Cape Town, May 22.—British troops have arrived at Veereeniging (in the Transvaal north of the Vaal river). The bridge across the Vaal was found to be intact.

Twenty-seven Free State and Transvaal locomotives were captured. Pretoria, May 20.—The government has suggested to the British Commander-in-Chief an exchange of prisoners on parole. Vrede has been proclaimed the capital of the Orange Free State. It is officially announced that Johannesburg will be defended. The Consuls of the neutral powers have been advised to look after their citizens, as the government will not hold itself responsible for injury to persons or damage to property.

London, May 20, 3 a. m.—Not alone in London but throughout England and the empire has the relief of Mafeking been celebrated as no event was ever celebrated before. The enthusiastic excitement on Ladysmith day exceeded that of the Queen's jubilee, and the transports of delirous joy to which London has abandoned itself in the last twenty-six hours far transcends anything witnessed on Ladysmith day. London, May 19.-Mafeking, after relieved at last. This report is given out officially at Pretoria, and nobody doubts it here. From the wording of the message, it appears that the relieving column attacked the different Boer laagers and forts surrounding the town and compelled Commandant Snyman's burghers to quit the neighborhood.

The news was received at 9:30 o'clock last evening, and in less than returned to work, but cars are bein: a quarter of an hour the entire city knew it, and started in to celebrate. The scenes following the relief of Ladysmith were repeated with in creased noise, and to-day London will probably be torn to shreds.

London, May 17.—In the committeeroom of the House of Commons this morning Sir James Kitson, liberal member for Yorkshire, West Riding, Colne valley division, announced that Mafeking had been relieved. The war office, however, is unable to confirm the announcement. Lorenzo Marques, May 16.-A Por tuguese official dispatch says an encounter has occurred at Mafeking and that the Boers have been repulsed with heavy loss.

London, May 16.—The war office has posted the following dispatch from Gen. Buller, dated Dundee. May 16:

"We occupied Glencoe yesterday. "Eleven guns were entrained a Glencoe. The last train, with ambulance, left there at dawn May 15. "Trains are now running to Wessel's Nek station."

Large Numbers Strikers Leave. Chicago, May 21.-Fifteen weeks of the Sultan. have passed since the inauguration of the general lockout and strike in the building trades. During that time nearly 10,000 members of the Building Trades council have been forced to leave the city in order to find work Nearly 10,000 more are now being supported by the council and the affiliated unions. 7.000 are at work for union contractors. The remaining 10,000 are either able to support themselves or have left the city without informing the officers of the unions of their in-Berlin Has Street Car Strike. Berlin, May 19.-Five thousand street car employes are out on strike and traffic is suspended. Disturbances at various points have necessitated extra police precautions.

The strikers smashed the windows of cars on Doenhoffplatz and placed cars across the tracks so as to effectually block traffic.

Not a single tramcar is running, although there has been little disorder

Decision Reached in Kontucky Case.

Washington, May 22.—Supreme court

COURT ORDER IN STRIKE.

Forbids Interference With Facilities For Carrying the Mails.

St. Louis, Mo., May 20.—An injunction most sweeping in its terms was granted by Judge Adams in the United States District Court against not only the leaders of the striking street railway men, but also against any and all who may aid or abet in the obstruction in any way of any part of the appliance made up in operating the mail cars on the street railway lines.

The injunction applies to power houses, tracks, wires, poles-everything-and within it provision is made for embracing in its terms any persons not named, but whose names may hereafter be supplied by the District

St. Louis, May 19.—At a meeting of the presidents, secretaries and business agents of all trades unions last night, the request of the striking street-car employes for a general suspension of work was discussed until 1 a. m. It was stated that only about a dozen of the unions had contracts with employers, several of which would soon expire.

The meeting finally reached a decision to leave the question of a general sympathetic strike to an executive council, which was vested with power to declare one if they deemed advis-

THE MAN WHO HADN'T TIME.

He never had time to play, He never had time to rest, But he worked away and thought of a day When what he had done would attest

The usefulness of his life. His worth as a man among men; Then he would quit the strife-He would rest on his laurels then.

As a bondman chained he slaved. Ever looking ahead; As a miser he hoarded and saved. Grudging his daily bread!

Beyond was a happy day-Nearer and nearer it drew-When his work should be put away And cares should be banished, too!

At last, upon a day,

When the sun was low in the west, He put his work away. And sat him down to rest, But where was the dreamed-of bliss? And why was it now denied? Things seemed to be going amiss-So he brooded awhile and died.

PAIR OF SINNERS.

-S. E. Kiser in Cleveland Leader.

She was the only daughter of a draper who had once been eminent and was now retired; he was a young and prosperous barrister. Her manners and habits of thought were, perhaps, everrefined and affected; she was of a morbidly poetical temperament, and looked at life always through a prism of sentiment. He was unimaginative and practical.

Naturally, then, when they met they loved: and she was too romantic and he too matter-of-fact to believe in a long engagement.

· They had been two months married, and but just returned from the honeymoon, were seated cozily by the fire one wild, wintry evening, when Mabel, in a languishing mood of sentimental melancholy, unburdened herself of a tardy confession.

It had really never occurred to her during the rapture of their short engagement, but once or twice before since their marriage it had risen to her lips, but, fearing it might make a note of discord in the harmony of their wedded lives, she had left it unspoken. It was a trifle, no doubt; but hers was a disposition that magnified trifles. She found a subtle joy in grief, as do all who are surfeited with happiness, and, under such circumstances, the small- it. ness of the grief is no disadvantage.

"Are you sure, Clarence," she asked him, sighing, "that you really love me?"

"Absolutely, dearest." "And you have never loved any one but me?" "Never—never—never!" "And you will love me always?"

"Forever."

He yawned and looked at his watch. They were half expecting a visitor.

"Suppose I had a secret in my life which I had never revealed to you?" She regarded him yearningly. "What sort of secret?"

"I always used to say, dear, that I had told you an about myself-everything; that I was keeping nothing back from you. I am so sorry!" Her eyes grew misty with tears. "I did not intend to deceive you. There is one-only one—event of my life I have never mentioned to you. I had forgotten it until lately.

"Well-and what is it?" he interrupted, a little irritably.

She sank down on the rug beside softly to himself. him in an attitude of supplication, and, clasped her arms about his knees.

"No-no. Well-let me know what it, is."

Ch. words cannot tell how deeply it never disclosed to you. So, after all, flattery, and the latest thing in Par's numiliated me.

"My dear child, do calm yourself." : He laughed, but felt vaguely uneasy. "It can't have been anything so very anful."

"I will tell you, Clarence."

She dried her eyes, and, reaching up, laid a hand upon his shoulder caressin y.

"Did you know, dear, that I once used to write poetry?"

"Well, many persons do that. It may be foolish, but it is not wicked." "I wrote a great deal of it. My sole ambition then was to be a poetess. Much of what I wrote was love lips quivering, "you never loved any poetry-"

"Addressed, I presume, to the heartless man you just referred to?"

"No, dear. It was addressed to quite imaginary persons."

"Well, well! Yes?"

"And about six years ago, dear, I collected all my poems into a volume and published them." "And the heartless man was the publisher?" "No. The publisher was exceedingly kind. He thought very highly of my work-"Never mind the publisher. I am you and I must forgive you."

"And yet he may be quite a harmless, him."

"I withdrew the book instantly and burnt the entire edition." "If all authors accepted their critics' verdict in the same spirit, that man who wrote about the hundred best authors would have had to fix his total at fifty."

"Not a bit." He had grown suddenly thoughtful, and spoke absently.

"You wil lforgive me, darlingwon't you?-for deceiving you?" "Deceiving me?" he asked.

"Well, for seeming not to confide in you unreservedly?"

Taking the childish, pretty face between his hands, he gazed down into her dreamy blue eyes, and laughed

"I—don't—know," he said.

"But-it was nothing actually wrong, "Don't look at me so coldly, Clar- Clarence," she cried indignantly; then, harshly. Say you will forgive me, say all along that I had concealed there.

A WOMAN'S "ETUDY"

Is Her Most Attractive Room--An Inviting Apartment. One of the smallest and least attractive rooms in almost any house may be made into an inviting apartment by the expenditure of a small amount of good taste and a smaller amount of money.

Such a room, situated on the north side of the house and formerly used as a repository for trunks, was recently converted into a charming study by the resourceful mistress. The walls and ceilings, sloping and irregularly angled, were admirably adapted for a well-chosen display of pictures. They were first covered with sage-green cartridge paper. The only relief afforded to the unbroken color was a narrow band of yellow tulips as a boarder to break the line between the ceiling and side walls.

The floor was covered with greenfigured matting in a finely woven design. On the side of the room where the ceiling sloped a trifle was placed a green denim-covered couch with plenty of pillows.

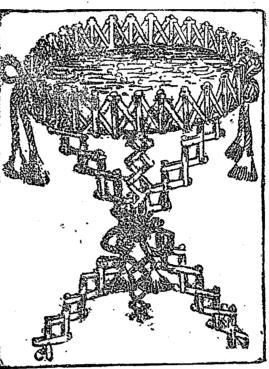

The walls at the back and head of the couch were hung with light draperies, yellow tulips and green leaves on a cream ground.

Portieres of the yellow material were hung in the doorways and curtains of the same at the windows. The effect of the bright yellow on the dull background of green was very pretty.

Sketches and engravings in white and black frames, framed and unframed photographs and unframed pictures were grouped artistically on the walls. Bookshelves were built into a niche in the wall and painted a cream white. They were hung with curtains of yellow silk. On the top shelf were placed a row of quaintly shaped wedgewood jars.

The furniture was of white wood, the one arm-chair being upholstered in green denim like the couch.

The Color of Children's Hair.

A Regular Reader.—Don't attempt to do anything to keep the children's hair light excepting to shampoo it well, which makes it fluffy and keeps it free from superfluous oils and dust, giving it a lighter appearance. The color of the hair depends upon the pigment, which is composed of various minerals. No external application that will really lighten the hair is anything but a bleach, and I certainly should not think of using a preparation of this nature. The effect of cutting the hair, generally speaking, is to make it darker. If I were in your place I should not cut the little girl's hair. My personal experience leads me to believe that it does not increase the growth or luxuriance. The French hygenic soap is the one I refer to.

About Mosquitoes,

Mosquitoes, it is to be presumed, exist for some useful service, but what It is known only to etomologists. To the majority of people there is no information regarding them so welcome as the fact that they are gradually being exterminated by the advance of civilization. This being so, it should be additionally interesting to those who live in districts where mosquitoes abound to know how their departure can be expedited. Permanganate of potash, says a medical paper, can be used against them with deadly effect. Minute parts of the crystal are sufficient for the purpose. The same author ity informs us that only two and a half hours are required for a mosquito to develop from its first stage, a speck resembling cholera bacteria, to its active and venomous maturity.

FRANK R. HALE, Traffic Manager, felt the stock car vibrate perceptibly, St. Joseph, Mich.

A PIONEER INCIDENT

"Keep that kid quiet," said Bankers in a hoarse whisper. "I'm doing the best I can," said his wife, trying to hush the little one, who was sobbing and moaning in her lap. In the baby's milk wagon a bitter fight was going on between paregoric and pain, and the latter was dying hard. The wind drove the rain against the side of the car and made it rock to and fro. "Emma," said Mrs. Bankers to her friend, "take that bottle and hold it between you and a crack in the car, and when it lightens drop ten drops into the spoon-I suppose we must not strike a light."

"You bet you don't strike any light here unless you are ready to give up your chignon," said Bankers, without taking his eyes from the crack through which he was peeping. Emma took the bottle, and at each flash of ligh. ning dropped a drop of hush medicine into the spoon, and when she had put I. N. Savage to Bertna M. Main lot in ten drops they gave it to the baby. That made twenty drops-it was dangerous-but it was sure death to all of them if the baby cried aloud.

The rain came in great sheets and with such force that it seemed that the car could hardly hold the rail. It was not a Pullman car; just a common red stock car standing on a siding with a few armfuls of straw upon the floor. Occasionally Bankers turned Peter Womer to Berrien Springs to glance at the two women who were Water Power Co. property in Niles crouching in one end of the car, and when the lightning lit up their faces they were dreadful to behold. Now the rain, cold as sleet, came through the cracks in the car and stung the faces of those within. Mrs. Bankers had seen three winters at Woodriver, but Elizabeth J. King to Paul Thayer. her friend, the young woman who had come out to western Nebraska to teach school, was in every sense a tenderfoot, and the experience of this wild

"There they are," whispered Bankers. Now the women put their eyes to a crack, and when a flash came they could see a reef of feathered heads that formed a half circle around the house like a feather boa about a woman's neck. Half the band dismounted and made a rush for the cottage. The door was broken and the red devils swarmed in. One of them took a newspaper and lighted it at the open fireplace to make a torch and by the light of it the little party in the stock car could see the Sioux running half crouching, from room to room, in search of the occupants. Finding the place deserted, and smarting under their disappointment, the Indians now set fire to the house, and by the light of it started to loot the railroad station, less than a hundred yards away. The station agent had been warned. scout, but had bravely refused to leave his post. He had made no light, but sat in one end of the dark little room which served as a ticket office, telegraph office, and sleeping room, and as the Indians approached opened fire. At the very first shot the leader of the murderous band leaped high into the air, and came down on his feet, leaped up again and again, and finally fell in a heap to rise no more. With a deafening yell the angry band made a rush for the door and began to beat against it with tomahawks, clubs, and guns. Having emptied his rifle the agent now took up a pair of 45-caliber revolvers, and the lead fairly rattled against the door, and no fewer than a half dozen savages sank to the platform, causing the beseigers to fall back a space. From a distance they began to pour the lead into the building, but the agent, crouching behind the little iron safe, was still unhurt. An Indian brought a torch from the burning cottage and attempted to fire the station, but the rain and wind put out the fire. Two or three Sioux, noticing a string of cars upon the siding, began to search for stock or eatable freight. From car to car they ran, thrusting their rifles into the straw. "Ugh," said an old buck as his rifle found something soft in one of the cars, and Bankers felt a hurt in his short ribs. Laying hold of the side of the car the Indian began to pull and strain. By the merest chance he had taken hold of the car door, and now as it opened he thrust his hideous head inside. Bankers could have blown the top of the Sioux's head off, but he knew that to fire would be to attack a dozen redskins, against whom he could not hope to hold out long. The women scarcely breathed. The baby, full of paregoric, slept as though it had already entered upon 'ts final rest. The other two In-The box weighs fourteen pounds, and diar had given up the search among mpty cars, and gone back to the ping and dancing about the station platform. The old Sioux at the car door cocked his head and listened. He must have fancied he heard something. breathe, for now he put his hands upon the sill and leaped into the car. He had scarcely straightened up when Bankers' rifle barrel fell across his feathered head, and he dropped like a beef. The school ma'am uttered a faint scream, and that was the last sound that came from her corner for some time. The Sioux never moved a finger, and Bankers, having removed the warrior's firearms and ammunition; gave the gun over to his wife and then covered the dead Sioux with straw. Already the little frame cottage had burned to the ground and the rain had nearly quenched the fire. Every attempt made by the band to fire the station had ended in failure, and the Sioux were now preparing to storm the fort. It was hard for Bankers to keep quiet in the car while the agent sold his life so bravely and so aearly to the Sioux, but there were his wife and baby and the helpless school ma'am, who had been persuaded by the Bankers to come to this region and he felt it his duty to protect them as

as though it were being rolled slowly along the rail. His first thought was that the Indians were pushing the empty cars down near the station and that they would set fire to the straw. and then there would be no possible escape. Now there was a roar as of an approaching train, and an instant later a great dark object hove in sight and rolled past the car. It was a locomotive drawing a dozen box cars and running without a headlight. The shouts of the besiegers, the rattle of rifles, and the wild cry of the night prevented the Sioux from feeling the vibration or hearing the sound of the approaching train. The agent, who had been severely wounded, now crawled to the key and called Ogallala. At the first attack he had wired for help, and now, he told the operator there he could hold the place only a little longer. The agent was still at the key when the engine, rolling up to the station shook the building, and he knew the moment he he felt the quiver of it that help was at hand. Instantly the doors of the box cars came open and a company of Government scouts, all Pawnees, except the officers, leaped to the platform just as the band of Sioux were making their last desperate charge upon the station. Before they could realize that reënforcements were at hand the Sioux were beset by the scouts. who always fought to kill. The battle was short and decisive, and when the Sioux fled they left more than half their number upon the field. Probably the most anxious man in the whole party was the conductor of the special train that had brought the scouts from Ogallala. He had ridden all the way on the locomotive, and the moment the train stopped he had leaped to the ground and gone through a shower of bullets to where the cottage which had been the home of the Bankers' had stood. The sight of the house in ashes made him sick at heart, but there was still hope; they might have taken refuge in the station. and, facing about, the fearless conductor fought his way to the door. By this time the Sioux were giving all their attention to the scouts, and the conductor forced his body through the shot-riddled door. The agent lay upon the floor in a pool of his own blood, but he was still alive. "Where are they?" asked the conductor, glancing about the dark room.

"Among the stock cars, if they are still alive," was the reply which came in a whisper. "I saw them leaving the house at dusk-go to them-I'm-I'm all right," and the conductor, having placed the wounded man upon his bed, made for the stock cars.

"Bankers, where are you?" he called, and Bankers answered, only two cars away. Now the conductor lighted his white light and climbed into the car. The brave Mrs. Bankers greeted him with a smile that soon changed to tears, for in the light of the hand lamp she had seen her baby's face, and it looked like the face of a dead child. "Emma," she called excitedly, but there was no answer. "Is she dead?" cried the conductor, falling upon his knees and holding the light close to his sweetheart's face.

"No, you chump," said Bankers, "she only fainted when I killed this Sioux," and he gave the dead Indian a kick and rolled him out of the car. "But the baby," pleaded Mrs. Bank-

"She's all right," said the husband. "Only a little too much paregoric," and so it proved.

"Here, Em," said Bankers shaking the young woman, who was regaining consciousness, "brace up. You've got eompany."

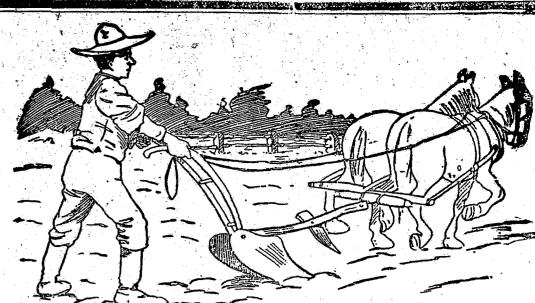

"Are we all safe?" asked the schoolma'am, feeling for her back hair. "Oh! my dear, brave friend, you have saved us all!" "Yes, I played -," said Bankers,

"hiding here in the straw while the agent was being murdered." "But you saved the women," said the conductor, who was overjoyed at finding all alive.

"Yes," said Bankers, "that's something, after all."

And all this is not a dream. It is only a scrap of the history of the early days of the Union Pacific. The brave station agent is an old man now, and one of his legs is shorter than the other—the one that was shot that night. The baby, having recovered from her severe tussle with colic and paregoric, is now one of the most charming women in a Western city. The conductor of the soldier train is at this writing a general superintendent of a wellknown railway. The snows of forty winters have fallen upon his wife's hair. It is almost white, but her face is still young and handsome, and/I remember that she blushed when telling this story to ree, and recalling the fact that she had fainted in a stock car on that wild night at Woodriver.-New York Sun.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Say, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?" WANTED.—A case of bad health that R.I.P.A.N.S. will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong lifes.

Washington, May 20.—It is said that a syndicate secured an option on the Danish West Indies for $1,000,000, and tried to sell them for $4,000,000 to the United States. Secretary Hay learned of scheme, and will wait until contract lapses and then negotiate direct.

Rear Admiral Ashmed says his mission is to study naval construction and not to settle claim against Turkey. Washington, May 19.—At the opening of today's session of the Senate President Pro Tem. Frye laid before the Senate a dispatch from the Governor of Montana, Robert B. Smith, announcing that he had revoked the appointment of W. A. Clark as Senator, made by Lieutenant Governor Spriggs, and had appointed Martin Maginnis to fill the vacancy.

At the request of Mr. Chandler, chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, the telegram was referred to his committee.

The closing hours of the Senate were occupied in accepting from the State of Missouri statues of Thomas H. Benton and Francis P. Blair, located in Statuary Hall of the Capitol, and from the Grand Army of the Republic the statue of General Ulysses S. Grant, located in the Capitol rotunda. Washington, May 18.—Allison, Hale. Lodge, Hoar and Tillman denounced pneumatic tube appropriation, which may be defeated. Hale said it would strengthen senate to defeat the lobby.

Train of Loaded Freight Cars Crash into the Home of Wm. Mohrs.

Mr. Wm. Mohrs and family who occupy the dwelling near the Lee & Porter Axle works had a narrow escape from instant death Sunday

At 3:10 Sunday morning a heavy freight train backed in on 'he 'spur' leading to the Axle Works to let- the Express No. 7 pass them. The spur has a heavy grade and when the freight started to pull out the train broke in two and 17 cars started The Vice Presidents of the Berrien down the grade at a rapid pace Conductor Porter was the only man on the runaway section and underjumped from the cars and escaped an employe of the Axle works.

The way car or caboose of the train turned sideways and when the train came to a standstill the way car stood in the parlor of the house and not a foot away from the partition wall of the room on the other side of which stood the bed in which they were sleeping. The sleepers were startled by the crash and thought the house had been struck by lightning, but succeeded in making their escape from the house.

.The noise of the runaway cars passing down the "spur" and the crash at the end of the line aroused the entire neighborhood and they were soon upon the spot and rendered whatever assistance they could. The Michigan Central wrecking train was soon on hand and under direction of Roadmaster M. Sullivan, and Train Master M. T. Wright began the work of clearing away the wreck, and after a couple of days of hard work have the work nearly done.

All day Sunday the scene of the wreck was the attraction for everyone and crowds of people were coming and going. Mr. Mohis has recovered from the effects of the accident but the shock has prostrated his wife and she is now at the home of Mr. Sherwood and is under the care of Dr. Curtis, too ill to be moved.

It has been rumored that the Michgan Central had settled with Mr. Mohrs on a satisfactory basis, but such is not the case, Mr. Mohrs baving stated to a RECORD representative that no settlement had been effected. The wrecked cars were loaded with buggies and stoves, but the contents of the cars were not greatly damaged. \diamond \diamond \diamond

THE CRAMPTON MYSTERY.

"Please tell Mr. Crampton that I must see him-I have something of the atmost importance to tell him.' "Very well, sir."

The maid left Fred Palmer, a hustling youth, with an habitually sensational air t standing by the nat rack. and ran upstairs as fast as she could. The parlor seemed deserted, for there was no fire in it, though it was midwinter. Altogether, the house had a disagreeable feeling of sadness about it. No wonder, considering that the only son of the family had been missing for over a week, and nothing but a crumpled and battered nat found in a passenger coach on the railroad to give a hint of his fate.

Presently the maid came running down the stairs with, "Please come up to Mr. Crampton's room, sir." Which message she delivered breathlessly before she could touch the last step of the flight.

The young man found a picture of bereavement in Mr. Crampton's room. A week before that Leonard Crampton would have been set down by any chance acquaintance as a robust, prosperous man of forty-five. This evening he looked, wrapped in a drab fiannel dressing gown, and seated in an trmchair close to the fire, like a man or · "You have something to say to me,

Mr. Palmer?" he asked, in a shaky "Yes, sir, and it would not wait, or I would not have troubled you at this hour. To come to the point, I have traced the-murderer." Mr. Crampton pulled himself forward by the two arms of his chair and stared with open mouth. "Then poor Bob—my boy has been

"Oh, I beg your pardon, sir," said Palmer, starting back and hesitating-"I-1 thought-why, everybody says-I thought you were all reconciled to-

to this view."

"Yes—yes; go on and tell me. I suppose it must be so. Sit down." "The man has left Chicago, sir. The police think he has made his way to Dregon or Washington. They are looking for him on other charges." "Yes, but I care nothing about other tharges. Tell me about this—about my boy. "Yes, sir," said Palmer; "I am coming to that. This man—commonly known as Nipper Cary—was seen nere a week ago last Wednesday, wandering about the town. He had on an old brown traveling cap and a dilapidated summer suit. Said he was looking for work. The police here had no idea as to his identity. Thursday he was. seen speaking to poor Bob-" "Good God!"

"Yes, sir. Then he followed Boh down toward the freight yards. You remember that was the night-"

"Yes. Never mind that-" "Well, sir, it seems that the wife of the gatekeeper at the Love Lane crossing heard some one call for help—a man's voice. She went out and spoke to her husband about it, and he told her she must be dreaming, that it was a drunken man trying to sing up the lane. Seen after that this same gatekeeper admits that a man answering the description of Cary, only with a derby hat, came to the crossing, carrying a bundle under his arm."

"And which way did he go?" "Well, the gatekeeper says he turned and walked up the line away from town. It was just after that that the No. 9 train went out, you know, sir. And it was on the No. 9 that the porter found Bob's hat—a derby—under the seat. The conductor said, you remember, that a rough-looking man boarded the train at Whitger's and paid his fare as far as Evanston."

The unhappy father was sobbing, and Palmer respectfully paused a moment in his story.

"What do you think this scoundrel aid with my son? Where is the body?" "I have been looking through Love Lane this afternoon. ...r. Crampton, do you know the cedar clump at the edge of the Carpenter place, just about fifty yards from the crossing?"

"I found the bushes a good deal trodden at one place there. The long grass in the ditch at the roadside is dry now of course, but at this place it was broken and stamped. And two rails of the snake fence have been let down there. Mrs. Carpenter told me that she had never known any one to make a short cut through the cedar clump at that place. But I went and looked about imong the trees and found a well there. It has not been used for years, and the story goes that it is a used-up oil well." "And you think?" "Yes, sir. I think that the murderer threw poor Bob's body down that

"But isn't it filled up."

"Not up to the top, sir." "Isn't there any machinery in it?" "No. 3'r The machinery was all removed one see."

"Then," said Mr. Crampton, "I'. have that well opened, if I have to part ten thousand dollars for it."

Here was where Palmer found his difficulty in the task he had set himself. The Carpenters-two brothers and his wife or one of them—refused to allow the well to be touched. When Mr. Crampton, accompanied by Palmer, visited the Carpenters' place on the morning after this interview, the Carpenters pointed out that the short, thick undergrowth of brushwood at the mouth of the hole was not disturbed, as it would be if a dead body had been dragged thither and thrown n only a week before. Mr. Crampton pointed to the disturbed fence rails and trampled grass at the break in the fence, and the unquestionable evidence that some one had passed in that way, walked to the old well and gone back again the same way.

But the Carpenters, though they admitted all these evidences, denied the force of Palmer's theory that a murder had been committed thereabouts on the Thursday night of the previous week.

It must be said that the Carpenters were in a minority. Fred Palmer, in whose ability to ferret out a mystery most of his fellow-townsmen had great confidence, had discovered fresh evidence in the shape of a rag with blood on it in the ditch. Apart from all this strong circumstantial evidence, Fred Palmer was the assistant editor of a local morning paper, and at least once before had successfully traced the guilt in another lesser crime to the guilty party. In the previous case, a small gambling swindle, the opposition paper and most of the inhabitants had ridiculed Palmer's pretensions to being able to solve the problem; this time, at least, the citizens were very wary of premature ridicule.

The upshot of all this was that, while Mr. Crampton \consulted lawyers to find a means of compelling the Carpenters to allow their oil well to be excavated, local public opinion in the space of forty eight hours pretty generally came round to Palmer's views; that young Bob Crampton had been murdered for his watch and the considerable sum of money he was known to have had in his pocket; that the murderer was a tramp who had dis- more? appeared from the neighborhood on the night of Bob's disappearance, and that Bob's body had been thrown into the abandoned well.

"If you will only bring that villain to justice," Mr. Crampton said to Fred Palmer at a second interview, "you may command any service i am able to do you from now on."

That was just what Palmer wanted to hear from Bob's father, chiefly bereportorial ambition in this activity of Fred Palmer.

Palmer knew that Nipper Cary was supposed by the Chicago police to have made his way to Oregon or Wash agton state. He did not hesitate to collow the desperate villain whose description various external parts and organs of answered so completely to that of the tramp with whom Bob Crampton had been seen.

He had $500 of his own within easy reach. He resolved to send that sum hair, or so serious a one as the tearin his struggle for justice and Clara. So ing off of the scalp by accidental he went and spoke about the matter means. The one is apt to occur to alto his editor and chief.

"Just that," said Palmer. "See here; suppose I end by finding the fellow, the paper gets fame, doesn't it? Suppose I don't find him, what does the paper lose? You can get Giles to sup- patient in Baltimore, from whose skull ply for me."

"Go ahead," said the chie?. not leave town without one brief interview with Clara, in which he got that young lady-she was very young, besides being heart-broken about her brother—to promise that if he brought would honestly try to love him. So Palmer, leaving Mr. Crampton to fight with the pig-headed Carpenter family, set out for Oregon by way of

Two days later a letter with typewritten address came to Clara Crampton. Don't be shocked. I have just met that ass, Palmer, coming out of a police station. He rushed up and grabbed me by the shoulder. His jaw drop- the membranes covering the lung is ped when he first saw me. He says you all think I am dead. I am not.

"The fact is, a tramp I came across last week followed me all the way out of Love Lane, trying to buildoze me into giving him something. You know, I meant to go out there and make a moonlight study. It ended in my giving him a bloody nose. Then I went on my way, carrying my sketching box and book under my arm. The tramp | man. In a well-known work on the after I had left him I gave up the idea of making my moonlight sketch and came back to see if he was hurt badly. "I found that he had crawled on to

NUMBER OF ILLS TO WHICH THE FLESH IS HEIR.

Discases. Like Fashions, Change With the Seasons-Only a Small Proportion of the Diseases are Necessarily Fatal--Some of the Maladies,

To face over wir hundred diseases to which the flesh of frail humanity is heir is the unpleasant prospect which stares in the face the human being who is about to enter the twentieth century, says the Baltimore Sun. These, according to the testimony of a well-known physician, include only diseases as such, and not injuries, growths and accidents which require surgical attention, and yet may properly be included among the ills of

To go into the realms of surgery, with its growths, fractures, dislocations, would more than double the number of diseases. Indeed, the multiplication would be almost endless, as each particular break of a bone, each wound of a bullet, or each contusion of an accident could be counted a separate disease. What with tropical dangers and war risks of soldiers in distant lands the chances would seem to be largely increased in some form or other.

A ray of hope is held out, however, in the fact that there is escape from many of those diseases for a large number of the country's inhabitants, as is evidenced by the increasing population, in spite of the large array of maladies. Then, too, it must be remembered that only a small proportion of the diseases are necessarily fatal, and with the present advance in the science of medicine some of the others may ere long be taken from the danger list as physicians become more familiar with combating them and bring out new remedies, which are their ammunition in the fight for

From infancy to old age man is peset by the perils of illness, but when it is considered that some forms of disease attack only the young and other forms attack only the old, or those of a certain age, the chances are still more in favor of the average sojourner in the world escaping one or the other, Some diseases may be cause Bob's father was also the father | borne without serious consequences of Clara. There was more than mere and recovered from with comparative ease, while others leave their mark for life, as it were, engendering other complaints which go to make up the list of sick dangers.

From another point of view the diseases may be apportioned among the the body, in a measure cutting down the total for the whole body at the expense of some particular part. Thus, the head may be subject to so simple a disease as the falling out of most any one, while the other happens "And you want to go all the way to only in rare accidents. Again, a simness and stiffness in the muscles of the neck, which, for a few days, may be extremely trying to the man of affairs. But this is not in it with ment of the annual interest on said mortgage, having a steel chisel shot into the and said payment has remained unpaid and in head, as was the case with a recent arrears for the space of thirty days, for which deaffairs. But this is not in it with head, as was the case with a recent the iron was successfully removed.

A simple headache, while annoying, And ahead Palmer went. But he did may be due to no traceable derangement of the nerves or brain. On the other hand, the growth of a tumor in the brain or the blood clot formed from a ruptured or diseased blood vessel may, by its pressure on an important nerve centre, cause paralysis her brother's murderer to justice she of a limb or the whole side of the Outside of the zymotic diseases, or in the body of living germs, introduced from without, the physician says that, after all, the other diseases are merely forms of inflammation. Thus, one form of inflammation of the mucous lining of the throat will produce a simple sore throat, while another form of inflammation of the same tissues will cause a deadly case of diphtheria. Thus, too, an inflammation of the membranes lining the interior of the lungs will be called pneumonia, while another form of infiammation of called pleurisy. So it goes through various tissues and organs of the body, each having a variety of forms of inflammation, particularized as diseases which are known by this or that

A single organ may be subject to nearly a score of diseases, as, for instance, the liver, about which much is said and written, and which receives much blame for the varying moods of tumbled so dead-like into the ditch that | practice of medicine the liver has set down to it fifteen diseases with which its owner may suffer.

> Besides the specific disease which is supposed to attack all well-ordered hearts in their youth and leave them more or less affected throughout life, the medical writers assign half a dozen diseases to that organ which are to diseases, as the "clergyman's sore throat," the "housemaid's knee." "writers' cramp," and "chimneysweep's cancer." Some of the recent additions to this class of diseases are "typewriters' paralysis" and "telephone headache," an affliction to which some of the exchange girls are subject, from constact use of the telephone receiver. Some diseases are more prevalent in one month of the year than in another, although there is no hard and fast rule to comine them to a particular season. Under the proper provocation a person may have a cold in the head in midsummer, as well as in winter. There is less change from year to year than in fashions. It is quoted from the Bible that "there is nothing new under the sun." This is held by some to be true of medicine. It is pointed out that the same maladies have existed for centuries, only, perhaps, they were not so well studied and less was written about them. The progress of medicalin the method of treatment, and this caused prominence to be given to G.H. ROSS, Traffic Manager. science has also brought about changes some diseases which had previously held an obscure place in medical and surgical literature. A case in point is appendicitis, which in old works of medicine held little, if any place, and then under another name. The first performance of the operation of opening the abdomen, less than a score of years ago, led to the recognition of this disease and its surgical treatment. Nowadays hardly a day passes without an operation for appendicitis. Influenza, or grip, has its periods of convenient activity when every cold of consequence is called by this bettersounding name along with the genuine cases of the malady. Again, it sinks into comparative obscurity until dragged into prominence by an epidemic in some section of the country.

The multiplication of remedies has more than kept pace with the growth in the number of diseases. All the coal tar products were unknown but a few years ago. Chemists and manufacturers are now busy, and allow scarcely a week to go by without putting on the market a new remedy for which some special curative function is claimed.

The medical colleges, too, are turning out hundreds of graduates every year who are taking up the fight against disease, adding their investigations and deductions to the work that has gone before. Hygiene and dietics are being given more attention in the field of preventive medicine, in order to build up the human system so that it will resist the single or combined assaults of its disease enemies. So the fight goes on against the 600odd diseases.—Brooklyn Citizen.

The Colosseum.

The Colosseum is the name given to the Flavian Amphitheater in Rome, a rarge edifice for gladiatorial combats. fights of wild beasts and similar sports. It was begun by Vespasian, who died A. D. 79, and finished by Titus, 80 A. D., when to mark the event games and fights were held, in which it is said that 5,000 animals and a large number of gladiators were killed. The amphitheater was 1,641 feet around, 615 feet long, 510 feet broad, and was in the form of an eclipse, and seated 87,000 persons. The marble with which it was originally lined has been used to build the palaces of modern Rome. More than 400 varieties of plants have been found in the ruins.

SYNOPSIS.

Chapter I-Philip Strong, a minister, receives two calls, one to a college town, where he may live a quiet, scholarly life, to his liking, the · other to a manufacturing town, where there is plenty of work to do among the laboring classes. He accepts the more active field.

Chapters II and III—Phillip discovers that number of his wealthy parishioners have prcperty rented for saloons and gambling houses. He interviews one of them and is advised that he had better not stir the matter up. The next Sunday he preaches upon the subject, and Mr. Winter one of his most prominent parishioners rises from his seat and walks out of the church. The . a me evening Mr. Winter calls on the minister and resents what he calls an insult to himself, and threatens to withdraw his support from the church, retires in high dudgeon. The sermon creates great excitement, and the next Sunday a large crowd attends Phillips church, expecting a sensational sermon, but Phillip disappoints them preaching on an entirely different subject.

Chapter IV-Phillip attacks the saloons and preaches against them to a large congregation. He calls upon his people to join with him in an attempt to exterminate them. Later he leaves his house to visit a sick child, and a man on the opposite side of the street fires two shots at him. Chapter V-Phillip has been severely though not mortally wounded. His assassin is arrested and at Phillip's request is bought before him Phillip assures him that he bears him no ill will and prays for him.

Chapter VI-Phillip preaches on the Sunday question and makes new enemies. Coming home one evening he finds his wife in a faint on the floor, a knife stack into the lesk, and two anonymous scrawls, one addressed "To the Preacher," the other "To the Preacher's Wife." Chapter VII-They were warnings to leave town. The minister's wife begs her husband to leave the field for another, but instead he prepares to coninue war against the devil there and in his

He speaks to the laboring men at their hall and unintentionally influences them against the rich by holding up the selfishness of many of the rich people. When he goes home he is informed that a mob is threatening Mr. Winter at his residence.

Ceapter IX-Phillip goes to the scene of trouble and rescaes Mr. Winter from the mob.

Chapter X-Philip preaches against wasteful expenditures when the poor are in need and is visited by a stranger who asked for food and shel extravagantly for one who preaches against extravagence. Phillip calls him "Brother Man."

The sermon when delivered produces a profound sensation. Philip is summoned to the bedside of a college chum who was thought to be dying, and when he returns finds a letter awaiting him from the church asking for his resignation.

He kneeled down and offered the most remarkable prayer that they had ever heard. It seemed to them that, however the old man's mind might be affected, the part of him that touched God in the communion of audible praver was absolutely free from any weakness or disease. It was a prayer that laid its healing balm on the soul of Philip and soothed his trouble into peace. When the old man finished, Philip felt almost cheerful again. He went out and helped his wife a few minutes in some work about the kitchen. And after supper he was just getting ready to go out to inquire after a sick family near by when there was a knock at the door.

It was a messenger boy with a telegram. Philip opened it almost mechanically and, carrying it to the light, | beginning to stream toward Calvary | thin wood, and stood out very conspicuread:

Alfred died at 4 p. m. Can you come?

For a second he did not realize the ness and a pain seized him, and for a called his wife, who was in the kitchen. She came in at once, noticing the peculiar tone of his voice.

"Alfred is dead!" He was saying the words quietly as he held out the telegram.

"Dead! And you left him getting better! How dreadful!"

"Do you think so? He is at rest. must go up there at once. They expect me." He still spoke quietly, stilling the tumult of his heart's anguish for his wife's sake. This man, his old college chum, was very dear to him. The news was terrible to him.

Nevertheless he made his preparations to go back to his friend's home. It is what either would have done in the event of the other's death. And so he was gone from Milton until after the funeral and did not return until Saturday. In those three days of absence Milton was stirred by events that grew out of the action of the church.

CHAPTER XXIV.

In the first place the minority in the church held a meeting and voted to ask Philip to remain, pledging him their hearty support in all his plans and methods. The evening paper, in its report of this meeting, made the most of the personal remarks that were made and served up the whole affair in sensational items that were eagerly read by every one in Milton.

But the most important gathering of Philip's friends was that of the mill men. They met in the hall where he had so often spoken, and, being crowded out of that by the great numbers. they finally secured the use of the courthouse. This was crowded with an excited assembly, and in the course of very many short speeches, in which the action of the church was severely condemned, a resolution was offered and adopted asking Mr. Strong to remain in Milton and organize an association or something of a similar order for the purpose of sociological study and agitation, pledging whatever financial support could be obtained from the working people. This also was caught up and magnified in the paper, and the town was still roused to exhis congregation to reduce his a lary one half citement by all these reports when Philip returned home late Saturday antagonism to the church we love. But afternoon, almost reeling with exhaustion and his heart torn with the separation from his old chum.

However, he tried to conceal his weariness from Sarah and partly succeeded. After supper he went up to his study to prepare for the Sunday. He had fully made up his mind what he would do, and he wanted to do it in a manner that would cast no reproach with sensitive reverence.

He shut the door and began his preparation by walking up and down, as his custom was, thinking out the details of the service, his sermon, the exact wording of certain phrases he wished to make.

He had been walking thus back and forth half a dozen times when he felt the same acute pain in his side that had seized him when he fainted in church at the evening service. It passed away, and he resumed his work, thinking it was only a passing disorder. But before he could turn again in his walk he felt a dizziness that whirled everything in the room about him. He clutched at a chair and was conscious of having missed it, and then he fell forward in such a way the floor and was unconscious.

How long he had been in this condition he did not know when he came to himself. He was thankful, when he did recover sufficiently to crawl to his feet and sit down on the couch, that Sarah had not seen him. He managed | love of his Heavenly Father. But, oh, to get over to his desk and begin to ye would not! And yet the love of ing up stairs. He did not intend to deceive her. His thought was that he peace and hope and fellowship and would not unnecessarily alarm her. He was very tired. It did not need much urging to persuade him to get to bed.

He awoke Sunday morning feeling strangely calm and refreshed. The morning prayer with the Brother Man came like a benediction to them all. Sarah, who had feared for him owing to the severe strain he had been enduring, felt relieved as she saw how he appeared. They all prepared to go to church, the Brother Man and William going out for the first time since the attack. We have mentioned Philip's custom of coming into his pulpit from the little room at the side door of the platform. This morning he went in at the side Sarah and the others. He let Brother and then, drawing his wife to him, he the top of the short flight of steps lead-ence. More than one member felt a whame at the action which had been taken and might have wished it recalled. With the great number of workingmen and young people in the church there was only one feeling; it was a feeling of love for Philip and of sorrow for what had been done. The fact that he had been away from the city, that he had not talked over the matter with any one owing to his absence. the uncertainty as to how he would receive the whole thing, what he would say on this first Sunday after the letter had been written-this attracted a certain number of persons who never go inside a church except for some extraordinary occasion or in hopes of a sensation. So the audience that memorable day had some cruel people present, people who narrowly watch the faces of mourners at funerals to see what ravages grief has made on the countenance.

The organist played his prelude through and was about to stop when he saw from the glass that hung over the keys that Mr. Strong had not yet appeared. He began again at a certain measure, repeating it, and played very slowly. By this time the church was entirely filled. There was an air of expectant waiting as the organ again ceased, and still Philip did not come out. A great fear came over Mrs. Strong. She had half risen from her seat near the platform to go up and open the study door when it opened, and Philip came out.

Whatever his struggle had been in that little room the closest observer could not detect any trace of tears or sorrow or shame or humiliation. He was pale, but that was common; otherwise his face wore a firm, noble, peaceful look. As he gazed over the congregation it fell under the fascination of his glances. The first words that he spoke in the service were strong and clear.

He began to speak very quietly and simply, as his fashion was, of the fact that he had been asked to resign his pastorate of Calvary church. He made the statement clearly, with no halting gesture. Then, after saying that there was only one course open to him under the circumstances, he went on to speak, as he said he ought to speak, in defense of his interpretation of Christ and his

"Members of Calvary church, I call you to bear witness today that I have tried to preach to you Christ and him crucified. I have doubtless made mistakes; we all make them. I have offended the rich men and property owners in Milton. I could not help it. I Lord would speak. I have aroused opnot call themselves Christians, for the purpose of knowing their reasons for the time has come, O my brothers, when the church must welcome to its councils in these matters that affect the world's greatest good all men who have at heart the fulfillment of the Christ's teachings:

But why do I speak of all this in defense of my action or my preaching?"

Suddenly Philip seemed to feel a revulsion of attitude toward the whole of what he had been saying. It was as if there had instantly swept over him the knowledge that he could never make the people before him understand either his motive or his Christ. His speech so far had been quiet, unimpassioned, deliberate. His whole manner now underwent a swift change. People in the galieries noticed it, and men leaned out far over the railing, and more than one closed his hands tight in emotion at the sight and hearing of the tall figure on the plat-

"Yes," he said, "I love you, people of Milton, beloved members of this church. I would have opened my arms to every child of humanity here and shown him, if I could, the boundless Christ! What a wonderful thing it is! How much he wished us to enjoy of service! Yes, service—that is what the world needs today; service that is willing to give all-all to him who gave all to save us! O Christ, Master, teach us to do thy will! Make us servants to the poor and sinful and hopeless. Make thy church on earth more like thyself."

Those nearest Philip saw him suddenly raise his handkerchief to his lips, and then, when he took it away. it was stained with blood. But the people did not see that. And then, and then—a remarkable thing took place.

On the rear wall of Calvary church there had been painted, when the church was built, a Latin cross. This cross had been the source of almost door of the church after parting with | endless dispute among the church members. But now he stepped back-it was not far—and turning partly around, with one long arm extended toward the cross as if in imagination he saw the Christ upon it, he exclaimed, "Behold the lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world!' Yes,

"In the cross of Christ I glory, Gathers round"-His voice suddenly ceased, he threw his arms up, and as he turned a little forward toward the congregation he was seen to reel and stagger back against the wall. For one intense, tremendous second of time he stood there with the whole church smitten into a pitying, horrified, startled, motionless crowd of blanched, staring faces as his tall, dark figure towered up with outstretched arms, almost covering the very outlines of the cross, and then he sank down at its foot.

A groan went up from the audience. Several men sprang up the platform steps. Mrs. Strong was the first person to reach her husband. Two or three helped to bear him to the front of the other side. "No," he said, with an indescribable gesture and untranslatable inflection, "he is not dead. He is living in the eternal mansions of glory with his Lord."

But the news was borne from lip to lip, "He is dead!" And that is the was obliged to do so in order to speak | way men speak of the body. And they as I this moment solemnly believe my were right. The body of Philip was dead. And the Brother Man was right position because I asked men into the also, for Philip himself was alive in church and upon this platform who do | glory, and as they bore the tabernacle of his flesh out of Calvary church that day that was all they bore. His soul was out of the reach of humanity's selfishness and humanity's sorrow.

They said that when the funeral of Philip Strong's body was held in Milton rugged, unfeeling men were seen to cry like children in the streets. A great procession, largely made up of the poor and sinful, followed him to his wintry grave. They lingered long about the spot. Finally every one withdrew except Sarah, who refused to be led away by her friends, and William and the Brother Man. They stood looking down into the grave.

"He was very young to die so soon," at last Sarah said, with a calmness that was more terrible than bursts of

"So was Christ," replied Brother

Man simply. "But, oh, Philip, Philip, my beloved, they killed him!" she cried. And at last, for she had not wept yet, great tears rolled down into the grave, and uncontrollable anguish seized her. Brother Man did not attempt to console or interrupt. He knew she was in the arms of God. After a long time he said: "Yes, they crucified him. But he is with his Lord now. Let us be glad for him. Let us leave him with the Eternal Peace."

When the snow had melted from the hillside and the first arbutus was beginning to bud and even blossom, one day some men came out to the grave and put up a plain stone at the head. After the men had done this work they went away. One of them lingered. He was the wealthy mill owner. He stood with his hat in his hand and his head bent down, his eyes resting on the words carved into the stone. They were

AN INTERESTING ARTICLE. Written by a Buchanan Boy.

We copy with pleasure an article contributed by Mr. E. A. Bartmess, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Bartmess to the Yonker (N. Y.) Statesman in

Editor of Statesman.

I have read with interest the recent articles in your paper on the subject of ornithology. At the present time, bird migration is at the flood tide. Last week, in company of an able bird student, I spent part of a day in the woods, during which time we observed and identified over 50 species. The olive-crowned thrush. mentioned by Mr. Eickemeyer in both of his recent articles, is a new species to me. I am acquainted with the golden-crowned thrush, and the olivebacked thrush, but not the olivecrowned. I should like to inquire if this name is to be found on "The Check List of North American Birds."

I heartily agree with you in your opinion that the English sparrow is antagonistic to our song-birds. Having closely observed this sparrow for Principal Stevens and family start- a number of years, I do not undered for Big Rapids; Tuesday morning | stand how even the casual observer, to attend the Ferris Institute this not to say student of ornithology, can bring in any verdict in this little tramp's case other than guilty. Only a few days ago I saw him drive a Parula warbler from its perch among the apple blossoms. I have seen him pursue a downy weodpecker from limb to limb, and tree to tree until the woodpecker left the premises. This was in winter, when there was no occasion for dispute over a nesting site. This spring the sparrows are building their nest in a hole which the woodpecker had prepared for his own use. I have seen the sparrow drive away and small song-birds from our pre-Wm. Matthews who is working in mises, time and again. The larger Chicago Heights is expected home on birds, such as the woodthrush, robin and oriole give little heed to his monotonous chirping, and continue to nest about our dwellings. He is antagonistic to their presence, but is unable to drive them away because of their superior size and strength.

This spring a pair of English starlings are nesting in a large oak tree near the corner of Lamaitine and Warburton avenues. They are not quarrelsome birds, but will defend their rights when attacked. When the starlings commenced to build, the sparrows did their utmost to drive them away, but after a few hot contests the supremacy of the pair of starlings was established, and its nest building and brooding have continued unmolested. It is now very amusing to see the sparrows sitting in a semi-circle about the starling's nest, looking stupidly on the abode of their conquerors.

I am sure that the reason there is harmony in the large chestnut tree of Mr. Baker, where both starlings and sparrows abide, is because the former have sternly taught the latter that this number of years has sold out and gone | country is as free to one English bird as another.

The English sparrow, drives other birds away, not only by direct attack, but also by crowding in and robbing them of their nesting sites. English sparrow will build anywhere, from a woodpecker's hole to our electric street lamps. Where are our homeloving birds, the house wren and bluebird, that formerly built about our dwellings? Crowded out and driven away by this little Passer now occupies many of the available nesting sites. Following the railroad best give you an idea of their rapid out. increase by quoting from Chapman's hand book:

We learn from Bulletin No. 1 of the Division of Economic Ornithology and Mammalogy of the United States Department of Agriculture that this pest was first introduced into the United States at Brooklvn. N. Y. in 1851 and 1852. As late as 1870 it was largely confined to the cities of the Alantic Strees, but since that date, partly through man's agency and partly through the bird's rapid increase in numbers and adaptability, it has spread over most of the United States and Canada east of the great plains, and iso ated colonies are established thoroughout the West. This report shows that in 10 years the progeny of a single pair of sparrows might amount 275,716,983,698. It also states that dur half planted now (May 23). A good ing the year 1886 the sparrow added apdeal of wheat has been plowed up proximately 516,500 square miles to the territory occupied by it. The day is evidently near at hand, therefore, when the English sparrow will be in complete possession of the country.

Our cities and villages would be far more attractive, as well as habitable, if this little pest were exterminated. As an insect destroyer he nuisance he is a pronounced succrss. E. A. BARTMESS.

32 FRONT STREET.

The May Convention of Buchanan and Bertrann townships Sunday school union met at the Presbyterian church in Buchanan on Saturday and Sunday, May 19 and 20.

Five profitable sessions were held. After the "teachers' conference" led by Rev. Potter, the president. Rev. W. B. Thomson showed how he would teach, taking one of the lesson of the quarter.

On Saturday evening after devoional exercises conducted by Rev. C. A. Sickafoose. Miss Edith Beardsley gave an interesting talk on "Best methods of conducting a review" which was well received by all present. Mr. A. C. Roe's address was fine. The only regret that there were not more young men to have heard it.

Sunday afternoon, Rev. H. L. Potter had the children's hour taking the 23 rd psalm for the lesson.

The address by Rev. J. F. Bartmess on his experiences in Palestine, was the feature of the convention. In the time allotted him, the speaker could barely touch on his subject in the briefest of outlines, but many expressions of appreciation were heard, and it is hoped that Mr. Bartmess can be induced to arrange his experiences in Palestine in the form of a lecture and entertain as well as instruct our people, giving the lecture at some future date.

Miss Lura Keller gave a recitation which was much appreciated.

The Young People's Union Service was in charge of Rev. James Provan and W. H. Keller, having for a subject-"The Power of a Temperate Life. The attendance at this service was not as large as it should have
