PEACHES TO LONDON.

Berrien County Fruit Will Cross the Ocean.

A new market for peaches has been discovered and within a few days some way to London.

Georgia N. Crandall of Fort Valley, Georgia, who is interested in the Fort Valley Fruit Package company, was in St. Joseph Saturday and said that Hale. | before undertaken. one of the biggest peach raisers in the world, recently sent two carloads of Elberta peaches to London via New York. It took nine days for the fruit to reach its destination but it was evidently in good condition as the returns to Mr. Hale showed that he received from $4.50 to $5.00 per bushel for his fruit.

Mr. Crandall says it is just as easy to ship peaches from here to London as from Fort Valley but it must be choice fruit and not very ripe.

It is understood that Rolland Morrill, having a large peach orchard near Benton Harbor and another in Texas will try the experiment of shipping the fruit from his Benton Harbor orchard.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT. (Who Had a Narrow Escape from Death Near Pittsfield, Mass.)

'Agent William Craig, was instantly killed, and David J. Pratt, of Dalton, who was guiding the horses attached to the vehicle, was seriously injured. President Roosevelt himself was badly shaken up, but received only a slight facial bruise. Secretary Cortelyou, who occupied a seat directly opposite the president in the landau, sustained a minor wound in the back of the head, and Gov. Crane, who sat beside the president extricated himself from the wreck practically without a scratch.

Witnessed by Hundreds. The president and party were driving from this city to Lenox through South street, one of the principal thoroughfares of Pittsfield, which was lined with cheering people, and the catastrophe occurred in the plain view of hundreds, whose happiness at the advent of the nation's chief was suddenly turned to grief.

The president and his party were riding in an open landau, drawn by four horses, en route for Lenox. The president, Gov. Crane and Secretary Cortelyou were in the vehicle and Secret Service Agent Craig was on the box with Driver Pratt. The landay was followed by half a dozen other carriages.

The trolley car raced down the hill, from behind, being within sight of the procession for half a mile and going at a speed of from 40 to 50 miles an hour. The carriages in the rear managed to get out of the way, but the president's was at the part of the road where the space to the right of the trolley track was very narrow. On each side of the chief executive's carriage rode the mounted troopers of the local cavalry company and the horsemen on the left of the landau had turned on to the track with the trolley car immediately behind them, though some yards distant. Alarmed by the clanging gong, they both turned in their saddles and waved vigorously to the motorman to stop his car. Almost at the same instant Gov. Crane, who his feet and likewise motioned to the motorman.

The horsemen managed to get their frightened animals out of the way just in time, and the car struck the rear wheel of the carriage on the left side and plowed through to the front wheel of the vehicle, which received the full force of the blow. The carriage was apset in the twinkling of an eye, and one horse fell dead on the tracks. The other three powerful grays attached to the vehicle started to run and, dragged by them and pushed by the force of the car, the wrecked carriage was moved 30 or 40 feet.

Agent Craig's Death. Agent Craig fell from his seat imnediately in front of the car, and it passed completely over his body. Driver Pratt, in falling, struck the dead horse immediately in front of him, and rolled off clear of the car, thus escaping a similar fate. President Roosevelt, Gov. Crane and Secretary Cortelyou were thrown together in the bottom of their carriage.

The President's Injuries. Almost instantly a score of men jumped to the heads of the frightened horses and stopped their further progress. Gov. Crane was the first to get to his seat, escaping entirely unhart. He turned immediately to the president, helped the latter to arise, and together they assisted Secretary Cortelyou. The president's lip was cut and blood was flowing from the wound. His clothing was much disarranged, and he was severe-

Able to Resume Journey. The president and Mr. Cortelyou went into a farmhouse and washed in the blood from their faces, the president's mouth and Mr. Cortelyou's head bleeding a good deal. The president then directed that one of the other carriages be brought up and that the trip be continued exactly according to programme, which was done. In each case, instead of making an address, the president explained briefly that there had been a fatal accident, and that therefore he would ask to be excused from doing more than express his thanks to his hearers for their greeting. This was done at Lenox, Stockbridge, Great Barrington, Milford and Bridgeport.

Charged with Manslaughter. Motorman Madden and Conductor Kelly were arrested and charged with manslaughter. Bail for the motorman of $5,000 was furnished by ex-Alderman Maurice J. PRAISES UNIONS.

President Roosevelt, at Chattanooga, Talks of Value of Organization.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 9 .- President Roosevelt has been elected an honorary member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen. The brotherhood first held its executive session, which the president attended. Acting Grand Master Hannahan welcomed the president, stating that his attendance at the convention would do great good to organized labor, not only in this country, but in Canada and other countries as

The president returned his thanks for the welcome and said he was glad to be with the brotherhood. He said the Firemen's brotherhood was the result which naturally comes from the application of the principle of common sense to their work. He said that organized labor never had made an unreasonable request of him, and that if it had he would have denied it.

John F. McNamee, of Columbus, O., one of the grand officers and a democratic member of the legislature, moved that the degree of grand honorary membership be conferred upon President Roosevelt, and the motion was unanimously adopted.

The president thanked the convention for the compliment paid him and Grand Master Sargent then gave him a pass which admits him to all meetings of the brotherhood.
At this point the brotherhood adjourned until nine o'clock Tuesday morning and the public was admitted to the Auditorium to hear the president's address. While the au- Denny, William Tamblyn, J. J. Hannidience was being seated the band rendered "America," the president and the others in the hall rising.

Mayor Chambliss delivered a short address of greeting in which he welcomed to Chattanooga all the firemen. whether they came from Canada. Mexico or Oyster Bay. After an address of welcome in behalf of the state by Gov. McMillan and an address by Grand Master Sargent, President Roosevelt was introduced by Acting Grand Master Hannahan.

"I believe emphatically." he said, "in organized labor. The worth of an organization," he continued, "depends upon its being handled with the courage, the skill, the wisdom, the spirit of fair dealing as between man and man, and the wise self-restraint which I am glad to be able to say your brotherhood has shown."

"I feel that organizations like yours have a tonic effect upon the whole body in the Lincoln Trust company containpolitic. It is a good thing that there should be a large body of our fellow citizens who exercise the old qualities of courage, daring, and resolute, unflinching willingness to meet danger at need, and that there should be a profession whose members must year in and year out display these qualities. I hope to see all our people develop the softer, gentler virtues to an ever increasing degree, but I hope never to see them lose the sterner virtues that nake men." The president told of his trip over the battlefield of Chickaniauga Monday, and drew a lesson of the heroism shown by the armies of the north and south. The men who composed these armies, he said, possessed the requirements of which good citizens are made. He referred to the inscription on the monument raised by Kentucky to the mion and confederate soldiers from that state who fell on the battlefield. He read the inscription as follows: 'As we are united in life and they united in death, let one monument per-in grateful remembrance all the at Julius Lehmann's house, glories of that terrible conflict which member of the combine received made all men free and retained every star on the nation's flag."

"That is a good sentiment; that is asentiment by which we can all stand."
"And oh, my friends, that sentiment nas as its underlying spirit a spirit of brotherhood. I firmly believe in my countrymen, and therefore I believe that the chief things necessary in order that they should work together is that they should know one another: that the men north should know the southerner; that the men of one occupation should know the men of another occupation; so we may all realize that the things that divide us are superficial, are unimportant, and that e are and must ever be knit together into one indissoluble mass by common American manhood."

THE GREAT STRIKE.

Eighteenth Week of the Trauble Opens with the Outlook by No Means Bright.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.-The anthracite mine workers' strike enters upon its eighteenth week to-day with the lines between the operator and the mine owner drawn almost as tightly as when the suspension was inaugurated on May 12. There were many predictions that the contest would be over by the first week in September, but if the officials of the Mine Workers' union are to be believed the struggle will continue for months, unless the coal companies grant concessions. Some of the operators looked for a serious break in the ranks of the men weeks ago, and admit they are surprised at the way the strikers are holding out. Rumors are current and, in fact, statements have been made by prominent men both in and out of the coal trade, that the strike will be ended this month. President Mitchell, of the union, maintains he knows nothing of a possible early ending of the trouble, and says he knows nothing of any negotiations on foot looking to that end.

The only move now in contemplation is the suggestion that Gov. Stone call an extra session of the legislature for the purpose of passing a law that would have the effect of amicably and speedily ending the deadlock. Gov. Stone has given the matter considerable thought, and has announced that if a bill can be framed that will have the desired effect he will immediately convene the legislature.

Last week more coal left the mining region than in any previous week since the strike began. Statements have been made by mining officials that the shipment for the last six working days aggregated 100,000 tons. The normal weekly output is a little more than 1,000,000 tens.

The number of men at work throughout the entire authracite territory is difficult to obtain. It is safe to say, however, the number, compared with the total number of workers (estimated at 145,000), is small, and that among those at work the certificate miners are few. Coal is being cut in some of the mines, but as far as can be learned much of it is being done by bosses," who are experienced miners. The coal companies say they have long lists of names of men who are ready to return to work, but are unwilling to take the chance because they fear violence. With the coming of cooler weather the companies look for a break, believing that the relief now coming to the mine workers will not hold out long, and that they will be compelled to return to prepare for the winter, which is usually a rigorous one in the mountain regions.

Zanesville, O., Sept. S.—It was authoritatively denied Saturday that President Roosevelt has made any statement regarding the settlement of the coal strike as published Saturday morning. The president, it is stated, on the same authority gave out no interview of any kind in Phil-

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 8.—The coal miners' strike in the Kanawha and New River fields, involving 15,000 miners, which has been in existence since June 7. is practically at an end. Each local union is instructed to go back to work on the best possible terms without regard to the action of any other local. Several of the largest operators in the New River field have made terms with their men and will resume on Monday. No concessions have been granted, and, from the miners' standpoint, the strike is a complete failure, the men returning to work at the same rate as before the strike. There is great activity here among the operators in getting ready to start up. Evictions will stop now and old men will be given employment were possible. Most of the strikers are happy that it will soon be over, as many went out under protest at the beginning.

And this date, too, will mark the inauguration of diming-car service a la carte, on this line. This innovation will be a welcome one to travelers, who heretofore have been subjected to the abomination of taking their meals on the catchas-catch-can plan at meal stations along the route. Passengers, by means of this new service, will be enabled to eat when they feel disposed, eat what they want at their leisure, and pay only for what they order, with a choice of anything in the gastronomic line from a cup of coffee to a course dinner.

The decorations are of a superb order and the cars are brilliandly illuminated with incandescents, while a plenteous supply of electric fans will keep the atmosphere at a comfortable temperature, no matter how high the mercury may soar outside the cars. The cuisine will leave nothing to be desired. One of the most striking as well as pleasant features of this service is the announcement that the dining-car service will be made merely a convenience for the traveling public, serving everything at as near cost as possible, with no desire to make the service a source of profit to the company.—"Times-Democrat," New Orleans, August 29.

LOCATION OF BRITAIN'S NEWEST ACQUISITION.

Portuguese east Africa, which Great Britain is reported to have purchased under an agreement entered into ten years ago by Great Britain, Germany and Portugal, has an area of 301,600 square miles and a population of 3,120,600. Its ports are Delagoa bay, which has a railroad connection with the Transvaal, and whose possession is Britain's principal object in buying the territory; and Berira, from which there is a railroad line into Rhodesia, 222 miles in length, and which may go to Germany with the northern part of the territory. The possession of Delagoa bay gives Great Britain a port for the Transvaal and a naval base on the west coast. Commercially the territory has great promise, particularly in mining. Thousands of gold claims have been staked out by Britishers under concessions from Portugal, and their development awaits only improved transportation facilities. Rubber, ores, was and ivory are the prinonly improved transportation facilities. Rubber, ores, wax and ivory are the principal exports. MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Cured by Pe-ru-na of Systemic Catarrh.

Mrs. M. K. Bousch, Richmond, Va., and stages of acute and chronic catarrh

"I had catarrh all through my sys-tem for two years and could get no re-list. I was advised to try Peruna, and I have taken five bottles of it and am well and better now than I have been for years. I can advise any one who has catarrh of any part of the body to take Peruna. My little girl, who is eleven years old had catarrh, but was cured by Peruna. Before I began to take Peruna I was sick all the time, but your I are obtained and all the time. but now I am entirely cured and all praise is due Peruna."—Mrs. M. K.

Miss Pearl Bousch, writes: "When I The was a baby I contracted catarrh, and Ohio.

was doctored by several good physicians, but none did me any good. My mother was taking Peruna at the time and gave some of it to me, and I soon. began to improve, and am now well and fat as a little pig. I am twelve years old. The doctors told mother I had the consumption, but it was only catarrh."—Miss Pearl Bousch.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to test in all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

Peruna is the acknowledged catarrh remedy of the age. Dr. Hartman, the compounder of Peruna, has written a book on the phases of catarrh peculiar to women, entitled, "Health and Beauty." It will be sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Born into the World with an inherited tendency to distressing, disfiguring humours of the skin, scalp, and blood, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering but because of the dreadful fear that the disfiguration is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest, and most effective treatment available, viz., THE CUTICURA TREATMENT.

Warm baths with CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, gentle anointings with CUTICURA OINT-MENT, to instantly allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and, heal, are all that can be desired for the alleviation of the suffering of skin-tortured infants and children and the comfort of worn-out, worried mothers. A single set is often sufficient to cure when the best physicians fail.

QUAIL REPORTED SCARCE.

Hunters of experience are not looking for any great sport among the quail this fall. Last year these birds were unusually plentiful, and it seems that the enforcement of the game law was resultlng in populating hedge and stubble-field with these little aristocrats of the feathered race. William Bartholin Commits Suicide Near Riceville; Ia.

Leaves a Confession Exonerating Men Under Arrest as Accomplices In Murder of Mother and Minnie Mitchell.

Riceville, Ia., Sept. 8.—The body which was buried here Saturday morning and which was believed to be that of William Bartholin, was exhumed Sunday afternoon and positively identified as that of the Chicago double murderer. The identification was made by William Mitchell, a brother of one of Bartholin's victime, and Detective Andrew Rohan, of Chicago, who arrived here Sunday morning from Chicago. Dr. A. J. Coey. of Chicago, who came here with Detective Rohan, cut out the lower jaw of the dead murderer, which contained the two goldcrowned teeth which have figured so largely in the description sent broadcast throughout the country for purposes of identification. The jaw will be taken to Chicago by the detective.

Discovery of the Body. Bartholin's body was found last Friday afternoon about six miles from Riceville by J. G. Pratt, a resident of Riceville. Mr. Pratt was driving to Elma and when passing a flax

A Confession.

Coroner T. S. Carpenter was notified and the body was removed to an undertaking establishment at Riceville. There J. B. McCook, editor of a Riceville paper, discovered that the dead man bore a striking resemblance to the published pictures of the Chicago murderer. On searching the clothing the following letter was "To Whom It May Concern:

"Riceville, Ia., Aug. 31." In the note signed Bartholin there evidence of great mental stress. After the words "It was all Minnie and I could do" stretches an illegible scrawl, clearly showing that the writer had no intention to connect the girl with the crimes to which he referred in the preceding sentence. At the same time, it is apparent that Bartholin and Miss Mitchell shared in some trouble to which the suicide re ferred.

Several notes to Bartholin, signed "M. M." and identified by William Mitchell as the handwriting of his sister, were turned over to the broth er, who seemed eager to prevent their publication.

His Doings at Riceville. Inquiry here developes that Bartho-

lin came to Riceville August 6, before the bodies of Mrs. Bartholin and Miss Mitchell were discovered. Thomas Phee, a contractor doing some work here for the Great Western road, advertised for laborers in Chicago on August 5, offering free transportation to the place of work. Among those who responded was Bartholin, who hired under the name of George Edwards. He worked at the construction work for but half a day and has since been working on a threshing ma chine and in the harvest fields until last Sunday morning, when he was last seen leaving Riceville in the direction of the place his body was found.

A Scheme That Failed

By MARTHA MORRIS.

Ul QUITE too delighted to see you, dear," exclaimed Mrs. Violet Grant, as she clasped her cousin's hands in warm welcome, "and, of course, you know that it's to be quite the biggest ball of the year - and, really, dear, balls are quite doo delightfully new and fresh to me. They hold some wonderful fascination for me which it is impossible to explain."

"Yes. of course. I understand," returned Veronica, the blase city cousin, and she let her big, blue, handsome eyes travel leisurely over Violet. "you are young and everything is new to you -glitters, as it were, but really it seems scarcely credible that but a few months ago you were in the land of arithmetic and geography, and now you are 'out'-and quite the rage. I hear."

Violet laughed lightly and her color came and went quickly.

Great indeed were the changes that had taken place "just a few months ago," for during that the Violet had grown into an immensely pretty and graceful girl. There was a sweet, refreshing simplicity, a charming winsomeness of manner which the worldly-wise Veronica foresaw would inevitably prove fatal to mankind as whole.

She frowned and instinctively felt that this young cousin of hers might possibly prove to be a somewhat dangerous rival. Only a year and a half previously Veronica had scoffed at the proposal of a penniless, though exceedingly devoted, cavaller, and haughtily refused to even "hear him out," and had finally swept from his presence with the regal air of a queen. demanding that no further attempt should be made to address her on that subject. But it is the unexpected that inevitably happens, and it certainly occurred in this case, for through the sudden death of a wealthy uncle, a "railway king," Dudley Maitland had succeeded to that personage's vast possessions, and Verenica, reading the turn events had taken, resolved if possible to recover, by strategy if by no other means, the ground she had lost. Hence her visit to her aunt's country

"You won't mind sharing my room, will you, dear?" oried Violet, as the little circle sat and chatted over their afternoon cups of ten: "you see the house is literally packed, and-"

"O, I sha'n't mind anything," replied. Veronica, deliberately, "that is, provided I have a good time."

"Her beauty," said Veronica to herself. "if I could mar that, not permaneraly, but just temporarily, to prevent her from attending this ball. What can—what can I do?"

Ishe wasked over to the lookingglass. She surveyed the accessories on the dressing table. A little accident happens so easily, she mentally concluded, and she lifted her head with an air of superiority and self-satisfaction characteristic to her nature. And later on, when Violet returned to her room, she was delighted to find her cousin looking so fresh and ra-

"What pretty hair you have, child," remarked Veronica, later.

Violet only laughed.

"Now, mine absolutely will not wave." said Veronica, slowly, still regarding her cousin-"of course, I mean not without recourse to pins and tongs etc. Naturally curly hair is indeed something to be right down thank-

"Is it. really?" asked Violet, laugh-"It is." And then both cousins lansed into silence.

Finally the time arrived for both girls to retire for the purpose of lingering long over their respective toilets-a marter of the utmost impor-

Suddenly there was a loud shrielof dismay, and Violet's loveliness was marred. She dashed into her mother's room with eyes blinded with scalding tears. "Look! O, look!" she cried, scarcely knowing what she said. "I sha'n't be able to go to the ball! O, and I'm dying to go! Did you ever see such a fright before? Veronica did it, but it was quite an accident! Do not scold, her for it," seeing the look of dismay on her mother's face: "she is as distressed as I am. O, but it does seem hard: I shall be marked for weeks!"

"But however did it happen, dear?" asked Mrs. Grant, as soon as she was able to speak.

"The tongs, dear," replied Violet, still robbing. "You see, she was doing her hair, and the hot tongs sprang from her fingers and struck my face! It was purely an accident, but I am so sorry!"

"So am I, Vy," returned the elder woman; "so am I."

Apparently Veronica was terribly toncerned, but all her sympathy and suggested remedies were of no avail. Nothing could possibly erase the ugly scar from Violet's cheek; and finally it was declared that she must forego the ball, great though the pain of so doing would be.

"You can write Dudley a little note, my dear," said her mother, when she and Violet were alone; "that will be politic and polite. You must not let him think you rude, and you know you promised him the waltzes. Poor child! L'm so sorry!"

The respective vehicles accordingly arrived, and as Veronica kissed her on her neck and arms. Her dress was of some rich, soft, clinging material, and she carried herself like a queen as she swept out of the room where her cousin lay upon the bed bemoaning the irony of fate.

Allured by the appealing eyes and coaxing words of his fair partner, Dudley Maitland became the victim of the moment, and it was not long ere he was escorting her away from the throng of merry dancers into comparative solitude.

"This is quite like old times," Veronica said, as they entored the cool conservatory and sat down.

"Not quite," replied Maitland, somewhat absently. "Indeed, times have changed considerably since we last

This was a discordant note, and Veronica did not feel quite at her ease. "I'm so glad you came to-night. Dud-ly, but she failed to notice the danger "Why?" he asked, somewhat brusquely. "How strangely you speak," she returned, nervously, "but do you really care to know?" "Naturally, I am interested."

Veronica toyed with the pecals of a rosebud, and her eyes were cast upon the ground.

"Lecause I have wanted to see you, to speak to you, to tell you how bitterly sorry I am for my cruel words: I think I must have been mad!" she said. softly. "I came back to the drawingroom," she went on in the same tone, while her eyes remained still downeast, "but you had gone, and I have never known a happy moment since!'

Now, had Veronica's conscience permitted her to look into the eyes of the man at her side, with those wonderful liquid orbs of hers, it is possible that the fascination of her gaze might have blinded him to the false ring of her words, but, as it was, he felt neither pleased nor flattered.

"I am sorry if you have been unhappy," he returned, lightly, "but in these rapid times it does not do to grieve over the dark and empty past."

"Not dark, nor empty," she said, with mock tenderness and well affected concern; "but tell me, Dudley, have you forgotten all the past?"

"All!" he repeated, suavely. "I suppose you mean the days when the smiles were for others and the frowns for me. Bah! What a mad-headed fool I must have been! But you taught me a lesson, Veronica, and it was well laid to heart."

"Do not speak of it." she exclaimed, brokenly; "I have told you. Can you still be so unforgiving?

"There is nothing to forgive." he replied; "you certainly seemed to prefer any society to mine in the old days of which you speak, and I could never bear you malice on that score!"

"But, Dudley." she said, so softly that her words were scarcely perceptible. "I have suffered so, truly I have seen the error of my ways, the magnitude of my cruelty to you! Come, say you forgive me, and let us be friends

"No." he returned, firmly, even fiercely, "that can never be, Veronica! You must not forget that even the most beautiful and accomplished woman has no right to play with a man's heart as if it were a worthless toy, to be taken up or cast down at pleasure. And may I ask you to excuse me now? I have an important engagement to attend to. Allow me." And pale and trembling in every limb, Veronica once more entered the ball-

But she could not fix her mind, try as she would: so towards midnight she again took up her stand by the window and looked out into the dark and starless night. Presently she turned, for she fancied she heard a footfall.

"Why, Dudley." she almost shricked. 'you here! Whatever brings you at this hour when you ought to be doing duty to the people in general?"

"I wanted you," he replied, tenderly, "and you are more to me than all the people in the world!" "But look at me," she said, shyly; "I do believe I am disfigured for life! Do you not think so?" And for an answer she was clasped in a warm embrace, and kisses were showered upon her. And later, when Maitland left her, there was a new and even softer expression in her eyes, a brighter and more winsome expression about her mouth. Her heart was happy, and she went up the old oaken staircase humming the air of an old Veronica was silent for a time, her heart beat too fast.

"There was no one in particular that I wished to see," she replied, finally. "Dudley Maitland was there, but he was infinitely disagreeable, and eventually made himself conspicuous by his absence."

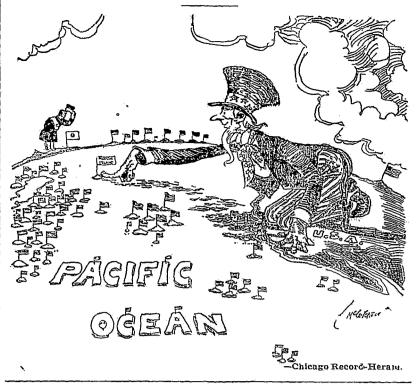

Violet's face became dved with blushes.

"Veronica," she half whispered, "he came here. He asked me to marry him, and-"

"Asked you to marry him?" repeated her cousin, incredulously; "I suppose you said yes."

"I did. dear. He saw this terrible scar, but he does not mind in the cousin good-night she had never looked least, so he told me. So you see, dear, more radiantly lovely. Gems of won-derful brilliancy glittered in her hair, gether, after all."—Chicago Tribune. State Journal.

The chameleon, as he is called, has many points about him that have rendered him attractive or conspicuous, and the demand for him in sections of the country not lying near the eastern and central part of the Mexican Gulf has been steady for some time, reports the New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The changing of colors is perhaps the habit of the chameleon that has rendered him most attractive to the lovers of the curious, though his docility has also helped to place him in the category of pets. The changing of color is an altogether voluntary affair, and is performed for protective purposes. Many birds, while they are of a color that accords with their commonest surroundings, are often exposed by their presence in some other surroundings. But the remedy for them in such cases is simple; they need merely fly to the surroundings that protect them. The chameleon, however, not being able to get as rapidly from one environment to another as the birds, takes the precaution to work up as quickly as possible to the shade of the particular surface on which he rests. From clear green to a muddy dark brown there are many shades through brown, olive brown and olive green. There is no one of these that the chameleon cannot assume for himself.

As an insect destroyer the chameleon is unexcelled. There has been some rumor lately to the effect that here take advantage of this fact, and that large shipments of chameleons are being made to California to rid asked about this matter recently, most ignorance of the matter, though at one store it was learned that large shipments are made to California as well as to other parts of the country. Those vouchsafing the information said they did not know whether dealers in California to whom the lizards are shipped sold them for the purpose of destroying insects. At all events, great numbers of the little reptiles are constantly sent out of New Orleans. The dealers here buy them for one dollar a hundred, and in sending away large quantities they double the cost. Single specimens sell at ten cents. The reporter was shown a consignment of 500 that were to go to Philadelphia. They were caged in an ordinary dry goods box, with netting on one side. Wet sponges were put in the box. The percentage of deaths when the chameleons are shipped with ordinary experience is seldom over ten per cent. Before being sent away the lizards are kept in large bird cages. In that case the percentage is about one, not counting the death of those injured in being

She was attended by about 25 princesses, and, from the empress dowager down, it was a beautiful picture of Oriental spleudor and beauty dressed in the national costume, con sisting of a long, loose, sack-like garment reaching from the neck to within about three inches of the floor, over which is worn a short, sleeveless jacket. Her feet were prettily dressed in the embroidered Manchurian shoes perched on brackets, so that she seemed taller than she really was, for she cannot be quite five feet tall. None of the ladies had small feet. The younger ladies wore differently colored gowns of the same style as the empress, with large clusters o the dealers who ship lizards from bright colored flowers in their hair, and, with only a few exceptions in the case of widows, their faces were most artistically painted, a study in pink and white, with a single blood-red spot on the lower lip. An Influential Business Concern That Flourished in Nippur Thousands of Years Ago.

Prof. Hilprecht, of the University of Pennsylvania, has been excavating the ancient city of Nippur, built thousands of years ago. The following description in Woman's Home Companion gives some interesting details about an old business firm of that city;

"In an upper stratum of the highest mound at Nippur, nearly opposite the temple, there was discovered an office of an influential business firm, known as Murashu Sons, who flourished in the time of Artanernes I. (464-424 B. C.) and Darius II. (424-405 B. C.). In the room were found 730 business and legal documents of the firm, quite a number of which were well preserved and appeared as if they had been written within a year. Among them are mortgages, leases, promissory notes. records of debts, surety bonds, guarantees, receipts of sales, payment of taxes, in short almost every imaginable kind of business documents is represented among these tablets. A great many Jewish names, such as Jonathan and Nathaniel, appear on them as names of witnesses or as those with whom contracts were made. The river Chebar, on the banks of which Nebuchadnezzar placed the Jews in captivity, and where Ezekiel saw his vision and comforted his people in their exile has been sought for in vain in the past. On two of the tablets thus far examined, belonging to this firm, the river was identified by Prof. Hilprecht as being a navigable canal in the vicinity of Nippur."

ROYAL RIVALS MEET.

Empress of Russia and Queen of Italy Renew Acquaintance After Several Years.

For the first time in many years

Helena of Montenegro, now queen of Italy, and the empress of all the Russias met at the state banquet given by Emperor Nicholas to the visiting sovereigns of Italy on the evening of July 14. The last previous meeting was upon the occasion of the marriage of the young emperor to Princess Alix of Hesse. That King Victor Emmanuel should commence his visits to the foreign courts by going to St. Petersburg is probably owing to the fact that his wife is a sort of adopted daughter of the downger czarina of Russia, under whose maternal care and at whose expense she was educated at the Muscovite court. Moreover, it was the czar who furnished her with that sine qua non of all royal brides, a dowry, upon her marriage to the prince of Naples. For Queen Helena the visit must have been a sort of compensation for the disappoint ment and humiliation she was compelled to undergo when Alix of Hesse took the place on the Muscovite throne she had been brought up to regard as her own. Indeed, while a young girl at St. Petersburg she was regarded by court and the royal family alike as the future czarina. To the now widowed empress she has always been an object of peculiar affection and solicitude on this account, while the late czar was im-mensely fond of his "little Monte-negron savage," whom he treated with the same elephantine playfulness and kindness he bestowed upon his own daughter Xenia. Helena and Nenia were as devoted to each other as sisters, and no one resents more bitterly the "usurpation," as she terms it, of the Hessian princess than the imperious and high-spirited daughter of Alexander III.

When the moment came, however, for Nicholas to fulfill the projects of his parents, he raised such strenuous objections that the cherished plan of the czar had to be given up. He had paid a visit to his aunt at Coburg, and fallen under the fascination of her niece by marriage, The empress downger was | Princess Alix. For more than a year after the marriage of Nicholas, Princess Helena lived in the seclusion of her father's palace in the little capital of Montenegro. It was not until two years after that she gave her hand to Italy's present king. The empress of Russia is called the most beautiful royal woman in all the courts of the old world, but her loveliness and splendid state have brought her very little happiness. Through no fault of her own she is unloved by her people, and though she has served them faithfully, they are set against her as an English and German alien. The fact that in a land where women rulers are detested she has given birth to four daughters tells sadly against her. The three principal parties of the empire, the powerful clerical party, the military party, at whose head is Grand Duke Vladimir, and the faction headed by the downger czarina are all bitterly against her, though she has used every effort to win their kindness. And yet the czarina is a woman of the marked ability and liberal culture that one would expect of a granddaughter of Queen Victoria; but she is a sad, unhappy woman, whose pomp and splendor are a bitter irony to her real loneliness among those whose show of friendliness masks a deep-rooted dislike, not to say hatred. Upon her right hand at the banquet which followed the reception of the royal guests there sat the woman who by some curious trick of fate had missed the throne and the husband that brought nothing but sorrow to Alix of Hesse. An expression of deep melancholy has long since settled down upon the beautiful face of the empress, while all visitors to Rome comment upon princess of Pless was a visitor at Queen Helena's radiant beauty; it is well known that she has found far more happiness with Victor Emmanuel than usually falls to the lot of a royal consort .- Detroit Free Press.

PRINCESS OF WALES.

English People Are Glad That Their Frince Queen Is So Much Part of Them.

When Victoria Mary seats herself in the gilded chair and receives the golden crown upon her head the insignia will fall upon one of the most interesting personages of modern history.

The world is so accustomed to the thought of old Queen Victoria, with her ways and her wisdom, and to-Queen Alexandra, with her bearing and her beauty, that the younger woman has heretofore escaped attention. Yet none deserves it more than she, says the Chicago Chronicle. Her characteristics are more proounced, her personality more captivating, her experiences more varied than fall to the lot of many women, queenly or otherwise. Victoria Mary came into the world in a pretty country house, Richmond lodge, and when she came to the realization of anything she knew that she was a second cousin of Queen Victoria, and that her fourth or fifth cousins were the little English princes, Clarence and George. She knew that sometimes there was a holiday she could go to Marlborough house and play with them, and she knew that at home she was desperately poor, with two little prothers, and a mother so charitable that all the family income went to the infirmaries and outdoor reliefs.

The little Princess May of Teck grew very pretty and strong, and when she was 19 her cousin Edward, who was then the duke of Clarence, proposed to her.

Clarence expected to be king of England some day, and May accepted

She said she did so because she loved him, not because of his position. The invitations were sent out and the wedding gifts were in when Clarence died and the princess was left all but wedded. The next year George, Clarence's brother, sought her hand, and after all the delay that goes with royal weddings they. were married.

July 6 marked the ninth anniversary of their wedding, and in the nine years that have passed the people have come to know "Princess May," as they have always called her, better and to like her more and

And they always did like her, for she grew up among them, and where other queens came from Germany. from Denmark and from Austria, thisqueen-to-be came from Richmond lodge, and English home, and she was English to her finger tips. Victoria Mary, after her marriage, went to live in York house, and there she bore her children, there she brought them up, there she drove and walked and received her friends and there she lived the plain life of an English matron absolutely without ostentation, absolutely without foreignisms of any kind. Queen Victoria loved her. Queen Alexandra and King Edward adored her. She was an ideal daughter-in-law. She was the best of wives.

On the day when George, who will be known in history as George V., married Princess May he said to his mother: "I have the handsomest wife in England."

If he thought so then he thinks so now. In the kingdom there is not a man more devoted; he takes her everywhere, he buys her gowns and jewels, he drives daily with her, he goes to church with her every Sunday. Daily he strolls out with the babies, every night he dines at home unless at a state dinner with his wife along. He travels with her, quotes her, walks in York grounds with her and tells his mother how much he likes her. And if mortal man, be he king or huckster, could do more than this then let him come forward and pick up the gauntlet of George V. At one time it is said that the happiness of Victoria Mary was marred by gossip concerning the princess of Pless, who is accredited with being the handsomest woman in England. If this were so, the princess certainly hid her grief well, for she and George were seen daily together and the their home and went out with them both quite frequently.

During the nine years in York house Princess May has been raising a family. Four little children were left by the stork in rapid suc cession.

These are: Edward, Albert, Victoria and Henry, the latter being only two years old.
