Hill Named by the Gold Men for Temporary

Chairman and Daniel by the Silver-

First Day's Session of the National Democratic Convention--Trouble in Getting into the Hall.

CHICAGO, July 8.—At 11:50 Tuesday the Democratic national convention of 1896, a gathering that promises to be one of the most historic in the annals of the party, came to order at the Coliseum. The extraordinary conditions surrounding this convention, the heated contests for its preliminary and permanent chairmen, the struggle for the nomination of a presidential candidate, and the various other incidents of the convention, are being followed by the public with the keenest interest.

The convention opened at 11:50 a. m. in the Coliseum, a vast hall which has been transformed into a great arena for the convention. The hall is filled with people, and the atmosphere is one of excitement and anticipation.

The first order of business was the election of a temporary chairman. The gold men nominated Daniel Hill, and the silver men nominated Daniel Hill.

The result was a tie, and the convention was adjourned until the following day.

THE COLISEUM.

Incidents of the disputes, and the personalities of the men who have taken part in them, have been so thoroughly exploited during the past week that public attention and interest have been aroused in the Chicago convention to a degree rarely, if ever, equalled.

All of these things, lending a peculiar interest to this convention, could not fail to bring to the vast convention hall the greatest gathering of the public that has ever assembled under like circumstances in this city, or perhaps any other city in the country.

In front of the convention hall the army of subordinate officials contributed largely to the disorder. They formed a long line of men, to the admission of single entrants. Others were seen excited men were distributing the badges and emblems of official authority. Meanwhile the doors were barred to the public and the stalwart policemen on guard said no one would be admitted until the last office was at his post within. At best the four big entrances could receive more than 250 persons a minute, or 15,000 an hour.

The capacity of the hall is just 15,000, so that it would take a full hour with perfect discipline to pass the great crowd through the doors. The belated stragglers of the convention promised to make it impossible to get the people inside the hall by the time the convention met. At 11 o'clock the line of officials stretched four abreast for 100 feet across the main entrance, and the people were held outside the hall. The people were particularly indignant at not getting in.

They stood in the streets, holding umbrellas to keep off the shower of rain, and the crowd was so dense that it was difficult to get through the crowd. At 11:30 the doors were thrown open and the crowds began to enter.

Arrival of Delegations.

One of the first of the leaders to enter was Senator Jones of Arkansas. He stood at the staff of his state greeting all who approached him cordially and good naturedly, seemingly cool and unruffled as he surveyed the field and confronted the first clashes of the battle which was so soon to begin. Governor Alford came over and
