Our losses were: Killed, Capts. Boyle and Williams, both of the yeomanry, and two men of the yeomanry. Wounded, about seven men. The attack lasted four hours. The corps behaved very well. Our force was composed of yeomanry, the Kimberley mounted corps and the Fourth battery of artillery. Gen. De Villebois Mareuil was the chief of staff of the Boer army. London, April 7.---Another "unfortunate occurrence" is reported from South Africa. Lord Roberts announced the surrender of another batch of 500 troops at Reddersburg. The detachers. ment had been guarding the line of communication when the Boers swooped down, surrounded them, and, after fighting all afternoon and night, they finally yielded.

This incident, coming so swiftly on the heels of Broadwood's surrender. has staggered England. If it means that General Botha, the new commander-in-chief of the Boer forces, intends to keep up this sort of thing during the rest of the campaign, swooping down on small detached bodies of British troops, the prospects for the early termination of the war grows exceeding-

London, April 7.—The Daily Telegraph has the following from Boshof. dated Thursday:

Lord Methuen commanded in a spirited little action nine miles to the southeast, where he surrounded seventy Boers on a kopje. Not a man escaped. We took fifty-four prisoners, sixty horses, and a quantity of baggage. General de Villebois was killed during the action.

A Boer hoisted a white flag and then fired immediately after, killing a British officer. The murderer was instant-

London, April 6.—The Boers in the Orange Free State, taking advantage of Lord Roberts' delay in reorganizing his cavalry, have advanced to Wepener, forty-five miles south of Thaba Nchu, and are attacking General Brabant's force. Brabant's horses are also in bad shape, and he will be forced to remain on the defensive for the present at least.

. While the Boers are pushing south General Clements' division of 6,000 men is advancing north, and is already five miles beyond Bloemfontein. This is regarded as evidence that the Boers have been in the neighborhood of Paardeberg since they retired on the British right. There has also been more skirmishing at Bosman's Kop. Both attacks were repulsed. London, April 5.—It looks today as though the Boers had conceived the audacious plan of attempting to invest of his most intimate friends that he is Lord Roberts at Bloemfontein, or, at willing to run for the high office, proleast, to endeavor to delay his northward advance by harassing the British lines of communication. The situation, in the absence of any official dispatch from Lord Roberts, is both mystifying and interesting. Frankfort, Ky., April 7.—The Court of Appeals has given a decision in the Gubernatorial contest in favor of Beckman, Judge Du Relle dissenting. The other two Republican judges, Burnam and Guffy, handed down a separate opinion, which differed in its reasons from the opinion of the Democratic judges, but agreed with them in its conclusion.

Briefly, the court holds that the legislature has the sole power to decide a contested election case, and that the tribunal therefore cannot go behind the record.

Babette thrust a hat pin into Marie Antoinette's thinly clad sawdust body. "I'm so lonesome," she sad appealingly. But Marie Antoinette's classical china face remained stolidly indifferent. "An' we can't have any supper till mademoiselle gets those vests done. We didn't have very much for dinner." she added reflectively.

Marie Antionette, propped up in one corner of the little dingy, upper hall, showed no sympathy. Babette rested her chin in her hands and watched the two Irish chidren on the floor below fight over the possession of a gorgeous tomato can. The contest was not a very exciting one, and her interest soon waned. Crossing the hall she softly opened a door and looked in. "Are they most done, mademoiselle?" Mademoiselle Cecilia, sewing by the window, smiled bravely at the childish face above the faded brown pinafore. Then she looked at the pile of heavy vests on the chair beside her and sighed.

"Not yet, cherie," she said. "Have patience. We'll have a good supper after I get the money for them; perhaps some sweet crackers, too."

Babette nodded gaily. She closed the door again and went back to her seat on the top stair.

"We mustn't bother mademoiselle when she's so busy, an' besides it hurts her to talk, she carefully explained to Marie Antoinette.

Ah! yes! Babette remembered how mademoiselle used to sing in a church, and at concerts, and earn such a lot of money—till she lost her voice.

"That was after she 'dopted you an' me. We're waifs, you know, Marie." Marie Antoinette listened with resignation.

"An' she spent all her money, an' they didn't make her voice well again. an' now there's a big doctor come an' she's not any money to go an' get cured." Babette's unchildlike eyes grew big and solemn. "An' she don't tell us 'bout the 'locket man' any more He's a nice man. When he was a little boy he lived right next door to mademoiselle, way off in the country."

She rocked her knees and sang part of a lullaby to Marie Antoinette, but Marie Antoinette wasn't sleepy.

Babette grew tired of the stillness and the darkness. She wondered if it was too cold to go out. She opened the door again and looked coaxingly into Mader oiselle Cecilia's tired eyes. "We're going up to the corner, me an' Marie, to see the birds," she said. Mademoiselle nodded. "All right, cherie, run along. Don't go any further, and come back soon." Babette jumped into her home-made jacket and cap, and went down the four flights of stairs, past the Irish children, now peacefully at play, and the little Dutch baby amusing himself with a wonderful scarlet-coated dog that sprang up an indigo stick when you pulled the string. Babette liked the little Dutch baby, and his mother made such nice spicy gingerbread men with cranterry eyes.

Out upor the street boys were playing marbl a their dirty hands blue with the dd, and the first hand-orran of the season was grinding out a t heezy dance.

Babette istened a moment, then, mcking Marie Antoinette securely under one arm, went on up the street and stationed herself contentedly before the window of a bird store. She could watch the vellow songsters for hours logether, talking to Marie between times, an playing she was going to buy one, only it was so hard to decide which one was the prettiest. Somemics she almost forgot she was only a little French waif adopted by Mademoiselle Cecilia, who lived in two rooms on the top floor of Poverty Flats, and sewed vests at nine cents a Cozen If mademoiselle might only get her vo' e well again! If she only had money to go to the new doctor! Babette swallowed a lump in her threat She knew mademoiselle cried nights sometimes, and grew so thin and white.

Perhaps the "locket man" might make her well, but he never came. He had such nice face, too-in mademoiselle's locket.

From a church a little further on came the sound of singing. The choir boys who were practicing for Easter chanted triumphantly-

"Break forth into joy, sing together,

Ye waste places of Jerusalem." Babette listened. Then the idea came. She peered around the corner and thought earnestly. Among so many people some of them wouldgive her money-if she only dared to try. She might get enough to make mademoiselle's voice well again. How glad she would be!

She looked curiously up into the people's faces. They looked good. She hesitated a moment, then turned the corner and sped up the avenue.

The choir boys' chanting died away. A few street venders were calling their wares, but Babette bravely took her station on the walk near the curbstone. She waited to catch her breath and until her little red cap. Then holding it shyly out she took heart and began to sing a rollicking sailor song. She knew a great many songs, and her childish voice was shrill and clear!

People smiled at the odd little figure. Some gave a few pennies, more passed carelessly by. Once a burly policeman strode past; but he did not happen to notice her. Babette took courage. Now it was a quaint Easter carol, now a lullaby, now an uneven chant. She began to grow tired; and Marie Antoinette hung head downward in a dejected fashion.

She was growing hungry, too, and the afternoon faded into dusk. Mademoiselle would worry if she didn't go soon; but there was so little money in the cap!

Again she scanned the people's faces. Perhaps that pretty lady coming would give something. She hitch- May Be Used to Great Advantage by the ed Marei Antonette into a more respectable position, and began a love song mademoiselle used to sing.

Suddenly some one touched her on the shoulder.

"Where did you learn that song?" Babette looked up into the brown ial which has been mixed with a teaeyes bent upon her. She noticed the spoonful of flour, and the yolk of one Juno. They are great, tall, magnificent pointed beard and curly hair and a light came into her eyes.

New Use for Coal Dust.

A rural chemist has accidentally discovered a curious case of adulteration, or, more accurately, of substitution in the matter of a drug commonly sold in pharmacles, rural and urban. The drug is the tri-sulphide of antimony, known as black antimony. The chemist in analysing a patent remedy discovered that the ingredients nearly corresponded with those in a formula furnished by the Agricultural Department but that coal dust had been substituted for black antimony.

Struck with this discovery, the chemist obtained twelve samples of black antimony, most of them from druggists in his own neighborhood, but others were coal dust, coal dust and chalk or coal dust and sand. There is no reason to suppose that the druggists unless it were practiced on a large scale; but it seems plain that some manufacturing chemist is selling a mony. Indeed the substitute may be sent out from more than one factory, for while the dozen samples tested came from the Eastern coast, the remedy in which the substitution was originally detected came from the West.

The New York druggist who sold a considerable demand for black antimony on the part of grooms and coachmen, who use it in the preparation of condition powders for horses. Two other druggists in the same neighborhood do not keep black antimony. One of them keeps what is known as red antimony, which is chemically identically with black antimony though different in appearance. Red antimony is a product of chemical precipitation, while black antimony is a natural product found in many parts of Europe, in Nova Scotia and Ne-

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?" An Ideal Candidate.

The increasing strength manifested by Hon. D. M. Ferry in his candidacy for governor is alarming some of his opponents so that they are forgetting been advocating all along for a friendly contest, and some acrimony is being displayed by the friends of some of the candidates who do not seem to be gaining as rapidly as their claims would indicate. As a result these "boomers" are seeking to throw discredit upon Mr. Ferry by distorting and misrepresenting his speech at Ionia to be an absolute declaration in favor of specific taxation of railroads. In reply to a question as to how he would stand on this proposition Mr. Ferry made the following straightforword and manly reply:-"If the republican state convention declares against the specific taxation cord with that declaration. I sup-dictate to them. posed that I had already made myself perfectly clear on that subject at Ionia. My position has since been been able to give that really very great subject adequate consideration. She thanked me in her quiet, undemonstrative way, told me that she was considerably better, and gave me to understand that she should want nothing till her mother's return.

After that, I went downstairs to my little sanctum and began to busy myself with my accounts. The servants had been allowed to station themselves in a room at the top of the house whence they could command a distant view of the proceedings in the bay. And so the afternoon gradually wore away.

The brake with its load was back shortly after six o'clock, and the ladies at once went upstairs to their own rooms. About five minutes later I was startled by the simultaneous ringing of several bells and by hearing my name called out from the upstairs landing by three or four voices of varying degrees of shrillness. The Holy Spirit came into this room last Sunday and touched the hearts of several young men, who gave themselves then and there to the Lord Jesus Christ. Among the men was one of another race than the Anglo-Saxon. He was a black man. His heart was melted by the same love, his mind illuminated by the same truth. He desired to make confession of his belief. be baptized according to the commands of Jesus and unite with this church as a humble disciple of the lowly Nazarene. His name was presented with the rest at the regular committee meeting last Monday, and that committee, by a vote of 3 to 2, refused to present his name with recommendations for membership. On my own responsibility at the preparatory service Thursday night I asked the church to act upon this disciple's name. There was a legal quorum of the church present. By a vote of 26 to 12 the applicant for membership was received according to the rules of this church.

"But after that meeting the man came to me and said that he was unwilling to unite with the church, knowing that some objected to his membership. It was a natural feeling for him to have. We had a long talk over the matter. Since then I have learned that if a larger representation of members had been present at the preparatory meeting there is a possibility that the number voting against receiving the applicant would have been much larger than those who voted for him.

"Under all these circumstances I have deemed it my duty to say what I have thus far said and to ask the church to take the action I now propose. We are met here this morning in full membership. Here is a soul just led out of the darkness by the spirit of truth. He is one known to many of vou as an honest, worthy man, for many years faithful in the discharge of > large volume of thrilling narrative. Philip's story but touches on this other. He had grown rapidly familiar with the different phases of life which loafed and idled and drank itself away during that period of inaction. Hundreds of men had drifted away to other places in search of work. Almost as many more had taken to the road to swell the ever increasing number of professional tramps and in time to develop into petty thieves and criminals. But those who remained had a desperate struggle with poverty. Philip grew sick at heart as he went among the people and saw the complete helplessness, the utter estrangement of sympathy and community of feeling between the church people and these representatives of the physical labor of the world. Every time he went out to do his visiting this feeling deepened in wish, therefore, to ask the members of him. This Sunday afternoon in particular it seemed to him as if the depression and discouragement of the tenement district weighed on him like a great burden, bearing him down to the earth with sorrow and heartache.

He had been in the habit of going out to communion Sunday with the emblems of Christ to observe the rite by the bedsides of the aged or ill or those who could not get out to church. He carried with him this time a basket containing a part of the communion service. After going to the homes of one or two invalid church members he thought of the person who had been mentioned by the man in the morning as living in the tenement district and in a critical condition. He had secured his address, and after a little inquiry he soon found himself in a part of the tenements near to him.

He climbed up three flights of stairs and knocked at the door. It was opened by the sexton. He greeted Philip with glad surprise.

The minister smiled sadly.

"So, my brother, it is true you are serving your Master here? My heart is grieved at the action of the church this morning."

"Don't say anything, Mr. Strong. You did all you could, but you are just in time to see him." The sexton pointed into a small back room. "He is going fast. I didn't suppose he was so near. I would have asked you to come, but I didn't think he was failing so." Philip followed the sexton into the

His prayer was that his tion, but again from the gallery came longed to the southern puscopar church in Virginia." Something in the wistful look of the sexton gave Philip an inspiration for what followed.

"Brother," he said, turning to the sexton, "what is to hinder your baptism and partaking of the communion? Yes, this is Christ's church wherever his true disciples are."

Then the sexton brought a basin of water, and as he kneeled down by the side of the bed Philip baptized him with the words: "I baptize thee, Henry, my brother, disciple of Jesus, leave the church. But he quickly call- into the name of the Father and of good care of him."

The dying man could not lift his hand to take the bread from the plate. Philip gently placed a crumb between his lips. The sexton, still kneeling, partook and, bowing his head between his hands, sobbed. Philip poured out the wine and said, "In the name of the Lord Jesus, this cup is the new testament in his blood shed for all mankind for the remission of sins." He carried gave to the sexton. The smile on the dying man's face died. The gray shadow of the last enemy was projected into the room from the setting sun of death's approaching twilight. The son of the old slave master was going was born into the darkness of slavery. Perhaps, perhaps, he thought, who knows but the first news he would bring to her would be the news of that of thousands of men in Milton during communion? Certain it is that his Wayne County Bank Bidg., DETROPT that eventful winter would make a hand moved vaguely over the blanket.

It slipped over the edge of the bed and fell upon the bowed head of the sexton and remained there as if in benediction. And so the shadow deepened, and at last it was like unto nothing else known to the sons of men on earth, and the spirit leaped out of its clay tenement with the breath of the communion wine still on the lips of the frail, perishable body. Philip reverently raised the arm and laid it on the bed. The sexton rose, and, while the tears rolled over his face, he gazed long into the countenance of the son of his old master. No division of race now; no false and selfish prejudice here. Come, let the neighbors of the dead come in to do the last sad offices to the casket, for the soul of this disciple is in the mansions of glory, and it shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the darkness of death ever again smite it, for it shall live forever in the light of that Lamb of God who gave himself for the remission of sins and the life everlasting.

Philip did what he could on such an occasion. It was not an unusual event altogether. He had prayed by many a poor creature in the clutch of the last enemy, and he was familiar with his face in the tenements. But this particular scene had a meaning and left an impression different from any he had known before. When finally he was at liberty to go home for a little rest before the evening service, he found himself more than usually tired and sorrowful. Mrs. Strong noticed it as he came in. She made him lie down and urged him to give up his evening serv-

"No, no, Sarah! I can't do that! I am prepared. I must preach! I'll get a nap, and then I'll feel better," he

Mrs. Strong shook her head, but Philip was determined. He slept a little, ate a little lunch, and when the time of service came he went up to the church again. As his habit was, just before the hour of beginning, he went into the little room at the side of the platform to pray by himself. When he came out and began the service, no one could have told from his manner that he was suffering physically. Even Mrs. Strong, who was watching him anxiously, felt relieved to see how quiet and composed he was.

He had commenced his sermon and had been preaching with great eloquence for ten minutes when he felt a strange dizziness and a pain in his side that made him catch his breath and clutch the side of the pulpit to keep from falling. It passed away, and he went on. It was only a slight hesitation, and no one remarked anything out of the way. For five minutes he spoke with increasing power and feeling. The church was filled. It was very quiet. Suddenly, without any warning, he threw up his arms, uttered a cry of half suppressed agony and then fell over backward. A thrill of excitement ran through the audience. For a moment no one moved: then every one rose. The men in the front pews rushed up to the platform. Mrs. Strong was already there. Philip's head was raised. Philip's old friend. the surgeon, was in the crowd, and he at once examined him. He was not dead, and the doctor at once directed the proper movement for his removal from the church. As he was being carried out into the air he revived and was able to speak. "Take me home," he whispered to moment. A carriage was called, and mained until Philip was fully con-

"It was very warm, and I was very time I ever did such a thing in my life. I am ashamed. I spoiled the service."

Philip uttered this slowly and feebly when at last he had recovered enough to know where he was.

The doctor looked at him suspiciously. "You never fainted before, eh? Well, if I were you I would take care not to faint again. Take good care of him, Mrs. Strong. He needs rest. Milton could spare a dozen bad men like me better than one like the dominie."

"Doctor," cried Mrs. Strong in sudden fear, "what is the matter? Is this serious?" "Not at all. But men like your husband are in need of watching. Take "Good care of him! Doctor, he will not mind me! I wanted him to stay at home tonight, but he wouldn't." "Then put a chain and padlock on him and hold him in!" growled the surgeon. He prescribed a medicine and went away, assuring Mrs. Strong that Philip would feel much better in the morning.
