ROYAL FAMILY AT DEATHBED.

Happily, the Queen was Able to Recognize Those About Her Before She Died.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Jan. 22.-Queen Victoria is dead. With the members of the royal family gathered at the bedside, the bishop of Winchester and the rector of Whippingham read prayers for those in extremis. Happily the queen was able to recognize those around her. They came to her bedside but the physicians had warned them against attempts to speak to her. Naturally, the family, while recognizing the claim for publie information, insist that the details of the events around the deathbed shall be sacred for the present and enposed the strictest secrecy on the whole household.

GREAT SURROW IN LONDON.

London, Jan. 22.—The gloomy faces of the crowds incessantly approaching the bulletin board at the Mansion House indicated how little the public hoped to receive better news of the condition of the queen. Men of all ages and conditions, women and even children were content to spend a long time in awaiting their turn to get within reading distance of the board. The grief of all was evident and the relapse announced at 8 o'clock was only too generally anticipated. Never were there so many black ties in the city before the actual arrival of a time of general mourning, and nobody mingling with the crowds could doubt for a moment that everybody in them had a keen personal interest in the queen's condition.

Mr. Balfour, the first lord of the treasury, and the children of the Duchess of Connaught, started for Osborne in the afternoon. Mr. Balfour, it is said, went as the representative of the premier, Lord Salisbury. The summoning of Mr. Balfour and the Connaught children was regarded as indicating that the end of Queen Victoria was fast approaching.

There was a remarkable scene outside of the Mansion House early in the afternoon. On the receipt of the alarming reports something resembling a groan was uttered by the hundreds of people assembled and then some one started to sing the national anthem. All heads were bared and in a moment the crowds were singing "God Save the Queen?" with a fervor proving how earnestly they wished for her recovery. The passengers in passing carriages, cabs and omnibuses joined in the singing, the drivers reverently doffing their hats. A bulletin posted at the Mansion House read as follows: "Osborne, 4 p. m. My painful duty obliges me to inform you that the life of our beloved queen is in the greatest danger. ALBERT EDWARD."

THE BEGINNING OF THE END.

Queen Was Greatly Shocked by Lord Robert's Report of the War.

London, Jan. 22.—The queen really broke down on Jan. 2 the day Lord Roberts returned from South Africa. The steamship bringing him to Southampton, which is just across the Solent from Osborne, was stopped before docking and Roberts was commended | sixty-six pages of the legislative, exto report immediately to her. After Roberts left the queen grew hysterical and called up Salisbury over his telephone. The premier was not in his office at the time, and the queen got Secretary of War Brodrick on the telephone and. in excited tones, asked him to stop the war immediately. The royal entourage could not stop her. The queen declared that

Then the queen sent a number of telegrams in her own name to various persons high in authority of the same tenor. There was much excitement in government circles, and Sallsbury was quickly informed by the queen's attendants of her condition, and he succeeded in counteracting the effect of the queen's telegrams by diplomatic messages explaining her majesty's sad state. There are reports that the queen had telegraphed to persons outside of England, endeavoring to stop the war immediately. That day marked the beginning of her meental collapse. The physicial collapse was delayed two

CONGRESS IN BRIEF.

Work of the Lawmakers in the Senate and in the House.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The event in the senate yesterday was the ovation given Quay when he appeared to be sworn. A few miscellaneous bills were passed and the balance of the day devoted to the army bill. An executive session was held.

The house put in the day on the bill to reverse and codify the postal laws, and ninety-three pages were com-

Washington, Jan. 19.—The senate did a little miscellaneous business yesterday, but the time was mostly devoted to the passage of the army reorganization bill, which went through with the ban on the canteen. The vote on final passage was 43 to 23.

The house spent the entire day yesterday on the bill to refer to the court of claims the claims of the William Cramp & Sons Shipbuilding company, for alleged damages due to the delay of the government in furnishing armor plate and material for the battleships Massachusetts and Indiana and the cruisers New York and Columbia. The claims aggregate $1,367,244. In spite of a filibuster against the bill the previous question was ordered before adjournment.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Under a special order the senate devoted the greater part of its session Saturday to eulogies upon the late Senator John H. Gear of Iowa, who died in this city last July! Appropriate resolutions were adopted and no other business of importance was transacted.

The session of the house was devoted chiefly to the postal codification bill, which was about half completed. Among the bills passed was one granting fifteen days' annual leave to employes of navy yards, arsenal, etc., and another declaring a branch of the Mississippi river opposite La Crosse. Wis., unnavigable.

Washington, Jan. 22.—No business of special importance was transacted by the senate yesterday in open session. An executive session of more than two hours' duration was 'held and after resuming the open session ecutive and judicial appropriation bill were completed before adjournment.

WOLVES TREE ROOSEVELT

Rough Rider Rescued by a Searching

Party After Four Hours. Meeker, Col., Jan. 21.-Wolves treed Roosevelt last night. The rough-rider sallied forth alone in the evening from Keystone ranch, and as he did not return for supper a search party was organized. They found him up a tree, with six dead gray wolves lying on the ground about him. The rest of the pack was scattered by the dogs of searching party.

Roosevelt said he saw a wolf and fired at it. The animal was wounded and set up a yeaping. Other wolves answered, and a number of the animals that came near were killed. The hunter kept away from the thickets, hopin gto escape the pack. The numbers of gray wolves about him became so large that Roosevelt decided for safety to climb a tree. In doing so he lost his cartridge belt. He was rescued after being a prisoner four hours.

Another Reward for Pat Crows.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 21.—Whoever succeeds in landing Pat Crowe in the office of the chief of police of this city will be handed $5,000 in gold and will not be called upon to explain how he accomplished the feat. The city council has decided to offer an unconditional reward for the body of the elusive Pat, dead or alive, guilty or not guilty of complicity in the Cudahy kidnaping case. It is rumored the action of the council was taken in response to a request of detectives who are negotiating with agents of the Cudahy kidnapers, but none of the council will say a word and the rumor cannot be confirmed.

Brewer Boiled to Death.

Livermore, Cal., Jan. 19.—Wendall Jordan, proprietor of the Livermore brewery, met a horrible death.. In his brewery was a large vat of boiling water which was about to be used. Jordan was walking along the edge of the vat, when he slipped and fell into the water. He was instantly boiled to death. As the man fell he gave a scream. No one saw him fall, but his cry brought employes to the scene. Jordan was fished out of the vat, but he was dead. He was a ploneer of Livermore, quite wealthy, and leaves a widow and daughter.

for Twelve Days.

Cape Town, Jan. 21.—The Duke of Edinburgh's volunteers, a Cape Town regiment, which has been garrisoning Daniels Knii, Griqualand West, was surrounded by 400 Boers from Jan. 5 until Friday, when the Boers, who were without big guns, marched away in the direction of Rietfontein. The Boers fired on the garrison every day from 5 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock in the evening, but only three men were seriously wounded. Kirsmen, the Boer commandant, demanded the surrender of the garrison, which was refused. The Boers threatened that if the surrender was not forthcoming they would raze all the houses in the place, even those flying white flags, to the ground.

A party of Boers has visited the Beaufort West district of Cape Colony, 339 miles from Cape Town, and commandeered everything they required. During the occupation of Aberdeen by the Boer invaders they looted the stores and recruited twenty-five Dutch rebels. Two of these were civil servants, who robbed the postoffice before leaving.

FOUR KILLED IN A WRECK

Head-On Collision Between Freight Trains in Maine.

Norway, Me., Jan. 19.—A head-on collision betwen freight trains on the Grand Trunk railroad near Lucks Mill early in the day resulted in the death of four men and serious injury of several others, and four locomotives and twelve cars were demolished. Both trains were very heavy, and each being drawn by two engines.

The dead are: Peter Thompson, engineer, Montreal; W. C. Oliver, brake man, Bangor; two unknown tramps. One of the trains had a large quantity of explosives on board. The cars took fire, explosions scattered the embers in all directions and prevented effective work in puting out the fire.

The January Forum contains twelve articles of unusal interest and merit The Liberal Party in England," by one of the most distinguisged of England Liberals, who, for very suificient reasons, prefers to remain anonymous, is a worthy defence of the party from a partisan's viewpoint. Arthur P. Davis, the distinguished Hydrographer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, contributes an article under the title, "Panama and Nicaragua Canals Compared,"which, at this time, when the question is foremost in the American mind, must prove absorbingly interesting to all who note the progress of Greater America. "The District of Columbia inits Centennial Year,"an article following so closely the recent "Centennial Celebration" at the National Capital, is contributed by Henry B. F. Macfarland. President of the Board of Commissioners for the District of Columbia. "Max Muller and His Work" is a scholarly exposition of the great philologist and Orientalist and his life labors, by Prof. A.V. Williams Jackson, of the faculty of Columbia University. Oscar Lovell Triggs, Professor of Literature in the University of Chicago, contributes a masterly article, entitled "A Century of American Poetry," that will be universally appreciated by all who are interested in the development of this branch of American literature. #### ON CHAMBERMAIDS.

An Humble Opinion of Them by Mark

Against all chambermaids, of whatsoever age or nationality, I launch the curse of bachelordom!

Because: They always put the pillows at the opposite end of the bed from the gas burner, so that while you read and smoke before sleeping (as is the ancient and honored custom of bachelors) absolutely sure. Write at once. you have to hold your book aloft, in THE FRANKLIN SOAP CO., an uncomfortable position, to keep the light from dazzling your eyes.

If they can't get the light in an inconvenient position any other way, they move the bed.

If you pull your trunk out six inches from the wall, so that the lid will stay up when you open it, they always shove that trunk back again. They do it on purpose.

They always put your other boots into inaccessible places. They chiefly enjoy depositing them as far under the bed as the wall will permit. It is because this compels you to get down in an undignified attitude, and make wild sweeps for them in the dark with the bootjack, and swear.

They always put the match-box in some other place. They hunt up a new place for it every day, and put a bottle, or other perishable glass thing, where the box stood before. This is to cause you to break that glass, groping about in the dark, and get yourself into

They are forever moving the furniture. When you come in, in the night, you can calculate on finding the bureau where the wardrobe was in the morning. And when you come in at midover the rocking chair and will pronight, or thereabouts, you will pull over the rocking chair and you proceed towards the window and sit down in the slop tub. This will disgust you. They like that.

No matter where you put any thing, they won't let it stay there. They will take it and move it the first chance

They always save up the old scraps of printed rubbish you throw on the floor, and stick them carefully on the table, and then start the fire with your valuable manuscripts.

And they use more hair oil than any

They keep always coming to make your bed before you get up, thus destroying your rest and inflicting agony upon you, but after you get up, they don't come any more till the next day.

Astor's Economy Although John Jacob Astor had led a life mainly devoted to business in terests, he found great pleasure in the society of literary men, says Mrs. Julia Ward Howe in the Atlantic. Mr. Cogswell made his home with us for some years after the closing of his famous school, but finally went to reside with Mr. Astor, attracted partly by the latter's promise to endow a public library in the city of New York. This was accomplished after some delay, and the doctor was for many years director of the Astor library. He used to relate some interesting humorous anecdotes of excursions which he made with Mr. Astor. In the course of one of these the two gentlemen took supper together at a hotel recently opened. Mr. Astor remarked: "This man will never

"Why not?" inquired the other. "Don't you see," replied the financier, "What large lumps of sugar he puts in the sugar bowl?"

Once, as they were walking slowly to a pilot-boat which the old gentleman had chartered for a trip down the harbor, Dr. Cogswell said: "Mr. Astor, I have just been calculating that this boat costs you 25 cents a minute."

Mr. Astor at once hastened his pace, reluctant to waste so much money.

THE MAN FROM MISSOURI.

They Had to Show Him.

There is a saying that is much in use now, "I am from Missouri, you will have to show me." We all sympathize with that cautious and doubting individual. Now about patent medicines? When manufactures of a patent medicine advertise it's wonderful curative properties why do they not tell you the ingredients of which it is made. Pepto Quinine Tablets are advertised to cure a cold, relieve dyspepsia and constipation. They are made from Quinine, which we all know about, from Pepsin which aids digestion and Cascara which is the best remedy for constipation. Price 25c per box. Sold by druggists.

A GAME OF CHAFF.

The great house loomed darkly before the young man who paused for a moment at the iron gates. Then he stepped forward briskly and passing around the mansion rang the bell at the side door. It was almost immediately answered by a young woman who put her finger to her lips as she ushered him in.

"Please be very careful," she said. "The family is so fussy. Come this wav.'

She took him into an apartment that might have been the breakfast room and motioned him towards a chair. "Can't I shake hands with you?" he asked. "It seems like quite an age since we parted." "Thank you," she said and gave him her hand. "It was just two weeks ago to-day-if that can be considered an "Thank you for remembering the day," he gravely said.

"I will admit," said the girl with a little blush, "that it was quite an episode in my life. I'd never had such an opportunity before."

"No?" he said with a slightly rising inflection. He looked at her with a curious expression. She was a pretty girl, a very pretty girl, and though her hair was smoothed into plainness and surmounted by a simple little white cap, its beauty and luster seemed brightened by this attempt at concealing them. Her gown was plain, too, and over it she wore a fresh white

"Yes," she said and her inflection in turn looked at him. He was a man worth looking at. Well knit, well featured and well spoken. "Some men," she shortly added, "are easily deceived."

"Some deceptions are preferable to the truth," he said. "But pray go on you have something to tell me."
'Yes," said the girl. "No doubt you have guessed it. You saw me at the seaside resort for those few days. The glamour of the place dazed you. You took appearances for realities." "They were such charming appearances," he softly said. "Please don't interrupt," she cried with another little blush. "You saw me with Miss Ainslie's aunt. You took me for Miss Ainslie—and I let you deceive yourself. I was only the dear old lady's companion. I am only Miss Ainslie's companion. One moment. Miss Ainslie showed me your note asking the privilege of calling. She suspected that I knew what it meant. I confessed. I told her the whole story -how I let you think me a great heiress and how I led you on. She advised me to write and tell you to call-"At the side door," said the man. "Of course at the side door," exclaimed the girl. "I couldn't ask you here on the footing of the family guests. I wouldn't have asked you here at all, but Miss Ainslie counseled it. She said it was my duty to undeceive you. That is all, I think. Good

She stood up as she spoke the last words and moved toward the door. But the man did not stir.

"The evening is young yet," he said, "and short calls disagree with me. Pray, sit down. I, too, came here this evening to make confession. not the only one deceived."
"What do you mean?" she asked as she resumed her chair. "I mean," he replied, "that I represented myself to you in what you must have regarded as a rather favorable

"I think," she said, "that you gave me the impression that you were a person of some prominence.' There was a little silence. "I fancy there must be something inthe air of the average resort that encourages these fanciful deceptions," he "We seem to long to be something other than what we really are. And yet I am very glad to-night to know the truta. "May I ask why?" said the girl.

"I was about to tell you," he replied. "You see, that as the petted heiress, Grace Ainslie, you seemed as far above me as a star. I was mad to write to you to-day. But now it's different. You are nearer my social level. I do not have to storm the bastion of wealth to reach you."

"That's rather pretty," said the girl.
"And you are not disappointed?" "No," said the man, "I am glad." "Glad that I am a dependent instead

of an heiress?" "Glad for my own sake, yes. And now may I ask your name?"
"M-my name?" stammered the girl
"Why should I tell you?" "Do as you please about it," said the man. "It will be easy to give you "And may I ask what yours is?" queried the girl demurely. "A truce to names," he said. "They unt for nothing to-night." "And yet I'm foolishly particular re garding them," she said with a smile "You are thinking of the possibl change," he thoughtfully remarked "I don't blame you for being a little fastidious. It does you credit. You wouldn't fancy a name like Hoopen looper, would you?" "No," she gravely answered. "I wouldn't like any name that ran over the edge of a calling card." "But, after all," he cried, "it is the man, not the name."

the state of the s "Then," she said, "you leave me to infer that your name is an atrocious > one. "My name is well enough," he said. "But let it go. There are other things to hold our attention. In the first place, how do we stand socially—and financially? Wait, please. I am about to tell you something concerning myself."

"Not the story of your life!" "Not exactly. But pray do not interrupt. I am thirty-one, in good health, no serious habits, fairly goodlooking, measurably ambitious and something of a favorite where I am best known. I have a comfortable situation in connection with a down town office, and there is a neat little sum lying to my credit in a certain bank. I think I might even compass the cost of a modern cottage.'

"That's nice," she said. "I have a little balance on a bank book myself." "That's nice, too," said the man.
"Do you think it would cover the cost of the furniture?"

"If carefully invested," said the girl, "I think it would." "I'm glad of that," the man commented. "I never believe in adopting the installment plan where you can raise the cash. And now be equally frank and tell me about yourself." "No," said the girl, "I'm too much prejudiced in favor of the subject.

Let's hear your opinion." "All right," said the man; "but, of course, I'm prejudiced, too. same time it is a good thing to air one's prejudices occasionally. If our prejudices do not agree pray correct me from time to time. To begin with, you are beautiful. Then you are fairly intelligent. You have a nimble wit, but you have been somewhat spoiled. Eh, you don't like that? Nevertheless, it is quite evident that your employers have been too indulgent. Oh, yes, they have. And yet one who reallyadmired you, could overlook thisshall I say painful—defect—in time."

"Is that all?" "All I could dilate on your attractions until the gray fingers of the dawn beckoned me away!' "How nicely you express yourself.

I had only to shut my eyes to hear the surf beat on the shore and the band softly thrumming on the hotel piazza." "What a lovely time we had—while it lasted. How those golden moments glass!" "There you go again. But we did have a lovely time deceiving each other, didn't we?" "It was our foolish vanity that did scuttled through pleasure's hour-the deceiving—our hearts were as true as steel." "Steel is very hard, Mr. Thingamy." "Mine is ductile steel, Miss Whatsyourname. 'Tis a heart of wax when obliterated.

"No, no, it is indelible. Ah, if I only took the opposite direction. And she knew your name how delightful it would be to make love to you.'

> "You would take altogether too much time," she said. "I shudder to think of your verbosity if you had a three syllable name to encourage your efforts. Besides, you must remember that this is my night in."

> "Your night in?" "Yes, it's my night to have company and to receive it-or him-in this particular apartment. All the other help go out in order to leave the lucky one a clear field. My chance doesn't come again for ten days. But that will not excuse me for overdoing the present opportunity. You really must go.

> fancy I hear footsteps now. Hush!" The footsteps came down the hall. They paused and the door opened. An elderly man with a heavy white mustache looked in.

"Oh, there you are, Grace," he cried Excuse me, I didn't know you had company. Bless my soul if it isn't Warren Hayes! How are you, my boy? I didn't know Grace knew you. Helping her with private theatricals, I see. Don't let her work you too hard. There, there, I won't interrupt any longer. Glad to see you at any time, my boy."

"I'll drop in on you at the office in the morning," said Warren Hayes. "I have a little important business I want to see you about."

"All right, my boy. Any time after 10. Good night." "Good night."

There was a little silence. The man looked at the girl. The girl looked at the floor. "I was silently admiring the way your father says Grace," remarked

Warren Hayes. "Come," said the girl sharply, "what is that special business you have with papa to-morrow morning?'

"And here I've been openly crediting you with unusual cleverness," said Warren Hayes, with a despairing gesture. "Yet I fancy you half suspect. The fact is, Miss Grace Ainslie, alias Thingamy, that when a young woman admits her devoted admirer through the side door it is about time for papa's consent to be asked."

"You are a rude and hasty man," said the girl. "And I suppose you are just conceited enough to fancy that you will succeed with the father as well as-I mean that you hope to succeed with the daughter as well as you think you'll succeed with the father."

"Exactly," said Warren Hayes. The girl looked at him with a little

"Well," she said, "you'll not get in the side door again."

"Oh, the front door will do," said Warren Hayes.

And then the girl softly laughed. On Safe Ground. "Did your husband ever make fun of your love letters?" "Yes; but not until after we were married." Katie the Sinner. "Why, Jacky, open the door and let Katie in. Don't you see it's raining?"

cried Jacky's mother. "I can't, mamma," said Jacky, "We are playing Noah's ark; I'm Noah and Katie is the sinners, and she must stay out in the wet." Yonkers Statesman.

How to Build up a Town.

If every town in the country would pattern after Wausa, Neb., there would be a general revival of business. For that little city is building its self into a great city by the only sure and quick way of growth, co-op eration of the business men in every enterprise.

This work of building up the town and of drawing new business to it is done by the Wausa Improvement Club. Other towns have improvement clubs which meet and talk over improvements, but this club goes out and gets them.

. The Wausa Improvement club was organized last spring and has about 75 members. Its object is to promote any and all legimate enterprises that will help the town. Thus, if a stranger gets off the train and goes to a hotel he is given the glad hand if he evidences a desire to remain in Wansa and enter business As an illustration: The place has been without a dentist until recently. Then one stopped off for a few hours, told his profession and was at once | Brown.

taken in tow by the club and given the honors of the town. He located there, of course.

Then the men took it into there heads that they wanted a cigar factory and pledged themselves, not to handle any cigars except those made by their own factory. With such a spirit the new cigar factory is bound to make money.

The same tactics were used with a jewelry establishment, and a Michigan jewèler two months ago started in business in Wausa.

As every one knows, a mill is a necessity in a live farming town. By a strong pull together the Improvement club landed one worth $13,500, and an elevator also is being built. The coming of the owner to Wausa also means a resident. Not a sack of any kind of flour except Wausa flour is sold in Wansa stores. The people in each Congressional district are requested to of that town believe in patronizing home industries.

Another enterprise which the club now has on hand is the erection of a town hall, 36 by 80, with pressed brick front, stage, scenery, etc., to cost 6,000. When it is completed regular weekly entertainments will be given to draw the people together.

The club also takes a whirl at the country roads. Every now and then the" get hold of a scraper, go out into he country, enlist the farmers and

After milking, the milk is emptied inte a tank from which it slowly passes over an accator which removes all traces of animal heat, after which the milk is placed in bottles and hermetically sealed, in which shape it is delivered to the customers. When mpty the bottles are all thoroughly washed in steaming hot water and subjected to a thorough heating with steam for a long time, after which the bottles are allowed to cool when they are ready for refilling.

Mr. Eastman takes great pains to have everything about the place ab solutely clean, realizing how important it is to have the milk delivered in a pure sweet condition. His dairy is in excellent one and the REcord sincerly trusts that his enterprise will be awarded by an ever in-Model Dairy is well worthy.

The directors recently called on the stockholders for cash to raise a crop of beets for the coming season but not enough money was raised and the plant, which is worth about $300,000, will probably be sold to capitalists of other cities. The two unprofitable seasons caused by bad weather are responsible for the lack of interest in the industry.

* * * An Interesting Relic

Cashier Herbert Roe, of Lee Bros. & Co's, bank has an interesting relic, which is the property of Mr. George Samson, having been handed down from his father the late Horatio Sam-

The article in question is an old United States bill of exchange dated February 5, 1779, and numbered 154. It was drawn upon the United States Commissioner at Paris, and was for $36 or 180 Lives Tournais, being in payment of interest on money loaned the United States. The bill is signed by F. Hopkinson, Treasurer of Loans, countersigned by Nath'l Appleton, commissioner for the state of "Mas sachusetts Bay," and drawn to the order of Habijah Savage.

On the back the bill is endorsed Pay the contents to Capt Simeon Samson" and Samson has endorsed 'Pay the contents to Capt Corbin Barnes.''

The Capt Simeon Samson, refered to, was the grandfather of the late Mr. Horatio Samson and was a privateer during the Revolutionary war, and his grandson remembered him, having seen him a number of times. The fact that the bill of exchange has never been paid adds materially to its value.

Through Congressman Hamilton it has been ascertained that no records exist of there having been a payment of any of the second, third or fourth bill of this number. Mr. Roe is corresponding with different dealers in curios with the view of ascertaining what the relic may be worth.

Andaman Islanders of Whom Romantic | Stories Have Been Told for Centuries-Climb Like Monkeys-They are Rapidly Dying Out.

"They can climb like monkeys, move in the dark like cats, flit as silently and unseen as bats, track their enemies by scent like bloodhounds, shoot poisoned darts out of their blowguns with unfailing accuracy and swim like fish." So one explorer describes the strange dwellers in the Andaman Islands, in the Persian Gulf. to which Great Britain sends her most wicked criminals, assured that their sojourn there will be the most dire kind of punishment and that their chance of escape is as nothing. For even if a desolate and lonely sea did not surround the lonely group of Isiands, the natives are eager to earn the standing government reward tor tracking and capturing a prison-breaking convict. And no convict who ever has experienced the unending pursuit and silent deadly closing in on him of the little black men with their wicked weapons ever tries again to reach the seacoast.

A. Conan Doyle uses these terrible natives with great effect in one of his weird stories of mysterious murder. But long before he wrote about them -indeed long before the British owned the islands, they were fruitful topics of romance everywhere in the world. A Chinese traveler, Hwen Tsang, who visited them in the sixteenth century, described the Andamanese as being tiny people, not more than three feet high, very murderous and bloodthirsty and of comely appearance, except that they had birds' bills instead of human mouths. Zaid reported that their faces and eyes were so frightening that his sailors dared not approach the shore after having seen them once. Marco Polo described them in similar vein, and added that they had the faces of dogs.

Not Unhuman.

There is some reason for the awesome declarations of these old boys. Although the faces of the Andamanese are not at all unhuman, they have one striking peculiarity—they are jet black, and the teeth and whites of the eyes are so large and so bright that they are absolutely luminous in the dark. So Zaid's men are to be excused for having been frightened for they met Andamanese in the dark forests. And, in addition, they had and have still the habit of painting their faces hideously with red ochre, which certainly may have simulated dogs' faces and birds' bills to the eyes of early explorers, who did not approach too closely or hesitate to believe marvelous things.

The Andaman Islands were really explored for the first time by the French traveler Peyrand in 1607. in 1791 Great Britain took them and converted them into a convict establishment, which they are yet. Among the prisoners there are some of the worst criminals that this earth can boast. The scum of India, China, Africa, Australia, Java. Borneo and the outcasts of civilized lands all have drifted there. And surrounding the prison reserves lie the Ittle Andamanese, never working, waiting like terriers for the pleasure of a convict hunt. Where no human foot apparently could press they pass as swiftly as snakes, and in the same manner, for they crawl as easily and as fast as white men can run. Under and through the jungle growths they writhe and slide, quickly as a reptile. silently as shadows.

They are Happy.

They are the happiest poor devils in the world. They have no money, no clothes, no homes, no morals, no religion, no conscience, no laws no med.cines. The British government pays them for their bloodhound services with pork, rum and tobacco. They wouldn't take cash if it were offered to them. They know nothing of clothing for modesty or fashion s sake and need not for covering, for their climate is delightfully even. They live in hollow trees. The only work that they do is to hunt. Wild pigs, bears and turtle abound in their paradise, and every male Andamanese is a sure shot with bow and arrow. When their game is once killed the work is practically over, for the Andemanese are not persons who would Luy a French chef a high salary to took for them. They are content with fire, and they are not in the least enoice about the best parts of the carcass. When they catch a turile they lay it over the fire and cook it a little while. Then each islander, who is present at the feast, pitches in with a piece of cocoanut shell and digs out what he can. But they are not greedy beggars, and it is an unwritten and implicitly obeyed law that, when piece of meat. he must pass it on to his

THE DEADLY GUARD neighbors, after having bitten a good mouthful off for himself. Even the mouthful off for himself. Even the dogs are not forgotten. The meat is held out to them, they bite off as much as possible and then the mar goes on cheerfully eating what they leave. Although they are dying out fast, they appear to have no particular malady. There is no such thing as sickness in the circle of their knowl. edge, and they do not seem to know even the primitive remedies which are known to most simple peoples all over the world. The only thing that they practice which is at all like medicinal usage is to rub themselves freely with turtle fat whenever they are hurt. As their country is full of thickets of thornbushes, the parents harden their children while they are small by cutting hundreds of tiny slits into all parts of their bodies, This is done continually for years cill the little ones are covered with scars.

DOWN A DEEP OIL WELL

A Desperate Chance to Save Thousands of Dollars

Tied by the feet with a strong cable, W. G. Phillips was lowered head first into an oil well 2,000 feet deep to remove a chain which had become fastened in such a way as to obstruct the work in the well. The casing was only thirteen inches in diameter and the obstruction was several hundred feet down, so it took nerve to start on the journey.

Phillips is a contractor and driller. and he was drilling the well, which is in the Lantz pool, when one of the tools stuck. The usual methods to release it were resorted to until a chain broke and fell directly across the hole in such a way that it could not be removed, and the tools could not be made to work until it was out of the way. Several thousand dollars had already been spent on the well and Phil-. lips was naturally loath to abandon

Stripping off his coat and tay. ing his hat aside, he had the workmen fasten a line securely about his feet. Then, head first so that he could reach the obstruction with his hands, he was lowered into the well by the men at the windlass. The air rushed out of the hole as he went down until a sepulchral voice was heard: "Let me down slow!" Then the speed was slackened, and finally the voice called | He Was Unable to Make a Trade With up: "Stop!" Then a click of the chain was heard, indicating that he had reached his destination safely, and presently the same voice commanded "Pull me up!"

Slowly the men hauled away until Phillips was only a hundred feet from the opening, when there came a sudden jerk on the line and Phillips called out: "I am caught on a spike; lower me a little."

It was a piece of wooden casing and a spike had gone through in such a way that he had passed it all right going down, but caught on it coming up. As the men ceased pulling on the rope it was discovered that it was slipping slowly from his feet. It was difficult to tell which was the more terror-stricken, the man in the hole or those above. They twisted the rope, first one way and then another, and finally, to the relief of all, disengaged their human burden, and soon Phillips was landed, very much exhausted, upon the floor of the derrick.

He had accompaished the most remarkable feat ever recorded in the history of the oil country, and had saved several thousand dollars in a few minutes.

One other case is on record where a few months ago, a man was lowered feet first into a well eighteen inches in diameter to a depth of a hundred feet to fasten a chain to a tool which had stuck, thereby earning a hundred dollars. But his feat, which was at the time considered a wonderful one. pales beside that of Phillips .-- New Ycrk World.

Crow May Supplant the Carrier Pigeon.

Germany, which brought out the dog as a bearer of help to the wounded on the battlefield, is thinking now of supplanting the carrier pigeon with the crow. One argument in favor of this substitution is that while people might kill carrier pigeons for food, the crow would be exempt from that danger, as "eating crow' is a term of contempt with civilized peoples. On the other hand, if people will not eat crow, crow will eat carrion, and it is feared that these crafty birds might linger too long over the succulent | Good morning, sir." feasts of the battlefield to make them valuable as carriers of dispatches. mercly warming their meat over a However, a society has been formed in Germany to exploit the crow in this new field. Members of this society believe that the crow can be tamed | will sail for Germany the latter part and trained, and awhile ago the Kaiser solemnly reviewed a crow in a "march past," which in foreign armies is equivalent to our "review. The Emperor walked around the crow, and then the crow marched past the Emperor, who expressed himself as one man finds a particularly choice delighted with the appearance of his newest and strangest recruit. 2

FORCE VERSUS IMMOVABLE.

An Encounter In Which the Unexpected Was Obliged to Give Way. "No." said the man, "I do not want a hair restorer." The agent smiled genially. It was his boast that he never lost a sale. He sat down and took a bottle of the restorer out of his bag. "This has made more handsome men," he began, then interrupted himself. "You must have been unusually good-looking when you had your hair." He spoke critically, without a trace of vulgar flattery.

"On the contrary," the bald-headed man asserted positively, "it is more becoming to me to be bald. I was not elected coroner till after I lost my hair."

"With men, yes," the agent admitted indulgently. "Of course, when they can see a man's bare skull and make sure of the confines of his brain, they feel more confidence in electing him to an important office. Besides, they know a man who has lost his hair ought to have something to make up to him for it. But I was thinking of women-"

"You're wrong again," the baldheaded man interrupted. "I tried for seven years to marry a certain girl while my raven tresses clustered luxuriously about my brow. Since I've been bald, I've been married twice; and I shouldn't mind giving you odds that I could get the original woman who refused me, for No. 3 if the opportunity ever develops."

The hair restorer agent began to look a little fagged, but he continued gamely: "There's one other point that I'm sure will appeal to a man like you. Hair acts as a cover and a protection to the head, and the brains within. Even leaving out the colds, and such like, a man catches for want of hair, there's the direct harm to the brain—paresis and all kindred diseases never attack a person with a thick thatch of hair. Do you know"-his tone was impressive—"that-"

"Not at all. You haven't half grasped the subject. The hair is a covering -a mulch, as it were—for the brain when young and feeble; but when it has grown strong and robust, when the blood has learned the way to circulate properly through the arteries of the head, a covering is unnecessary and the hair drops off-gives full play to the brain and saves the necessity of a wet towel tied around the brow. Only small-minded men, whose brains cannot absorb all the nutriment furnished the head, keep their hair. No you"-the bald-headed man scrutinized the agent carefully-"must have a brain in a singular state of arrested ing their work or helping some neighdevelopment. Or, if it was once of bor who had more to do than they, for normal size and activity, you have, by forcing an unnatural crop of hair to grow upon your head with the restorer, so far deprived your brain of the necessary support from the blood, that it is anaemic, half starved-atrophied.

The agent looked long and sorrowfully at the bald-headed man, then put the bottle back in his satchel and went softly out of the door. The question of the irresistible force and the immovable body was solved.

THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY

a Grocer

The family had only lately moved into the neighborhood. A day or two after their arrival the head of the family went to the grocer in the neighborhood and asked the price of a can of condensed milk.

"Fifteen cents," said the proprietor. "Fifteen devils!" exclaimed the customer, "why, man alive, I don't want to buy a dozen cans, but only one What do you ask for half a can, whole sale figures?" "Never sell half a can." "I reckon you never sell anything, if you make up your goods in that way. Suppose I take a whole can, will you come down to a dime?" "Fifteen cents is the usual price."

"That may be with unreliable, transient customers, butt I am an old citizen of Galveston, and the store that catches my permanent trade will have to be enlarged within six months. Say a dime, and throw in a pound or two of soda crackers, and it's a whack."

"Do you buy a good deal in the course of a year?" asked the proprietor with a sneer.

"Do I buy a good deal? I should say I did. Why, it won't be more than two months before I'll buy a box of match es. The box I'm using now is more than half gone, and I only got it last February, too. Say a dime for the condensed milk, and one of them stale watermelons thrown in as a sorter in ducement, and you can put these two nickels in your burglar-proof safe."

"Fifteen cents is the lowest price." "I wish you could see my blackingbrush. It can't hold out over Christmas, and then I am bound to negotiate for a new one. Throw one box of blacking in with the condensed milk, and it's a transaction."

"I won't do it." "All right! You won't do it. I'll just keep my eye on you. I'll bet your stock is insured for twice what it's worth, and you are going to have a fire pretty soon. When a merchant don't care to build up a trade he is fixing to fail or swindle somebody.

ROY AND THE FAIRIES

An Interesting Story for the Little Boys and Girls.

OY lay back with his sprained ankle up in the air, gazing at the bare walls of his room. He had just said goodby to his mamma, who had gone ou' to 6 her usual day's 'worv. Roy was very lonely to-day, for he had no toys to play with nor any brother or sister to talk to. "Oh!" he sighed. "how I wish I had some one to play with!" Just then he was startled by a rustling noise which came from the chimney, and looking in that direction he saw three of the loveliest creatures. One was dressed in yellow, with beautiful spangles all over her dress and hair. Another had on a red dres; with little dewdrops on the skirt and waist. The last, and most beautiful, was dressed in white, with a wand in her hand. There was a crown on her head, which glistened with streaks like the little sunbeams which we so often see through our window on a sunshiny day. Then the loveliest of all was a rainbow which made a circle around all three. "Fairies!" whispered Roy below his breath. He had heard the little children speak of them as he went from house to house with his mamma, but he never expected to see any. "Ha! ha! ha!" laughed the fairies, as they spied the little boy in bed, "we've come to play with you. Do you want us to?" "Yes," answered Roy, faintly. We'l. what do you think the fairies did? They just jumped upon the bed and sang the loveliest song Roy had ever heard. It was so funny that the l.ttle fellow clapped his hands with dolight. He forgot all about being lonely. Then they jumped on the floor and danced and danced. The funn.est thing was that they didn't make any noise, and their little feet hardly touched the floor. They stayed all day, and they seemed never to get tired of dancing or singing. When they heard the front door open they ran to the chimney, while Roy exclaimed: "Oh! please stay and let my mamma see you!" They shook their heads and said: "Don't you ever teli." When Roy's mamma opened the door she said: "Why, Roy, how happy you look!" "Oh, I feel much better, mamma." He started to tell all about the fairies, but he remembered what they said, and he thought they had been too good to him for him to tell. So he just kissed his mamma and said nothing. I think Roy did just right, don't you?—D. P. Higgins.

The Queen's Ball.

The little fairies were all busy dothe fairies are always willing to lend a helping hand wherever it is needed.

The royal household was all astir. for Her Majesty the Queen had decided to give a ball, the first of the season, at the royal palace. She sat in the summer house, which was a large pink rose, writing invitations. The good Queen did not want to slight anybody, for she was loyal to her subjects, so she invited everybody she could think of.

The invitations were written on rose leaves, with a feather for a pen and dew for ink.

After she had finished she rang a little silver bell and a little page clad in pink and gold with a gold trumpet at his side came in.

The Queen gave him the dainty invitations, and, bowing gracefully, he retired. He blew on his trumpet at the houses and gave the invitations to whom they were addressed.

The ball was a grand affair, as well as a success. There were fireflies for lamps and birds to sing and dance, besides fairies, brownies, elves and all little people.

The Queen thought she ought to get married, so she married the King of the Brownies. They lived to a good old age, doing good to other people.-Bessie Frazee.

A Quick Dog.

My aunt had a fox terrier. His name was Mose. He was about three years old, and he was an expert chicken thief. He would catch the chickens and bury them alive, with the feet sticking out of the ground, so that he always had a chicken ready for his dinner. We had a garden in one of our lots in the summer. He would take a great delight in going with me to get some vegetables. He would amuse himself in digging up potatoes while waiting for me to go home. My uncle was very fond of him. He would always go with uncle to work, and every one in the factory knew him. If any of the family overslept themselves Mose would go to one side of the bed and poke his nose in the bed, and then he would go to the other side and do the same thing. He was a fine watch dog. He would not allow a peddler or any rough looking person inside the gate, and we all felt very safe while he was alive.

COUNTY SEAT NEWS

THURSDAY'S NEWS

John L. Sharver, of Weesaw, by his attorney, Edward Bacon, has filed a declaration against Fuller McClellan to obtain $5,000 for damages. The bill says the defendant purchased some horses at an auction sale of F: G Briggs and was warned not to whip the team. The defendant, it is claimed, did not heed the advice and frightened the horses by whipping them. The animals ran away and knocked the plaintiff down dangerously injuring him. He claims$5,000 from the owner of the team.

MONDAY.

The case of the people vs. Russell, for assult, will be tried Tuesday, Russell is charged with cruelly beating his brother-in-law with a gun. The trial will be an interesting one.

The Pearl vs. Benton township damage sait went to the jury this afternoon. The case will be tried by eleven jurors, Eli Leach, of Niles, being excused on account of sickness.

The Bays vs. Warren Feacherbone company $25,000 damage case will be tried February 25th.

The case of Rose vs. Caldw:11 has been dismissed.

TUESDAY

Probably the largest verdict ever given in berrica Circuit court for per sonal injuries was awarded to Arthur L Pearl Monday evening. The jury in the Benton township damage suit decided that the plaintiff was entitled to a judgement of $8,600. This is a great victory for Gore & Harvey and James O'Hara, who represented Mr. Pearl.

The case was first tried a year ago and Mr. Pearl was given a verdict of $5,000.

The case was appealed to the Supreme court and a new trial was ordesed. This second trial ended Monday night with the awarding of the judgment of $8,600 in favor of Pearl. The amount asked for was $11,800. The jury was composed of eleven men and was out only two hours. The verdict was a surprise to many. G. M. Valentine and M. L. Howell, attorneys for the township, will probably move for another trial of the case.

The case of the people vs. Matthew Russell, for assulting his brother-inlaw, Richard Stewart, with a gun, is on trial Tuesday. It was believed that sensational evidence would be introduced at the trial but thus far there have been no startling developments. Prosecutor Riford appears for the state and N. G. Kennedy and John Sterling, Jr., for the defendant. Leader, Miss Anna Simmons.

Marshall Howell, one of the attorneys for Benton township, in the Arthur L. Pearl damage suit, this morning made a motion to have Judge Coolidge take the case from the jury on the ground that there was error in the declaration and that no notice was given the defendant township at the commencement of the suit. A pirited argument ensued and Judge Coolidge denied the motion and the case proceeded.

Mr. Howell brought up the point as to whether or not the township is liable in case the highway commissioner neglects his duties or responsibilities, but said this would have to be decided by the Supreme court.

Court adjourned Friday night until Monday when the Pearl vs. Benton township damage case will go to the

The "Heart of a Child," by Josephine Dodge Daskam, which opens the February number of McClure's Magazine, is a story of unusual and profound interest. In it breathes the charm of tenderest sympathy, and that sympathy is interpreted by consumate art. The heart of a child, a heart eager, and thrilling, brimming with the vagaries of jostling dreams, that heart is laid bare before us and we gain glimpses of all the wonderful life in it. Yet the revelation is made with gentleness, with fondness such that the author's analytical skill is masked. The story is realistic in the best sense; its theme is beautiful, and the beautiful truth is beautifully told.

It is a far cry from the heart of a child to Richard Croker, Nevertheless, William Allen White, in a character-study of Tammany's ruler, insists on a certain childlike simplicity in the nature of this political "boss."

The article is written with that bril liancy which distinguishes the author and its offect is to explain something of the mystery in Croker's power over his fellows.

Among other articles of particular interest are "Some recollections of John Wilkes Booth,"by Clara Morris, and"Unsolved Problems of Chemistry," by Professor Ira Remsen, L. L. D. of John Hopkins University. The fiction of this number is especially good, among the authors being Rudyard Kipling, Sarah Orne Jewett, Robert Barr and Edwin Lefevre. Illustrations are contributed by Kenyon Cox, Edwin Lord Weeks, Lockwood Kipling, Edmund J. Sullivan and others.

The late Senator Davis is the subject of a character sketch in the January Review of Reviews, by the Rev. Dr. Samuel G. Smith, who writes from an intimate personal acquaintance with the Minnesota Senator. In the same number appeares a sketch of Henry Villard's picturesque career, with reminiscences of Mr. Villard's early days as a newspaper correspondent contributed by Mr. Murat Halstead, with whom Mr. Villard served on the Cincinnati Commercial before and during the Civil War. Each of these articles is illustrated with portraits.

Mr. Sylvester Baxter, writing in the Review of Reviews for January, describes an important movement in Massachusetts for the preservation of places of historic and scenic interest. This "trust to protect Nature's beauty," as Mr. Baxter styles the committee having the matter in charge, has already accomplished much by way of rescuing interesting buildings and sites from ruin and defacement, and it is hoped that similar work may be undertaken in other States.

READ THE RECORD.

o ISS Rosy Posy was a good little girl, as all little girls should be, and she was very, very fond of fairy stories. She had always longed to meet one real fairies and have some real adventures, like those in the fairy tales. As she was so good, it was only natural that she should have her wish gratified, and one evening in early fall she was surprised to wake up and find a cute little gnome standing at the foot of her bed.

"Hello! Rosy," said the gnome; "don't you want to come and skate with the fairies?"

Rosy was too frightened to speak at first, but the gnome told her not to be afraid and to come with him. The first thing she knew she was flying through space, over the housetops. and, to her surprise, she was now clad in her warmest winter clothes. with a big feather boa around her neck and a fuzzy-wuzzy muff to keep her hands warm.

Soon they came to the Enchanted Lake, in Fairy Land. Rosy found that she now had on some pretty curvey skates, and the little gnome also wore a pair.

"Come with me," he said, and they skated off merrily over the vast lake. There were great wide trees all around the shore, and a great big silver moon shone through them with a beautiful light, making the ice shine and shine again. The ice was perfectly smooth and seemed to give wings to the swiftly gliding skates.

"Very soon they met two jolly bears." After a while they met a funny little clown. The gnome, whose name. by the way, was Delfo, introduced the little clown to Rosy. The clown was called Flyaway.

Flyaway, Delfo and Rosy skated off together, and very soon they met two jolly bears, Grizzly and Frizzly, who were enjoying themselves greatly on their skates. Every now and then they would stop and laugh as if at some joke, and soon all five were laughing heartily, they did not know

A band of light winged and light footed fairies came out from behind the trees and skated in fancy circles and figures around Rosy.

"Ring around a Rosy!" they cried in -glee, and skated faster and faster, until Rosy could hardly see them. Then they disappeared suddenly, and this made Grizzly and Frizzly laugh harder than ever.

They skated on and on, and came to the mouth of a beautiful frozens river, which shone like diamonds in the moonlight. They skated up this river until they came to the enchanted Ice Palace of the Fairy Queen. The palace glittered with icicles, and was the prettiest thing Rosy had ever seen. She was presented to the Fairv Queen and had a long talk with her The Queen told her that if she kept on being good she would always be happy, and Rosy found out afterward tha. what the fairy said was really true After that Rosy was shown all through the palace.

Then Delfo and Flyaway skated back to the lake with her, and Gr z.l. and Frizzly skated along after them. "Now, Rosy," said Delfo, "it is near morning, and if you stay here til dawn you will vanish. So you must go back home. And I am sorry to sa that you can visit Fairyland only onc. in your life, unless the Fairy Queen wills it otherwise."

Rosy was sorry to go, and Delfo. Flyaway and the two bears were sorry to have to say goodby to her. Delfo took her to the woods and showed he where her home was, not far away. She quickly got there, but when she woke up the next morning she could not see the Enchanted Lake anywhere. but hopes every day that the Fairy Queen will call her to her home agair to see Grizzly, Frizzly, Flyaway and Delfo.-James A. Wales.

Discouraging. I told the boy the old fable of the sun and the wind; how the sun, shining steadfastly, had caused the wavfarer to take off his cloak, which. thing the wind, though blustering its utmost, had quite failed to do.

"The fable," I said, "teaches the superior efficacy of gentle methods." "But," said the boy, "perhaps it was the humidity and not the heat which led the wayfarer to jay aside eloak!" It is disheartening thus to meet up with the characteristic skepticism of the age in one so young.-Detroit Journal.

YOUR MONOGRAM

Is Here As Is Also the Other Letters as True Story of a Smart Little Squirrel That | Save Money on Your Winter Reading.

You can make this monogram without taking the pencil off the paper. It contains the first letter of every word in the English dictionary, likewise the last and the intervening letters, and, needless to say, not only the initials. of your name, but all the other letters as well.

This applies equally to the names of your friends, and if therefore you should be in doubt in having their names inscribed on an intended present this monogram will serve all purposes, while if a club purposes bestowing a loving cup upon its president it may not be amiss to use this universal monogram as embodying those of all the members participating in the gift.

It will, of course, be found equally adaptable for an inscription where the recipients are celebrating their golden wedding. Other uses may suggest themselves as readily as do the letters unfold themselves to the close observer.

Stories of Little Folk.

Albert Byron Davenport is the twelve-year-old son of E. F. Daven port, of New Orleans. He is a typical American boy, full of spirit and business energy, says The American Boy. His business is a peculiar one He rents clean aprons and jumpers to bookbinders, printers and lithograph ers. He receives five cents for an apron and ten cents for a jumper, and he has about fifty customers. His scheme required a little capital at the start, as he had to have two aprone for each man. The work keeps him busy only on Saturdays. He goes to school on other days. One of his cards is before us, reading: -- -- -- -- -- -- -- -- -- -- --

Albert is proud of the success which he is meeting in his business venture. This may be a suggestion to other American boys in large cities.

A Girl Should Love the Work She Does. "The question of money I often wish did not loom so large, for I hold it as a vital principle that the best work is never done merely for money's sake, and that the best workers are never mercenary," writes Margaret E. Sangster in the Ladies' Home Journal. "That money answereth all things is as undeniably true in the modern market as it was in the ancient days, so far as money procures comforts and luxuries and enables men and women to pay their honest obligations. But above and beyond the thought of the money earned must be in every good worker's breast a deep respect and sincere love for the work undertaken, a rare and sensitive con science which exacts of one's own self honorable fulfillment of a contract. and a firm loyalty to the employer which will make his interests paramount to one's convenience or caprice. A young woman who works ony for the money she may earn, weakly pitying herself that she has to do the work at all, will never succeed; a young woman who chooses what she fancies to be easy, and who has no reverence for the Master sitting unseen yet ever watchful behind the thin veil which separates heaven from earth, will slip through her task without dignity; a young woman who regards her work as a mere steppingstone to something less irksome will not pass mediocrity."

A Bad Contract.

"My fifteen-year-old son agreed to cut the grass on our lawn for twenty cents a cut."

"Yes." "He at once framed out the job to Patsy Timmins for fifteen cents a cut. Patsy cut and Jack supervised."

Well, the other day Patsy raised the price on Jack to twenty cents. Jack paid it and that night he told me about the transaction. I asked him what he intended to do. 'Well.' he gravely remarked. 'I am determined to come out even on the job. I shall no longer supervise!' "-- Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

Very Small Boy.

"Swami" is not a very pretty name, but it serves to identify perhaps the smallest boy of sixteen that has ever been seen. Swami was found three years ago on the Bengal coast in Burmah. He measures 1814 inches in height, and tips the scale at only 121/2 pounds. He has a sister, Fatma, nineteen years old, who is 19 inches in height, and weighs 15 pounds and 3 ounces. The German professors at Berlin who have seen the dwarfs say that they are probably the two smallest human beings in the world.

Drawing Pictures.

"Here's a horse!" said Johnnie boy, "Here's the horse's rider! Here's the great big elephant! Here's the clown beside her!" 'Let me take your slate," said I. "Surely I must see

You have drawn for me." But upon the slate I saw Nothing but a line. -Jessie B. Sherman, in the Christian Intelligencer.

All these very splendid things

BOBBY-BRIGHT-EYES.

Lived in a Hotel,

ERHAPS one of the great big trees in Winona Lake prk could tell just where Bobby-Bright-Eyes first came from; in what warm nest and in what o particular tree he was born. Still, they kept the secret, though Alice had gone from tree to tree and asked them time and again.

One morning, after a heavy wind and rain-storm she found Bobby-Bright-Eyes on the steps that led up to the long, wide porch, where all the girls liked to play so well. What a tiny, helpless, wet little squirrel laby he was. Glad to be cuddled up, too, he seemed in Alice's warm, red jack.t So Alice ran in and showed him to her papa, who owned the hotel, and papa had a little box made for Bobby-Bright-Eyes. who took it all as a matter of course, and did not try, as many a squirrel would, to get away.

He seemed perfectly happy, and in a few days he was so tame he would go in and out of the cage, run over the baulstrades of the long porch and even come to the cook's ki chen door, where he was fed dainties that were rich enough to kill Sir Bobby-Bright-Eyes. Instead of getting sick, he grew fat and saucy. If strange children tried to catch him he would keep still until they could almost touch his pretty striped back; then away he would dash up to the top of the very highest tree then he would begin to chatter and scold, as much as to say: "You didn't catch me did you?"

Bobby-Bright-Eyes liked the sunny corners of the hotel porch, and once the captain of the steamer Welcome, who often brought Bobby nuts from town, found the squirrel in his pocket when he was steering the boat ac oss the lake. He seemed to be frightened at the noise of the engine and kepvery still.

Every one laughed when the captain found him and perched him up on hishoulder.—Cincinnati Commercial Tri bune.

The Grandmother Daisy. "Let's make a daisy grandmamma," The children cried one day, And to the meadow off they sped To have a merry play.

They chose a daisy tall and fair, And snipped and pressed, until They shaped her snowy petals to A dainty cap and frill.

Upon the velvet centre, next They traced a kindly face And draped a kerchief round the stem. With sweet, old-fashioned grace.

When tired of play, they homeward

What did that daisy do? She nodded on her slender s alk And made believe t'was true.

Then all the daisies laughed with glee. "How human like we are!

And what a lovely thing it is .To have a grandmamma!" -Jean Moulton, in the Brown Book of Boston.

The New Baby. She is a very little girl, only five years old, but in the short period of her few years she has enjoyed a large experience of life with dolls of all kinds and descriptions, who, in the course of their existence under her loving but not always kind administrations, have undergone many vicissitudes, says the New York Times. So the little five-year-old, when there came a real live baby into the house. felt herself to be something of a connoisseur in children. When it was put into her arms, this real live baby, she regarded it with a critical air. "Isn't that a nice baby?" cried the nurse with the joyous pride with which a nurse always regards a new baby, in which she feels that she has a proprietary interest. "Yes," replied the little girl hesitatingly, "it's nice, but its head's loose."

What Hurt Him.

Little Frank was playing in the kitchen garden, when he was stung on the toe by a bee. He raised a perfect warwhoop as he ran to his mamma. "Oh, mamma! oh, mamma! my toe! my toe!"

"Why, what in the world is the matter with your toe, Frank." "Oh, it's bit! It's stung!"

"Bitten! stung! How?" cried his mother. "What stung you?" "A drate big fly wid a splinter in his tail!"-Exchange.

Time to Oil Up. FOR MICHIGAN PEOPLE.

Like every other complex machine, the human body has its periods for repair. Sleep is Nature's time for rest, when the repair shops of the brain make good the damage of the waking hours. The man who cannot sleep, or who suffers from headache, nervousness, lost appetite, indigestion, heart trouble or pain, is running with a hot box. Give the tired brain and worn-out nerves a chance to rest. Stop! It is time to oil up.

> "I was troubled for a long time with a stomach disor-der and terrible headaches. I could not rest or sleep and night after night would lie awake until three or four in the morning before I closed an eye. The doctors did not help me and I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine. I could see an improvement the second day, and in a few weeks my head and stomach trouble were gone."

State Items Which Will Be of General Interest.

Principal Events of the Past Few Days Which Have Occurred in Our Great State.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 18.—The Michlgan legislature of 1901 has so far progressed further in the transaction of public business than the previous legislature at the same date. The house of representatives Wednesday afternoon went into the committee of the whole and passed several bills, and considered and passed them, an unusually brilliant record for hard work. Numbers of local measures have already been passed by both branches of the legislature, and several have been signed by the governor and finally disposed of. Committee work in both branches is progressing satisfactorily and a respectable number of bills are sliding through the regula-tion legislative channels for their final disposal, thus piling up work for gen-

A bill to restrict the powers of the state tax commission and partly nullify its work, made its appearance in the house vesterday morning, fathered by Kerr of Houghton. Under its provisions the state tax commission will absolutely have no power over local assessing officers, and cannot dictate the assessed valuation at which any piece of property shall be placed upon the tax rolls. The house state affairs committee has reported out the Pan-American exposition appropriation bill at $40,000. It is now in the hands of the committee on ways and means. The Industrial School for Boys at Lansing asks the legislature for a maintenance appropriation of $70,000 a year, a large increase. The Jackson state prison will ask for an improvement appropriation of $90,000.

"BAND OF FORTY THIEVES"

Has Done Much Devilty, but It Has at Last Been Rounded Up.

Saginaw, Mich., Jan. 22.-For several months past the farmers of Brant township in this county have been the victims of a notorious gang of plunderers known as the "Band of Forty Thieves." Dozens of robberies have been committed and losses sustained approximating several thousands of dollars worth of farm products, such as pork, flour, wheat, poultry, harness,

A posse of deputy sheriffs has arrested five members of the Randall from that township, charged with the larceny of a quantity of blankets, harnesses, saws and axes. The men are lodged in the county jail here. They are Dennis Randall, aged 62; James, aged 52; Caleb, aged 49; George, aged 26, and Fred, aged 24.

COAL MINERS ARE DISSATISFIED.

Demand for Higher Wages Likety to Be Made in the Near Future,

Saginaw, Mich., Jan. 21.—According to the statement of a leading coal operator of this city, there is some trouble impending between the miners and the operators over the present scale of wages. There appears to be some dissatisfaction among the miners of Bay caunty, which has led to the impression that a demand for an increase of wages will soon be made. At the present time it is maintained by the operators of both Saginaw and Bay counties that the highest possible scale of wages is being paid to the men. The average price per ton now paid is about 80 cents, and Mr. Chappella, a leading mine owner, declares that it is higher than the operators can well afford to pay.

Newett is Not to Get There.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 22.—George A. Newett, editor of Iron Ore, published at Ishpeming, Mich., will not be a member of the state tax commission. This decision was reached after one of the bitterest battles waged in Michlgan politics for many a year. Governor Bliss told Newett's supporters Saturday that he could not appoint their man, but offered to name any one else they might recommend. It was Newett or nobody with them, and they went home.

Newett's friends assert that Chase Osborn, editor of the Sault Ste. Marie News and state railroad commissioner, led the opposition and that he was ably assisted by State Senator Gad Smith, of Marquette, who is said to have gone to Governor Bliss with a list of seventeen senators who would vote against the confirmation of Newett. Ösborn's opposition to Newett dates back to the Grand Rapids convention last summer, when Osborn, it is claimed, would have had the solid backing of the upper perinsula for gubernatorial honors but for Newett's

Good a Man as Her Husband.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 22.—Rev. E. E. Wood, of Richland, has a redoubtable spouse. Her husband has been very ill and unable to carry on his pastoral duties for some time. Mrs. Wood has filled his pulpit during his enforced absence and although she has neither posed as a woman preacher or as a strenuous advocate of woman's rights, she very creditably occupied the position. Her novel task was modestly entered into and quite unadvertised, but her enterprise in taking up the pastoral burden temporarily laid down by her husband has been the subject of much congratula-

Negaunee Mine Suddenly Flooded.

Negaunee, Mich., Jan. 19.-A sudden outbreak of water in a sub-level of the Negaunee mine has flooded lower portion of the old workings, causing a temporary suspension. All lownumns are disabled. There is no damage to the workings and it is expected mining operations can be resumed by next Monday.

Murdered at a Charivari.

Calumet, Mich., Jan. 21.—Hadley D. Sumner, a young man of good family, was bound over to the circuit court charged with the murder of Ben Martin. Martin was in a charivari at the wedding of Sumner's sister. He was pital. GAVE THE CLASS A "ROAST."

Sophs at the U. of M. Do "Catch It," Two

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 18. - The sophomore medical class was given the most caustic "roasting" by Dean Vaughan Wednesday that has ever been given a class in the department. For forty-five minutes the dean devoted his time to rehearsing the misdemeanors of the class since they entered college. The skull-cap stolen from a post-mortem subject, the abducted corpse and lastly, the riot which occurred a few days ago in which a janitor was pelted with snow balls, were gone over by the irate professor.

The philippic ended by the singling out of two students before the whole lecture section of 150 and committing them to a faculty examination. "I shall recommend you for expulsion from the university," thundered Dr. Vaughan. "You were implicated in the disgraceful actions referred to and are no longer fit to remain in this department."

These are the most drastic measures taken against students guilty of misbehavior in years. The affair has stirred up no end to talk on the campus. The student body is indignant, and as Dr. Vaughan is known as the "man of iron," and except Professor Wenley, the most independent pedagogue on the university pay roll, interesting developments are expected when the victims come up before the tribunal.

NO NECESSITY TO TAPPA KEG.

Being as How There Are Jugs Everywhere Wide Open.

Olivet, Mich., Jan. 19.—The students here were much surprised to read in a recent issue of a Grand Rapids newspaper an account of the organization of a new Greek letter society called the "I Tappa Keg." A list of officers and members were given. There is no such organization in this place.

Moreover the college authorities stoutly maintain that there is no occasion in this temperate community for tapping a keg. Clder is the popular beverage, but only jugs are used for the storage of this liquid refreshment.

Found His Long Lost Son.

Detroit, Jan. 21.—William Comfort, of Oakland county, Mich., has found his son at Willvale, La Porte county, Ind. He had been searching for the Comfort's story boy for ten years. is that the child was kidnaped by its mother about twelve years ago and placed in an Indiana orphanage, where as a waif the boy was adopted —taken by a family named Smith, residing at Willvale. The child was legally adopted by the foster parents, who will contest Comfort's claim.

Robbers Escape on a Handcar.

New Baltimore, Mich., Jan. 21.-William F. Sandell & Co.'s bank here was broken into Friday night by cracksmen, who forced open the safe and secured about $3,500. No one was aroused by the noise, and the thieves escaped with their booty. The sledge hammers, picks and other tools which were used in forcing the safe were left on the floor of the bank. The thieves escaped on a handcar, which they stole from the Rapid Railway toolhouse.

Gen. Alger Gripped by La Grippe.

Detroit, Jan. 19.—General Alger has suffered a relapse and is again confined to his bed. One week ago last Monday he left his office not feeling well, and before the end of the day a cold had set in with marked symptoms of grip. The general had been for some weeks in a condition of health which had made him susceptible to the disease, and the day after the first signs of the cold were apparent he took

Smallpox in the Family.

Escanaba, Mich., Jan. 19.—Smallpox has been discovered in the family of Joseph Wickert, a cigar manufacturer. His wife is down with the disease and the family, including two children and a cousin, are quarantined and being guarded by two special policemen. Wickert's cigar factory is on the second floor of his residence and the twelve men employed there have been denied admittance by the health au-

Manual Training Is Popular. Negaunee, Mich., Jan. 22.—The subject of manual training is receiving the attention of all the prominent educators of the upper peninsula. It has already been adopted in the schools of Ishpeming, Menominee and Ironwood. At the institute of the U. P. Teachers' association to be held in Escanaba, Jan. 23, 24 and 25, there is to be a special meeting at which manual training will be discussed in all its phases.

Hold-Up Men Captured at Sidnaw. Sidnaw, Mich., Jan. 19.—The robbers who held up the proprietor of a meat market at Ironwood Thursday night have been captured here by Deputy Sheriffs Johnson and Pequette. Sheriff Jeffrey, of Ironwood, took them to Ironwood. They gave their names as Richard Manning and Roscoe De Campbell. Part of the money, $76.57, was found on them.

Suicided on a Train. Cassopolis, Mich., Jan. 21.-J. E. Scottford, who represented himself in Vicksburg as an insurance agent from Chicago, suicided on a Chicago and Grand Trunk train by taking prusic acid. The following note was found on his person: "Boys, be kind to me. Have been sick long time, have no money and no friends. Give me decent burial if possible."

His Hiding Place Was Found. Escanaba, Mich., Jan. 18.—John Gannon, a saloonkeeper, was robbed of $1,000 which he had placed between the mattress and springs of his bed. The police have a clue, but the man
