the first time since the presidential election of 1832. There was no elec-tion in Cincinnati, but the suburban returns show Democratic gains over last

At Cleveland the election was for a school director, three directors of the school council and eleven members of the city council. The Republicans elected all their candidates with the exception of one councilman by pluralities of 7,000 and upward. The Democrats will now have bu three members of the city council out of twenty-two, two of them being holdovers. At Sandusky and Freemont the Democrats made so all gains. The election at Toledo resulted in a clean Republican victory, notwithstanding a bitter faction al fight among the Republicans.

In the Hawkeye State. DES MOINES, April 7 .- The Republicans of this city elected John MacVicar mayor over C. C. Loomis, Dem. The election at Keokuk resulted in a Republican victory, that party electing the assessor, A. V. Hoagland, by 147 majority, a gain of 73 on the vote for assessor over a vear ago. Aldermanic contests resulted two Democrats, a Republican gain of one, the new council standing eight Republicans and four Democrats. Thomas T. Duffy, Dem., nominated by the citizens and indorsed by the Republicans, was elected mayor of Dubuque. Exciting School Election. BLOOMINGTON, Ills., April 7 .- The election of members of the city school board Monday was an exciting event. The women participated in large numbers The victorious candidates are: Colvin Rayburn, F. M. Funk, and Mrs. Stephen Akers. Rayburn and Funk are present members and Mrs. Akers was a member some years ago. Horace G. Bent, a mem-ber of the present board, was defeated, The result is being celebrated by the American Protective association as a victory for the organization.

Found His Mother Dead. CARMEL, N. Y., April 7.-Mr. Hart Curry of Baldwin Place drove to the residence of his mother, near Lake Mahonac. He found her dead. She had been living in New Jersey and moved back on her farm last week. She had a fire built in a Globe coal stove in her bedroom, where she and a young negress slept. Both were asphyxiated by the coal gas from the stove. Mrs. Curry was found in the bed and the negress on the floor. The latter had been badly eaten about the face by rats. Mohawk River Gorged. UTICA, N. Y., April 2.-The Mohawk river is gorged below Canajoharie, and the New York Central road between Fort Blain and St. Johnsville has been washed trains on that road to take the West Shore tracks. Trains from the east are seriously delayed. A portion of Herkimer village is under water, the gasworks are flooded and people are obliged to go about in boats. THE HOUSE ADOPTS THE REPORT OF THE CONFERREES.

CUBAN RESOLUTIONS.

There Were Twenty-Seven Negative Votes Cast, Eighteen of Them Republicans-The House Also Passes the River and Harbor Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 6.-There was a very large attendance in the galleries of the house Monday to witness the final action on the Cuban resolutions and in anticipation of an exciting contest over the attempt to be made to pass the river and harbor bill under the suspension of the rules. Under the agreement made on Saturday the vote on the adoption of the report of the conferrees on the Cuban resolutions was the first thing in order after the reading of the journal. Hitt demanded the regular order. The speaker put the question on the resolution of the conference report. The great swelling chorus of ayes was followed by a feeble, scattering negative vote and the speaker was about to declare the motion carried when Hitt asked for the yeas and nays. Yielding to the appeals of many members, however, he withdrew it.

Boutelle Remained Quiet. Boutelle, who had made himself conspicuous by his opposition to the report made no effort to secure the year and nays and the report would have been declared adopted had not Tucker, a member of the foreign affairs committee, who has opposed the Cuban resolutions, at this juncture stepped forward and demanded a record making vote, and the roll was called. The report was adopted-244 to 27. The announcement was greeted with a great demonstration on the floor, which was taken up by the galleries. who voted in the negative were as follows: Republicans—Arnold, Rhode Island; Atwood, Black, New York; Boutelle, Daniels, Draper, Gillet, New York; G.Ilet, Massachusetts; Grout, Lefever, Mc-Call, Massachusetts; Moody, Poole, Simp-kins, Wadsworth, Walker, Massachusetts; Walker, Virginia; and Wright-18. Democrats—Berry, Black, Georgia; Cul-berson, Ellett, Elliott, Lockhart, Tucker, Turner, Georgia; and Taylor-9. River and Harbor Bill Passed.

As soon as the Cuban resolutions were out of the way Hooker of New York, chairman of the river and harbor committee, moved to suspend the rules and pass the river and harbor bill. He asked that the reading of the bill be dispensed with, but Richardson of Tennesses objected to passing a bill carrying millions of dollars without the formality of reading it. The river and harbor appropriation bill was passed under suspension of the rules by a rising vote of 216 to 40, the opposition not being strong enough to secure a yea and tract and Other Things. SAN FRANCISCO, April 6.-A sensational story in an evening paper states that Mrs. Nettie Craven, a public school principal and witness to the late James G. Fair's so-called "peneilled" will, has a marriage contract in which the dead millionaire acknowledges her as his wife. It is also said that Mrs. Craven has deeds to several valuable pieces of real estate property, including some of the most valuable property comprised in the Fair estate. Another of Mrs. Craven's valuable ossessions is a check for $100,000 signed by James G. Fair and made payable to Dr. Marc Levigston, executor of the "pencilled" will. Across the check is written the clause "Not to be presented until after the probate of the will." Mrs. Craven, it is stated, also has a letter in Fair's handwritting, the contents constituting a republication of the "pencilled" will.

FALL OF PINAR DEL RIO.

How Mucco Outwitted the Spaniards and Took the Place. NEW YORK, April 6 .- A long cipher dispatch from Carlos Garcia, son of General Calixto Garcia, the leader of the Bermuda expedition to Cuba, has been received by M. Stern, who makes his home with Mrs. Garcia, the wife of the general, in this city. The dispatch was written at Manzanillo, which is about thirty-five miles west of Santings, April 2, and says the men and the heavy artillery were landed in a bay between Bahi Honda and Muriel, which is about fifty miles west of Havana in a straight line. The two Hotchkiss guns and the six other pieces of heavy artillery them. The ship, with the remaining arms and ammunition, was sent to Santiago. The Spanish troops numbered about 6,000 and they were thrown into a state of panic by the onslaught. The use of the heavy ery which Garcia had brought added to

The Army as a Career. The object of an army in the United States is not necessarily in the main to conduct campaigns and fight battles nor to take human life. As the city police must watch over the city and guard it against all sorts of danger, being ready, with its weapons of offense or defense, to strike when other devices fail, so our army watches against certain dangers to the republic, giving nerve and strength to the executive—helping to restrain wild Indians, to capture mistaken hordes of tramps, or to quiet mob violence aimed against the common weal, or with naval help to hold back a public enemy, but really, of course, like the effective city police, to strike at command. when the commander in chief, with the sovereign nation behind him, has come to the last resort of hnman expedients for guarding the nation's life or its honor.—Major General

EASILY MADE GRAIN BINS

Conveniences For Barns and Stables Which Save Considerable Labor. Feed chests with compartments for different kinds of grain are necessary conveniences in the barn or stable, but many farmers have neither the ingenuity nor tact to make a bin with numerous divisions if the ordering method is fol-

CHEST WITH THREE COMPARTMENTS. lowed. For this assistance is here reproduced from the New York Tribune the sketch of an easily made grain chest. In the making of this special grain chest three dry goods or grocery boxes were employed. These boxes are of uniform shape and size, and are nailed together side by side. Then a cover is attached to the top of the bin and the work is done. Where more than three kinds of grain are kept more boxes may be added. Each box must be of a size sufficient for holding all the grain of any one kind that must be kept on hand, but this will not be a difficult matter, for boxes of every size and shape are to be had at grocery and dry goods stores. In the second cut is shown a grain box with two compartments. It was originally a well built dry goods box. As

BIN WITH TWO COMPARTMENTS. will be seen it was cut down in front to a convenient height. The lid projects a little and a place is cut for the fingers in front of the box. A partition in the center gives a chance for two kinds of grain. This second contrivance was suggested in The Farm Journal. The writer has seen piano packing cases ingeniously transformed into grain bins.

Tomatoes In Minnesota

The results of experiments with tomatoes to ascertain the value of pruning and training the plants to stakes as compared with allowing them to run along the ground are reported on from the Minnesota station. Eighteen varieties were employed in the experiment, three plants of each variety being set three feet apart and trained to stakes and three others set five feet apart and allowed to spread along the ground. The trained plants were pruned to a single stem and no side shoots allowed to grow. The results were found to vary according to the varieties tested. Chemin Market, Earliest of All, Northern Light and Terra Cotta ripened fruit on the staked plants first, while in all the other varieties there was no difference in the date of maturity or else the staked plants ripened their fruit later. The general result of the experiments indicates that greater earliness and productiveness were to be found where the plants were allowed to lie naturally along the ground in the ordinary way. Dwarf Champion and Early Acme gave the largest yields. A study of the extent to which the tomatoes were affected with rot showed that 43 per cent of the staked tomatoes rotted, while only 19 per cent of the fruit grown on the ground was so affected. Descriptive comparative notes are given on 16 varieties. The variety Earliest of All proved to be the earliest of those tested.

Keeping Extracted Honey. The following is from the gleanings in Bee Culture: Good extracted honey, if brought to a temperature of not over 180 degrees F., bottled and sealed while hot will usually if kept in uniformly warm temperature keep liquid for a year or more. Indeed we had some fine clover honey treated in this way keep liquid for two years. But there is a great difference in honey. Some will candy much quicker than others. The riper—that is, thicker -the honey is the longer it will keep liauid.

Cold atmosphere is quite favorable to candying of both extracted and comb. The temperature of the storage room should be about that of a living room— 70 degrees. Higher would do no harm, but is inconvenient and expensive. Cellars and cold rooms, especially when subject to freezing, are poor places for honey. In melting candied extracted honey the temperature should not go above 180 degrees; otherwise the fine flavor will in a large measure be destroyed. The usual way is to place the vessel of candied honey in another larger receptacle containing hot water.

Hauling Out Manure. It has long been manifest to us that the very best time to haul out manure is as soon as you can do it. The best place for manure is where it is mixed with the soil. Plow it under and the soil gets all the virtue there is in it. Manure is damaged by becoming dry. If you cannot haul it out right away, make a pile cutside. A good way is to put it in a rail pen. Here it will get all the rain and dampness going, and all the ingredients will be preserved. To our mind, however, its value is greatly enhanced by plowing it under as soon as possible. --Iowa Homestead. CRCHARD IRRIGATION.

Two Irrigations Enough if Sufficient Wa ter Be Applied Each Time. It is now recognized that the welfare of an orchard does not depend upon the moisture that may be applied from time to time to the surface soil. The most approved plan seems to be to irrigate as few times as possible, but to apply more water at each irrigation, enough to reach to the deepest roots. The amount varies with the size of the trees. Young trees need watering oftener and less at a time than older ones. After the third year, Horticulturist Richman of the Utah station thinks that two good irrigations are all that are necessary, unless the trees are carrying an exceptionally heavy crop of fruit. In that case three irrigations would probaby be nec-

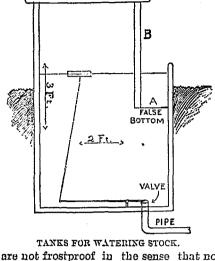

The amount of water applied to the experiment station orchard last year probably did not exceed 15 inches for the two irrigations, and the orchard made a good growth. For two or three years a sufficient amount many be applied by running the water along the rows in furrows, but when the trees get so large that the roots penetrate deeply into the soil and the entire ground occupied by the roots needs irrigation, som more convenient and thorough method is needed. The method practiced in the station orchard and many other places has been found to work with entire satisfaction. It is briefly described as follows in a bulletin issued: -

Take two 2 inch planks about 14 inches wide and 10 feet long, more or less. Place them on their edges in the form of the letter V, but leaving an Lung Trouble, if they will write me their opening at the point of 12 to 18 inches. Nail 2 by 4 crosspieces to hold them firmly in place: Hitch a team to the broad end of this instrument, one horse to each plank, and drive between the rows of trees, collecting the dirt into ridges. When the orchard is all gone over in this manner, cross ridges should be made, thus leaving the orchard blocked off in squares. The water is then turned in at the upper end and allowed to run to the lower end of the orchard. When the required amount of water has run into the lower square it is shut off and the second one filled, and so on back to the last or upper square. Each row of squares is treated in this manner. If a good sized stream of water is used the irrigator can tell approximately how much water he is using by the depth in the squares about the trees. In order to irrigate in this manner the orchards would be free from other crops and kept well cultivated. As soon as the ground is dry enough after each irrigation, the ridges should be worked down and the soil thoroughly cultivated in order to prevent evaporation and retain the moisture as long as possible.

Frostproof Water Tanks.

There are several things to be noted concerning the frostproof tanks for watering stock shown in the cut here reproduced from The Rural New Yorker. First, these tanks are placed under open sheds. Second, they are about half covered, the cover being in the middle of the tank and leaving each end open. Under this cover is the float. Third, they ice forms in them, but the inlet pipe never freezes, and if the drinking holes are cut open each morning and the float kept free, water is always before the stock. The drinking boxes for the hogs deserve mention. There are drinking fountains made from barrels, but they are often veritable pig traps. The little pigs will fall in, and being unable to get out drown. In this tank there is a false bottom several inches under the surface of the water, and if a pig falls in it can scramble out again. No pains are taken to make the board (B) water tight, and so water seeps in around it as fast as it is wasted. On the open or drinking part of this trough ice forms about an inch thick on cold nights. Of course this is easily removed, and then it stays open all day. This trough is as popular with the horses as with the hogs. The tanks described are the ordinary rectangular stock tanks, set directly on the ground, and are packed with six inches of sawdust. The pig tanks are not packed, but are set three feet in the ground. and this keeps them from freezing.

News and Notes. The Ponderosa tomato, though not quite so round and smooth as some others, is one of the meatiest tomatoes grown, and has fewer seeds than other varieties. The color is attractive when well grown and ripened. To prevent rats from destroying corn in the cribs, where all other methods fail. American Agriculturist advises fumigating with bisulphide of carbon. One nound of this volatile offensive substance, costing 10 cents, is sufficient for 100 bushels in cribs that are temporarily covered with thin cloth which has received a coat of paint to keep in the gaseous fumes until the rodents are killed. In France art, like society, was tottering to its fall when the revolution burst and hastened the end. The spirit of which the revolution was the political outcome had also, as in the pictures of Greuzo and Vien, been working beneath the surface of the art world, and with the fall of the empire these aspirations took definite shape. The art so long dedicated to whims and caprices of the aristocracy began, under the impulse of the new environment, to express the sentiments and ideals of the common people. Cut off from the past by the sword of retribution, in the turmoil of the present they sought inspiration for the future in the great acts of patriotism of the Romans. And the general intelligence of Europe, interested in the discoveries at Pompeii, gave it form on its artistic side. These feelings and aspirations seemed to become incarnate in the work of Jacques Louis David. A friend of Robespierre and a leader in the revolution party, he on the collapse of the movement narrowly escaped with his life. But with the rise of Napoleon. who appointed him his painter in chief, his influence again became paramount, and despite the many phases art has undergone and the innumerable cliques into which painters have divided in the interval it is still, modified and touched by reality, a living force in French art. David's conception of pictorial art was somewhat cold and lifeless. He led his confreres back not to nature, but to antiquity, as expressed in sculpture. Respect for the achievements of the past underlay all his work and paralyzed his invention and resource. - Blackwood's Magazine.

Machinery Quickly Stopped.

A Frenchman has devised a contrivance for quickly stopping heavy machinery. Upon touching a button the power is shut off and a powerful brake applied to the flywheel. A 20 horsepower engine working at 90 revolutions per second was stopped in two-thirds of a second. "I have never had a day's sickness in

Yet half the invalids we see might be just as healthy as he, if they would take proper care of themselves, eat proper food—and digest it. It's so strange that such simple things re overlooked by those who want health.

- Russian Officialdom... An amusing yet suggestive instance of the prevailing corruption among all classes in Russia is shown in the following story: One of the largest firms in the English iron trade contracted for the erection of a bridge in Russia. The bridge was erected and official inspection invited, but on one pretext or other it was put off until it became plain to the English contractors that unless they were prepared to bribe the inspector the bridge would not be taken off their hands. As they had cut the contract very close they could not afford to do so, and the official revenged himself by certifying the bridge to be upsafe. It had to be taken to pieces and shipped to England.

The sequel is most suggestive of all A new tender "for a much larger sum" was sent in by the same firm.' It was accepted. The very same bridge that was sent to Russia and brought back was forwarded again, re-erected, examined by the same official, received his approval and was taken over by the Russian government.

Of course in their new tender the firm left an ample margin, and the official, receiving a substantial "tip," approved of the same bridge that he had formerly condemned.—Pearson's Weekly.

Cyrus Field's Advice to Garrett. When young Bob Garrett took it upon himself to run the earth, after he became president of the Baltimore and Ohio, he started the Baltimore and Ohio sleeping car system, the Baltimore and Ohio Express company and the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph company. Novel Safety Lamp. The new safety lamp for mines, operating upon a peculiar principle, is reported as being in successful use in Germany. A peculiarity of this lamp is noted—namely, that it is not closed in any special way, like other lamps, and it matters very little whether or not the workman, disregarding the regulations of the mine, succeeds in opening the lamp, for there is a special arrangement by means of which the flame is extinguishable at the same instant. This is explained by there being in the interior of the lamp glass a spring which is compressed when the upper piece is screwed down, which enables a cap to operate upon the wick in such a manner as to shift it aside, facilitating the lighting of the lamp and afterward the combustion. When the spring is worked in the contrary direction, the cap again operates upon the wick, and the flame ceases the moment the cap comes in contact with the air. The lamp can be lighted without being opened.

A Dowery Waiter's Amendment. A slim young man with a high standing collar and straw colored mackintosh hurried into a Bowery restaurant the other evening. As the waiter with furled shirt sleeves throw his towel down on the table and gave it a wipe tho slim young man jumped.
