WORLD WEEPS AT HIS BIER

National Heart Answers to the Grief Throb at Canton.

Canton, O., Sept. 20.—With majestic solemnity, surrounded by his countrymen and his townspeople, in the presence of the president of the United States, the cabinet, justices of the United States supreme court, senators and representatives in congress, the heads of the military and naval establishments, the governors of states, and a great concourse of people who had known and loved him, all that is mortal of the third president to fall by an assassin's bullet, was Thursday committed to the grave. It was a spectacle of mournful grandeur. Canton ceased to be a town and swelled to the proportions of a great city. From every city and hamlet in Ohio, from the remote corners of the south and from the east and west, the human tide flowed into the town until 100,000 people were within its gates—here to pay their last tribute to the fallen chief.

The final scenes at the First Methodist church, where the funeral service was held, and at the beautiful West Lawn cemetery, where the body was consigned to a vault, were simple and impressive. The service at the church consisted of a brief oration, prayers by the ministers of three denominations, and singing by a quartette. The body was then taken to West Lawn cemetery and placed in a receiving vault, pending the time when it will be finally laid to rest beside the dead children who were buried years ago. The funeral procession was very imposing, and included not only the representatives of the army and navy of the United States, but the entire military strength of the state of Ohio and hundreds of civic, fraternal and other organizations. It was two miles long.

The Soldier's Last Call.
The service at the vault was that of the Methodist church. When it was over Colonel Bingham waved his hand to eight buglers of the Canton band, who had taken station upon the side of the mound, above and to the south of the vault. Instantly from the eight bugles rang out the notes of the soldier's last call, "taps." It was beautifully done, and the last notes of the bugles died away so softly that all who heard it remained listening for a few seconds to hear if it was really ended. When the last note had floated away Secretary Wilson was in tears, Secretary Hitchcock also weeping, and the president was gazing grimly at the wall. It was the last moment for the man who had been so closely associated with the president for so long, and the thought seemed greater than most of them could bear.

It was all ended at last.
Tears Give Her Blessed Relief.
One of the most pathetic features of the day was the absence of Mrs. McKinley from the funeral services at the church and cemetery, when the body of her husband was laid to rest. Since the first shock of the shooting she had borne up bravely. But there was a limit to human endurance, and when yesterday came it found her too weak to pass through the trials of the final ceremonies. Through the open door of her room she heard the prayer of the minister as the body was borne out of the house. After that Dr. Rixey remained close by her side, and although the full force of the calamity had come upon her it was believed by those about her that there was a providential mercy in her tears, as they gave some relief to the anguish of the whole within.

WHOLE EARTH THROBS WITH GRIEF
Wave of Sorrow That Envelops the Globe—Very Impressive Feature.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—The throb of grief that was dominant at Canton yesterday was one that thrilled the people of the whole world. From north and south, east and west the same story comes—of men standing uncovered for a moment, of industry stopped, of women sobbing and of the roll of the muffled drum and the tread of men to the music of the dirge. Probably never in history was there such a universal expression of grief for one man as that of yesterday for William McKinley.

Probably the most impressive of the many features of the day's services was that of multitudes stopping their work or walk—or whatever they were doing—for five minutes and remaining silent, or in prayer or song, during that time. Here at Chicago at 2:30 p. m. the noises of a great city were hushed and its commerce suspended while mourning thousands paid their last tribute to the memory of William McKinley. The silence was broken alone by muffled bells tolling off the fifty-eight illustrious years of the dead president's life. At this hour all business not already suspended stopped for five minutes. This included the street cars by whatever means run, the central power being stopped and the cars remaining motionless for that time, while men doffed their hats and sometimes women prayed, or sang "Nearer My God, to Thee."

This occurred in mills, shops and everywhere. The procession that was passing through Chicago streets at the time stopped; the 150,000 men working for the great steel trust stopped their work. Thus it was that in shop, mill, street, home—everywhere—for five minutes yesterday afternoon men and women paid a tribute of love and honor to the name of the dead president. But most impressive of all was the stoppage on the railways of the country. Between 2 and 3 p. m. everywhere, on nearly every line in the land, the trains came to a standstill, wherever they were, and for five minutes not a wheel turned. At the same time the telegraph operators all over the land sat at their keys, and not a click was heard.

Nor was it only in the United States that honor was paid his memory. First in this respect was the British empire. Wherever the union jack flies there were memorial services, flags half-masted and other expressions of sorrow and sympathy. In historic Westminster Abbey, in St. Paul's and in innumerable churches of the three kingdoms there were memorial services, attended by the greatest in the land, and by the king's representative as to the service at the Abbey. At Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Constantinople, Copenhagen—every European capital, in fact—there were similar services.

In every hamlet in the United States there were memorial services of appropriate character. In the great cities they were elaborate, and everywhere—on farm, in town—the hum of business stopped for five minutes at the approximate hour when the nation's beloved was laid in the tomb.

Last night the Auditorium here was packed at memorial services at which prominent citizens delivered addresses. There were 25,000 men in the memorial parade yesterday, and at the head of the column was the carriage in which the late president had ridden when here two years ago. It was empty.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT CONFERS.
Holds His First Cabinet Meeting and Takes Possession of the White House.

Washington, Sept. 21.—President Roosevelt took possession of the White House yesterday, when he arrived from Canton, and immediately called a cabinet meeting for 11 a. m. His purpose was to confer with his advisers as to anything that might have come up recently, and also as to the condition of the various questions before the administration. All of the members were present except Attorney General Knox, who stopped for a few days in Pittsburg. Each member explained to the president the policy which had been followed in dealing with the matters under consideration and their present status. No new business was taken up. The president again announced his intention to follow the policy marked out by President McKinley.

About 1:30 o'clock, shortly after the conclusion of the cabinet meeting, President Roosevelt left the White House to go to the residence of his sister, the wife of Commander Cowles, of the navy, for luncheon. Disdaining a carriage, he walked swiftly and alone. No one had known when he would leave his office, and as he passed briskly out of the grounds of the executive mansion he attracted little attention, scarcely anybody recognizing him. He crossed Pennsylvania avenue into Lafayette square, and thence up Sixteenth street to his destination. In the course of an hour and a half he returned to the White House, still alone, and still walking.

MORE HARD FIGHTING
South African War Is Yet Going on with Success That Is Variable.

London, Sept. 23.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, Sept. 22: "Kritzinger, while endeavoring to force a passage of the Orange river, near Hirschell, at 1 o'clock Friday morning, rushed the camp of a party of Lovatt's scouts. He failed to cross the river, but the scouts lost heavily. Lieutenant Colonel Hon. Andrew Murray and Captain Murray, his adjutant, were killed. Deeply regret the loss of Colonel Murray, who throughout the war had led Lovatt's scouts with great gallantry. Under cover of darkness the Boers managed to carry off a gun. They were promptly followed up and the gun was recovered in a smart engagement, in which Kritzinger lost two killed and twenty taken prisoners."

Lord Kitchener also reports that the British captured by the Boers in the ambush near Scheepers' Nek, Sept. 17, have been released, and that the British casualties in the recent Vlakfontein engagement, when the Boers captured a company of mounted infantry and two guns, were one officer and five men killed, twenty-three men wounded, and six officers and 109 men taken prisoners. He announces that these prisoners have since been released. He further reports the capture of two commandoes—one consisting of fifty-five men under Commandant Kochs, who were taken together with their entire transport, west of Adenburg, and the other consisting of fifty-four men, including P. J. Botha (brother of the commandant general), who were taken with forty-eight wagons and their belongings forty-five miles southeast of Carolin.

Panic at a State Fair.
Springfield, Ill., Sept. 23.—Fire destroyed the Woman's building on the state fair grounds and caused a panic among thirty young women from various parts of the state who were quartered in the structure. The women escaped in their nightclothes, but lost part of their clothing in the flames. Secretary Garrard says the accident will not interfere with the state fair, which will open a week from next Monday, and that the women will be furnished other suitable quarters on the grounds.

Insane Asylum Burns.
Norfolk, Neb., Sept. 24.—The state insane asylum and adjacent buildings, eight in all, were destroyed by fire which started at 5 o'clock in the morning. Six hundred patients were in the institution at the time, three of whom are missing and supposed to have been burned to death. The loss is almost total. The patients are now quartered in an open field and are guarded by local authorities until they can be sent to the Lincoln and Hastings asylums.

Boers Make a Big Capture.
London, Sept. 20.—The Boers have captured 200 British troops and three guns at Scheepers' Nek.

LOOP OF THE BROOKLYN

WHAT IT DID TO THE TEXAS

Occupies the Time of the Schley Inquiry—"Logs" Seem To Be Uncertain.

Washington, Sept. 24.—The Schley court of inquiry was brought to a sudden termination for the day eighteen minutes after convening by the announcement of the sudden death of Judge Jeremiah Wilson, senior counsel for Admiral Schley.

Death was caused from an acute attack of indigestion.

Washington, Sept. 24.—The part played by the battleship Texas in the naval battle off Santiago on July 3, 1898, was the basis of the greater part of yesterday's proceedings in the Schley naval court of inquiry. Three of the witnesses were on board the Texas during the battle, and two of them were Commander George C. Heilner, who was navigator on the Texas, and Commander Alex. B. Bates, who was the chief engineer on that battleship.

Heilner swore that the "loop" made by the Brooklyn at the beginning of the fight put the Texas in more danger than anything else that occurred that day; that the Texas had to slow down vigorously to avoid a collision; that the Brooklyn was not more than 150 yards away when she loomed up out of the smoke, and that the interruption to the Texas cost her about three miles in the chase. Bates swore that the starboard engine had been stopped, and he believed the port engine had also been stopped at that time.

One thing that seems to be coming out in the investigation is that log books are very uncertain. For instance, the "steam log" of the Texas contains no record of the stoppage of the engines at the time of the "loop" episode; and in course of his examination Captain Harber expressed contempt for "log" statements. The "loop" matter was about all that was important in the case yesterday.

The day closed with another animated controversy between counsel as to the policy of bringing Admiral Sampson's name into the trial.

SHAFFER ISSUES A STATEMENT
Bitter Language Directed Against Members Who Deserted.

Pittsburg, Sept. 24.—President Shaffer of the Amalgamated association has sent out a circular to all the lodges of the association giving a history of the late strike and the terms of settlement. Stung by the criticisms from members of the organization as well as from outside, Mr. Shaffer indulges in bitter language in writing of some phases of the struggle. This he directs particularly against members of the association who deserted its cause and other labor unions, which, he intimates, failed to keep promises of support.

The circular states that the prospects of winning were at the beginning bright, but that aid was expected from other labor bodies. This, according to the circular, was denied, the American Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers not contributing a cent. Shaffer then goes on to say that, seeing the impossibility of gaining a decisive victory, steps were taken to make the best terms possible. President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor is accused of neglecting to attend a conference in New York with Morgan, and the charge is made that Gompers has refused an explanation.

APPOINTED BY ROOSEVELT

The Man Picked Out by McKinley for Comptroller of the Currency.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—A special to The Tribune from Canton, O., says: "President Roosevelt, in conformity with his policy to carry out as far as possible the plans of President McKinley, announced yesterday the appointment of W. B. Ridgeley, of Springfield, Ill., as comptroller of the currency."

Mr. Ridgeley, who is the son-in-law of Senator Cullom, was the choice of the late president for the post to be made vacant on Oct. 1 by the retirement of Charles G. Daves. In fact, the commission was signed by Mr. McKinley just before the journey to Buffalo, but formal announcement of the appointment was delayed.

MISS CONGER IS MARRIED

Becomes the Wife of Lieut. Fred E. Buchanan, U. S. A., at Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—The marriage of Miss Laura Conger, daughter of United States Minister Edwin H. Conger, to Lieutenant Fred E. Buchanan, U. S. A., was celebrated last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McConnell, 4359 Lake avenue. Miss Conger was with her parents in Peking during the siege, and Lieutenant Buchanan was with the American forces in the relief column.

Large Purchase of Standing Pine.

Escanaba, Mich., Sept. 20.—A deal has been closed in this city whereby Silverthorn & Co., of Tonawanda, N. Y., bought of McArthur Bros., of Saginaw, 9,000,000 feet of standing pine, or 5,000 acres of land, situated on the Huron river in Baraga county.

Wants $20,000 from the Wabash.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 20.—Frederick Dill, of Milan, has commenced a $20,000 damage suit against the Wabash railroad. He claims that he was injured at the coal chute of the company at Milan last February, and is now a physical wreck.

IT HAS BEEN RUMORED

that Harry Binns had cut down the large maple shade trees in front of his home, and when the one who circulated the report was asked why H. B. should do such a very foolish thing? He would reply, that said Binns had three daughters and wanted a little son. Now we must brand the above as a cruel joke, for while we have three fine daughters, the maples still stand.

Table Decorations.

The fact that the daily use of flowers on the home table has grown to be almost universal among some classes of the American people, argues well for their appreciation of the aesthetic and the artistic in combination with the more material things of life. Flowers always exert a refining influence, and it is well to use them where this influence will be most effective among the younger portion of the family; and at no place about the house do the children seem to come into closer companionship than at the table. Martin Luther "knew whereof he spake" when he said that a plant in the window was powerful enough to keep the devil outside. Let the child come to the breakfast table and find himself face to face with a flower or a bit of "green things growing," and he will have a pleasant memory of the morning to carry with him throughout the day. The housewife who neglects to make use of flowers liberally in the daily administration of the affairs of the household, overlooks a most potent factor for good. Make it a rule always to have something on the table beside china and cut glass and silver, to brighten it and make it more attractive than those things can. A few flowers, or a growing plant, will make the table of the poor man pleasanter than the rich man's is without them.

It is an excellent plan to grow some plants having fine foliage, and a low, spreading habit, expressly for table use. Some of the Adiantum ferns are exquisite for this purpose. A reference to the catalogue description of ferns will tell which kinds are best adapted for use on the table. The smaller low-growing sorts will be found better than the tall ones. They should be planted so thickly that their foliage entirely covers the soil.

There must be a solid mass of greenery. It is well to train it in such a manner that the pot is also covered; but if this cannot be done, pretty coverings for the pot can easily be made, or ornamental dishes can be used to set the pots in. Some of the Lycopodiums are fine for the table. So is a Rex begonia, with perfect foliage; or a Primula obconica, starred all over with its pale blooms, suggestive of the woods of spring by their delicate odor; or a Chinese primrose in full bloom, a Roman hyacinth, an Ardisia, whose thick, dark foliage and scarlet berries remind you of the holly of holiday-time, an Otahette orange, showing fruit or flowers, or a pot of daffodils, gay with the gold of spring. All these, and many other plants well adapted to cultivation in the window-garden, can be made to do duty on the table. There is a great economy in decorative work of this kind, in the use of growing plants, for they can be used over and over again without injury to themselves, if they are not kept from the window longer than a day at a time.

It is well to prepare a number of plants for this particular use. In this way we can have variety. But ferns will be found the most satisfactory, all things considered, of any plants that can be used for table decoration. Their beautiful foliage makes them vastly more attractive, in themselves, than many flowering plants are, and there is about them a delicacy and refinement which few other plants possess. We never tire of them. It may be said, by some, that plants without flowers lack the brightness which the table needs, but this lack can easily be remedied. With ferns for a basis, we can so vary the program of table decoration that it need not be alike two days in the week. To day we can use a spray of heliotrope, or a few clusters of white and gold lantana among the ferns, tomorrow a bunch of pink and white, or yellow chrysanthemums. Next day a rose, or a few carnations. Then there will be the geraniums, the begonias, the hyacinths, the daffodils and scores of other flowers to draw from, at different seasons of the year. Not many flowers will be needed at a time. The artistic effect which should be aimed at is not so much dependent on quantity as on quality. A few flowers, judiciously used, on a groundwork of beautiful foliage, will be vastly more pleasing than a large number of them, tortured into shapes and combinations, which attract notice because of their novelty, or some striking feature which has the effect of making the flowers seem of secondary importance. The lover of beauty for beauty's sake will never resort to such means for the decoration of her table. She will always consider the flowers themselves as of more importance than the arrangement of them, and aim so to dispose of each one that its beauty and its individuality will be fully brought out. Arrangement is all right, but make it always subordinate to the flowers you make use of.

The use of fern dishes containing growing plants, makes it possible for us to produce the most artistic effect in the easiest manner, because the stems of the flowers can be thrust into the soil. This will not only keep them fresh, but it furnishes a support for the flower which we cannot always give it in vases, thus enabling us to dispose of it naturally. The use of cut flowers in combination with growing plants of the most desirable ferns is to be encouraged, for it opens great possibilities in the decorative line without much expense. There need be no sameness, no monotony in the ornamentation of the table if these suggestions are followed.

In combination with the ferns, the smaller palms may be used effectively as a central plant. The cocos palms are charming for this purpose, especially Weddelliana, with its dainty, plummy foliage. Kentia bedmoreana and K. fosteriana, Dracaena sanderiana, and the Pandanus, can be used with fine effect if not too large. The combination can be changed to suit the taste of the decorator, if she has a stock of plants to draw from, as she should have.

Wanted—Language Reform.

The fact that our language is spreading over the world at an amazing rate emphasizes regret for its numberless defects and increases the desire for needed reforms. One of the worst defects is that we have many words which, while differing in orthography and meaning, are alike in sound. For example, "rowed," "rode," "road," "write," "rite," "right," "wright." Is it not surprising that foreigners sometimes acquire a pretty good knowledge of English?—Washington Post.

Number Thirteen in Coins.

"I have never been able to comprehend," said a veteran numismatist, "why so many Americans should believe that a vast amount of ill luck centers around the number thirteen. The commonest of all our silver coins is the twenty-five cent piece. In the words 'quarter dollar' are thirteen letters. Thirteen letters compose the Pluribus Unum. In the tail of the eagle are thirteen feathers, and in the shield are thirteen lines. There are thirteen stars and thirteen arrow heads, while if you examine the bird through a microscope you will find thirteen feathers in his wing."—Detroit Free Press.

One on the Doctor.

Going into the free dispensary of the New York College and Hospital for Women one afternoon a physician found three or four little girls who, while awaiting treatment, had evidently made friends, and were huddled together on one bench, eagerly discussing something of great interest, which on investigation proved to be a much handled "chunk" of candy. In astonishment he inquired what they were doing. Some questioning finally elicited an explanation that "de one what tells de biggest lie wins it." "Oh," said the doctor, "I am ashamed of you. When I was little like you I never told lies." A slight pause, then from the smallest girl, "Give him de candy."

The Dangers of Rest.

Scribner's Magazine Aunt Anne's "before the war" mistress must have been a woman of iron constitution, to judge by the way she regards with contempt my own physical limitations. Tuesday she held me sternly to the duty of overhauling the pantry and its appurtenances. Wednesday, stiff and sore, I sought again and again the solace of the sofa, only to be aroused by callers whom I could not refuse to see. In the afternoon I lay down once more, and, in no very amiable temper, told Aunt Anne that no matter who called, I was not to be disturbed.

A little later, through the open window, I heard her say to our clergyman: "No, sir; Miss Carryline ain't feelin' like seein' nobody this evenin'." She exalted herself so much this mornin' restin' that it made her sick."

Department Store Girls.

A man connected with a large department store says: "I have in my department about one hundred and fifty girls—salesgirls, wrappers and clerks. All of them are healthy looking, and yet I noticed that they got sick a tremendous lot. The other day I had occasion to go to their cloakroom, and there I saw a sort of roster neatly typewritten on one wall. 'Mondays,' it said, 'Miss Brown, Miss Smith, Miss Jones; Tuesdays, Miss Bell, Miss Willing, Miss Gray.' And so on. I wondered what it meant, and then all of a sudden the scheme dawned on me. With that copy I can now tell beforehand what girls will plead illness on any particular day of the week. But it isn't in operation any longer. The general health of my department is much better than it was."—Philadelphia Record.

Careless.
"He's a good physician in some ways," she remarked, "but he is careless, and that naturally hurts him." "Doesn't get his prescription mixed, does he?" "That's just what he did in the case of Mrs. Jenkins." "Nothing serious, I hope." "Yes, it was. Not fatal, of course, but quite serious. He failed to acquaint himself with the circumstances and prescribed a month's rest in the country when she could easily afford a trip to Europe. I don't think she'll ever have him again."—Chicago Post.

MR. ROOT'S "LUGGAGE."

From the Philadelphia Post: Secretary Root has a gift, not unlike Lincoln's, of infusing humor into the laborious details of official duties. The war secretary's office has been throughout the administration an extremely busy one. Now the hurrying demands of war have been supplanted by the exacting responsibilities of preparing military government for the colonies, not to speak of the multiplying affairs of regular army business. But Secretary Root, although possessed of unusual capacity for hard and prolonged work, seems never to be hurried, and will occasionally pause in the midst of revolving routine to entertain his associates or visitors with some pleasant remark.

A few days ago he was superintending the work of revising the Cuban tariff. Item after item was drearily gone over, and to the assembled clerks it seemed that the secretary was not, on this occasion, to enlighten the proceedings with his customary wit. Suddenly his face lightened up. He had come across the word "luggage" written into the tariff, evidently by some Britisher among the clerks. "Luggage!" exclaimed the secretary, "here at last is unmistakable evidence that our country is drifting into imperialism."

Three Londons.

While building the London Exchange the workmen came upon a gravel pit full of oyster shells, bones of cattle, old sandals and shatter'd pottery, says a writer in the Youth's Companion. Two pavements were dug up under the French church in Threadneedle street, and other pavements have been cut through in several parts of the city. Authorities on the subject say that all the soil seems to have risen over Roman London at the rate of nearly a foot a century. Still farther must the searcher dig to find the third London, the earlier London of the Britons. It is supposed to be buried under the London of Roman days.

OLD TIMES AT FORT SMITH.

When Judicial Hangings Were the Chief Industry.

With the opening of the Kiowa and Comanche country to settlers this summer, the memories of all men of the southwest will vividly recall the days not long past, when that part of the world was the refuge of the most desperate criminals on earth. Until a western edge of the Arkansas was the hanging center of the universe. That was when the Federal court of the Western District of Arkansas had jurisdiction over the five civilized tribes of the Indian Territory. Almost 50,000 people have flocked to Fort Smith when it offered an extra attraction in the gallows line. No circus day in any part of America could rival that town on such occasions. Merchants prepared weeks ahead for the rush. Fakirs and gamblers hurried there from all points in the southwestern country. Men, women and children on horse, mule and afoot, or in conveyances of all kinds, moved on Fort Smith from every direction, until on "hanging day" the city swarmed with visitors who turned the event—solemn in other parts of the world—into one of unrestrained gaiety. But that is all passed and Fort Smith, a hustling and progressive city, wants to forget the time when hanging men was its principal industry.

ALL WANTED "JIM FISKS."

A certain well known politician during the state convention met a lot of his old-time friends from southern Maryland at Ford's Opera House, and after the convention was over so glad was he to see them that he took the whole crowd around to a nearby restaurant, lined them all up against the bar and requested them to "nominate their drink."

Everybody took whisky except the city man, who had the bartender manufacture him a gin fizz. When the drink had been placed before him one old fellow asked:

"Say, what's that you're drinking?" "That," said the city man, "is a gin fizz."

"Say, bartender," said the county politician, "take back your whisky and give me a 'Jim Fisk, too.'"

The rest of the crowd liked the name, and in a few minutes every man had repudiated whisky and was drinking "Jim Fisks."—Baltimore Sun.

OUR TRAIN TO THE "SOO"

A Specimen Train on "The Marquette Route"

MICHIGAN'S NORTHLAND-III.

St. Ignace to Sault Ste Marie.

We landed at St. Ignace at 1:15 p. m. after a delightful sail entirely around Mackinac island affording us an excellent opportunity of seeing the enchanting beauty of this island. We were not due to leave St. Ignace until 5:20 and we had four hours in which to see the sights of the town.

This town was founded in 1671 by Father Marquette and until the close of that century it was a busy center for the then wilderness of Michigan. A long period of inactivity and decay set in, but of late years this has changed and the D. S. S. & A. Ry are making the city an important shipping and commercial center, it being the southern terminus of this wide awake and progressive railroad.

The sights of St. Ignace were not numerous and why people stayed in the place was more than we could understand. We looked at the town and then we asked the baggage man at the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic depot what there was to see. He replied "There's Father Marquette's grave and St. Anthony's Rock." In response to a question as to whether we would have time to see them before the train left he replied that we had all kinds of time. We at once started in the direction indicated, to view the grave of the celebrated explorer and missionary and after a tedious walk of about half a mile in the hot sun over all kinds of sidewalk we arrived at the park and going inside we found the grave marked with a simple white stone, appropriately inscribed. On our way back to the lake front we saw St. Anthony's Rock, a peculiar formation of stone about 50 feet high, situated right in the town and on sloping ground near the railroad track. After our return to the depot we found that we still had time on hand, so we tried our best to bother the railroad employes with all sorts of questions, but we found the men, in fact every person connected with the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic uniformly courteous, affable and attentive to the comforts of traveller. (This is not "taffy" in exchange for transportation, but it is the simple facts.) The black smoke from the stacks of the car ferry "Sainte Marie" proclaimed the approach of our train and when the boat landed the train we stepped aboard and our trip through the wonderful upper peninsula was begun. The time from St. Ignace to Sault Ste Marie was formerly five hours but the management ever mindful of the comfort of its patrons arranged by coming into the "Soo" over another road's track to make the run in two and one half hours. Our train ran smoothly over the well ballasted road and on the way another incident occurred, which shows how much patience is needed in a railroad man's life.

A man and wife and four children were on their way to the state of Washington, and with the party was a nephew about 14 years of age whose father was already in Washington and had sent for him to come with his uncle's family. Their tickets were all purchased at the same time, but the ticket of the lad was by mistake sold over a different road and the lad would have to leave the party at Trout Lake and would reach Minneapolis 24 hours behind them. The prospect was rather appalling to the lad for he had no money, no lunch, expecting to be with his uncle's party, and was without a blessed thing except a half bushel basket of green apples given him by his grandmother when he started from Bellaire. When the lad realized the fix he was in, he didn't know what else to do so he began on the green apples and by the time he reached Trout Lake he had in addition to the "blues" a fine dose of colic. A couple of travelling men interested themselves in the lad and took him over to a hotel where they gave him a dose of "hot stuff" for his colic, and in the meantime the conductor who had wired for instructions regarding his ticket was authorized to pass him along with the party, and when we left Trout Lake he was perfectly happy and was again pitching into the green apples.

Our train from Trout Lake to the "Soo" ran in over the tracks of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste Marie Ry and we ran the entire distance about 45 miles without a stop except once to pass a train coming from the "Soo." Our arrival at the "Soo" was after dark and we saw very little of the place in our drive to the Park Hotel where we were given pleasant rooms and excellent service, during our stay in the city.

Sault Ste Marie is a city of about 10,000 inhabitants and has much of interest to the visitor. It is situated on the left bank of the U. S. canal built around the rapids in the St. Mary's river, and every indication points to a big boom for the thriving city with its diversified interests. There are a number of interesting sights at the "Soo" and our party were so much pleased and found so many things to see that we doubled the time allotted in our itinerary.

INTERIOR OF DINING CAR Running over the D. S. S. & A. Ry.

The U. S. canal and locks were our first objective point and after an early breakfast we crossed the street and entered the government park which borders on the locks, our hotel facing the park. The locks here are massive examples of engineering and are two in number. The Weitzel lock is the older and smaller of the two, but it is no small affair being 550 feet in length 80 feet wide at widest part and a capacity for vessels drawing 16 feet and less, and when filled holds three million gallons of water, but so well arranged is the lock and the mechanism which operates it, that a vessel can be locked through the 18 feet difference in water levels, in ten minutes from the time the gates are closed, the valves either emptying or filling the lock in exactly nine minutes. The new lock is the celebrated Poe lock, has a length of 800 feet a width of 100 feet and is 22 feet deep. No charge is made by the government for locking vessels through whether American or Canadian, and the Canadian locks on the opposite side of the rapids reciprocate in this arrangement. Nearly one hundred vessels pass through the American locks daily, and only about a fifth as many through the Canadian. The locks are all operated by hydraulic power. A peculiar fascination exists about the locks, people sitting hours at a time watching the big freighters go through. After a visit to the engine room and viewing the imposing array of valves, pumps and weights we left and started to see the rest of the sights. We had a card of introduction to Mr. Louis Desenberg brother of Messrs. B. J. and Sig Desenberg, and our party hunted him up, finding him pleasantly located at the immense big store of Prinzlaur Bros., and upon making ourselves known were given many valuable pointers as to what to see about town, and as Mr. Desenberg was boarding at the Park, our stay was made doubly agreeable by the courtesies extended by him. The business portion of the city has a distinct air of progress and prosperity, and an enjoyable afternoon was passed in viewing the stores, after which a trip was made to the State Fish Hatchery situated on the bank of the rapids just beyond the canal. The grounds are laid out prettily with lawn and fish ponds for the various kinds of fish. The season was over for hatching but the ponds were filled with trout fry, and young fish of a year and upwards. The superintendent was busily engaged in making some needed improvements preparatory to the whitfish season while here our party were importuned by the Indian pilots to "shoot rapids" we looked but didn't "shoot." The following day was spent in driving about the city, to Ft. Brady where a fine view of the city was obtained across to the head of the water power canal and down the river road for a distance of six miles behind the team that had captured the first prize at the fairs for the past three years. The river road is a beautiful drive running along the bank of St. Mary's river for 40 miles and as level and fine as a boulevard. The water power canal at the "Soo" is a marvellous exhibition of the skill of man. A canal 30 feet deep and 100 feet wide is cut from White fish Bay on lake Superior to the St. Mary's river below the rapids, giving a fall of 18 feet. At the lower end an immense basin has been excavated and a line of wheel pits and powerhouse a half mile long is in course of construction, giving a power estimated at 50,000 horse, and which power has been about all contracted; the work will be completed about Oct. 1, 1902 and a big time is expected when the canal is opened. A visit was paid to the Canadian "Soo" on the opposite side of the rapids, and a glimpse had of the mammoth $60,000,000 steel and iron plant, as well as the big pulp mills. These industries as well as the building of the Algoma Central railroad into the iron district is building up the town rapidly. On our return from the Canadian side we had expected to leave for Marquette half past five but at the last moment were informed that the Canadian Pacific train was three hours late and our train would wait, so we went to the park and put in the time looking at the locks while waiting for the train.

The leading article in the September Forum deals with "The Commercial Position of the British Empire." Its author, Benjamin Taylor, urges that computations of British trade should not be confined to the British Isles, but should include the colonies also. Another fiscal article is that by Jacob Schoenhof on "The German Tariff Proposals," which he considers likely to inflict a more serious injury upon Germany than upon any other nation. Sir John G. Bourinot contributes a historical retrospect of previous "Royal Visits to Canada." President G. Stanly Hall outlines the programme of "The Ideal School as Based on Child Study," while F. W. Clark traces the record of "The Evolution of the American University." Karl Blind criticises "English Neglect of Old Indian Poetry." Finland's Plight," by Eugene Limerdorfer, is a strong indictment of the recent policy of Russia toward her weaker neighbor. Prof. Peter T. Austin relates a large number of recent illustrations of "The Utilization of Waste" in various scientific processes. "The Essay of Mood and Form" is the subject of a critical paper by Prof. Richard Burton. Other articles in the September number are "England, Portugal, and the South African Republics," by Lt. Gen. Den Beer Poortugael; "A Model Faceery Town," by Leonora Beck Ellis; "Can Cubans Govern Cuba?" by Edmond Wood; and "The Southern Problem," by George A. Thacher.

DISPLAY WEATHER SIGNALS.

Farmers May Soon Tell When Drouths are to be Broken.

The postoffice department is soon to inaugurate the plan of having weather signals displayed by rural mail carriers.

The regulation signals will be used on the sides of the mail delivery wagons. The system is the same as the flag system used in cities, but instead of flags large tin signs will be used. These are in colors and can be seen a long distance. Colored cards explaining the methods of reading the signals will be distributed along the routes.

Explanation of signals:—
No. 1—White signal—fair weather
No. 2—Blue signal—rain or snow
No. 3—White over blue—local rain or snow.

No. 5—Black triangle—temperature.

Interpretation of displays:—

No. 1, alone, indicates fair weather, stationary temperature

No. 2, alone, indicates rain or snow, stationary temperature.

No. 3, alone, indicates local rain or snow, stationary temperature.

No. 1, with No. 4 above it, indicates fair weather, warmer.

No. 1, with No. 4 below it, indicates fair weather, colder.

No. 2, with No. 4 above it, indicates rain or snow, warmer.

No. 3, with No. 4 above it, indicates local rain or snow, warmer.

No. 3, with No. 4 below it, indicates local rain or snow, colder.

This is the first attempt to distribute weather indications by signals along rural mail routes, previous work in this line being done by postal card. Under this system a farmer does not have to come to the mail box to get his weather predictions but he can see the signals as far as he can see the delivery wagons.

Will Tour the County.

Commissioner Jennings commenced a tour of the county on Tuesday and will give the first two months of the year to visiting the schools. To assist in his work Miss Tudor of Chicago, formerly of Berrien Springs has been engaged in the commissioner's office arranging and mailing reports, and attending to the other multitudinous duties in order that the commissioner may have more time in the field. The commissioner's office has undergone radical changes during the summer months, the walls were calcimined a green tint and Commissioner's Jennings sends out word to the teachers to send in samples of drawing or samples of any special work and on these walls they will be placed for exhibition.—Benton Harbor Banner Register.

A gentleman from near Constantine was in town one day last week and in talking about the smallpox scare there, said: "Yes, we had a pretty bad scare over there and I was scared myself. I have been opposed to the smallpox three times, assinated twice and feantened once. The doctors told me if I had it it would be a case of celluloid."—Cassopolis Democrat.

School Notes.

Parents why don't you visit our public schools? They are our schools. You support them. During the school year the teachers see your children more than you do. Perhaps they know more about your children than you do. It would help your child's school work and you would feel better satisfied if you would consult with the teacher often. Why not find out the recitation hours of your boy or girl and then make a point to visit his classes occasionally? The thought of an unexpected visit from you would stimulate him to greater effort and by your better knowledge of his work you would be able to help him in many ways you cannot now. The school welcomes you always.

HIGH SCHOOL.

The teachers in our schools are very grateful for those beautiful bouquets presented by the W. C. T. U.

The new book on English Composition that is being used in our 9th grade is giving the greatest satisfaction to both pupils and teacher. Then work is so practical and interesting that nothing but the best results can follow. There are 27 in the class.

The class in Geology under the direction of Miss Abby made an excursion to the river Tuesday afternoon. Their object was to make a study of the rocky formation of the river cliffs. Few places offer better advantages for this observation work than Buchanan.

EIGHTH GRADE

Supt. Mercer's talk to the pupils Thursday morning afforded material for a very profitable lesson in Civics.

Miss Rose and Miss Mulholland called last week.

Eighteen pupils attended memorial services.

Our new song, "Sunlight Glances" is pretty and very appropriate for this time of year.

Howard Mead held to his opinion that the American Indian has not been wronged, against a majority of the class.

A pupil in the grammar class:—Sister has two plurals,—sisters and "sistern."

The following are thoughts Lucy Baker sees in Longfellow's beautiful poem, "The Builders": We are all builders while time lasts. Every act goes to build up character. Time holds all the opportunities we need to build with, and each day we form part of the structure. It is for us to make each day count for good.

In ancient days builders worked with greatest care, leaving nothing slighted nor unfinished, believing the gods could see everything. Why should we not do as well as they? We should be careful about our every act, for God knows and sees all.

SEVENTH GRADE

The seventh grade are having a great struggle with the pronunciation of the cities in South America.

The pupils have handed in some excellent rainfall maps of South America.

Supt. Mercer gave a very interesting talk to the pupils Thursday morning on Anarchy and President McKinley.

Goldenrod, drawn by Miss Shaw furnishes a very pretty border for the daily program.

E. Gwendolyn Williams and Grace Godfrey visited the school this week.

SIXTH GRADE

Thirty pupils are now enrolled, Grace Warner having entered during the past week.

The language classes are learning "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES

Held at Evangelical Church last Thursday in Memory of McKinley.

The McKinley memorial services were held at the Evangelical church last Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock and the commodious edifice was crowded to its utmost, every inch of space being occupied. The decorations were very appropriate, a large flag being draped back of the pulpit, a picture of our martyred president being hung in the center and draped with black. The chancel was beautifully decorated with palms and flowers in rich profusion. The decoration committee were treated to a very delightful surprise when all unbeknown to any one Mr. and Mrs. Stryker of the River Street greenhouse, had prepared a beautiful American flag as a floral piece and brought it up to the church in the morning while the committee were at work decorating. The floral piece was handsome being made of geraniums, petunias, feverfew and ageratum, and represented many hours of patient, loving labor in memory of our loved president.

Rev. J. R. Neirgarth presided over the exercises and seated upon the platform with him were Revs. W. J. Douglass, C. E. Marvin, E. R. Black, and A. Ostroth, Dr. R. Henderson, Messrs A. C. Roe and A. A. Worthington. The choir comprised Miss Elsie Kingery organist, Mrs. E. S. Dodd, Mrs. D. L. Boardman, Mrs. D. H. Bower, Mrs. H. D. Rough, Miss Florence Mead, Mrs. M. M. Knight, Messrs Wm Monroe, J. P. Beistle, Wm W. East, D. L. Boardman and Dr. C. B. Roe.

The following was the program as rendered:

Benediction

Every person on the program seemed endued with the spirit of the occasion and were listened to with intense interest, the order maintained being marvellous. Every one came to listen and they listened with the closest attention to every word of the speakers. Seats were reserved for the members of Perrott Post, No. 22, who to the number of nearly forty men, marched into the audience room and participated in the services. The entire service was characterized with an intense spirit of reverent homage to an all-wise God, and a desire to bow in submission, and follow the path indicated in the last words of their beloved McKinley "It is God's Way, not ours, His will be done."

Helmick Family Reunion.

The annual gathering of the Helmick family occurred at Mt. Tabor Grange hall, September 20, 1901, that being the 65th anniversary of the arrival of the late Jesse Helmick and family in Berrien county. About one hundred of the family, together with a few of the old neighbors, formed the gathering. The family and its immediate connections now number about one hundred seventy-five and are scattered over several of the states of the union.

The forenoon was spent in social greeting and recounting scenes of former days when Berrien county and its enterprises were young. At the proper time dinner was announced, and the willing one hundred gathered around the table profusely spread with all the delicacies of the season.

At two p. m. President, John S. Helmick of Buchanan, oldest son of Jesse Helmick, now in his 79th year, called the meeting to order; in the upper room, and the exercises were introduced by a selection of instrumental music, by Miss Lena Helmick of Berrien Springs; prayer by Rev. E. F. Newell. Rev. Newell then briefly addressed the family suiting his remarks to the spirit of the occasion; a duet was then rendered by Misses Lena and Ione Helmick; then followed several recitations by the younger members recalling members of by gone days' with grandpa and grandma; a letter was then read written by James Fulton a member by marriage now residing temporarily in New Mexico, it contained greetings for the reunion and regrets for enforced absence, the report of the historian, Mrs. Burns Helmick, was then in order. The report showed a great amount of research by correspondence and through public libraries for the history of the Helmick name. These efforts were crowned with much success, and the evidence through fragmentary and often broken in line, points conclusively to the fact that the family is of Prussian origin; during the 16th century the name is found among the early settlers of Virginia near Richmond from whence in after years a branch settled in the western part of the old Dominion, and it is from this branch that the family in this county has descended. The success of the historian was so gratifying that she was authorized to continue the investigation, and commence a permanent record of the family history. Mrs. Mattie Brown of Ft. Wayne, Ind. a cousin, being present entertained the gathering by a rehearsal of some of the unwritten history of the family; a solo by Mrs. Essie Helmick Shearer. A full complement of officers were elected for the ensuing year.

The death of two members occurred during the year. Charles M. Shell of Sodus township, and George Goble of Leroy, Kansas.

Adjourned for one year.

Carmer and Carmer's fall stock is in. Have you seen it.

THE LADY OF LYNN

By SIR WALTER BESANT

Copyright, 1900, by Sir Walter Besant

But she spoke no more. Then he lost control of himself and for awhile stamped and swore, threatened and cursed. "You will have it, then? Here, John, go and look for a ladder. There's always a ladder in the back yard. Put it up against the thatch. Tear it down. Make a hole in the roof. Tear off the whole roof."

The man propped his chair pole against the door and went round to look for the ladder and to obey orders. "So," Molly told me, "I was besieged. Mr. Rising was below, but I had my knife, and he was afraid to venture up the steps. I heard the men clumping about outside. I heard them plant the ladder and climb up. Now, a countryman who understands a thatch is able to tear it off very quickly, either to make or mend a hole or to tear down the roof altogether, and I feared that I must use my knife seriously. Was ever woman more barbarously abused? Well, I waited. By the quick tearing away of the straw I saw that the fellow on the ladder knew how to thatch a rick or a cottage. In a few minutes there would be a hole big enough for half a dozen men to enter. Jack," her cheek flushed and her eye brightened, "God forgive me, but I made up my mind the moment that man stepped within the room to plunge my knife into his heart."

However, this last act of defense was not necessary. "Master," cried the postboy, who was waiting with the chaise—"master, here be men on horseback, galloping. I doubt they are coming after the lady."

Tom Rising stepped to the door and looked down the road. The day was already beginning to break. He saw in the dim light a company of horsemen galloping along the road. It was a bad road, and there had been rain, so that the horses went heavily. They were very near. In a few moments they would be upon him. He looked at the chaise. He made one more effort.

"Molly," he said, "come down quick. There is just time. Let us have no more fooling." Again she made no reply. Knife in hand, with crimson cheek and set lips, she watched the hole in the thatch and the man tearing it away.

Tom Rising swore again most blasphemously. Then, seeing that the game was lost, he loosened his sword in its scabbard and stepped into the middle of the road.

CHAPTER VII. THE PUNISHMENT.

MUST admit that in the conduct of this affair Lord Fylingdale showed both coolness and resolution. The news that the heiress of Lynn had been abducted spread immediately through the rooms. The whole company docked to the doors, where Lord Fylingdale stood calm and without passion, while beside him the old captain stamped and cursed the villains unknown.

He called Molly's chairmen. What had those fellows seen? They said that they were waiting by orders; that another chair stood before them at the door, the bearers of which were strangers to them, a fact which at this crowded season occurred constantly; that a gentleman whose name they knew not, but whom they had seen in the streets and at the assembly, mostly drunk, had come out hastily and spoken to these chairmen; that his lordship himself had handed the lady into the chair and closed the doors, to their astonishment, because they were themselves waiting for the lady, and that the chair was carried off instantly, leaving them in bewilderment, not knowing what to do.

He asked them next for a closer description of the gentleman. He was young, it appeared. He was red in the face. He looked masterful. He cursed the chairmen in a very free and noble manner. One of the chairmen gave him his sword to wear, which is not permitted in the assembly. He was swearing all the time, as if in great wrath. "My lord," a gentleman interrupted, "the description fits Tom Rising."

A dozen gentlemen stopped forward and offered their help and their swords, if necessary. Among them was Colonel Lanyon.

"Come, then; let us adjourn to the Crown and make inquiries. Be of good cheer, captain. We will find out which way they took. If they have nothing but the chair to carry her away, we can easily catch them up."

"I know my girl," said the captain. "It is not one man who can daunt her, nor will a dozen men force her to marry against her will. If they try, there will be murder."

"If we cannot find the way they took, we must scour the country." At the gates of the garden they learned that the keeper had seen the chair go out and observed that it was closely followed by a gentleman whom he could only describe by his height, which was taller than the average. Now, Tom Rising was six feet at least.

At the Crown, in Lord Fylingdale's room, they held a brief consultation, after which the gentlemen who had volunteered their help went out into the town to make inquiries.

In a few minutes they began to return. It was ascertained that Tom Rising was not at his lodging, nor was he at the Rose tavern, nor could he be found at any of the taverns used by gentlemen. This strengthened the suspicion against him. Then one remembered the strange words of the early morning in which Tom Rising had promised his friends that he would before the next day was done be the richest man in the county—rich enough to play with them until he had stripped every man as bare as Adam. Those words were taken as mere drunken ravings. But now they seemed to have had a meaning. Where was Tom Rising?

Another discovery was that of the two men belonging to the chair in which Molly was carried off. They were found in one of the low taverns by the riverside drinking. One of them was already too far gone to speak; the other, with a stronger head, was able to give information, which he was quite ready to do. A gentleman, he said, had engaged the chair and had given them a guinea to drink if they would suffer him to find his own chairmen. His description of the gentleman corresponded with that already furnished. He spoke of a tall gentleman with a flushed face and rough manner of speech. He knew nothing more except that two men, strangers to himself, had taken the chair and carried it off.

"Gentlemen," said his lordship, "there can be, I fear, no doubt. The abduction of Miss Molly has been designed and attempted by Mr. Rising. Fortunately he cannot have gone very far. It remains for us to find the road which he has taken."

They fell to considering the various roads which lead out of the town. There is the highroad to Ely Cambridge and London, but to carry a chair with an unwilling lady in it on the highroad, frequented by night as well as by day with travelers of all kinds and strings of pack horses, would be ridiculous. There was the road which led to the villages on the east side of the Wash. There was also the road to Swaffham and Norwich.

"I am of opinion," said one of the gentlemen, "that he has fixed on some lonely place not far from Lynn where he can make her prisoner until she complies with his purpose and consents to marry him." Captain Crowle shook his head. "She would never consent," he said. "My girl is almost as strong as any man and quite as resolute. There will be murder if this villain attempts violence." Just then the landlady of the Crown threw open the door and burst in. "Oh, gentlemen, gentlemen," she cried, "I have found out where they are gone! Ride after them! Ride after them, quick, before worse mischief is done. I have ordered all the horses in the stables to be saddled. There are eight. Quick, gentlemen! Ride after them!" "Quick, quick!" said his lordship. "Where are they? Where are they?" "They are on their way. They cannot be there yet."

POULTRY

POULTRY GAINING PROMINENCE.—The indications are that the poultry interest has gained ground very fast within the past few years. Quite a number of those engaged in publishing poultry journals have sent out their representative this summer, who have gone about photographing farms—or plants, as they are called, and casually gaining permission to publish them in the columns of their journals, along with an advertisement. This reminds us of the value of our columns to the poultry fancier who has stock of any kind to sell, not so much for exhibition purposes as for those who desire to have the best on their farms. One advertiser has made a sale to the amount of several hundred dollars, in New York state, recently; such a sale of poultry, in summer, is of value to any breeder. Sales are usually made to those who go to their summer homes after the spring trade has passed. Considerable stock goes to the mountains after June 15th. All these facts are worth consideration by those who have anything to sell in this line.

BANTAMS FOR FOOD.—Those who raise Cochins Bantams are very fond of them for table use. A lady stated recently that she preferred fullgrown Cochins Bantams for her table to Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes or Cochins, all of which they had on the farm in purity, and selection being free. The little Cochins Bantams, she said, are always fat, plump and juicy; they have so little waste or offal, and can be used either to broil or roast or fricassee; are good for the frying-pan or the spit; about two of them are equal to a medium-sized fowl.

BLACK DUCKS.—The Black Cayuga duck has the name of being the most delicious winter table duck; they are not large, have very bright, showy plumage, are quite hardy, but scarce in this country, from the fact every thing with us is for the white plumage and yellow skin. They are very popular on estates on the other side, where they and the Rouen have the lead. Neither of these ducks is so soft in meat as the Pekin, nor do they become over fat so easily, nor will they make so quick growth.

BEAUTIFUL PHEASANTS.—Mr. Homer Davenport, the expert cartoonist for the New York Journal, has imported a grand lot of pheasants, pea fowl and jungle fowl. This gentleman has done more to push forward the interest in these rare birds than has any other one man in America. He has also accepted the commission to secure a number of fine pheasants and other fowls for the New York Zoo in the Bronx.

PEA FOWL AND GUINEAS.—Few people are aware of several varieties of pea fowls, guinea fowls and turkeys. It is our purpose, from time to time to furnish our readers with a short description of all these several kinds and varieties, so that they may be able to select according to their liking from among the rare and beautiful, and have the novelty of keeping rare specimens for pleasure, the product of which are fine for table use.

UTILITY AND BEAUTY.—These questions, from time to time, stir up considerable comment among the poultry fanciers and market poultry people. One journal gives the following definition: "Utility is the science, and beauty the art, of poultry breeding." Now, as science is largely speculative, and art is the accomplishment of something that is often in opposition to nature, this can scarcely be called a final settlement of the much written of subject.

KEEP YOUR RECORDS!—Many surprises would result from keeping on the farm, if it could really be known just how many eggs one's fowls did produce, exactly the number consumed by the family, and the number sold for market. If equally well kept records showed the number of fowls consumed and sold, the hen would stand the better all along the line. The writer spent two days on a farm a short time ago, and, from curiosity, inquired on both days as to the consumption of these two products, and was informed that forty odd eggs and six chickens were used for six people, within the forty eight hours.

WET AND DAMP.—It is often stated that wet weather is good for young ducks. This is an error; young ducks suffer quite as much from an excess of wet and damp as do fowls or turkeys. Any or all of them will endure considerable bad weather, providing they have a dry place in which they may have shelter. If the young chick or fowl of any kind can have a dry place for its feet, when it wishes, it will get on in wet weather; but wet weather, wet grass and wet surroundings, with no chance for a dry spot, will work destruction.

WHEN TO FEED.—Unusual attention has been given, the past season, to the question: How soon after coming from the shell should the young chick be fed? Some say, in forty eight hours; others extend the time to from four to six days. Nature governs all these things, and the young chick will eat as soon as it is hungry; a bushel of food will not induce them to eat any sooner than they need the food; and as surely as they are deprived of their food after they need it, they will be weak, undersized; sickly things all their days. There is entirely too much theory in the chicken business at present, for the good of the chick. Less guessing and more common sense will raise more chicks to maturity.

THAT BLACK JAVA.—Farm poultry has presented the latest points on the origin of the Plymouth Rocks. The main point seems to be—are Javas Javas, or are they Cochins? It seems to be a settled fact that all Cochins had yellow shanks as they came from China. They were known by many names, but the Java that helped to form the Plymouth Rock had dark colored legs; this taint still clings to the Plymouth Rock. Call them by what name you will, but don't confound them with the Cochins or Shanghais that originally had the yellow shanks, which have been disturbed on the Blacks by the introduction of other blood.

BROILERS.—These have not for many years, been so high in price in July as they have been this year. Fine high-class broilers have been scarce in the New York market; eggs have been plentiful and better than usual. With continued care and watchfulness, all could grade their eggs so as to have them No. 1 and 2, in place of all being graded as mixed eggs.

GLASHED DATES.—It is to be regretted that the two great shows of the country have been compelled, through circumstances which seem unavoidable, to select the same dates for holding their exhibitions. Two such important events as the New York and Boston shows should not be held the same week. Many exhibitors, many writers on poultry topics, and the principals of many journals wish to be present at both. The management is supreme as to the selection of the dates, but other elements are largely responsible for the success of the show, and it is due them that one management should not select dates that belong by precedent to others.

NEW WYANDOTTES.—The new variety of Wyandottes, called Silver-Penciled Wyandottes, is a beautiful fowl; but beyond all this they are wonderful egg-producers. A lot are known to have been hatched early in July, 1900, which began to lay about Christmas. Two of them have continued to lay right along for seven months. During May these two hens laid one, 21 eggs; the other, 23 eggs. For 210 days, ending July 20, these two hens have laid 297 eggs between them. If the ratio could be maintained, these two hens might produce in the full 365 days 259 eggs each. But it is to be presumed that they cannot continue at this rate much longer. This new variety is a combination of the original Silver laced Wyandotte and the dark Brahma. In them has been united the blood of two of the best general-purpose fowls we have. None of our American breeds are better for eggs and market poultry than the first Wyandotte that was originated in upper New York state. Fully their equal is the Dark Brahma. The union of the two has produced a fowl that has the Wyandotte shape with the Dark Brahma color. The credit of originating the new variety belongs to Cayuga County, N. Y.

GEESSE IN RHODE ISLAND.—Special attention is being paid to the cultivation of geese for market by many stock growers of Rhode Island. After the young are three or four weeks old, they live principally by grazing! The greater part of their raising can be gained from low marshy lands that will not profitably grow any crop, even hay. They are easily handled, and can be confined within a four foot fence, providing there is no hole for them to go through. Geese pay fully as well as turkeys, and can be reared upon poor, waste land of any kind that will provide plenty of green food.

The Clutch of Circumstances.

BY E. C. WALTZ.
(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
When the wind swept the boat across the waters, tossing it to and fro in a mocking and mad glee, Carter Starr had only the one thought—to save his companion and himself. The boatride was a mad escapade on the part of both—a daring defiance of the old quarrel between her uncle and adopted father, Belden Storms and his own family. But when the fates threw them together for a fortnight's sojourn at the seaside hotel, the two saw a humor in the situation that drove them into follies and pranks undreamed of before.

He knew that she was pretty and an heiress. He knew that his own fortunes depended upon the caprice of his grandfather. She admired him with a woman's admiration, because he was forbidden to her by every tradition of the Storms family.

Introduced by accident and among strangers, the two laughed into each other's eyes and defied fortune and tradition. They met afterwards by those strange accidents that seem arranged for such cases, in the early morning dip in the sea, in the nooks of the long porticoes, at night during the pauses of the dance—and, on an island party over the bay, in the dance itself because it was safe enough. But this afternoon had been utterly without precedent. He had strolled away in his flannels for a smoke and to read while the hotel people napped after luncheon. And, in the shade of a great rock, he had chanced upon Eloise Storms awake, alert, saucy and magnetic. An hour later they went out for a sail over to Idle Rock. That was the story—only they had not counted on what might happen.

What did happen made them helpless, their boat disabled in a few moments, at the mercy of a wild sea. Then was the dreadful darkness of the tossing waters and a blinding rain. Eloise's red parasol went to and fro toward the shore like a gay buoy at the first gust. And after it went her pique cap and his own soft felt, mere links in a chain of evidence in after hours.

It was hard to say which was the paler face in the first realizations of the moment. But Eloise recovered herself with the courage of her race.

"We shall be carried out to sea."
He looked at her with trembling lips "I should have known better than to have brought you."
She smiled bitterly.

"And I should not have come. We are even. Can we get through the storm?"
He looked out to the infinite, omnipotent sea. His reckless moods fell from him. The wind blew the girl's brown hair about her shoulders. He could not see her face. He tried to keep a control of the rudder for a long time but gave it up as useless. Out, out into the darkness and tossing waters they went with the receding tide. Finally he crept along close to her and took her hands.

"You have been very brave—I think I will tell you that the boat may break up—later. It is an old one and leaking horribly. Here is a rope. I will tie it about you and myself as well as I can and to the mast and deck piece. Believe me, I will do all I can to save you."
She put her hands on his shoulders and looked into his eyes.

"Forgive me."
"For what?"
"Folly. I knew better than to dare Fate so."
"So did I. You must forgive me. A man should be wise."
"And a woman discreet. What would my uncle and aunt say now?"
He was knotting the rope about her. "We may never know. Now we cannot be separated. If one drowns

"Wait," he cried, "and I'll give you something to halloo for. Miss Storms and myself have been very near Death and have come back as we were saved, together. We were married this morning at St. Stephen's across the bay."
The old man's eyes at once met those of the red-faced man's in a look of intense relief. He caught his grandson's arm.

"And you did right, you scamp!" he roared out, "You are always a gentleman."
And Eloise felt her uncle's wet cheek against her own.
"The proper thing," he sobbed, "the proper thing—and, under the circumstances, the only thing."

Piano Leather Made of Deer Hide.
The finest and most costly leather that is used in this country for manufacturing purposes is known in the trade as piano leather. This leather, so called because it is exclusively employed for covering piano hammers, is in its raw state an American product, being the skin of the gray deer, which are found only in the vicinity of the great northern and western lakes. But as American tanners have not acquired the art of properly curing the skins they have to be shipped to Thuringia, Germany, to be tanned before they can be used by the manufacturers of piano actions.

"We shall be carried to sea," the other will. It is just, is it not? And it makes chances."
"I would not have it any other way. Who wants to go into the Unknown alone?"
He rose up suddenly.

"Eloise, the worst is coming. Give me your hand, no, hold to me. See!" She looked seaward and saw that which made her shriek and cling to him.
Two hours later they lay somewhere on the sand, still in a terrible darkness and the storm raging about them. That they were alive seemed a miracle. When consciousness returned to him the sea was washing their bodies. He had dragged her higher onto the sand and discovered that she was not dead. Now her head was pillowed on his shoulder and her face hidden on his breast.

"Where are we?"

"I do not know. We must wait for light. It may be an island—it may be the shore."

She laughed bitterly.
"It does not make much difference. I shall never go back."

"Why? O, I know, I know!"
"You do not know the Storms. I am forever disgraced in their eyes. I would rather be dead. I shall never go back. Get me away somewhere and let me disappear. I will work, anything, anything, rather than face my uncle."

Her voice was scornful and dreary enough. He smoothed her wind-roughened hair.

"Do not think that I do not know. I cannot see that my own case is very different. I, too, have offended against the unwritten laws. I also must bear my punishment."

"Which will be—"
"My grandfather never forgives."
"I know that well."

After a long silence during which

They were both stern and choleric. the wind seemed somewhat less terrible, he said, in a low tone:

"But I will make it up to you."
"How can you?"
"I can at least save you from the worst."

"The worst," she shuddered.
"I can make you my wife."
"You? And I was to make such a great marriage?"

"So was I. Perhaps this is one. We can call it so."
She wrung her hands. "I cannot go back alone. I cannot. But nothing could be worse than the return. I see no other way. Can you brave it?"
He smoothed her hair from her forehead.

"We know the world and we see the situation. We were saved together and are known to have been out on the sea by this time. I will take you back as my wife. That will be the only thing now—as I see."
"But marriage—marriage is a solemn, a sacred tie."

"So it is. We will try to do our duty. I think death has purified our souls tonight. So be comforted and we will see what the light brings us. It may solve the problem of what to do next."

In the faint gray dawn he awoke from a troubled sleep. They were on a long sandy beach. Clear across the bay were the buildings of the great hotel. Beyond and above them was a small village and the cross of a tiny stone church showed over the trees.

"The way is found," he said, calmly, "come, we will go yonder."

The news of their rescue went by telephone to the great hotel and the whole house, excited by their disappearance and survival, waited on the piazzas and at the wharf for their return on the coast steamer.

The people at the village had given them some clothing but they presented a strange appearance as they stepped on shore. At the gang-plank stood a white-haired old man and a red-faced middle-aged man. They were both stern and choleric, their great relief finding vent in hot anger. The culprits came together. Carter Starr held his head high and his lips were as set as his grandfather's own. Eloise was wan and clung to his arm. There was a loud huzzahing of the passengers and a dash forward to shake hands.

"Wait," he cried, "and I'll give you something to halloo for. Miss Storms and myself have been very near Death and have come back as we were saved, together. We were married this morning at St. Stephen's across the bay."

The old man's eyes at once met those of the red-faced man's in a look of intense relief. He caught his grandson's arm.

"And you did right, you scamp!" he roared out, "You are always a gentleman."

And Eloise felt her uncle's wet cheek against her own.

"The proper thing," he sobbed, "the proper thing—and, under the circumstances, the only thing."

Piano Leather Made of Deer Hide.
The finest and most costly leather that is used in this country for manufacturing purposes is known in the trade as piano leather. This leather, so called because it is exclusively employed for covering piano hammers, is in its raw state an American product, being the skin of the gray deer, which are found only in the vicinity of the great northern and western lakes. But as American tanners have not acquired the art of properly curing the skins they have to be shipped to Thuringia, Germany, to be tanned before they can be used by the manufacturers of piano actions.

Fall Styles in Millinery.

The most used shapes in fall millinery are low-crowned effects and the striking Gainsboroughs. These hats, with their rather stupendous proportion, are not becoming to the majority of women; but young faces with a profusion of fluffly curls are particularly attractive when framed by the large black velvet brims. Many of the hats are made with broad brims and very little crown, while some are without the suggestion of one. The small three-cornered marquis shapes give a piquant look to a pretty face and are seen with varied trimmings. The tricorn hat appears in modified form. The fan-o-shanter returns this fall, and felt plateaux are worn in pale shades. The Marie Antoinette hats worn during the summer may be observed in winter models. Black hats are always popular, as they give tone to the plainest costume. White felts trimmed with black plumeage, are very effective worn with a black toilet. Feathers of every sort are used on the winter models. Long, wavy ostrich-plumes are seen in great profusion. Biceps, wings, pompons and even whole birds are used a great deal. Hats composed entirely of plumeage may be seen.—HELEN LOUISA MORRIS in the October Woman's Home Companion.

McClure's Magazine—The October Number.

No man in America today is more in the public eye than J. Pierpont Morgan. In recognition of this fact, the October number of McClure's magazine opens with a sketch of Mr. Morgan, carefully prepared by Ray Stannard Baker, author of the character sketches of Roosevelt, Sampson and Weed. The article is concise and dignified, and is according to a friend of Mr. Morgan's, "the best and most complete presentation of a great subject." The illustrations are from original drawings by W. R. Leigh, Geo Varian, Otto Bacher and A. Macheferet, and from photographs. Of almost equal importance is Josiah Flynt's "The Tammany Commandment." At this time, when fresh revelations of the protection of vice in New York are being made continually and when the campaign for the overthrow of Tammany is in full swing, Mr. Flynt's startling expose is particularly timely. It is a complete exposition of the system of police protection of vice and crime as that system is understood by those protected. It is a remarkable campaign document. Other articles are Clara Morris's entertaining account of the "Staging of Miss Multon," Cyrus Townsend Brady's "appreciation" of "Frontenac, the Savior of Canada," and Wm Stamps Cherry's (the African explorer,) thrilling description of "Elephant Hunting in Africa."

Both the quality of the contributions and the beauty of the illustrations are up to the very high standard set by the August and September numbers. McClure's never gets below its own level, and its own level is the standard of excellence.

The coming season to the Century magazine will be "A Year of American Humor."

Contributions have already been engaged from the best known American writers of humorous stories and sketches, including Mark Twain, F. P. Dunne "Mr. Dooley," Frank R. Stockton, Oliver Herford Geo Ade, Edward W. Townsend "Chimmie Fadden" Ruth McEnery Stuart, Gelett Burgess, Tudor Jenks, Charles Battell Loomis, and others. Attention will be paid during the year to American humor of the past. In the November Century Professor W. P. Trent of Columbia University will write "A Retrospect of American Humor" for the illustration of which the Century has procured portraits of nearly two score to the best-known of the older humorists, including "Petroleum V. Nasby" John G. Saxe, "Q. K. Philander Doesticks," "Sam Slick," and "Artemus Ward." There will be during the year a number of contributions from new humorous writers, and articles reminiscent of those of the past.

OUR LITERATURE.

Literature, like associates, exerts an influence over our lives, either for good or evil; therefore we should select only that which is pure, casting aside all that is worthless. And as we are known by the company we keep, so our characters are ascertained to a certain extent by the books we read. If the trashy literature that crowd the desks and tables in so many of our homes were removed there would not be as many thoughtless young men and women going to degradation and ruin.

How essential it is that we should be choice in our literature; the success of our lives, to a certain extent, depends upon the great minds that we commune with in secret. We should take up books as among our best friends; every volume we peruse will join the great company of joyous servitors who will wait around our mental intellect, and upon our daily characters will be stamped that which is noble and great. Well chosen literature will serve as never-fading guides through life to all who would be accompanied thereby.—Mrs. Mary A. Thomas of Chattanooga, Tenn., in Pennsylvania Grit.

SCIENCE IN AGRICULTURE.

National Government Going to the Root of Successful Growing.

The investigations on agricultural soils which are being conducted in this country are probably unsurpassed in quality and extent by those of any country, unless it be Russia, where a very systematic and extensive line of investigations, including a survey and classification of the soils of the whole country, has been in progress for a number of years. The work in this country has been carried on mainly by a number of the agricultural experiment stations and the division of soils of the national department of agriculture. The report of the field operations of the division of soils for 1899, by Prof. Milton Whitney and a number of his assistants, lately issued, is a report of progress in surveying the soils of the United States. During the year areas aggregating about 720,000 acres were studied in the field and mapped.

NO DEFENSE TO MAKE

Seems To Be the Situation with the Counsel Acting for the Assassin Czolgosz.

HE PLEADS GUILTY FOR HIMSELF

While His Counsel Puts in a Plea of "Not Guilty."

That Being According to Law—Testimony of the Physicians Explains the Medical Treatment at Two Points.

Buffalo, Sept. 24.—Leon F. Czolgosz was placed on trial yesterday morning, charged with the murder of President William McKinley. He entered a plea of "guilty," which was subsequently changed to "not guilty" by direction of the court. All the events of the day indicated that the trial will be short. Court convened at 10 a. m., and within two hours eight jurors had been secured. Technicalities were not raised by examining counsel, but it was significant that every man who said he had not formed an opinion on the case was excused by the district attorney. Those who acknowledged that they had formed an opinion, or stated that they were prejudiced, but admitted that their opinion could be changed by evidence, were accepted by each side. Justice Truman C. White, one of the oldest and most experienced of the supreme court judges, was on the bench.

Prisoner's Counsel Makes a Statement.
Immediately after the opening of the court, and after the prisoner had pleaded, Justice Loran Lewis, senior counsel for the defendant, announced that he and his colleagues, former Justice Robert C. Titus, and Carlton E. Ladd, were ready to act in behalf of the prisoner. "I thought it best," he said, "for my colleagues and myself that I should say something regarding our presence here as attorneys for the defendant. * * * When the circumstances of my selection were told to me I was extremely reluctant to accept. But the duty had been imposed, and I considered it my duty, in all the circumstances, to defend this man. I ask that no evidence be presented here—that the court will not permit the acceptance of any evidence—unless it would be accepted at the trial of the most meager criminal in the land."

Judge Promises a Fair Trial.
"I am familiar with these circumstances," said Justice White in reply, "and I wish to say I will give you every assurance that the prisoner will have a fair and impartial trial, and that during the progress of the trial he will receive such treatment as the law demands in any criminal case." The work of securing the jurors was then undertaken with alacrity that was amazing. Before the day was over the entire panel had been sworn, the jurors had listened to a description of the Temple of Music, where the crime occurred, and had been told by three surgeons what caused the death of the president. They had also learned why the fatal bullet had not been located.

PHYSICIANS GIVE TESTIMONY
Two Things Explained That Had Previously Been in the Dark.

The presentation of the government's case began shortly before 3 o'clock when Assistant District Attorney Haller began, with much deliberation, to address the jury. He spoke very briefly. "We shall show," said he, "that for some days prior to the shooting this defendant had premeditated the shooting of the president. He knew that on the 6th of September the president would receive the populace in the Temple of Music; that on that day he went to the exposition, got into line with the people and approached the president; that he had a weapon concealed in his hand, and as the president extended his hand in kindly greeting he fired the fatal shot."

The first witness, Samuel J. Fields, chief engineer of the Pan-American exposition, described the ground floor plan of the Temple of Music, and was followed by Perry A. Bliss, a photographer, who presented views of the interior of the building. The remainder of the afternoon was taken up with the testimony of three physicians, two of whom had attended the president during his last days, while the other performed the autopsy.

The latter, Dr. Harry R. Gaylord, was the first to be called. He described the location of the wounds in the stomach and the direction of the bullet. The cause of death was attributed to the gunshot wound, but, fundamentally, he said it was due to the changes back of the stomach in the pancreas, caused by the "breaking down" of the material of the pancreas as a result of the passage of the bullet. Dr. Herman Myer followed, and his testimony was of importance, inasmuch as it brought out the fact that the reason why the fatal bullet had not been located at the autopsy was because of the unwillingness of the president's relatives to have the body further mutilated by their instruments. Dr. Myer, and Dr. Mann, who followed him, both testified that the principal cause of death was the gunshot wound in the stomach. One effect of this wound was, they said, to cause the gangrene to form in the pancreas, and the spot of poisoned tissue was as large as a silver dollar. Dr. Mann also testified that the reason the bullet was not located when the operation was performed at the hospital in the exposition grounds was that to have searched further for it would have necessitated removal of the bowels, and the patient was too weak to risk doing that.

The prisoner during the morning evinced no interest whatever in the proceedings, but as the testimony was introduced he paid more attention to what was said and looked at the various witnesses closely. It is not probable that any defense will be put in, owing to the character of the prisoner and his refusal to help his attorneys in any way to procure evidence.

In the evening he was united in the bonds of matrimony with Miss Florence B. Morse, of this city, for his bride.

He thought his new happiness would not be complete without his child by his first wife, who lives at Grand Rapids, and McConnell went to that city Sunday morning and got possession of the child, but the mother got out a warrant, and McConnell was arrested charged with kidnaping. He was not released until too late to reach his home that night. McConnell was granted the custody of the child by the courts.

SIGNS OF A WRECK FOUND

Craft May Have Foundered on the Lake Of St. Joseph.

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 24.—Evidence that some unknown pleasure sailing yacht is now helplessly adrift in Lake Michigan or that the craft has foundered and crew perished during the heavy gale that prevailed on the lake for the last week was brought about by the finding of a broken spar by the life-saving crew of this city Saturday evening. The spar is thirty feet long and was found just outside the harbor.

Captain Stevens said: "I have not learned of any accidents along this shore, but the fact remains that this spar shows a new break, and I am satisfied that some unknown sailing yacht was caught in the gale and its rigging carried away. It is a question as to whether a yacht under such circumstances could make port in safety."

SHOT AND KILLED HIS MAN.

But Says He Had Not the Slightest Intention of Doing So.

Lake View, Mich., Sept. 21.—Fred Nolan shot and instantly killed Cash Helms at Rushford, ten miles north-west of here, Wednesday. Helms had rented the premises where the shooting took place to John Walworth, who is in Washington, D. C. During Walworth's absence his son-in-law, Fred Nolan, had been staying with the family.

Helms, for some unknown reason, didn't want Nolan there, and undertook to throw him out. He went to the house and met Nolan in the yard. He began calling names and abusing him. Nolan told Helms he wouldn't stand it and started to go in the house. Helms followed him to the door, continuing his abuse. As Nolan stepped inside the doorway he pulled a revolver and shot Helms in the left temple. Death was instantaneous. Nolan gave himself up.

The dead man is the last of what in the early days in this section was known as the Helms brothers gang, which carried on horse and cattle stealing extensively. He had been shot twice before, once quite seriously. One of his brothers died in Jackson prison.

Big Rapids, Mich., Sept. 21.—Fred Nolan, who is in jail here charged with the murder of Cash Helms, at Rushford, says that he had not the slightest intention of shooting Helms. He says he thought Helms was about to attack him, and he pulled the revolver to scare Helms, but the weapon exploded prematurely.

No great anxiety was felt until after the flames had been subdued, when the headless and legless trunk of the woman was found sitting upright in one corner of the ruins. She had been in poor health for some time.

In a Glass of Water.
Put a handful of glazed coffee in a glass of water, wash off the coating, look at it; smell it! Is it fit to drink? Give LION COFFEE the same test. It leaves the water bright and clear, because it's just pure coffee.
The sealed package insures uniform quality and freshness.
