the object of the visit of the governor of Michigan, the Hon. H. S. Pingree, to Venezuela was not entirely in the interundeniable authority that the true in-wardness of the object of the visit was for no less a purpose than the investiga-

obtaining control of one or two aspnalt

People's bank 12 per cent. The Ingham

In view of this condition of affairs the thousand or more depositors are in a very ugly frame of mind, and have been demanding that an example be made of some, of the bank officials whom they believe to be responsible for the failures.

Experts recently completed an examina-

in Jake's wife Sarah, a servant 18 years before to his grandfather Nelson.

CHAPTER II—A year previous Conway, paying teller in a Philadelphia savings bank, was invited to the home of Florence Morley to a party. Knowing this would not allow him to return to bank as early next morning as usual he arranges with Horace Jackson—a fellow employe—to be on hand when the clockwork should release combination of vault. Returning to bank next morning Conway discovers the cash reserve of $400,000 missing.

CHAPTER III—Conway is accused of theft, but Mr. Morley, a trustee, proves an alibi for him, without however removing the general suspicion.

CHAPTER III—conway is accused of theft, but Mr. Morley, a trustee, proves an alibi for him, without however removing the general suspicion.

CHAPTER IV—retry expresses his confidence in Conway, but says officially he must bold him in doubt, wnereupon Conway resigns his position. Mr. Morley also believes in Conway's innocence, but because of public distrust exacts a promise that friendly relations between Conway and Florence Morley be discontinued until Conway proves his innocence.

CHAPTER V—Florence shortly after this writes to assure Conway of her continued respect and trust. In the old Nelson home, so long deserted, Conway hears strange noises; sees a ghostly figure in the moonlight, shoots at it, only to find it a reflection of himself. Unearthly voices are heard even after daylight comes speaking in disjointed unmeaning phrases. Conway learns from Sarah that Sylvester Morley and his daughter have a summer residence in near neighborhood.

daughter have a summer residence in near neighborhood.

CHAPTER VI—Discovery is made that both doorways to one of the cellars have been walled up. Florence driving by with her father sees Conway, but offers no salutation. Jackson has frequently been coming from city and sometimes calls on the Morleys.

CHAPTER VII—Conway sees Sonntag, his agent. He knows nothing of walling up cellar doors. Sonntag connects mysterious lights and noises with the sealed doorways.

cellar doors. Sonntag connects mysterious lights and noises with the sealed doorways. CHAPTER VIII—Meeting between Florence and Conway results in promise to marry. Jackson had proposed to her, been refused, but upon accusing Conway of robbing a compact had been made that she would marry Jackson in case theft could be traced to Conway.

CHAPTER IX—Again mysterious noises are heard at night, and Conway spends many restless hours trying in vain to locate them. A pistol shot from the room below is heard, whereupon he decides to cut through the floor to gain access to the barred-up cellar, and in the morning procures tools for the purpose.

CHAPTER X—Sonntag discovers that stones used in walling up doorways correspond to those of ruined schoolhouse near where Jackson has taken a place. The mysterious voices are heard, and by comparing notes with Conway traces them to a telephone arrangement, and an important conversation is put together from the detached phrases heard. Conway learns that Hunter, station agent at Sidington, is an alias for Skinner.

CHAPTER XI—Conway witnessed meeting between Skinner and Miss Morley, who ride up from opposite directions, converse earnestly and ride back their respective ways. Skinner approaches house; Conway appearing, he shows confusion, and when addressed as Skinner fires at but misses Conway and disappears. Miss Morley says she had requested Jackson to secure a de-

Sonntag counsels against attempt to get into the walled-up cellar as any headstrong course might upset wellaid plans for his own good.

CHAPTER XIV—Door to old cook house found open. Conway enters to investigate, and in the dark cellar hears a voice: "Another step means death;" rushes out, but returns with pistol and candle. Again hears the warning, disregarding which he is almost stunned by a flash and explosion. Conway discovers a paper he had picked up in cellar to be one of bank's stolen bonds. CHAPTER XV—Conway now suspects Sonntag, Skinner and Jackson of conspiracy, and breaking into station at Sidington telegraphs for Mr. Perry and detectives. Returning he encounters Skinner whom Conway nearly chokes to death. Conway enters cook house, does not hear warning voice this time, but sees a faint streak of light. Jackson discovering Conway and stepping back inadvertently touches spring to one of his contrivances by which he is shot and instantly killed. Mr. Perry, Sonnag and Skinner appear on scene. Skinner is found to be a detective who has antagonized Conway in order to gain Jackson's confidence. Sonntag reveals himself as a detective named Wilson.

Also, excepting alriand bying south of wilson's take and west of McCoy's creek and containing seventy-two acres more or less.

All the above land acring is flow eight (8) south. "Yes, I am a detective," he quietly responded. "And your name is not Sonntag?"

"No. Wilson is my name. It was simply a stroke of chance that made me your lawyer and agent for a short time. It was necessary to be present here, and the death of your former agent came most opportunely."

"So then Jackson never suspected vou? "No. At least I believe not." "And how did you come to suspect Jackson?" I asked, curiously.

"By looking up his record." "Why, was he a regular criminal?" "No. Not until he robbed the bank. He used to be in the employ of a large safe manufactory as an expert on locks. When we found that out we were certain he was the man in the bank who could open the lock, when the timepiece was off, without knowing the combination."

Did the detectives know of Mr. Mor. ley's connection with the affair? If not, I could easily keep secret what I "And you think Jackson was alone in the affair?" I asked, with a view to ascertaining how much Sonntag, or Wilson, knew. He cast upon me one of his whimsical looks, and after a pause replied: "At first it seemed quite certain there was some one connected with Jackson in the affair. But now I find there was Here Skinner, who had been listening to our conversation, glanced quickly up at Wilson, and I saw some signal flashed between the two.

"And what may your name be? Are you a detective, too?" I asked of Skin

"Yes." he replied, simply, "I am a detective and Skinner is my name." "Why did you try to shoot me?" "I didn't. I fired in the air. Still I did want you to think I did. It was for two purposes: One, to frighten you away until this affair was settled; another, to make you really down on me.

You see, Jackson at last seemed to suspect me, and I thought if I could show him you were terribly down on me it would put me all the closer in his confidence." "Oh, you succeeded in making him believe you were his friend?" I re-"Worked the pal racket on him, eh?" "As much as I could."

"Then you really were not treacherous to your contract with Miss Mor-"Good God, no. Who could play false to her?" Skinner exclaimed, in such convincing tones that I was satisfied. Here Mr. Perry broke in. "Your name will come out resplendent. Nel son, when the whole truth is known, and we will take care that it be known that you allowed yourself to be made a martyr of, by enduring the suspicion for the sake of aiding the search for the real robbers. Now then, come, gentlemen. Let us go into the other place.'

CHAPTER XVII.

Sonntag-or Wilson, as I ought to call him now—went first, with the lantern Jackson had used; Mr. Perry followed; I came next, and Skinner brought up the rear with another lantern. "Be careful and don't strike your heads against the dirt above, or some of it will come down," Wilson called back to us. As the passage was not more than three and a half or four feet in height, it was rather difficult to follow his advice.

"Do you suppose Jackson did all this work himself?" I heard Mr. Perry ask.
"Undoubtedly," Sonntag replied.
"You see, he used to come to Nelsonville quite frequently. For the past six weeks he had not been seen about here. But then that is no sign that he was not here. Probably during those six weeks he was at work. Here we are," he said, as he crawled out into the room.

Mr. Perry followed quickly, and I heard him exclaim, in tones of horror: "What in heaven's name is that?" Wilson placed the lantern on the floor and bent down over the prostrate body of Mr. Morley. "Why, were there two? Is he dead, too?" Mr. Perry went on. "This is terrible!-a most horrible affair! Who can it be?' The elder detective silently motioned to Skinner, and together they gently turned the body over. The president leaned down, and then started back. Consternation, doubt, amazement, horror, were on his face as he glanced from one to the other of us. "Sylvester Morley!" he finally gasped. "Impossible!" Then he leaned over the body again. "It looks very much like him, very much like him," he whispered, glancing down at Wilson, who gravely nodded his head.

"What? You mean it is Morley-this body Morley's? Great God in Heaven!" We stood silently around the body for some time, none of us willing to utter a word. But the realization of what the father's death, and in such a violent way, would mean to Florence had been growing stronger and stronger in my mind, and I finally broke down under it, covered my face with my hands and groaned aloud. Soon I felt a touch on my arm. Glancing up, I saw Mr. Perry standing be-

"It is a most terrible affair, Nelson; but never mind, my boy," he said, softly, in an attempt at comfort. His next words told me, however, that he did not know the real cause for my grief. "I know how you must feel to have a horrible event like this happen on your place. But you are cleared, at any rate. It will soon be known that you are innocent of the crime the suspicion of which you have borne so long and so patiently."

I made an effort at control, and when I again addressed Mr. Perry noticed Wilson and Skinner holding a whispered conversation. The younger man's face was toward me, and as his eye caught mine there was so much pity and sympathy in it that I could not help feeling some wonder. "To think of it all happening on my grandfather's place, whose character was as far removed from anything criminal as heaven is high above earth," I finally managed to murmur, unwilling to state the real cause of my emotion. "Is he quite dead?" Mr. Perry asked again, turning to Wilson. For answer the detective pulled back his coat and vest and pointed to the shirt bosom, which was dyed with the life "You see," he answered, quietly, "quite dead. Shot through the heart." "Did Jackson do it?" the president asked, turning to me. I nodded my head. "Why should he? What was Mr. Morley-": Fortunately, Skinner, who had arisen after his whispered conversation with Wilson, and gone poking about in the corners and behind the empty barrels and boxes, here uttered a shout which caused us all to glance in his direction. He was tugging at some object inside of a barrel, and soon brought out a large valise, which from its apparent weight and plethoric appearance was stuffed full.

"Ah, that looks promising!" ejaculated Mr. Perry, starting eagerly forward. The valise was deposited on the floor, and the president went down on his knees, in great excitement, to fumble with the catch. "Let me get at it," said Wilson. While the two were endeavoring to open the bag, Skinner came to where I was standing, and, gazing down on the dead man, said, in soft tones: "This will go hard with the young lady." There was nothing particularly striking in his words, but the tone of his voice had so much genuine feeling in it that I voluntarily turned and extended my hand.

"I hope you'll forgive me," I said. "You bet," he replied, grasping my hand. "You did pretty near choke the daylight out of me, though. What a grip you've got!" he added, with a bright smile. "But then that's all right. I'm thankful you didn't shoot. I was going to tell you who I was, as there was no use for further concealment from you, but you didn't give me any chance." "Why was the whole affair kept from me so carefully?" I asked.

The question, for some reason, embarrassed Mr. Skinner. "I guess Wilson thought you were a little hot-headed, and might give the thing away by too much zeal," he finally replied, hesitatingly. I regarded him closely, for somehow I felt sure his answer was not a true one; but he was gazing at the body at his feet in seeming sorrow.

Then he shook his head, and again murmured: "I tell you this will cut the young woman up terribly." "It will indeed. And who is to tell her!" I exclaimed, in anguish.

"That is your duty, Mr. Conway. She wouldn't take it the same from anyone else as she would from you." Then he continued, earnestly: "Yes, you're the one to tell her, and the only one who can give her any comfort-if there is any to be had. Poor lady! I hope you won't think me too forward in saying that she thought a good deal of yon; she was so anxious to get you cleared, and kept imploring me all the time to hurry up and find the real rob-

Bless my dear love's kind and true And now to have her sweet young life plunged into such grief and sorrow! It seemed cruel, oh, most cruel!

I again grasped Skinner's hand and pressed it. "My God, how can I tell her!" I exclaimed, the tears starting to

"Nelson! Nelson!" It was Mr. Perry who called, and who came up to me with his face aglow. "As far as a hasty examination goes, I have reason to believe the greater part of the bonds are here, minus the interest coupons for the past year. The rascal must have converted those into cash; anyhow, they are gone." "So it did pay you for responding so

"Your telegram!" he repeated, in surprise. "I received none." Then I explained to him, and when I had finished he said: "Wh you see, the reason I did not receive : was that I was already at Twineburgh. Wilson telegraphed me this morning, and I came up on the noon train."

quickly to my telegram," . remarked.

"Mr. Perry came into the office half an hour after you left," replied Mr. Wilson. "I sent the dispatch after I left here.' "How did you know Jackson would come to the cellar to-night?" I asked, curiously. Mr. Wilson glanced around before answering. Then he sunk his voice down low, as though afraid he might be heard by the others: "Have you forgotten the voices in your bedroom and up in the attic? The conversation was the most fortunate chance that ever befell me in my whole professional career." "Oh, then, you think Jackson was one of the parties holding the conversation?" I asked.

"Assuredly. Has not the result proved that?" he replied. "But then, who-who could have been the other?" I asked, with great fear and dread. Wilson drooped his head and seemed to be considering his reply. "Impossible to answer that question," he finally said, reluctantly. "And I don't know as there is any cause for either you or me ever to refer to that conversation. You see, a detective feels sensitive at not being able to discover everything concerning an important case. And, although we have been wonderfully successful, who Horace Jackson's assistant or master (for he undoubtedly had one) was, will probably remain forever a mystery. At least I shall not attempt anything more in the case. My duty is completed." My heart gave a bound. Mr. Morley's connection with the robbery was not suspected, even by one of the most astute detectives in America. My promise, then, might be fulfilled, and Florence, at least, spared the knowledge that her father was a great crim-

I noticed Wilson's sharp eyes were on my face, and I strove to cloak my satisfaction. Then the detective held out his hand and gave mine a hearty

"The bodies had better be removed upstairs," Wilson then said, resuming his matter-of-fact manner. In due time the two bodies were lying, side by side, on the floor of my bedroom. The man whose life before the world had been blameless and honorable, a synonym for business virtue and integrity, but who was in reality the greatest rogue imaginable-who. from his capacity for engineering large endeavors, I knew must have been the prime factor in the robbery-lay there beside his tool, who had become as accomplished a rogue as his master. Hypocrisy and pretense have always inspired the greatest repugnance in of him whose daughter was my promised wife, and remembered the bright spot in all the blackness of his real character, the love and affection for his offspring, my heart was heavy with sorrow for him. That love, so deep, so fond, that he gave up his life rather than yield to a thought which might cause her unhappiness-surely such a love was atonement; enough for the evil he had wrought. Mr. Perry was standing beside me as these thoughts flew through my mind. "I cannot understand how or why Sylvester Morley should become mixed up in this affair and so meet his death,' the . president said, in grave tones "Surely-but then that is too wild a thought to utter. But there is something I cannot understand about it." "Oh, Mr. Perry," I exclaimed, "it is my fault. I should have explained before, but the affair has sent my wits wool-gathering," I handed him the bond I had picked up, giving a brief account of the finding. Then I went on: "After I found the bond, I immediately informed Mr. Morley, as he was an interested party, being one of the trustees of the bank, and I wished some older head's advice. I explained everything to him in answer to the numerous questions he asked me." Mr. Perry was listening intently, as were also Wilson and Skinner, and the perspiration broke from my forehead as I went on with the gigantic lie.

"It seems he could not resist attempting an investigation himself, and-and so came here. I was in the cellar when he came down, but it was as dark as pitch, and I thought it was one of the robbers and that I was trapped. I did not discover the truth until too late." "Ah, that explains it all," Mr. Perry said, when I had finished. "That was Morley, truly. He was always that kind of a man, and would never depend upon another to accomplish things when he could do it himself.". I could not help glancing furtively at the two detectives, and received from each a nod of approval. In one room-once the dining-room -of the old house, a bright young fellow is working, planning, thinking, experimenting all day long, and at times all night long, too, on the problem of voice-transmission without the aid of receiver or transmitter. He has made some progress, and, as he is a patient young man of brilliant parts, I make bold to prophesy that the world will soon be startled by a lightning stroke of genius which will blazon the little hamlet of Nelsonville in characters of fire on the present generation. My wife and I are spending the summer at her residence on Sunset hill, and we drive over to the old house every day to talk and to encourage the young genius. A year has passed since Mr. Morley's death; six months after that tragic event Florence became my wife. The first evening of our arrival at Sunset hill I was sitting on the porch, watching the violet tints down in the valley. My wife was slowly pacing up and down the walk.

She had been very quiet and sober all that day, and I attributed her mood to the sorrowful recollections which the place would naturally call up. Presently she came and knelt down beside me. Resting her head on my shoulder, she spoke.

"I have something to tell you, my husband-something which I have kept hidden from you. But I have been nunished sufficiently; for there has not been that absolute trust and confidence between us that I wished. It is all my fault. Promise to forgive me, and will tell you my secret." I laughed at her, and placed my arm around her. "It must be something terrible indeed," I exclaimed, in pretended alarm. "But as you are my wife of course there is no other way but to forgive the wrong." "I-I believe-papa was concerned in the bank-robbery," she finally murmured, in broken tones.

"Good heavens, Florence! What can

"How do you know it?" I asked. "When I heard that Jackson was the guilty one, and that papa had been killed by him, I suspected then that papa had something to do with the affair. I knew there was some business relation between them that I could not understand; and then papa's secret trouble during the six weeks before he died was significant." "But, after all, this is only surmise," I said, in an attempt to comfort her. "Think of your father's position. Think how he loved you." "Oh, Nelson, I will never forget that;

I will always remember him by that strong affection he had for me. But what I have told you is not surmise. Just before we were married I sent for my detective, and insisted on knowing the truth."

"Why, I thought Wilson and Skinner knew nothing about Mr. Morley's connection with the affair," I ex-

"Oh, yes, they knew it, but out of regard for you and me they had determined to keep it secret, seeing that papa was dead and a revelation of it would do no good. If papa had lived, they would have been compelled to bring him to justice. I assigned all the property to the bank, all except this place, which was bought with money left me by my mother. Papa was not nearly so wealthy as most people supposed, but I believe what he had, along with what was obtained out of Jackson's estate, and what still remained of the stolen property, fully reimbursed the bank. That is why I came to you a poor girl instead of the heiress you had reason to expect. So you see, my husband, you married not only a comparatively penniless girl, but a-a-oh, Nelson!—a great criminal's daughter!' she faltered.

I caught her closer to me. . "I married an angel. God help me to be worthy of you!" I said, huskily. "Now, dear heart," I added, after

THE END. CAUSE OF TEMPETIANCE. The World's W. C. T. U. Convention in Ses-

Toronto, Oct. 25 .- The biennial convention of the World's Women Christian Temperance union was formally opened in the pavilion at the Horticultural gardens. The building was thronged when the convention was called to order by Miss Francis E. Willard. The convention has taken a hold of the city and the greatest interest is displayed on all sides. The platform was filled with executive and other official workers, prominent among whom were Miss Agnes Slack of England; Mrs. Kirk of Australia; Mrs. Barker of Chicago; Mrs Barnes of New York, and Miss Johnannsdottir, the Iceland representative. The speakers were received with great applause and the waving of handkerchiefs. The arrangements for seating and other accommodations have been carefully arranged and no confusion exists. Communication between the members have been provided for by means of little girl pages dressed in white, who flit, here and there at the behest of officers or members alike. The first fifteen minutes of the session were given over to devotional execises, led by Mrs. Rutherford, president of the Dominion Woman's Christian Temperance union. The report of the executive committee was read by Miss Agnes T. Slack. A notice to attend the qualifications to membership by adding the words "without distinction of color" was received with tumultuous applause. The president of the W. C. T. U., Miss Frances E. Willard, then delivered her

WASHINGTON LETTER. Special Correspondence. Oct. 25, 1897.

The people of Washington are unfortunate in a sense in being outside of the world of strife and removed from the political arena. Even in national elections they have no direct voice or interest in who may or may not be elected to office, and yet on the other hand they have the advantage of living in a city to which there is no counterpart in the land, and one, while not a political center itself, sees the reflections of things political from all over the country. Especially is this so when Congress is in session and representatives from all quarters congregate to make laws for the people and also to engage in ardent and eloquent championships of principles and politics. Even when Congress is not in session, there are of necessity many distinguised and reputable men stopping at the capital, for more or less patronage is being at all times distributed and wires are always being pulled by the initiated and experienced. There is no national campaign this fall, but there are campaigns which are of national importance. The Senate of the United States is now very closely divided, it being considered that it was by only the most consummate generalship that the tariff bill was passed as advantageously as it was, in the face of a direct majority opposed to the Republican party, and now, in Maryland and Ohio, Senators are to be elected, and it remains with the citizens of those States to say whether the complexion of the upper house of the National Legislature shall be Republican and progressive or Democratic and obstructive. So that considerable interest is felt here in watching the progress which the campaigns are making in those States. Interest centers specially in Ohio, the home of the President, and in the candidacy there of Senator Hanna, the chairman of the Republican National Committee of 1896, who led the party to the greatest victory within the recollection of its members. The party has gotten well together in Ohio and is pulling along a good stroke, while on the other hand the Democrats of the state are divided into factions and pulling in various directions. The gold Democrats are working vigorously against the success of the silverites, and the Populists have placed a regular ticket in the field and are fighting the Democrats at every point. And last the silver Republicans are sore on the Democrats and are refusing to cooperate with them in the election of free-silver John McLean to the Senate. The free-silver proposition seems to be steadily losing ground and none know it better than does

McLean. This would seem to account for his silence as well as that of other

Ohioans on the silver subject, nor is this gradual dropping of silver the case in Ohio alone. It is perfectly apparent that the silver issue is a child of hard times and that it cannot thrive under the prosperity which seems to be returning to the country and which it is useless longer to deny.

It is the generally expressed opinion

among all classes of politicians visiting the capital from various sections of the country that the free-silver sentiment is gradually contracting,

and losing ground.

"High prices and plenty of work are knocking it out," said a prominent statesmen the other day. "I come myself from a rural district and I own a farm myself and I can say that I know of lots of old-time Democrats who voted for free silver and Bryan who will never do so again, no matter how 'regular' the ticket is. They never believed in it as a principal and they see the mistake it would have been if Bryan had been elected. They see that all the prognostications that he made as to low prices and ruin, etc., in case of Mc-Kinley's election have proven false, and that on the contrary the promises of the Republican party have been and are being fulfilled as rapidly as possible and satisfactorily too, and the result is that though they may still always be Democrats they will never be free-silver Democrats again. And many of them would vote with the Republicans rather than be forced onto a silver ticket. The silver cause has irrevocably lost its hold upon the agricultural classes of the country, and will in future find no sympathy among them. Last year was the best time the silverites could have selected for the "springing" of their issue. Prices were low, and the people were dissatisfied with the condition of the country, resulting from a low tariff, destructive of American labor, and by a deal of sophistry and laying of the trouble at the hands of the "gold power" they won over many people to their cause. It was the most ingeniously conceived and executed political scheme of many years, and it is startling to think how many honest men it fooled. But free silver has "gone where the railroad received an acceptance from the attorney general of the United States of an offer of an amount equalling the full claim of the government against the main line of the Union Pacific railroad, which was some $58,000,-000. Sherefore the sale of the road will proceed without interference, it is as-ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE. Old Comrades of General Sherman Gather in Milwaukee. Milwaukee. NEIDLINGER-STARR

A pleasant wedding was celebrated in Niles yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Miss Emma Starr and Mr. Clyde Neidlinger, both prominent young people of Baroda, were married at the home of her sister, Mrs. Chas. A. Williams. The bride was dressed in green, trimmed in white satin and cream lace. Rev. L. Grosenbaugh tied the knot. A wedding supper was served and the immediate relatives and friends present helped to make the occasion memorable. The newly wedded couple left for Baroda this morning, where they will reside on their farm.-Saturday Niles Star.

NINETEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION. RERRIEN COUNTY S. S. UNION.

(Official Report) The Berrien County Sunday school Association met in annual convention in the Presbyterian church os Buchanan Mich. Oct. 26 and 27, 1897. The first session was held on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. W. P. French in ed to order at 2 P. M. by an inspiring the chair. The convention was callsong service led by Miss Elizabeth Pratt of Chicago. The President read as a Scripture lesson II Tim. 2nd. chapter. Mr. Searl s, Rev. W. E. Brooks and the president led convention in prayer. After another song F. C. Berger tendered words of welcome to which Dr. Brooks responded in appropriate words.

Resolved that the time for discussion on the subject, led by Mr. George Parsons shall be limited to three min-

In the absence of E. K. Warren, the second subject on the programme for the afternoon was taken up. "How to make a successful County and Township Convention." This subject was led by George Parsons.

An interesting discussion followed. The Selection and Interpretation of Song was the subject of an interesting talk given by Miss Elizabeth

Pratt. In the absence of H. H. Flory the last subject of the afternoon was omitted. Closed with song, and benediction by Dr. W. Brooks. TUESDAY EVENING. The evening meeting was opened promptly at 7 o'clock. Miss Pratt led in singing that soul stirring national hymn, Onward Christian Soldiers. Rev. H. L. Potter read a portion from Psalms. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Berger followed by singing, "Sweet peace the gift of God's

The President announced that Mrs. Doane who was to speak on Wednesday being obliged to return home in the morning, would now give her paper on "The Teachers Reward." Mrs. Doane has for many years been a faithful worker in the Lord's Vineyard, she is both a vigorous and original thinker, and deservedly held the close attention of the audience. Miss Bisbee then spoke on Primary work, principles and methods. It was manner, no less than matter that held her audience spell bound fully justifying the President's introduction, that she is one of the foremost Primary workers in Mich. After singing two stanzas of a familiar hymn. Rev. G. Herbert presented in a most forceful and eloquent address that fairly burnt its way into the hearts of his enraptured hearers.

It was as follows: THE MISSION OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

WORKER. There are a great many so-called failures. To one genuine success there are thousands of them. It would seem, if the gain fame sr fortune, as though many of us need hardly make the effort at all. This is eminently a commercial age, and it may be said of our country, (to our shame by the way), that the effort to gain wealth and position is the one overshadowing purpose of the American people. As a consequence, dishonesty is rampant, statesmanship is at a low ebb, while politics are corrupt, honesty is at a premium, and the whole fabric of society is honey-combed with selfishness. And yet it is eminently true that the toward the harvest which will come though those who sowed the seed, may not here join in the harvest song. The development of social, national and world life, is marked by the struggle of consecrated men and women to bring about a better order of things. Juch as these hardly dare to sit down and count the cost. They must lay their lives upon the altar, count nothing dear unto themselves, welcome, aye, "glory in tribulations." that the world may be brought finally toward the perfection at which they aim.

There are workers enough now to overturn much of the wickedness of the world, and lead many of the people to the cross of Christ. There are, for instance, in the United States in round numbers 15,000,000 protestant christians, or rather members of rotestant churches. There are 75,000 ministers of the gospel, of whom 10.000 are engaged in home missionary work. There are Bible Societies, Missionary Societies, Publication Societies, Sunday School Socleties and many others. There are over 900 collegiate institutions, most of them under religious control, 135 theological institutions, and last, but by no means not east, 100,000 Sunday Schools, a million tenchers and ten million scholars. What a mighty array of facts and figures! What an army of people! What could we not do for Christ and our country. I would not dare to say that nothing is being done. That would be to give the lie to facts which face us wherever we turn. But if we all knew our power and the true key to successful work, the achievements of the past would be utterly eclipsed. That is, if we should use the power after we knew it. The problems of today are grave, and at least some of the conditions which face us as a nation and as a church, are threaten-ing. One has said, that "we are making in this great country of ours, a daring and Chas. Lemoù and daughters, Jennie Pearl, and Mr. Wm. Slight of Baroda most hazardous experiment with human nature; an experiment which implies a larger faith in humanity than anything in the history of the ages will justify; an experiment which, if successful, is fraught with the most blissful consequences to all future ages; but which, if unsuccessful, will drive a plowshare of ruin through all the fond hopes of patriots, statesmen and philanthropists, dissipate all our bright dreams of civil and religious liberty, and relegate the race to the control of despotic authority. This nation is to be saved in a greater sense than we imagine, or it is to be lost in more terrible way than we can conceive. And this salvation or destruction is to be. for a time at least, gradual, until at the last it shall by a splendid effort touch the cross or by a fearful fall, plunge into ruin. There are the ever present forces of good and evil at work today. Those who are most active either for good or evil, can not live to see the full results of their labors, There is today not enough of good to bring about sudden transformation, nor, thank God, can Satan or his minions lay hold of our institutions and claim them. Both the evil and the good can hope for ultimate success only as they shall be able to propagate their influence and provide for its exercise. Both the evil workers and the good have the same objective point, viz., the boys and the girls. Give either influence the full control over the child and the nation is sure of salvation or ruin.

That the child is intended as a future aly of the evil one is no longer a secret. That the enemies of righteousness aim to capture the child is openly avowed by themselves. At a meeting of the Ohio Liquor Dealers in Springfield, Ohio, a few years ago, the President of the National Liquor League said publicly, "We must above all, gentlemen, create appetite. Those who are our patrons now will drop off in the very nature of things, and the ranks must be kept filled or our business will suffer. There must be the creation of appetite in the boys. Above all things, gentlemen, create appetite." And the miserable vandal was applauded to the

. The astonishing statement was made in 1891 that if the proportion of children yielded up by American parents to the insatiate greed of the saloon in the decade present decade, not fewer than 2,000,000 of our boys and girls must be socrificed! During the year 1896, 46,000 abandoned, deprayed women of the demi monde died in their sins and blood, and yet the debauched manhood of our country still demands our victims of their lust.

And the purpose of evil doers is to destroy the future manhood and womanhood of the country by enticing innocent childhood toward the pitfalls of destruction. The aim is to throttle any religious sense, and the plans are carried out with devilish precision. All the genius of organization. all the keenness of business sagacity, all the heartless planning of vicious men and vomen, as much as can be gained by purchase or intimidation in the way of legislation, all this and so much more that the ontemplation of it all makes the heart sick and the cheek blanched with fear. ALL this mighty, accursed, damnable machinery set mation against our boys and girls! "How

Our systems of education are becomin more and more secularized. Especially i this this true of our public schools. Great efforts are being made to drive the Bible from our public schools, and to make the whole system of popular education merely secular. How many of our high schools have even the study of moral philosophy in their curricula? As we look at the condition of humanity, the woeful lack of religious instruction, the intense activity of evil-doers, the almost universal worship of mammon, we turn our gaze toward the future and wonder what it has in store. You will pardon me if I call attention to another discouraging feature of our pres ent times. I refer to the lack of religious instruction in the home. The home life in our country has undergone a remarkable and serious change in the last half century. Fathers are engrossed in business and the duties to the lodge, mothers belong to clubs and societies galore, and the children like Topsy, are left to "grow up." Family worship is out of date, children listen no more in many homes to the sweet stories in the old Book, kneeling at mother's knee and looking at the play of emotion on her cheek as she tells them of the Child of Bethlehem and his wondrous love. And this is the saddest picture of all. When the home life of the country ceases to be religio s, we may well tremble for the future of our nation. I have thus referred to these few things in order to show you how defenseless is the child, and how he lacks not only safety in life, but how also the fortifications against evil are lacking in strength; how that the forces of evil are thoroughly or ganized against his future well-being; how that the child of today becomes the man or woman of the morrow; how that the habits formed by him in childhood influence him in after life; and finally how that the safe ty of the nation and the life of the church depends upon some power for good strong enough to defeat the evil, and save our boys and girls unto patriotic, consecrated godly manhood and womanhood.

We talk a great deal these days of s cia Visionary schemes-brilliant, full of soundlacking in sense-are suggested to save society. A stable currency established on a gold basis, free and unlimited coinage of silver, high tariff, social democracy, socialism, and what not are suggested as "warranted to cure or no pay asked." Once in have a mission to lead the people by a shorter route than Gethsemene and Calvary to the tops of mountains delectable, and the din of human sounds and human struggles. Human reason, human effort, man-nor can any impulse of human thought save mankind at a single stroke. This brings us to our subject, "The Real Mission of the Sunday School Worker," or rather "What Should be the Real Mission of the Sunday School Worker." The Sunday School Worker has, or should have a mission, greater, grander than the mission of any on earth unless indeed it be the preacher of the gospel. Your work is with the boys, the girls, the youth of the nation But these are the men and the women of tomorrow-to grow up into noble, earnest, God-like manhood and womanhood, with heart dauntless, nerve steady and vision clear, to see the wrong and to grapple with it, to discern the right and struggle for it, or to retrograde into low, degrading conscienceless wickedness, to become tools of the Evil One, giving the might of abandoned hone to the destrucdid in the conception and the execution of noble plans for national righteousness, to be sublimely lifted up toward the grandeur of civilization by the sanctified energies of her people, to realize the yearnings of the ages for freedom, or she is in the nature to be the prey of the despoiler of innocence, the victim of unrighteous greed vast, mighty influences which are working and passion, and is to end her national life for good, represent toil, and prayer, and sacrifice, and—thank God—faith. The true to the sound of anarchial conflict and the tolling of the bells at the death of freedom. man or woman labors for the morrow, en-And one or the other of these visions is during the discouragements and heartto be realized as the fruit of the negligence aches of today, while the gaze is directed र ब्रिक्ट क्षेत्र कर है। इसे देश कराइट है।

tion of the church and the nation.

The future of the nation is to be splen-

or the earnestness in preparing the children of today for citizenship. The teacher of that class of a dozen boys in the Sunday School, holds in his poweror her power-more of the future than can be estimated. As woman shall become more and yet more powerful in shaping the destinies of the nation, Sthat teacher of a dozen gir's in a Sunday School has power to weild a mighty hand in shaping the destinies of the church and the country. It is of course true that our patience is often tried, our hearts become oftentimes overburdened, we get discouraged almost to the point of despair, we plead with the Superintendent to appoint some other to the place of responsibility, but hold steady, my sister, my brother, God is placing before you a work which will be more signally blest of Himse f, than has been the efforts of many whose names are coupled with the fame of conquerors. That little woman, soft of voice and tender of heart, is actually, if she be doing her work with her class as it ought to be done, one of the mighty influences for the saving of the nation and

The young must be taught their duty to God and obiety. They must be taught reverence for sacred things. They must be taught the claims of a divine Lord, Saviour and Master. These doctrines of the word patiently, persistently and faithfully engrained into their hearts and lives, to be practiced in their future career, will be the sheet anchor of their faith and the nation's weal, when they and the nation shall be called upon to pass through many a fiery ordeal.

They must be taught their responsibility to God and man. They must know that they are themselves a part and parcel of toil-worn, struggling, discouraged, heartsick mass of humanity who people a world of sin. They must know that they must add to or take from the troubles of the millions; that they will make salvation nearer or destruction surer to all who them may influence: that righteousness or unrighteousness will flourish just in proportion to the zeal or negligence; that the main business of this life is to fit one's self for the life beyond; that the Bible is God's inspired word to man; that its doctrines must be obeyed; in short, they must be indoctrinated into the old, long tested and life-saving truths of the fathers.

The Bible is yet by a thousand token's the word of God. Sin is revealed to the sight on every hand. Death and the grave are in evidence every where. The need of a Divine Lord and Saviour was never more apparent. B. Fay Mills the modern hamanitarian philosopher (?) "would not dogmatize concerning the Incarnation, the Divinity or miraculous power of Jesus, the soul or the life to come." He would not affirm or deny the doctrines which have been the hope of sinful souls, ever since the Nazarene said to the guilty woman "Neither do I condemn thee; go thou and sin no more." Neither would I. But with Peter of old, after listening to the teachings, and witnessing the miraculous power of Him to whom Nicodemus and the centurion gave such reverence, I would say "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living Go ." And of the Book—backed up by the lives of millions who bear noble testimony to its power-I would still say "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my old Book. Thank God that the Bible is vet alive and yet leads in the onward march to good and greatness. The Sunday School worker, to whose keeping is intrusted so much of the nation's weal, dare not dilly-dally with the word of God. You dare not handle its truths with any sort of irreverence. You must before your school and class, impress all with the importance of these sacred things. They are immortal souls. to be directed by you in to ways everlasting. They will go out from your hand, equipped for life and its duties, or unfitted for the high mission of service. The one hour in the week, the one-one hundred sixty-eighth of their time has crowded into it more of responsibility, more of sublime possibilities than you can know, unless you learn from the Great Teacher the value of a human soul, If the matter be important in its relation to children from christian homes, what shall we say of those from homes that are not christian. Start a child to Sunday School at the age of three years from a god ess home. Suppose he is under your care as a Sunday School schol. ar for eighteen years and has not missed a single Sunday. You have had him for a sum total of just thirty-nine days in the thousand five hundred and thirty-one days he is away from you and you and your care subject to all the evils and sins which are placed so alluringly before him. The proportion would stand about thus: 39 is to er of Satan's minions to destroy!!! This places the matter only on an equation. For the rest God and Satan must make the con-Do you begin to see the importance of your work? Do you stagger as you contemplate what God expects and humanity demands of you? At a great meeting of ministers and laymen held in the east some years ago, out of over a thousand answers to the question "At what age did you become a christian?" all but the matter of a score were converted in childhood, under the age of fifteen years. One of our great religious statisticians has carefully estimated that of all who became chaistians, not one in twenty-five confesses Christ after the age of thirty years. The Rev. Dr. James L. Hill writing in a recent number of the Independent says. Sunday Schools are in some places making themselves over with reference to bringing their scholars to religious decision. Sunday Schools were originally formed to dispel sheer ignorance of the elements of letters on the part of children who had no secular training on week-days. But now as day-schools are universal and the boys and girls are obliged to attend them, it is bath Schools can be held within a peculiar sphere and be directed toward other aims than mental nourishment, invigoration and culture. That is coiefly taught which will cause a desire toward God, and incite toward hearty repentance, to frank confess-School is destined yet further to be the nursery of the Church, where the children are led to the Lord Christ, and by means of a new heart and a new life fitted for membership in the visible Kingdom of God. What may be called the pastoral function of the teacher in the Sunday School has been and is yet to be very much enlarged And yet how many are there who really to supplement the work of the pastor." rise to the full stature of genuine soul-say ers among our Sunday School workers? We meet our classes, exchange greetings, sing, bow our heads while some one else prays, take up a collection, ask a few quesions on the lesson, sing, close, and drop the whole matter until the next Sunday. Our own hearts have been but lightly touched, the scholors have been touched no more deeply, and the whole study of the lesson has been superficial, unsatisfactory.-and. I am heartily ashamed to say it. in many cases fruitless.

In the years to come we employ evangelists, we storm and charge. we pray and struggle, we weep and lament over the hard heartedness of man, because he doenot repent and accept Christ. When we learn the real way of the cross, it will lead us into plans and methods which will save the child while he is a child, and thus save the man before he becomes a man. How many of our Sunday School teachers pray for the members of their classes. pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit in the study of the lesson and the Father may bless the study of the lesson to the saving of the class. Not a lesson comes before us for study which may not be made a means of conveyance for some central heart-truth. Not only is it important that the lesson be presented historically but doctrinally and savingly. Take last Sunday's lesson, for instance. It was a wonderful scene,-Paul before-Agrippa,-and it was a wonderful defence that Paul made. How many of you used that fruitful occasion last Sunday to impress upon those whom you taught the importance of loving and serving Christ as Paul did? How much did future, better and nobler visions than we you study the lesson? How earnestly did think. God only knows it now, but in the you pray over it that God might help you | fulness of His time He will clear away the to make it in your hands to minister unto the salvation of those to whom you are a teacher? Did you make a personal appeal to the boys and the girls to give their hearts to Christ? If you did, they listened to you, I'll warrant. If you did not, that accounts in a great measure for the carelessness and listlessness of your class.

Do your scholars know that you are personally interested in their wellfare? Have you prayerfully and carefully impressed them with the fact of your for them? Do you agonize with God for them? Are you really anxious for their salvation? Then every lesson and every influence will be adjusted to that end. Then you shall see the desire of your heart and they will bear greatful tribute to you in the judgment, and you shall have the blessed realization of knowing that you "have saved a soul form death and hidden a multitude of sins." After all, true success is not measured by wealth represented by dollars and cents. some of us who have no financial acumen have comfort in this, for if we must be neasured by the amount of stocks and bonds we have accumulated we must find out that we have come far short of su cess So must many who yet have to point to nothing but a bett red world, saved sou's and the higher exalted cross of Christ. In this great work in which we are engaged, the matter of money renumeration does not enter. There are some things beyond financial computation. Some of these are talent, influence, patriotism, and love And yet these we may all have if we : irect our energies toward the great work comprehended in "The Mission of the Sunday School Workers." Do you really desire to be a soul-winner? Then of you it may be said in your relation to the millions of wicked influences about you. "One shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight." This talent of soul-saving is strengthened and sanctified by the hours of study and prayer, to which your own closet witnesses. The earnest reaching out after the Spirit's guidance, the hours of closet agony, the "patient continuance in well-doing." the never ceasing longing and toil for the well-being of your class and school, must and will bring forth fruit in the salvation of the nation. In proportion to prayer and struggle, talent in this great work increases. So it is with influence. Your influence for good is not measured so much by personal magnetism, by brain power, even, as by desire to win souls. Your class knows if you are in intimate communion with the Father. They feel it by the almost unconscious power which is developed by nothing so much as dwelling on the mountain, talking face to face with God. When we discuss plans and methods, we often plan great schemes to win members to our Sunday School and Church. Is praying on the wane? Is our influence gained by resorting to sometimes questionable methods to strengthen it? My dear Sunday School path." will not be Divine. Patriotism is not a commodity in the arket. It can not be purc ased. The safety of our nation is in danger when godless men take advantage of the nation's peril to enrich themselves. In the dark days of the Rebellion, some of the worst traitors who ever tried to sheathe a glistening blade in the heart of the country, were to be found in the north, cornering the gold of the land, thus hoping by the very extremity and peril of the country to reap from 24 to 36 percent on their godlessly accumulated store. Compared with them Jeff Davis was a gentleman! They were patriots who were taught that next to God That next to the Bible was Constitution. And that next to the Gos pel was the Declaration of Independence. The safty of the nation then as now was in the hands of Christian husbands who were willing to leave the wife and bairns in God's hands, while they fought. In the hearts of Christian boys who bade adien to hom and gave their young lives to the country. In the loving oscus of te mothers, wives, daughters, sisters and sweethearts, who besought the God o Nations while their dear ones ought, and bled, and died, "Blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord." It is in the development of patriotism which shall e teem no sacrifice to great when God and duty

This opens up a tremendous opportunity for the Sunday School workers. The United States in the future must be "God's Country or nothing. Of no other thing am I more sure than that the living, conquering force of the futu:e which shall save the nation from peril and even destruction must be the uplifting, altruistic force of the cross and Christian patriotism. So long as the boys of to-day are given to cigarettes street-corner loaning, store-box squatter sovereignts, profanity, obscenity and the scores of vices which are the heritage of the boys unless some one does something to bring about genuine reformation, so long the future of the nation is darkened by angry clouds, while the mutterings of a gathering tempest of destruction rumble in the distance In your hands, ye teachers and officers of our Sunday Schools, is the clay. You must be potters, not potterers. You must mould this yielding material into exalted, god-like citizens: ip, or Satan will spoil it all and turn out deformed, degrading, hideous travesties of the art of which God would have you adepts. Do I affirm too much when I say that you and your work will be impressed upon the saving or the overthrow of the country which we love so dearly? Patriotism, good citizenship, are evolutionary in their progress, and the evolution will be accelerated or retarded just in proportion to your zeal and sacrifice. Love is not measured by any standard of value. It cannot be purchased with silver or gold. It is the one mighty, stupendous, all conquering force which bears us onward and yet upward toward greater sacrifices and more splendid triumphs, as the years of our lives go by. Love stops not things that please or gratify. Love regards not at all our own theor es or philosophies. Love is disinterested, altruistic, concrebe, conquering. It transforms sacrifice into victory, trial into triumph, selfishness into philanthropy, humanity into divinity. Love has given to the world Howard, Clarkson, Wilberforce, Washington, Elizabeth Fry, Florence Nightingale. Emily Judson, Dor thea Dix. "None of these were royal in int-llect, but they were o' royal heart.' Yours is essentially a labor of love. Love Your work is trying, slow, often ciscourag ing, but God looks on approvingly, and humanity waits expectantly for the completion of your self-imposed task, oh, my brother, my sister, toil on, through trials sore and conflicts dire, toil on, through heartaches keen, and hottest fire, through mists of tears and weary years, God sees and knows it all; and He will care, and He will help, and sometime He will show, that you in His hands have been blest and sancified and made worthy of that higher plane of usefulness, and trust, and responsibility into which you shall enter when He shall say, "It is enough come up high-

Was it Kenler who "once undertook to verify and hypothesis of his by series, or rather several series of mathematical demonstrations. It requires a long time and the assistance of others, and if there was a single mistake it would vitiate the whole calculation. But he wrought on for weeks and months, and I do not know but years; one after another of his painfully wrought calculations and demonstrations was completed and came out all right and it was growing into clearer light that his calculations were correct, his joy became so great he was compelled to turn away and leave feared he would die of joy " So, my dear fellow workers let us labor on and pray on we are working out for the mists and we shall see it all Until then we walk by faith, and praise Him still that He has counted us worthy of a place and a work in the salvation of a sin-cursed world. "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever.

FIRST WRECK

NIGHT.

About 10 o'clock, Sunday night, a train composed of an engine, the office car and mess car of the Crouch Construction Company started for Benton Harbor, running at a slow rate of speed. On board the cars were, Messrs. C. D. Crouch, F. A. Young and W. E. Shawan, of the Construction Company, in addition to the train crew. When just a short distance north of town the engine, which was backing, ran onto a horse belonging to Mr. Person which, in some manner, had gotten loose and wandered into the cut. The horse was killed, and the force of the has instituted a Patrician court of shock threw the forward truck of the engine off the track and overturned both cars. The conductor, Ed. Knowles, was so badly shaken up that he had to be taken to his boarding place in a buggy. The rest of the party were bruised some-somewhat, but nothing serious. The main track was changed to connect with the switch, and regular trains are running on time. When the steam shovel has completed its work at which it is engaged, it will be brought down and the cars set upon the tracks again. The loss to the company is about $200.

BABIES GALORE!

WERE AT THE BABY CARNIVAL.

The members of the L. O. T. M. are very complacently viewing the results of their hard work of preparation for the much talked of "Baby Carnival". All Buchanan seemed to be drawn irresistibly toward the store where the little mites of humanity were on exhibition, and all the time during the hours of the "Carnival" the room was crowded. The list of entries was gratefully large, there being no less than seventy-seven babies on exhibition. The entries were as follows:

No. 1-John Edmund DeMott. 2-Alvira May Stottard.

3-Mary Elizabeth Ashby. 4-Viola Alfonte. 5-Henry Feather French.

6-Otilia Burkholt. 7-Ellen Lucille Myler. 9-Allene Peck.

A total of 228 votes cast, and for the baby over one year old Allene Peck received the most votes: for the baby under 1 year old, Richard Earl Eaton was the choice. These two babies received the silver cups given Rose visited in the Second grade, this by the L. O. T. M. In addition to these prizes, four specials was awarded as follows: Given by the editor of the Buchanan Record-to the crossest baby, the BUCHANAN RECORD, one year, awarded to Jackson Volney English; to the best natured baby, the BUCHANAN RECORD, one year, awarded to John Edmund DeMott. Given by Messrs. Parker & Wildren of the Buchanan Banner-to the oldest baby, order for photos and Banner for one year, awarded to Flossie Elizabeth Hood; to the youngest baby, order for photos, awarded to Lena Long.

The "Carnival" was a great success, and developed the fact that Buchanan babies are all so good natured, that it was extremely difficult to decide which was the best natured.

* * * OBITUARY.

MARGARET A. ROGERS was born in Tapsham, Maine, Nov. 8, 1816; married, June 23, 1837, and moved to Brunswick, Maine, where most of her married life was spent, and all her children were born. Six of her seven children survive her: Gov. John R. of Olympia, Wash.; Robt. H. of Wyoma, W. Va.; Mrs H. C. Storm of Benton Harbor, Mich.; Mrs. LeRoy H. Dodd of Buchanan, Mich.; Rev. J. M. and Geo. G. of Manistique. Since her husband's death, in Buchanan, in Dec., 1882, she has resided for the most of the time with her son, Rev. J. M. Rogers, but has made extended visits with the other children. The extreme heat [of the summer greatly debilitated her, but she was not considered to be in a dangerous condition until about three weeks before her death-which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Le-Roy H. Dodd, Oct. 22, 1897. From that time she was confined to her bed. A day or two before the end came, congestion of the bowels set in, and she had not sufficient vitality to resist this last attack. And every attention that a devoted daughter could give a mother was given her by her daughter, Mrs. Dodd, who was alone with her when her spirit took its flight. She possessed all her powers in a remarkable degree, up to the very last, and evinced her interest in passing events by her thoughtfulness for others, and of others, in a thousand sweet and gentle ways. One of the saints of earth has passed to her other home, with a peaceful and loving trust in her Father in Heaven. TEXT OF DOCUMENT WITHHELD.

Regret Expressed That the Insurrection in Cuba Receives Support from American Filibustering Expeditions-New Policy Toward Cuba - Americans in Havana Alarmed Over the Coming Volunteer

Madrid, Oct. 26.-The Spanish government refuses to furnish for publication the text of the note of Spain which has been handed to the United States minister here, General Stewart L. Woodford as an answer to the communication which the general placed in the hands of the Duke of Tetuan early in September last, when the latter was minister for foreign affairs, on the subject of the insurrection in the island of Cuba. The United States minister admits having received Spain's reply to the note of the United States, but he declines to discuss the matter beyond saving that the text of the Spanish answer will be immediately transmitted to Washington. From other sources it was learned that the officials of the United States legation were engaged in translating Spain's answer, and it was reported that the United States minister would cable to Washington immediately the full text of the Spanish note.

As to Filibustering Expeditions. Although the government of Spain will not give out the text of its reply to the United States on the subject of Cuba, it was officially announced that the reply of the Spanish minister for foreign affairs, Senor Gullon, is on the following lines: It expresses regret at the fact that the insurrection in Cuba "Receives support from frequent American filibustering expeditions," and that otherwise the rebellion in Cuba would possibly not exist. It is hoped by the Spanish government and by granting autonomy to Cuba and the withdrawing of American support of the insurgents the insurrection will shortly be

It is further officially announced that the Spanish note is marked throughout by an energetic tone. According to the reports in official circles here the United States minister will confine himself to acknowledging the receipt of the Spanish reply and after forwarding it to the United States government will request instructions from Washington before proceeding any further in the Publication of the Reply. It is not expected that the text of the answer of Spain will be published here before the senate has had the opportunity of deliberating upon it and, therefore, it is understood that the text of the document may not be published in the United States until after the reassembling of congress. But, before congress reassembles (the first Monday in December, otherwise, Dec. 6), it is expected by the Spanish officials here that the condition of affairs in Cuba, so far as the insurrection in that island is concerned, will have considerably improved, and that, therefore, the whole question will have assumed a brighter aspect. Finally, it is announced from official sources, the Spanish government has determined to pursue a new policy towards Cuba and to take more energetic military action against the Cuban

ANXIETY IN HAVANA.

Volunteers to Make a Demonstration on the Departure of Weyler. Havana, Oct. 26.—Considerable anxiety is expressed among the American of the demonstration which the volunteers are expected to make on Friday or Saturday next upon the departure of General Weyler for Spain. In spite of the orders from Madrid and the steps taken by the Spanish officials here, there is still apparently a determination upon the part of the volunteers who, in this matter, seem unwilling to be congeneral's departure from Havana the occasion of an anti-American demonstration. Should this be the case, it is feared that serious trouble may ensue and many of the Americans of this city have been heard to express more strongly than ever the wish that a United States warship will be present in this harbor to protect American life and property if necessary.

Didn't Want to Go to Cuba. Santander, Spain, Oct. 26.-An incipient mutiny was arcused here by some soldiers, who had been ordered to embark for the island of Cuba, refusing to go on board the transports. Although the men were eventually compelled to obey orders, the occurrence has aroused ble behavior of future detachments of Spanish troops ordered to the war. DECREE OF FORECLOSURE AFFIRMED

Detroit Gas Company Defeated on Nearly All Points.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 26.—Alexander Lewis and Jerome Croul, representing the stockholders of the old Detroit Gas Light company in their foreclosure proceedings against Camille Weidenfeld and the Detroit Gas company, defeated the gas company upon nearly every point raised in the supreme court. The decree of foreclosure granted by the against all the property of the gas company. The amount of the mortgage was $1,000,000 and the purchase price of the plant was $1,450,000. Croul and Lewis represented the old company and Weidenfeld, who made the purchase, conveyed the property to the Detroit Gas company. Weidenfeld was made a party to the suit because he was the original contractor and he is held to be liable for any deficiency that may exist upon the sale of foreclosure. The New York Guaranty and Indemnity company is also a defendant in the suit. as it holds a subsequent mortgage on the gas company's property.

Bad Man with a Gun. Gorham, N. J., Oct. 26.—Thomas Monahan, while crazed with drink, shot Joseph Gautheir, an employe of the Grand Trunk railroad, killing him instantly. Mozahan also shot Selectman Gates of Gorham, probably fatally injuring him. Later another body was found which, it is believed, is that of the third victim of Monahan's fury. BOILER ROOM WRECKED.

Fuel Supposed to Have Been Loaded with

Dynamite. Wausau, Wis., Oct. 26.-Soon after noon an explosion wrecked the boiler room of the Wausau Excelsior works. The fireman, Joseph Brown, had just put in some fuel into the firebox when blast which nearly demolished the building followed. The doors of the fireplace and ash pit were broken to pieces, the fine caps blown off, the boiler slightly moved, and the walls so badly broken that they will have to be torn down and rebuilt and Brown was knocked down and badly burned, but his injuries

The wreck caught fire but the blaze was quickly extinguished. There is said to be little doubt that the accident was the result of malice and that the fuel was loaded with dynamite or some other explosive in an attempt to destroy the plant. A rigid investigation is being

Blizzard Follows Warm Weather.

Omaha, Oct. 26.—The warmest month of October ever experienced by white men in this region is closing in a blizzard. Rain began falling in western Nebraska and South Dakota turning to snow and continuing all night. Dispatches from Valentic are to the effect that heavy snow has fallen there, while in the western end of the state the railways are having trouble in moving trains. Snow has fallen in the Black Hills and in central South Dakota cold rains have put a stop to threshing.

Cause for the Snub Berlin, Oct. 26.—The Tageblatt explains that the refusal of the czar to receive the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden at Darmstadt was due to the sarcastic comments made by the Grand Duke of Baden upon the conversion of the czarina, formerly Princess Alix of Hesse, sister of the Grand navy; Wilson R. Gay, United States previous to her marriage to the czar in

TRAIN PLUNGES INTO THE RIVER. Miraculous Escape of the Passengers in the Wagner Sleeping Cars-Nearly All of Them Were Asleep When the Disaster

Occured -Six Bodies Taken from the Day

Coach-The Work of Rescue-Scenes and Incidents. New York, Oct. 26,-The New York and Boston special express train No. 46, over the New York Central and Hudson River road, was thrown from the tracks into the Hudson river at Corbin's basin. two miles below Garrison's, at 5:40 in the morning. There were ninety-six passengers and fourteen trainhands on board. No list was obtained of those who were in the sleeping car. Twentyeight persons are known to be dead and the list is not yet complete. The bodies recovered are all at Cold Spring, where the coroner has an office. The engine and express car are in fifty feet of water. The combination baggage and smoking car and one day coach are submerged. Of the six sleepers one is entirely under water, two are only partially covered. Three of the sleepers did not leave the track. The wreck is said to have been caused by the tides washing away the underpinning of the track.

Rescued Through the Window. The engineer and fireman went down with the engine. Many passengers were rescued through the car windows. Among those in the smoking car were eleven Chinamen who had been smuggled in from Canada. All save three of them were lost. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Malthy of Chicago, the former a favorite nephew of the New York Central's president, were among the rescued passengers. Another was an Englishman. All day and night the search for the dead continued.

There was no Chicago coach on the train and Green, whose name appears among the list of dead, is the only one from that city who is known to have lost his life. Alderman Malthy was awakened when the crash came, and found the sleeper half filled with water. While the water began to mount rapidly to-ward the roof of the car he succeeded in reaching a window, which he opened, and after a heroic struggle succeeded in forcing his wife through the narrow aperture, and crawling after her. They reached the shore in safety.

Identifying the Dead. The corener and his assistants searched the dead bodies in the hope of finding some clew to their identity. They began at No. 2, a Chinaman, without discovering anything. A quantity of money was found in the lining of his clothes, but was not disturbed. In the pocket of No. 3, a Chinaman, was found a Canadian passport made out to Ah Ging. No other papers were found. No. 4, a Chinaman, was without papers. In the pecket of No. 5 was found a letter of introduction to Hop Ling of Newark, N. J., but no other name could be found. Nothing was found on the other three

By letters and papers found in the pocket of No. 1 he was identified as Thomas Ryley of St. Louis. He wore a gold ring, on the inside of which was the following inscription: "Presented to Comrade Ryley by his comrades Post 15, G. A. R." Some small charge and £25 in English money was found on the body. No. 9 was a young man, about 30 years of age, well dressed. A letter addressed to E. A. Green, care A. W. The Double Skirt.

The double skirt is not becoming to many women. It shortens in appearance a figure to which every inch is a distinct advantage, and, worn by a taller woman, one gets at first sight the impression of a schoolgirl who has outgrown her petticoats. A skirt that has a second edition which reaches to just below or is on a line with the knees will prove decidedly more becoming if double skirts are to become general.-New York Post.

COMTESSE DE CASTIGLIONE.

Once the Greatest Beauty In France, Now Old, Ugly and Deserted. When the second empire was in the height of its glory, there were many marvelously beautiful women collected at the court of Napoleon and Eugenie, but the most beautiful of them all was that neerless creature the Comtesse de Castiglione, who played such havoc with men's hearts, and especially with the emperor's. All the glory and the glitter and the splendor of those days have fied. Only the stark memory of it is left, and the once lovely comtesse is now old and ugly and disabled. She resides in a quiet street in Paris and is without friends or relatives and is poor and pitifully disabled. Her blinds are always drawn. If she ventures out, it is always in a closed cab, and she leads the life of a recluse, living on the memories of the past. She reigned a queen for years—a queen of beauty, with all men at her feet.—New York Journal.

The Winter's Vogue In Furs.

It is predicted that for the winter the furs most in vogue will be chinchilla, sable, marten sable in the dark shades, sealskin, astrakhan and that peculiar variety of astrakhan called breitschwantz (still born lamb), an exquisitely soft skin like moire velvet, which is specially adapted for the blouses and jackets, which will be really the novelties of the season. The long cloaks incline rather to the redingote shape, although they are straight in front.

In fur lined garments the upper part of the bodice alone is lined with fur. Again, the cloak is merely trimmed with fur, and again, the fur lines it entirely. Green, heliotrope or dark red cloth or velvet, developed in long cloaks and lined or trimmed with fur, specially obtain for women who are tall and slender. Beautiful collars, yokes and neck pieces of various shapes are developed in fur, to be worn over a cloth coat or dress and accompanied by a muff of and a toque decorated with the same fur.-Ladies' Home Journal.

Thirteenth Century Women. I have just come across a passage in a book of gleanings from one Bartholomew Anglicus, a mediæval writer. He lived about the middle of the thirteenth century. The passage is on the subject of women. You shall hear how the old philosopher regarded the sex. It begins with a command, direct and simple, and applicable in all ages: "Men behove to take heed of maidens. For they be tender of complection, small, pliant and fair of disposition of body, shame fast, fearful and merry. Touching outward disposition, they be well nurtured, demure and soft of speech and well ware of what they say and delicate in their apparel. And for a woman is more meeker than a man, she weepeth sooner, and is more envious and more laughing and loving, and the malice of the soul is more in a woman than in a man. And she is of feeble kind and is more shamefast, and she maketh more leesings and is more slow in working and in moving than a man."—Walter Be-

The Braid Mania. The tailors assure us that the braid mania has come to stay, and that the autumn and winter walking gowns are to be adorned with soldierly trimming of epaulets, frogs, etc. Some of these braided designs are very pretty, and in black or gray, blue, deep red or dark green cloth are extremely becoming. The braided tailor made gown is the tailor made gown for the slender woman. The most severely plain costume can be made becoming by elaborate braiding, and the too slender wearer may rest in the serene consciousness that her much trimmed suit is perfectly

Designs in fine silk braid and in jet passementerie, on the same order as the patterns for cloth suits, are to be used for frocks of silk and other light materials. Indeed, some of our old ideas on the subject of dress are to be upset completely this season. One need not be severe and simple in order to be tailor made.—New York Commercial.

Put Her Lessons Into Practice.

Miss Susan W. Randall, daughter of the late Samuel J. Randall of Philadelphia. proved awhile ago the true meaning of first aid to the injured. She was driving along a street in Utica, where she was visiting, when George D. Frazier, a veteran soldier, was run over by the electric cars, which severed his legs below the knees. There were several attendants and inmates upon the veranda of the Whitesboro sanitarium, in front of which the accident occurred, but they seemed too horrified to offer any assistance to the injured man. Miss Randall sprang from the carriage and, examining Frazier's wounds, called for help from the sanitarium. Receiving no attention, she rushed into the yard, and, cutting down the clothesline, she bound up the limbs, stopping the flow of blood. She afterward assisted at the amputation, and the physicians declare the man owes his life to her prompt action.

Women's Enlarged Sphere of Labor. It is evident that women are pressing forward more and more into professions and positions formerly held exclusively by men. This, in our opinion, is an excellent sign, although in some branches of labor there is reason to regret it. What women more particularly require is a training from an early age which will enable them to take their own part in the battle of life when, through the death of those on whom they were dependent or through misfortune, it becomes incumbent upon them to provide for themselves. This early training is a matter which does not appear to receive the attention and consideration that it ought, for how many women are there who can, for example, compute interest intelligently and accurately? How many are there who are even capable of managing their own affairs or their own property, if they have any, with anything like business capacity? The education of woman is not complete unless she has as a part of her equipment a knowledge of at least the rudiments of business. Women who are blessed with a fair share of worldly goods need this knowledge hardly less than those who have to make their own way in the world, and who have not the p and guardianship of husband and father, for such women can never be sure that they may not at any moment be called upon to earn their own livelihood.-New York Ledger.

Bicycling Servants Barred. "The bicycle has put a premium on female servants," said the proprietor of an intelligence office in New York, "for now it is more difficult to get a good maidservant than it ever was before. People who come here to engage servants are particular in stating that they will, pay high wages to a girl who does not ride a wheel. Like their sisters in other stations in life, the servant girls have taken to wheeling, and in doing so neglect their household duties. It's got so nowadays that some of them refuse to take situations where they are forbidden to go out wheeling. On the other hand, the women who want servants don't want bike servants. They say that the servants who ride wheels are so anxious to get out that they do their work too quickly, and hence badly, then dash away on their wheels and stay out until 1 o'clock in the morning. The result is that the girl is late in getting breakfast and dopy in waiting on the table. One woman came in here the other day and offered me $50 as commission to get her a good servant who had not learned to ride, and many employers are willing to pay as high as $50 a month for such a girl."—Exchange.

A New Lining. A new material for skirts and dress linings, which is used very extensively in Paris by all the leading dressmakers, is called silkerin. This material, entirely new and of very pretty appearance, is an all silk article, well suited to the shape of dresses now worn. It maintains any soft material and does not give as much stiffness as some varieties of linings. With it there is no necessity to use any other silk lining. Although it is all silk, silkerin is much cheaper than other silk materials. It is very light, but substantial and elastic enough to sustain the dress. It cannot be torn and does not rumple or shrink. It is capable of being put to many uses other than lining. In Paris they make it up into very pretty underskirts. This material, which will be in this market very soon, will be used here, as it is in Paris, by every leading dressmaker in place of other linings, for the reason that it takes the place of both silk and haircloth. For the October Bride.

This season white taffeta takes the lead for bridal gowns and has a very high satin finish. The trimmings are used as a softening effect and are made of chiffon of the same white tint in the form of soft gathered ruches or full narrow ruffles. Sleeves of chiffon, made in mousquetaire style, reaching down well over the wrist, finish with a narrow ruche of the same. Fashion has made a departure; and now consents, though with much reluctance, to a very modestly low necked bodice, though the high necked waist is always considered in better taste, for a bride, who is always expected to pose as a modest, unassuming maiden on her wedding day.

Veils are draped in Russian style from the crown of the head, held with flowers, having the short face veil. which is removed just after the marriage ceremony. Congratulations must never be offered until the short veil has been removed. — Woman's Home Companion. Evolution of Sleeves It is said that in woman's dress the sleeve has undergone greater changes than any other portion of her clothing. In England, after the Saxon invasion, the sleeve first began to assume definite shape, and through the centuries became long, short, pendulous, puffed, tight, full, capped or cuffed. The tight ones were so tight they had to be buttoned from shoulder to wrist. A certain kind of tight sleeve with open pendent ones bauging from the shoulder was a very ornamental style. These sleeves may be seen on the fine bronze figure of Edward III's daughter on one side of his tomb in Westminster abbey.

It seems as if we are now approachg the evolution of this hanging sle again. It has commenced at the shoulder, where deep frills stand out like angels' wings over a tight sleeve. It is probable that in a season or two more the frill will have descended to the wrist and changed somewhat in shape. It is to be hoped that the concessions due to our advancing civilization will be observed in these mutations, so that the comfort and convenience demanded by modern life may not fail to be maintained. Really, the sleeves of this season have run so much to frills and puffs that these lines written in 1753 seem quite appropriate now: Let your gown be a sack, blue, yellow or green, And frizzle your elbows with ruffles sixteen. -New Orleans Times-Democrat.

She was aboard a Broadway car the other day, and it was evident that she had lost something. Soon it was plain what the something was-her handkerchief, for she tugged at her belt and bunted up her sleeves and in her bodice and in her purse and all the other many places in which women are in the habit of stowing away the article. But it was no use. The handkerchief was not to be found. The interested carful, no less than the woman, were just resigning themselves to the loss when a man whose white hairs justified him in so doing remarked, "Beg pardon, madam, but have you tried your pocket?" "No," cried the woman, and, diving into the folds of her dress skirt, she fished forth the handkerchief. Of course, all the men in the car smiled in their own superior way, as though it were the most amusing thing in the world. But there was really nothing funny about it. For so long were women deprived of their pocket privileges that

Twelve Men in the Luetgert Murder Case Chicago, Oct. 22.-Adopth L. Luetgert's fate is still undecided. The jury has disagreed. He will have to be tried all over again. Rumors of corruption are flying thick and fast, but as yet there is nothing to substantiate them. The long, wearisome trial, with the confusing mass of evidence, produced such decidedly different effects on the minds of the jury that they found there was 'to chance for an agreement. Ballot after ballot was taken, but in vain There were some who declared they would hang out indefinitely for a verdict of guilty, while others were just as set in the opposite convictions. Finally it was decided to announce a disagreement. Judge Tuthill asked the jurors to make a further effort to reach a decision, on account of the vast expediture of money, time and trouble necessary for another hearing of the But all efforts to reach a verdict proved futile. The jurors slowly filed back into the court room. The air was filled with intense excitement. The crowd arose to its feet in its eagerness to hear the decision. The rapping of the bailiffs' mallets and the calls to "s.t down" were scarcely heeded. The jury stood in two silent rows in the jury box and waited for order. There was a moment of breathless silence. Luetgert as he leaned forward in his chair, with his eyes riveted upon the faces of the jurors, was the picture of intense anxiety. Attorneys Vincent and Phalen on one side of the table and Deneen and RicEwen on the other listened eagerly for the decision.

"Gentlemen." said Judge Tuthill, in an apparently undisturbed tone, "have you agreed upon a verdict?" "We have not," replied the foreman. "How do you stand numerically?" "Nine for conviction and three for acquittal," was the answer. was a buzz of room. The bailiffs' mallets and voices were again brought into play. State's Attorney Deneen and Assistant State's Attorney McEwen were plainly disap-pointed. Inspector Schaack looked still deeper aggrieved. On the defense side of the table there was also disappointment, but apparently not so keenly felt. Luetgert sank back in his chair. He seemed anxious to get away. He is practically bankrupt and there is no knowing where he will get the money for a new trial. Judge Tuthill expressed regret that the issue could not have been decided one way or the other. Then he discharged the jury, after thanking them for their close attention during all the tedium of the protracted trial.

LITERARY NOTES.

The November number of the DE-

LINEATOR is called the early winter number and its wealth of good things is headed by nearly a hundred pages devoted to styles for late Autumn and Winter, with superb color plates. Among its literary features, Octave Thanet's analysis of Social Life in the Small Cities and Towns will be found especially discriminating. The Quaker heroine of Harriet Riddle Davis' stirring story, "A Chance of War," is not more entertainingly original in her way than is the dashing American girl in "The Further Adventures of the Grand Duke," by Martin Orde. Jeanie Drake's brilliant series of New York Types concludes with a bright and witty depiction of 'The Foreign Resident." In her "Talks on Health and Beauty" Dr. Grace Peckham Murray discusses the scientific and hyginic aspects of Dress. No other pages of the magazine will be read with keener interest than Mrs. Cadwalader Jones' replies to questions concerning behavior and etiquette. The DELINEATOR'S young people have an invaluable mentor in this accomplished lady. They are further remembered in a pretty Ribbon Drill, and in Three Novel Entertainments. The reflex action of dress is among the topics treated in Mrs. Witherspoon's Tea-Table. Vegetarians will be delighted by the cookery article, exclusively devoted to dishes for their use. Mr. Vick's Flower Garden includes some curious facts about the Rubber Plant. There are the usual notices of New Books, and the Little Folks are not forgotten. Emma Haywood's explanation of an effective combination of lace-work with colored embroidery is supplemented by the regular departmen.s devoted to Crocheting, Tatting, etc.

He had the courage and heroism to ride on muleback for three thousand miles. The ride was thrilling, the trials and hardships marvelous, the result a glorious one. The whole story, beautifully illustrated, will be given in the November issue of The Ladies Home Journal, under the title, "When Dr. Whitman Added Three Stars to Our Flag," the closing and most intensely interesting article in the Journal's successful series of "Great Personal Events." Deafness Can't Be Cured By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you bave a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. # AN OPEN LETTER To MOTHERS.

WE ARE ASSERTING IN THE COURTS OUR RIGHT TO THE EXCLUSIVE USE OF THE WORD "CASTORIA." AND "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," AS OUR TRADE MARK.

I, DR. SAMUEL PITCHER, of Hyannis, Massachusetts, was the originator of "PITCHER'S CASTORIA," the same that has borne and does now bear the fac-simile signature of hat Hitching wrapper. This is the original "PITCHER'S CASTORIA" which has been used in the homes of the mothers of America for over thirty years. LOOK CAREFULLY at the wrapper and see that it is the kind you have always bought, and has the signature of hat Hillithin wrapper. No one has authority from me to use my name except The Centaur Company of which Chas. H. Fletcher is
