DON'T LET THE SONG GO OUT OF YOUR LIFE.

Don't let the song go out of your life; Though it chance sometimes to flow In a minor strain it will blend again With the major tone, you know.

What though shadows rise to obscure Life's skies And hide for a time the sun; They sooner will lift, and reveal the rift, If you let the melody run.

Don't let the song go out of your life; Though your voice may have lost its trill, Though the tremulous notes should die in the throat, Let it sing in your spirit still.

There is never a pain that hides not some gain, And never a cup of rue So bitter to sup but what in the cup Lurks a measure of sweetness, too.

Don't let the song go out of your life; Ah! it never would need to go, If with thought more true and a broader view, We looked at this life below.

Oh, why should we moan that life's Springtime has flown, Or sigh for the fair Summer time? The Autumn hath days filled with peans of praise, And the Winter hath bells that chime.

Don't let the song go out of your life; Let it ring in the soul while here, And when you go hence it shall follow you thence, And sing on in another sphere.

Then do not despond, and say that the fond, Sweet songs of your life have flown, For if ever you knew a song that was true, Its music is still your own. —Kate R. Stiles, in Boston Transcript.

ON A SUNDAY MORNING

"I want to see you, old man," began the letter Richard Minton found on his table when he went home from his office, "because you are the only one to whom I can tell my love story. The others 'couldn't and wouldn't understand.' Run down and stay over Sunday, at least, with me. I want you to see her. I have told her all about you; and have promised to take you up to call. I'll be at the 7:30 train on the look-out. Don't disappoint me."

"Charles Theodore Gray." Dick reached up and took a dress suit case from the top shelf of his wardrobe and whisked his handkerchief over its dusty fastenings. The case and its contents had long been undisturbed. He shook out the suit and smiled with satisfaction.

"It's a good thing that evening clothes don't change in fashion," he said, complacently. "But may be they do. How about that?" he interrogated a chair sternerly, and then continued in a relieved tone. "Why, of course not; men have looked the same for the past fifty years."

The next night the two friends faced each other across a small table in the Waldorf-Astoria and Charlie spoke of the subject so dear to his heart. He began with all a lover's fervor, and almost swept the other man away with sympathy.

It was not the smoke that made his blue eyes dim nor that which made Richard look at him with clouded vision.

"I know how you feel, Gray," the latter said, reaching out and clasping Charlie's hand in a close grip. "At least I recognize the beauty, the sacredness of it all. But I don't suppose such an experience will ever come to me. You must promise me a corner at your fireside."

When the friends entered the drawing room of Nathaniel Rose's stately house a young girl standing by the window turned to face them. For a moment her eyes and Dick's met in one long look, and when her glance fer, jealous pain began to stir his wings in his bosom. Charlie touched his arm and drew him away to where another girl waited to welcome him.

"Miss Rose, let me present my friend, Mr. Minton. Gertrude, this is Dick."

Minton bent over the friendly small hand extended to him with knightly courtesy. But his heart was saying: "Then she—she is not the one!" and in another moment Charlie was in introducing him to "Millicent," and saying, smilingly:

"I did not tell you that Gertrude had a sister, did I, Dick?"

"I don't want to go to church, do you, Mr. Minton?" It was Sunday morning, and Millicent smiled at the early visitor as she stood behind her father's chair and caressed his touled gray head.

"No, I do not care to go. That is, if I may stay here." Minton's face was an expressive one, and the old man looked at it searchingly. Then he raised his hand and took up the little pink-fingered one. "Trot up and get your bonnet, Millie," he said, "and run along to church like a good little girl. I want to talk to Mr. Minton."

"So do I. So I will stay with you." She kissed her father's cheek, and then perched on the broad arm of his chair. His eyebrows bent over his smiling eyes.

"I hope you realize that mine is an obedient and well-disciplined family, Mr. Minton," he said with a whimsical glance at the girl beside him. Minton smiled and a light leaped to his glance as it rested on her—a glance which the keen old eyes interchanged and held while the young man met his gaze, and bowed to his unspoken question.

"Millie," Mr. Rose lifted the sofa arms from around his neck and put the girl down resolutely, "run upstairs and see if you can find my old portfolio of western sketches."

"Why, papa, you left that in town!" "Did I? So I did. Well, daughter, suppose you run up and see if you can't find it, anyway."

"Oh!" she made a little moue, and clicked her heels sharply on the polished floor as she marched from the room. Both men listened with smiles on their lips. Then their glances met again.

"I love her, Mr. Rose," said Minton as quickly as though this wonderful new glory in his soul had always been a part of his life. "I love her."

"I see." The old man's voice was a bit husky. "So do I. I don't suppose you have told her yet, have you?"

"No, of course not. But have I your permission to speak?"

"You are not wasting any time." "Time!" Richard's dark eyes kindled; "what does time matter in a case of love like this?"

"You think yours is a special case, eh? Well, that is natural enough. Every man thinks just so when he falls in love. But Millie is too young to be dreaming of a lover. She is my baby, Minton, and I have tried to make her forget that all-her life she has been motherless. Ah, yes, she is too young; much too young! Let me see, she can't be more than—tut! tut! the child is twenty! How time does fly! Now, what are your real prospects?"

Nathaniel Rose left his chair and rested his elbow on the mantel. His pipe in one corner of his mouth, drew it down grimly. But his eyes were kind as they rested on the young man beside him.

Dick sketched the situation briefly, telling all his aspirations and aims, and feeling how commonplace it all seemed. But as he finished, the other man shook his head cordially, just as there was a click of feminine heels outside the door.

Richard made an imploring gesture and the door opened.

"Well, daughter did you find that portfolio?"

She gave him a withering look and held her curly head high as she walked across the room and into the recess of the stained glass window. A single ray of light shone through the jeweled pane and touched her girlish brow with radiance. Richard followed her, leaving the old man alone. His gray head drooped low and still lower on his breast as he looked, unseeing into the fire.

Millicent's head was just as high as Richard's breast, and she looked up at him with the appealing gaze a little woman gives a big man, as she said, poutingly: "Papa sent me away to get rid of me."

Richard nodded, noting with a lover's glance the wild rose color in the rounded cheeks—the curling lashes veiling the brown eyes—the perfection of the innocent lips. She was so near to him—so near! If he only dared—

She was gazing at him, childishly resentful.

"I believe that you wanted me to go away, too. You did? Oh—hi!" Tears stood in her eyes, her sweet lips quivered.

"Shall I tell you why? The man's voice was strange and broken. He put his hand to his throat. "I wanted to tell him, your father, that I love you. —I love you—"

She was further from him now. The whole width of the window, a bonnie wee thing in her soft blue dress, trembling in this sudden tempest of love as a harebell trembles at the wild wind's wooing. He held his arms wide. She saw his dark face transfigured. Then she could look no more.

"Millie." She slipped behind the window hangings. They hid the tiny figure in their folds and gave no sign.

"Dick!"

Ah, you cannot muffle a love call with anything so mundane as a window curtain! Mr. Minton also disappeared, and the folds of the drapery lost their symmetry. But there was silence in the room that seemed empty but for an old man sitting quite alone and gazing into the open fire.

Then came a voice from the window, a ringing voice sweet with a new tremor.

"Papa, suppose you were to go up and look around awhile for that portfolio."—Grace Duffie Boylan, in Detroit Evening News.

GORE'S GREAT SPEECH.

In Nominating Hon. D. M. Ferry.

When Victor M. Gore, of Berrien, stepped forward, the Ferry men set up a yell and Mr. Gore began by saying: "Gentleman I acknowledge the uplifting of your voices in cheers in the name of Dexter M. Ferry, the next governor of Michigan."

At this the Ferry men set up a yell, the Wayne men rose, waving their fans. Delegates from other counties, following their example, and there was a season of Ferry enthusiasm.

"The republican party," said Mr. Gore, "is proud and happy to-day—proud of its conscious rectitude in the past. Gentleman the old issues were settled right and Michigan occupied a position typical of her past and I hope prophetic of her future. We bring you a candidate cast in the mold of large capabilities and if you nominate Dexter M. Ferry we will elect him governor." Continuing Mr. Gore spoke of Mr. Ferry's early struggles until he had risen to a position in the commercial world that his name is known in every market in the world.

"He has" said the speaker "ever given to the party of his choice that loyalty and service which words cannot describe and which honor alone can fittingly crown. He knows that the people rightly rule. He believes in the enforcement of the laws, believes that every act of government should be a flower springing from the heart of honor, believes that every dollar of wealth should be taxed equally with every other dollar, and he also believes that the public funds in war as well as in peace should be honestly held and sacredly spent.

"The cry of sectionalism is heard, but that puny issue is dead and has gone down together with the ragbaly and the Chicago platform to innocuous desuetude. The people do not demand that their governor shall come from any county, but they do demand that he possess the executive ability, power to direct large affairs and breadth of vision so conspicuous in the life of D. M. Ferry. By virtue of his success and for what he stands I nominate D. M. Ferry."

There was another rousing scene as Mr. Gore concluded.—Benton Harbor Palladium.

Mrs. Alf. Mead took her Sunday School class today on a trip to South Bend, Notre Dame and other points.

The members of the B. B. club and their gentlemen friends enjoyed an outing at Clear lake, yesterday afternoon, spending the time in sailing, dancing and music.

Raising the Hat an Ancient Salutation.

When a knight of old entered a company of ladies he removed his helmet to indicate that he considered himself among friends, and that there was no need to protect himself. This practice has survived in the custom of raising the hat when saluting a lady.—Ladies' Home Journal.

GREAT CONVENTIONS.

THE NATIONAL NOMINATING BODIES OF BOTH GREAT PARTIES.

Representative Bodies of a Political Character—Sonorous Names—Early Conventions—Few Spectators Then—Lincoln's Nomination.

The national conventions of the great political parties of the United States are the most representative bodies of a political character that meet in the country, and only in joint session of the two Houses of Congress is there as imposing an assembly charged with as important functions. All of the Congressional districts as districts and all the States as States are represented in our national conventions, and the Territories are also present by their representatives, having an equal voice and vote with the men of the States in the most national of gatherings. Nowhere else is there so great an expression of nationality, with perhaps the exception of the inauguration of Presidents, when both Houses of Congress and Supreme Court—all co-ordinate branches of the government—are present, and the Ambassadors and Ministers of foreign Powers witness the solemnities. The fact that it is not common to elect delegates to the national conventions by popular vote does not take away reason than to hear the roll of States in a manner worthy of the splendor of their names. It would be an addition to the stateliness of any national ceremonial if the States could be named and the roll formally answered. It is a privilege to hear the call of the States when it is made by a voice that gives it adequate deliverance.

Sonorous Names.

The first State named is always Alabama and there is a mellow music in it. Well pronounced, it is as if a trumpet were given speech and started a song. There is no State whose name sounds forth with a reverberation that exceeds Pennsylvania. New York is sonorous of significance, and Virginia, Louisiana, Carolina, North and South, Kentucky and Missouri are gloriously sounded. Ohio offers the elocutionist great opportunities, and the sound of Oregon is always magnificent and a reminder of the line in "Thanatopsis," "Where rolls the Oregon," California has a splendid ring, and so also have Colorado, Montana and Wyoming. Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois. There is a song one hears on great occasions in Chicago in which the refrain is the one word Illinois, and the grandeur of it when boomed by a multitude of voices is like "a glorious roll of drums." There are indeed but few names of States that have not a majestic cadence when announced with understanding of the memories of their histories. It is a pity that there was ever a competition in the minds of American citizens of the sovereignties of the States and the pre-eminence of the nation, for there should be in their consideration only that difference of glories that distinguishes the stars, that "differ in glory." There is no list of names in organized communities in the world that compares in resonance, beauty and melody with our States, for while all do not lend themselves to music each possesses dignity, and taken just as they are named alphabetically, when called in the transaction of business of all the people they are incomparable.

Early Conventions.

The war with Mexico, following the annexation of Texas, was succeeded by the acquisition of California, and was an expansion of dominion accomplished by the popular realization of the immensity of the influence they promised, and a source of satisfaction and pride in our establishment on the Southern Pacific such as was not aroused by the Louisiana land purchase, because it was an original American instinct to regard the mouth of the Mississippi as a part of the inheritance of the Republic, no matter what might be the claims of European Powers; and with the purchase of the western bank of the great river, and thence to the greater ocean of the globe, the lands and seas attained were manifestly destined to be our possessions.

Oregon had almost slipped away from us because our consciousness of land ownership was so acute, and we had so much unoccupied territory there was a feeling we had enough to accommodate all the people, perhaps for

A Quiet Fourth.

The Fourth was quietly celebrated in Buchanan and so far as known no accidents have occurred to mar the day. Many of our citizens went to Dowagiac and St. Joseph to witness the celebrations at those places. Quite a number went to Clear Lake and passed an enjoyable day on the shores of that beautiful body of water.

Quite a Storm

Monday night, and early Tuesday morning, Buchanan was visited with a heavy rainstorm deluging everything, and flooding cellars generally. The sudden downpour raised the water in McCoy's Creek and the race leading to Cooper's feed mill to an alarming degree, Mr. Amos House owner of the water power working from four o'clock in the morning until nearly noon before everything was made secure from danger. Near Bakertown crossing of the Michigan Central a slight washout on the tracks occurred which was speedily repaired.

At Moccasin bluff on the M. B. H. & C. railroad was a washout big enough to put a box car into, which delayed the morning train from Benton Harbor so much that connections with the west bound Michigan Central train was missed. The track was repaired by the time the afternoon train was due.

The high water in the St. Joseph river and heavy rain washed out the upstream headgate bulkhead at the power house of the Electric Light & Power plant of the Beckwith Estate, and considerable expense will be necessary to make good the break. Representatives of the plant came down from Dowagiac Tuesday noon and it was decided to start up and run as long as the downstream bulkhead held, the power dynamo was then started but the commutator burned out shortly after, which will necessitate several days of delay before power can be furnished. The light machines have been run each night since, but there is no certainty of how long they can be run as the bulkhead is liable to go out at anytime. As a consequence the Record has again been compelled to resort to the primitive method of running our press by hand and if we are a little late we trust you will overlook the delay.

Tramps became such a nuisance that the police force of the Twin cities resolved upon heroic measures to get rid of them. They were shut up a day or two without food or water and then released and told to get out, which they did with such completeness that it is hard to get help enough to unload the boats. The remedy was severe and has evoked some criticism.

The home of Wm. Robinson on Summit street was the scene of a small but elegant wedding last Thursday evening, the occasion being the marriage of their only daughter Dora to Paul the only child of R. C. Thayer of Fair Plain who was recently graduated from the Agricultural College at Lansing. Ivy Flowers of Buchanan played the wedding march. The ring service was performed by the bride's brother Daniel who preaches at Huntington, Ind., under a canopy of smilax, palms and stately lilies. The bride was beautifully gowned in pure white and the groom in the conventional black. The rooms and table were decorated with palms, roses, smilax and lilies. Elegant refreshments were served by Ivy Flowers and Pearl Finch. Chief among the wedding presents was a $1000 check from the groom's father. The happy couple took the boat for Chicago, for a short wedding trip, after which they will be glad to see their friends at the Thayer home, cor. Colfax and Nickerson Aves., Fair Plain, Benton Harbor.

TEMPLE OF MUSIC

THE TEMPLE OF MUSIC.

A Splendid Building for the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo in 1901.

The temple of Music, designed by Esenwein & Johnson of Buffalo for the Pan-American Exposition, will cover a plot of ground 150 feet square and will be located on the north-west corner of the Esplanade and the Court of Fountains. The exterior of this handsome building will be treated architecturally after the style of the Spanish Renaissance. It will be octagonal in shape with octagonal pavilions at each corner. The main entrance will be through the pavilion on the corner of the Esplanade and Court of Fountains. Each of the facades of the main building will have a richly ornamented colonnade. Between the columns will be large window openings and ornamental panels, each bearing a portrait bust of some famous musical composer. The cornice, frieze and balustrade of the main building are designed in a florid adaptation of the Spanish Renaissance, and the balustrade will carry tablets bearing the names of noted musicians and composers and at intervals will have posts surmounted by flag staffs. On the corners above the pavilions will be groups of statuary representing music, dancing, etc.

The chief features of the drum of the dome will be star shaped windows resembling those seen in the ancient Spanish mission buildings. These windows will light the interior of the auditorium. The dome and the roofs of the pavilions will be richly gilded. Gold and brilliant coloring will be freely used in all the exterior decoration. The crown of the dome will be 136 feet above the grade of the Court of the Fountains, and the Temple and its pavilions will form a very attractive part of the landscape scheme of the entire group of Exposition buildings.

The auditorium, which will seat 1,200 persons, will be a few steps up from the grade of the building, and in addition the restaurants and balconies will give further seating accommodation for 1,600 people. The other pavilions in addition to the one used for the main entrance will be occupied by the stage and for a fully equipped restaurant, with the necessary kitchen adjuncts, serving rooms, etc. The auditorium is only a few steps below the floor grade of the restaurant, and the partition between the restaurant and the auditorium will be placed so that people seated at tables can overlook the audience and enjoy the concert or entertainment at the same time. The flat domed roof of the auditorium will be supported by eight massive piers. Between the piers will be large arches opening into the galleries, to the main entrance, and leading to the stage. Over each of the eight large arches will be a cartouch bearing an inscription indicating one of the grand divisions of music—Oratorio, Grand Opera, Symphonic Music, Lyric Music, etc. The lighting will be through the star-shaped windows previously mentioned, passing through eight ceiling lights each having 320 square feet of glass. The front of the galleries will be decorated with a frieze of singing cherubs. An elaborate and complete system of heating and ventilating will be adopted for this building. Numerous and commodious entrances and exits will be provided, so that absolute safety to visitors will be assured. The interior as well as the exterior of the Temple of Music will be treated with a view to securing the best architectural effects.

In the Temple of Music will be erected one of the largest and finest organs in the United States. It will be an exceedingly beautiful and complete instrument, with all the latest improvements in organ building. It will have four manuals and about fifty speaking stops and will be voiced on three different wind pressures. The action will be the most complete style of tubular pneumatic. The mechanical contrivances and combinations will be most complete and include many varieties not hitherto used. Of the four manuals the great organ will have 14 stops, two 16-foot stops, six 8-foot stops, three 4-foot stops, one 2-foot stop, a twelfth and a four-rank mixture.

The swell organ will have fourteen stops, one 16-foot stop, nine 8-foot stops, three 4-foot stops and a three rank mixture.

The choir organ will have eleven stops, one 16-foot stop, seven 8-foot stops, two 4-foot stops and one 2-foot stop.

The solo organ will have three 8-foot stops and one 4-foot stop.

The pedal organ will have ten stops, one 32-foot stop, five 16-foot stops, one 10-foot stop and three 8-foot stops.

There will be a number of couplers, pedal movements and adjustable combinations of the most modern type. The case will be of Gothic design, to harmonize with the architecture and decorations of St. Louis Church, Buffalo, for which the organ is intended after it has served its purpose at the Exposition. An interesting fact in connection with this instrument is that it will be built in the city of Buffalo. The contract has been awarded to Emmons Howard & Son, the well-known organ builders now of Westfield, Mass., but who have arranged to begin work in their new factory at Buffalo and hence the organ which will be seen at the Exposition will be the first large organ manufactured in the city of Buffalo.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Judge Coolidge has handed down an opinion in the case of Chas. Zick vs. the trustees of Stevensville and has denied the petition for a mandamus compelling the trustees to show cause why they refused to accept the plaintiff's liquor bond. The trustees claimed one surety, Richard Liske, was not worth the required amount and Judge Coolidge decided that the board had not acted in bad faith.

The jury in the case of the People vs. Walter Martin, Jeff Brown, Harry Brown and Ezra Wood, who were arrested on the charge of blowing out the bulkhead of the Guzley mill dam south of Berrien Springs, last Wednesday evening rendered a verdict of not guilty after being out two hours. This is a victory for the defendants' attorneys, L. C. Fyfe, S. H. Kelley and A. A. Worthington.

The point made by the defense was that the young men were not aware that they were committing a crime.

A motion was made Wednesday afternoon to dissolve the injunction of Perry vs. Gray in the Berrien Springs dam matter. Judge Carr took the matter under advisement.

AGRICULTURAL BUILDING.

THE AGRICULTURAL BUILDING.

The agricultural industry will have a fitting setting at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo during the summer of 1901. A commodious and richly proportioned building will be devoted exclusively to the interests of the farm. So wonderful has been the development of agriculture and so marvelously has the productivity of soils been increased by the application of scientific methods it is no exaggeration to say that, potentially, the cultivated acreage of the world has been doubled within a few years. Science has indeed made two blades of grass to grow where but one grew before. More than that, it has, by irrigation, made the deserts blossom as the rose.

The Agricultural Building will stand opposite the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building on the north side of the Mall, its longest facades looking to the north and south. On the east will be the Live Stock Exhibit, to which about ten acres are devoted. Northward will be the Stadium covering another ten acres. On the west is the Grand Court with the Electric Tower, 348 feet high, and the Electricity building just beyond. There are four broad entrances to the building. Opposite the northern entrance is an artistic bridge crossing the Grand Canal. Vaulted loggias connect the east and west entrance with the main entrance on the south, and from these elevated promenades the people may view the throng of sight-seers upon the Mall. The low tiled roof overhangs the walls eight feet, making a deep shadow over the richly decorated cornice. The east and west entrances are treated with attic work to imitate an arbor. The lattice is fastened to the dome, ceiling and walls, then, on a background of blue, grapevines produce the effect of looking through to the open air. The southern entrance, which is 30 feet wide, is flanked on both sides by large groups of statuary. Above the doors and following the lines of the arch, panels will be painted to represent the signs of the zodiac. On either side of the vestibule are large niches affording places of rest and retreat from the crowds. On either side of the south entrance at the intersection of the eaves of the loggia are large consoles surmounted by figures representing the "Sower" and "Reaper." The agricultural building is 150 by 500 feet, and contains exposition space to the amount of about 75,000 square feet.

on one of the upper stories, so as to give a continuous line of red, white, and blue from house to house.

The American flag is not impossible of successful treatment; we have already begun to imitate the French manner of raying small flags in an upright position from a common base, and repeating these groups at intervals; but the tricolor bunting is one of the most difficult to use satisfactorily, because the equal proportion of red to blue is not a fortunate color-combination. It would therefore be advisable that the committee in charge should select those symbolic colors which would be appropriate, and use them in such quantity as would give a definite color-scheme to the entire line. The suggestion made by the National Society of Mural Painters that the naval colors, blue and white, reinforced with gold and natural green foliage, should be used in the Dewey reception parade was probably the first recognition given of the necessity of other colors than the patriotic red, white, and blue.

The Flag in Decoration.

Writing of "Civic Festivals and Processions," in the July Century, Charles R. Lamb says on the subject of the flag in decoration:

The Stars and Stripes, though not the most successful piece of decoration, can still be so treated as successfully to combine with any scheme, but to do this it should be massed over doorways or stands, or, if used separately, should be hung repetitively from the windows along the entire line of parade, preferably

KEEP TOOTING.
If you toot your little tooter and then lay aside your horn. There's not a soul in ten short days will know that you were born. The man who gathers pumpkins is the man who plows all day. And the man who keeps a humping is the man who makes it pay. The man who advertises with a short and sudden jerk is the man who blames the printer because it didn't work. The gent who gets the business has a long and steady pull. And keeps the local papers for years and years quite full. He plans his advertisements in a thoughtful, honest way, And keeps forever at it until he makes it pay. He has faith in all the future, can withstand a sudden shock, And like the man of Scripture, has his business on a rock.
—Kingsley [La.] Times.

TROUBLES THAT DO NOT COME.
Of the hard and weary loads "Neath which bend and fall, The troubles that do not come Are the heaviest ones of all.
For grief that cuts like a knife There's oil of comfort and cure, And the Hand which binds the weight Brings strength and grace to endure.
But to phantoms of pain and woe The lips of pity are dumb, And there's never oil or wine For troubles that do not come.

There's a song to lighten the toil, And a staff for climbing the height, But never an alpenstock For hill that are out of sight.
There are bitter herbs enough In the brimming cup to-day, Without the sprig of rue From to-morrow's unknown way.
Then take the meal that is spread, And go with a song on thy way, And let not the morrow shade The sunshine and joy of to-day.
—Lettie S. Biglow.

STORY OF NOLALAH.
By my side sat old Sonoma. Below us the raging surf broke at the feet of the overhanging cliff, which rose almost perpendicularly from the sea. The waves roared and belloved with a sad, plaintive sound that seemed to bring up indistinct memories of a song "Set to notes, whose golden bars I must have heard in other stars."
The sensation was strange—oppressive, yet fascinating—almost foreboding evil. The surroundings were weirdly beautiful. Behind me rose the rugged hills of the Sonoma coast range, at my right was a narrow chasm, or gorge, the bed of which, strewn with boulders, was at least 300 feet below. On my left there extended for a short distance a level plain, which gradually merged into the hills and was lost in the general coast line. Above was the blue-vaulted sky, with its millions of scintillating stars and its calm, yellow moonlight. Below, as far out as the eye could reach, stretched the blue waters of the majestic ocean, where danced the reflections from the sky above.
"For every wave, with dimpled face, That leap'd upon the air, Had caught a star in its embrace, And held it trembling there."
Old Sonoma sat silently looking out to the sea. Neither of us broke the stillness for a long time. I had met the old Indian chief during the day and asked him to tell me the early history of his people. We were then standing near the fort, and as he pointed to the bluff where we now sat, he said:
"To-night the moon will be full. When you see her rise above the hills I will tell you about beautiful Nolahah and the happy home of her people."
And now the time was come. The moon was full and I waited patiently. Presently he began, and as he told me the beautiful legend the sea broke in long swells at his feet and the moonbeams played about his hoary head.
"Many moons ago my people roamed happy and free in the face of the setting sun and the singing sea. They had fish and game and corn in plenty; they gave freely to the Great Spirit, who smiled upon his children, and his smile made the trees blossom and the fruit ripen. When they angered him he wept and his tears made the grass grow and the corn spring up. But often he would send a messenger from his cloud-home, crying:
"The white man is coming. Behold, he has a book in one hand and a cup in the other. And if you read you will become weak, like the babe who draws his first breath; and if you drink you will become foolish, like him who chases the hare and thinks it is the stag. Behold, the white man is coming, with his beautiful form and his smiling face. Read not his book, touch not his cup, and look not with favor upon his face lest he turn you away from the Great Spirit, your father's warning voice of the Great Spirit and "But my people did not heed the pale-faced man came from the land of the moon-day sun. They made weak the hearts of our sons and won the affections of our daughters, and then Nolahah was born.
"Her father was chief of our great tribe, which then was called Chocupens. You shall now hear how that name was changed to Sonoma. Nolahah was the idol of our tribe—her brothers would dive to the lowes depths to bring her gems from the ocean home and her sisters would weave together for her the most beautiful flowers to crown her queen of the games.
"Do you see yonder little valley? There stood her father's wigwam. She grew up; she became a beautiful woman, and the warriors wooed her, but won her not. Though small in stature and in form, she was as straight as a poplar and as lithe as a willow, and often at the close of some exciting game or dance she would stand with flaming cheeks and flashing eyes and streaming hair, her voice ringing out in peals of merry laughter. And the birds would listen and learn their sweetest songs from her.

"One day a large canoe with great white wings was seen upon the sea. It moved toward Nolahah's home and many pale-faced men landed upon the beach yonder. Chocuya, Nolahah's father, feared them, but when he found that their visit was friendly he freely and gladly admitted them to the land and the homes of our fathers.
"The chief of the pale-faced men was a noble-looking young warrior. They called him Juan Cabrillo. When Nolahah first beheld the strangers her large eyes wandered, with the curiosity of her sex, from one to another, until they rested with a spark of mingled fear and pleasure upon Juan, the chief; and when he looked into the depths of her black eyes her young woman-hood awoke and she sped in terror to her father's wigwam.
"The strangers remained a long time. They and our people became like brothers. They made us costly presents and beautiful garments, and, in return, we gave them our best furs. But one day the great canoe spread its white wings again and the strangers departed—all but Juan. He had won the love of our beautiful Nolahah and she had given him her heart. Hand in hand, in the innocent and sweet enjoyment of their youth, they would roam through the shady woods and scale the dizzy heights.
"But one day Nolahah fell ill. Juan, intending to give her a pleasant surprise, had mounted a horse early in the morning and had gone in search of the chieftain's game. Late in the day he came across the king of the forest—a noble stag. He pursued the animal till the sun was beginning to set, when the stag fled down to the ocean's edge. It did not take to the water, but sped along the coast till it passed over the very spot on which we are now sitting. Juan still pursued.
"Look at that chasm to your right. It is thirty measures across. The stag cleared it at one leap. On came Juan, with trembling limb and quivering flank his noble horse wavered one second on the brink. It was too late to stop. Then spurred on by its master, it rose with one mighty bound into the air and—Juan never returned to his wigwam or to his beloved Nolahah. The mangled and bruised remains of horse and rider lay crushed and shattered on the rocks below.
"When Nolahah was told of the fate of her lover mute despair settled on her face, the light went out from her eyes. When the shades of night rested upon our wigwam she crept down to the ocean's edge. She soon found the spot where her lover leaped to his death.
"I must find him, Great Spirit, I must find him; and we shall be together ever and ever," she murmured.
"Her dress, white as the foam of the crested waves, fluttered in the wind, while the breeze played with her night-black hair. She pitiously extended her hand toward the depths below and, with a wail of despair, which echoed from crag to crag, she hurled herself into the chasm.
"But, behold, Nolahah did not fall. The Great Spirit, so our fathers say, caught Nolahah. As he held her in his arms her form slowly faded away and in its place there appeared a small white light, which shed its rays through the canon and gradually grew larger and brighter, and thus the moon was born.
"Nolahah is the moon. Every night she comes to search for her lost lover, her beautiful rays lighting up the valley, to which our fathers, therefore, gave the name of Sonoma. It is an Indian name and means The Valley of the Moon.
"The strangers did not return, but their children came. They were not good and kind and generous, like noble Juan Cabrillo. They robbed us of our lands; they made weak the hearts of our sons and debauched the virtues of our daughters; they burnt our homes; they killed our fathers and mothers and spared not even the babes."
The eyes of the chief flashed for a moment, then, as the intensity of his gaze gradually faded away, he slowly and sadly murmured:
"My people would not heed the warning of the Great Spirit. My people will soon sink into their graves, as Nolahah is now sinking into the silent seas."

THE MAN FROM MISSOURI.
They Had to Show Him.
There is a saying that is much in use now, "I am from Missouri, you will have to show me." We all sympathize with that cautious and doubting individual. Now about patent medicines? When manufacturers of a patent medicine advertise its wonderful curative properties why do they not tell you the ingredients of which it is made. Pepto Quinine Tablets are advertised to cure a cold, relieve dyspepsia and constipation. They are made from Quinine, which we all know about, from Pepto, which aids digestion and Casera which is the best remedy for constipation. Price 25c per box. Sold by druggists.

WANTED
A girl to do general housework. Apply at the Record office.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tabules, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tabules will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Sav, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"
WANTED.—A copy of bad health that R.I.P.A.N.S. will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R.I.P.A.N.S. on the package and accept no substitute. R.I.P.A.N.S. is for 5 cents or twelve packets for 4 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one free and testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., 10 Spruce St., New York.

Total number of votes in convention, 841. Necessary to a choice, 421.

Col. Aaron T. Bliss of Saginaw was nominated for governor of Michigan by the Republican state convention on the 19th ballot Thursday afternoon because the underlying sentiment of the convention was in his favor. An attempt to combine the forces of Stearns, Ferry and O'Donnell for the nomination of Mr. O'Donnell on the 18th ballot, failed because the Stearns leaders could not swing enough of their delegates to him to bring his vote up to the necessary 421.

The remainder of the ticket nominated follows:
 For Lieutenant Governor—O. W. Robinson of Chassell.
 For Secretary of State—Fred M. Warner of Farmington.
 For State Treasurer—Daniel McCoy of Grand Rapids.
 For Auditor General—Perry F. Powers of Cadillac.

 For Commissioner of the State Land Office—E. A. Willey of Paw Paw.
 For Attorney General—Horace M. Oren of Sault Ste. Marie.
 For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Delos Fall of Albion.
 For Member of the State Board of Education—James H. Thompson of Osceola County.
 The convention was one of most interesting held in the history of the republican party in the state. While the friends of the candidates were insistent as to selection of their candidates, yet perfect good humor, prevailed among all candidates and their friends. The selection of Col. Bliss is a good one and the balance of the ticket is unexcelled, and all will be triumphantly elected in November.

NOTES FROM GOTHAM

HOW THE CONVENTION WORK HAS BEEN RECEIVED HERE.

Something of a Triumph for Senator Platt—New York the Battle Ground—Democrats Will Also Name a New Yorker for Second Place.

The outcome of the Republican convention is not a surprise to the country or to the political controllers who have watched the course of events. The nomination of President McKinley has long been assured and the Vice-Presidential candidate was really more of a conflict between Bosse than a struggle between candidates. In this conflict Senator Platt, with the assistance of Senator Quay, was able to defeat the purposes of Chairman Hanna. No doubt Hanna could have won, had he been permitted to use the influence and power of the administration, to accomplish his purpose.

Senator Hanna.

The renomination of President McKinley having for months been assured, it has had no perceptible influence upon Wall street, which is always sensitive and always ready to seize upon the slightest shift in the political world to boom or depress prices. The financial policy of the administration is well known and is reasonably satisfactory to the monied interests which center here, and while the Bulls have sought to influence the market on account of it, they have really accomplished but little. The dull season is coming on, and unless the Democratic nomination gives the speculators something to build on, Wall street will not be a lively place for some months to come.

Roosevelt's Nominations.

The nomination of Governor Roosevelt as the Vice-Presidential candidate had also been discounted here both in financial and political circles, for there appears to have been a combination of these elements to produce it. It is unquestionably true that the great controllers of corporations were not friendly to Roosevelt for Governor. They believe his firmness did much to secure the passage of certain legislation imposing taxes upon the corporations, and consequently they preferred to see him promoted out of his present office. The score or more of anxious receptive candidates for the gubernatorial nomination were of course all more or less earnest in their desire to see Roosevelt promoted, and above and beyond this, the Governor possessed a certain unquestioned popularity on account of his war record. All these influences combined to make him the candidate for Vice-President. But among all classes there is a feeling that if elected to the office the vigorous aggressive Governor will be very much out of place. Presiding over the sedate and dignified Senate will indeed be strangely in contrast with the Governor's "strenuous life," and it will not be surprising if he finds it difficult to conform to all the moss covered precedents which cling to the chair of the Vice-President.

Another Triumph.

The nomination of Roosevelt is another triumph for Senator Platt, for it has undoubtedly been the purpose of this cold and calculating manager to bring about exactly this result. No other New Yorker could have been nominated. The nomination of no other, even if accomplished would have left open as Roosevelt's does the greater office of Governor. Senator Platt like all party leaders desires to have men in high positions who are susceptible to his influence. He has not had a Governor entirely to his liking for some time, and although there has been a seeming alliance between the Senator and the Governor, it has not been of a character entirely satisfactory to the former. There fore the nomination of Roosevelt is a vicerey of the Platt organization in the State, and a triumph for Platt and Quay more or less worked over the chairman of the National Committee.

The Pivotal State.

The old time talk of New York being the pivotal State is again revived, and the Democrats are almost certain to meet the nomination of Roosevelt with that of another New Yorker who he shall be is now the absorbing question among them. Former Senator Hill has been mentioned, but his friends do not believe that he can be induced to accept. But like Roosevelt at Philadelphia, he at Saratoga in 1897 while still protesting consented, and he may do the same thing at Kansas City. But the sentiment in the party seems to be drifting toward younger men, and this brings prominently to the public eye such names as W. Sulzer and Elliot Danforth. The latter is more desirous of the nomination to Governor than for a place on the National ticket.

But Danforth is a great favorite with Mr. Bryan and if his wishes are consulted, it is quite certain that no other New Yorker will be selected for Vice-President. The nomination of two New Yorkers on the National ticket will make the State again the battle ground of the Presidential contest, with a strong probability that her thirty-five votes in the electoral college may decide the election. In a few weeks the headquarters of the committees will be opened, and one of the hottest Presidential campaigns will be in full blast.

Predicts Prosperity.

Elbert H. Gary, President of the Federal Steel company, has returned to New York after a tour of inspection of the various mills of the constituent companies. He says that business prospects are good wherever he has been, in spite of the declaration by some people that the excitement of a Presidential election year has a bad effect. There may have been a temporary lull in some parts of the country, but that is practically over. Some of the Federal company's mills, which have closed for a short time, have resumed work. These include the rod mills at Joliet, Ill. He said that when producers and purchasers have settled upon a basis of prices there will be great activity in the iron and steel industries. So far as his companies are concerned, he declared, more steel and iron are selling now than during last month, and there is a great demand for exports. President Gary has seen for himself the condition of trade in his trip and is able to speak with authority. His optimistic views, therefore, are decidedly encouraging.

Interest in Tenement Houses.

A great increase of public interest in tenement house reform has been the consequence of two bad fires in Jackson and Rutgers street recently. There is a popular feeling that Eastside tenements should be reconstructed and at once. Bit by bit the crowded districts in the byways of New York are removed to make room for larger and better buildings, but there are many square miles of squalid crowded tenement dwellings still. It is a good sign of the times, that a certain percentage of tenement families are gradually moving to the Bronx and other open districts uptown. Some of them make this change every week.

Worse Than Greek to Men.

Here is the technical description of a cream-white serge gown seen at Manhattan Beach, rattled off by a feminine sartorial sage: The kilt-like pleats were stitched down flat and the skirt fit closely to the figure because rows of stitching around the hips made a yoke. There was a little bolero pleated to match into a deep border of stitched pink and white tweed. A turnover collar and vest of pink linen and a little tucked blouse of pink batiste and lace, very smart and pretty, completed the costume. And to the ordinary man the whole combination, girl and all, was a dream of June loveliness.

More Noise.

A new and noisy toy has taken possession of Park Row, Fourteenth street and other stamping grounds of the faker. It is called a "repeating torpedo." This is a stone sphere, about half the size of a golf ball, covered by some detonating substance that has a villainously sulphurous odor and gives forth a loud crack when one ball is thrown against another. That is all there is in it. You hold one ball in your hand, and throwing up another allow it to drop into your hollowed palm against the other. You hear a sharp crack and you feel that you are getting your money's worth. The torpedoes are sold on the Eastside at seventy-five cents a gross and retailed by the fakery at two for a nickel. A pretty good profit, you see.

Broken Neck Not Fatal.

Walter B. Duryea, the young man whose neck was broken ten months ago, was removed from Roosevelt Hospital. He was taken in a special car to a sanitarium at Dansville, N. Y., near Buffalo, and will stay there unif he is well enough to be taken to his father's home at Oyster Bay. Young Duryea will be a cripple all his life, but the surgeons think he will be able to walk in course of time. He is the first person who ever survived a broken neck, the doctors say.

Sunday Golf.

Golf is played every Sunday in New Jersey, and a minister of Hackensack has put himself on record as holding that it is no worse for boys to play baseball on Sunday than it is for men and women to play golf. He said he would have had some youthful baseball players arrested had he not seen a game of golf not far from the ball field. The subtleties of Sunday observance across the North river would be too much for anyone but a Jersey man to comprehend, and even he is puzzled sometimes.

An Elevated Roof Garden.

The free roof garden in the heart of the Eastside opened the other night. It is known as the Educational Alliance Roof Garden and is under the direction of that philanthropic body. Men, women and children go up there in the summer evenings and enjoy music and stereopticon views furnished gratis, while light refreshments are sold at cost. The roof garden is as popular as the recreation piers themselves. Last year the garden was visited by 275,647 persons, more than 10,000 being there on one day.

Coler's Reply.

The charges that have been filed with the Governor against Comptroller Coler do not appear to worry that gentleman much. He pronounces them "Bosh" and demands a full investigation. This the Governor will give, and Coler's friends assert that it will fully vindicate him.

ICE IN HOT COUNTRIES.

It is Not Much Appreciated and Nearly Everybody Gets Along Without It.

Ever since the trade in artificial ice began manufacturers of ice-making plants have been seeking markets in hot countries, where no natural ice is procurable, except in the neighborhood of lofty mountains. They have sold some ice plants in tropical cities, but it is doubtful if they would have met even with moderate success if it had not been for brewers and a few other manufacturers who find ice desirable in their business. The people generally get along very well without ice, as their fathers did before them, and comparatively few have learned to appreciate its desirable qualities since ice was presented to them.

Our Department of State, some years ago, collected facts about the ice industry and consumption in tropical countries. It has just published in the "Consular Reports" the result of the latest investigations in the same field. Both these reports show that the people of the tropics care very little for ice and that no real progress is making toward the general introduction of ice in hot countries.

ago, collected facts about the ice industry and consumption in tropical countries. It has just published in the "Consular Reports" the result of the latest investigations in the same field. Both these reports show that the people of the tropics care very little for ice and that no real progress is making toward the general introduction of ice in hot countries.

In Guatemala, for example, ice is used mainly in saloons, restaurants and hotels and very few families own a refrigerator or buy ice. The city of San Salvador, with a population of 80,000 consumes only 5,000 pounds per day; there is no cold storage in the city and all meat sold on the market is killed the previous night. There is not a single ice plant in Bolivia, but some natural ice, brought by the Indians from the mountains, is sold in La Paz. In the large seaport of Bahia, Brazil, the first attempt at ice making was abandoned because there was no demand. For three years past, however, one small plant has been making about one and a half tons a day, which is sold to the hotels and drink shops patronized by the foreign population and a few foreign families. The ice is not used to preserve food, but only to cool drinks. Butchers say they have no need for ice. The laws require that all meat killed one day shall be sold before noon next day, and just enough meat is killed to supply the average daily demand.

In the city of Barranquilla, Colombia, there are no refrigerating plants or cooling rooms and meat, not salted soon after the animals are killed, becomes unfit for food. The Deputy Consul at Colon writes that no town in his consular district, except Colon, would consume enough ice to justify the erection of a plant. The only ice factory in Ecuador is run by a brewing firm at Guayaquil and the firm consumes the entire product. In Uruguay there is a prejudice against cold drinks or food refrigeration. Consul Goldschmidt writes from Venezuela that the small demand for ice there is due to the fact that victuals and meats are not kept over night, but are daily bought in the market for immediate use.

Origin of the Months Names.

"January was named after the Roman god, Janus; the deity with two faces; one looking into the past and the other gazing forward to the future," writes Clifford Howard, in the Ladies' Home Journal. "February comes from the Latin word februo, to purify. It was customary for the Romans to observe festivals of purification during that month. March owes its name to the old God of War. Among the Saxons this month was known as Lenet, meaning spring; and this is the origin of our word Lent. April was named from the Latin aperio, to open, in signification of the opening of flowers. The Saxons called the month Eastre, in honor of their Goddess of Spring, from which comes our word Easter. May was named after the Roman goddess Maia, and June was so-called in honor of Juno. July was named in honor of Julius Caesar, and August gets its name from Augustus Caesar. September is from the Latin septem, seven, this being the seventh month according to the old Roman calendar. October, November and December also retain the names by which they were known under the old calendar, when there were but ten months in the year—octo, novem and decem meaning eight, nine and ten."

A Little Sermon in this Child's Remark.

"The weather sometimes played havoc with those necessary concomitants of religious life in the far West—church societies—if it did not put a stop to church services altogether," writes Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, in narrating his experiences as "A Missionary in the Great West," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "On one occasion, in one of my missions, we had made elaborate preparations for a great crowd, which was kept at home by a heavy rain. A few of us who had braved the storm were seated in much discontent in the parlor expressing our opinions with the freedom we all use in like circumstances.  Chicago, June 28.—Five persons lost their lives through heat and seven were prostrated. Dog went mad from heat and bit two persons.

Boy Badly Injured.
 Saginaw, Mich., June 30.—Michael Kusba, a boy employed in the lath and stave department of the Saginaw Lumber & Salt Co.'s plant at Crow Island, caught his right arm in a machine when reaching for a bucket of water this morning, and the member was drawn in and cruelly lacerated and torn nearly to the shoulder. It was found that no bones were broken, but the arteries of the arm are so badly torn that it is doubtful whether the blood supply to the hand will be sufficient, and amputation may be necessary.

Car Dashes Into Store.
 Boston, Mass., June 30.—Twenty-two persons were injured by an electric car leaving the tracks at Roxbury Crossing while beyond the control of the motorman this afternoon, and plunging across the street and battering in the front of a meat market. The most severely injured is the motorman, who stuck to his post until the car was brought to a stop inside the store. It is feared that he is injured internally. The heavy car with a speed of twenty miles an hour crushed the front of the market, battering down the door, both large window frames, and also demolishing the wooden show platforms in the window.

Fireman Nearly Drowned in a Tank.
 St. Joseph, Mich., July 1.—Charles Phillips, a St. Joseph fireman, was nearly drowned in the Pere Marquette round house tank while attempting to put out a blaze. The other firemen rescued him with much difficulty.
