Washington, March 8.—On account of the indisposition of Vest of Missouri and Mallory of Florida, who expected to speak on the pending ship subsidy bill, that measure was not considered by the senate yesterday, the time being devoted to discussion of the antianarchist bill, or bill for the protection of the president. The diplomatic and consular appropriation was passed. An executive session was held, and adjournment was taken to Monday.

The bill to classify the rural free delivery service and to place the carriers under the contract system held the floor in the house, and the members who spoke confined themselves to the Washington, March 10.—The house Saturday closed the general debate upon the bill to classify the rural free delivery service and place the carriers under the contract system. During the session Sims of Tennessee, speaking to a question of privilege involving the president's interpretation of his permanent census bureau law, declared that the conferrees on that bill had deceived the house as to section 5 of the bill (the civil service section). The speaker ruled that the subject had been disposed of and no question of privilege was presented. Hughes of Virginia offered a resolutoion declaring that it was th intention of the house to ignore the civil service law as to present employes of the census bureau above the grade of unskilled labor, and that this resolution carries out such intention.

Great Strike on in Boston.

Boston, March 11.—A strike of the freight handlers of this city, which, according to votes passed by the labor unions, threatens to involve 10,000 men, was begun early in the day. Team Drivers' union No. 25, embracing about 6,000 men, led off. Other unions followed and the strikers declare that by night fully 10,000 will be out. The strike grows out of the Brine Transportation company's trouble with its teamsters, which began several weeks ago, but was precipiated by the refusal on Saturday last of members of the Freight Handlers' unions to take care of merchandise carted by non-union teamsters employed by the Brine company. A large force of police is on the brigance, and that the captives duty to prevent disturbances.

Shares were offered freely at first; but by 6 p. m. the excitement had abated and the curb tone Irish Cheer in the Commons.

The news was received in the house of commons amid great excitement. The reading of Lord Kitchener's telegram by the war secretary, Brodrick, was listened to in deep silence which was broken by loud Irish cheers. Instantly there were cries of "Shame!" break, and suddenly subsided. The subsequent eulogistic references to General Methuen were received with cheers. In brief Lord Kitchener announced that when General Methuen was captured, wounded, with four guns, three British officers and thirtyeight men were killed and five officers and seventy-two men were wounded. In addition one officers and 200 men were reported missing.

Boer Scheme That Always Works. It seems the Boers have since freed all the prisoners except Methuen. The British had 1,200 men in two parties, one convoying ox wagons, the other with mule wagons. The Poers attacked at dawn, between Twe-Busch and Palmieteknit, and pursued the tactics that have so often been fatal to the British-stampeded the mules and oxen. How many Boers there were, or what casualties they suffered, are not stated, though the official report says the British put up a gallant resistance. Delarey, who commanded the Boers, was one of the first Boer leaders to meet Methuen and was defeated by him at Gras Parr, before the Magersfontein fight in which Methuen was repulsed. BRITISH ARE MUCH HUMILIATED ion, Mme. Tsilka, has been paid to Idea of a Defeat Under the Circumstances such a reverse, $\mathbf{i}\mathbf{n}$ inflicted by a body of Boers of equal numerical strength. It is recognized that although the damage is more moral than material it will certainly have the effect of prolonging Boer resistance for many months. The only additional details available are contained in a further dispatch from Lord Kitchener which Brodrick read just as parliament was adjourning. This dispatch shows that the first confusion was caused by native boys with led horses, who galloped through the mule convoy as the latter was endeavoring by Lord Methuen's directions to close on the ox convoy.

The disorder among the mules communicated itself to the mounted troops, and the Foers, dressed in khaki and riding alongside the wagons, frustrated all the attempts of the British officers to rally their forces. Great men composed of the Northumberland Fusiliers and the Lancashires showed conspicuous courage in protecting the wagon and refusing to surrender un-

The force under General Delarey was almost entirely dressed in British uniforms. This made it impossible to distinguish between their own men and the enemy when the mounted troops were driven in on them. The enemy numbered 1,500 men. They had one 15-pounder and a pompom. Delarey, Celliers, Kemp, Verraso, Tromp and other commandants were present. General Methuen was seen by an agent of the intelligence department. He was being well cared for in his own

In a private telegram just received here Lord Kitchener adds: "I find Methuen has a fractured thigh, but he is reported to be doing well." In another message Lord Kitchener says the wounded will be brought in to the railroad today, and adds: "I hope the reinforcements now arriving will rectify the situation in this area without disturbing operations elsewhere."

NEW AND ORIGINAL FEATURE

A novel addition to the many superior points in the Pedalis and one which meets with the warmest approval of ladies, is that of a patented pocket for containing the shoe laces. By means of this original idea, untidy, straggling shoe laces are a thing of the past. Only a moment's time is required to unfasten the clasp and tuck the laces within and to refasten the clasp, but when this is done the natty, stylish appearance of the shoe is a source of much gratification to every lady who has an eye for the artistic.

BATHS FOR THE POOR.

So successful has been the work of the public baths association of Philalelphia, whose initial establishment son Gaskill street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, that it will in a few months be in possession of a new and in some respects much better building, dedicated to the same beneficial purposes. A lote 24x57 feet at 718 Wood street has been purchased by the association for $2,275 and probably in March the work of construction will be begun. It is hoped that it will be completed by the middle of June.

The public bath and wash house in Gaskill street was opened nearly four years ago. At the end of its third year 105,248 baths had been taken there. This year the number of baths will be fully 52,000, or more than 1,000 a week. In December 2,800 baths were taken, 1,475 in the first fifteen days.

The Public Baths association does not consider its work a charity in the almsgiving sense. It believes baths can be had by the poor at a minimum price; that they are more appreciated and therefore are more regularly taken and do more good than those which cost nothing to the person benefited. Besides, the public baths offer what the city free baths do not-privacy and the use of hot water and of showers, together with an ample supply of soap and towels. It has cost about $5,000 a year to maintain the Gaskill street bathing establishment, says the Philadelphia Times, and the deficit at the end of 1900 was 35 per cent, having steadily decreased since the place was opened.

MEASURING THE AIR'S DUST.

Ingenious Apparatus Devised by a Noted German Scientist.

An ingenious apparatus for estimating the amount of dust in the air has just been devised by Karl Arens. It consists of a glass tube loosely packed with cotton wool and connected with an aspirating apparatus on the principle of bellows, says an exchange.

After the tube and the wool have been perfectly dried they are weighed, and then a given volume of the air to be tested is drawn through, carrying with it its quota of dust and moisture.

WHY THEY WERE CHEAP.

President McKinley Used to Tell a Story with a Moral.

President McKinley used to tell with a good deal of amusement a story which related to his early days in the law. On the way to and from his office he was accustomed to pass a butcher's shop, and for a long time was puzzled by a certain notice which he saw there.

In the morning he would read, "Good pork sausages 20 cents." On his return in the evening he would sometimes find those sausages still 20 cents a pound, but more often the notice was changed and the sign read: 'Fine pork sausages 12"-or sometimes 10-"cents."

The matter, he said, used to worry him. Sausages were not of so perishable a nature that they would not keep till the next day, and he could not understand it. So one evening he stopped at the shop, made some casual remark, and then inquired the price of sausages.

"Ten cents," said the shopkeeper. "But," replied Mr. McKinley, "they were 20 cents this morning."

"So they were, Mr. McKinley," replied the butcher. "So they were. Then I had 'em, now I haven't. Sausages at 10 cents is simply to get me a reputation for cheapness. See?"

The future president saw, and was in the habit of saying that a great many reputations were made in that way.—Youth's Companion.

CLOCKS OF ODD DESIGNS.

Unique Inventions Over Which Men of Brains Have Worked.

Some interesting reproductions of old French clocks have been lately attempted with success. One is in the shape of a fun, with a different hour at the top of each compartment. The fan gradually unfolds as the hours

Another is in an empire design with three little waterfalls-made of crystals which pass down a glass tube which fall into a little glass trough full of real water and inhabited by a solitary live goldfish.

Yet a third clock is in the shape of a bronze sunflower placed in a crystal vase. The center of the sunflower forms the dial, and the course of the hours is marked by a lady bird which slowly makes its way from hour to Another invention is the tortoise clock. This was designed by M. de Serviere for Louis XIV. The works are encased in a tortoise shell box. The dial, made of pewter, is placed on the op of the box, and is sufficiently concave to allow of its being filled with water. In this basin is placed a magnetic tortoise, beautifully imitated in cork, and it floats unfailingly toward the hour, however often it is detached. --Philadelphia Record.

A WELL-DEVELOPED NERVE.

Predicament.

"There is absolute wit in some men's nerve,"said a business man of Washington a few nights ago. "My partner and I, with the intention of expanding our business, about a year ago, decid-224; cement works (in an interval), ed to send a representative through the south. We looked over the field carefully and finally picked out a young man who was possessed of good address and who we felt sure would do the work.

"He had been convivial in former days, but, his deportment had been such for a year that it made us feel confident he would do the proper thing. He was given $400 for expenses and was started out on the mission. It was the understanding that he was to make a daily report of his efforts.

"Two months passed by and we never heard from him. We telegraphed repeatedly to different towns that were on his itinerary, but not a word could be learned regarding his whereabouts. Finally one day a hurried telegram, collect, came. It read:

"I am not selling many goods, but am making a fine impression. Wire

"The nerve of the fellow got our ierve, and, do you know," continued the business man, according to the Washington Star, "we wired him the new trust her papa had formed that $100. And afterward he made good. We have never asked him what he did during the two months. And he has "Oh, papa! Why were you not my never broached the subject to us. It was the wit that pleased us."

New York's Four Bridges.

Names for the three new bridges across the East river, New York, have been selected. The present bridge is known as the "Brooklyn bridge." The one nearing completion and running from Manhattan to Williamsburg will be the "Williamsburg bridge." The third, to be erected just north of the navy yard, will be the "Navy yard bridge." The fourth, which will be built over Blackwell's island to Queen's borough, will be the "Ravenswood bridge." Many New Yorkers think that historic names should have been bestowed on the great structures.

A great Difference.

Dr. Varnadoe, a noted professor of Greek, is very fond of flowers, and some days ago on returning from his college duties, he found in his front yard a pestiferous calf belonging to a neighbor. The doctor gave chase, and the animal plunged toward the flower dle forward or even the messenger joyed a chicken dinner prepared by his pit, and in another instant crashed through the glass cover and mixed with the pots and plants below. When another professor passed a few minutes later, he said gravely: "I do tion brought out the fact that she a couple of old roosters down at the not understand, Dr. Varnadoe, why B class takes up the study of Europe wanted to go to the Aquarium. She got barn." He finished the meal, took a you object so seriously to having a modest cowslip added to your fine collection of plants." The doctor's frowning face relaxed, "Ah, Sanborn," he retorted, "you see, this was only a March proven most conclusively that tea in two ways: by families in their kit-British East Indian tea establishments. These beginnings of an important industry have demonstrated that the yield of tea per acre is the equal of the average Oriental production, and can be marketed at a fair profit. It has been shown that a good grade of tea can be grown and put on the market in bulk at a cost not exceeding fifteen cents per pound. Under ordinary conditions an acre will yield four hundred pounds of salable tea, which, at fifteen cents per pound, makes the expense of growpacking sixty dollars per acre. Tea plants will be shown growing upon the Exposition grounds, and the vagiving value to immense tracts of shall. what is now waste land. This tea sells in bulk at thirty cents a pound, therefore the profit on this basis is one hundred per cent. In addition to the Hinchman visit ors there were about twenty of the Niles Woodmen came over to witness the work. There were nearly one hundred neighbors present and a 187 72 royal good time was enjoyed by all. The Hinchman Foresters did the work in excellent shape and all appreciated the good work performed by them. One candidate was adopted into the camp.

> After the work refreshments were served and a royal time enjoyed. The visitors expressed themselves as highly pleased with their visit. The team returned home to Hinchman on the morning train Saturday.

The Power of Print.

A newspaper whose columns overflow with ads of business men has more influence in attracting attention to and building up a city or town than any other agency that can be employed. People go where there is business. Capital and labor will locate where there is an enterprising community. No power on earth is so strong to build up a town as a newspaper well patronized, and its power should be appreciated.—Rev T. De Witt Talmage.

* * * Fell From Hand Car.

Last Thursday morning while Mr. Ed Rhoades, a section hand in the employ of the Michigan Central, was riding on the forward end of a hand car he lost his balance, falling in front of the car, and before the same could be stopped was very seriously injured. Mr. Rhoades was taken to his home on Oak street and Dr. Curtis summoned. The injured man was found to be suffering from severe injuries to spine and back, and it will be some time before he will be able to be up and around. The accident occurred about a mile west of town while the men were returning from a trip to the end of the section. \Leftrightarrow \Leftrightarrow

The season will soon come for Spring millinery. Therefore it seems timely to state that this spring styles and trimmings are far greater in variety and more beautiful than ever. I shall, therefore, by the help of an extra milliner, aside from my regular number of apprentices, be in position to furnish an assortment of trimmed hats never equaled in number or beauty in Buchanan before. I shall meet the prices, if not undersell my competitors, and my work, as in the past, will be of the best. I shall strive to maintain the confidence of my esteemed patrons and am certain I shall succeed in so doing.

Decorative Cookery.

Beautiful cooking is the only thing that "goes" in this overstimulated new country. Everything that graces the fashionable table is adorned and "made up" The illustrated papers and magazines that give space to such matters are full of half-tone pictures of fancy dishes of every description the greater portion of them combinaations built up on a handsome dish sometimes in a highly effective, some times in a rather absurdly fantastic manner. But "looks" are more than eve, before considered. The appearance of success goes for solid acquisition; the conscious, overstudied type, in dress and every sort of outward presentment, praises itself and dispraises its more modest companions to an extraordinary degree. So even the cook and caterer, the family housekeeper, if she have "ambition," must "dress" her table with elaborate care and ingenuity.

Nothing is too fine for the gay and Application has been made before frivolous, and satin and lace are no longer too gaudy, though for some refined tastes this showy adornment is carried to a pitch that becomes the opposite of pleasing. Silver and fine linen, and a few choice flowers, we all enjoy; but the flaunting ribbon streamers, and the rich lace over col ored satin, suit ball dresses better than a dinner table.

> Not that there is no meaning in the old saw, "It looks good enough to eat." Without doubt the palate is better pleased when the eye is pleased first. Good appetite, good temper and a cheerful sense of satisfaction in one's work are all promoted by a reasonable attention given to beauty of appearance. If it is only to please vacation, or the dear occasional guest, a little special care and pains are not wasted.

Most appropriate and artistic is the cover of the Designer for April, whereon is pictured a graceful feminine figure with Easter doves and lilies. The contents are also typical of the season, and among them man be mentioned a short story-"An Easter Miracle," "Pretty Trifles for Easter Gifts" and 'Easter Egg Football," the latter being a jolly game for young folks. Two other stories are given in this issue-"Bloomfield's First New Woman" and "How the Prairie Children Went to Church," also a parlor comedietta, "A Bachelor Girls' Apartment." "The Latest in Embroidery" and "Novelties in Crocheting", supply tasteful hints to the fancy worker, while "Some Original Cottage Furnishings" will undoubtedly be of service to those contemplating a sojourn at the mountains or seaside. Only a few more years and nothing will be impossible for inventive man, except giving a good record of himself, unearned.

But the question is, "Are incubators more profitable than hens for hatching eggs?" It costs less to run a good incubator than it does to feed No pains are spared in adorning the hens to incubate the same number of eggs, and a good incubator will mold of dessert which is reserved for hatch just as many or more eggs than an average flock of hens. There are good and bad incubators, just as much as there are hens that stick to business and hens that quit the nest; the variation is just as great. Demprinciple, and there are others that are made with a view of profit on the Moscow E. L. &. P. Co., Moscow, incubators, and several others that would be a poor investment even though they were a gift. In selecting an incubator, the decision should be made in favor of the work the machine evidently does. Don't overlook the material, and don't overlook who the machine does good work for, whether it is for experienced operators and experts, or whether for the every-day poultry-raiser and those inexperienced in operating incuba-

> After you have selected the incubator, you are master of the situation, no waiting for the hens to get broody, no standing guard among right nest, no hatching out millions of vermin in the setting hen's nest, to later on reduce the profits by stunting the chicks, and what is of still further importance, the hens have not used up the best part of the laying season sitting and killing time trying to raise a few chicks. While, to make a success or to succeed at all with setting hens, we have almost got to camp right with them, the incubator is ready any time and can be run where it is the most convenient to the operator. The chief and only expense in operating it is the kerosene used, and this does not amount to more than the feed to run hens enough to incubate an equal number of eggs. The eggs the hens would lay would be clear profit. The operator of the incubator does not need to go out of doors; the work is right there, and by the women, especially this is appreciated. On the average, there is no more labor attached to running an incubator than there is in running a couple of contrary hens. Running the incubator becomes a pleasure, while looking after the A good incubator comes so near

They know no mother, hence the hens are not losing them, or killing them off in the cold, or wet grass and weed, or drowning them in the storms. If a good brooder is used, the chances are good for raising a large per cent of them. They soon learn to know the brooder and will collect themselves in case of storms. Averaging the season through, a good incubator will hatch a higher per cent of all the eggs. While it is a fact that hens sometimes hatch every egg, it is a fact that occasionally an incubator will do likewise; yet in the one case a few eggs, in the other lots of them, hence the more chances. On account of the drouths the past season, and the hens being sold off close, it would be poor economy for any poultry raiser to let what hens are left put in their time sitting. It would be more profitable to keep them laying. Early pullets for fall and winter layers this coming season will certainly pay well.

Push Buttons of Ornate Design, "Here are some rather odd things." raid a Philadelphia jeweler. "They are electrical push buttons, and they are to be used in a country house that one of our millionaires is building. Push buttons, you know, are coming into wider and wider use. The dwellings of the rich contain fifty or sixty of them nowadays, and, as a consequence of their profuse appearance averywhere, architects are giving a good deal of care to their designing. These six buttons, for instance, that are to go in a white and gold drawingroom, are, you see, of silver, studded with opals, and they are to be set on a plate of onyx in a silver frame. They will go well, don't you think, with the Frawing-room's delicate and pale decorative scheme."

Really an Excellent Man Died of a Broken Heart.

The thoughtlessness of writers in caricaturing people for grotesque purposes in their novels has been the cause of much annoyance and suffering to sensitive persons. Both Dickens and Thackeray sinned in this respect through their perfectly evident portraiture of persons who could be identified.

A writer in the Literary Era, after citing the offenses of Thackeray, Disraeli, and others, brings up the notable case of the schoolmaster in "Nicholas Nickleby," and says:

The grossest injury which Dickens ever inflicted on a fellow being was his too accurate portrait of an innocent man in his Squeers. That Yorkshire schoolmasters were, as a rule, cruel and wicked enough, it is true. But the particular schoolmaster, who was recognized and who recognized himself as the original Squeers, seems to have been an exception to the rule.

It will be remembered that Dickens and his illustrator traveled together to the north of England for the purpose of collecting material for "Nickleby," and especially for the Dotheboys episode. At Great Bridge they visited a boarding school known as Bowes academy. The master, William Shaw, received the strangers with some hauteur, and did not as much as withdraw his eyes from the operation of penmaking during the interview.

"Phiz" sketched him in the act. "Boz" described the act. The personal peculiarities of William Shaw were recognized in Squeers. Shaw became a butt of popular ridicule, lost his pupils, and finally died of a broken heart. Yet there is abundant evidence to prove that he was a really excellent and kind-hearted man, who was made to suffer for the misdeeds of his neighbors.—Youth's Companion.

Photographic Procedure That Most

People Would Approve. Professor Hiram Corson, who has the chair of English literature at Cornell, belongs to the well-known Corson family whose homestead is near Norristown, at Plymouth. A very old man, now, he is perhaps the most picturesque figure in the college town of Ithaca. His lectures are extremely popular: he speaks with graceful gestures. his hands weighted with beautiful jewels, and he wears on his forefinger a ring the poet Browning gave him. He says good things—he is always saying good things.

"Professor Corson," a pretty little co-ed murmured recently, "won't you give me one of your photographs to hang in my room?" The tearned old man smiled and assented. "But I won't give you one of those a New York photographer has just made of me," he said. "The fellow had the impudence to take all the lines out of my face. It made me, he thought, look younger. 'My wish,' he answered, with a touch of sadness, 'and my difficulty is to avoid thinking, so I am glad to be disturbed.' And a year or two later he told me that to rest and distract his mind he had formed the habit of counting the omnibuses he met between his residence in Downing street and the house of commons, so as to see whether he could make an average of them, based on a comparison of the number that passed each day."

Strike: Among Ants

Certain kinds of black ants have little yellow ants which do most of their work for them. Once in a while these little yellow fellows will go on strike, and the "blacks" try to force them will attack the strikers in force or make a raid and get another gang of "yellows" into the colony. But the newcomers as a rule join the strikers. The strike ends by the "yellows" escaping and founding a colony for themselves, or they give in and settle down to work again.

Specific for Smallpox.

In the smallpox epidemic of 1871, Mother Gonzaga, matron of the St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum in Philadelphia, administered a specific which she declared not only made those taking it immune from smallpox, but was a cure for the disease. Mother Marie Josephas, now connected with the hospital, says that the mixture is still in use there. It consists of one grain of sulphate of zinc, one grain of foxglove, mixed with two tablespoonfuls of water. This again, when thoroughly dissolved, is added to four ounces of water, and a teaspoonful taken every hour for twelve hours.

Oeveren went through last Thursday half a block of her own home when and another, coming up behind her, clapped one hand over her mouth and held her hands with the other.

Brute Strikes Her in the Face. She was lifted into the buggy and the horse driven rapidly away. A handkerchief was stuffed into her mouth to prevent her from screaming. Both men, says the woman, were intoxicated and used vile language. They drove to the south end of the city, and a quarrel between the men was precipitated by one of them striking Miss Wernette on the face. In the row that followed the buggy was overturned. The two men then engaged in a fight and the woman crawled away on her hands and knees. She hardly remembered how she got home, but reached there at midnight. Detectives Are All at Sea.

Miss Wernette is a comely young woman of 25 years, who came to Grand Rapids from Green Lake, Mich., about one year ago. She suffers greatly from nervous prostration and her injuries and is scarcely able to tell a coherent story of the episode. Her clothing was torn and covered with mud. The detectives are all at sea, and no intelligent motive can be offered either in this case or the Van Oeveren abduction.

KLUMPP IS ARRESTED

Suspected of Poisoning His Wife with Alleged "Headache Powders" Sent Through the Mail.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 10.-William Klumpp, husband of the Lowell, Mich., woman who was poisoned by alleged "headache powders," which were found to contain strychnine, has been arrested and is now in jail here. The officers believe that Klumpp either sent the deadly powders through the mail himself or knew who did send them and that the main object was the removal of Mrs. Klumpp. The theory is that the doctored powders were substituted for the real headache and harmless powders and sent to several persons in the village for the purpose of throwing the blame upon the manufacturers of the remedy and thus divert suspicion from the sender of the

A motive is found for the alleged crime in the story that Klumpp was evening. The sheriff and his deputies are trying to locate Hattie Whitfield. She at one time lived in this city, and it is said that Klumpp visited her here. Klumpp declares himself entirely innocent of the charge on which he was arrested. He denied the truth of the reports that he had been attentive to another woman or that there was any reason for his wanting his wife out of the way.

The Angus-Jersey Cross.

Cows of the Erica, Jennet and Coquet families are considered good milkundoubtedly better for dairy purposes than the general run of scrub cattle found throughout the country, says R. D. Rosa of Goodland, Kan. As fair milking, high class beef cattle no breed probably surpasses them.

quence in the business of making market milk. The dairyman should determine the character or quality of milk City, Tex., slightly; C. W. B. The Cow the Year Round.

The cow should have good care twelve months in the year. She should give milk ten months and rest two months. During the latter time she should have little or no concentrated food and the last forty-eight hours before calving have laxative food.

From Male to Female. In a paper read before the New York breeders' convention by Valancey E. Fuller he said: "It is a law which seems to run through the animal as well as the human race that the female transmits her characteristics to the male and the male to the felaw and therefore does not transmit ducer of milk and butter, but to the bull calf, and the sire is governed by the law that the male transmits such qualities to his female offspring. While injured who could be moved were they are usually disappointed in the heifer calves they raise from their best ducing power is transmitted generally by the sire to the heifers should cause breeders to use only a sire from the best cow in a herd and not to expect the good cow to reproduce her good qualities in her heifer calves."

Theory and Practice. Professor Leroy Anderson, instructor in dairy husbandry at Berkeley university, California, spent about ten days, Jan. 1 to 10, about Los Angeles, remaining at dairies and creameries giving practical instruction in this great and growing work. Professor Anderson is very popular with diarymen of this section, and his services are much sought after. There is a state appropriation for carrying on this

One of the weak points in connection with station work is the tendency for the experimenters to become theoretical dairymen rather than practical workers, says Hoard's Dairyman. It is easy to consider dairy subjects from the standpoint of the test tube and a clean milk supply, and the results worked out from such conditions frequently fail when applied to actual dairy conditions. A getting out of the workers, as in the above case of Professor Anderson, would add much to the value of the station work.

The Ring or the Man.

BY F. H. LANCASTER. (Copyright, 1902, by Daiiy Story Pub. Co.) The trouble all began in Gus Molden doing the unexpected thing. Everybody predicted, and with reason, that if Molly Cartwell got engaged before the season was over it would be to young Maxwell Barton, the broadshouldered newspaper man from Mississippi. And up to that momentous afternoon it is fair to say that Molly and Max shared the common conviction. They were great friends. Everybody also said that it would be an excellent match. "For Molly," some of the women added. But that was only a spurt of feminine meanness over which the men shrugged their shoulders. They knew the state of Max's finances. And now Molly had sent down word that she was sorry, but that she would not be able to go boating this afternoon, and Max had swung off to the wharf, covering his disappointment with one of Rightor's songs: "Oh, my Mexican Juanita,

In the moonlight I will meet her, 'Way down upon the silver Rio Grande."

Molly heard, and the hand that held "What a voice he had! And everyfellow in spite of his bad luck." Her eyes went back to the ring.

For this was the unexpected thing Gus Holden had done. He had written ers by those who handle them and are Miss Molly Cartwell a business-like offer of marriage and backed up his offer with a perfect love of a diamond. "If I see the ring on your hand tonight, I shall understand that you have decided to make me one of the happiest of men," had been the formal

Everybody knew Gus Holden had more money than he could spend. The idea of marrying a man she had not met a dozen times! Why under the sun had he taken it into his head to be in such a hurry! "The happiest of men." How cold it looked on paper. No doubt he had written it because he considered it the correct thing, like the "Yours truly" at the bottom of a business letter.

For a minute she gave place to pettishness and wished with all her heart that Gus Helden had kept his old letter and his old ring to himself, and that she was out on the water having a good time with Max. Dear old Max, with his huge head and deep voice, and, best of all, honest, happy heart.

All very charming attributes, no doubt, but yet not much in the way of assets when looked at from the dollars and cents point of view.

"And I'll have to get married some day. Gracious knows I don't want to be an old maid." She picked up the ring and looked at it lovingly.

"You are a beauty, aren't you? Why, Max would have to sell everything he owns, down to his golf clubs, before he could give a girl such a thing as this. But, then, Max is a man, and he does work hard. My goodness, how gloriously he could make love to a girl, if only he could afford it." And Molly like Max. But, then, I really don't know that Max cares or that I would care if he did care. I suppose I could learn to love Mr. Holden if I had to. After all youth and love are very fine in blank verse, but you can't make a living at them. The best thing you can do, Molly Cartwell, is to take the gifts the gods provide you and say 'Thank you.' He doesn't ask you to say that you love him, only to wear the ring. And gracious knows that will be easy enough to do. Especially when those girls from the other club are to take supper here to-night." She turned the ring slowly and a blaze of light leaped out from every apex.

"My goodness, how I would hate to see you flashing on another girl's finger. And that's what would happen, you know. Gus Holden isn't the man to dally over a thing. If you don't wear it some other girl will, and pretty quick, too." She gazed at the flashing stone wistfully. It was very beautiful, yet not so beautiful as the light in Max's eyes had been when he told her huskily that she had made him

There was a step outside and Molly felt that she was quite equal to the occasion. It was not a precise middleaged man, however, that came through the open window. Nothing but a bass voice trolling out a vaudeville song: "Oh my Mexican Juanita,

In the moonlight I will meet her, Way down upon the silver Rio Grande."

"Max, my splendid Max. No, I'm-" Molly clenched the ring in her palm and started upstairs on a run. "Why, Molly!"

"Beg pardon, Max. I was in a hurry---I didn't see---" "All right, but see here. I've been made editor and I'm going to get

"Who to?"

"Why, to you." "Oh, Max. I'm so glad!"

"Are you, dear? I know I am."

"Max, you silly. I didn't mean that. Of course, I am glad, too. But what I meant was-let me go just a minute I want to get rid of this miserable thing."

THERE WAS NO DISTURBANCE.

Brooklyn Woman With a Club Knew

What She Was About. A policeman in Brooklyn was sauntering along Myrtle avenue the other night at 11 o'clock, saw a woman who had a club in her hand about to enter a saloon and he stepped forward and

"Madam, you are mistaken in the door. That is a saloon." "I know it and have made no mistake," she said. "So you want to go in there, eh?" "T do."

"And what's the club for?" "To assist me man, Thomas, to get started for home. I always have to come for him with a club about this hour.". "But there must be no row in there," cautioned the officer.

"Not a bit of it, sir. You stand right here and see how she goes off. Thomas understands me and I understands him."

The woman entered the place, and the officer stood outside to watch proceedings. In about a minute the whack! whack! whack! of a club striking somebody on the back was heard and five seconds later the door was opened and a man landed in the street at two jumps and took to his heels. "Was that your Thomas?" asked the officer, as the woman appeared swinging her club.

"It was, sir. I told you there would be no row. I just walked up to him and gave him three whacks across his back and a cuff on his ear and he'll
