next time." She turned abruptly and left him to make his way back to Tregarthen, and neither of them saw the parting of the bushes at the top of the cliff through which a pair of malevolent eyes watched their movements. Before starting on his homeward walk, a sudden impulse prompted Ringbrand to climb once more into the abandoned coal working. The place was darker, now that the sun had gone behind the mountain, and it was some time before he could see well enough to make out the dim outlines of the interior; when he was able to do so, he saw that the hole in the roof had disappeared. He lighted a match, and, on finding the place, discovered that the aperture had been plugged from above with a fragment of stone which fitted accurately cnough to make it appear to be only one of the rough inequalities of the tunnel roof. When he realized that this had been done since his visit of a few hours before—that those who did it might even now be in the upper gallery, or hidden in the dusky shadows near at hand—a very panic of terror seized him, and he thought he should suffocate before he could struggle out into the open air again. Once outside of the tunnel, he fled down the rough mountain road, never looking behind him or stopping to take breath until he was half-way to the valley; then the stimulus of fear suddenly left him, and he sat down upon a fallen tree, covering his face with his hands, and wishing, in his shame and humiliation, that he had never been born. He stayed there until the lengthening shadows warned him that evening was approaching, and village, and he found Mrs. Ludlow sitting on the veranda. "I'm proud of you, Mr. Ringbrand," she said, as he came up the steps; "you don't deserve to be helped. I persuaded Hester to stay to tea and had it all arranged that you were to see her safely home; and you had to go and spoil i all by staying away! Where in the world have you been? "I am very sorry to have failed you. I took a long walk and went farther than I intended to. I hope Miss Latimer did not have to go back alone?" Ringbrand's voice was grave, and his tone was submissively apologetic.

"No: Tom went up with her." replied Mrs. Ludlow, going before him into the dining-room and lighting the lamp. "I'm afraid you won't get much for supper," she added, sitting down to pour

"More than I need-or deserve," he said, making a brave effort to simulate an appetite for the belated meal. Mrs. Ludlow, sitting opposite, noticed that he ate next to nothing; and she saw that something was troubling him. They were old friends, and had been well acquainted in the days when Ringbrand was a struggling apprentice in the literary workshop and Ludlow a small-salaried clerk in an engineering office. "What is it, Hugh?" she asked, with kindly sympathy; "is it anything about Hester?" "No; that is, it is nothing that she has said or done." "Won't you tell me about it? Perhaps I could help you." "I can't tell you now," he replied, pushing his chair back at the sound of Ludlow's step on the veranda. "I don't feel equal to talking to-night, and I hope you will excuse me if I go to my room; I know it's ungracious, but I'm in deeper trouble than you imagine. Perhaps I can tell you all about it, some

She gave him permission, and stepped him to go upstairs without meeting her husband. When he reached his room he dropped wearily into a chair and lighted a cigar; when it was burned out he went methodically to work packing his valises. "It's the only thing there is to do," he mused, "and it's a proper sequel to the thing, anyhow. I don't see why I couldn't have been born with a little blood in my veins, instead of weak tea or ditch water; but I wasn't, and I suppose that's the end of it. By Jove! I believe I'd be willing to change identities with the most ignorant of my forefathers, dirt, peat smoke, bad whisky, bare legs and all, if I could only have a dash of the brute courage along with the rest. Bah! it makes me sick to think of it; and just as I was beginning to believe there might be a

When the packing was finished he sat down to write a letter to Hester; beginning half a dozen and ending by tearing them all up. "That would be acting only half the man," he said. "I can write her a line from New York, thanking her for her hospitality and regretting that I could not see her again. I have no reason to suppose that she cares, yet, and she need never know what it costs me to leave her."

Having completed his preparations, he was anxious to be gone; but, as there was no train until noon of the next day, he was obliged to wait with what patience he could summon, and he went to sleep thinking that he would spend the forenoon with Ludlow, telling him of his intended departure and giving him the facts of his discoveries in the abandoned mine.

AN UNPREMEDITATED DEPARTURE. Those who ought to know most about such matters point out the mutability of things terrestrial by showing that the charge in position of a single grain of said may determine the course of a mighty river, or that a chance raindron trickling down the face of a cliff may mark the line of erosion which shall eventually cut the mountain in twain. If these illustrations prove the subjection of the elements to the universal rule of change, examples are not want ing to show that the same law governs with equal authority in the domain of human affairs.

Ringbrand went downstairs the pext morning fully determined to carry out his programme of the previous evening. and he told Ludlow at the breakfast table that he would spend the forenoon at the furnace with him. As they were leaving the house together the colonel overtook them in his buggy and invited Ringbrand to go with him on a drive across the valley to look at a horse which was for sale, promising to get him back to the company's office before noon. There was no good reason for refusing, and the colonel was hospitably insistent; Ludlow added his word, and the upshot of the matter was that the superintendent went to his office alone, while his guest departed upon an excursion which was to demonstrate anew the futility of human plans and pur-

Making due allowance for the fact that Ringbrand was upon the eve of taking a step which involved the renunciation of the woman he loved, he was less uncompanionable than he might have been. Their route took them over the wooded knolls in the main valley, and each rise in the road brought out new beauties of the landscape. At the top of the highest of the hills the colonel stopped and pointed out the winding course of the Harmony river, its bends and reaches etched among the fields in a sinuous pathway of silver mist, ruffled by the sun into fleecy waves of translucent pearl. In the middle distance, and about half-way from Tregathen to the river, a group of Lombardy poplars crowned one of the knolls overlooking the valley to the southward, and the colonel indicated the small hill with a comprehensive gesture which included the cultivated fields surrounding it. "That's the Manor farm," he said, "and the old square house stood in thah among the poplah's. My father raised it in the second yeah after he moved down from Vi'ginia, and it was a mighty comfo'table old mansion mighty comfo'table, seh. If you've been in any of the old Vi'ginia plantation homes, you'll know about what sort o' place it was."

"I have passed through Virginia," replied Ringbrand, "and I think I know the type. They certainly look comfort able from the outside, and they give one an idea of stability which is decidedly refreshing in this age of architectural shams.

"Yes, seh, they do that; strong and solid, like a man was buildin' for his child'en and grandchild'en. The old Manor house was built that-a-way beams and timbers of solid oak, dressed down with the broadax. It was a long time a-burnin'."

"I don't wonder your father didn't rebuild it," said Ringbrand, reflectively. The associations would always have been painful."

The colonel looked surprised: "I hope you don't allow that he went up on the mountain for that reason! No, seh; hehada better one. Old Doc Rainsfo'd talked right encouragin'about the mountain air for my mother—she was always mighty po'ly in the valley. I reckon the change did help her some,' he added, thoughtfully, "but she never did pick up after that mo'nin' when they cyar'd father home."

Col. Latimer pulled the horses into silence. The reference to the feud brought Ringbrand back to things present, and the thought that he should not see Hester again had a sharper sting as the time of his departure came nearer. He recalled the little incidents of their acquaintance, and tried to get some comfort out of the belief that her heart was still in her own keeping, and that the pain of renunciation was going to be his not hers. The glance backward at the pleasant hours spent at the home of the Latimers reminded him that it would be ungracious to go away without making some acknowledgment of the colonel's kindness, and he wondered how he could manage it without betraying his plans for immediate retreat. Fortunately, the colonel himself opened the way by asking him to become a guest at "The Laurels." "I told Tom Ludlow, day befo' yeste'day, that he was actin mighty mean about it, and he said he reckoned they-all could send you to us for a spell." "I'm sure that's very good of you colonel, and I thank you both for the invitation and for your many kindnesses to me since I came to Tregarthen; you certainly haven't let me feel that I was a stranger among you. I assure you, I would gladly accept the hospitality of 'The Laurels' if-if my time were wholly my own; as it is not I shall have to ask you to excuse me.

really ought to be in New York now." "Well, I'm right sorry for that-'deed I am," replied the colonel; "I sort o' got the idea from Tom you'd stay down here and make us a right good visit."

"I have stayed now longer than I should," rejoined Ringbrand, making a mental reservation as to the reasons. "As you probably know, I depend upon my work for a living, and I can't afford to neglect it for very long at a time." The colonel laughed. "Pears to me like youh work could be done most anywhere; we-all've got a mighty quiet place up on the mountain, and I'm right sure Hester could set you out with pen, ink and paper."

"There's no end to your hospitality, colonel," replied Ringbrand, smiling at the thought of literary work in the house with Hester. "I suppose you'd be quite Willing to have me turn "The Laurels" into a workshop; and I almost wish I could take you at your word, selfish as it would be. It would scarcely be posgible, though; I shouldn't know how towork if I were out of reach of the printer's boy."

They had left the main road in the valley, and were descending a steen hill to a ford in the river. The driving was difficult, and the colonel gave his entire attention to the horses as they slid down the recky declivity, talking to them as if they understood his explicit directions. "So-o, now, there, Tolliver -there's a right smart chunk o' rock just ahead of you-step around it, my boy. You, Jane! never you mind about Tolliver; just pick up your own feet a little higher. Steady, pow."

"You have pretty rough roads around here." began Ringbrand, bracing him-self into his seat. "I should think..." The interruption was an ominous snap, and the horses stopped. "That sounded mighty like something broke," said the colonel, and they alighted and looked the carriage over carefully. "Yes, here it is, for sure," he continued; "tongue's broke off right here."

They examined the fracture, and Ringbrand suggested wrapping it in splints with one of the halter-straps.
"I reckon it wouldn't hold," said the colonel, "but we can try it." They spent some time trying to put the suggestion into practice, succeeding finally in making a clumsy splice, which the first pull of the horses disjointed hopelessly. "It's no use, Mr. Ringbrand," said the colonel; "we're in for it; there's nothing like a blacksmith shop this side o' Tregarthen." Ringbrand looked at his watch and saw that it was half-past ten. "How far are we from the village, colonel?" he asked. "About eight miles, I reckon." That settled the question of departure for that day, and Ringbrand was annoyed to find himself feeling rather

"I'm proud of you, Mr. Ringbrand," she said.

they got the buggy to the top of the hill, where they left it at the side of the road and walked back to the nearest farmhouse, leading the borses. Since the colonel knew nearly every one in the valley, it followed that they had only to mention their need to obtain the hospitality and assistance of the farmer, who lent them an antiquated carriage and refused to let them depart until after dinner. Adding the delays to the time consumed in the careful driving necessary to the preservation of the farmer's vehicle in a state of entirety, it was near the middle of the afternoon when they got back to Tregarthen, and then Col. Latimer insisted upon taking his companion up to the mountain for the remainder of the day. Ringbrand offered every reasonable objection he could think of, knowing that another visit to Hester would immeasurably increase the pain of leaving her; but in the end discretion was swept away by an overwhelming desire to see and talk with her once more, and he yielded. They drove past the Ludlows', and he ran in to tell his hostess that he would not be home for tea. She saw the change in him, and detained him to ask if his trouble had disappeared.

"No," he replied, and she saw the look of despondency come into his eyes again; "and that isn't the worst of it; I'm going to do something that will make it infinitely harder."

"Are you going to see Hester?"

"How can that make it harder?" "I can't explain without telling you all about it, and I haven't the courage to do that now." "Tell me one thing, at least. Has vonr trouble anything to do with Hester's money?" He shook his head. "I wish it were nothing worse than that. I haven't anything, as you know, but I think I could earn a living for both of us."

"And you won't tell me what it is?" "I cannot." "Then tell her; Hugh, I-I believe she has a right to know." He looked up quickly. "You mean that she cares for me?

"I have no right to say it—she has told me nothing-but I can't help thinking that she does. She seemed anxious and disappointed when you didn't come home last night." Ringbrand hurried from the house resolving to break his engagement with the colonel at all hazards, but that gentleman calmly waived his stammering excuses aside and made room for him on the seat of the carriage. "After I've done spoiled your day, a-draggin' you over the country afoot, the very least you can do is to let me cyar' you home with me, and the mo' especially as you evan't make us a visit.' Ringbrand gave up again, for the simple reason that he had no valid abjection to offer, and half an hour later he was sitting on the veranda of "The Laurels," deep in the discussion of the race problem with the colonel-a discussion in which the northern point of view fared indifferently because the mind of its advocate was too busy with questions suggested by the presence of Hester Latimer. All through the argument he was studying her face, searching therein for the proof or the contradiction of Mrs. Ludlow's assertion, and tormenting himself by trying to imagine what Hester would say if he should tell her of his intended depart-

His Umbrella. A young man was riding down town the other evening in a Euclid avenue car. He took the front seat and held in his hand an umbrella which had been given him as a birthday present. On the seat facing him was a lady with a precocious infant boy, evidently about 5 years old. The youngster regarded the young man with rapt attention for a few moments, and then his eyes wandered to the um brella. He gazed at it in silence for a second; then he wriggled in his seat, clapped his hands and shouted: "Oh, mamma, doesn't that look like papa's umbrella?" "Hush! hush! my child," said the mother, patting the prodigy on the head. "Papa was looking for his umbrella this evening, wasn't he, mamma?'' continued the child wonder. "Yes, yes, but he found it," said the mother hurriedly as the conversation was becoming of exceeding interest to the occupants of two rows of seats. "Why, mamma," continued the youngster, "you know he didn't. Why, you told him that he didn't know enough to keep an umbrella. Why,

At this stage the young man got up and left the car, —Cleveland Plain Deal-

A Story of the Prince.

In England the following is regarded as "a good story about the Prince of Wales," and perhaps as not reflecting and perhaps as not reflecting upon the newspaper man: "His royal highness has often gone to see big fires. Once after the opera he strolled unattended toward a spot where the red glow in the sky had indicated a great conflagration. Seeing a newspaper re-porter taking notes, the prince asked for details, which were of course readily given, especially as the identity of the questioner was known to the jour-palist. At the conclusion of the conversation the prince offered the reporter a eigar, which the latter carefully wrapped in an envelope and placed in his pocket. 'Why don't you smoke it?' said the prince. 'Because I'm not likely ever to get another cigar from the Prince of Wales, so I mean to keep this one as a memento.' The prince laughed good nafuredly, and bringing out his case again replied, 'Well, you had better have another one—this time to smoke.' "

Coates, who, with Mrs. Lawrence, is suspected of the murder of the woman's husband, whose body was found recently at Holland, appeared at South Boardman, eight miles south of here, in search of food and shelter and was recognized and arrested by George B. Stanley, of that place. In an interview with Mrs. Lawrence she stoutly denied having seen her late husband since a day or two before he is supposed to have been murdered, or that she had anything to do with his taking off. She makes her denial in a straightforward manner, looking one straight in the eyes as she does so. Notwithstanding this a telegram from Holland, where both the accused are in jail, says that Coates has confessed to an acquaintance, saying that he crept down stairs the night of the murder and "fixed" Lawronce while he was asleep, later throwing the body into the river. It seems that Coates is a foster brother of Mrs. Lawrence, being an adopted child.

FIGHT IN A BAPTIST CHURCH.

Al Because of a Dispute About Taking Up a Collection at the Door. DETROIT, April 23 -The Eighteenth Street Baptist church was the scene of a fight last night. One woman was seized by a police officer and shoved out of the church doors. One man was struck across the face by a woman and raised his fist to knock her down, but was pulled away. Another young man, when urged to leave the scene, even pushed his own mother down the steps. Women screamed, men shouted and recriminations flew thick and fast. Two of the church trustees resigned and six were expelled from the church for open and willful rebellion. The church is now divided into two factions. The board of trustees had forbidden the pastor taking up a collection at the door. The pastor did it. The board censured him. The pastor referred the matter to the church congregation. The congre gation upheld the pastor. The Baptist council took hold of the matter and last Wednesday asked the board to resign, Michigan Man Takes His Own Life in the Jail at Manistee. MANISTEE, Mich., April 27.-When Under Sheriff Nungester swung the door open in corridor No. 2 at the jail Sunday morning he discovered the lifeless body of George R. Fowler on the floor A dang ling piece of towel from one of the iron had taken his own life with the aid of his bandana and a prison towel. Fowler was a man with a history. For over thirty years he has been a resident of this county, his home being at Barlake, five miles north of this city. He had not a friend in the world, excepting possibly his immediate family. Always of a quarrelsome disposition he kept his neighbors in con tinual hot water with lawsuits. Satur day he testified in police court that he was 76 years of age and pleaded not guilty to the charge of criminal operation, brought by a young girl of this city against him. He left a note bidding his family all good-by. A daughter is now confined in the insane asylum at Traverse City. CHARGED WITH MURDER.

The Acoused Claims the Affair Was En tirely Accidental. PORT HURON, Mich., April 25-Simon Kettler of Marine City was arraigned in the police court Friday morning on a charge of murder. Kettler refused to plead, and a plea of not guilty was entered by the court. On the evening of April 6 Kettler and Frank Burns were in a saloon at Marine City discussing politics. Hot words passed between the two men, and Burns said he could whip Kettler. During the scuffle a pencil, sup posed to have been in Kettler's pocket, ran into Burn's neck and broke off Burns did not know the piece of pencil was there until several hours after the trouble. Blood poisoning set in, and on April 19 Burns died. Kettler claims the affair was entirely accidental, and that he was forced to fight. He does not know whether the pencil was in his or Burns

Fined for Shoplifting. PONTIAC, Mich., April 24. -Mrs. Sarah Gower, who was caught shoplifting at Pontiac stores a month ago, was sentenced Thursday night by Judge Smith to pay $200 fine or one year imprisonment and the fine was paid. The prisoner is a widow of the late Rev. Mr. Gower, form erly of Clarkston, Mich. When arrested she admitted her guilt, but begged for her release because of her approaching mar-riage. She was locked up, but her fiance, Albert Myerboof of Akron, O., remained true and visited her in her cell. He was

Could Not Sell the Liquor. DECATUR, Mich., April 27.-A peculiar conflict of authority took place at South Haven, this county, when a United States deputy collector of revenue attempted to sell a cask of brandy seized by the government for non-payment of the revenue tax. As the deputy was about to commence the sale he was stopped by the village authorities on the ground that the local option law is in force in Van Buren county and the sale of liquor is thereby prohibited by any one within its limits. The government official went to district headquarters for legal advice and on returning to South Haven knocked in the head of the brandy cask and declared the

A NEW SADDLE.

MR. J. L. RICHARDS, of the Zinc Collar Pad Co. of this place, bas been working on a new departure in bicycle saddles, and has perfected a saddle that is a marvel of beauty, lightness, and utility. It is finely proportioned and is made entirely of metal, thus making a very durable saddle. The metal used is nickelled very heavily on a coating of copper, and makes a finish that is durable and handsome. The saddle has been thoroughly tested, in actual use, and from all reports it would seem that Mr. Richards had devised one of the best articles on the market. Preparations are being made to manufacture the saddle in large quantities. The RECORD trusts that Mr. Richards will find "Millions in it."

Smith of Bristol, Ind., youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith of Bristol, Ind., to Mr. John M. Swartz of German township, St. Joe county, Ind., only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Swartz. Precisely at the appointed hour, the high-contracting parties entered the parlor, led by Presiding Elder W. E Koehler, of the Evangelical church, of Buchanan. The maid of honor was Miss Jennie Heim > of South Bend, Ind., and the best man was Mr. S. Smith, brother of the bride, of Bristol, Ind. After the bridal party took their places under a canopy of green and white, Rev. Koehler pronounced the words that united the faith, love, confidence and union of two loving hearts. After the usual congratulations by about one hundred invited guests, a supper was served. Those present from abroad were: Mrs. George Smith, mother of the bride, of Bristol, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. James Putman, Plymouth, Ind., Mr. and Mrs. David Miller, Mr. and Mrs. William Siders, Mr. and Mrs. Woolman and Mr. Sano C. Laymon of South

nichigan Republican Newspaper Association.

At the annual meeting of the Michigan Republican Newspaper Association the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, As the sense of this association that while the discussion of mutual business interests 'must of necessity enter largely into, and constitute an important factor in our meetings, yet as the guardians and promoters of the political interests and is no less a part of our functions as the representatives of public opinion in our several fields to frankly and fearlessly criticise, recommend or reprove any proposed action of committees or conventions of the party or of the candidates which we are required to support and defend; and to this end we recommend and endorse the idea of closer and more confidential rela-tions between the republican press of Michigan and the various political organizations and committees of the party within the State. We are by experience and observation convinced of the value of persistent, intelligent organization and therefore pledge our influence as individuals and our assistance as republican newspaper men in pehalf of the purposes and efforts of the Michigan league of republican clubs. The principles of our party are such as directly concern the welfare of the individual, the well-doing of the community, the comfort of the home and the prosperity of our nation. Purposes so potent deserve better and more thorough consideration from the party as an organization than they can receive in the caucus or in the convention and it is this consideration and exchange of views and opinions which can be and are being given in our republican clubs which we cordially approve and desire to practically encourage.

We are fully persuaded as to the power of the local republican papers in upbuilding and sustaining the principles of the republican party and the potency of their influence for making converts to our views and therefore would express it as the sense of this association that state, congressional and county committees should deem it an important element of their work to continually encourage, advance and assist in republican papers in order that the principles and aims of our party may through broader dissemination, be persistently approved and that more effective aid may be given to the local and state candidates of our party in their contests for acceptance at the polls and more encouragement to the efforts to fulfill all proper and patriotic expectations implied in their nomination and election. Resolved. That in the opinion of this association it is the duty of republican newspapers to urge their respective county committees to take such measures, under the law, as may be necessary to prevent emocrats and populists and all others no epublicans from participating in republican caucuses and conventions. Republican editors are especially requested to insist upon a full attendance of republicans at the caucuses so that a fair expression of the party will may be secured. The party caucuses are legally empowered to provide such restrictions as are necessary to pro tect them from the interference of those who do not acknowledge republican affiliations and are urged by this association to exercise this power to the fullest extent. Resolved, That we deem it of prime importance as an association that each and every newspaper should seek to arouse, by every legitimate means, public sentiment against the present unjust and oppressive ibel law of Michigan, which in its present form we regard as a conservator of immor ality because of the facility with which offenders against decency may annoy and injure publishers who expose their nefari ous schemes in the interests of the public

Five Leaders of the Reform Committee at Johannesburg.

HAMMOND, THE AMERICAN, IS ONE.

Joseph Chamberlain Announces the News in the House of Commons and Also That He Had Cabled to the Governor of Cape Colony That the English Government Expected a Commutation of the Death

LONDON, April 28 .- The secretary of state for the colononies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, announced in the house of commons Tuesday that the five leaders of the reform committee of Johannesburg (J. H. Hammond, Francis Rhodes, George Far-

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND. rar, Lionel Phillips and Charles Leonard) have been condemned to death. Mr. Chamberlain added that upon hearing the news he cabled to the governor of Cape Colony, Sir Hercules Robinson, to communicate the following to President Kruger:

Expects Commutation of Sentence. The government have just learned that the sentence of death has been passed upon the five leaders of the reform committee. They can feel no doubt that your honor will commute the sentence and have assured parliament of their conviction that this is your honor's intention. Mr. John Hays Hammond, one of the members of the reform committee condemned to death, is an American. Mr. W. J. Galloway, Conservative member for southwest Manchester, asked whether the law under which the leaders of the Johannesburg reform committee were tried, does not provide for the confiscation of their property in the event of conviction, and not for the imposing of the death penalty. Mr. Chamberlain

John Hays Hammond. WASHINGTON, April 28.—Senators Perkins and White were very much surprised when shown the Associated Press cable announcing that Hammond had Hammond had been sentenced to death. It was their impression that when the plea of guilty was made that an understanding had been reached which would not mean the death penalty. Senator Perkins expressed the belief that the law required such a sentence but that the government will commute it. The California senators probably will ask through the state department that clemency be shown Hammond, although | house at Deans street and Bedford Senator White says that in the face of a avenue, Brooklyn. The statue, which is plea of guilty of high treason, he is not spre that this government could make a very strong representation. The belief is expressed here that Hammond, before returning to Pretoria, had some understanding on the subject of the sentence to be pronounced and that proceedings that would follow the sentence. It is believed he will not be put to death.

Trial of Dr. Jameson. LONDON. April 28.—The trial of Dr. Jameson, the Transvaal raider, and his associates in that undertaking, was resumed at the Bow street police court Tuesday. COURTS WILL SETTLE IT. Two Boards of Public Works in Existence at Des Moines, Ia.

DES MOINES, April 28.-Nearly the encourt Monday on account of the trial of the case between the two boards of public works. When the new administration went into office three weeks ago the mayor announced the appointment of a new board-C. D. Boardman and E. W. Crellin. The city had one already-John Sherman and George C. Sims-who claimed they had two years to serve.

The mayor proceeded to eject them and the council confirmed the new appointments. The old board then got an injunction to prevent the new one from taking possession of the office. Consequently there is no supervision of public improvements in progress, and much embarrassment is caused. A stipulation of facts was agreed to and the case argued before the court. The argument lasted all day and will take two or three days more. An early decision is expected on which an appeal will be taken by the defeated side. It has been agreed that the side which wins in the lower court will take charge of the office pending the decision of the appeal.

Altgeld Replies to Carlisle. SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 25.—Secretary Carlisle has been answered by Governor Altgeld. In a pointed, open letter, made public Saturday, the governor replies to the address on the money question which the secretary recently delivered at the Auditorium in Chicago. The governor calls the secretary a sophist and says he held different opinions on the money question when he was a member of congress, and asks whether he was right then or now. He also charges the secretary with quoting misleading figures to show the amount of gold in the country.

Pleaded Guilty to High Treason. PRETORIA, April 24.—Messrs, Francis Rhodes, Lionel Phillips and George Farrar, three members of the Johannesburg reform committee, pleaded guilty to high treason Friday and the other members of the same committee pleaded guilty of lese majeste but without hostile intention against the independence of the Transvanl. The Storm Sweeps Through a Section o

Kansas and Leaves Death and Destruction in Its Wake-Besides the Dead Several People Are Seriously Injured. CONCORDIA, Kan, April 27 .- The cyclone which swept through this section of the state on Saturday evening was probably one of the most severe that Kansas has ever experienced. Its path was about 400 feet wide and extended fully twenty miles. It formed about 7 o'clock Saturday evening near the little town of St. Joseph, in the western part of Cloud county, and passed in a northeasterly direction through the northern part of Clay and probably into the southern edge of Washington counties. Fortunately it struck no towns, but its course was through a thickly settled portion of the Republican valley. The cyclone was funnel shaped and its power seemed unlimited. Houses and barns were lifted into the air and dashed back to earth. Trees were uprooted or broken off. and everything in its track was destroyed. Tho first victims of the storm were Eli Belthavor and wife, living about a mile east of St. Joseph. The family was just preparing to seek refuge in the cellar when the storm struck.

Track of the Storm. The six children were all more or less seriously injured, and it is thought two of them will die. About a mile further east the home of Julian Trembly was destroyed and he was killed. The greatest damage was done south of Clifton. Two farmers, E. P. Peterson and J. S. Haynes, were killed and a number of others whose names could not be learned. At one place a woman and child were killed and at another a 5-year-old boy. The body of the latter has not yet been found. Several people are reported to be seriously injured south of Palmer, and some of them fatally. The number of killed and who have died from their wounds was Monday reported to be eleven, but the list will doubtless be increased by another twentyfour hours. Over twenty-five persons are said to have sustained serious injuries. Over twenty families were rendered homeless by the storm. The suffering of those injured was rendered great by the severe hail and rain that closely followed the cy-

French Cabinet Resigns on Account of Disagreement with Senate. PARIS, April 23 .- The Bourgeois cabinet has resigned. In spite of the protest of the premier, M. Bourgeois, the senate Wednesday adopted a motion to postpone the vote on the Madagascar credits until a cabinet is formed which enjoys the confidence of both chambers. This forced tho resignation of the cabinet.

The refusal of the senate to grant the Madagascar credits to the Bourgeois cabinet is regarded as a well devised tactical move against the cabinet in the conflict between the two branches of the government, which involves the French constitution itselt. 1 cabinet would feel itself driven into a corner and would be compelled to re-

Grant, twice president of the United States, should be perpetuated by the erection of an equestrian statue. From that moment the members of the club and their friends worked ardously, and Saturday afternoon their efforts were rewarded by the unveiling of a colossal equestrian statue of the general in front of the club the work of W. reconnoisance Saturday for the purpose of keeping the road to Mafeking open. The force met the Matabele 3,000 strong, who at once attacked. The fight was a hot one, but the British repulsed the sayages with great loss and returned to Buluwayo with the loss of three men killed and several wounded. The beleaguered garrison has supplies for twenty days, and the relief force is making good headway. It is hoped that succor will reach the place in time.

An Incident of a Rally for the White Metal at Memphis. MEMPHIS, April 27.—At a silver rally at the Auditorium there was quite a sensatire administration of Des Moines was in | tion, in that there was a fight on the stage between Editor E. W. Carmack, of The Commercial Appeal, and Attorney General M. R. Patterson, son of Representative Josiah Patterson. Carmack had just finished a speech in which he said that all of the gambling saloous and illicit liquo selling element were banded together against the cause of silver. Patterson walked on the platform and the crowd would not hear him until Carmack had appealed for fair play. After a few remarks Patterson said that any man who said he was in cahoots with the gambling element said what was infamously false. The words were not out of his mouth be fore Mr. Carmack jumped at him and struck one blow on the check of the attorney general. The crowd and the police interfered and prevented further trouble.

DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR.

Carl Feigenbaum Pays the Death Penalty at Sing Sing. NEW YORK, April 27 .- For the third time within a week Warden Sage of the of the state prison at Sing Sing was called upon Monday to superintend the execution of a death sentence, the subject being Carl Feigenbaum, who for nearly sixteen months had been under sentence of death for killing Mrs. Johanna Hoffman. Feigenbaum is 54 years old. He was a boarder in the rooms of Mrs. Hoffman in East Sixth street. He cut her throat with a bread knife.

At his trial he sought to show that another man, who, he alleges, was in Mrs. Hoffman's house the night of the murder, committed the crime, but the testimony of the victim's son was too strong to be shaken. The condemned man was visited Sunday by his brother, to whom he said as they parted: "Remember, I am innocent.

The Fire at Cripple Creek, Colo. CRIPPLE CREEK, April 27.-It is now reported the fire here Saturday was caused by bank robbers. One of the banks had $100,000 on deposit, and the robbers, it is said, started the fire to divert attention, hoping to be able to rob the bank during the excitement. The police are investi gating and have a clew. The fire losses, sifted down, do not make as great a show ing as one would expect from a fire of the proportions of that which raged here on Saturday for thirteen hours. The aggregate is not far from $1,000,000.

Women Not Elizible as Delegates to the Methodist General Conference. BALTIMORE Mi., April 24 -All the returnsve... in received from Methodist Episcopal conferences in America and in mission fields of the vote on the woman question and have been tabulated by the Rev. These returns, according to his table, show the Baltimore proposition to amend the second restrictive rule of the discipline so as to make women eligible for election, as lay delegates to the general conference has been defeated. by only eighteen votes. The vote of tho North Dakota conference, which has just been received, was the last taken on the

With that included in the table which Dr. Clark has prepared the vote is shown to be 7.515 for the admission of women and 2,529 against. The total vote was 10,044. Three-fourths of this would be 7.533, or eighteen more than were cast for the proposition to admit women. The vote to change the basis of ministerial representation in the general conference, one delegate for every forty-five ministers, to one for every sixty-five, has been lost. TRANSPLANTING TOOLS.

Trowel and Roller Which Save Time In Handling Small Plants. A Colorado farmer, writing to Rural New Yorker, gives an illustrated description of two homemade tools which he has found very useful. They are designed to save time in transplanting small plants like celery, and they have proved almost indispensable. He says:

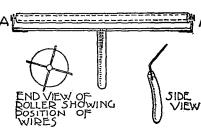

The flats which I use are 12 inches wide inside by 2 feet long, with the rows running across. Then with the trowel shown in the first cut I take up a whole row of plants and space them farther apart in other flats or set them into cold frames. With celery this will save entirely all hand transplanting, except the final field work. But in order to use this tool success-spaces the rows three-fourths of an inch apart, which is right for celery. When the seed is well up, thin so as to leave 25 or 30 plants to the row. This makes 500 or more plants to the flat. These may be sheared off once or twice before they become "drawn" and then set into cold frames four inches between the rows to grow on. I prepare the rows to receive the plants by opening them with the trowel, then rake the soil up to the plants and press down firmly.

TRANSPLANTING TROWEL the marker shown at second cut. This

The trowel is made of an extra heavy piece of galvanized iron 111/2 inches long and 314 inches wide and bent at the top of the shaded lines. The handle is extra heavy galvanized strap iron 1 inch wide and 12 inches long. This is folded with the ends together, lapped on both sides of the first piece and riveted or soldered. All may be done with a hammer, cold chisel and punch, if one have the materials. The edge need not be sharp, but may be thinned with a file. The roller is a round stick 1 inch in diameter and 11 inches long. Saw into each end two shallow cuts at right angles, forming a cross, which will coincide with that of the other end. Then wind a soft copper wire or even a hard cord around through the saw cuts and fastenit: then across the other way and fasten it, and it will look as in second cut-end view. Drive a wire nail in the center of each end and mount in the ndle, of which the ends A A are of thin iron, with holes for the nails in the ends of the roller. Pass this over the soil, which should be sifted and smoothed, and it will pack the soil, leaving tiny marks just right for the smallest seeds.

Straight Post and Rail Fence.

Farmers whose rail fences are becoming dilapidated can, with some labor and but little cost, make them better than ever by taking down the worn fence and using the best rails to make one in a straight line. It will need stakes on each side at the ends of each rail driven into the ground and fastened with one or more wires near the top. If only cattle and horses are to be kept in or out by the fence, the bottom rails can be laid 12 to 15 inches from the ground. In this position the rails will last longer than if resting on the ground or on a flat stone near it. Five or six rails, well secured by stout stakes, will make a fence that will keep most kinds of stock from getting over it, though it is best always to be sure. A barbed wire at the top will prevent most stock from making the attempt. The trouble with wire fences is that when strung on posts without rails an animal that is playing or running cannot see the wires until it 1 becomes entangled in them, and then its efforts to escape only make matters

Free Seed Distribution. The secretary of agriculture is asking for offers of seed for free distribution, in accordance with the joint resolution of congress. All the varieties of seeds to be purchased will be subject to test by some employee of the division of botany of the United States department of agriculture. The right to reject any lot or lots of seeds which may be found to fall below the standards is reserved by the secretary of agriculture. This opportunity to sell seed is open to all the known reputable growers of and dealers in seed. The entire purchase

Gardening. Pearl or Cat Tail Millet. This old standby in the south produces a rank growth on rich or well fertilized soil. Florida Farmer says that it is best for well fertilized soil. It is best for green forage and can be cut through the entire summer—at least as long as it is cut enough to keep it from running up seed heads. It has a record of producing at the rate of 95 tons per acre in a season of growth of 135 days. It is of tropical origin and is well adapted to all sections of the south; can be sown any time after danger of frost is past in drills two feet apart, using seed at the rate of eight pounds per acre. TILE DRAINAGE.

The Outlet—Depth of Drains—Plowing Out the Ditches-Grading. Tile drainage is a costly improvement and ought not to be attempted in a haphazard way. It may be of interest to some readers to learn how the level black so sof Ohio are drained. Following is a account as given by Ohio Farmer. This also includes directions for drainage of other soils:

The first thing to consider is the outlet. That usually means a large open ditch. Into this we run our tile drains. As we have no low places to drain, we have a system to drain by. We put our drains in parallel lines from 5 to 8 rods apart, depending on depth of drains. Where it is not convenient to give each drain the proper outlet in large ditch we put in large main and connect laterals with that. In putting in main we always aim to get it as deep as the outlet will allow.

ter of main thus causing the lateral to drain perfectly dry. We also give the laterals a slight turn down stream, near the end, in order to check the flow of water as little as possible in the main. The depth of the drains should always be determined by the character of the soil to be drained. Where the subsoil is a loose, porous clay, as it is with us, from 30 inches to 42 inches will give best results, but where there is hardpan they should be put closer and not so deep, as on such soil the water will be slow in entering the tile and if the ground is rolling will be inclined to run off on the surface - something that should be avoided as much as possible.

Considerable hand labor can be avoided by plowing out the ditches. The loose dirt can be left to serve as a mulch, making it possible to ditch when the ground is frozen hard elsewhere. Another thing of the utmost importance in tile drainage is the grading. This should never be left to a careless hand. On our level soil the grade must be absolutely perfect to do satisfactory work.

Manuring a Meadow. Both lime and ashes are excellent fortilizers for meadow lands, and may be mixed and distributed together either late in the fall or early in the spring. A dressing of 100 to 300 pounds of cottonseed meal per acre would furnish nitrogen, which is likely to be deficient in all meadow lands. If a little alsike clover would not reduce the price of the hay, then scarify the meadow with a fine toothed harrow before distributing the lime and ashes, and sow one quart of alsike seed per acre. Then apply the fertilizers, reharrow and roll. Alsike cures light colored, and is not noticeable in the hay, and really improves its quality. In some localities great objection is made to clover of any kind in hay sold in the cities. In central New York timothy hay may be one-tenth alsike clover and yet no objections are made to it.—Country Gentleman.

Potato Scab and Soil Rot. It has been made to appear that corrosive sublimate is a preventive of scab. Professor Holdead of the New Jersey station last season made two experiments, one on the college farm and one in another county and on different soil. The result, stated briefly, was that flowers of sulphur proved to be the best remedy of all those tested, superior oven to corrosive sublimate. On a plot where the cut seed was simply rolled in sulphor the scab was much reduced. Better results were obtained by the application in the drill of 150 to 300 pounds per acre. Soil rot is to sweet potato growers what scab is to the growers of white potatoes. Here, too, the sulphur seems to be an effective remedy, applied broadcast or in the hill.

Grass on Lowlands.

Lands that are low and flat can be made to produce excellent grass without the trouble and expense of putting down draintile. Open ditches can be cut that will carry off most of the water at a small cost. The seed of fowl meadow and blue joint grass can be sown on the sod after the grass has been cut and the stubble burned. It can be scratched in with a harrow without breaking the tough sod with a plow. The only expense for this improvement is for the grass seed. Several thousand acres of lowland near the Kankakee river, both in Indiana and Illinois, have been seeded in this manner and are now very valuable property. These grasses are exceedingly productive and make hay that is relished by all kinds of stock. - Cor. Prairie Farmer.

Second Crop Seed Potatoes. Any one following these directions can grow second crop seed potatoes in 'the north and shortest season,' according to an Indiana correspondent of Farm, Field and Fireside:

Plant your potatoes early and cover shallow. The top tubers coming on will soon come out of the ground and short spronts. Let those grow one to two inches high; then transplant in well prepared soil, have the top one on the ground and press the tubers lightly into the soil and firm it around. Cultivate shallow. They will grow right along and beat all others for seed.

The Mountaincer's Bear Team. "I was driving along a road in the mountains of western North Carolina a short time ago," said P. B. Mayfield of St. Louis, "when I heard a wagon coming around a bend in the road. My horses shied, then began to tremble, being evidently in the most abject terror. I could not make them move a foot, and when the approaching team came into sight I saw the reason, and, getting out of the buggy, succeeded in quieting my horses, so as to allow the strange team room to pass, the driver of the brutes ahead of me calling: 'They won't hurt nothin, stranger. Don't be skeared.' He was driving a team of full grown black bears, and they were making about as fast time as a yoke of oxen would. They were hitched to a wagon loaded with logs. The upper part of the wagon was like any other, but the wheels were small and heavy, evidently the work of a local blacksmith. The bears paid no attention to me or to my team and walked along leisurely, drawing their load seemingly without effort."-Washington Star.
