THE GREAT CONVENTION ASSEMBLES.

President Clark Is Re-elected—His Annual Address—Inspiring Scenes at Tent Endeavor After Nightfall.

Detroit, Mich., July 6.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark was re-elected president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor at Wednesday's meeting of the trustees. John Willis Baer was re-elected secretary and William Shaw treasurer.

Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, president, Secretary John Willis Baer and Treasurer William Shaw arrived at 10:30. At 11 o'clock Dr. Clark called to order the annual meeting of the United society in the Hotel Cadillac.

Dr. Clark addressed the members of the legal organization in part as follows:

"The past year of Christian Endeavor work has been a year of remarkable prosperity, a year signally marked by the favor of God. Christian Endeavor has now so largely occupied the field that the phenomenal growth recorded in the early years of the movement cannot be expected.

"Nevertheless, the growth has been very considerable, and the accession of a hundred thousand to our ranks within the last 12 months is no small addition.

"I recently made a journey to the West Indies which was full of encouragement and hope. I found in the island of Jamaica very deep and intelligent interest in the movement. In Cuba, too, I found the beginning of Christian Endeavor and a very hopeful spirit and outlook for the future. In other lands Christian Endeavor seems to be obtaining constantly a firmer foothold. Our British fellow Endeavorers are looking forward with great anticipation to next year's exodus to London. In Germany and France and Scandinavia the work has made very considerable advance. In Spain, in spite of the distraction of the war and the natural antipathy to things American, the societies have all held their own and have even increased in number. Russia, which a year ago was the only country without Christian Endeavor, has now been invaded by the movement, and we hear of our society almost within the czar's household.

"Our efforts in behalf of universal peace and international arbitration have been a great success. It has received the hearty approval of many of the greatest men in Europe as well as America, and has called forth on two or three occasions telegrams and letters of approbation and gratitude from the American peace commissioners at The Hague.

"The spirit of brotherhood, of national and interdenominational fellowship; of seeking after God, and not the things that pertain to office and station, will, I believe, characterize this eighteenth annual convention, and I pray God that His Spirit may pervade every future gathering of Christian Endeavorers and the whole movement in all its phases and forms of work the world over."

The Reports.

The business before the United society was quickly transacted. Treasurer Shaw's report showed expenditures during the fiscal year of $9,678, and $352 now in the treasury. The report of George B. Graff, of Boston, agent of the publishing department, under whose direction the Christian Endeavor World is published, showed cash on hand at the beginning of the fiscal year, June 1, 1898, $1,110; receipts during the year, $67,956; expenditures, $66,628; cash on hand, $2,439. The western office of the publishing department, located at Chicago, reported expenditures of $12,563, and $664 now in its treasury.

In accordance with the report of the nominating committee the following were elected trustees for four years: Rev. C. I. Brown, Mount Joy, Pa.; Prof. H. L. Willett, Chicago; Rev. Samuel McNaugher, Boston; Rev. A. C. Crews, Toronto; Rev. Hugh K. Walker, D. D., Los Angeles, Cal.; Rev. J. Wilber Chapman, D. D., New York; Rev. George E. McManiman, Steubenville, O.

The Night Gathering.

At sundown long, wavering lines of young people from various directions wended across the green fields about the white tented city, all converging toward tent Endeavor, beneath whose broad, spreading canvas the welcoming rally was held. The crowds poured in through the four entrances on either side and down the six broad sandvict-covered aisles until the great tent's capacity of 10,000 was filled; after that a crowd of outsiders obtained sight and hearing through dropping of the tent walls at either side. Promptly at 7:30 the comparative silence was broken by the swelling strains of "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," followed by "There Shall Be Showers of Blessing," "Onward, Christian Soldiers," etc., in all of which the great crowd enthusiastically joined. Devotional exercises were led by Rev. J. G. Butler, of Washington.

Welcoming Addresses.

The welcome of the local committee was extended by William H. Strong, its chairman. Rev. Charles B. Newnan eloquently welcomed the convention on behalf of the Detroit pastors. Mayor Mayberry welcomed the visitors on behalf of the city of Detroit.

There was enthusiastic applause when Secretary Baer read the following telegram from the president of the United States:

"Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, Detroit, Mich.: On the occasion of the Eighteenth International convention of your society,

I desire to express my cordial interest in its work, my best wishes to those assembled with you in convention, and my earnest hope for the continuance and increase of the great results which the efforts of the Christian Endeavor society have achieved.

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY."
Other Proceedings.

Next on the programme came responses in behalf of Endeavorers from foreign lands. As Rev. William Patterson, of Toronto, came forward to speak for Canada some one struck up "God Save the Queen." The Canadians on the platform took up the strain, and in a moment the huge tent was reverberating with the swelling chorus of the British anthem. The friendly relations between Canada and the United States, particularly with reference to religious matters, formed the burden of Dr. Patterson's address.

Rev. Dr. H. J. Tressider, secretary of the London council of the Christian Endeavor, answered the greetings in behalf of Great Britain. "Perish the mad dream," said he, "that a conflict should ever come between our two countries. It is the work and the duty of the Christian Endeavorers to make impossible such an idea." For Australia, response was made by Rev. Joseph Walker, of Queensland; for China, by Rev. Elwood G. Tewksbury, a missionary in the vicinity of Peking; for Turkey, by Rev. Lyndon S. Crawford, for many years a missionary in that country; for Japan, by Rev. Otis Carey; for Mexico, by Rev. C. Scott Williams, and for the United States, by Rev. Arthur J. Smith, of Georgia. At the close of the big meeting, the crowd thronged to the platform to be presented to the mayor and the officers of the united society. This closed the first day of what promises to be one of the most notable gatherings in the history of the organization.

BISHOP NEWMAN DEAD.

Venerable Old Man Passes Into the Beyond After a Long Struggle for Life.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 6.—Bishop John P. Newman, of the Methodist Episcopal church, of San Francisco, died at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Bishop Newman had been in failing health for a year past, but it was only a week ago that his condition really alarmed his friends. Since July 3 he had been sinking rapidly and this morning his physicians announced that in all probability he would not survive the day. The immediate cause of the death of

BISHOP NEWMAN.

Bishop Newman was pneumonia and myelitis. At 2 o'clock his pulse was hardly perceptible. The physicians in attendance recognized that the end was near and relatives and immediate friends were summoned to the bedside. The bishop became conscious shortly before his death and recognized his wife. Mrs. U. S. Grant, Mrs. F. D. Grant and others arrived at the scene a moment or so later. Mrs. Newman is almost crushed by her bereavement. Inasmuch as she is in comparatively feeble health it is feared that she will not long survive her husband. Telegrams and cablegrams are being received from all quarters expressing sympathy. A dispatch from Bishop Randolph Foster, at Roxbury, Mass., announces that he will reach Saratoga this morning and complete arrangements for the funeral. It will take place at the First Methodist Episcopal church, this city, Saturday afternoon.

The funeral will be held in the First Methodist Episcopal church at Saratoga Springs, and Bishop Randolph S. Foster, of Boston, will take charge.

[Bishop John P. Newman, D. D., LL. D., was born in New York on September 1, 1826, and joined the Onondaga conference in 1840. He was pastor for many years in the leading churches of New York, New Orleans and Washington, D. C. He was chaplain of the United States senate, 1869-74. He has published several works. He was elected bishop in 1888, and presided at Rock River conference in 1889. He has been honored with appointments in foreign lands, giving him an excellent opportunity for travel and study without personal expense. He was in attendance upon Gen. Grant during his last illness, and preached his funeral sermon. He also officiated at the funeral of John A. Logan, and preached the funeral sermon on the occasion of the death of Senator Leland Stanford's son, receiving therefor a fee of $10,000. He was thrice elected to the general conference of his church, and was intrusted with many important missions. He was a brilliant pulpit orator and wrote many well-known works.]

CAN'T BE DESCRIBED

Result of Texas Floods Too Appalling for Portrayal.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE STARVING.

Loss of Life Somewhere Between 100 and 500, But Is Not Accurately Known—Enormous Property Loss.

Austin, Tex., July 6.—The devastation in Waller, Washington, Fort Bend, Grimes and other counties along the lower courses of the Brazos river and the Colorado river is much greater than indicated by the earlier reports. The destitution of the people is startling. Appeals for aid in the way of clothing and food reached here from several points Wednesday. The larger Texas cities are responding generously to these calls for assistance, and the necessities asked for will be sent to the suffering people as soon as transportation facilities can be secured. In the remote districts of the Brazos bottoms, where were numerous small settlements of from 50 to 100 inhabitants each, the small clusters of houses were occupied almost exclusively by negroes, and it is feared that most of them have been swept away by the flood and many of them drowned.

Another Estimate of Deaths.

Additional authentic reports of drowning at many points in the inundated region were received here. A conservative estimate of the number of persons drowned is as follows: Waller county, 17; Grimes county, 3; Austin county, 2; Brazos county, 7; Robertson county, 42; Bell county, 1; Washington county, 4; Matagorda county, 3; Burleson county, 6; Fort Bend county, 1; Brazoria county, 3; total, 89.

Victims Nearly All Negroes.

Nearly all of the persons known to have been drowned are negroes. In several instances negro families warned of the impending rise refused to desert their cabins and continued to occupy them until swept away by the torrent. An unconfirmed rumor that 125 negroes had been drowned in Waller county reached here Wednesday evening. It is thought the loss of life will exceed the foregoing estimate when the real situation is revealed after the waters have subsided.

In all of the towns located near the flood rescuing parties have been organized and every nook of the flooded region is being searched for refugees. At one point in Burleson county a party of 22 people, comprising four negro families, was rescued. The people were found in the branches of trees, where they had been for two days without food or shelter. The children, of whom there were a large number, were in such a feeble condition that they may not recover.

The water has been running over the growing cotton, corn and sugar cane so long that it is now certain the loss of the crop is complete and that it will be too late in the season to replant.

Asks for Aid.

Gov. Sayers sent the following Wednesday night:

"Austin, Tex., July 5.—To the Secretary of War, War Department, Washington, D. C.: Please immediately order by wire boats at Galveston to ascend rivers, using launches and yawls to rescue people from the waters which are widespread over the lands of the Lower Brazos. Please also order commanding officer at San Antonio to place at my disposal for immediate distribution 10,000 rations. I will recommend to legislature to refund to the United States their value when it next meets, and do not doubt that it will be promptly done. Devastation great. Immense loss of life probable. Prompt action very important."
"JOSEPH D. SAYERS, Governor."

Calamity Is Appalling.

St. Louis, July 6.—A special to the Republic from Dallas, Tex., says: All former flood disasters in Texas river districts have been eclipsed by the appalling calamity now central in the vicinity of Sealy and Brookshire. It is estimated that 200 lives have been lost and the number may be much larger. The property loss will reach so far into the millions as to make the Calvert flood appear insignificant by comparison. Deputy Sheriff Swearington made this statement to the Republic correspondent over the long-distance telephone from Sealy: "I am so dumfounded by the extent of the disaster that I hardly know how to talk about it. Fully 20 lives have been lost within a radius of 25 miles of Sealy. Last night and today nearly 100 have been drowned in the vicinity of what is now locally known as 'The Mound.'"

In Awful Peril.

This is a small piece of high land three miles from Sealy, near old San Felipe. At first when the flood rushed down upon the negro cabins, in the bottoms of the Brazos, three days ago, the alarmed black population ran for this point of high land for safety, driving their live stock with them. The rush of the waters was so sudden that they could not get to Sealy or San Felipe. Gradually the waters rose and encroached upon their place of refuge until now not more than half an acre of the ground is out of water, and that not more than one foot above the raging torrent surrounding it for miles. On this half acre mound are huddled together a raving, surging, gesticulating, screaming and praying assemblage of 300 negroes, death staring them in the face in various forms. Drowning seems certain, but starvation, exposure and exhaustion also are doing fatal work. Crowded in among these poor humans are cattle, horses, hogs, mules and other domestic animals, as frantic and uncontrollable as the poor negroes. There is not a cabin or other bit of shelter—not so much as a tree—on "The Mound." There is not a mouthful of food to eat, clean water to drink, or a spot where the tired and weak and sick can rest. The nearest point of land is more than three miles away and no human can live in the raging torrents who would try to reach it. Many have been drowned making the attempt.

Cyclone Kills a Woman.

Omaha, Neb., July 6.—A Bee special from Ainsworth, Neb., says: A destructive cyclone passed Ainsworth two miles to the north Wednesday afternoon, killing one woman and tearing houses, barns, fences and bridges into kindling wood. Its first destructive work was on the farm of John Strohm, four miles northwest of Ainsworth, demolishing everything in sight. Luckily the family took to a cave and no one was injured. It struck the house of William Lockmiller, a mile to the east. Mrs. Lockmiller had sought refuge in the cellar with three small children. Her oldest son not coming, and fearing he might be killed in the barn, where he was working, Mrs. Lockmiller started to call him just as the cyclone reached them. As she arrived at the door the house was moved from its foundation and she was crushed into a lifeless mass and her body nearly severed in twain at the waist. The children, however, were unharmed.

IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Gov. Pingree's Plan for Municipal Ownership of Detroit Street Railways Given Fatal Blow.

Lansing, Mich., July 6.—The Michigan supreme court has decided the case brought to test the validity of the McLeod law, which authorized the appointment of the Detroit street railway commission, whose object was the purchase and municipal ownership and operation of street railways of Detroit. The decision is that the law is unconstitutional; that there is no such office as the "Detroit street railway commission;" that Gov. Pingree and the other commissioners have no title thereto and that judgment of ouster must be entered against them. The Detroit plan for municipal ownership had been temporarily blocked by the legal difficulties in the way of holding a special election on the question. By Wednesday's decision all authority is taken from the commission.

Pingree's Choice.

Detroit, Mich., July 6.—Gov. Pingree has appointed the following as members of the board of state tax commissioners under the act known as the Oren tax law, the order to issue commissions having been sent to Lansing: Milo D. Campbell, of Coldwater; A. F. Freeman, of Manchester, and Robert Oakman, of Detroit. They will all serve until the next session of the legislature. One of their important duties is to determine the value of railroad property in relation to the amount of specific taxes now paid by the railroads. Mr. Campbell is the present insurance commissioner and will resume that office January 1.

Ex-Governor Passes Away.

Columbia, S. C., July 6.—At midnight ex-Gov. John Peter Richardson died at his suite of rooms at the Hotel Jerome very unexpectedly of heart disease. He had been in failing health for some years. He was 69 years of age and leaves a widow. He was governor for two terms, just prior to the inauguration of the reform movement and was succeeded by present United States Senator Tillman in the executive office in 1890. He belonged to a family that has furnished in all five governors to the state of South Carolina, exclusive of himself.

Injuries Cause Death.

Binghamton, N. Y., July 6.—After fighting against death for 40 hours with three deep stitches closing a wound in the left ventricle of his heart, Rabbi Louis Ginsberg, who was murdered early Tuesday morning, died Wednesday night, septic peritonitis having developed during the day as a result of his wounds. Two of the murderers are still at large.

Met in 'Frisco.

San Francisco, July 6.—The thirteenth annual convention of the Association of American Agricultural Colleges and Experimental Stations convened in this city Wednesday, delegates being present from nearly every state in the union. The session will last several days and every question of interest to the agricultural welfare of the country will be discussed.

Boy and His Grandma Drown.

New York, July 6.—Mrs. M. W. Simmons and her grandson, Arthur Bartlett, Jr., both of New York, were drowned in the Sound at Oakland Beach, near Rye, N. Y., Wednesday. Mrs. Simmons was 63 years of age and was the widow of the late John W. Simmons, formerly president of the University of Dakota.

Explosion Kills Three.

Bluefield, W. Va., July 6.—On the Clinch Valley division of the Norfolk & Western railroad at Tip Top Tuesday evening an engine exploded, killing Engineer J. D. McColgan, Fireman E. W. Albert and Brakeman Oscar J. Owens.

FLOWERS FOR OLD STAMPS.

How the Women of St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Chicago Get Altar Decorations.

One church congregation in Chicago collects 25,000 canceled postage stamps every week, and 1,800,000 in a year. This is St. Mark's Episcopal church, corner Cottage Grove avenue and Thirty-sixth street. These stamps are sold to a florist for eight cents a thousand, and in return he furnishes flowers for the altar every Sunday. For a long time the committee of ladies in charge of the church decoration were dismayed at the scant appropriation for the purchase of flowers. At last one of them hit upon the plan of selling old postage stamps. Enthusiasm was communicated to the Sunday school pupils. They visited offices of vestrymen and prominent church members downtown and got them to save the postage stamps on their correspondence. Ladies of the church began to carry on a correspondence with long-neglected friends for the sake of accumulating canceled postage stamps, and the habit is now fixed, says the Inter Ocean.

"Why, I'd as soon think of throwing away car fare as to waste old postage stamps," said one.

The stamps at first were counted, but now an arrangement has been made with the florist to take them by weight. It is said that they are purchased by foreign paper mills. Owing to the fine quality of the material used by Uncle Sam for stamps they make over into an excellent brand of paper.

SHE IS GROWING RICH.

Chicago Woman's Hands Bring Her About $3,000 Yearly—She Is a Masseuse.

Half the world is as ignorant of how the other half makes its money as of how it lives. There is a Chicago woman, for instance, who earns with her hands yearly sums that would make the average brain worker envious. She does not print, nor write, nor design, nor make dresses, nor do any of the things that one usually picks out as woman's work. She earns all this money by giving massage to women.

She is not in any way an impressive woman. She is of medium size and middle age. She gives one the idea of being in perfect health and of being kindly and sympathetic. Otherwise there is nothing noticeable about her. But her patrons consider her a wonderful woman.

Most of her work is done at the homes of her patrons, though they may come to her establishment at about half the home rate. She rubs a woman an hour at each visit, and her patrons are positive that she imparts to them a tremendous amount of vitality.

Of course, there are many women engaged in massage. The only remarkable thing about this particular woman is the amount of money she earns. Her monthly receipts run from $200 to $300, every dollar of which she earns personally.

GOTHAM'S INFAMOUS CAFES.

A Glimpse at the Interior of a Notorious One That Was Raided by the Police.

Through one of the most infamous of the cafes & Leslie's Weekly writer went recently, just after the police had raided it with axes. The entire ground floor was a drinking hell of tawdry elegance. On the second floor was a gambling room reached by devious passages through heavily barred gates. The upper floors were lodging-rooms of almost unimaginable dinginess and squalor. Throughout the entire establishment was a series of signal bells, peep holes, falling bars and special locks, and ready exit was given by no less than four specially constructed and supposedly secret passages. The rickety old tenement had been made into a veritable labyrinth of pseudo-mysterious precautions against the police. When the police did come the warning was given by a man stationed in the street for that purpose—called appropriately enough a "lighthouse"—the signal bells clanged, the bars fell, the special locks slid into place, eyes blinked at the peep holes and at the last moment the aroused inmates scurried through the secret passages into the arms of the officers who were waiting for them there. That cafe went out of existence, but others are still doing a cautious business.

Dynamite Finds a Victim.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 6.—A special to the Times from Calumet, Mich., says: Nineteen sticks of dynamite exploded at the bottom levels on No. 6 shaft of Osceola mine Wednesday afternoon, blowing the arms, legs and head off one man named John Dokli and seriously injuring several others. Mine Inspector Hall is conducting an investigation of the accident.

Fire in Boston.

Boston, July 6.—Fire destroyed a building on Warcham street, occupied by Perkins & Perkins, woodworkers; the Library Bureau company, manufacturers of office furniture, and James McClellan, builder and contractor. Loss, $65,000.

Died of His Injuries.

Milwaukee, July 6.—"Con" O'Leary, a well-known pugilist, died Wednesday from injuries received in a saloon row a few days ago.

POULTRY YARD

Our readers are invited to send in any question for information on this subject, and any communications bearing on poultry will be received with pleasure and will be fully discussed in this column.

HARDY BREEDS.

The Plymouth Rocks, Brahmas, and Cochins are very hardy, and excel in that respect. The Plymouth Rocks are also great foragers, and remain out later in the evening before retiring than some other breeds. The heavy feathering of these varieties gives them a great advantage in not being so easily subject to the roup. One of the best protections they have is the heavy fluff feathering under the wings. A fowl that possesses this covering next to the body, under the wings, is usually hardy. The Games and Hamburgs are destitute of such coverings, and all who are accustomed to breeding them know how easily they take cold and become affected with roup. The Leghorns are hardy, considering their feathering, and so are the Houdans, but the Black Spanish, Polish, and Bantams are more troublesome to the breeder. New blood does much to infuse strength and vigor in a strain. All crosses of which the Brahma forms a part are excellent. The same may be said of the Cochins, but the persistent sitting propensities of the Cochins may overbalance many of their good qualities. Some breeders, however, prefer good sitters, and especially when hardiness of constitution belongs to the breed.

NON-SITTERS AS LAYERS.

How many eggs per annum will the best non-sitting varieties of hens lay. It is claimed that Hamburg and Leghorn hens produce 250 to 300 eggs each per annum, but it is doubtful if a flock of ten or fifty can average that number. There is no doubt, with proper care in selecting what to breed from, and in time, such a flock could be brought up to this great average. The difficulty, however, in selecting breeders from a flock, is to ascertain which hens lay the most eggs, as there are some, even among the non-sitters, that lay few, and if their eggs are hatched the chickens, like their mothers, would probably grow up to be poor layers. In order to increase the average laying of a flock, egg for hatching must be selected from those hens which lay the greatest number. There is an opportunity for breeders to attempt this and give us hens that we can depend on, everyone to lay an assured number of eggs per annum, as with cows, which will give a certain quantity of milk or butter per annum; and to be certain of this, the former, like the latter, must be kept separate.

MINORCA FOWLS.

The eggs of Minorca hens are of a very large size, white in color and a fine flavor. The hens bear confinement well, and are extremely hardy. The chicks are easily raised, mature early, and the pullets lay when very young, often at sixteen weeks, and usually at eighteen weeks. As they are a Spanish variety they are non-sitters, a point greatly in their favor with many persons. They are splendid foragers and require very little food. Even in confinement they are disposed to work and scatch. They are black fowls with plumage of intense metallic lustre, white ear lobes, coral face, and large, bright single combs, resembling the Black Spanish, their more aristocratic relatives, in many points. Indeed the latter breed seems to have sprung from the Minorcas as the result of high breeding, though at the expense of vitality and productiveness. They are stylish birds, having a very stately, upright carriage, close, compact body, low in the legs, and of stouter, squarer build than the Spanish.

BUILD NOW.

If you contemplate building a poultry house go at it now, so as to have it well seasoned and dry before winter. As a rule, when one builds a house there is always something more to be done, or would have been done, if the work could be gone over again. For that reason it is a good plan to build early and have all corrections made before winter. If the house is provided with an open shed the cost will be increased, but the addition will afford greater comfort to the birds and they will repay the outlay in extra number of eggs laid during the winter. It is seldom that anything is lost in making the poultry house comfortable, as the loss in one direction will be repaid in another, especially as fowls always respond to good treatment.

SEX OF PIGEONS.

To distinguish the sex of pigeons there is no sure way to be given, as most always the cock and hen look alike. The hen should be bred as near like the cock as possible. In most cases the cocks are thicker and more massive about the head and beak, the male being thicker and stouter built in every respect. But this is not always the case, and a fully developed, vigorous, stylish hen can be passed off for a cock. Again, the cock makes a louder noise than the hen, and is breast bone is larger. When two young birds are hatched the cock is most generally the larger, and feathers out the faster.

LAYERING THE GRAPE.

Easy Way of Increasing the Number of Vines.

Layering is the simplest, surest and easiest method of increasing the grape, and is the best way to grow them where but few vines are wanted. There are two kinds of layers, called spring and summer layers, from the season at which they are made.

FIG. 1.—A ROOTED LAYER

FIG. 2.—THE ROOTED LAYER SEPARATED, MAKING TWO PLANTS

Summer layers are made in the summer, generally the last of July, from a branch of the same season's growth. They are likely to be weak for several years, and do not make as good plants as the spring layers. In making them, the wood should be slit for an inch or so near the buds that are covered. Bury about one foot of the cane four inches deep in the ground and it will be rooted by late autumn, when it should be separated and be treated as a young vine; and it is generally best to get them well started in a garden or nursery before planting in the vineyard permanently.

Spring layers may be made by laying down any cane early in the spring. It will root in one season. By fall it will have made a good growth of roots, when it may be cut from the main cane, and if strong it may be divided into two plants. This form of layer is illustrated in Figs. 1 and 2. By a little different treatment of the spring layer a vine may be grown from each bud on the layered cane. For this purpose some thrifty cane should be selected in autumn, pruned of its laterals, and buried. In the spring it should be uncovered and only one shoot permitted to grow from each joint. After the new growth has started about six inches from each bud the whole cane should be layered about four inches deep, handling it carefully so as not to break the new growth.

Fig. 3 shows such a layer after it has rooted. It is a good plan to cover it not more than three inches at first, and to fill up the trench as the shoots grow. If covered four inches deep at once the young growth will sometimes rot, though this seldom happens, and some skillful growers fill the trench full at once. In the autumn roots will be found growing from each joint, and these may be cut apart and treated as recommended for weak vines grown from cuttings. If this method of propagation is to be used to some considerable extent vines should be grown especially for the purpose. It is not a good plan to use fruiting vines for layering to any great extent, though it may be safely done in a small way.

How Horses Catch Cold.

Horses are very subject to nasal catarrh, and it is a widely prevalent belief among coachmen that if a horse goes into a fresh stable, and especially if a horse which has been out at grass goes into a stable with other horses, it will be most likely to develop a cold, says the Spectator. So, too, it is noticed, will horses bought at a fair, and this is popularly attributed to the draughts to which they have been exposed. As it is admitted, however, that any other horses which may have been in the stable generally catch this cold from the new-comer, surely it is more reasonable to suppose that the latter has in like manner received the infection from some of its neighbors while on sale.

A medical friend of the writer's lately made an interesting experiment. He has two horses, and has been in the habit of turning one out for the summer months. When he brought it in again for the winter it used invariably to develop a severe cold. Coachmen will tell you that this is due to the unaccustomed warmth of the stable, which makes the animal "nesh." Last year, however, before bringing in his horse, the doctor had his stable thoroughly disinfected and limewashed, and put no other horse into it. The one which came in from grass then remained perfectly free from any symptoms of catarrh.

A Market at Home.

Shipping the fowls to market and receiving eight and ten cents a pound while paying fifteen and twenty cents for beef is a losing business. No matter what the fowls may be worth in market, they are equal-pound for pound—to any other kind of meat that can be procured. When you buy beef you cannot always be sure that it is from cattle free from disease or that it is of prime quality, but if you will consume your surplus poultry on your own table you will know just what you are eating, and will not just avoid assisting to still further lower the price, but can kill them off as the occasion requires. Farmers do not use poultry at home to the extent that they should, and they can very materially aid in preventing "gluts" in the market by refraining from selling when prices are low. Beef soon decomposes, but poultry will keep and is wanted.

THE GENERAL-PURPOSE COW.

The Difference Between Breeds For Food and For Milk.

This is the day of special breeds for specific purposes. The conformation of the draft-horse is entirely different from that of the race-horse. The beef breeds of cattle have a remarkable tendency to make muscle and to lay on fat. That tendency has been fostered and developed until the animals of that class make marvelous growth, converting to their own use about all the nutritive elements in their food. The dairy breeds, on the other hand, have been bred to convert their food not into flesh for themselves, but into milk for their owner's use. One is a machine for changing feed into beef, and the other for converting feed into milk. The dairyman, wanting only milk and butter fat, uses breeds that are adapted to this work. But there is a big class of farmers that are not specialists in the dairy line, but want to keep a small dairy for the profit in the business, and at the same time produce calves that can be raised and marketed for beef. Such a farmer wants a profitable cow for the dairy, and yet he is a grazer and feeder as well as a dairyman. It is useless to say that he should keep the special dairy breeds and buy the calves of beef breeds that he wishes to raise, and feed for the block. This is not practicable. It results that there is a big demand for a cow of a type that many breeders assert does not exist—the general-purpose cow. I am more and more inclined to believe that the specialists are not safe leaders for the average farmer, and that the animal which combines, as far as possible, the best qualities of both types of cows, is the profitable one for the class I have mentioned. The calves are needed for feeding, and yet their dams must yield some profit in the dairy. The breed that combines the two types in the highest degree will not pay the specialist, be he dairyman or feeder, but it does fill a place on the farms of the thousands that engage in general farming.

Make War on the Bugs.

Much may be done to rid the orchard and farm of bugs while they are hibernating. Many borers may be found in dead and dying twigs such as currant, gooseberry, oak, etc. Raspberry-caners may be examined for the eggs of the snowy tree-cricket, currant-stems for those of a similar pest stuck into the wood, but visible upon inspection. The egg of the tent-caterpillar may be found upon many twigs. They look like a bandage of brown-gold flannel. The eggs of plant-lice may be found close to the buds of apple-trees that have been infested with the adults the previous season. They are small, shining black ovals, and are laid near the ends of twigs. They are hard to kill in this form, but trimming and burning will do. Burning over infested fields will destroy hosts of insects in the chrysalis stage as well as the eggs of such insects as deposit them upon grass and such supports. The egg masses of the vaporer-moth may be found upon fences, tree-boxes and similar shelters, and as each mass contains a hundred eggs or more each one destroyed reduces the amount of work to be done in the eating season. The bag-worm may be found upon the arbor-vitae. It is readily seen and destroyed. It is in the form of eggs at this season. The pear-tree psylla may be combated in its winter home upon the trunks and branches of pear-trees. The rough bark should be scraped off and burned, and the body and limbs of the tree sprayed with strong kerosene emulsion. The pear-leaf blister-mite may be attacked at the same time. It hibernates upon the young twigs in the leaf-buds. For these two pests dilute the emulsion only about five times. Pile up and burn all twigs, limbs and branches that have dropped or have been pruned off trees and shrubs, since the former are almost sure to contain borers, and the latter may be the hiding-places of eggs or cocoons. The raking up of leaves and burning them will destroy many eggs and chrysalides, and, more important still, it will reduce materially the number of spores of plant diseases in soil upon them. The same remarks will apply to the destruction of branches affected with such diseases as anthracnose. Time is less precious to the average fruit-grower at this season, and he can make it pay him well to fight whenever opportunity presents itself.

Pays to Shelter the Animals.

Animals unprotected against the exposure and cold of winter in the matter of shelter are provided by nature both with heavy coats and with layers of fat under the skin. This latter protection is found in all the arctic animals. Fatty foods produce fat, and the inhabitants of the far North feed themselves upon the blubber or solid fat of whales and other animals. The inference to be drawn from these facts is that animals during the winter should receive good heating foods, and that in order to avoid the necessity of excessive feeding they should be protected by warm quarters against the cold blasts of the Northwest winds. Nothing is so chilling, penetrating and wasting to the body's heat supply than the bitter winds of the West and Northwest; they are far worse than still cold. Well-ventilated, comfortable and warm sunny lodging will save the feeding of much heat-producing food.

Selling Scrub Stock.

The best time to sell scrub stock is now, so as to make room for better kinds. It is not profitable to keep poor stock as long as something better can be obtained at but little additional cost. Those who make poultry pay use the pure breeds and avoid scrubs, as they well understand that in order to derive a profit they must resort to fowls that produce the most at the least cost.

HOW TO TELL CATTLE.

Breeding Tells in Appearance and Does Not Require a Label.

Many people wonder how cattlemen can discriminate between cattle—can tell the good quality from the common. There have been columns written by men who have spent their lives in studying cattle, but perhaps the best and most lucid explanation was given by a woman a few days ago at the Denver stockyards, says the Denver "Stockman." She was showing some friends through the yards and was pointing out some good cattle, which she rightly called "good blood," and a gentleman in the party asked how she was able to tell the good from the bad. "Why, it is easy," she replied, promptly. "It is just the same as telling common people from high-toned people. All animals show character just the same as humanity." There is more truth to this than might at first appear. Good blood will show in any animal, the same as in a human being. Take a well-bred Hereford or Shorthorn steer and stand him alongside of a scrub steer of no particular breed and study the difference. Place a well-bred, cultured gentleman alongside of an ignorant, common-bred man, and note the result. It will be the same in both instances. No one of ordinary intelligence could possibly make any mistake in selecting the well-bred creature in either case. And yet when it comes to putting into words for some other person to profit by, it is a difficult and almost impossible matter. Blood will tell, and the man or woman who is able to pick out a gentleman from a crowd of commoners, can, with equal facility, pick out a high-bred steer or cow from a herd of scrub animals. There is an indefinable something about the well-bred animal that cannot be mistaken. The perfect form, well-shaped head, intelligent eye, and graceful movements are perhaps a necessary part of the identification, but there is more than that, and while the man who is familiar with cattle can pick out the well-bred animals at a glance, few are able to say just where the difference lies. But there is a difference, and it is as important in the animal world as in the human family.

Do Not Sacrifice Your Cattle.

Advice and admonition to hold and mature half-fat cattle has been given so often and so freely that it falls on the ear like a twice-told tale, and seems in many instances to have about as much effect as the water that falls on a duck's back—and rolls off. Notwithstanding, having in view the interests of our customers, we feel impelled to urge the importance of making cattle fat before marketing. We are still receiving large numbers of half-fat cattle which with sixty or ninety days longer feed would sell at a much better price and make the owner money. The cattle referred to are the "betwixt-and-between" kind, not good enough for one purpose but too high-priced for another, while by feeding the above length of time they would be suitable for almost any use. A great many of these half-fat cattle weigh 1,200 to 1,300 pounds—in pretty good flesh but not fat enough; if these cattle, even in the same flesh, weighed 1,350 to 1,400 pounds, they would then be heavy enough for export and would sell 30 to 40 cents per one hundred pounds higher for this purpose than they will for dressed beef. Hence we wish to impress upon the minds of our customers the importance of weight, as this is a very large factor in determining the selling value of cattle at the present time. If persons who are not prepared to feed to a finish will at least get their cattle heavy enough for the export trade they will be well paid for their corn and labor.—Live Stock Report.

Viticulture in Russia.

Grape culture has become a power in Russia during the last decade. Crimean, where viticulture was formerly confined almost wholly, has come to see the industry extend north and east into the provinces of Kherson, Podolia and Bessarabia. Some of the plantations are very large, notably that of Prince Treubetskol, which covers 500 acres. The acting British consul at Odessa is authority for the statement that in Bessarabia especially is the growth of the vineyards particularly noticeable and the quality of the wine excellent. In 1893 108,000 acres in this locality alone were given up to the grapes, while four years later 175,000 acres were in use. The vines are said to be much cheaper than the same kind in France.

It was only last year that the first shipment of Russian wines reached England, but the Russians confidently expect to make grape culture one of their leading products. Odessa has two champagne factories, opened to compete with French products.

Crimson Clover.

Much less is written now about crimson clover than was the case a few years ago. Many farmers throughout the central states are convinced that it is utterly unreliable for them, and the demand for seed has fallen off very materially. I have shared this belief, and yet we should bear the fact in mind that some farmers north of the fortieth parallel of latitude have success with this clover. The apparent reason seems to be that they sow early in the season and cover the seed deeply. The seeding is done at the last cultivation of the corn in July, and the seed is put into the ground deep enough to get the needed moisture. If corn is given surface-cultivation there is usually moisture at the depth of three inches or less, even during the drought. By deep seeding a good stand and fall growth of plants is obtained, and it was in this particular that the usual shallow seedings have been failures.

Changed and Enlarged.

This week's RECORD appears in an enlarged form and comprises eight pages instead of four as heretofore. Owing to the demand for advertising space it was decided to issue the RECORD in a five column quarto form instead of the old eight column folio form. This improved form will enable us to furnish a better paper than ever and we shall continue to improve the make up and appearance of the RECORD as the support accorded us by our citizens will warrant. It will be our endeavor to furnish a good live up-to-date newspaper, and one of which our town can well be proud.

Did you enjoy yourself on the Fourth.

Capt. Dreyfus has been safely landed in France.

The Ionia Sentinel has a lengthy editorial urging the claims of Ex-Gov. Alger for U. S. Senator to succeed Senator McMillan.

State Oil Inspector Wm. Judson, of Ann Arbor took charge of his office on Saturday. In an interview with the Detroit Journal he stated that about two-thirds of the present deputies would be re-appointed.

Buchanan merchants and citizens should arrange to have a rousing Fourth of July celebration at Buchanan next year. Such a celebration if properly arranged would bring a big crowd to our city, and would mean the spending of money with our merchants that would otherwise be spent elsewhere.

A Good Indication.

No practitioner in any of the professions, can year after year, do business in any locality without inspiring confidence by reason of his success or else proving that his pretensions to skill are groundless, and the best evidence that Dr. F. B. Brewer is a skillful physician, is to be found in the fact for many years he has visited various localities in this state—and each year his reputation for success has been growing brighter. There must be merit to command such confidence. Dr. Brewer will be in Dowagiac at the Elkerton Hotel on Friday, July 14th and at the Pike House in Niles on Saturday, July 15.

The Poet Made a Move.
 I've just come up to town to make a strike—
 At least, I thought that that was why
 I came.
 And I wish that I had stayed back
 there to hum.
 But I've got a heavy feelin' I don't like,
 The people bump agin me just as though they thought I wasn't no more 'n so much dust.
 Oh, I'd give a lot to see some one I know.
 And it seems sometimes as if my heart'd bust.
 I thought that things was gittin' dull back there.
 I thought I ought to have a "wider sphere."
 And so I left the place where skies are fair.
 And come to show 'em how to do it here!
 But I guess these folks don't need no help from me.
 And I guess that they look at it that way too—
 And, oh, I'd give a lot if I could see Jist some poor, homely yellow dog I knew.
 My headkerchief is wet, and you know why;
 My nose is shiny on the end and red.
 But the people they don't mind—they hurry by—
 And there's somethin' in me like a piece
 o' lead;
 Still, even if the tears have got to come
 And though my heart seems ready fer to crack,
 The folks are watchin' me back there to hum,
 And I'll stay and win 'cause they said I'd come back.
 —S. E. Kiser.

WAS HE LAWRENCE HOPE?

When Robert Oldham, who had been cashier of the United Kingdom bank at Hampton, was found dead in his bed this morning, Mr. Pelham, manager of the bank, called Lawrence Hope into his private office and said:
 "You have been with us for ten years and your record has been so satisfactory that I am going to promote you to the position of cashier. As soon as you have secured your bonds you can enter upon the duties, and I may add that we shall repose implicit confidence in you."

Lawrence Hope was then a young man of eight and twenty, and his family, though not well off in this world's goods, was one of the most respectable in Hampton. He had two brothers and three sisters, and in the same town were uncles, aunts and cousins to the number of twenty. As a clerk in the bank he was not very popular with his fellows. This, however, was more because of his taciturnity than for any other reason. He never spoke to those around him when it could be avoided, and even while he worked the hardest he seemed to be thinking of other things. All felt that he was not one of them, and after awhile he was ostracized to an extent and given the nickname of "The Silent." Ten years of this demeanor had won the approbation of the bank officials, is not of the employes, and when the time came they were glad to give young Hope an important promotion. An indemnity company secured the bank in a large amount and a new face appeared at the cashier's window.

One Monday morning, three months after Lawrence Hope had entered upon his duties, he was missing, and when the vaults were opened it was discovered that the sum of £97,000 had been taken away since the closing hour on Saturday afternoon. The United bank was rather old-fashioned in its ways. The manager and cashier each had a key to the vaults, but the cashier alone entered them, except upon official occasions. Being under heavy bonds and an old employe, he was trusted to the fullest extent. Under the system pursued by the United bank, the cashier was the last one to leave the institution after closing. After the first surprise of the shock detectives were called in to investigate, and after some trouble they got a start on the case. Lawrence Hope had been seen to leave the bank an hour after closing time on Saturday afternoon carrying a bulky satchel. He had called a cab and been driven to the 5 o'clock London train. He had taken his departure so openly that people who saw him forgot the fact until questioned. He seemed to be in good health, occupied a compartment with two other travelers, and was easily traced to the metropolis. Then the real work of the detectives began. After due and patient inquiry it could not be found that he had taken a public carriage from the depot. The inference, therefore, was that he had gone on foot to some point designated beforehand. He had not left London again by any sort of sailing craft, nor could it be settled that he had gone by train.

While telegrams were sent broadcast throughout England, the best detectives from Scotland yard pursued their search in the big city. In the course of a month six different young men were arrested, but a mistake had been made in each instance. A dozen "mysterious men" were run down, but none of them proved to be the right man. Among them, singular to relate, was Bloss, the murderer, who killed and robbed an alderman of Liverpool, as you may remember. He had been lodging in a house for three years as a military pensioner and never went on the street unless disguised. His search continued for six months. Without avail, and then most people believed that Lawrence had fled to a foreign country or who had been promoted and after staring at the stranger for a moment he gasped out:

"Good heavens, Hope, but are you back again?"
 "Excuse me, but my name is Davis," was the quiet reply.
 "But it can't be!"
 "Then I do not know myself. Will you give me change, please?"

Change was given and Davis returned to his hotel, but scarcely was he there when a detective walked in and placed him under arrest as Lawrence Hope.

"You are a queer lot here," said the American as he made ready to go with the officer, "you all insist that I am some one else. Who was or who is this man Hope, and why is it that I am taken for him?"

As soon as he was under lock and key people began to arrive to identify him. Five men from the bank, including the manager, positively identified Davis as Hope. Then three or four outsiders were called in—then Hope's father and brothers. Every one said he was Lawrence Hope, the embezzler and absconder, but to each and every one he laughingly replied:

"Well, I have been Charles Henry Davis all my life, and if I have been changed over into Lawrence Hope I don't know when the event took place. If this is a joke, don't carry it too far. If you are serious, then I want counsel."

He was assured that it was a very serious case, and he at once engaged counsel and made preparations to show that it was a case of mistaken identity. The matter, of course, became the talk of the town. There were fully 100 people in Hampton who knew Hope well and of these fifty were present at Davis' examination. Each and all swore that he was Lawrence Hope and the father and brothers were among the witnesses. Davis reserved his defense and after lying in jail for two months because he could not raise the heavy bail demanded his trial at the assizes came on. One of the first moves made by his attorney proved that the man was a close student of human nature. As soon as his client had been committed for trial he began to throw doubts on the question of identity. It was not long before others were in a state of doubt; and inside of a week half the witnesses who had testified so positively were sorry they had done so. Out of four bank clerks who had worked beside Hope for years, three soon came to the conclusion that they might be mistaken. After seeing the prisoner three or four times the father admitted that the nose was different and the voice had changed. The brothers said the corners of the mouth did not look natural and the eyebrows were not the same.

The more people who called to see the prisoner the better his attorney took it, and when the trial came on a singular state of affairs was revealed. Out of fifty witnesses who had been co-sure over forty went back on their former testimony. All were agreed that at first sight the man appeared to be Hope, but when they came to examine his face in detail they were not sure of him. Davis claimed to be an American. He said he was born in Chicago, and he had letters in his baggage from his widowed mother in that city. He had visited many cities in the states, and though the prosecution badgered him for two hours, it could not trap him. He gave the names of the different states, cities, rivers, presidents and all that, as proving his familiarity with his own country, and he volunteered much information not asked for. He had passed a month in New York, and he gave the name of his hotel, and a cablegram settled it that he was there at the time. So with the steamer, with the hotel in London and all the way around. The bank, the detectives and the indemnity company were all anxious to convict Davis if he was really Hope, but was he Hope? A dozen or more persons persisted that he was; a full two-score were doubtful; a hundred were found who said it was simply a case of mistaken identity. The trial lasted three days and Davis was set at liberty. He immediately began suit against the bank for damages for false imprisonment, and as he had the best kind of a case he was given £5,000 to settle it.

Davis remained in Hampton for three or four months, and formed the acquaintance of many nice people. Among those whom he visited was the family of Mr. Hope, and though father, mother, brothers and sisters insisted that he was "like Lawrence," they no longer doubted that he was what he claimed to be. He finally left town on his travels and was heard of no more until I furnished the sequel to the case. Eight years after the trial I was in Australia and up the country among the sheep ranches and bush-rangers. One day, while prospecting for gold, I came upon a man whose horse had fallen upon him as he made his way over the rough country. A leg had been broken and there were other injuries, and the accident had happened three days before I found him. I did not believe that he could live beyond a day or two, but I carried him to a shelter, provided food and drink and did all possible for him. After twenty-four hours, feeling that he could not live, the man told me the story as I have given it to you above. He was Hope, alias Davis. He it was who robbed the bank and returned under another name and bluffed it out. He said that from the first day he entered the bank his mind was fully made up to get his hands on a large amount of cash. He could do it only by reaching the position of cashier and he had the place in view for years and years before it came to him. He had never been in America, but he cultivated Americans, posted himself on history and current events, and having an excellent memory, he never forgot the name of a street or river after hearing it.

Hope had planned to go direct to New York with his plunder, but had a place in London to hide away for a few days. He went out only at night, and then well disguised and in one of his nocturnal journeys he met a young man who greatly resembled him and was named Charles Henry Davis. Davis was an American who was going to Russia and Hope met him on several occasions and drew him out. The American had a widowed mother in Chicago—had stopped at a certain hotel in New York—had taken a certain steamer across the Atlantic. Hope determined to pass himself off as Davis and return to Hampton and face the matter out and you have seen that he did it successfully. He trusted that Davis would see nothing of the case in print and he was safe on that point. Hope was too sharp, however, to go back in his own proper person. He knocked around London until he fell in with a surgeon who was hard up and not too inquisitive. He had an operation performed on his nose—he had his face slashed here and there and sewed up again.

A dimple was taken from his cheek and his mouth was altered for the worse. He suffered much pain and paid a big fee, but when his wounds were healed he was no longer Lawrence Hope. He practiced speaking in a peculiar way until his voice no longer sounded natural and he changed his gait by affecting a limp. He got away from England with most of the money and traveled over the world until he finally reached Australia. He was on his way to Sydney to take steamer for Enland when the accident happened. He had about $2,000 with him, with a large deposit at Sydney and another at Paris.

Hope died a few hours after completing his story, which I wrote down in pencil and he signed, and a year or so later the indemnity company got back some £20,000 of the sum they had to pay to the bank. If you doubt that Hope passed himself in this manner I have stated let me say to you that during the trial one of the witnesses for the crown was asked to swear to the identity of his own wife. She stood there before him, and they had been married twenty years, but the more he looked the more confused he became, and he finally refused to say more than that "he believed" she was his wife. Even the judge on the bench said he would not positively swear that any one of the jurors was the man he claimed to be.—John Brisbane Walker in Chicago News.

USE WOMAN AT AN AUCTION.
 Women, bless 'em, are queer creatures. This was demonstrated at an auction sale in Omaha not long ago. A beautiful silver toilet set was put up and the auctioneer told a humorous story about the value of the articles. He was eloquent and persuasive, and a woman started the bid at $2. Another woman bid $2.50. The first bidder looked daggers at the second bidder and promptly bid $3.

The bidders seasawed until the bid reached $10. Then the first bidder shot an angry glance at her competitor and bid $12. The auctioneer smiled, and called, "All done? Two or three dollars once, twice, three—e times and—sold."

Then the triumphant bidder turned pale. She walked back to the clerk charged with wrapping the packages and collecting the money, and unto him she said:
 "Good gracious? I haven't but $3.27 to my name. I can't take that set, but I was just bound that that horrid woman should not have it."
 The clerk was evidently used to it, for he smiled and put the toilet set back upon the shelf without a word.—Omaha World-Herald.

DIRE INTRUDER.
 George McNichol is what is technically known as a "rigger." That is, he takes all kinds of contracts to repair church steeples, paint smokestacks or do any other kind of work that requires high climbing. He had a job recently in Pittsburg, painting a smokestack. A mast was rigged alongside the stack, a block and tackle made fast, and a painter, recently employed by McNichol, was placed in a "sling" to do the work. The sling consisted of straps about the man's body, permitting the free movement of his limbs, and he was lowered and raised by men at the other end of the line, according to mutually understood signals. When the painter worked around where the wind struck him forcibly he lost his foothold against the stack. This threw him in an awkward position, on account of the slipping of the sling. The men at the rope began to pull it gently, so that in the swaying motion given it the painter might regain his foothold. He swung backward and forward once or twice, and then became excited, shouting to the men away below:
 "If you fellows don't stop your fooling I'll cut this rope."—Pittsburg News.

Stag Against Locomotive.
 A race between a stag and a locomotive on the railroad was lately witnessed near Labelle, Canada. The engineer noticed the stag on the track about 200 feet ahead, and he blew a warning whistle. The animal started at a run, keeping to the track, and continued the race for three miles, then gracefully bounded aside until the locomotive had passed.

Loads of Primroses.
 There were more primroses than ever imported into London for primrose day this year. The number of blossoms which came to London April 19 were estimated at 96,000,000, for there were 4,000,000 bunches sent to market. These would require ninety acres to grow in, but they were nearly all wild primroses.

What Makes A Town?

The commercial spirit of a place is what makes and sustains a town. If farmers expect a good market for their produce, they must patronize their home merchants and not purchase their supplies of mail-order houses in faraway cities. The quickest way of depressing property, either real estate or personal, in any town, in fact, or killing the town, is for farmers and villagers to do their trading elsewhere.

A town must have the patronage of the surrounding country in order to maintain its prestige and position as a commercial place. The growth of mail-order houses has been something remarkable in the past three or four years, and no one knows better than the country merchants how deeply they are cutting into the rural trade and depressing property values.

Instead of spending their money at home, where it helps to build up their town, people send their money to Chicago, or elsewhere, under the delusion that they can buy the goods they need at wholesale prices, or as cheaply as their dealer can, and thus save what they consider to be the middleman's profit. Granted, that they do obtain some things cheaper, we doubt if, upon the whole, they do any better by buying their stuff in Chicago than they would in securing it from their home or local merchants.

They expect their local merchants to take their butter, cheese, eggs, potatoes and other farm products, and pay them the highest market prices for them; but if they will hold their patronage from their local merchants, they cannot reasonably expect that their home dealers will do as well by them as they otherwise would. The local merchants cannot live without local patronage. They cannot keep up their stocks and give credit to farmers, and pay their running expenses, unless they have the trade of the people in the towns in which they live and do business.

Merchants and farmers should patronize each other; should help each other; should feel a common interest in the weal of their town, if they expect to live in a prosperous community, have their town grow and their farm and village property increase in value. We believe that one great cause of the present depression of farms, in fact, of real estate interest, is the centralization of capital. A few men are trying to do all the business there is in the country, instead of distributing it among the many and giving everyone a chance of obtaining a competence and becoming self-reliant.—Grocer's Criterion.

Scribner's Magazine for July has as a frontispiece a fine wood engraving by Gustav Krull. It is from a very daguerreotype of Daniel Webster, and accompanies Senator Hoar's paper on Webster, for which he has been collecting material for many years. There are a number of unpublished manuscripts and some new material revealing how Webster prepared his great speeches. Parallel passages are given, showing remarkable divergence between the spoken and written orations. Another Webster paper will appear in the August number.

In the American Monthly Review of Reviews for July the editor reviews the work of our delegation at The Hague up to date, presenting the latest phases of the arbitration question, with some consideration of its bearings on the present international situation. Among other topics discussed in "The Progress of the World" this month are "tariff trusts" as a political issue, the Dreyfus vindication, the war in the Philippines, the recent change in the civil-service rules, and the newly elected college presidents.

Very many years have passed since the pages of the North American Review were lightened by verse, and perhaps the most convincing proof which the new editor has given of his determination to extend the range of our oldest periodical is his publication in the July number of one of the most remarkable poems that have been written in the English language since the death of Tennyson. The poem is from the pen of Algernon C. Swinburne, is entitled "A Channel Passage, 1855," and describes a storm in the course of a voyage between Calais and Dover. It is full of Mr. Swinburne's characteristic fire, and is marked by the boldness of imagery and by the musical versification which distinguish the best works of that singer of surpassing power.

The Outing for July is as wholesome and refreshing as are the outdoor pleasures to which it so pleasantly points the way. The reading matter has been carefully selected and the illustrations are numerous and beautiful. The contents include: "On a Pennsylvania Trout Stream," by Ed. W. Sandys; "Hunting Alaskan White Sheep," by Dall. De Weese; "Catboating on Jersey Inland Waters," by Hy. T. Brown; "The Golf Clubs of Chicago," by A. J. Colman; "Remote Norway," by Elizabeth Taylor; "How to Recognize Deadly Snakes," by G. R. O'Reilly; "A Glorious Fourth A-wheel," by A. H. Godfrey; "A Surrender at Discretion," by Cent Warfield; "Canoeing Down the Penobscot," by W. O. Brooks; "Fishing for Snapping Mackerel," by Ohas. H. Chapman; "Five Weeks A-wheel in France," by Sydney Cross; "Bass Fishing at Stony Island," by Isabel Nelson; "The Launch of Columbia," by Capt. A. J. Kenaly, and the usual editorials, poems and records.

Centenary of Camp-Meetings.

A writer in the July Ladies Home Journal calls to mind that one hundred years ago—August, 1799—the first camp-meeting for religious worship was held in America. The site of this notable gathering is a short distance from Russellville, in the State of Kentucky. The earlier camp-meetings, it is shown by the Journal's article, were formerly conducted irrespective of denominational lines, but the form of worship soon became, and has since remained, a Methodist institution.

W. A. Fraser, the new Canadian author, has written a number of East Indian racing stories for McClure's Magazine, and the first one, entitled "The Luck of the Babe," will appear in the July number. The same number will contain a short war story by Stephen Crane, and a new "Boyville" story by William Allen White. The last will be illustrated with some more of Orsel Lowell's charming pictures of "Boyville" life. Mr. Lowell seems to know the place almost as well as Mr. White, who created it.

McClure's Magazine for July opens with a very complete and instructive account of the automobile as it is seen to day, no longer a matter of mere promise or experiment, but one of practical, constant use; the article explains what it costs, how it is operated and just what it will do, setting forth respective advantages and disadvantages of the various kinds. And it is illustrated with pictures of all the more important types. The recent developments will be a surprise to most readers, although they have been effected almost under their very eyes. There is a generous portion of strong, wholesome, and variously entertaining fiction in the number contributed by William Allen White, Stephen Crane, W. A. Fraser, Booth Tarkington, and J. H. Cranson, the latter a writer who here makes his first appearance, and makes it in a story that gives good token of the return of joyfulness to literature.

The July Century is a story-teller's number, and is novel in its make up, not only because it has a large amount of original fiction by ten living story-writers, but because it contains also articles on seven of the world's most famous makers of fiction, two only of whom are living. Mrs. James T. Fields tells of a visit to George Eliot, and quotes unpublished letters from the famous novelist. "Stevenson in Samoa" contains such reminiscences as might be expected from the storyteller's step-daughter and secretary "The Making of 'Robinson Crusoe'." gives the true story of Alexander Selkirk and his sojourn on Juan Fernandez, with reproductions of his gun, his trunk, and other relics, and clears De Foe of the charge of having stolen his literary material from the original Robinson Crusoe. Frank M. Chapman, the ornithologist, writes of Bird Rock, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence; Prof. Wheeler's "Alexander the Great" shows the conqueror in anger and in love, and Mr. Ford's "Many-Sided Franklin" is seen this month in his intimate and interesting relations with the fair sex. Most of these articles are fully illustrated, and there is an abundance of verse.

Under New Management.

Peter English has sold out his entire interest in the Excelsior Mineral baths and well to H. R. Smith, who heretofore has had one-half interest in the property. Mr. Smith will reorganize the company, Peter English, as president, and Frank English, as secretary, having tendered their resignation. Peter English will give his entire attention to his novel and very powerful rotary engine, which he recently invented. A company of large capital, it is said, stands ready to put this new invention on the market as soon as the necessary preliminaries can be made. It is said that this engine shows a saving of from fifteen to seventeen per cent. over the piston engine.

Mr. Smith will more fully carry out his ideas in the improvements and conducting of the bath house and getting the water established on the market.—Benton Harbor Banner-Register.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and, until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh a constitutional disease and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

TOLD BY DRUMMERS.

"What can equal the warmth of a true woman's love?" asked the dearest girl. "Her temper," replied the savage bachelor.

Staylight—"Tommy, do you think your sister is fond of me?" Tommy—"I don't know. She gave me a quarter to set the clock half an hour fast."

What Spoiled It.—Newcomer (at winter health-resort)—"Is this a restful place?" Native—"Wal, it used to be until people began comin' here for rest."

Betrayed—"Yes, we went away and left the gas burning; staid two weeks." "Was your bill any higher?" "Yes; the fool night-watchman told the gas company about it."

The Savage Bachelor—"Men," said the Dear Girl, "have as much idle curiosity as women." "More," said the Savage Bachelor. "Women's curiosity is always active."

The Baron's Custom.—Inquiring Lady—"Do you always drink beer when you are thirsty?" Baron Snickensuts—"No, madam; I always drink water. I am thirsty, shust the same as you do." "Then when do you drink beer?" "The rest of the time."

She's All Right.—Friend—"You told me you had joined the Audubon society; yet your new hat is trimmed almost entirely with birds and birds' plumage!" The Wearer of the Hat—"Yes; but you see, these birds were all killed before I joined the society."

"That was a hard, cold report that steel workers in Pittsburgh sent to the manufacturers, in which they asked for more pay and shorter hours, wasn't it?" "Yes, not nearly so smooth and easily seen through as the petition circulated by the glass strikers."

"What do you think of the idea of allowing no one who does not own property in the city to become a municipal officer?" "What's the use of worrying?" asked Senator Sorghum. "Let the man alone. The chances are that it won't be long after election till he's owning property enough to satisfy everybody."

Once upon a time a bluebird piped his lay early in the season. Thereupon numbers laid aside their winter underwear and fell accordingly ill. "Unsanitary piping," remarked the doctors, acutely, for there were unmistakable zymotic symptoms. This fable shows how important it is for singing to have a scientific basis.

"I don't see what they want to keep up this fighting for," said the Tagal small boy. "Agumaldo says he is going to be the George Washington of his country, and was the reproving reminder, 'Well, there might have been some sense to it if they had given us guns and cannon. But, the idea of celebrating independence day by shooting bows and arrows!'"

FANS.

The fan in ancient Rome was used in religious ceremonies, and on many of the vases of marble, jade and bronze which have been from time to time found vestal virgins are depicted holding fans of feathers with long cedar, ivory or golden handles, with which they kept the sacred fire alight.

The dainty 15th century fan of Spain was made of rice paper adorned with feathers and often painted by great artists. In France, where some of the most beautiful fans were made, a lovey one was given by Queen Marguerite to Louise de Lorraine, valued at $600. Catherine de Medici was the first to bring Italian feather fans into France.

In ancient Egypt the fan was an emblem of heaven and happiness, and the shapes of these instruments have been preserved for us in the frescoes of the tombs and ancient monuments. In the time of Rameses the Great (circa B. C. 1250) the fan was used as a standard, and was carried only by royal princes or by warriors of renown not less than of general's rank.

Nobody knows when or where the fan originated. Probably on a warm day Eve picked a big palm leaf and waved it in the air before her face and since then all her descendants have but followed her. From all quarters of the globe fans are to be found. In the dusky recesses of the pyramids, the tombs of old Rome, the interior of Africa and the far islands of the Pacific, fans are found; some beautiful, others grotesque.

The ceremonial fans of Hindustan, especially those of beautifully wrought feather work, with gem-encrusted jade handles, which were borne before the sacred car of the god Juggernaut, have been known to be worth many thousands of dollars. And it was doubtless on account of their great value that the fan eventually became the symbol of the gods and of royalty. So high a place, indeed, did the fan come to take in Hindu religious ceremonial, that one of the chief joys promised to the faithful in one of the five paradises is the fanning of the deity Ixora, who dwells in Calaya.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Sav, Joem, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R I P A N S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R I P A N S on the package and accept no substitute. #### A New Law Firm.

A new law firm has been formed in Benton Harbor under the name and style of Graves and Wilson and composed of Frank P. Graves and LeRoy A. Wilson. The firm will have its offices in the Center Block in the suite of rooms already occupied by Mr. Graves.

Mr. Graves has been practicing law in Benton Harbor for the past four years and has become well known in the county, his efforts having already brought him a good measure of success in his chosen profession. He has been found at all times public spirited and deeply interested in the development of all institutions to further the welfare of Benton Harbor and Berrien county. Outside of the practice of his profession he has claimed the attention of the public by his connection with military affairs, he having furnished the first volunteer company to be mustered into the United States service for the State of Michigan. As Captain of Company "I", 33rd Michigan, the people of Berrien County have come to know Mr. Graves very well within the last year.

The firm will give particular attention to the law of real property and conveyancing, and probate and commercial as well as general practice. Both of the gentlemen are comparatively young and are recognized as energetic and trustworthy. With a good foundation for the practice of their profession the success of the firm is assured.

Mr. Wilson, while a stranger to Benton Harbor, some time ago began a business and professional career. A native of Van Buren County, Mr. Wilson commenced a preparatory education and graduated from the Lawton High School after which time he attended the Michigan Agricultural College at Lansing where he soon attracted marked attention for the ability displayed by him as an orator, and upon his graduation Mr. Wilson stood first in his class in rank of scholarship and was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science. Mr. Wilson spent the next two years in the banking and commercial business and then entered the Law Department of the University of Michigan from which he graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. During his course in the University, Mr. Wilson crowned his efforts as a student of oratory by winning for his University the memorable debate with the University of Pennsylvania, Mr. Wilson being at the head of the three representatives of the University of Michigan.
