DISASTROUS CYCLONE

Many Lives Lost and Much Property Destroyed in Tennessee.

FIFTEEN KILLED AT COLUMBIA

Loss of Life Reported from Other Towns—Track of the Cyclone 1,000 Feet Wide.

Columbia, Tenn., Nov. 21.—A terrific cyclone, moving in a westerly and northwesterly direction, struck this place at 9:30 o'clock at night and left havoc in its path. The northern and western sections of the city, which are populated principally by negroes, were almost entirely swept away. Fifteen persons are known to have been killed and it is feared that this number will be largely increased by later reports. The dead are: Misses Florence and Evelyn Perrell; Captain A. F. Aydolette, wife and one son; another son and daughter missing; Miss Kate Forsythe; James Cherry and six negroes, names unknown.

Lasted for Five Minutes. The cyclone lasted for about five minutes and its path extended about 1,000 feet wide, which is clearly marked by devastation. Many houses, including a large number of negro cabins, were blown down and many others unroofed and otherwise damaged. The fencing surrounding the United States arsenal was blown away but the buildings remain intact. A freight train on the Nashville, Florence and Sheffield railway was lifted from the track, but as far as reported none of the passengers or the crew was injured.

OTHER TOWNS VISITED. Several More Lives Reported Crushed Out by the Cyclone.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 21.—The storm was the most destructive in many years. Two lives are reported lost and much damage done at Lavergne, sixteen miles from Nashville. At West Harpeth and Thompson's station, a number of houses were blown down, and a child was killed at Thompson's station. Two persons were killed and several fatally injured at Nolensville. Williamson county. A number of persons are reported to have been killed in Maury county.

In the vicinity of Nolensville, Williamson county, James Hampton was internally injured by the storm and will die. Emma Hampton's arm was broken. Ernest Stephens was seriously injured. Jim Christman's house was blown away and his baby is missing. Mrs. Bromlet was killed at the home of J. D. Vernon. Miss Nannie Hampton was killed and Miss Black Hampton seriously injured, both legs being broken.

One Man Fatally Injured. Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 21.—Loves Station, Miss., reports none killed outright by the storm in that vicinity. So far as known J. L. Doney was fatally injured by falling timbers. A dozen houses were wrecked and much other property damage done. The course of the storm was down the Coldwater river. There is no definite news of the effects along that stream at points distant from Coldwater.

Reports Nineteen Lives Lost. Kansas City, Nov. 21.—A telegram received at the general offices of the Kansas City, Fort Scott and Memphis railway in this city from its Memphis representative says that nineteen lives were lost in the tornado at and near Lagrange, Tenn., and that property damage to the amount of nearly $40,000 was done at that place.

CORN KING STILL ON TOP

George H. Phillips Handles the Market to Suit Himself.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—George H. Phillips has demonstrated that he is master of the corn pit and could force the price up and down at his pleasure. The yellow grain opened at 41 cents and closed at 41 1/4 cents. The "shorts" are scheming to overthrow the new corn king and they will try to rush an immense amount of good corn within the next few days. Phillips is rushing his buying east as fast as he can get the cars loaded.

One of the favorable features from the plunger's point of view is that he will accept only contract corn and all that is offered him is thoroughly examined. He is said to have made $250,000 so far. Country shippers are holding back. It is believed he is able to buy 1,250,000 bushels.

MARTIN IRONS IS DEAD.

He Gained Prominence for Managing a Great Railway Strike.

Waco, Pa., Nov. 19.—Martin Irons, the famous labor leader, who conducted the big Missouri Pacific strike in 1886, died Saturday at Bunceville, twenty miles south of here. He had long suffered from broken health and splits.

Irons was once a power in the labor world, and after coming here he tried to launch the Social Democratic movement and organized a number of clubs.

Woman Bigamist Sentenced.

Dayton, O., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Jennie Shoder was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary by Judge Kummer. She pleaded guilty to bigamy. She married George Shoder, William Kirby, and George Sampson, and did not have a divorce from either. The husbands compared notes and Sampson caused the woman's arrest.

FOUR DEAD AT A FIRE.

Victims of That Treacherous Enemy, Natural Gas—Only Three Bones Left.

Oswayo, Pa., Nov. 19.—Four men were burned to death in a fire which Saturday destroyed the McGonigal House, a three-story frame building, the hotel barn and the opera house. The three buildings were burned to the ground in half an hour from the time the fire started. The dead are: Arthur Fletcher, bookkeeper for the Pennsylvania State company; Michael Russell, employe of the Pennsylvania Tanning company, Oswayo; William Mulhoney, of Rexford, N. Y.; Hugh Jamerson, of Alfred, N. Y.

The town has no fire department, the only protection being a pump at the tannery. The fire originated in the McGonigal House from an over-pressure of natural gas. There were thirty people in the hotel. Otto Kauley, a gas-line walker, of Coudersport, Pa., was burned about the face and arms, and Jerry Daily sustained a broken shoulder by jumping from the third story of the hotel. There were many narrow escapes, most of the occupants jumping from the windows. Nothing remains of the four unfortunate men but a few charred bones.

WARSHIPS TO SCARE TURKEY

The Kentucky and Dixie Ordered to Smyrna to Help Collect the Indemnity.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Diplomacy having failed to accomplish the settlement of the American missionary claims pending against Turkey, the administration has decided to support peaceful representations by a naval demonstration. Two American men-of-war have received orders to proceed to Smyrna, and a third is available for duty in Turkish waters if found desirable. The ships ordered to Smyrna are the battleship Kentucky, one of the most powerful of the American navy, and the training ship Dixie. The gunboat Wilmington, now in the Mediterranean, may also be sent.

To Turkey and to all Europe the sending of the Kentucky to Smyrna can have only one meaning—that the United States is determined to collect the $100,000 indemnity claim which it has for six months been earnestly pressing for payment. The Kentucky is now at Naples.

NEW CENTER OF POPULATION

Census Officials Place Inscrutable Board on a Farm Near Columbus, Ind.

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—Ten years ago the census bureau located the center of population of the United States eighteen miles east of this city, just over the line in Decatur county, near Westport, 30 degrees 11 minutes and 56 seconds west latitude and 85 degrees 32 minutes and 53 seconds north longitude.

Upon information now given out by Government Census Director Merriam a party here by mathematical calculations located the center of population in a wheat field on the farm of Frank Wright, nine miles north of this city and one and a half miles north of Taylorville, in the southwest corner of the northeast quarter, section 15, town 10, range 5 east. An inscribed board marks the spot.

St. Paul, Nov. 21.—The bulletin issued by Dr. A. J. Stone, last night was less favorable than the one issued yesterday afternoon showing as it does that the periods of lucidity are becoming less frequent and the mental aberration more marked. The bulletin follows:

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION OPENS

Permanent Organization of a Body with a Great Purpose.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—The amelioration of sociological, commercial and agricultural conditions of the country through the medium of good roads is the aim of a nation-wide movement which crystallized yesterday in the first session of the National Good Roads convention at Central Music hall. Legislators, business men, wheelmen, engineers, farmers, and even women, from various parts of the country participated in the proceedings. From Canada came Andrew Patullo, member of parliament, and A. W. Campbell, commissioner of highways of the province of Ontario—men whose advice is expected to be especially helpful in the solution of the good roads question in the United States, as both have been foremost in the working out of the problem in Ontario.

The convention effected a permanent organization, selecting W. H. Moore, president of the Inter-State Good Roads association, of St. Louis, as chairman, and R. W. Richardson, of Omaha, as secretary. Committees on programme, resolutions and the drafting of legislative bills for thirty-eight states were also chosen. The speakers during the two sessions included Patullo, Moore, Martin Dodge (of Ohio), director of the office of road inquiry in the United States department of agriculture, General Harrison Gray Otis (of Los Angeles) and Miss Harbor of St. Louis.

BLEW SIDE OF HEAD OFF

Prominent Detroit Man Killed While Preparing to Go Hunting.

Detroit, Nov. 21.—Will H. Brady, a prominent young business man of this city, blew one side of his head completely off with a shotgun in his home at Euclid avenue. Neighbors were aroused by Mrs. Brady's screams, and on entering the house found Mr. Brady dead in his bedroom. Mrs. Brady, who was almost crazed with grief and horror, could give no explanation of the tragedy. No reason is known why Mr. Brady, who was a successful stone and cement merchant, should commit suicide. He was a grandson of General Hugh Brady, who was a prominent figure in the early history of Michigan.

Later developments go to show that Mr. Brady's death was the result of an accident. He was preparing for a hunting trip and had risen early to pack his trunk. When the fatal shot aroused his wife she rushed into the room in which Mr. Brady stored his guns and hunting equipment, and found him dead before the open trunk. It is supposed that while handling his gun the trigger caught on something and exploded the charge.

SAFE FOR TWENTY YEARS.

Bank Burglar Dunlap Will Not Blow Up Anything for That Time.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—James B. Dunlap, the leader of several bands of bank burglars, one of which robbed the Northampton, Mass., bank of $1,000,000, confessed Saturday at Watseka, Ill., to looting Pate's bank at Wellington, Ill., on March 23 last. He has been in jail in Watseka ever since last April, when he was captured in Chicago, but until Saturday denied his guilt. Finally, however, he pleaded guilty, and Judge Hilscher sentenced him to twenty years' imprisonment, the extreme limit for robbery. He was taken to Joliet Saturday.

James B. Dunlap, known for many years as the king of bank robbers, was arrested in Chicago on March 24 last by Central station detectives. He was found living in luxurious apartments in Wabash avenue near Twenty-third street, and was arrested on his return from looting Pate's bank at Wellington, Ill. In his possession were his tools and supplies for safe blowing, but none of the $3,000 of which the bank had been robbed.

Mrs. Holmes said she had known her husband but two weeks, having become acquainted with him through a matrimonial paper. After being married Saturday evening at the house of Rev. D. H. Hind, they retired, first drinking some wine ordered by her husband. Dr. A. Soper said she had been under the influence of a drug. The $700 Mrs. Holmes says was drawn from the bank by her at the suggestion of Holmes.

Detroit, Nov. 19.—Governor Pingree has pardoned Stephen L. Carter, the noted young forger sentenced to two years at the house of correction for passing a clever product of his penmanship on Wright, Kay & Co. From a police view Carter is one of the most expert forgers of the country. He is bold, determined and reckless, and possesses all the qualifications of a dangerous criminal. A member of the Bostonian company—one Catherine Shafer, afterward known as the "mysterious woman in black"—visited the jail, saw Carter and fell madly in love with him. Carter had served about a year when his identity was revealed and he turned out to be Randall W. Smith, the son of very prominent people in Minneapolis. Backed by a petition from the most influential people in Minnesota and a recommendation from Superintendent McDonnell, of the house of correction, Governor Pingree signed the pardon.

NEW YORK STATE BUILDING.

To be a Permanent Edifice for the Buffalo Historical Society's use.

The New York State Building at the Pan-American Exposition, to be held at Buffalo in 1900, is to be an edifice of substantial and enduring character. The architect is Mr. Geo. Cary, of Buffalo. He has chosen for his guidance in the work a Greek temple of the Doric order, adapting his plans to the purpose for which the building is intended. The site chosen is on high ground near Elmwood Avenue, overlooking the North Bay of the lake in Delaware Park and near the principal entrance to the Exposition grounds by the street cars. The location is not only thus convenient to the electric cars, but one that is fortunate and beautiful as well from every standpoint, so that the building will add to the beauty of this popular pleasure ground. Immediately in front and across the park bay the Albright Art Gallery will stand as a companion piece in the park picture. The building will be used during the Exposition as New York State headquarters, and will contain certain of the State exhibits.

After the Exposition it will become the permanent home of the Buffalo Historical Society, whose large collection of pioneer and other historical relics will be placed therein. The floor area will be three times that now used by the Historical Society in the building of the Buffalo Public Library.

The dimensions of the building are 130 x 82 feet, the north front to be 20 feet less than the south. The height is 33 feet on the north and 40 feet on the south walls. The height of the basement is 12 feet, and the second floor walls reach to the roof, making the ceiling 18 feet high. In the basement are janitor's quarters and bicycle rooms (which may be entered at grades from Elmwood Ave.), boiler and coal rooms, storage rooms, etc. A dining room containing 1,000 square feet faces the park to the south and opens on the north. On the ground floor is also one of the Museum rooms, which communicates with the floor above by a grand staircase.

concrete, granite and wood blocks laid in asphalt. The stairways are of marble and iron. The view of the bay and lake and of the park, which will be seen from the broad columnated portico on the south side of the building will be of the most beautiful character.

STREETS OF MEXICO.

A Wonderful Reproduction of the Various Phases of Life in the Mexican Republic at the Pan-American Exposition.

It is said of the Midway at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo next year that it will be the most extensive, as well as the most expensive, aggregation of amusement features ever brought together at any Exposition. It will have more than a mile of frontage. Among the large concessions is that of the "Streets of Mexico," which occupies 95,000 square feet upon the south side of the Midway near the main eastern entrance. This concession will present a graphic picture of Mexican life, both the old and the new. The vista, as one stands at the entrance to the Streets of Mexico, is extremely picturesque and invites a closer examination. Two tall towers, with a high arch between them, form the entrance. Entering the street, stores may be seen on either side, where Mexican wares of all kinds will be on sale. The large number of Mexicans who will be in charge of the concession will be halls will be of the Mexican character, that the restaurants will serve Mexican food and in the markets and stores will be sold Mexican products. The theatre will be conducted after the manner of Mexican play houses, and every feature will produce Mexican life. In the village will be shown Aztec Indian relics and in the shops will be blanket makers, cane carvers, onyx and filigree jewelry workers, leather workers, opal polishers, pottery makers and others who are skilled in Mexican handicraft. There will also be a Mexican band playing peculiar native instruments. Surrounding the Plaza will be portales, or open arcades, where the visitors may sit at tables, partake of a luncheon and view the interesting scenes upon the Plaza. This concession has the approval of the Mexworthy of the place we now hold among civilized nations of the world. Given under my hand and the great seal of the state of Michigan, at the capitol, in Lansing, this 15th day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-fifth.

It is said of the Midway at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo next year that it will be the most extensive, as well as the most expensive, aggregation of amusement features ever brought together at any Exposition. It will have more than a mile of frontage. Among the large concessions is that of the "Streets of Mexico," which occupies 95,000 square feet upon the south side of the Midway near the main eastern entrance. This concession will present a graphic picture of Mexican life, both the old and the new. The vista, as one stands at the entrance to the Streets of Mexico, is extremely picturesque and invites a closer examination. Two tall towers, with a high arch between them, form the entrance. Entering the street, stores may be seen on either side, where Mexican wares of all kinds will be on sale. The large number of Mexicans who will be in charge of the concession will be Over 10,000 square feet of floor space is provided for Museum purposes. There is also an Assembly Hall with seats for 300 persons, and a Library 37 x 52 feet. Fire proof materials will be used throughout in the construction of the building. The exterior will be stone. There will be no wood except the mahogany doors on the first and second floors and birch in the basement. All the door casings, inside column covering and cornices, are of plaster. All bases are marble and cement. The floors are marble, attired in their native dress and one may readily imagine himself suddenly transported to the heart of the thrifty republic. At the extreme right of the stores are the army headquarters for the convenience of the company of 100 mounted men or as they are known in Mexico, "rurals," who will attend the Exposition by order of President Diaz of Mexico. At the left is the Mexican restaurant, and east of the restaurant the theatre. Proceeding southward we come to a large open space, the southern part of which is known as the "Plaza of Flowers," in the centre of this is the band stand where a company of expert musicians will play Mexican airs. The architecture all about the Plaza is of strictly Mexican style and very elaborate. On the right is a Mexican dance hall, and south of the dance hall a Mexican market and an old rural village with its adobe huts and a representation of the cliff dwellers of Mexico. At the extreme southern end of the Plaza is a Mexican Cathedral most gorgeous in detail. At the extreme southeast corner is the "Plaza de Toros" where Mexican equestrian and other sports characteristic of Mexico will take place. It should be remembered that the dances in the dance

SHOWING PROGRESS ON ELECTRICITY AND MACHINERY TRANSPORTATION BUILDINGS.

I am a farmer located near Stony Brook, one of the most malarious districts in this State, and was bothered with malaria for years, at times so I could not work, and was always very constipated as well. For years I had malaria so bad in the spring, when engaged in plowing, that I could do nothing but shake. I must have taken about a barrel of quinine pills besides dozens of other remedies, but never obtained any permanent benefit. Last fall, in peach time, I had a most serious attack of chills and then commenced to take Ripans Tablets, upon a friend's advice, and the first box made me all right and I have never been without them since. I take one Tabule each morning and night and sometimes when I feel more than usually exhausted I take three in a day. They have kept my stomach sweet, my bowels regular and I have not had the least touch of malaria nor splitting headache since I commenced using them. I know also that I sleep better and wake up more refreshed than formerly. I don't know how many complaints Ripans Tablets will help, but I do know they will cure any one in the condition I was and I would not be without them at any price. I honestly consider them the cheapest-priced medicine in the world, as they are also the most beneficial and the most convenient to take. I am twenty-seven years of age and have worked hard all my life, the same as most farmers, both early and late and in all kinds of weather, and I have never enjoyed such good health as I have since last fall; in fact, my neighbors have all remarked my improved condition and have said, "Sav, John, what are you doing to look so healthy?"

BUILDING THE EXPOSITION.
 Every Week Shows Definite Progress upon the Colossal Enterprise at Buffalo.

The accompanying views give some idea of the progress of work upon the buildings for the Pan-American Exposition to be held at Buffalo next year. One of these shows the Electricity and Machinery buildings, looking southeast from that portion of the grounds which will be occupied by the Midway. The view does not clearly distinguish between the two buildings but they are in reality separated by one of the main thoroughfares of the Exposition known as the Mall, 150 feet wide, which runs east and west. The other shows a nearer view of the Electricity building looking up at the southeast corner. The point of view is near the base of the Electric Tower, the first lengths of the steel frame work of which are now being put in place and which will ultimately reach skyward 375 feet.

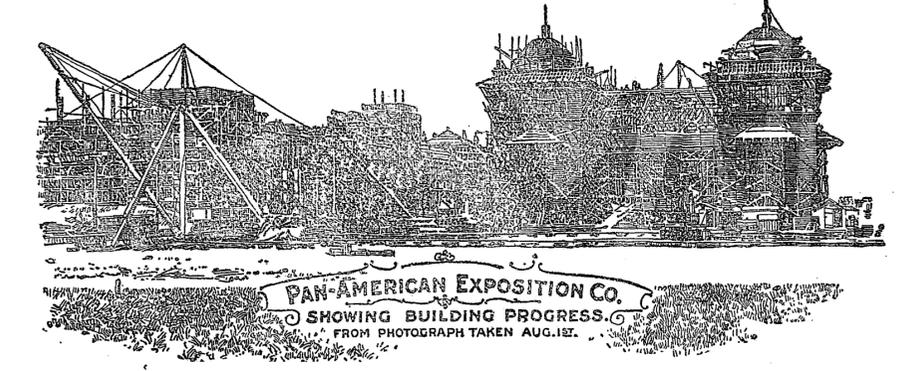

All of the large buildings of the Exposition are well under way. These include, besides those here represented, the Agriculture Building, Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building, Graphic Arts, Forestry and Mines, Horticulture, the large group of three Government Buildings, Temple of Music, Ethology Building, Stadium, Midway entrances and concessions buildings, New York State Building and the Albright Gallery of Art. The Service Building, which is the administrative headquarters of the Exposition, was completed early last fall.

By reference to the illustrations here given it will be seen that workmen are already putting on the gleaming white staff with which all the buildings are to be covered. The staff is prepared in an endless variety of forms including elaborate statuary, large cartouches and medallions, rich columns, consoles and brackets, soffits and pilasters in relief, and all sorts of architectural ornaments of intricate detail. All the exteriors of the buildings are to be finished in color, presenting a most agreeable effect upon the eye. It is said of this Exposition that it will surpass all former expositions in the extent and variety of its sculpture and plastic decoration. It will also outrival its predecessors in the beauty and completeness of its horticultural and floral effects, and is to have the most elaborate and picturesque presentation of electrical effects ever undertaken. The arrangement of the building is a symmetrical one, nearly all of the principal structures being grouped about broad courts. About 33 acres of land are comprised in these courts, all of which will receive this elaborate embellishment. Large pools with a bewildering number of fountains and jets of water will be made particularly brilliant by means of floating lights and the wonderful illumination of all surrounding objects by the use of more than 200,000 electric lamps.

The installation of the heavier exhibits is to begin early in November and the contracts require that all of the principal buildings shall be completed before severe weather sets in. Thus is the public assured that the Exposition will be opened on time and that the early comer will have quite as much to see as those who delay their visit.

The process of building a great Exposition has a charm to every one who has an interest in the development of any grand enterprise. It represents a vast organization, with its director-general and assistant directors, superintendents, contractors, care-takers, foremen and an army of workmen under the discipline necessary to carry on rapidly and successfully a great work. Materials are being brought into the grounds by train loads almost every day, and each week shows definite progress. The illustrations here given show what has been accomplished on the buildings in about three months. Another three months will find several of them completed and all of them so well progressed that the rigorous weather of winter cannot interfere with their prompt completion.

TALKED ABOUT THE JUDGE

Who's the Ould Woman With the Red Bed Curtains Round Her?

There was a very good story being told, but which is actually a true story of those days. A Judge was trying a case where the accused could understand only the Celtic language, and so an interpreter had to be employed. The official interpreter was a good fellow, whose wish was to do justice, but he certainly had leanings toward the defendant.

The accused man was holding a long conversation with the interpreter, and that worthy did not translate the speech to the court. At last the Judge demanded to know what had been said.

"Nothing, my lord," was the interpreter's unblushing reply.

"How dare you say that when we all heard you talking to him. Come, sir, what was it?"

"My lord, it had nothing to do with the case."

"If you do not tell me what he said I'll commit you for contempt. Now, what did he say?"

"Well, my lord, you'll excuse me, but he said, 'Who's that ould woman with the red bed curtains round her sitting up there?'"

Every one in court laughed, and the tip-staff did not, for a moment, try to stop the unseemly conduct. The Judge, in his red robes and white wig, colored until his face was brighter than his red robes and asked:

"And what did you say?"

"I said, 'Whist, ye spalpeen! That's the ould boy that's goin' to hang yez.'"

Troubles of Fenian Days. I was making a pedestrian tour of Ireland in the latter days of the Fenian movement, and many curious incidents came under my observation, showing how zealous the royal Irish constabulary was in arresting strangers and charging them secretly with Fenianism. At that time the habeas-corpus act was repealed and any one arrested could be kept in prison, without a trial, for a period of two years. When a man was tried he felt that he was to face a partisan judge and a packed jury. I am not going to make the charge that juries were always willfully packed, but I know that many a jury was afraid to give an accused the benefit of any doubt, because the liberty of each member of that jury was imperiled.

I remember of reading of one instance where the accused was so well pleased with the personnel of the jury that he did not challenge any one, but when his counsel whispered that it was strange he replied: "The jury's all right, but I'd loike to challenge the Judge."

The witnesses were also afraid to testify too strongly in favor of the defendant, for if they did they might be treated as I heard a witness treated in Cork. Judge Keogh, who had been a Nationalist at one time, but was accused of betraying his fellow Nationalists, listened to a witness who told a very straightforward story, and then advised the chief of police to look into the character of the witness, as it was likely he was a Fenian. Of course, the witness was arrested.

Why the Yeomen Were Let Go. Talking of the yeomen brings back a good yarn that is going round the camps at their expense. They are notorious for two things—their pluck and their awful bad bushcraft. They would ride up to the mouth of a foe-man's guns coolly and gamely enough, but they can't find their way home on the velvet after dark to save their souls and so fall into Boer traps with a regularity that is becoming monotonous. Recently a British officer who had business in a Boer laager, asked a commander why they set the yeomen free when they made them prisoners. "Oh!" quoth the Boer, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "those poor yeomen of yours, we can always capture them when we want them." This is not a good story to tell if you want an encore, if you happen to be sitting round a yeoman table or camp fire.—London Daily News.

As to Strikers. "What's the matter with that man?" asked the clock. "He doesn't seem to have anything to do but wind me up." "No," replied the calendar, "he isn't working. He and his companions struck some time ago." "Huh!" Suppose I should stop working every time I struck?" "That's so, but I notice it freshens me up every time he takes a month off."—Philadelphia Press.

BIG LAW SUIT.

Michigan Central asked to Pay $50,000.

A fifty thousand dollar damage suit has been commenced in the United States circuit court at Grand Rapids, against the Michigan Central Railroad company.

Edward Bacon and N. H. Bacon of Niles are the plaintiff's attorneys.

It's County Treasurer Rogers Now.

Mr. Geo. G. Rogers, formerly a resident of Buchanan but now living at Maistique, in this state, was elected County Treasurer of that county.

Mr. Geo. G. Rogers, whose election as county treasurer by a handsome majority despite the most determined opposition, more than pleases his many friends.

The RECORD together with George's host of Buchanan friends extend congratulations.

What They Will Do.

There is music in the offices at the county seat this week. Some of the officers are already answering inquiries for expert help, others are contemplating the purchase of fine stock, while one man is dotting on a trip abroad.

Judge J. J. VanRiper will return to his home at Niles, and will take up immediately the practice of law. The Judge has a political career of which no other man in Berrien county can boast.

Treasurer John Clark will retain his home at Benton Harbor, but will give his attention to his farm in Pipestone township, where he will spend the entire summer months.

A. O. French, register of deeds, will in the spring return to his eighty acre farm south of Stevensville, Mr. French has been once supervisor, once town clerk of Lincoln township, for several years township officer of schools.

Sheriff Ferguson says he will have arrested his last man for two years after January 1. Mr. Ferguson will give his attention to his farm in Benton township, and incidentally in the market for a forty acre piece of timber.

County Clerk John Needham has an inclination toward the newspaper business, and some of his friends have been settled as a full fledged editor of a St. Joseph paper.

Deputy Treasurer VanRiper, for six years in the government office at Washington, and two years in the Chicago & Northwestern railway general offices, Chicago, will return forthwith to his home in Niles.

Cassius VanRiper, it is quietly given out, will continue as clerk at the probate office until Judge Ellsworth is fairly on to the routine of the office.—Benton Harbor Banner-Register.

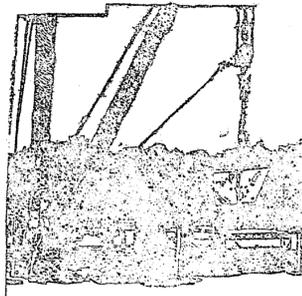

THE BIG TUNNEL

WORK IS STEADILY PROGRESSING ON IT.

New Yorkers Watch With Interest the Rapid Transit Construction—A Tunnel Below Another—Some of the Tracks Will be Deep in the Earth.

Deep down in the bowels of Manhattan Island miners are sinking shafts and tunnelling into the granite-like trap rock that Nature forged at white heat millions of years ago.

Not many New Yorkers know that shafts in the solid rock of the island have been sunk to a depth of 100 feet, and that "rock bottom" has not been touched yet.

Shaft, 167th Street and the Boulevard.

go down twenty-five feet more. The rate of progress is from eight to ten feet a week. Both shafts are sunk on the east side of the Boulevard, east of the fence line of the lots.

The tunnel into which these shafts open will be the longest on the whole railroad route. It will extend from 147th street and the Boulevard to Fort George, a distance of nearly two and a half miles, with only one break, in the hollow by Audubon Park, at 157th street, where there will be a station.

From Thirty-third street to Forty-first there will be a tunnel under a tunnel. The rapid transit tracks will run underneath the tunnel, or, rather the semi-open cut, occupied by the Fourth avenue trolley tracks.

On the East Side or Bronx division of the rapid transit road there will be two tunnels. This division will leave the main line at 103d street and by a curve pass through 104th street to Central Park. Here will begin a straight tunnel under rock and surmounting block house to where 110th street, St. Nicholas Parkway and Lenox avenue converge.

"Save 'em! Naw! They're hauled over to some vacant lot an' left there. Oh, yes, they're going to put in the tree again when it's all finished."

From Bleecker street to Fourth the contractors are about ready to put in the pipe gallery, which will run from Worth street along Elm to Great Jones street.

"It's funny how marriage changes a man," said Spriggs' caller. "Yes," replied Spriggs dreamily. "I used to be that I was devoted to baseball and football and basketball, and now I give all my spare time to baby's bawl," and he arose hurriedly and went into the adjoining room.—Detroit Free Press.

OBITUARY.

MARY ANN DOAN daughter of Wilson and Rebecca Doan was born at Port Huron, Canada, Feb. 11, 1845, and died at her home in Buchanan, Michigan, Nov. 20, 1900, after an illness of one week of pleurisy and heart trouble, being 55 yrs, 9 mos. of age.

She was married to Jacob Holderman March 28, 1865, of this union four children were born. The youngest, a boy, preceeding her in infancy. The surviving ones are Mrs. J. B. Rynearson of this place, Mrs. E. De Grote of Chicago, and Wm T. Holderman of Crisman, Ind.

Raised a Congregationalist but for 35 years a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, she was a most consistent christian and lived so those that knew her best loved her most. An affectionate mother and true friend, ever giving a helping hand, in acts of her kind heart that will last through eternity.

The funeral services were held this afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. W. J. Douglass officiating.

Oil only 10 cents a gallon at W. H. Keller's.

At the State Sunday school convention held at Owosso in the election of officers for the year Rev. F. C. Berger, of St. Joseph, was made one of the vice presidents and E. K. Warren, of Three Oaks, was chosen one of the executive board for three years.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years.

The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company, 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Master Kenneth Legar the twelve times with his arm. About a week ago while digging potatoes he gave his right arm a twist which resulted in what is known as a "a green stick fracture," just above the elbow. The injury did not heal readily and superstition set in necessitating the lanc-nicely now under the care of Dr.

The ball to be given in Benton Harbor at the new armory by the members of the Ainger Guard, Friday night, Nov. 23, promises to be a brilliant affair. A large number of invitations have been received in Buchanan and it is probable that a number will attend. The officers and members of the naval militia will appear in full uniform, and all the military companies in the state as well as Chicago and northern Indiana have been invited. Those of the governor's staff and other military officers who attend will appear in uniform.
The commander of the Illinois naval militia will be there if possible, and a number of the officers have already signified their intention to attend.
This will be the first military ball ever held in southwestern Michigan and the members of the Naval Reserve should be encouraged in their effort to make the ball a great success.

A Reminiscence.

the item, called up the Times to state that Daniel and Peter Dopp both en-

1862, a recruiting officer accepting them on that day, they being engaged in Sunday harvesting for an infirm

by name, the late Hon. John Keynolds, his son-in-law and Hon. J. R. Foster, now of Merriam, Kan., being leading spirits in a voluntary turning out of neighbors to help in taking care of Nickerson's wheat. Peter Dopp was

SHOPPING IN PARIS

BARGAINS TO BE OBTAINED AT THE BON MARCHE.

Silk Waists at the Lowest Prices—Plaid Tafteta Blouses—Charges for Carrying Silk Bundles—Pretty Ways of Trimming Silk Blouses.

Some of us have been doing the Bon Marche, the shop which every American woman hopes to visit before she dies. At first it is a disappointment. True, it takes up a whole block and more; but so do some of our New York shops. The buildings are only a few stories high, and are showily painted with brown and gold. We happened to approach the Bon Marche by the bargain or "occasion" side, as they call it here. And that was not favorable, for the bargains offered did not chance to appeal to our special desires. One entire length of the building outside is banked for half a dozen feet with odds and ends of dresses, gowns, lace, umbrellas, stockings—anything. Women with baskets and little money to spend pick and peck at these opportunities and seem to find much to reward them for their trouble. The first impression of this famous shop was that of untidiness, with its overflowing miscellanies. Another regret came of not finding linen handkerchiefs, with initials, for ten cents or so each. We had been told by travelers that these are among the Bon Marche's attractions. Not so! The cheapest, with initials, were twenty-five cents apiece, and by the dozen at that.

Once inside the doors, the charm of the Bon Marche appeal. Everything is unpacked, dusted and in sight. Many things are reasonable in price, and among them are a thousand little curios and conveniences which one has wanted all her life and never found. Pretty little cretonne covered boxes of every shape, and inexpensive, are shown in irresistible heaps. There are mounds of sachets ready for any dress, waist, bureau drawer or hatbox and of any shape and size you like. Hats, neckties, ribbons, silks, abound in fascinating confusion. You can handle them as much as you like, and no one comes to ask if you care to be waited on. The assumption is that you will make it known if you do which is a refreshing idea, after having one's shopping supervised in London.

For example, one of the tourists in our party wanted a silk waist. She poked and culled at dozens, in piles, before she found one which exactly suited her. Then she had to search for an attendant. The end of the transaction was a stylish white tafteta waist sold to the tourist for $3.65. But that was an exceptional occasion, the saleswoman said. Silk waists really are cheap here—less in price than at home—though I do not know that there would be any advance in getting more than one needed for immediate use, the customs officials said to be so suspicious in New York.

Silk waists at the Bon Marche are trimmed rather more than we have had them at home of late. The colors are the usual pinks, reds and blues, with a new gray-blue and a deep watermelon pink. A great deal of fine tucking is seen on them, and this is supplemented by fine galons in self colors, black and white, or touches of gold. The best ones are made with rather high collars and with little bows of taffeta like the waist at the throat. These may be removed readily. There are piles of plaid tafteta blouses, in all imaginable color combinations. Most of them are made with velvet bands a couple of inches wide down the front. The band in each case emphasizes the chief color in the plaid. This is a pretty idea, and one worth remembering.

The Bon Marche regularly shines in its methods of delivering your bundle and your change to you. All over the shop are little stations for such transactions. As soon as you have made your purchase the saleswoman—or, of ten, it is a salesman—conducts you to the neighboring desk, your purchase is done up at once, recorded by the man sitting there, and you may be off in half the time it takes you to get your package and change in a New York shop. American women are especially enthusiastic about this method. But what do they say at the petty charge of a penny for carrying your bundle to your house? The comment is not favorable to the Bon Marche. By the way, more frequent than not the attendants at this store speak English. It sometimes is seen that they take a humorous delight in doing it in response to questions in labored French.

Some pretty ways of trimming silk blouses are shown. A waist of watermelon pink taffeta has a yoke made with fine tucks, confined by fine black and white silk galon. The galon faces the band from neck to belt. A blouse of apricot-colored taffeta, having black and white stripes, is smartened with fine slanting lines of black and white galon. Much to the surprise of most women, the undersleeve has survived the test of a popular summer and reappeared on winter gowns and silk blouses. An engaging embedment of the undersleeve idea is shown in a tucked turquoise blue poplin bodice, which has a pointed collar of black spangled white net and thin half sleeves of it. A white satin blouse is stitched with yellow silk and decorated with tiniest gold buttons. A black satin tucked waist has gold embroideries on small lapels over large lapels of white satin, marked off with black satin folds. The collar bands and tie ends are gold embroidered. Two gowns for guests at weddings are notable for their elegance. One is from white cloth, simply trimmed in large vandykes with heavy eru lace. The other is from Copenhagen blue Chateau crape, made with yellow lace in panel and lattice effect of half-inch black velvet, with the inevitable French choux at the corsage. In this case it is from orange mirror velvet.

That Paris suddenly has begun to take an interest in her Exposition, and that all trains and boats land; here are crowded with eager sight-seers, as known in America, to judge from reports. It was necessary recently for one person to have five tickets to get into the Exhibition. The cost of them was thirty cents. We went in the day before with one ticket, for fifteen cents. The regulation of the price for admissions is beyond the understanding of one who has not given much thought to it. The weather and probable demand seem to have some influence. Friday is the fashionable day, when the prices of admission to all departments are raised five times, for example, on ordinary days, one may see the wonders of the Palace of Costumes for one franc twenty cents. On Friday the price is five francs, or $1.

Much dissatisfaction is caused by the closing of many of the buildings. The houses of the natives, some of which like one-half were closed, with no notice of when they would open again. The United States building, with its being in particular inside to see, except the great bronze group of bucking bronchos on the edge of a precipice, had its latching out, and offered plenty of comfortable chairs to sit in. But the throng wanted sights, and so I pushed on to find something lively.

The Oriental booths, where all manners of cheap and some worthy jewelry are sold, are crowded, and one must find out. Belt buckles are the object of special desire. All sorts are sought, from the beautiful new colored hermetals in floral effects to the trail, thin little pieces, made from odds and ends, which break on the first wearing. No woman or child in Paris need go without a buckle to her belt this winter. To be in the mode, she will have a variety, some bought at the Exhibition. Prices here are ruinous, however. One must beat the vendors down, sometimes half, again two-thirds, of what they first demand. Their vitality is incessant. If you are cool to their wares they not uncommonly grab you by the sleeve and force you to stand while they offer fresh inducements. I have yet to hear of anything like a real bargain in jewelry of any sort at the Exposition. A sample of the greed of the vendors is shown in the demand of one of them for eight francs for a string of coral which a pretty girl wanted. She had seen what she believed was the identical thing at four francs at the Bon Marche. The man in her boat laughed at the very idea when she told him so. Moreover, he refused to let her have the coral at four francs. Coral beads are extremely chic over here, or "smart," as the French women are beginning to say. A young girl said to me the other day,

Make salts of lemon by the following recipe: Half ounce of cream tartar and half ounce of powdered salt of sorrel. Mix thoroughly and apply by first wetting the stain, and then covering the spot with the salts of lemon. Allow it to remain until the stain is gone. Then wash in soft water. Salts of lemon is a poison, and should be handled with the usual precaution.

Do not allow coffee stains to stand. Put a small piece of sulphur in a pan and set fire to it. Moisten the spots and hold them down over the pan so that the fumes will come in contact with them. When the stains disappear dip the part affected by the sulphur in a strong solution of baking soda and water. Aqua ammonia will do as well. The sulphur fumes are acid, and may affect colored goods if not treated with soda.

The person who could convince Miss Old Girl she would be more joyfully lams the trappings of youth would be doing missionary work.

A DARKTOWN STAR.

She Seemed to Rise Before the Recorder as the Last Pleiade

"Mandy Matthews is a Darktown star," stated the officer when a Crooked Alley belle's name was called. "Where is Mandy?" asked the recorder. The court bailiff and clerk made a search, but Mandy was not found. The turnkey was appealed to, and he stated that he had sent up all the prisoners.

The bailiff then made a sensational discovery. Mandy was in the male waiting room, attired in male clothes. "I understood you to say," remarked the recorder to the policeman, "that Mandy was a star in Darktown. She seems to pose up here as the lost Pleiade."

"I hain't no star n'r sun n'r moon, needer," said Mandy. "I 'ese just nulin' but ole Mandy Matthews, an dere hain't no use ter be callin' me outer my name, needer."

The officer swore that Mandy had got drunk on corn liquor, and when the people in Crooked Alley objected to her cursing she began a battle with rocks and munitions of war. "What does the star say about the charges?" the recorder asked the woman.

"I sez dat hit am er hull lot of faber-kashum," replied Mandy, with great indignation, leading vehemence to her speech. "Hit's all de work of er lyn' generashun of vipers."

"Tell me, Mandy," urged the recorder, "why you are dressed in male attire?" "I was er practicin' for de Darktown dramatic club," was the reply, "and had on my rigs and togs fer de play when de perlice cummed."

"I'm going to fine you $10.75 for wearing those clothes on the streets," announced Recorder Broyles. "When a woman passes off for a male in Atlanta she will certainly get stamped as a crook or fraud. I tell you this much, so that you may be better posted in the future.—Atlanta Constitution.

Where the Golf Balls go. "Slimson," said the young man who delighted in golf, "was heart-broken when he lost the sixth golf ball the other day, when we were playing up in Dutchess county. He is a serious minded individual, and when he saw the last hard rubber sphere go into 'the drink' he sat down on a bunker and looked at me very solemnly and deliberately."

"This is inexcusable," said he, "when a man loses golf balls in such a way as this he either ought to find them or give up the game for good. It shows very weak character."

"That last ball had gone into a pond, and there seemed to be something so ridiculous about the idea of a man searching a place like that for a ball that all of us, the doctor, the student and I, began to laugh."

"The pond was near the end of the links, and it was a slimy bit of water. It was just about wide enough to get a ball over it. There might have been no trouble provided that were dry land for that distance, but the shine of the water always made you pause and wink and think, and as a result the ball generally made a gentle little splash, and you stood on the bank expressing your feelings as best you could."

"The caddies grinned behind their hands as Slimson slowly took off his variegated stockings and rolled up his abbreviated trousers. He was a sight. The edge of the pool was lined with black slime, and as Slimson went in he nearly fell into the pond. He caught himself just in time, and started at the exploration again. He had a sapling in one hand, and he looked for all the world like an Indian wading a stream to hide his trail."

"He stepped on a tin can and rolled and pitched like an Atlantic liner in heavy seas. The water was above his knees. He stooped down and plunged his arm down to the shoulder. The sleeve of his resplendent shirt had been insecurely rolled. It slipped from its moorings and was dyed by his clinched fist and brought up what looked like a bit of coal. He washed the black thing about in the water a little, and there sure enough, was a golf ball."

"Well," said I, "I hope that you are satisfied. Do you think that it paid for all the trouble?" "He did not say a word. He went groping around the bottom of that pond and brought up another ball. He kept right at it, and when he was through he had rescued thirty-seven balls."

"Yes," said he, "I think it was worth while."

Had to get it Done. An intelligent looking boy walked into a grocer's shop the other day, and reading from a paper said: "I want six pounds of sugar at 2½d. a pound."

He Knew the Real Thing.

They had just got married and were starting on their honeymoon. The bride had got the man she loved, and she didn't care who saw her put her head on his shoulder. The bridegroom had got a farm with his wife, and if he wanted to squeeze her hand hard or feed her with sweets, whose business was it? A little old man sat opposite the couple, and he looked at them so often that the young husband finally explained:

"We've just got married." "I knowed it all the time," chuckled the other. "And we can't help it, you know." "No, you can't; I'll be blowed if you can!" "I presume it all seems very silly to an old man like you?" "Does it? Does it?" cackled the old fellow. "Well, I can tell you it does not, then. I've been there three times over, and now I'm on my way to marry a fourth. Silly? Why, children, it's paradise boiled down!"—London Answers.

EFFECTIVE SUNDAY, OCT.

Suggestions for Busy Work in Country Schools.

The following was written by Miss L. M. Abell of Buchanan, at the request of Commissioner Jennings.

The country teacher with her numerous classes, is apt to feel that she has no time to provide busy work for the little people. But we have no choice as to whether we shall give them our time, they will require our attention either in one way or another. And we shall find that we are using our time most economically when giving their activities a proper direction, as well as furthering the best interests of the school and the highest development of the children.

As much of the Kindergarten work requires the careful supervision of the teacher, we can use only such of their devices as can be adapted to our limited conditions. The following suggestions, gleaned from many sources, may not be practical in all schools and with all pupils, but if you have never tried such devices before you will be surprised at what the little ones can accomplish in this line.

We can teach the pupils to do much of the preparatory work, sometimes the pupils of the third and fourth grades can prepare materials for the lower ones. Have a box or envelope for each kind of article and keep these in a certain place, a large pasteboard box if you have no better arrangement. Then let them be taken and put away by the children, at your direction. Many of the plans will need the attention of the teacher at first. For this purpose take the recitation time occasionally, if you can get no other opportunity.

It is best to have a definite program for the busy work when supplies will permit. Assign a certain amount and always inspect the work. Let the pupils choose what they wish to do apart of the time. Make the busy work supplementary to that of the other lessons of the day or in harmony with the season of the year. Have a sufficient variety, but not to many devices on hand at one time, and drop some of them for a while, when they begin to lose interest in them. Much of your success in this department will depend on our beginning with the simple things and working up to the more difficult ones as the child develops.

Sometimes the very young ones can hardly manage a pencil. Let them make crosses on their slates and make houses, fences, etc., of spoons, or string them. Any dressmaker will save you a quantity of the different kinds. To dip some of them in ink or dye makes them more attractive.

Colored sticks, pegs, and toothpicks may be used to make fences, pens, corncribs, squares, triangles, etc., also, they may be used alone or with figures to work problems on their desks. Put problems on the board and let them use the sticks for the figures and signs. Figures for this purpose can be cut from calendars and pasted on squares of stiff paper or pasteboard. This will hold their attention for sometime. Calendar leaves can be obtained in quantities at printing offices.

Word and sentence building with letters bought, or cut out and pasted in the same way as the figures, is another occupation.

Let them trace between dots on dotted paper which you can buy or make. The backs of calendar leaves are easily dotted as the corners of the squares show through the paper. Another way to prepare this paper is to carefully rule and dot a piece of bristol board, then perforate the dots and dot your paper through these holes. The dots should be about one-fourth of an inch apart. Have the pupils make the horizontal lines between the dots, then the vertical and diagonals. Bradley's catalogue of Kindergarten materials gives a great variety of pretty designs for this work.

Tracing letters and pictures through tissue paper is always a pleasant exercise. For this purpose the nearly plain white paper napkins which can be purchased of wholesale houses in large quantities for a small sum, are better than the tissue paper as they are not so easily crumpled.

Dip a piece of chalk in water, outline on the pupil's desk a triangle, a square, a cap, an apple, a fish, a wigwam, or a word of the spelling lesson and let the pupil follow the outline with kernels of corn. They like to alternate the red and yellow (laid with the hearts all in the same direction, or with small pasteboard triangles or oblong rectangles.) They will enjoy washing off their desks after you have seen their work.

Stringing berries, such as dogwood, affords a temporary pleasure for those who are old enough to keep them out of their mouths.

If you are in a region of Elder and whittling boys, pith balls may be colored and strung.

Buttons of various colors may be strung or sewed on stiff paper in designs. For this you can use the same buttons many times by cutting them off the paper at the close of each day.

Out of cranberries and toothpicks, pins, or small wires; chairs, tables, triangles, cubes, etc., can be made. Soaked peas, though not so good, may be used in the same way.

A never failing source of delight is a box of triangles, obtuse, equilateral, and isosceles, squares, oblongs, diamonds, and hexagons.

These can be made of bright colored cardboard (obtained at printing offices) or pasteboard. You can get red, white, blue, and green boxes in the pasteboard, and a greater variety of colors in the cardboard, which is more easily cut. It is desirable to have both kinds as the pasteboard can be made to stand up or stay in place more easily than the cardboard. Care must be taken to have these different forms match. Three-fourths inch and two inch squares are good working sizes. Out of these the children will make quilt blocks, honeycomb houses, wigwams, etc. A nice way to use these is to color a design on paper with indelible crayons and have the pupils copy with the cardboard.

If you can get an old first reader, have some of the higher grades cut and paste on stiff paper the words that the first grade are to have in their lessons. Give the pupils the words as they learn them and take up each after it is thoroughly learned and keep separate for reviews.

If you will send to the Weather Bureau for some maps, you will get a quantity of stiff paper at little cost. The pupils can prepare supplementary reading cards in the same way as the words.

Another device is to draw a circle on the board and tell the pupils to see how many things they can make out of circles. Give them a few suggestions by making an apple, a milk-stool, or a chain. Treat a square, a triangle, three straight lines or more in the same way.

The pupils can make measures for use in number work. Stiff paper or even blank book paper does very well. Have them measure accurately a piece one inch wide and one inch long, then one one inch wide and two inches long and so on as high as they have gone. Have each pupil make a set and use it to measure each number by each of those below it.

Get a large picture, the more intricate the design the better, paste on cardboard and cut it into small pieces and let the pupils put it together. pieces the shape of the United States used in the same way are especially interesting to the geography classes.

Cut straws about an inch long and have them string a circle of bright colored paper, then a straw, then a circle and so on. The straws are expensive if you try to buy them but you can get quite a quantity of the circles for ten cents. Pretty curtains may be made of these strings by fastening them to a card put across the window and looping them at the sides of the window. Do not have the curtains long enough to be brushed against or they will soon be spoiled. Burlushes may be used in the same way. Another way to string them is to fasten a needle to each end of a thread, then string on a straw, then put each needle through another straw from opposite ends, then string a straw on each thread, then string two crosswise as at first and repeat; or they can all be strung crosswise, but that takes a great quantity of straws. These are prettier if some of the straws are colored.

Also, curtains may be made of paper chains; get colored paper at a printing office and let them cut it there for you in strips from three fourths to an inch wide; have the pupils cut these in pieces about five inches long and with flour paste, which will need to be fresh twice a week, make chains. The chains may be made having the alternate links of different colors, and hung on the walls. Make the paste in a tin cup and pour into ink bottles and apply with maulage brushes or sticks with a cloth tied on one end.

Unground allspice may be strung and festooned around sacks of red cloth.

A pasteboard box of sand of a convenient size for number work and a great many variety of things. When not in use the box can be set away.

Only a little paper folding is practical in the country school. But some stormy day when the absences have lessened the work, cut some small rectangles of bright, stiff paper, then about the middle of the rectangles cut one-fourth of the way across from each side, from these slits cut a triangle off each side of one end. Then ask the children to fold these so as to form chairs. This will be a suggestion which will result in a whole set of furniture some day when they have nothing else to do, and give their energies a harmless direction. A boat or star may be folded for the same purpose.

Ask the children to save a quantity of wrapping paper, then iron it and have them cut it into sheets of a given size, then fold and tie with bright cord so as to form a book; use the bright colored paper for the covers. Their initials make a pretty decoration for the covers if they are made by pasting small circles of a contrasting color in the form of the letters. Give the pupils a pattern of stiff paper and have them cut the circles. These may also be used to make pretty designs in the books. In the books, also, may be put maps; leaves, drawn and colored with indelible crayons; brief biographies, with a drawing of the subjects birthplace or residence, etc.

Send to Montgomery Ward & Co. or some other large wholesale house for one of their large catalogues, the postage will cost fifteen cents, but you can get them for nothing when in the city. For number work ask the pupils to cut out a certain number of knives, chairs, or dolls; or, ask them to cut out furniture for a schoolroom, kitchen, etc., and have them paste the articles for each room on a page in their books.

For perforating use the designs mentioned in the dotted paper in addition to geometrical figures and the outlines of objects. The paper to be pricked should be placed over 3 or 4 thicknesses of blotting paper. Perforating needles may be made by putting common needles in corks.

Weaving is another interesting exercise but is somewhat expensive. They do not soon tire of this work though I have found them unable to go beyond the simplest basket pattern without considerable help. The variety of colors gives it the charm of newness. In schools where they have never had this work, you can make your own materials. Begin with mats about four inches square and make the strips about one-fourth of an inch wide. To make the mat, rule your square lightly, then double and cut each strip to within one-fourth of an inch of the edge. Cut strips of the same width and of a contrasting color and a little longer than the mat. When weaving, a pencil or small stick may be used to lift each alternate strip of the mat, then slip a strip through until the mat is full, then paste down the ends of the strips and trim. Colored wrapping paper makes pretty ones, or weaving needles and mats may be bought.

Sewing maybe quite difficult for the little ones at first. Teach the older ones first with the younger ones watching. Use bristol board, blunt sewing needles, and the cheap imitation of embroidery silk or bits of zephyr that you may have. Begin by sewing very simple designs as, triangles, squares, circles, cups etc., and having the stitches long. Outline the figure with silk and perforate where the needles are to be put through. The teacher can easily make all she will need at first. Animals and objects are most attractive to the children after they get some skill in the work. A combination of sewing and pasting of triangles of gilt or other paper is pretty.

A catalogue of Bradley's Kindergarten material obtained of Thomas Charles Co., 195-197 Wabash Ave., Chicago, will furnish some suggestions as well as giving the prices of the materials mentioned above.

Let each pupil take his work home or use it to decorate the school room; or exhibit it on a large piece of blue calico. Sewing cards may be fastened on the wall by putting a little paste along the upper edge. The woven mats may be used in the same way or pasted in the form of cones and hung with baby ribbon.

Busy work not only affords the little ones much pleasure and by so doing increases their attendance, but they perform their other tasks more cheerfully when they have the prospect of something attractive after their completion.

Christmas Stories.
In the December Delimitator are two Christmas stories by well-known authors. One a negro story by Paul Laurence Dunbar, the colored protege of William Dean Howells, entitled "One Christmas at Shiloh." It tells of the home-coming of a reformed negro, and is very touching. The other by Beulah Marie Dix, who has dated her story in Colonial times and entitles it "In the Reign of Peggy." Kemble illustrates Dunbar's story with some of his famous negro faces, and F. M. Arnold illustrates the Colonial story.
