Judge D. E. Hinman, an Old and Respected Citizen Quite III. Last night when Judge D. E. Ilinman went to his home he was feeling as well as usual, and after supper attended to the various duties about his place, and about 8 o'clock sat down to remove his overalls, Mrs. Ilinman was in the room and noticed him fall forward upon the floor. Thinking he had simply lost his balance, ehs addressed some jocular remarks to him but finding he did not answer ran to him and found that he seemed perfectly helpless. Mrs. Hinman ran to the home of W. A. Palmer and summoned assistance. Dr. Henderson was called and pronounced Mr. Hinman suffering from an attack of apoplexy, he administered the necessary remedies and this morning the stricken man was resting much easier although it had left his right side somewhat paralized and his organs of speech affected. Dr. Henderson states that Judge Hinman | murder. is in no immediate danger, but it is quite doubtful whether he will ever fully recover from the shock. The entire community sympathize with the Judge and his family in their affliction.

know how much a great retail store resembles a town," remarked a clerk in such an establishment, reports the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "It has all the familiar characters of a small community and all of its gossip, its circles and inner circles, and its class distinctions. In a modern department house you will find certain social leaders and their regulation system of satellites, all fully developed. There will be one group that goes in for frivolity, and another group that goes in for literature and art, and people who are plotting and scheming to get into this set or that, just as they do in the outer world. It is very quaint and amusing. One employe will have a great reputation as a wit and another is spoken of as a remarkable musical genius; certain sections of the establishment will be regarded as aristocratic, while others are looked upon as rather plebeian. In short, the store is a little municipality within itself, and its people are curiously isolated from the outside public. They revolve in their own particular orbits, the gossip that flies about the place deals with the people inside its walls, and they care very little for any other news. Their feeling toward another establishment is a good deal like the feeling between two rival towns, and the other folks in the city are all

Zola tried to paint it in one of his nov-

How People Live in Uncle Sam's Newly Acquired Asiatic

Territory. The better houses in Manila differ in some ways from any other in the world. Always of two stories, there is a high stone basement, with a carriage way to the court, where are the servants' quarters and domestic offices. The upper story is of wood, being complete in itself, so that in case of an earthquake it will settle together. The ceilings are covered with cloth instead of plaster. A wide stairway leads up from the carriage way. Between three and four feet above the floor of this story is a wide window ledge with grooves running the whole length of every side. In these grooves slide blinds and also frames in which are set small squares of oyster shell (called "conchas"). Both blinds and conchas run the full length of each side. Either or both can be closed at the same time, and both can be slid back to the width of one at each end, leaving the whole side open, and allowing the air to circulate as freely as in a shed. The roofs were formerly made of heavy curved tiles. Now galvanized iron is used, as it vastly decreases the chance of the roof falling during an earthquake, and lessens the damage if it does. On the other hand the iron roof is much more likely to be blown off by the terrible typhoons. The native houses are built of bamboo, with thatched roofs made of the leaf of the nipa palm and elevated from six to ten feet on bamboo poles. USED HIS BEST FRENCH. But There Is Some Doubt as to

Whether Monsieur Monvel

Understood Him. It was at the recent De Monvel reception in Chicago, and one of the couples standing in line didn't know enough of French between them to put at the head of a menu card. The young man couldn't even say: "Hang it!" in any other tongue than his own, and the young woman was earnestly endeavoring to share the few scattered phrases from the language of Cyrano and De Monvel which she had painstakingly acquired for the occasion, with him. "Bon soir, M. Monvel," she patiently and persistently instructed him to say; "un affaire tres charmante," and to this the young fellow consented, albeit with much reluctance and not a little grumbling.

"I'll bet it would do every bit as well if I remarked 'E pluribus unum' or 'auf wiedersehen.'" he complained, as they drew near to the great man, and when they stood in front of this magnificent personage his companion nearly faint-The young man's confidence and self-assurance had deserted him entirely, and "Good evening, Mr. Monsieur; e pluribus unum," was what he really Animal Epicures. In its stories of animal life the Strand Magazine tells of an old sheep dog that was used to keep foxes away from a chicken farm and who did it successfully. Nevertheless the chickens would disappear. Out of a brood of 25 there would be left only three. The dog was at last suspected, but as he would permit the chickens to climb all over him this was considered a libel. But close watching showed that early in the morning when none but chickens were astir, of which the dog would make sure by listening at the house doors and looking up at the windows, he would turn to and treat himself to a good square meal of chicken. Another story is of a horse that, having been treated to bread at a customer's once or twice, would, when he had a chance, cross the sidewalk and with his mouth hammer the brass knocker on the door until his wants were attended to.

wanted to Bottre the Baby. The naturalist's wife had gone out for a few minutes and left the baby in charge of her absent-minded husband. When she returned she was not a little disturbed to discover the haby crying dismally, and its father; with a collection of his largest bottles of alcohol before him, evidently at his wit's end. 'Why, David, David!" cried the good woman, snatching up the child, "what is the matter?" "Well, my dear," responded the great naturalist, simply, gazing at the baby, "it's very strange, but I can't find a bottle large enough to hold him anywhere."

MICA FOR SAFETY LAMP.

An Interesting Experiment That Is Being Tried in Several German Collieries.

Raphael, of Breslau, Silesia, is now being tried experimentally in several German collieries as a substitute for the glass cylinder of safety lamps. The cylinder is constituted by two tin plates of mica united, and also kept in place at the top and bottom by being inserted in two brass rings, the section of which resembles that of a channel iron, the edges of the two channel rings being turned toward one another. As the mica plates are perfectly fitted to the rings, air tightness is insured, and an additional safeguard may be afforded by bedding the edges of the plates in red lead cement. This double mica cylinder is inserted in the lamp cage just like an ordinary glass cylinder. The principal advantage claimed for this arrangement-lightness-specially designates it for use in officials' and underground surveyors' lamps, which are now largely made of aluminium with the same object. It is also claimed that the mica, which yields slightly, is less liable to injury from a knock than is the ordinary lamp glass, and even if the outer mica is pierced there; will probably be the inner one still left in-

Promptly at 8 o'clock Miss Grace Holmes played the wedding march and the young couple took their position at the marriage altar. The bride was dressed in pale blue silk and carried in her hand a large bouquet of white roses. But few outside of the immediate family relatives were present. From a distance were Miss Maud Hamlin of Elgin, Ill., Miss Bessie Hamlin of Chicago, and Miss Daisy DeWing of Kalamazoo. The bride received many beautiful, useful and costly presents. Among the gifts was a check for $50 from a relative from a distance.

Major-General Francis V. Green

has written for The Century Magazine the only authorative account of goes to the House and will no doubt the military operations at Manila yet offered to the public In the March number he will describe the voyage of the second expedition, which he commanded; the landing and intrenching of the troops on the mainland; and the interesting features of the situation while Admiral Dewey and the military officers were waiting for General Merritt and the monitors. fhis chapter includes a statement of the plans of Admiral Dewey and General Anderson to meet the crisis which would have been precipitated if Adme, al Camara's fleet had reached the Philippines. A second article, to appear in the April Contury. describes the means by which the insurgents were removed from the American front, and the thrilling events of the assault and surrender, including the stop put to the determined efforts of the insurgents to enter the city. General Greene's part in the operations was conspicious and varied, and he describes his experiences with the skill of a military expert accustomed to write for the gereral public.

R. G. Dun & Co's Review says: The situation is without precedent. Business has never been better on the whole, and in some great industries the gain is astonishing. Exports surpass last year's as much as imports, though the excess over imports then was heavy. Failures are smaller than in either of six years past. Stocks are stronger, the average for the active railway securities being a little nigher, and, for trusts much more oaing to the extraordinary advauce of $44.75 in tobacco. Payments through exchanges show a greater volumne of business than ever before at this season, and nearly onehalf larger than in the best of previous years. The outgo of breadstuff and cotton continues heavy. But there are some who fear that such prosperity cannot last.

THE FOWLS AND THE GARDEN We are confident that most of our farming friends would find that more attention given to their poultry yards would add essentially, not only to the comfort of themselves and families, but also to the aggregate of their annual farm profit. . Without any particular effort, or any extra building or vards, from 50 to 100 fowls may be kept on every farm of 20 acres, and the contributions they will make, in eggs and chickens, to the product sold, will amount in the end to a very handsome sum. It is true, to be made a source of profit they must receive attention; the eggs must be gathered daily; two or three hens must not (as is frequently the case) be allowed to sit on the one nest, coops must be provided for the chickens as they are hatched, and they, as well as any other domestic animals, must be fed. Fowls will sometimes, perhaps, do a little mischief; If allowed access to grain fields they will break down and destroy more than they will eat, and if they find the planted corn, they will show a perseverance and dexterity in tracing out the rows and extracting the plants worthy of any featherless biped that lives by his wits and the plunder of the public, but the true way to put an end to such trouble at once is to confine the depredators. when you do not wish to kill them. and then a little extra feed is all that is necessary to save both your crops and your fowls. Domestic poultry usually do much better when they run at large, than they will when restricted in narrow limits in the coop or yard. Their health is improved, their flesh is fiver and better flavored, and they will produce more eggs, at large, than in confined situations. The turkey, in particular, is a strenuous advocate of the largest liberty. Hens in a garden are a pest, but there is no necessity of being troubled with them here. A common picket fence seven feet high will effectually exclude them, it being well known that some fowls rarely attempt flying over such a fence, and when made plain such a fence will cost perhaps as little as almost any

To have the poultry yard profitable the fowls should not be kept until they are old. There is no objection to preserving a favorite cock so long as he is active and lively, but hens after four years may not produce as many eggs as those of one or two years. Much, however, is dependent on the breed kept, but more on the manner in whih they are kept, so far so far as good layers are concerned. UTILITY AND BREEDS

More attention must be paid to the preeding of fowls for utility than has been done in the past. All thoroughbred fowls should be bred for utility first, leaving the less important points of merefancy as a secondary matter. Not that breeding for feathers and form should be discarded, for it has been one of the great means of the rapid advance of the poultry interests during the past few years; but if fanciers had tried as hard to breed great layers as they have to breed fine feathers the result would have been still more satisfactory. Fowls can just as well be bred to be extra layers, and still possess all the fine fan cy points without regard to egg production. It may take much longer to bring them to the desired perfection of "standard" points, yet in the end it would be an advantage. It is very natural for a breeder to desire to excel in fine points. Consequently, in forming breeding pens, without regard to egg production, the result is fine feathers and fair layers, while if the most vigerous, best formed best laying birds be so marked as to overcome in a greater or less degree their had points, one will be started on the right road and inevitably succeed. The main end of poultry is to produce eggs and meat for the table not altogether fine appearance. The | raised, this bill provides for includaim of every poultry man should be to combine the two, giving fancy a secondary place to utility. WOMEN AND POULTRY It has long been claimed that poultry never does well unless taken under the especial charge of the female part of the family; and an observing person once remarked that it required the same kind of treatment that women are most likely to bestow, viz., to be kept clean, dry and warm, to be generously fed with nutritious food, and to be comfortably lodged. If the above requisitions are faithfully attended to, an abundance of eggs and plenty of chickens will reward the care and attention of the industri ous and careful housewife. There should always be a storm house provided for poultry, with a southern exposure, to which they can retreat in time of storms or showers of rain, and where they could nestle and dust in the dry earth or sand, and make themselves comfortable and fit to be seen, when they go forth to seek food or recreation. Hens like privacy when they retire to their nests, either o lay or set, and they should be indulged in these predilections in so reasonable a matter, and proper arrangement accordingly made to carry them out. P. II. JACOBS.

Cass County For Smith.

OUR LANSING LETTER

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 27, '99 cial to Buchanan Record. After Tuesday, when the time for introducing new bills expired, not of the manufactures, arts and products of the State of Michigan at the Ohio Centennial and Northwest Territory Exposition, and providing for a commission having the same in charge. Gordon of Marquette introduced a bill authorizing the Warden of the State House of Correction and branch of the State Prison in the upper peninsula to employ convicts in the carrying, breaking and crushing for street and highway purposes.

Reed, of Mecosta, introduced a bill to retain and set apart a certain tract of laud in the State of Michigan, lying and being in the counties of Lake, Newago, Oceana, Mason, Manistee and Wexford, as a public park, to be known as the Michigan State Park.

Wheeler, of Washtenaw, introduced a bill to regulate the width of tires of wagons designed to carry heavy loads on the public highways of Washtenaw County,

There have been a number of antitrust bill presented, the last being by Mr. Hart of Lenawee which provides that all arrangements or trusts made to lessen free competition in the sale or importation of articles, or which tend to advance or control prices of any product, be declared unlawful and provides for the punishment of such persons or corporations entering into such arrangements.

Eikhoff, of Wayne, presented a bill entitled "An act to provide for the uspection of all manufacturing estab ishments and workshops in this state and to provide for the enforcement. regulation and inspection of such establishment, and the employment, of women and children therein."

Eikhoff also introduced a bill to provide fans or blowers in all workshops or establishments where wheels composed partly of emory, or buffing vheels, or emery wheels are used.

Kelly, of Muskegon, said the men who are clamoring for the Atkinson hill are not the men who pay the tax. When the Atkinson bill was up two years ago about forty members voted for it. They didn't want to, but their constituents who didn't know anything about it, wanted them to Take the board feature out of the bill and you have no bill, and if it is true that railroads can buy legislators isn't it also true that they can buy Boards? In making their political speeches by some manipulation they draw into the discussion the Atkinson bill as a bill for equal taxation but there is not a single line in the Cheever-Atkinson bill that means equal taxation. The system we have now is the best system we can possibly have. In answer to Mr. Cheever's question as to the public discussion of the bill Mr. Kelly replied: "It was discussed but never in all the speeches did I hear one man say there was to be a board of five." Lansing, Feb. 28 (Special) There are just three radical differences between the Cheever-Atkinson bill and the measures -which chairman Chamberlain of the sub committee on railroads, telegraphs, telephones, and express companies taxation presented to the general committee yesterday afternoon. In place of the provision for appointment of members of the board to tax these corporations by the Governor, Mr. Chamberlain's measure makes the novel provision that the legislature shall elect two citizens who, together with Auditor General, Secretary of State and State Treasurer shall constitute the commission but it also provides that the Governor shall commission the parties elected by the legislature which is probably intended to overcome technicalities rate, where the Cheever bill provided that the aggregate valuation of all property in the state exclusive of railroad property should be divided and the chief end to be sought for is | by the whole amount of tax to be ing railroad property, and third, the penalty which in the Cheever bill is 50% is reduced to the same penalty as is now imposed for nonpayment of

With the title stricken out and the above mentioned change is made, the bill is substantially the same as the Cheever bill. The salary of members of the commission was fixed at $3,000 and expenses, instead of $5,000 without expenses and the Auditor General is to be President, ex-officio. In the discussion which followed the reading of the bill some heated remarks and strong arguments were made. Colins of Jackson said this new bill was introduced simply to get over the feeling in the house. We go out today and say we are going to do to compel foreign insurance companies to carry an ample reserve fund on deposit in this state. A free quotation from the critical Congressional debates and every public utterances at crucial periods alds in making this work what it is, the standard reservance history of this decisive and successful struggle. But it is much more than a lively and comprehensive narrative. It goes back to the years of struggle in Cuba which prepared the way for the war is to the Philippines, Cuba, and Potto Rico; and as a whole it forms a broadly conceived picture of the year which has seen America brought face to face with new world duties.

The important special and technical matters of the war period, generally dismissed by the historian with only slight and often insufficient discussion, are fully and authentically dealt with in contributed chapters, written by men who had unusual opportunities for stedying their subjects. Thus, the lessons which the war has for us as to the relative efficiency of rifles and machine guns are in a carefully written chapter by Lieut. John H. Parker, of the United States army; the military movements of the Samilage and Porto Ricon campaigns are analyzed to the editor of the Army and Navy Journal: the battle with Cervera is described by eye-witnesses. Marat Halstead and Stephen Bonsal.

The case of Darius Boynton vs Herman Peters and August Peters assumpsit, was tried before the court and decision has been reserved until further arguments of the counsel have been made.

In the case of Goulet vs. Koebel, the arguments were made to-day and the case went to the jury last Friday afternoon. Attorney V. M. Gore made an eloquent plea for the defendant in the morning and the court room was crowded. The jury in the case of Frank E, Goulet vs George C. Koebel, for alienating the affectious of his wife, retired early Monday afternoon and at nearly 11 o'clock Tuesday night returned with no verdict after being out eight hours. The jurors were unable to agree and consequently no decision was reached. The case was tried last October and the jury disagreed at that time also. Court resumed Tuesday morning and the case of Marvin Preston vs. Clayton Vanderbeck, for the replevin of a piano, was commenced. Valentine & Elsworth represent the plaintiff and Plummer & Riford the de-

Remember the Quail. "About the time this number shall nave reached my readers, one of the best of our resident game birds of the north, the quail, will be in sore straits for food in many localities. Of late the weather has been unusually severe and the snow deep, and many bevies must of perished. Now is the time for the man who can reach the haunts of the birds to show his sportmanship. "It is a somewhat troublesome task to carry, perhaps in a sack upon one's back, food for starving birds, but those truly interested in the preservation of game should not shirk the labor. A brace of birds saved now may mean one or two fine bevies and, possibly, a pleasant experience next autumn. Toward the close of the northern winter the seed of weeds and other natural food are scarce and of poor quality. The quail is hardy and can brave extreme cold, so long as be can keep his crop filled with ontritious grains. If half starved and thus weakened, a cold snap kills

"Buckwheat, corn, or wheat of inferior grade will admirably serve him, and a few bushels judiciously placed may accomplish a power of good. It also might be well to keep an eye upon the places where the food is deposited, for birds of prey, cats, foxes, etc., soon learn where the hand-fed quail resort and may destroy many, But now is the time for profitable action, for birds which have struggled along so far, may surely be saved by a little care."—Ed. N IMPORTANT NEW FEATURE OF THE RURAL NEW YORKER will begin with the first issue of January, and continue during the year. This will consist of a series of articles on important public questions by distinguished men of worldwide reputation. This departure, without interfering with its regular agricultural and horticultural features, raises The Ru-HAL NEW YORKER to the standard of the highest-class magazines.

The Rural Grounds. The editor-in-chief of The Runal New Yorker, Mr. E. S. Carman, who established the first real farm experiment station in America, will continue during the coming year to describe the rarest of the hardy evergreen and decidnous trees and shrubs. Choice specimens are growing at the Rural Grounds, and many will be photo-engraved. Grapes and all small fruits will be tested and described, and field experiments with peas, potatoes, sweet corn, etc., will be continued.

Why Men in Professional Pursuits Live Longer Than Those in

In the majority of cases among city dwellers those who reach advanced ages are found to have been professienal men. There are a good many reasons for this.

In the first place, the struggle for existence begins later in professional file than in other centers. The professional man seldom begins his work much before 25, while the business upin or laborer goes to work at the age of 16. Thus the professional man has seven elear years of iterdom from responsibility, moderate work and bruithy existence. Secondly, the occupation of the professional man generally takes him to a considerable extent into the open air, and is very seldem entirely sedentary. Thirdly, the professional man generally enjoys that modest competence which saves him at once on the one hand from starvation or penury and on the other hand from idleness and excess. Fourthly, his holidays are generally ample. Fifthly, to a certain extent his livelihood generally depends on his leading at least a comparatively sober and moral life, violent excesses ruining both his standing and his business capacity. Sixthly, professional callings are exposed to very few special dangers. Lastly, since even a minor ailment often units a man entirely for professional works, he has a special motive in taking particular care of his Flat Failure of Pessimistic Predictions Regarding the Sucz Canal.

It was shown that from an engineering point of view the Sucz canal was impossible, while from a commercial point of view it was proved up to the hilt that, even if the canal could be made, it would, so far as traffic went, be a failure as melanchely to the philanthropist as it would be disastrons to the investor, says the Engineering Magazine.

The great authorities who spoke with so much assurance are all dead, and it is well for their comfort that they

In 1869 traffic between the west and the east via the Cape of Good Hope was about 3,500,000 tens. In 1897 the traftie through the Sucz canal was 7.898.-981 tons, while that round the Cape of Good Hope was at least 3.759400 tons. In other words, one direct result of the construction of the Sucz canal has been that in 28 years the commerce of the world has been increased $400,000 tons annually.

It is hardly necessary to add that the return to the investor who risked his money in what seemed to so many to be a hare-brained project has been, to say the least of it, of a fairly sacisfactory character.

ECRLIN DICYCLE ENGINES. the Rice Department of the German City Has a Most Unique

Equipment, German fire apparatus builders have, after several years of trial, produced a tire bievele which, if it falls short of being perfect, is an invention for ahead of anything of its kind in use eisewhere. It is a four-wheeled truck, with a low, compact superstructure, is fully equipped as an engine, and has a complete culfit of life-saving apparatus. The wheels have solid rubber tires, it is pedaled by two firemen, sitting tandem, and runs rapidly on good roads, while its handling is extremely simple. The firemen having the one in charge at Gruenewald, a suburb of Berlin, recentive evered a mile, made the hydrant attachment, and were at work in something less than five minutes. The bicycle engine carries a lot of tools and implements, stowed snugly away, and each held securely in place.

The weight of the bicycle itself and all it carries, is 377 pounds, and the price of the entire outfit is 900 marks. or about $275. In other particulars of fire equipment, also, the Germans are ahead of us. In Berlin the firemen wear waterlackets, with a double skin, which they are able to fill with water from the hose. If the space between the layers becomes overfilled, the water escapes through a valve at the top of the helmet and flows down over the fireman like a cascade, thus doubly protecting him. The smoke helmets, also a German invention, are largely used throughout Germany, and in Austria, Holland and Italy, and are now on trial in some of our fire departments. The smoke helmets enable the wearer to breathe and to see with some degree of comfort in a smoke-laden atmosphere; some of the newer patterns contain a means of telephone communication leading out of the building and into the street be-

BRITISH WEST INDIES.

An English Scheme to Give Financial Aid to Agriculturists in Those Islands.

It is reported in London that the colonial office has completed a plan for the relief of the British possessions in the West Indies, the details of which will shortly be made public. It is said that the rehabilitation of the sugar industry of the islands has not been left entirely in the hands of Sir Thomas J. Lipton, although Mr. Chamberlain has accepted the general scheme proposed by that well-known merchant and financier. There are four groups of financiers who will work at the subjeet along distinct and separate lines One of these groups is directly under the control of Mr. Chamberlain and will confine its efforts solely to Jamaica. Two other groups will confine their work to Barbados and St. Vincent, while St. Lucia, it is said, will be confined to the special care of Sir Thomas J. Lipton. Sir Thomas will also have general charge of refining the sugar and selecting markets for it. It is renorted in the colonial office that as soon as the pines are made known the genreal public will be allowed to join two or more groups, which will become stock companies. It is expected that the Chamberlain, combined with government guarantees, will insure a hearty response and a financially successful issue for all concerned. The combined capitals of these several undertakings will not, it is anticipated exceed £1.-

POETESS GRINDS CORN.

Member of a Famous Literary Family Rans a Grist Mill in New Jersey.

Mrs. Ada Cranahan Norton, poetess and member of a famous literary family, runs a gristmill at Hightstown, N. , and thereby, with the addition of what is brought in by her pen, earns a good living. Mrs. Norton is a daughter of Rowena Cary, eldest sister of Alice and Phoebe Cary, whose verses are known throughout the world. She owes most of her literary standing to Alice Cary, who gave her much assistance and encouragement at the start, In 1893 she moved with her husband to Hightstown, N. J., and took charge with him of a quaint little flour mill. built in such a fashion that the machinery could be easily run by a woman. Three years ago her husband died, and since then Mrs. Norton has had sole charge. She has built up a reputation for herself and her mill since then. and farmers for ten miles around drive to the little mill with their corn, although there are mills nearer home to which they might go. Unlike most mills, the one conducted by Mrs. Norton has the water wheel actually in the building. The lower part is inclosed. In its former days the wheel and lower part were oncu. and in winter the wheel was very ant to be frozen and, becoming immovable, would cause the poetess untold vexation. All this is done away with by her little scheme of inclosing the

Mrs. Norton lives in a house scarcely 100 feet from the mill, large, artistic and considerably older than the mill. The mill is in a peaceful, poetical place. The poetess does not forget her literary work, and even when engaged in her duties at the mill her fancies keep busy.

THE LADY WON.

An Amusing Occurrence in a Big Office Duilding Elevator in Chicago.

People who ride in "lifts" in this city acquire some queer experiences at times. The calling of the floors where passengers desire to debark or embark not infrequently produces some amusing situations. It all depends on the style of the person making the announcement. Of course, conductors are mute participants to the game. Here is one happening which is certainly out of the usual run, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Half a dozen passengers entered an elevator in a big downtown office building. Doctors office there almost to the exclusion of other professions. One boy with a package asked to be deposited at the second floor. A woman stood mute while a medical man thought he would leave at the fifth. The conductor turned an inquiring head and the remaining passengers with one voice chiming in full chorus shouted:

"Seven up," marmured a gentle coice as the car reached the indicated

"Tenth."

Two men seeking the tenth floor glanced at each other with grins of appreciation as a stenographer, and pretty one, by the way, entered the car. She seemed unconscious of having created more than passing interest but the conductor was alive to the situation.

"The lady wins," he muttered to himself as he gave the lever a yank and the car shot upward again.

YANKEE INGENUITY DID IT.

French Peas Which Have Been Held in High Payor for Years Are Now Home Grown.

Only a few years ago practically all the canned peas consumed in this country were imported from France, the famous petit pois. At that time it was deemed impossible to produce the required quality in this country, consumers desiring firm, even bright green goods, and though sulphate of copper was used in securing that color it made comparatively little difference with the trade. American packers, however, experimented with the object of producing a pea the equal of the French article, and how well they succeeded is now an old story. Starting with good seed, and under careful cultivation, the American pea now equals the imported product of France, and our packers have built up an industry which has become an important feature of the great canned goods trade of the country. The careful selection of seed has resulted in a variety having all the desirable qualities of the French product and requiring the addition of no coloring substances to make them attractive. American canned peas stand on their merits. Wisconsin and New York are the leading pea-packing states, although others are rapidly developing the industry.

Daily Floating Population. It seems an easy matter to compute 'the floating population" of the land. but to estimate the real population afloat is quite another task. A recent computation as to the population affeat on the Atlantic, however, calculates that last year there was a daily average of 3,651 vessels at sea, with 44,899 men in their crews. Every day also 1.504 steamers, with crews numbering 53,-263 men and 32,656 passengers, were affoat on the Atlantic. This made a daily average for the year of 5,155 vessels and 130,272 persons spread over the whole Atlantic surface.

Cats That Don't Mew. In South America there is a race of eats which does not know how to mew. A BOOK OF FATE.

The Keeping of One Often Kelps'to Make the Keeper Quite Miscrable.

A young woman who revels in woe has evolved, or at least revived, an excellent way of keeping herself in a state of perpetual gloom, says a New York exchange. She has a diary with two pages for each day. On one page she writes what she expects to do, where she proposes to go and whom she hopes to see during the day. On the opposite page she writes what she has done, where she goes and whom she has seen. The pages, says the young woman, never agree and are usually flat contradictions of each other. The silver lining of the cloud of pessimism which such a perverse state of affairs would otherwise engender is that she has noticed that when she predicts and expects a gloomy day, filled with disagreeable duties or monotonous dullness, the opposite page is sure to glimmer with pleasant surprises - calls from pleasant people, letters from absent friends, invitations of an especially tempting character and all sorts of unlooked-for enjoyment. The writer of the diary says she finds it an excellent antidote for undue elation of spirits and a check to despair. When she feels "down" she can turn to her blue days and see how well they turned out, and when she feels particularly exuberant a glance at the records of days joyously anticipated but miserably spent has a wonderfully sobering effect. The book keeps her in a state of tranquil neutrality very restful for the nerves. The absurd young woman has had the old diary bound in pink and purple, typifying joy and woe, and calls

VIENNA'S CENSORS.

Music Calculated to Excite the Passions. So It Is Now Under

In Austria there is a press as well as a literary censorship, but it is more particularly to the glaring anomalies of the literary censorship that I refer, says a writer in the London Post. German writers consider the prohibition of the Vienna censor as a kind of letter of recommendation, if not as a certain sign of immortality. The censor, in fact, has never prohibited a book which has not some striking literary merit.

The recent strictures of the censor, his prohibitory aggressiveness in almost every different department of literary and artistic life, have irritated the public mind beyond endurance. The censor seems to have started from the standpoint that far too little is confiscated. All kinds of new interpretations of the poets have been found, and to-day poetry is the most confiscable commodity in Austria. Next to it comes the printer's art. Sculpture has fallen an easy prey, and now it is the turn of music. The censor reasons as follows:

"Melodies in themselves are in no way illegal. It is, however, otherwise with the time or rhythm. It is possible to excite a body of people by joining in or even merely hearing a song having a rhythm corresponding to the prevailing feeling. Much, too, depends on the amount of emphasis imparted to the song. When thousands sing a popular air the effect is quite otherwise than when it is sung by one person. Music is further calculated to excite the passions, and therefore is capable

The Ownership Thereof Is Being Contested by Three Swiss Municipalities.

Mont Blanc is just now the center of a discussion which is being variously treated with seriousness and humor by the European press. The question is this: Who is the owner of the top of Mont Blanc? No single or isolated individual of eccentric propensities has made a claim to the summit. The affair is much more complicated. Three municipalities, Chamounix, Les Houches and St. Gervais, have claimed the summit, and have appealed to the Swiss government to answer the question. It is not a point of honor, or the prestige of having a monopoly of avalanches, but a mere matter of business. For the last five years Mont Blanc has been in everincreasing favor with tourists, and various spots situated at different altitudes have been let out by one or another of the three municipalities in question to enterprising projectors. Recently it was found that Chamounix had let more mountain land than the other two tewns, and a hot dispute arose as to her right to do so. The great map of 1730 offers no relief to the contesting parties, because this chart only gives the division of properties on the lower or woody portions of the mountain. The Geneva press, referring to the dispute in a humorous way, says that it is the first time in history that a municipality has adopted a national scheme of claiming "a sphere of influeene." But sericus persons consider that the problem is really a knotty one.

EXPENSIVE SPARKS.

Fireworks That Cost Over a Million Dollars Sometimes Burned in European Pageants.

Our own fireworks manufacturers are, of course, prepared to produce as brilliant displays as any in the world. but unfortunately they do not have the opportunities afforded by royal pageants in monarchical countries. According to one British firm, who are famed all over the world for their manufacture of fireworks, the amount spent on the display of fireworks in connection with her majesty's jubilee was $1,250,000. The display at the close of the Crimean war cost $500,000. The largest individual exhibitions by the firm were given on the Tagus for the Portuguese government; the second in 1888 costing $50,000. while the first, which was made on the occasion of the marriage in 1886 of the king (then crown prince) of Portugal, cost half that amount. The display at Delhi when the queen was proclaimed empress of India cost $17,500. Some of the most costly fireworks are those produced at the Crystal palace. Thus, at a benefit recently, the exhibition lasted from 30 to 35 minutes. but it cast $7,500, or abut $250 per minute.

MALAY CHARACTER.

A Misrepresentation of Long Standing That Is Without Foundation.

In character the Malay is impassive. He exhibits a reserve, diffidence, and even bashfulness, which is in some degree attractive and leads the observer to think that the ferocious, blood-thirsty character imputed to the race must be grossly exaggerated. He is not demonstrative. He is slow and deliberate in speech. Children in the company of men are silent, and are generally quiet and obedient. When alone the Malay neither talks nor sings. He is cautious of giving offense. He does not quarrel easily about money matters. Practical joking is utterly repugnant to his nature. The Malays of the higher class are exceedingly polite. They are proud, and, if ill-treated, revengeful; but under generous treatment are gentle, kind, humane, grateful, docile and faithful. They are dutiful children and kind parents. They treat their aged kinsmen with the greatest kindness, and feel it a duty to relieve the wants of an indigent relation. Old men and women are always regarded with respect, says the Encyclopedia of India (1858).

Dr. Oxley described the character of the unsophisticated Malay as remarkable for its simplicity and honesty. They have a regard for truth, and may generally be depended upon in their statements. What has so often been written of their revengeful spirit, he says, is much exaggerated; polite in the extreme, according to their own ideas, they never indulge in abuse one toward the other.

JUMPED OVER A TOWN. That Is What a Certain Ship Did and It Was Afterwards Carried Back. A most extraordinary incident happened to the corvette Monongabela at Santa Cruz in 1857. While at anchor in the harbor a tremendous tidal wave lifted her upon its crest and carried her clean over the town of Frederichstadt and back again without injuring the town or the boat to any great extent. harbor, and it cost the United States government $100,000 to float her again. Fully as strange was the fate of the sloop-of-war Wateree. She was anchored in the harbor of Arica, Peru, in 1868, when a huge tidal wave swept inland and flooded the whole city. The wave carried the sloop several miles inland and finally landed her in the midst of a tropical forest. It was impossible to release her from such a peculiar position, and she was sold for a nominal sum. The purchasers turned the vessel into a hotel, and the remains of the once formidable war vessel loom up in the tropical forest to-day as a monument to the power of tidal waves.

ONLY A QUARTERBACK.

He Looked Like a Dude, But When He Lifted Something Came Loose.

The old saying that "appearances are deceptive" was very tritely exemplified one night recently, says the Phila delphia Times. Owing to the delay caused by the snowfall, the cars of the Seventeenth street line that run down Chestnut were blocked for some time in the northern part of the city. When the first of a line of ten appeared at the junction, they again found progress impeded. This time it was the switching rail which was frozen tight, and the united efforts of the motormen could not move it. There were not many people in the cars, but those who were each in turn applied his strength to the switching iron. Even a burly negro of Brobdignangian proportions failed ignominiously. There remained only one of the crowd who had not made the attempt, and he was, in the parlance of the street, "a bloomin' dude." He had spent his time in the car attentively chewing the end of his stick and reading the advertisements with a self-conscious air. He was like unto the flowers, gorgeously appareled. A long brown paddock coat surmounted an unimpeachable dress suit and a large bunch of violets dangled from his buttonhole. He got off and gazed dreamily at the proceedings. When the negro failed, divesting himself of the long coat, he threw it to a motorman, and, grabbing the iron with apparent ease, he forced back the rail and held it calmly in place while the seven cars passed over it. Then for the first time the people noticed an unlooked-for breadth of shoulders and depth of chest. "Say, mister, ain't you Sandow?" queried a little gamin. "Not quite," laughed the dude. "I only played quarter for Yale a couple of vears." which again goes to prove that appearances are not only deceifful, but antruthful.

WOMEN OUTLAWS.

Young Amazons of Kurdistan Who Take to the Road as Brigands.

The Kurdish women are also devoted to an outdoor life. Quite as enterprising and indefatigable as the men in their race, they are ever on the alert, ready to leap to the saddle, where, though not graceful riders, they are at home and able to keep up with the men in their adventurous wanderings, says the New York Tribune. A recent traveler in Kurdistan tells of meeting a girl of the Bulbassi tribe who had just killed with a spear a Turk who insulted her. This young Amazon was dressed like a man and served the chief, Fazullah Effendi, as his faithful henchman, following him in all his wanderings. The women of this tribe are all particularly hardy and intrepid. Frequently they take to the road by themselves as brigands, and luckless indeed is the traveler or trader, who falls into their hands. Not content with robbing him, they pinch, scourge and scratch him

When a girl is born in Montenegro the mother says to her: "I do not wish thee beauty, but courage; heroism alone gains the love of men." And courage they possess in abundance. While their husbands are away on excursions the women in the intervals of caring for the fields and flocks, take to the road and do a little looting on their own account.

IN THE BERMUDAS.

There is a Plague of Cats and Sparrows and Too Many Worth-

People arriving in New York from Bermuda say that the island is overrun by eats and sparrows. The nuisance of the plague has even been discussed in the colonial legislature at llamilton. Visitors from the United States seeking the balmy climate of Bermuda are complaining especially of the "cat gangs" which nightly disturb their sleep, says the New York Journal.

When the dog tax bill came up before he legislature, Dr. T. A. Outerbridge, one of the members of the council, proposed an amendment. In doing so he

"I should like to see the bill recast and a heavier tax put upon dogs, because we have too many worthless curs in Bermuda. I should also like to see a tax put upon cats. You may laugh, but if there is any useless animal in this world it is a cat. Cats may be of some use in some countries, but they are of no use here. They do not kill rats. They do destroy our native birds. "I have not seen a bluebird in six weeks, and there ought to be plenty of them here now from America, have not seen one this year, and before long all our native birds will be exterminated-between the cats and the sparrows."

An eminent medical man, whose reatises on human hair have attracted much notice, among many other strikng statements as to woman's chief beauty, remarked that "bristling," when used in swaking of the human hair, is not a figure. The hair is subject to and influenced by almost every passion of the human mind, and emotional hair. of which he has treated especially, he claims is quite common. That Is What the ficeper of Sing Sing Prison Says of Marderers,

"What is the most dangerous class of riminals you have to deal with?" I asked Head Keeper Connaughton at Sing Sing prison recently. If there is anything Mr. Connaughten has become thoroughly master of during his long term of service at the state prison it is the study of the characteristics of the various classes of criminals who have been placed in his charge. In fact, Mr. Connaughton's friends assert that as a criminologist the head keeper at Sing Sing can give cards and spades to any expert, says a New York exchange. "As a rule," answered the head keeper, "people are under the impression that murderers are the most dangerous 'boarders' we have, but the rule is directly the contrary. Almost without exception the murderers are the model prisoners of any jail. The average murderer previous to having committed his awful crime has seldom, if ever. of murderers who have been 'crooks' is comparatively small. You'll find it the case that most murderers, even while waiting trial, are on their good behavior, hoping that by acting so they may draw sympathy to their defense.'

flim Down. A rooster belonging to a College street man got out the other evening and flew about the yard, dexterously eluding every attempt to catch him till the owner gave it up, and left him to his fate. Next morning the rooster was perched high in a tree, apparently stiff and stark. The owner was conscience-stricken. "I ought to have gone out after dark and got him. He froze to death last night and I am to blame. I have got to get a pole and knock him out of that tree. I shall be arrested for cruelty," he said to his wife. So he went out, armed with a couple of sticks of wood, says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal. These he threw at the frozen rooster for an hour without success, and a good-sized crowd of neighbors stood about, suggesting ways to get the bird down. One went and got a revolver

TOWN THAT CURES BALDNESS. Those Who Go Away and Lose Their Hair Return and Get

"If I had money," said a Norristown man, according to the Philadelphia Record, "I'd exploit the little village of Waretown, on Barnegat bay. Waretown is not wonderful on account of its excellent fishing and gunning, but on account of its power of curing baldness. Call me, if you will, a liar, but the fact remains that not a hald-headed man is to be found within five miles of Waretown, and any bald stranger who goes there to live and just gets out bareheaded as often as possible, on the bay and in the black grass meadows, begins to thatch up right away, and in a year has a crop that isn't a thing but smooth! When I was down last, in '95, I met a man named Henry Camburn-you know they're all Camburns pretty much down there. Well, Henry, though an old man, had a head of thick, soft brown hair like a boy's.

and he said it was his third crop. "Twice had he lived away from Waretown and got bald, but he came back each time, and so did his hair. I believe that the pure, strong winds, that smell of pines and the sea cause this thing, and if I had money I would get together a colony of bald-heads, take them down to Waretown, keep them out all day, and every day fishing in the summer, ducking in the winter, without any hats, and in a year I would discharge them cured. I could easily charge them $1,000 a head. Any man. if he had it, would pay that."

A PERSEVERANCE TEST

The Western Union's Way of Bealing with Female Applicants for Employment.

Many girls are employed at the Western Union Telegraph company's main office in filing dispatches and other work requiring no great skill. Now, although they get only the current wages of worksers in such employments, there are always many applicants for every vacancy. In view of this fact the company has adopted an interesting method of dealing with applications. Every girl applying is questioned as to her age, education and residence. Furthermore, her height is taken. The facts as to the applicant are then I led for future reference, and she is advised in case she is really anxious for a place to return at the end of four months should she not hear from the company before that time. The reasons for this advice is that the list of applications is destroyed every four months, says the New York Sun. Many applicants never come a second time; some, however, come a second, a third or even a fourth time, and, although the officers of the company hold out no special hope to any applicant, they do say that here, as elsewhere, perseverance often succeeds. The requirement that the applicant shall appear in person each time is an ingenious means of weeding out those applicants that lack the perseverance, which, other things being equal, is likely to make a girl more useful to the company than a girl with less of that quality.

Menelek's Amusement. The latest news of Emperor Menelek, says the Manchester Guardian, touches his interest in surgical operations. In the hospital at Addis Abeba attached to the Russian mission, he is continually watching the surgeons at their work. Their skill often calls from him expressions of admiration. His great desire is to act the part of an assistant-for example, to hold the limb when an amputation is being performed. He never misses an operation.

ELECTRIC THAWING. An Invention That Is Much in Demand Among the Mines of the Klondike.

Miners who have returned from the Klondike say that in that region, as in others where the winter temperature runs down to well below zero, the bugbear of the miner is the frozen soil in which he has to work. Under the influence of the frost the ground turns as hard as rock for several feet down, and until this obdurate stratum is cut through mining operations are at a standstill. The way in which the soil is softened has, so far, been to build a bonfire, and simply thaw things out. This, however, besides being tedious, is a great waste of heat, 85 per cent. of which is lost in the atmosphere. A natent for thawing the ground electrically has just been sold for a large sum. The invention is intended to be used for winter mining in countries where the cold is severe. Specially-constructed dynamos and electrodes are placed against the walls of the shaft, with a space of from five to six feet of ground intervening; so that when the current is turned on it has to cross the face of this space to complete the circuit. As the ground contained therein forms a resistance to the motion of the electricity, heat is generated, and the ground is thawed. The heat thus generated can be so controlled that it can be applied in any manner that will utilize its full force and effect. By the old bonfire system it took 24 hours to freeze out a foot of soil; by the electrical system it is claimed that it is possible to thaw out the same depth of frozen earth in one hour, or 24 feet per

SERGEANT WAS VERY TIRED. Did Not Have Time to Spell Out the Full Name of the Chief of Police.

He was up before the trial board on a charge of laziness. He was a desk sergeant from a west side police station and the charges and specifications were that he was always exceedingly tired, that he loafed over his dosk, and, indeed, that he was so grievously afflicted with ennui that he would not spell out in full the longer words in making reports of daily occurences to the general superintendent of police, a duty which fell to his lot as desk sergeant, but was much given to the habit of abbreviation. This, it seems, says a Chicago exchange, had been a constant source of worry and annovance to the captain in command of the station, and when repeated warnings were of no effect charges were preferred and he was brought before the tribunal, composed of the chief and the inspectors of police. The story of his shortcomings and short spellings was told in detail and as a clincher his captain said:

"Why, chief, this man is so lazy that when he makes out a report instead of addressing it to 'Joseph Kipley, General Superintendent,' he writes 'Jos Kin Gen Supe. If he came to the word 'philanthropy' in a report he would make it 'phil' and you couldn't tell whether it was philanthropy or Phil Daly." On this arraignment, it is needless to say, the sergeant was found guilty and promptly disciplined.

CHINESE SIMPLICITY.

Even the Great Li Hung Chang Displays a Lack of Proper Understanding.

The Chinese are said to be very much like children in their thought and action. The commerce of one of their principal rivers is greatly impeded by a ledge of rocks, on which myriads of junks and other kinds of vessels have been wrecked or badly damaged during the years of many centuries. In fact it is almost impossible for any sort of vessel to pass this obstruction without being hurt in some way. Recently sereral British men-of-war lay at anchor for some weeks in the river and the commanders offered to blow up the rocks and create a safe channel without cost to the government if permission were given. The matter was referred to Li Hung Chang. China's greatest statesman, who, after mature deliberation, declined the offer, on the ground that if they took the rocks out of the river it would deprive western China of water and flood the eastern part of the country! This reminds us of the philosopher who opposed the building of the Nicaragua canal because he claimed that the Pacific ocean was seveal feet higher than the Atlantic, and that if the canal should be opened the western ocean would flow into the eastern and produce another Noah's Climate Bothered the Frenchman. A recently arrived Frenchman, who visited a well-known Boston establishment one day to fit himself out for a long journey to the west, says the Boston Transcript, was complaining bitterly of the cold. "Don't you have cold weather in France?" asked the sales man who waited on him. "Why, certainly, we have ze cold weather in France," was the reply, "but we do not have ze all four seasons in one day in Tigers Wash Like Cats. Cats make the most careful toilet of any class of animals. The lion and the tiger wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting' the dark, india rubber-like ball of the forefoot and inner toe, and passing it over the face and between the cars. The foot is thus at the same time a face sponge and brush, and the rough tongue combs the rest of the body.

Shall We Have Expansion? One of the greatest issues in American istory now confronts the Nation. The question of expansion calls for intelligent understanding by all Americans. A great help toward a clear and decided opinion upon the question is offered by the following timely volume. JUST PUBLISHED.

By James C. Fernald,

A stirring and powerful argument in favor of the extension of United States territory. The author draws a distinction between a true and a false imperialism, holding that the massing of many states in one imperial domain does not necessarily entail concentration and despottem. He clearly and convincingly proves that expediency, duty, and necessity urge the nation on to the new expansion. "It is for Americans to do ency, duty, and necessity urge the nation on to the new expansion. "It is for Americans to do the new thing among the nations—to make an imperial domain a republic."
