THE LATE WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

only a momentary stay of the cabinet officers at the threshold of the death chamber. Then they withdrew, the tears streaming down their faces and the words of intense grief choking in their throats. After they left the sick room the physicians rallied him to consciousness, and the president asked almost immediately that his wife be brought to him.

His Wife Holds His Hand.

The doctors fell back into the shadows of the room as Mrs. McKinley came through the doorway. The strong face of the dying man lighted up with a faint smile as their hands were clasped. She sat beside him and realize that the message of death had come. Mr. Cortelyou halted at the door and summoning all of his effort said:

"Gentlemen, the president has passed away."

Realizing, too, the momentous nature of the event to the people of the country, Mr. Cortelyou stepped through the outer doorway of the Milburn house and advancing down the walk to the newspaper men at the front gate, calmly announced: "The president died at 2:15 o'clock."

Thus closed the final chapter in the life of William McKinley.

DAY WAS BEGUN IN HOPE

With the Morning He Was Apparently Again on the Road to Recovery.

Buffalo, Sept. 14.—The president's last day, which ended in despair, was begun in hope. The illness that came on Thursday afternoon, when the organs of digestion refused to handle the solid food that had been taken earlier in the day, had seemingly been overcome by midnight, and when the new day came it found the president relieved and resting. Hope, that had suddenly dropped from the high place which it had held, began to revive. The healing of the wounds had progressed favorably, general conditions were, in the main, quite satisfactory, and the immediate future of the case seemed to hold no threat. The physicians who had been in almost constant attendance during the night, parted, and the "watch" in the sick room was reduced.

The president, in his last period of consciousness, which ended about 7:40, murmured the words of the hymn "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and his last audible conscious words, as taken down by Dr. Mann at the bedside, were: "Good-by, all good-by. It is God's way. His will be done." Then his mind began to wander, and soon he completely lost consciousness.

Suddenly there was a failure of the heart, and a general call for the physicians, nurses and friends of the president was issued. Desperate measures were resorted to in order to stimulate the heart, and the sinking spell was over by 4 a. m. It was decided to continue the treatment, and the physicians laid their greatest hope on weathering the day. It was agreed that if the wounded man could be carried for twenty-four hours his chances would be very favorable, for the wounds were healing splendidly. It was decided to summon Dr. W. W. Johnston, of Washington, and Dr. E. G. Janeway, of New York, heart specialists, and telegrams were hurried out asking that they come at once.

Before dawn a dozen of the relatives and friends of the president arrived at the Milburn house. They assembled in the drawing room, where they waited for tidings from the sick room above them. The physicians assured them that the president had a fighting chance for his life, and to the hope that in the end victory would be his they clung all day. Hundreds of visitors came during the morning, and if the police had not kept the streets clear and barred the entrance to Delaware avenue there would have been thousands. Senator Hanna, the close personal and political friend of the president, hurried up from Cleveland by special train.

Their regret and sympathy were profound. The day developed but little encouragement for them, however. During the forenoon the president made a slight gain of strength and held it well into the afternoon. His physicians announced that they had again given him nourishment, and it was thought that possibly there was a chance for a further gain of strength. It was known, however, that he was in a very serious state, and every interest centered in the room in the Milburn home where the struggle was in progress.

Suddenly, at 5 p. m. there was a repetition of the heart attack, and those in the presence of the stricken man knew that the end was at hand.

held his hand. Despite her physical weakness she bore up bravely under the ordeal.

The president, in his last period of consciousness, which ended about 7:40, chanted the words of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and his last audible conscious words, as taken down by Dr. Mann at the bedside, were: "Good-by, all; good-by. It is God's way. His will be done."

Then his mind began to wander, and soon he completely lost consciousness.

Immediate Relatives Summoned.

Midnight came and still the tremendous vitality of the president was battling against dissolution. Another hour passed and still another. At 2 o'clock Dr. Rixey was the only physician in the death chamber. The others were in an adjoining room, while the relatives, cabinet officers and nearest friends were gathered in silent groups in the apartments below. As he watched and waited Dr. Rixey observed a slight convulsive tremor. The president had entered the valley of the shadow of death. Word was at once taken to the immediate relatives who were not present to hasten for the last look upon the president in life. They came in groups, the women weeping and the men bowed and sobbing in their intense grief.

"The President is Dead."

The minutes were now flying and it was 2:15 o'clock. Silent and motionless, the circle of loving friends stood about the bedside. Dr. Rixey leaned forward and placed his ear close to the breast of the expiring president. Then he straightened up and made an effort to speak.

"The president is dead," he said.

The president had passed away peacefully, without the convulsive struggle of death. It was as though he had fallen asleep. As they gazed on the face of the martyred president only the sobs of the mourners broke the silence of this chamber of death. Mr. Cortelyou had been one of the first to rouse himself after the stunning effect of the announcement of death. He passed from the room and down the stairway.

Announcement to the Cabinet.

There in the large drawing-room were still assembled the members of the cabinet, officials high in the administration and the confidence of the president. As he appeared at the threshold of the room they seemed to

DEATH SCENE AT BUFFALO.

His Last Words, Spoken to His Wife, "God's Will Be Done."

HOPE GOES DOWN WITH THE SUN

Death Comes in the Early Hours of the Coming Day.

The silent form of William McKinley was borne from Buffalo in impressive state Monday morning and taken on its last journey to the national capital. The procession from the city hall to the train started at 7:30 o'clock.

Just eleven days ago the president went to the Pan-American exposition in full health and vigor. He was received with an enthusiasm that was unprecedented in the annals of the city and for twenty-four hours, enjoyed himself thoroughly. The story of the foulest of assassinations, the pathetic stride to recovery, as outwardly demonstrated, while death was slowly working on the vitals, the breathless hopes of a nation and loved ones, the terrible twenty-four hours of suspense when grim death made its final demand against human skill—all are matters of history now.

Thousands See Sad Pageant.

The body of the honored chief executive, who went to Buffalo only a few days ago as the guest of the city, was borne away in silent splendor, his career ended as far as his dominant personality is concerned, although his policies will remain. Thousands upon thousands watched the impressive procession Monday morning moving toward the depot.

It was doubly impressive because of its lack of gorgeousness and because of the fact that, following closely behind the pall covered corpse of the dead president, came the successor of the title, President Roosevelt. The funeral train left the New York Central station at 8:34 o'clock.

Life in State in Washington.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Between two masses of people, one on each side of Pennsylvania avenue, crowded thick from curb to building line, and overflowing to the houses and into the side streets, the body of William McKinley was, at 9 a. m. today, taken to rest awhile in a magnificently somber catafalque directly under the dome, in the rotunda of the Capital.

Escorted in front by soldiers, sailors and marines, and followed by thousands in carriages and on foot, the casket occupied the center of the procession as it was the center of observation.

Secretary Gage, upon being informed of the death of President McKinley and requested to make some comment upon the latter's life, said:

"It seems like mockery to attempt to eulogize him. No words can carry from one mind to another a proper understanding of that unique personality. He himself must be his best interpreter. His acts, his utterances, with their indescribable charm, have made him known to the American people. Through these they understand and appreciate him."

tion. Immediately following the hearse was the late president's family and immediately next was the only living ex-president, Grover Cleveland. The president headed the next division of the procession. In line were many veterans who had fought with McKinley in the war for the Union.

Upon arrival at the Capitol the casket was removed from the hearse and placed upon the catafalque. Then religious services were held, led by the leading Methodist clergymen of this city. After the service the public was admitted and passed through the rotunda for a last look at the casket that contains the honored remains of William McKinley.

At 8 p. m. the remains of the late president were placed aboard the train and the journey to Canton was begun.

End of the Final Journey.

Canton, O., Sept. 18.—After fifteen hours of travel the remains of the late President McKinley arrived here—his old home—at 11 a. m. Wednesday. Twenty minutes later a procession in which was included Troop A of Cleveland, and many hundreds in carriages and on foot, escorted the body to the court house, where it lay in state until 9 p. m. All along the line from Washington en route here Tuesday night the people were up and waiting to see the remains of the president pass by. At the cities and towns there were thousands collected. And all watched the somber train in silence.

AT THE BEGINNING OF THE END.

About Sunset the Triumph of Death Began to Show Itself.

Buffalo, Sept. 14.—Before 6 p. m. yesterday it was clear to those at the president's bedside that he was dying and preparations were made for the last sad offices of farewell from those who were nearest and dearest to him. Oxygen had been administered steadily, but with little effect in keeping back the approach of death. The president came out of one period of unconsciousness only to relapse into another. But in this period, when his mind was partially clear, occurred a series of events of profoundly touching character. Down stairs, with strained and tear-stained faces, members of the cabinet were grouped in anxious waiting. They knew the end was near.

One by one they ascended the stairway—Secretary Root, Secretary Hitchcock and Attorney General Knox. Secretary Wilson also was there, but he held back, not wishing to see the president in his last agony. There was President McKinley's Favorite Hymn.

Lead, kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
Lead Thou me on;
The night is dark, and I am far from home;
Lead Thou me on;
Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene—one step enough for me.

I was not ever thus, nor prayed that thou
Shouldst lead me on;
I loved to choose and see my path; but now
Lead Thou me on.
I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my will: remember not past years.

So long Thy power hath blest, be sure it still Will lead me on
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone;
And with the morn those angel faces smile
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile.

Peaches and their Variation.

FRESH PEACH PIE—Line a granite pan with good crust—puff paste, if preferred. Fifteen minutes before serving fill the shell with luscious peaches which have been previously peeled and sweetened. Pour over them a cupful of whipped cream.

PEACH SHORTCAKE—Three cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, three heaping tablespoonfuls butter, half a teaspoonful of salt; add enough water to make a soft dough. Roll thin and spread butter between the two crusts, so that they can be separated easily. Bake in a quick oven and have ready fresh peaches, sweetened, to fill. When ready serve with a pitcher of sweet cream.

A DELICIOUS DESSERT—Bake a small angel food cake in a round tin which has a hole in the middle. When cold, take a sharp knife and enlarge the hole in the center. Fill with sliced peaches, after placing it on a handsome dish, and cover with a pint of whipped cream. Let it stand a few moments before serving.

PEACH SPONGE—Cook a quart of peaches soft in a syrup of sugar and water and rub through a sieve. Dissolve half a box of gelatin in half a cupful of cold water; then add to the peaches and let cool. When well set add the well beaten whites of three eggs, and turn into a mold. Serve when perfectly firm with a boiled custard or whipped cream.

PEACH ICE—Peel a dozen freestone peaches which are ripe, remove the pits and mash. Dissolve a pound of coffee A sugar in a quart of cold water, add to the peach pulp and freeze.

PEACH ICE CREAM—Heat a pint of sweet cream, a pint of new milk, a heaping coffee-cupful of sugar, and let it come to a boil; cool and add a quart of fresh peach pulp made by rubbing peaches through a colander, freeze. When nearly frozen some prefer to stir in small pieces of ripe peaches.

COMPOTE OF PEACHES—Boil a pound of granulated sugar in a pint of cold water, skim carefully, peel ten ripe freestone peaches and cut in halves, crack the stones and blanch the meats. When the syrup comes to a boil put in the peaches and kernels, and simmer slowly to prevent breaking. When tender skim out and drain on the skimmer. Allow an ounce of gelatin to a quart of juice, soak in cold water, add the juice of six lemons, wet a mold in cold water, pour in about an inch of juice, and let it harden on ice, then place a layer of peaches and another of juice, and let it harden. Continue this until the mold is full. Serve for dessert.

How to Make Jam.

To plagiarize Lowell, "Will it do to say anything more about jams?" They are easily put up, but they are even more easily bought, and with the corner grocer's supply within reach, it seems almost useless to give directions for their making. But there are jams that the grocer does not have on his shelves. From him one can buy berries and certain other fruits in jam, but there are others he does not recon in his stock. They might well bear the stamp "Made at Home," for one is not likely to find them anywhere else.

The rules for jam-making are more flexible than those that govern the compounding of preserves, or perhaps the variety in which fruits may be combined in jams seems to give greater scope. For among the best jams are those that contain more than one kind of fruit.

PEACH AND PINEAPPLE JAM—Peel and stone good-sized, firm peaches before weighing them. Allow three-quarters of a pound of granulated sugar to every pound of the fruit and one pound of pineapple, peeled and shredded fine, to every five pounds of peaches. The pineapple should be very ripe. Put this and the peaches together in a preserving-kettle and cook slowly, stirring often and well from the bottom. After the boiling point is reached, cook for three-quarters of an hour, stirring constantly. At the end of this time, put in the sugar, let the conserve return to the boil, and simmer after this for fifteen minutes, removing any scum that may rise to the surface. Put up while hot in pint jars or in jelly-glasses.

PEAR AND PINEAPPLE JAM—Make this in the same way as the peach and pineapple jam, peeling and coring the pears before weighing them. The addition of the pineapple gives a delicious flavor to what would otherwise be an insipid jam.

QUINCE AND LEMON JAM—Peel, core and slice quinces, reserving the parings and cores for jelly. Put the quinces over the fire in just enough water to cover them, and stew until they are soft. The allowance of sugar should be the same for this as for the peach marmalade—three-quarters of a pound to every pound of the fruit. It will take a good while to reduce the quinces to the requisite softness, and they must be stirred and beaten often with a stout wooden spoon. When the fruit is well broken in pieces, add the sugar, and at the same time put in the juice of one large lemon for every two pounds of the fruit. Boil ten minutes after it has again come to the boil, and after the kettle has been removed from the fire, add the chopped peel of one lemon for every five pounds of the conserve. This is a good and an unusual jam.

CRAB-APPLE JAM—Quarter crab-apples as you would for jelly, and put them in a kettle, with only enough water to keep them from scorching. They will have to cook a long time before they will be soft enough, for they must not only be crushed, but also be put through a vegetable press, and thus reduce to a soft pulp. Not until after this has been done is the sugar added to them. This should be in the usual proportion of three-quarters of a pound of sugar to one of the crab-apples. When the pulp and the sugar are at the boiling point, they should be allowed to cook for ten minutes. At the last moment, after all the scum has been removed and the jam is just ready to take from the fire, throw in a handful of carefully-washed leaves of the rose geranium. They will give a delicious flavor to the jam.—Harpers Bazar.

Popular Salads.

Fashion holds sway in many provinces of human life, and eating is no exception. The new century enters with a special furor for novel and attractive salads. Everything must be decorative, for that is the latest fad in food. The arrangement of a salad gives a special opportunity for pleasing effects, both in form and color. That the occasion is improved has been well shown at the fine entertainments of the last few months. This will undoubtedly be a marked feature during the year with the ambitious caterers, whether public or private. We must all cast about for the prettiest and most tempting salads within our power. Pretty nearly everything edible may go into a salad. The astonishing variety of the ingredients is a chief feature of the salads now popular. Not merely fish, flesh and fowl, but the whole range of vegetables, fruits, nuts, jelly and dairy products. Fruit salads, in which nut meats sometimes appear, are special favorites on many handsome tables.

Pineapple, cut in dice, mixed in celery and covered with a rich mayonnaise dressing, is one of the favorites. Oranges, each slice divided into triangular sections; bananas, in thin, crosswise slices, shaddock or grapefruit, as they are commonly called (one of the best salad fruits), white grapes, skinned and cut in halves or quarters, with the seeds removed, are all much used, and strawberries are now considered a highly desirable addition. These fruit flavors are often combined, as white grape and orange, or orange with bananas, strawberries with the shaddock. Apples (tart and thinly sliced) are particularly good with celery, or they may be used with the various nut meats. With any of these salads a mayonnaise dressing is used, and it is improved for use upon fruit by combining with an equal quantity of whipped cream. The best way to prepare the shaddock is to cut it across in halves, then take out the pulp with a spoon in neat bits, carefully avoiding the bitter inner skin, as well as rejecting seeds. All these are served upon a bed of crisp lettuce leaves.

Blanched dandelion, or even the tenderest leaves of the wild plant, make an excellent salad now much in favor. Tiny cakes of cottage cheese or fish-balls, not much larger than a hickory nut, are served with it, or with lettuce and cress, and both are very good with a mayonnaise dressing. Or a cupful of very thick sour cream (not bitter) whipped thoroughly and flavored with a saltspoonful of salt, one of mustard, half a saltspoonful of paprika or white pepper and a table-spoonful of lemon juice, makes an excellent dressing for many salads.

If salad oil is not liked, a good boiled dressing is made in this way; Beat the yolks of two eggs thoroughly; then stir in carefully a saltspoonful of salt, a small teaspoonful of made mustard, and a few drops of a good pepper sauce. Stir this into six tablespoonfuls of hot vinegar in a double boiler. Add, by degrees, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, and stir carefully until it thickens. Remove from the fire and add the whites of the two eggs, beaten to a stiff froth, or still better, beat in, when cold, a cupful of whipped cream. Use very cold.

The chief art of making a good mayonnaise, which some cooks think so difficult, is in having the materials as cold as possible, and beginning very slowly. Beat the raw yolks of two eggs very thoroughly, add salt and cayenne or paprika, then a mere drop of oil at a time, thinning from time to time with a few drops of lemon juice or fine vinegar. A common mistake is using too much vinegar. Two tablespoonfuls is enough with a cupful of oil. The amount of both varies to suit individual taste; a pint of oil to two yolks of eggs is not too much for those who enjoy a free use of oil. Mustard is good with some meats, but for a delicate mayonnaise it is best omitted. Long and patient stirring is indispensable. The simple French dressing of salt, cayenne, oil and vinegar, lightly mixed and sprinkled over the lettuce or material is excellent with a plain salad, and frequently used in combination with a covering of mayonnaise.

With summer vegetables the increase of salad material is almost unlimited. Asparagus tips and green peas are both very desirable. Radishes and cucumbers—either fresh or pickled—are sliced thinly and chopped, also mixed with chopped nuts for a variety. Tomatoes and small cucumbers are hollowed out and filled with salad mixture; sliced and diced tomatoes and a firm jelly made with gelatine and tomatoes strained, are all much used. Very small new potatoes are good in a salad. Lima beans, either whole or put through a sifter, chopped or sliced beet, cabbage and cauliflower, are all good and well suited for salad use.

Artichokes are a great favorite with some persons. In fact, there is hardly any vegetable that may not be utilized in making up the salad list. Stoned olives, raisins and dates, seeded and perhaps stuffed with a almond paste, browned and chopped almonds, and similar ornamental additions, are all available for elaboration.

Nasturtium leaves and flowers make one of the prettiest of edible adornments.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

And Why When Diagnosed It Is Usually Fatal.

Bright's disease, from which Pierre Lorillard died, is such a common affection and in its chronic form is so uniformly fatal that when once the diagnosis is made there is little ultimate hope for the patient.

The ailment starts as an acute or chronic inflammation of the substance of the kidneys and so seriously interferes with the excretion of these organs that the victim is poisoned by the accumulation of excrementitious materials in the blood. These natural filters of the body become clogged and congestive, and the irritative substances which should be eliminated exercise their baneful effect on heart, brain and lungs, giving rise in turn to varied distressing symptoms associated with disordered circulation, stupor and difficult breathing. Dropsy of chest, of abdominal cavity and lower limbs also makes its appearance toward the end, adding to the extreme suffering of the patient.

Death is usually caused by the effusion upon the brain surface of the overcharged watery elements of the blood, inducing the fatal coma. Commonly associated with this condition is a dropsy of the lung substance, which explains the difficult respiration so often noticed in such cases.

MICHIGAN'S NORTH LAND-II

Our visit at Higgins lake proved so delightful that our stay was prolonged nearly a week beyond our allotted time, but reluctantly one Monday morning we packed our trunk and valises and drove to town to take the 10 o'clock "Cannon Ball" over the Michigan Central for Mackinac City. It was with feelings of regret that we bade adieu to the many friends with whom we had passed a delightful fortnight, and left behind us cosy "Onway Lodge" whose hospitable shelter had been so pleasant. The day was overcast but for once we welcomed rain as the marshes just east of our resort had been on fire for several days and the showers would complete the work of extinguishing them, which the rain of the day before had begun.

Sugar Loaf Rock, Mackinac.

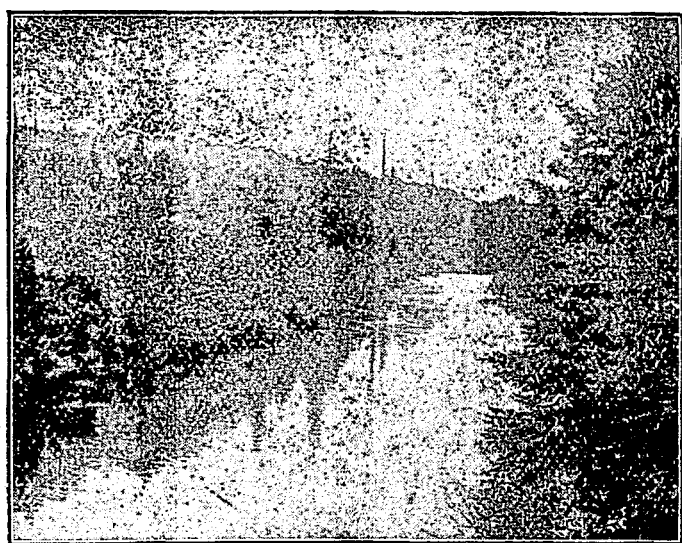

As we drove over the marsh we saw acres and acres of burned over marsh where the hay had been completely destroyed by fire, and at one spot the fire had killed a fine piece of young timber that was just becoming of value, compelling the owner to cut it at once to save anything of value. The loss of the hay was felt severely by several farmers near the marsh, who usually cut these marshes over to secure feed for their stock, one man having nearly 20 tons stacked up ready to put in the barn and when the fire came up was only able to save two loads. In coming over the marsh we crossed a deer trail used by the deer in going to the lake. This trail was well pronounced being worn about four inches deep by the deer, and our driver informed us that it had been worn down as deep as 18 inches, in former years so numerous had been the deer.

When we arrived at Rosecommon station we unloaded, and after checking our trunk home, as we had decided to go north in light marching order, we found ourselves with nearly an hour upon our hands, so we "did" the town a second time. Once more aboard the train the trip up was through an interesting country. At Grayling we began to get an idea of the immense proportions of the lumber trade as our train pulled into the depot between long piles of logs and sawed lumber. Grazing is quite an industry here as the cut over land affords fine pasture, one company alone owning 1500 head of cattle which are allowed to range at will, and well informed residents told us that cattle buyers paid fancy prices for the cattle raised here, as they excelled in quality the cattle raised in any part of the state. After passing Grayling the timber was much more plentiful and the towns of Frederic and Waters were passed when we came to Otsego lake a beautiful body of water that is the head of the Au

Sable river, a fine view of which was had from the car windows.

All of the various stations on the line of the Michigan Central are favorite stopping places for the hunters and fishermen who find abundant fish and game within easy reach of the railroad depots. Sallings, Gaylord, Vanderbilt and Trowbridge were passed and as the train pulled into Wolverine we looked from the window with some curiosity as we thought possibly we might see Wes Weaver or some of his family, but we saw no familiar faces. After leaving Wolverine we came to Rondo and the scenery increased in picturesqueness as we traveled northward and at Indian river we began to get glimpses of the famous "Inland Route" from Petoskey to Cheboygan which is a favorite trip with tourists. On this route small steamers take excursions down narrow rivers and in some places so crooked that the steamer has to run upon one bank and back around to make the short turns in the river. At Indian river we saw one of the steamers coming down the river and corn planted along the river lands made it appear almost as if the steamer was going through a corn field, as we could see nothing whatever of the river. At Topinabee we saw the famous Mullet lake and for six miles our train skirted the shores of this beautiful lake arriving at Mullet Lake station. At Topinabee we began to see specimens of the "Noble Red Man", but alas the specimens we saw were strangely like other people, only the straight black hair and the prominent cheek bones and nose betrayed the child of the forest, and the marks of the deadly firewater were visible on many of the features. Just after leaving Mullet Lake occurred one of those little diversions which so often happen on the train. A man and a little girl had boarded our train and by the time the train had gathered considerable headway the little girl wanted a drink, whereupon the father took her to the front end of the car where the ice water tank was situated and while the girl was drinking her father open-length we saw our steamer coming and after it had reached the dock we boarded it and secured comfortable seats on the upper deck in order to more fully enjoy the voyage across the straits.

The water was simply fine and as the "Wau-Kon" left the dock and started for Mackinac Island, we just drank in the glorious air and felt like a lot of young colts just turned out to play. As we approached Mackinac Island we had a view that we shall never forget. The town rises up from the waters edge and covers the hillside with the dottings of white buildings amid the dark green foliage, and up on the plateau stands "The Grand" hotel a small village in itself with accommodations of 1,000 guests. The old fort with its whitewashed buildings and walls stand high above the town and seems as one gazes that they were indeed for importance in days of "Auld lang syne." Our party on landing went to the "John Jacob Astor House" a long white building with dormer windows, kept just as it had been when used as a tavern during the palmy day of the Astor Fur Company, even to the big brass knocker on the door. The house was as neat as wax, and a curious mixture of antique and modern with the whitewashed walls and old fashioned batten doors and then each room lit with electric lights. In the dining room we fell in love with the massive antique sideboard and the curiously carved old fashioned mahogany stands used to set the trays upon, and were sorely tempted to break the commandment relative to covetousness.

We spent considerable time driving about the island and taking in the various points, Arch Rock, Sugar Loaf, Lover's Leap, Point Lookout, Fort Holmes and others. The island was ceded by the U. S. Government to the state of Michigan for park purposes, and the roads have been all made either by the U. S. or state government and wind in and out among the trees which in some places meet overhead making the drives charming indeed.

At Fort Holmes we climbed to the top of the observatory and there high above the ground had a magnificent view of the island and the strait and watched the distant steamers as they ploughed their way through the dark blue waters of the strait. Fort Mackinac was also interesting although ye editor did that part of the sight seeing for the entire party as the sight of the stairs leading up the cliff was too much for the rest of our party and they decided to rest while ye editor took the fort. The climb convinced us that we were either "wind broke" or that we had added some avoirdupois since residing in Michigan, but once at the top the sight amply repaid the climb as the view was grand, and as we walked about the walls we mused over the past and thought of the stories that the walls could tell if they could speak. It is on this island that Constance Fenimore Woolson has laid the scenes of her interesting novel "Anne" and the old fort, and the old mission church seemed clothed with new interest as we recalled the descriptions so vividly portrayed by this talented author. The house in which "Anne" resided was burned a number of years ago, but the old fort and mission church still remain.

One of the most interesting sights of the island is the stores along the street which runs along the waters edge, and the crowds of jolly tourists all jostling each other good naturedly while they bought Indian relics made in Patterson, N. J. and hand work made in Chicago, or genuine Mexican burnt leather goods made while you wait. An interesting side trip from Mackinac Island is the trip by steamer to Les Cheneaux Islands or "The Snows" as they are called. Our party planned to take this trip upon our return from the upper peninsula, but we didn't do it owing to a lack of time, so we have that trip coming to us.

Our time card called us imperiously, and much as we would have liked to remain longer, we could not do so and we took the steamer "Algoma" for St. Ignace and the "Soo" more extended notice of which we reserve for another week.

People who trade at our store always go away satisfied. We keep everything found in an up-to-date grocery. Phone No. 22.

PROCLAMATION BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

BUFFALO, Sept. 14.—President Roosevelt tonight issued the following proclamation.

By the President of the United States.—A Proclamation.—A terrible bereavement has befallen our people. The president of the United States has been struck down; a crime committed not only against the chief magistrate, but against every lawabiding and liberty-loving citizen.

President McKinley crowned a life of largest love for his fellow men, of most earnest endeavor for their welfare, by a death of Christian fortitude; and both the way in which he lived his life and the way in which, in the supreme hour of trial, he met his death will remain forever a precious heritage of our people.

It is meet that we as a nation express our abiding love and reverence for his life, our deep sorrow for his untimely death.

Now, therefore I Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States of America do appoint Thursday next, September 19, the day on which the body of the dead president will be laid in its last earthly resting place, as a day of mourning and prayer throughout the United States. I earnestly recommend all the people to assemble on that day in their respective places of divine worship, there to bow down in submission to the will of Almighty God and to pay out of full hearts their homage of love and reverence to the great and good president whose death has smitten the nation with bitter grief.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington the 14th day of September, A. D. 1901, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-seventh.

By the president: THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

JOHN HAY, Secretary of State.

PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, SEPTEMBER 14, 1901
TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN:

William McKinley, the twenty-fifth president of the United States, lies dead at Buffalo, the third chief executive of the union to be stricken by the bloody hands of assassination. The nation bows in agonized grief at the side of his bier, where the world is sending tributes of praise for the manly man, the far-sighted statesman, the devoted patriot, the gallant soldier, the model husband and tender father. His life was the exemplification of the cardinal virtues of Christian integrity, nobility of character and devotion to duty, and was an inspiration to all true Americans. History will write for him one of her brightest and most glorious pages. As he was beloved, so will his death be deplored. In the light of his martyrdom, vanishes all striving. Death has silenced the mighty brain and stilled the warm heart in the very hour when the nation's needs are greatest. He had piloted the country through perils the darkest since the days of civil war, to the time of outlining the wise policies which the nation must pursue in its career as a world-wide power. Even as he was called to death, the people were yet drinking in eagerly the words of his last public address wherein he pointed out with prophetic vision the path this country must tread, the path of duty and stern responsibility.

God will pardon the people if they cannot see clearly and accept only blindly the president's dying words "It is God's way. His will be done." The years he has been at the head of the nation have been years great with momentous events, a war in the cause of humanity has healed the wounds of civil strife and planted the stars and stripes on the mountain top, where all the world may see. The people are to be congratulated that the law of succession places the presidency in the hands of a man who has been tested in the furnace heat of national requirements and not a false detected. May God's richest blessings rest upon Theodore Roosevelt in the great office to which he has been called.

In testimony of the grief of the people of the state of Michigan, it is directed that the capitol be draped in mourning and that the flags upon all public buildings be displayed at half mast until after the interment; that on the day of the funeral all departments of the state government be closed and all business as far as practicable suspended. Let there be special services in the schools and all places of worship on that day, a day of supplication to Almighty God that He may in the future as in the past guide His people, protecting and prospering them. It is recommended that tomorrow every pulpit call upon the Divine Father that He comfort the widow of the president and the people who mourn. Let the flag of the nation everywhere within the commonwealth be at half mast, for the nation's chief is dead.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the state to be affixed at Lansing, this 14th day of September, A. D. 1901, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-sixth. Signed

A. T. BLISS, Governor.

By the Governor: FRED M. WARNER, Secretary of State.

PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT OF BUCHANAN VILLAGE

WHEREAS, Our nation has been called to mourn the loss by death of the chief Executive William McKinley, whose untimely removal comes as a personal loss to every patriotic citizen of this land. It is fitting that as a mark of respect to the memory of our noble president, our citizens should refrain from transaction of all business on Thursday, September 19, the day set apart for the funeral, close their places of business and repair to the place appointed for the memorial service and show by their presence, their sympathy and grief at the loss our nation has sustained.

Done this sixteenth day of September, nineteen hundred one, at Buchanan, Mich.

The Nation Mourns.

Throughout the entire world today sympathy in word and deed is tendered a nation whose loss of its chief executive comes as a personal bereavement to rich and poor alike, for no one man has touched the heart-strings of American citizens as has William McKinley. A man in every sense who had been the architect of his own fortunes, and who had by his noble mind and high aims been called to fill the most elevated position of trust and responsibility within the gift of the American people. He entered upon the discharge of his duties with a great mind filled with plans and hopes for the peace, prosperity and happiness of his beloved land, and has lived to see the fruition of those plans and the realization of the hopes, beyond his most sanguine anticipations. His personal integrity and his beautiful domestic life have endeared him to every patriotic heart in our land, and every head is bowed with grief at the loss that has been sustained, and a great wave of sympathy goes out to the widow who, seated by her dead, is doubly bereft. The memory of William McKinley, lawyer, soldier, patriot, statesman, christian gentleman and tender husband, will be ever fresh in American hearts.

COMMON COUNCIL

A special meeting of the common council called by the president convened at the council chambers Monday evening, September 16, 1901.

Present trustees Pears, Remington, Monro, Kingery, Curtis, Glover.

The following resolutions were read by the clerk.

WHEREAS, This community has been saddened and inexpressibly shocked by the news of the death of our nation's Chief Executive William McKinley, therefore be it

Resolved, That the common council of the village of Buchanan at this special session do express on behalf of the citizens of this village their profound sorrow and their deep sense of the loss that has been sustained by our nation, in the removal by the assassin's bullet, of our beloved President, William McKinley whose wisdom, patience, courage and patriotism during the years he has filled his high position of trust has endeared him to every heart in this broad land, and be it further,

Resolved, That we extend to the widow of our late President our heartfelt sympathy in the loss she has sustained by the death of a kind and loving husband, whose first and last thoughts were for her, and be it further

Resolved, That in memory of the illustrious dead, the village charter be draped in mourning until after the day of the funeral. Also be it

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon the records of the village, published in the village papers, and a copy sent to the widow of our late president.

Motion was then made by Pears supported by Kingery that the resolution as read be adopted and proclamation be issued. Ayes, Pears, Remington, Monro, Kingery, Curtis, Glover.

President Black then appointed the necessary committees.

Motion by Curtis supported by Remington to adjourn until Friday evening, September 20, 1901, at 8 o'clock.

BUCHANAN GETS CREAMERY

Stock Company to Operate it.

For the past three months negotiations have been going on for the organization and establishment of a creamery in Buchanan and this week witnessed the successful outcome of the effort. The amount of stock subscribed is $4550 and it is divided into shares of $100 each. The following are the stockholders in the enterprise.

A. F. Howe, F. W. Howe, W. B. French, C. H. French, Wm. C. Lyddick, B. Chamberlain, E. Kelsey, Wm. Brocius, Thos. Housewerth, C. F. Pears, Amos C. Spaulding, John Redden, Peter Womer, L. S. Bronson, J. W. Beistle, A. C. Roe, Wm. Monro, E. S. Roe, E. B. Storm, Chas. Hoffman, J. E. Vite, Harry B. Howe, Frederick Andrews, C. D. Kent, J. H. Snodgrass, Adam Lyddick, John Conrad, Frank Nelson, Henry Riffer, H. H. Beck, W. H. Keller, Rudolph Renkie, S. A. Ferguson, Wm. Wray, Geo. Swift, Frederick Linsenmeyer, D. L. Boardman, Harry Rough, Andrew G. Conrad, Wm. Conrad, A. B. Clark, Wenger & Hathaway, C. B. Roe, Dr. O. Curtis.

A meeting of the stockholders will be held on Thursday morning at ten o'clock to appoint an executive committee to select a suitable site and superintend erection of the plant. The town is to be congratulated upon this new project for it will mean the circulation of a large amount of money in our town and will be a great benefit to the farmers of this section who keep cows to supply the creamery with milk.

Hoyt's "A Bunch of Keys."

At the opera house Sept. 1. Again we hear the jingle of the "Bunch of Keys." This dainty and tuneful farce has yearly toured the country and never failed to delight the people and compensate the management. The management announces a lot of new and pretty girls and up-to-date songs and novelties. The "Bunch of Keys" never gets rusty and we hope never will. It is the best farce comedy Hoyt ever wrote.

The stores and many of the residences are being appropriately draped in mourning for our martyred president.

Buchanan Mourns.

In common with every locality from the cross roads to the city, Buchanan is today mingling its grief and tears with theirs over the loss of our beloved William McKinley. The news of his death was received Saturday morning with expressions of deep sorrow and regret. Immediately upon receipt of the news of the death, as if by common impulse, symbols of mourning being displayed from the stores and residences of the village so general and extensive that to particularize would be to publish a directory of the town. The common council met Monday night, passed resolutions of respect to the memory of the illustrious dead, and President Geo. H. Black issued a proclamation, which we print in another column. The following committees were appointed by President Black to arrange for memorial services on Thursday, the day of the funeral: Arrangements, Rev. J. R. Neirgarth, D. H. Bower, W. A. Palmer and J. C. Dick; Music, Wm. Monro, Mrs. E. S. Dodd, Mrs. D. L. Boardman, Mrs. D. H. Bower and Mr. F. W. Mead; Decoration, Mr. Sig. Desenberg, Mrs. H. D. Rough and Mr. D. L. Boardman. The committees have arranged for a service at the Evangelical church Thursday afternoon at two o'clock. Tributes will be paid by Rev. W. J. Douglass, Dr. R. Henderson, Messrs. A. C. Roe and A. A. Worthington, and a biography will be prepared and read by Rev. C. E. Marvin. Appropriate music will be rendered and all places of business and factories will shut down from 1 until 5 o'clock. At the Union High School Monday morning appropriate exercises were conducted at the chapel exercises, Rev. C. E. Marvin and Mr. A. A. Worthington making addresses, and various members of the school board making brief remarks. Mrs. W. L. Mercer rendering a beautiful solo. The schools will be closed Thursday afternoon.

Dead at the White House.

Written for the Record.

There are sorrow and tears at the White House today;

The dreaded good by has been said.

From that home all hope has drifted away.

For William McKinley is dead.

The heart that beat truly for country and home—

Its throbbings no longer go on;

Silent and still is his last feeble moan.

To death's pallid arms he has gone.

He fell by the hand of an assassin most dread.

By a cowardly act was he called

From the home he loved, to sleep with the dead.

While a nation weeps sadly appalled.

Oh Lincoln! wake up thou art not alone.

The assassin is thoughtful of thee;

Wasp friendly the hand of him that's been shorn.

Of trust and honors like thee.

Ah! is the land where freedom doth dwell

And ruled by truth and the right?

Is there no wild storm cloud rising to swell

The gloom of a dark coming night?

Come not to our shores ye foreign grown band,

To live in our country to hate,

Sowing seeds of discord and strife in this land,

Dwelling under our flag its harvest to wait

Ther's danger ahead for this nation. Wake up!

Boast not of your safety to-day

Least sorrows more great shall rest in thy cup.

Oh! another while dormant they lay.

Tuesday was pay day at the dam, Contractor Gribben circulating quite a bunch of ready cash. He is having difficulty in securing all the help he needs.

The fire department had a little practice Tuesday night when a wood shed belonging to the house of Mrs. Doan on Berrien street, was discovered to be on fire. The blaze was quickly extinguished.

Mr. Joseph A. Steele and Miss Francis L. Hawk both of Buchanan were married at the Evangelical parsonage Saturday evening by J. R. Niergarth. The Record extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Steele.

Two private Pullman cars passed through Buchanan last Thursday over the Michigan Central. One belonged to the president of the Chicago & Northwestern and the other to the president of the Queen and Crescent route.

The remains of Mr. John Hames of Chicago were brought here on Friday last for interment. The deceased was a nephew of Mrs. DeArmond and was a former resident of Buchanan. His death occurred from typhoid fever. He was 46 years of age.

E. S. Roe will have a treat for the ladies beginning next Wednesday September 25 and closing 28th. It will be a special exhibition of the famous Peninsular Steel Ranges. Refreshments will be served, and every one interested is especially invited to attend.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Miss Lena Bronson daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Bronson, and Mr. J. Ellison Miller son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Miller. The wedding will take place next Wednesday at six p. m. at the home of the bride's parents.

Elder Wm. M. Roe occupied the pulpit of the Christian church at Rolling Prairie last Sunday. He has been invited to participate in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Christian church at South Bend next Sunday. Of the charter members of this church only five or six are now living.

The reception at the Christian church last Friday evening was a great success. The church was tastefully decorated with flowers and palms, as well as branches of beautiful foliage. After prayer by Rev. C. E. Marvin a pleasing program of recitations and music was rendered after which a pleasant social time was had and every one welcomed Pastor Black and his estimable wife back to their field of labor here.

At the monthly meeting of the Farmers' Mutual fire insurance company held September 7 in Buchanan seven persons filed their applications to fill the position vacated by the death of the late C. H. Farnum. The Board appointed W. S. Hallman of Hagar and Ed. Matrau of Bainbridge as agents until next February when an election will be held and a Director will be elected. All policy holders however are eligible and he who can command the most votes from the policy holders in the three counties will be elected a director. The amount of insurance taken during the month was $258,000

Found Dead.

The body of an unknown man was found dead between the tracks of the Michigan Central railroad on Wednesday morning about one mile west of Buchanan. The body was discovered by a conductor of a freight train who notified the Buchanan section men who went back and brought the body to the freight house. Justice Keller empanelled the following men as jurors: J. W. Beistle, John Camp, S. A. Wood, M. B. Gardner, C. F. Howe and Ed. Covell who viewed the remains and adjourned the inquest until 8 o'clock Wednesday night. The body was that of a man apparently about 35 years of age and was clothed in a neat suit of dark trousers and checked coat wearing a cap. Nothing to identify him was found except the initials "S. R. B." tattooed on his arm, no papers, or any thing whatever being found in his pockets. His skull was crushed having evidently been struck by a train but whether he had fallen from a train or had been walking on the track could not be determined.

Hoyt's "A Bunch of Keys."

There are more girls with pretty faces in Manager Bothner's presentation of "A Bunch of Keys," than have been projected into theatrical vision in many a day. If the performance possessed no other attraction it would be notable in this because the entire group of women are young and unconventional, and they look so much fresher and brighter than the usual crowd in farce comedy. "A Bunch of Keys" will be at the opera house Sept. 25.

B. R. DESENBERG & BRO. 1901 FALL ANNOUNCEMENT.

We take pleasure in presenting to our patrons for their inspection the largest and best assorted stock of merchandise that we have ever shown. Every department is complete. We are naming the very lowest prices on all classes of goods. We not only guarantee our prices to be the very lowest (here or elsewhere) but we are not inconsistent when we assert that on nearly all goods our prices are much lower than our competitors. We need you to make our business a success—you need us because of our being connected with a number of stores giving us a great buying capacity enabling us to give you the very best of values and save you money.

DRY GOODS DEPT. CLOAKS AND DRESS GOODS.

It is not too early to announce the arrival of our New Cloaks and Dress Goods. We have had many inquiries about them and we can only say that the arrivals to date excel any former showing. We also show some fancy conceits in Silk and Flannel Waist Patterns and Ready-to-Wear Waists.

SHOE DEPT. SERVICEABLE SHOES.

That is the kind the Desenberg Shoes are—They stand the wear and look good all the time. They represent the product of modern machinery, skilled workmen, and up-to-date ideas, with thirty-five years' experience back of it all. Style fit and service are all combined in our Shoes, which are winning their way to popularity with all neat dressers here. We have Shoes for everybody, men, women and children, in all styles of Leather and all the new shapes. We guarantee both the shoe and the price.

CLOTHING.

Our Clothing Department has made extraordinary preparations for the fall and winter. We have ransacked every market with the one idea uppermost in our minds—to secure for our patrons the best possible values for their money. We are positive we have succeeded, we know we are in a condition to offer dependable clothing at lower prices than the same can be obtained elsewhere, we care not where it may be. We have added a new line of men's clothing that is superior to ordinary tailor made goods. It is made with the shape retaining front and is perfect fitting. Those of our customers who have seen it are very enthusiastic in its praise. If you have not seen it you should do so,

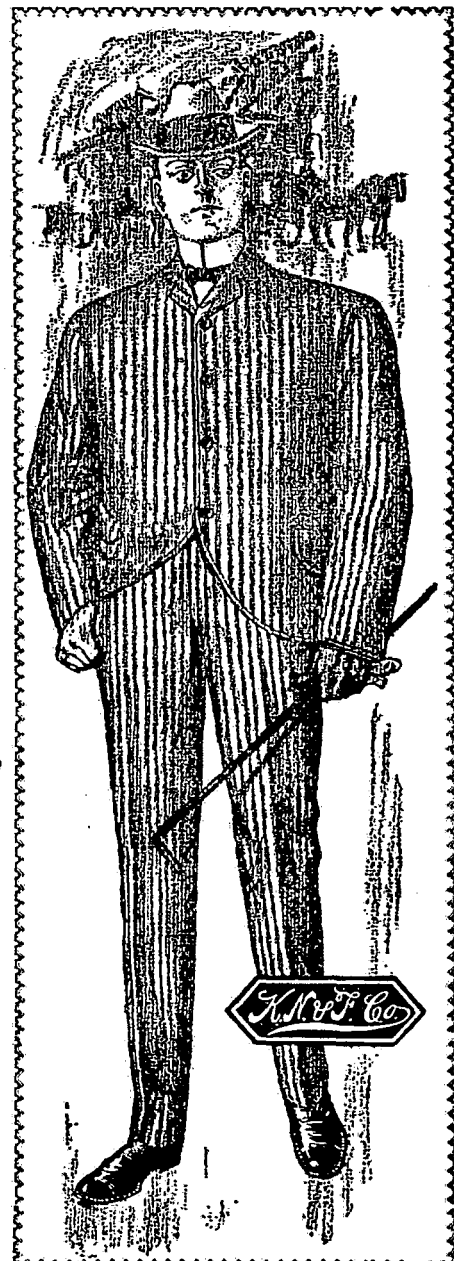

BOYS' AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING.

We take especial pride in our Boys' and Children's Clothing. We are offering the right styles at prices that cannot be duplicated elsewhere. Those who have seen our Boys' and Children's Suits are surprised that we can sell such goods at such extraordinary low prices.

It is simply impossible to get an idea of the values without seeing the goods. We ask that you inspect our offerings. We are confident that if you will do so you will find our statements correct.

Our store will be closed
Monday, Sept. 23rd.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

Molly laughed. "You think that I am afraid? Very well, sir. If you persist, you shall have a lesson in love-making that will cost your life."

"Everything is fair in love. Come, madam, you will please to get out of the chair."

"What a villain is this!" said Molly. "He is in love with my fortune, and he pretends it is my person. He thinks to steal my fortune when he runs away with me. You are a highwayman, Mr. Rising, a common thief and a common robber. You shall be hanged outside Norwich castle."

Tom Rising swore a great oath, calling, in his blasphemous way, upon the Lord to inflict dire pains and penalties upon him if he should resign the lovely object of his affection now in his possession. You have heard that he had the reputation of a reckless daredevil who stuck at nothing, was daunted by nothing and was like a bulldog for his tenacity.

"Understand, madam," he concluded this declaration, "I am resolved to marry you—resolved. Bear that in mind."

"And I, sir, am resolved that I will not marry you—resolved. Bear that in mind."

"Never yet did I resolve upon anything but I had it. No; never yet."

"Mr. Rising, you think you have me in your power. You shall see. Once more I ask you, as a gentleman, to send me back. Remember, I have many friends. The whole town, high and low, will be presently out after me, scouring the country in every direction."

"In an hour you will be at Wootton."

The parson hath promised to await us there. You shall be my wife within one short hour."

"You waste words, sir."

"You will have to alight, madam. The post chaise is here to carry us to Wootton, where the parson waits to marry us. In an hour, I say, you shall be my wife."

Molly looked out of the other window. The post chaise was there with its pair of horses and the postboy waiting at the horses' heads. She would have to make her stand at once, therefore. To get into the post chaise with that man would be dangerous, even though she was as strong as himself, and, since she was not a drinker of wine, she was in better condition.

"I looked round at the house," she told me afterward. "I thought that if I could get into the house I might gain some time—perhaps I could bar the door, perhaps I could find that griddle or the frying pan of which I spoke. Or if it came to using the bodkin there would be more room for my arm in a house than in a chair or a chaise. So I had one more parley in order to gain time and then slipped out."

"Sir," she said, "I give you one more chance of retaining the name and reputation of gentleman. Carry me back or else await the vengeance of my friends. I warn you solemnly that murder will be done before I marry you; understand, sir, murder of you or of your confederates or of myself."

She spoke with so much calmness and with so much resolution that she aroused all his native obstinacy. Besides it was now too late. The news of the abduction would be all over Lynn; he must carry the thing through. He swore another loud and blasphemous oath. Heavens! How he was punished! How swiftly and speedily!

Molly stepped out of the chair. Tom Rising, his hat in hand, again bowed low. "Madam," he said, "you are well advised. Pray let me hand you into the chaise."

She made no reply, but, rushing past him, darted into the house. She stumbled down one step and found herself in a room where the twilight outside could not penetrate. It was quite dark. She closed the door behind her and bolted it, finding a bolt in the usual place.

Then she waited a moment, thinking what she could do next. A rustling and a footstep showed that she was not alone.

"Who is there?" she cried. "Is there no light?"

She heard the striking of flint and steel; she saw the sputtering yellow light of a match, and by its flickering she discerned an old woman trying to light a candle—a rushlight in a tin frame, with holes at the sides.

Molly looked quietly round the room. A knife lay on the table. She took it up. It was one of the rough clasp knives used by rustics when they eat their dinners under the hedge. She stepped forward and took the light from the old woman's hand.

"Quick!" she said. "Who is in the house?"

"No one except myself. He said the house was to be kept clear tonight."

"Can they get in?"

"They can kick the house down if they like, it's so old and crazy."

"Is there an upper room?"

The old woman pointed to the far corner. Molly now perceived that the place was the kitchen, the taproom, the sitting room and all. A table was in the middle; a settle was standing beside the empty fireplace; there was a bench or two; mugs and cups of wood, pewter and common ware stood on the mantelpiece; a side of bacon hung in the chimney. In the corner to which the old woman pointed was a ladder. Molly ran across the room. At the top of the ladder there was a square opening large enough for her passage. She went up and found herself by the dim rushlight in an upper chamber the floor of which was covered with flock beds laid on the boards. There was one small frame of glass in the roof, a window which was not made to open. The place reeked with foul air worse than the orlop deck or the hold after a voyage.

Down below she heard her captor kicking at the door. Apparently the old woman drew back the bolt, for he came in noisily and swearing horribly. Apparently the old woman pointed to the ladder, or perhaps the glimmer from the room above guided him. He came to the ladder and tried persuasion.

"Molly, my dear," he cried, "come down, come down! I won't harm you. Upon my honor I will not. I want only to put you into the chaise and carry you off to be married. Molly, you are the loveliest girl in the county. Molly, I say, there is nobody can hold a candle to you. Molly, I will make you as happy as the day is long. Molly, I love you ten times as well as that proud lord. He will not marry you. There isn't a man in all the company I will not fight for your sake. Don't think I will let any other man have you. Confound it, Molly, why don't you answer?"

For now she kept silence. The more he parleyed the more time she gained. But she found one or two loose boards that had been used for laying in trestles for the support of the flock beds. She laid them across the trapdoor. There was, however, nothing to keep them down.

Then Tom Rising began to swear at the old woman.

"You fool! You blundering, silly, jenny ass of a fool! What the devil did you give her the candle for?"

"I didn't give it. She took it."

"Go get another candle, then."

"There are no more candles, master," said the old woman in her feeble voice.

"She's got the only one."

"Molly, if you won't come down, I shall force my way up."

Still she kept silence.

He took two steps up the ladder and lifted the boards, showing the fingers of his left hand. Molly applied her knife gently, but dexterously; but it touching the bone and taught him what to expect. He drew back with a cry of rage.

"Come down," he said, "or it will be worse for you. Come down, I say."

He had not reckoned on a knife and on the girl's courage in using it.

"You have no food up there," he went on. "Your window is only a light in the roof looking away from the road. No one from Lynn will come this way. If they do, they will see nothing. You had better come down. Molly, I shall wait here for a month. I shall starve you out. Do you hear? I will set fire to the thatch and burn you out! You shall come down!"

So he raved and raged. Meantime the two chairmen, who were his own servants, stood pole in hand, one in front of the house and one behind, to prevent an escape, but this was impossible, because the room, as you have heard, had no other window than a small, square opening in the roof, in which was fitted a piece of coarse, common glass.

"Jack," she told me, "when he talked of setting fire to the thatch, I confess I trembled, because, you see, my knife would not help me there, and, indeed, I think he would have done it, because he was like one that has gone mad with rage. He was like a mad bull. He stormed; he raged; he cursed and swore; he called me all the names you ever heard of, such names as the sailors call their sweethearts when they are in a rage with them, and then he called me all the endearing names, such as loveliest of my sex, fairest nymph, tenderest beauty. What a man! What a man!"

Meantime she made no answer whatever, and the darkness and the silence and the obstinacy of the girl were driving the unfortunate lover to a kind of madness, and I know not what would have happened.

"Molly," he said, "willy nilly, down you come. I shall tear down the thatch. I would burn you out, but I would not spoil your beauty. I shall tear down the thatch, and my men shall carry you down."

Then Molly made answer.

"I have a knife in my possession. Do not think that I am afraid to use it. The first man who lays hands on me I will kill, whether it is you or your servants."

"That we shall see. Look you, Molly, you are only a merchant's daughter, and I am a gentleman. Do you think I value that compared with marrying you? Not one whit. When we are married, I will buy more land. I will be the greatest landowner of the whole county. Sir Robert will make me sheriff. I will go into parliament. Molly, he will make me a peer. Come down, I say."

"Quick!" she said. "Who is in the house?"

"No one except myself. He said the house was to be kept clear tonight."

"Can they get in?"

"They can kick the house down if they like, it's so old and crazy."

"Is there an upper room?"

The old woman pointed to the far corner. Molly now perceived that the place was the kitchen, the taproom, the sitting room and all. A table was in the middle; a settle was standing beside the empty fireplace; there was a bench or two; mugs and cups of wood, pewter and common ware stood on the mantelpiece; a side of bacon hung in

WOMEN'S WORK.

In Kansas there is full municipal suffrage.

In Montana women may vote on local taxation.

In Delaware municipal suffrage exists in several towns.

Already the small edge of the wedge has made its way far into the oak of resistance.

In Arkansas and Missouri women may vote on petition on the granting of saloon licenses.

In Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho women have full suffrage, including a vote for presidential electors.

In a number of cities in New York they may vote on the issuance of bonds for public improvements.

In Illinois the women passed a bill for the better accommodation of women students at the state university and the colleges, and it was vetoed by the governor.

If men wish to keep women out of the pool of politics they will do well to make haste and give them all they ask along these lines, for there is no other way to stay their advance.

In Vermont the federation had a bill introduced asking that women be appointed on the boards of control of the asylums where women are confined. This unreasonable (?) demand was slain forthwith.

The bills were strictly humanitarian in character, except, possibly, that to admit women to the state textile school. The other raised the age of consent (it is now 10 years), and the third prohibited the employment of children under 12 years of age in the factories. All three bills were defeated.

In many respects Southern women seem less afraid of being called radical than their eastern sisters, and it will not be surprising if the ballot should come to them long before it is wielded by the women of the central, eastern and New-England states. That it will come is as certain as that the republic is to endure. It is impossible to doubt one without questioning the other.

The experience of Georgia women during the past year is such as to drive them pell-mell, willynilly. They had three pet measures which they advocated in their legislature as ably as they could, and when it is remembered that Rebecca Douglas Lowe, the gracious and accomplished president of the general federation, lives in Atlanta, as does also Mrs. John K. Otley, one of the most brilliant club women of the whole country, it is not to be supposed for an instant that "influence" did not have an opportunity to show its perfect work.

In Pennsylvania women may vote on local improvements by petitioning for or against them.—Ellis Meredith in Ainslee's.

STAGE WHISPERS.

Miss Katie Rooney, daughter of the late Pat Rooney, and "Bilby" Barry, Jr., will be seen the coming season in the parts of the soubrette and principal comedian respectively in "McFadden's Row of Flats."

In the picturesque melodrama "Lost in the Desert" a decidedly novel feature has been added for the coming season in "a leap for life" from a cliff twenty feet high to a bamboo tree. The hero makes the leap and the tree bends to the stage with his weight. It is said to be decidedly sensational.

There is a "coon" song in Willard Spenser's comedy-opera, "Miss Bob White," but it is not in "rag-time," for which relief Mr. Spenser is entitled to much credit. It is entitled "Watermelon" and is thoroughly typical and redolent of the south. It is something on the style of Stephen Foster and does not depend for its success upon syncopation.

Joseph Jefferson in his advice to aspiring comedians says: "Get a laugh the minute you make your first entrance on the stage. Then your audience is prepared to laugh at you on the slightest provocation." Acting on Mr. Jefferson's valuable suggestion, Willard Spenser introduces his comedians in his new comedy-opera, "Miss Bob White," in the most ludicrous manner possible. They are tumbled out of an automobile which crosses the stage at a very rapid pace, and the manner in which they are spilled creates such laughter that the actors are immediately received with roars of laughter.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Childhood's Happy Home.

Mr. Editor.

Feeling that a trip to the scenes of our boyhood days in Canada, which we had not seen for twenty years, would do us good, at the same time give us a rest from the cares and vexations of business, we packed our grip and started via the Grand Trunk R. R. from South Bend at midnight one day of last month, securing a comfortable seat, a sleeping berth being out of the question on account of the immense travel to the Pan American. We endeavored to rest and were almost lost in sleep by the time the train had reached Charlotte, Mich., when we were invaded by a couple of hundred boys and girls in a very hilarious condition, from various causes, chiefly spiritual ferment, sleep was driven from our eyelids, and not until Lansing was reached where they left us, was quiet restored; on reaching Port Huron the pangs of hunger made themselves manifest, we resorted to the dining car where every thing was plenty, but if we had not broken our store teeth in attempting to masticate the same kind of beef we have in this end of Michigan, we would have fared well. Soon after the memorable tunnel was passed through and we were in the domain of King Edward. The country from Sarina to London is very level, the farms looked thrifty, vegetation was abundant, the farms were clean, well stocked, fine buildings, barns being in abundance. At noon we were at the end of our journey in Oxford Co. the great cheese centre of Canada; the land here is rolling, well watered and wooded; there is very little wheat raised in this section of Canada, in fact it is the exception to find a farmer who can make any success in raising it on account of repeated failures, when years ago it was their main crop, now they chiefly raise oats, potatoes, buckwheat, corn, grass and fruit chiefly apples which are a short crop this year. They raise corn a cross between our dent corn and the old fashioned yankee corn of New York state, but it does not mature on account of the shortness of their summer season, frost comes too soon; they cut and cure for fodder alone. The main industry of this section is cheese making and raising of hogs. Every farmer has a herd of cows of the Holstein and Durham breed from 15 to 35 in number, and then milk from these are taken every morning to the cheese manufactories and milk condensers, they receive pay for their milk each month, averaging from $5 to $7 a cow per month and they have the whey returned which they depend upon largely to raise their pigs. The County of Oxford is considered the garden of Canada, they have the finest soil, and the streams numerous, trout streams especially with no protection. There are upward of 250 cheese factories within its borders and they are run to their full capacity, the products being exported to England principally. In the town of Ingersoll a place of about 7000 inhabitants there is a pork and beef packing establishment the largest in the dominion, a mammoth milk condensing factory, a large agricultural implement factory, second to none in the province, as well as other industries, all of which give employment to hundreds of employees. Silos are in vogue with the farmers but the milk from cows fed on their contents is used only by the cheese factories as the condenser will not use any of it on account of the fermentation of the food.

Many old friends were missing having gone to the "unknown beyond" but many were left whose friendship we were pleased to renew.

The news of the assassination of our beloved President reached them after our arrival as a great shock to every body and great anxiety for his recovery was shown. After two weeks of pleasant intercourse with relatives and old friends we returned by the same route to Buchanan feeling that we had been rested and were paid for our visit.

Jade originally signified any rude person, without regard to sex.

The largest fresh-water lake is Lake Superior, 32,000 square miles, or nearly one-half the size of Missouri.

Noah Webster, from first to last, spent seventeen years on his "Dictionary of the English Language."

Jezabel, the Queen of Ahab, according to one of the rabbis, had "black eyes that were set on fire by hell."

The longest recorded hair growing on the female head was eight feet. The longest recorded beard was twelve feet.

The most ductile metal is platinum. Wires have been made of it very little thicker than the threads of a spider web.

The largest country in one body and under one government is the Russian empire. It comprises 8,539,136 square miles.

The largest inland sea is the Mediterranean, 977,000 square miles, or more than three times the size of Texas.

The most extensive system of canals in the world is in the Great Plain of China, which is fairly seamed with canals.

The glazing of pens, in some varieties considered an important operation, is done with lac dissolved in naphtha.

Under the Mogul emperors extensive systems of roads were constructed in India, connecting all leading points in the peninsula.

Xantippe, the redoubtable wife of Socrates, if her contemporaries are to be believed, was as ugly as her famous husband.

Martha Washington had a singularly strong, noble face, with a natural dignity of manner that attracted while it commanded respect.

WONDERFUL ACCOMPLISHMENT

Around the World in One Day—A Great Achievement in News Gathering.

In the matter of newspapers, the first impulse is, of course, to provide yourself with the local journal, which presents in detail the important happenings in your immediate vicinity, the doings of your friends and neighbors and keeps watch for you over your city or county government. But in these days of rapid transit and electrical communication, the community is no longer a unit in itself. Even the farmer, with his free rural delivery, is beginning to feel himself a part of the great whole, and to recognize the necessity for keeping in touch with the world and its doings. This can be effectively realized only by taking a metropolitan daily, and fortunately, the developments of modern journalism have made it possible to do this at so slight an expense that it will hardly be noticed. When you can get the Detroit Evening News for 6 cents a week, you have no excuse for not knowing the latest international, national and state affairs. Its enterprise and activity have laid all the nations of the globe and the islands of the sea under tribute for the information they can furnish, and the news in every department of human endeavor from empire building to berry picking flows into its columns for the benefit of its continually increasing and always satisfied army of readers. It spends money not only to get the news but to have it written and edited in the brightest, freshest and crispest fashion possible, and to provide such intelligent comment and explanation as double and treble its value. If you see it in the News, it's new, and it isn't colored by prejudice, partisanship or private interest.

Styles for the Winter.

The easiest and simplest way we can suggest for our readers to get a good idea of the styles that will be popular this winter is to buy a copy of the October Delinicator, just on sale at every news stand. The Delinicator for October foreshadows, by means of its New York, Paris and London connections, those tendencies of fashion that will certainly prevail.

In addition to the fashion features and practical dressmaking advice that has made the Delinicator famous, the October number is full of good general reading, most tastefully illustrated under the immediate direction of the well-known artist, William Martin Johnson. Mr. Johnson's work is known to lovers of the beautiful, by reason of the Garfield edition of Ken Hur, as well as some other books of large sale. Mr. Johnson believes in illustrations that illustrate, rather than in pictures that only ornament a page. The whole October number of the Delinicator is full of interest to men as well as to women.

Theodore Roosevelt's account of his mountain-lion hunt last winter in Colorado will appear in the October and November numbers of Scribner's under the title "With the Cougar Hounds." The heroes of the chase are the most intelligent hounds who are trained to chase the cougar and lynx into the trees. A great deal of new information in regard to the cougar is contained in the first of these articles, which is a valuable contribution to natural history. Both articles will be illustrated from photographs by Philip K. Stewart, who was one of the hunting party. Stewart was a well-known Yale athlete.

WISE OR OTHERWISE.

A useless life is but a living death. Suspensions are usually worse than facts.

Money invested in knowledge pays the best interest.

Charity gives itself rich and covetousness hoards itself poor.

There are times when loquacity tells nothing and silence tells much.

The man with but a single idea always has an exalted opinion of himself.

It is better to be beaten in trying to do right than it is to succeed in doing wrong.

The value of a man's advice depends upon the success he has achieved in following it.

The art of conversation consists in knowing where to begin, what to say and when to stop.

Politeness is like an air cushion; there may be nothing in it, but it eases many a hard jolt.

The man who looks wise as an owl when giving others advice is apt to make a fool of himself by not using some of it.

There is an element of success in every man, but he seldom gets it in operation until some smart woman begins to tread on his heels.

HOUSEHOLD CHAT.

A tablespoonful of flour added to the starch keeps curtains stiff much longer.

Always have your kettles filled with boiling water. A kettleful of boiling water has saved a life before now.

If after blackleading the grate, and polishing in the usual way it is rubbed over with a piece of old velvet, a wonderful glossy appearance will be the result.

Never put soda in the water in which you wash china that has any gilding on it. Soda injures the gilding. Instead use soap, which answers just as well and has no ill effects.

To keep fish, never put one on top of another, but wring a clean cloth out of cold water in which some salt has been dissolved. Wrap the fish separately in this, lay on a dish and keep in the coolest place possible.

A safe vermin destroyer may be made with a very strong solution of alum in hot water. Apply it to furniture and crevices in the wall with a paint brush. This is a sure destruction to insects of all kinds and is harmless otherwise.

The following powder is useful to prevent moths from destroying clothes, etc.: Take one dram of lupulin, two ounces of Scotch snuff, one ounce of powdered camphor, one ounce of black pepper and four ounces of cedar tannus. Mix thoroughly and sprinkle on the articles required to be protected.

In making siang dissolve half a pound of glue in a little hot water. Then pour on nearly a gallon of boiling water, stirring carefully all the time, so that it may mix well. A little of this added to ordinary white-wash prevents the white from rubbing off on dresses, etc. Brushed while hot over a wall that is to be papered, it makes the paper stick better. A wall that has been whitewashed should be brushed over with hot vinegar before papering or the paper will not stick.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Replies are not always answers. Indolence is to the mind what rust is to iron.

Teeth are like verbs—regular, irregular and defective.

Charity and bookbinders cover a multitude of faults.

Deliberate long before doing what 't is impossible to undo.

If a girl is really displeased with a man she doesn't tell him so.

Most men get married before they are old enough to know better.

Tell a boy to do as he pleases and he will do it without a murmur.

Probably the man whose wife owns a pug dog has the sympathy of the dog.

Young widows, like industrious gardeners, are anxious to get rid of their weeds.

The amateur pickpocket is always waiting for an opportunity to get his hand in.

The woman who does washing by the day is willing to hang out almost anywhere.

If a husband and wife are unable to go away for the summer they can start a quarrel at home and have a little outing.

Boston is to have forty new portable schoolhouses to follow the shifting school population. There is no escape for the Boston youth.

If you have nothing but justice on your side, don't go to law. The other fellow's money and political pull will wither your justice like January frost.

To dig with a shovel, is praying to the earth; to cast your fish-hook into the water, is praying to the stream.

The answer is a little bit hard on the fish—sometimes.

There is one redeeming feature about a folding bed; even the most timid female doesn't have to look under it before retiring.—Chicago News.

JOHNSON'S TABLE-TALK.

No man but a blockhead ever wrote except for money.

Cultivate not only the corn-fields of the mind but the pleasure-grounds also.

Woman is like the reed, which bends to every breeze, but breaks not in the tempest.

While grief is fresh, every attempt to divert only irritates. You must wait till grief be digested, and then amusement will dissipate the remains of it.

A man should be careful never to tell tales of himself to his own disadvantage. People may be amused, and laugh at the time; but they will be remembered and brought out against him on some subsequent occasion.

A man will please more upon the whole by negative qualities than by positive; by never offending than by giving a great deal of delight. In the first place, men hate more steadily than they love, and if I have said something to hurt a man once, I shall not get the better of this by saying many things to please him.

A man cannot with propriety speak of himself, except he relates simple facts, as, "I was at Richmond;" or, what depends on mensuration, as, "I am six feet high." He is sure he has been at Richmond; he is sure he is six feet high; but he cannot be sure he is wise, or that he has any other excellence. Then all censure of a man's self is oblique praise. It is in order to show how much he can spare. It has all the invidiousness of self-praise, and all the reproach of falsehood.

RIPANS TABULES

while not mysterious or miraculous in its curative qualities, is a simple formula prescribed by the best physicians for disorders of the digestive organs. Just little Tabules, easy to take, easy to buy and quick to act. If your trouble is Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Heartburn, and the like, no need of calling a physician. Ripans Tabules contain exactly what he would tell you to take. Permanent cure follows a fair trial. No uncertainty about it.

ONE GIVES RELIEF.

There is scarcely any condition of ill health that is not benefited by the occasional use of a R.I.P.A.N.S. Tabule, and the price, ten for five cents, does not bear them. From any home or justify any one in enduring ill that are easily cured. A family bottle containing 100 tabules is sold for 60 cents. For children the chocolate coated sort, 72 for 25 cents, are recommended. For sale by druggists.

LAXAKOLA

THE GREAT TONIC LAXATIVE

If you have sour stomach, indigestion, biliousness, constipation, bad breath, dizziness, inactive liver, heartburn, kidney troubles, backache, loss of appetite, insomnia, lack of energy, bad blood, blotched or muddy skin, or any symptoms and disorders which tell the story of bad bowels and an impaired digestive system, Laxakola Will Cure You.

It will clean out the bowels, stimulate the liver and kidneys, strengthen the mucous membranes of the stomach, purify your blood and put you "on your feet" again. Your appetite will return, your bowels move regularly, your liver and kidneys cease to trouble you, your skin will clear and freshen and you will feel the old time energy and buoyancy.

Mothers seeking the proper medicine to give their little ones for constipation, diarrhoea, colic and similar troubles, will find Laxakola an ideal medicine for children. It keeps their bowels regular without pain or griping, acts as a general tonic, assists nature, aids digestion, relieves restlessness, clears the coated tongue, reduces fever, causes refreshing, restful sleep and makes them well, happy and hearty. Children like it and ask for it.

School Notes.

High School.

The High School now enrolls 76 pupils, 30 of whom are non-residents. More than half the pupils in the High School are taking advantage of the course in music. This work is in charge of Miss Shaw and the class meets every Friday.

The enrollment for each of the classes in the High School is as follows: Bookkeeping 26, Geometry 18, 9th grade Algebra 25, 10th grade Algebra 16, 11th grade Algebra 20, American History 20, English History 16, General History 17, English Composition 27, English Classics 16, Rhetoric 24, English Literature 8, beginning Latin 15, Caesar 5, Cicero 4, Virgil 2, German 13, 2d year German 7, Zoology 22, Geology 10, Physics 22, Chemistry 6.

Our pupils were greatly affected by what was said to them Monday morning by Rev. Marvin, Mr. Worthington and members of the school board. Such occasions cannot help but have some lasting influence and all must understand the meaning of our present national calamity.

EIGHTH GRADE

We have 33 pupils enrolled. We are very grateful to our Superintendent for the profitable hour we spent with the High School Monday morning. The portrayal of the beautiful life of our late president, by speakers present, will leave a lasting impression on our minds and inspire us to noble living.

The able manner in which the drawing and music classes take hold of their work speaks well for last year's work in those branches, under the direction of Miss Shaw.

We are grateful to Claude Rynearson for our new pencil rack.

Golden rod adds greatly to the appearance of our room. We shall study the flower this week.

The contest in reading last week was very close. Class I received an average standing of 83; class II 85.

A member of our literature class evidently saw new meaning in Longfellow's "Psalm of Life," for he rendered a portion of it thus:

"In the world's broad field of battle,
In the 'beeswax' of life,"

SEVENTH GRADE

There are 32 pupils now enrolled in the 7th grade.

The pupils in this grade are taking up the study of American history for the first time and they show a great deal of interest for this subject.

Edna Troutfetter was absent on account of sickness.

SIXTH GRADE

29 pupils are enrolled in the grade, Frank Guess having entered on Monday.

The subject of Earthquakes and Volcanoes are being studied in geography this week.

One corner of our board is decorated with a drawing of the "May flower" drawn by Perly Shetterly.

The story of the "Ten Boys" is being read in the grade.

FIFTH GRADE

The year's work began with an enrollment of 38. In higher fifth there are 14, in lower fifth 24.

Myrtle Blodgett plays the march for us this month.

Both divisions are reviewing "The Village Blacksmith" and learning selections from "Hiawatha." They are finding out all they can about Longfellow.

Mattie Royer wrote the best composition Wednesday about "Our School."

Harold Roe, Guy Burks, Charlie Farling each brought specimens for our work in Physiology.

FOURTH GRADE

Only two pupils have had marks of absence against them so far this year.

Hildred Camp was absent several days last week on account of sickness.

Ruth Boardman and Charlie Southerton each brought a picture to help beautify our school room.

Miss Hubbell and Miss Graham were visitors in the room recently.

We appreciate the new blackboards. More blackboard space was much needed.

THIRD GRADE

No. of pupils enrolled the first week 29.

Jesse Eisenhart was a new pupil this week.

Nada Woodworth, Paul Whits have been absent on account of sickness.

The pupils have learned the poem "September," by Helen Hunt Jackson. The following topics have been studied, Child Life, American Indian, Plant Life and Flowers.

The pupils are interested in

NATION HONORS DEAD. NEW PILOT ON BOARD

This knowledge soon spread to the street, and the waiting newspaper men bulletined it to the world. Every one who came from the house was sought for an expression as to the state of the president. Each succeeding report was worse than his predecessor, and the official bulletins were absolutely without hope. And so it wore on to midnight, 1 o'clock, 2 o'clock, and the end.

SERVICES AT MILBURN HOUSE.

Relatives And Friends Gather for Their Last Farewell.

Buffalo, Sept. 17.—The funeral of William McKinley, the devoted husband, loyal friend, and type of all that is best in the simple American citizen, took place in the house wherein he died, at 11 o'clock Sunday morning.

Only the president's wife, his relatives, his personal friends, and his official family were gathered for their last farewell. It was simply the funeral of William McKinley, the man. The extremity of pathos was reached when, before the ceremony, Mrs. McKinley, the poor, grief-crushed widow, had been led into the chamber by her physician, Dr. Rixey, and had sat awhile alone with him who had supported and comforted her through all their years of wedded life. Her support was gone, but she had not broken down. Dry-eyed, she gazed upon him. She fondled his face. She did not seem to realize he was dead. Then she was led away to the head of the stairs, where she could hear the services. The scene at the bier when President Roosevelt and Senator Hanna looked upon the dead face of McKinley was very impressive.

The stately procession which started from the house after the services and wound away toward the city hall, with military escort and to the solemn refrain of funeral music, was the beginning of the formal tribute the American people are paying to their late chief magistrate. Eighty thousand people passed through the city hall and viewed the remains of the dead president.

DOCTORS FIND GANGRENE.

Startling Disclosure Made by Physicians Who Held the Autopsy.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 17.—The fourteen physicians who held the autopsy on the remains of President McKinley made the following report:

"The bullet which struck over the breastbone did not pass through the skin and did little harm. The other bullet passed through both walls of the stomach near its lower border. Both holes were found to be perfectly closed by the stitches, but the tissue around each hole had become gangrenous. After passing through the stomach the bullet passed into the back walls of the abdomen, hitting and tearing the upper end of the kidney. This portion of the bullet track was also gangrenous, the gangrene involving the pancreas.

"The bullet has not yet been found. There was no sign of peritonitis or disease of other organs. The heart walls were very thin. There was no evidence of any attempt at repair on the part of nature, and death resulted from the gangrene which affected the stomach around the bullet wounds as well as the tissues around the further course of the bullet. Death was unavoidable by any surgical or medical treatment and was the direct result of the bullet wound."

Dr. McBurney inclines to the belief that President McKinley was shot with poisoned bullets, as the action of the wounds was most suspicious, strongly supporting this theory.

HIS PURPOSE ACCOMPLISHED.

Leon Czolgosz, the Anarchist, Now Stands a Murderer.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 16.—The wretch, Czolgosz, now stands accused of murder. The crime was committed with malice aforethought, and as such was murder in the first degree, the punishment for which under the law of New York is death in the electric chair. Had the death of the president occurred at any other time than in the early morning hours, it would have boded ill to the evil genius of this fearful episode. The angry spirit of the people had reached an intense pitch during the night. Foreseeing the danger of possible riot, the police headquarters where Czolgosz is confined was roped off and the menacing thousands held at bay.

The entire police force of the city, regular and reserve, was held on duty all night. Two regiments of the national guard of New York were at their armories ready for instant service. If the president's death had come before night it would have been difficult to avoid a conflict, but the crowds gradually broke up as the new day came on and by 2:35 a. m., when the death announcement came, the downtown thoroughfares were deserted. For the moment the anger of the outraged people is forgotten in their poignant grief and this will doubtless consign Czolgosz to the swift and inevitable punishment provided by law.

Grand Jury Indicts Czolgosz.

Buffalo, Sept. 17.—Leon F. Czolgosz, alias Fred Nieman, was indicted yesterday by the county court grand jury for the crime of murder in the first degree in fatally shooting President William McKinley, at the Temple of Music in the Pan-American exposition grounds, at 4:15 o'clock on the afternoon of Sept. 6. When arraigned before Judge Edward K. Emery, in the county court, the prisoner stubbornly refused to answer questions repeatedly asked of him by District Attorney Penney as to whether he had counsel or wanted counsel. The district attorney then suggested that inasmuch as the defendant refused to answer counsel should be assigned. Judge Emery assigned Hon. Loran L. Lewis and Hon. Robert C. Titus, former supreme court justices, of this city.

All business houses and every place of amusement are to be closed at Chicago Thursday, the day of the funeral of President McKinley.

Theodore Roosevelt Becomes Manager of the United States Ship of State.

HE MAKES A PERILOUS JOURNEY

To Take Up the Burden Laid Down by the Assassin's Victim.

OATH TAKEN IN A LIBRARY

Promises That There Will Be No Change in Policy and Asks His Predecessor's Cabinet to Help Him Keep His Pledge.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—Theodore Roosevelt, who Saturday was tragically elevated to the chief magistracy of the American republic by the death of President McKinley, entered this city of mourning Saturday afternoon after a remarkable and perilous journey from the heart of the north woods. He had been president under the constitution and law of the land since the minute the martyred president ceased to live. All the duties and powers of the office had devolved upon him, but he was as powerless as the humblest citizen to exercise one of them until he had taken the prescribed oath. He took that oath at 3:30 p. m. Saturday in the library of the residence of Ansley Wilcox, a personal friend with whom he stopped earlier in the week.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Present at a Historical Ceremony.

There were present when he swore to the oath Secretaries Root, Hitchcock, Long, Wilson and Postmaster General Smith; Senator Chauncey M. Depew, of New York; Judge of the Court of Appeals Haight; John N. Scattered; Mr. and Mrs. Ansley Wilcox; Miss Wilcox; George P. Sawyer; Doctors Mann, Park and Stockton; Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Sprague; Mr. and Mrs.

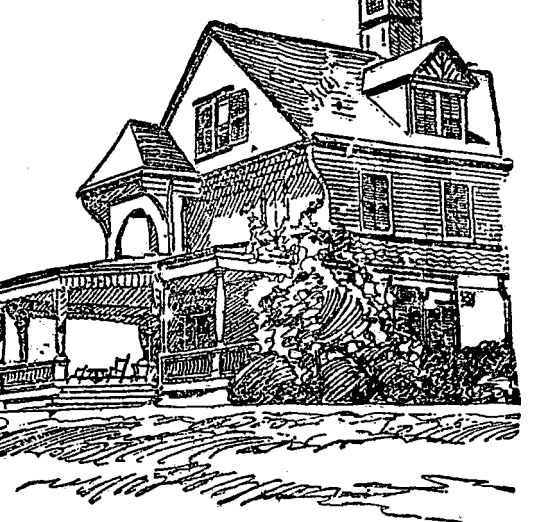

In taking the oath of office at Buffalo President Roosevelt said:

"In this hour of deep national bereavement, I wish to state that it shall be my aim to continue absolutely and without variance the policy of President McKinley for the peace and prosperity and honor of our beloved country."

John G. Milburn; Secretary to the President William Loeb, Jr.; the secretary to the deceased president, George B. Cortelyou; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carey; R. C. Scattered; J. D. Sawyer and William Jeffers, official telegrapher, in addition to Judge John R. Hazel, of the United States district court, who administered the oath.

Was a Most Affecting Scene.

The scene was a most affecting one. The new president had just come from the Milburn house, where his predecessor lay cold in death. Overcome by the deep personal sorrow he felt, in his characteristically impulsive way he had gone first to the house of mourning to offer his condolence and sympathy to the broken-hearted widow. Secretary Root, who twenty years ago had been present at a similar scene when Arthur took the oath after the death of another president who fell a victim to an assassin's bullet, almost

MR. ROOSEVELT'S OYSTER BAY HOME, broke down when he requested Roosevelt, on behalf of the members of the cabinet of the late president, to take the prescribed oath. There was not a dry eye in the room.

NO CHANGE IN NATIONAL POLICY.

New President Pledges Himself to the Same Course as McKinley.

The new president was visibly shaken, but he controlled himself, and when he lifted his hand to swear it was as steady as though carved in marble. With the deep solemnity of the occasion full upon him he announced to those present that his aim would be to be William McKinley's successor in deed as well as in name. Deliberately he proclaimed it in these words:

"In this hour of deep and terrible national bereavement I wish to state that it shall be my aim to continue absolutely, without variance, the policy of President McKinley for the peace and prosperity of our beloved country."

The great far-reaching significance of this pledge to continue the policy of the dead president, announced at the very threshold of a new governmental regime, profoundly impressed his hearers, and President Roosevelt's first step after taking the oath was in line with its redemption. His first act was to ask the members of the cabinet

"I not only want you to stay with me, but I want you to consider that I am selecting you as my choice. You are asked not merely to fill out a term, but to be my chosen counselors. I wish to have the matter regarded in this light: There are vacancies in the cabinet posts and I choose all you gentlemen to fill them. I will appoint you anew."—President Roosevelt's invitation, accepted by cabinet members.

net to retain their portfolios in order to aid him to conduct the government on lines laid down by him whose policy he had declared he would uphold. Such an appeal was not to be resisted, and every member of the cabinet, including Secretary of State Hay and Secretary of the Treasury Gage, who were communicated with in Washington, have agreed for the present, at least, to retain their several portfolios.

Inquiry was made of the president as to whether an extra session of congress would be called by him, and he said in substance that there was no fundamental law requiring such a call, and that after consultation with the cabinet they had decided that no such extra session would be called. The president, after the meeting of the cabinet, went out for a walk with Secretary Root. When he got down to the foot of the walk a couple of police and a couple of detectives in citizens' clothes started to follow him. He turned and told his secretary to tell them that he did not desire any protection. "I do not want to establish the precedent of going about guarded." The policemen and detectives touched their hats, but before he had gone 100 yards two of them were walking just behind him and two of them were following him on the other side of the street.

One of the new president's first official acts was the issuance of a proclamation announcing the death of President McKinley, with a brief but expressive eulogy of the dead statesman and the appointment of Thursday, the day of the funeral, as a day of mourning and prayer throughout the United States.

The president has made no plans as yet. He said he was so shocked by this national calamity that had thrust his new responsibilities upon him that he had had no time yet to think of his future career at Washington. He remained here quietly yesterday, and today accompanied the funeral train to the national capital.

MANY ASSURANCES OF SUPPORT

Received by the New President from Governors of States and Others.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt passed a very quiet day at the Wilcox house yesterday after the services at Milburn's, arranging to attend the funeral of the late president. His secretary, Mr. Loeb, and his assistants were, however, kept busy opening telegrams and mail and classifying them. Piled up on the oak table in the sitting room of the house were at least 600 telegrams and letters, all of them expressing regret at the sad occurrence to the late president and assurance of confidence and support to the new president.

Among those who sent telegrams to the new president were: Ex-Governor Vincent, of Connecticut; ex-Governor Ladd, of Rhode Island; Governor Shaw, of Iowa, who telegraphed: "You will have the loyal support of the people of Iowa in unstinted measure." Governor Richard, of Wyoming, who said, "May God endow you with abundant wisdom and discretion." Mayor Hart, of Boston; Governor Stone, of Pennsylvania, who said: "Earnestly hoping that the curse of anarchy may be speedily lifted from our land by the passage of wise and effective laws, I hasten to assure you of loyal support." There were also telegrams from the Republican club of Massachusetts, the National Republican League, Sons of America (of Pennsylvania), Don M. Dickson, F. Norton Goddard, George E. Green, W. Burke Cochran, Seth Low, Joseph L. Manley, Harris B. Blaine, Rev. A. O. O. Raymond, Lieutenant Governor Woodruff, and Booker T. Washington.

The only announcement the president had to make yesterday was that Cortelyou, the secretary of President McKinley, would for the present act in that capacity for him because of his knowledge of the condition of affairs Cortelyou confirmed this statement.

Washington's Duty Performed.

Washington, Sept. 16.—The executive officers of the government have carried out the programme which law and custom devolved upon them in consequence of the sad death of the chief magistrate. This consists of official notification of the death of the president to all who should know it officially, including the army and navy, which also received instructions as to military and naval honors to be paid the nation's dead.

Speaker Henderson has appointed a committee of representatives to attend the presidential funeral, the following being members of the same: Cannon, Hitt and Hopkins, of Illinois; Steele, of Indiana; Hepburn, of Iowa; Corliss, of Michigan, and Babcock, of Wisconsin.

Death Mask Successfully Taken.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—A death mask of the president's face was made at 7:20 a. m. yesterday. The mask was taken by Edward L. A. Pausch, of Hartford, Conn.

"Stories of the Red Children."

SECOND GRADE.

Our room opened Sept. 8rd, under very favorable conditions, everything about the grounds in neat and perfect order.

The enrollment up to date 31, with the unusual proportion of 20 boys and 11 girls.

Arranging for promotions twice a year the room has been divided into two grades with 12 in the A division and 19 in the B division.

All pupils are provided with the necessary books and materials, and at the close of the second week everything is in good working condition.

A fine picture of Mr. McKinley was hung upon our walls Monday, Mrs. Covell kindly sending it. The life and death of our dead president was the theme of the Monday morning hour.

FIRST GRADE

We have enrolled 53 pupils this month.

In our nature study class we have taken up the squirrel and have had songs and stories about the squirrel, also a tiny red squirrel for observation and drawing lessons.

We found a nicely cleaned school-room and freshly painted blackboards which add much to our comfort and convenience.

Two reading classes have taken up the new Baldwin Readers and enjoy the work very much.

Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Bower and Mrs. Emerson visited our grade last week.
