In looking over the models of trousseau gowns one is at once impressed with the similarity of their cut-close fitting habit back with generous fullness around the bottom, bloused waist, sleeves smooth fitting at the shoulder and flaring out toward elbow and wrist. To be worn with these gowns are petticoats of silk, fitting beautifully over the hips and trimmed around the bottom with ruffle upon ruffle of silk lace. His coats, his shirts, his boots are especially constructed for him after anxious deliberations with his tailor, haberdasber, and bootmaker concerning quality, styles-no detail being too unimportant before his final order. Yet Jabox, who could not conceive of himself wearing ready-made clothes, is wholly content with ready-made opinions and slop-shop views. HOMESPUN HEROISM

.... BY C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1902, By the S. S. McClure Company

When Zeb Johnson, Farmer Jones' hired man, came to the end of a row of corn, he took a seat on a stump to think things over. He realized that he couldn't glean much consolation from mere thinking, but a crisis was to be faced.

The evening before, after having courted Jennie Taylor, the daughter of another farmer, for a year or more, he had asked her to marry him and had been refused. Zeb's courting had consisted of escorting Jennie to a Fourth of July celebration, a circus and a cornhusking. The intervals had been filled in by what he called "sitting around" and declaring to himself that she was the sweetest and handsomest girl in all the world.

There wasn't the slightest doubt in his mind that he loved her, and he was equally sure that he was loved in return. It was therefore with a feeling of supreme confidence in the success of his errand that he had dropped into Taylor's and tried to keep his blushes back and his feet on the floor as he

"Jennie, I was just thinking that we ought to get married in the fall." "Oh, you were?" she replied, looking up at him. "Yes. I couldn't love you any more if we was to court for five years." "Who's been courting?"

"We have, of course, and I want to say"-

"Don't say it," she interrupted. "I never even suspected you were courting. You've been hanging around more or less, but I supposed you came to see father."

"But I've been loving you for a whole year and want you for my wife," he persisted, paling and shuffling his feet. Miss Jennie was darning a hole in the heel of one of her father's socks. She stopped her work as she said seri-

"Zeb, I couldn't marry a farmer. If I can't find my ideal, I shall never marry at all. I'm somewhat romantic, you know, and I'd be perfectly miserable if I married a plodder."

"Do you mean that you want to marry some dude of a feller?" asked Zeb, who had never heard of ideals or ro-

"No, of course not. He must be brave and gallant and save my life.

ZEB SAW THE SITUATION AT A GLANCE. You are a real good fellow, Zeb, but you are no hero. I think Lucinda Jackson would make you a good wife. Don't blame me, Zeb, and don't get desperate and jump off the barn. I know you want to talk for an hour or two yet, but it wouldn't do any good. Good night, Zeb. The sooner you shine up to Lucinda the quicker you can ask her to marry you."

Zeb Johnson went home a stricken man. In a dim way he knew what Jennie sighed for. She was looking for an armored knight to come along on a prancing coal black steed and kill three or four villains and bear her off on his saddle. Zeb had no armor, no coal black steed, no desire to kill. He was simply out of it.

He sat on the stump and thought hard, but no consolation came to him. The best thing be could get out of it was a grave under a willow tree, a grave over which Jennie might come and weep when tired of waiting for her

"Yes, it shall be death." said Zeb as be rose from the stump. "I'm lop shouldered, knee sprung and hump backed, and I couldn't be a bero if I was paid a hundred dollars a month. There's nothing left but to hang myself."

He went to the barn, procured a rope and started for the woods. He had selected the tree and the limb. In a little glade stood a white beech tree, and there, amid the songs of birds and the rustling leaves of the wild grape, the rope should choke the life out of him and his body should be left to swing in the summer breeze.

While Zeb was after the rope things were happening in that little glade. Three tramps who had broken jail six miles away the previous evening were n hiding, and Miss Jennie had wan dered into the woods to study botany and wonder when that armored knight would make his appearance. She was thinking of guerdons and lances and squires and steeds when she confronted the three tough specimens of humanity.

Their very first words proved that they were not chevaliers. There was nothing suave and gentle and courteous about the way they ordered her to sit down and keep her mouth shut. She had blundered upon them, and they didn't propose to let her go and give the alarm before they were ready to move on. What with their oaths, their vile jokes and their threats she and her knight came not. Zeb Johnson did, however. He came with slow step and downcast head, as is proper when a man is going to hang himself. He was thinking of Jennie and wondering if it hurt much to hang oneself. There was a tear in one eye and a gleam of determination in the other when he suddenly appeared before the ragged, dirty trio and their

had a bad quarter of an hour of it,

The tramps might have bolted if they had had a minute's warning, but as it was they had to fight. Zeb saw the situation at a glance, and the light of battle flamed up in his face. It is a good thing to go out to hang oneself and find a scrap at hand to postpone matters.

It was a fight that uprooted bushes and small trees and plowed furrows up and down the glade, but at the end of ten minutes Zeb was victor and had the three on the earth under his feet. He was still breathing hard and wiping the blood off his nose when a gentle voice wailed out:

"Oh, Zeb, Zeb, suppose you hadn't come!"

"But I did come," replied Zeb, "and I guess I've given 'em a licking to last a year. Where was that hero of yours?"

"I-I don't know." "Ought to have been around, hadn't

"Y-yes-that is, no. No; I don't want him." "Anything happened?"

"Yes. I've got all the hero I want. Zeb, I'm sorry, and if you want to get married, and if"-

"Well, let me kick 'em a few times, and then I'll go home with you and ask the old folks what they think about it. It was lucky I thought of playing the fool and hanging myself."

Puzzled the Frenchman. Sergeant Harry, who acted as usher in the White House during Cleveland's second term, told this story: "I will never forget the message President Cleveland sent to Secretary Olney one night. It was this way: There was an eclipse of the moon that night, and President and Mrs. Cleveland were much interested in watching it. I sorry to miss it.' Then very quickly, 'Harry, go telephone Olney to look at

"I went to the phone, and Olney's chef or butler or something French answered. 'The president sends word to Mr. Secretary to look at the moon,' I said. 'To look at vat?' answered the Frenchman. 'The moon,' I repeated. 'Ze vat?' again he asked. 'The m-o-o-n.' I spelled, 'the moon.' 'Is ze presiden' in hies mind? 'Yes; he tells Mr. Olney to go look at the moon. Give him the president's message.' 'But vat for iss dat-to look at ze moon?' I then said a word or two and rang off.

About an hour later the same butler called us up and, with more density in his tone than even before, said, 'Meestaire Secretary desires to say to Meestaire President zat he hass looked at ze moon, and he iss mooch obliged!"

Didn't Suit Washington.

Until the early part of the last century Milford, Conn., had a house in which Washington was said to have spent a night. It was in 1789, when Washington made a tour of New England. Tradition says that there were certain things about his stay at the Milford tavern which he did not enjoy. The supper set before him consisted of boiled meat and potatoes. He was not pleased with the meal and asked for a bowl of bread and milk. The landlord brought the new order and a broken pewter spoon with which to eat it.

"Have you no better spoons than this?" asked General Washington. "It's the best I have in the house, sir," replied the host. "Send me the servant," said his excellency. "Here's 2 shillings. Go to the minister's and borrow a silver spoon." Tradition does not add whether he got the spoon or not.

WOMEN BOOM A TOWN

HOW THE FAIR SEX IS IMPROVING NORTHFIELD, VT.

Transforming a New England Village Into a Wideawake, Growing Town-Their Clever Plan to Keep the Streets and Sidewalks Clean.

The women of Northfield, Vt., are engaged in one of the most remarkable campaigns for public improvement ever attempted by women anywhere. says the Boston Globe. Not satisfied with the progress already made by the men, who have waked the place out of a twenty-five year sleep and made this settlement of 3,000 souls into a miniature city among the hills by forming a "board of trade," getting new industries, beating other villages of the same size in the race for modern public utilities and in general putting Northfield back on the map, the ladies got together last year and said they guessed the situation needed the fine æsthetic hand of woman to give it taste, if not also a little organized henpecking to give it persistency.

They banded together in a village improvement society. This at first confined its enthusiasm to making the streets beautiful to look at. Then the conversation, wherever there were preparations for new building, was pervaded by them in the interest of ornamental architecture. Recently they gave a dinner, at which the after coffee oratory disclosed plans more radical. There are to be a drinking fountain, a granite chip embankment of the now unsightly Dog river and an observatory on Paines mountain.

Since the dinner it has come out that it was a committee of ladies calling on Secretary Smith of the board of trade that induced the board to make its present effort toward getting a new industry for women and also that the ladies are about to set their bonnets at Andrew Carnegie.

But the latest is that the village improvement society is going to earn, beg, levy and magnetize a fund wherewith to buy a steam fire engine. Northfield has a paid fire department, but no hydrants or steamer. Other villages have had ladies' improvement societies, but Northfield is out with a claim that this is the first woman's voluntary board of municipal hustle.

The society began modestly, giving no sign of the ambitious vigor which has since come over it. As Mrs. Edgerton said at the dinner: "To build parks, to plant trees and keep them in don't believe Oiney knows about it,' | healthy condition, to fight the signsaid Mr. Cleveland, 'and he will be | board and waste paper nuisances, to clear the streets of rubbish and to plant vines and flowers—all these are the work of the ordinary village improvement society. If we succeed, as others have, in arousing pride and carefulness among the people, these will find expression in the desire among neighborhoods to rank highest for clean streets, well kept lawns and neatness in everything pertaining to out of door housekeeping."

Of course the money to a large extent comes from the men, and it was men who were hired to go about with carts picking up, but it isn't men that tend the public flower beds. One of the early maneuvers of the society was to invite a landscape architect to come up from Boston, look the town over and tell the ladies in an address what effect it had on his artful eye and what ought to be done to render it really good and beautiful. One of the numbers on his programme was parklets at street corners planted with flower beds. These have been put in and are under the personal supervision of Miss Johnston and Miss Ingalls.

Miss Johnston, the president, thus described what has been done and what remains to come:

"The plots of low, uncouth ground at the corners of our streets and also the sandy and barren waste about our depot were graded and the ground prepared for cultivation and were made most attractive spots. The grounds are now all ready for cultivation again when spring opens. We are ready with money to go on with this good work, and many things will be done, such as walling our river on both sides with the waste of granite chips from one of our manufactories and covered with a growth of vines and a public drinking fountain erected on or near the com-

"Baskets are placed at intervals along our streets, where paper or any article that tends to litter our walks may be placed. Seats are to be placed in convenient spots for travelers, and in the near future we shall see an observatory with a well kept road leading to it, which will give to us here and our summer friends one of the most beautiful views in our Green Mountain

It would be inexact to say that the uxurious side of life thus so vigorously cultivated by the ladies has had no effect upon the gentlemen. The latter spent many anxious moments in quest of an activity worthy of the high standard set by the more sentimental sex. Many distinct results followed this mental exercise. One was a splendid piece of mediæval chivalry. In order to understand it thoroughly one should An old circus man says that he once know that Northfield ladies wear parthat nothing would be done about it. "Say, boss, I is a stranger around stole forth by night and unlawfully ters, and, though the posts have been liness.

Short Taks On Advertising By Charles Austin Bates.

How do you expect your advertising to pay unless you give it proper attention? You wouldn't plant seed in a garden and never look at it again. If you did, the chances are that it would never grow into the fruit bearing stage of development.

I saw a notice the other day of an advertisement which had been run continuously in identically the same form since 1876.

That advertisement may have done some good, probably did; but to bring really adequats returns, advertising should be freshened by frequent changes of copy.

I have recommended frequent changes to a man, who said: "Yes but our newspaper charges us extra for composition if we change our ad oftener than once a week"-or once a

A shrewd advertiser said to me recently: "I like to advertise in papers which charge a good, stiff, extra rate for display and for the insertion of cuts. The fact that they do this prevents a good many people using them, and as a consequence, my ads are very much more prominent, for I always pay the extra price and use the cuts and display." Advertisements should never be prepared in a hurry. There ought to be some particular time set apart in

Opportunity has been fitly describ ed by the ancients as a female figure tall, lithe and wiry with wings upon her feet indicating swiftness, a long tuft of hair on her forehead and bald on the back of the head showing that if she was to be siezed it must be before as there was no way to sieze her when her back was turned. What could better describe opportunity-once it comes, and when it is gone it is gone forever. Are you letting opportunities go by for bettering yourself or do good to others. Consider well the opportunities as they come and let none pass, and you will not need to look back on life with regret.

It seems to us, from a human point of view, very unfortunate that all the virtues could not be possessed by one person. As we look back over the past even to the time of Moses and Alexander and all the great list of illustrious characters we see how they were marred by some weakness. No one will for one moment deny the bravery of our General Funston and his having done good service for his country but unfortunately he has cast a shadow over his fame by illadvised speeches and President Roosevelt has again shown his magnificent generalship in commanding him to cease speaking on public questions

Conversation

One of our essayists recently said that people might be classified, according to their conversation, into three classes those wno talked about people, those who talked about things and those who talked about ideals.

The least degree of intellectuality is required in conversing about people and one step in advance is gained when one leaves personalities and speaks of things, and still higher ground is reached when one converses on ideals,-standards of perfection.

Give some thought to your conver sation, observe how large the proportion given to the first class of subjects.

Frank Stockton

The death of Frank Stockton takes from the field of literature one of its most populer writers.

To write a book of wholesome humor as deliciously absurd as his were, requires peculiar ability. His sole purpose was to entertain and there was no ulterior thought of pointing a moral, or presenting a question of ethics. "Rudder Grange""The Lady or the Tiger""The House of Martha' "The Casting away of Mrs. Leeks and Mrs. Aleshine are all vastly amusing, and served the purpose of relaxation to many a person who has needed the diversion after the days work.

Mr. Stockton died last week in Washington, D. C. after an illness of four days.

The Passing of Dr. Talmage

Every one concedes that T. DeWitt Talmage was one of the most unique figures of the American pulpit and platform. He had an individuality all his own, and in a certain sense, was a law untohimself. He had such striking idiosyncrasies that his personality wasnever confused with any of his contemporaries, and his sermons and lectures were always easily recognizable on a printed page.

His wile disposing of government bonds, stocks, real estate, cash, etc. aggregating $300,000 shows something of the popularity of the man who could accumulate this amount by his eloquent and forceful words.

Throughout his life his highest aim was to do something to ease life's burdens for the unfortunate. Standing on the wharf a number of years ago in New York, we in the midst of and Mrs Wm Roe. She expects to a vast concourse of people, listened make quite an extended visit.

to the prayer for the blessing of the Almighty on the cargo that was being sent to Russia to relieve the famine sufferers there.

This kind of practical Christanity has been reiterated again and again in his life time; help for Puerto Rico, help for China, help for India, help for any and every cause that was for the betterment of humanity, has been the chief aim of Dr. Talmage's career, and who will take up the mantle that has fallen from his shoulders is a question the solution of which, time only will reveal.

His son the Rev. Frank Talmage is a promising young man and will undoubtedly assume some of the responsibilities laid down by his father Farewell Reception for Mrs. D. H. Bower, by Colonial Ladies.

One of the most delightful events of the season was a reception given at the pleasant home of Dr. and Mrs. Mr. and Mrs. Woodson and Mr. H. M Broderick in honor of Mrs. D. and Mrs. Haggarty spent Sunday in H. Bower. A few of her many friends planned a little surprise for her. The ladies came about So'clock Saturday evening, went to the dressing rooms, removed their wraps and before Mrs. Bower heard of their arrival the front parlor was full of ladies: it was well planned and a great surprise. After spending pleasant evening, light refreshments were served. The hostess assured Creek spent Sunday with his family Mrs. Bower that she could not have her leave Buchanan without an ex-Mr. and Mrs. Wm Koons, son and pression of their love and esteem, she daughter, were down from Dowagiac then introduced Mrs. Sara Black Smith who made the following re-

This world is a place of continual change, we see it written on the face of nature, and every thing speaks to us of it; even our little pedro club is not exempt from that flat that went forth "when the morning stars first sang together" for one of our Colonial Ladies, a shining light, and at the very height of a successful season (as her tablet with its weekly punches will certify) is soon to change the old home for a new one, and friends we hope that will prove true. I express the feelings of every member of this company when I say to you Mrs. Bower that we sincerely regret to have you leave us, and when we meet together we shall indeed miss you. In many places will be remembered the singer and the sweet songs that helped in many enjoyable happy occasions. In behalf of the Colonial Ladies and their substitutes I present you with a farewell token of their friends, hoping it will remind you sometimes of the pleasant evenings spent with the Colonial Ladies in dear old Buchanan.

The reminder was a solid silver bon bon spoon.

* * * History Repeats Itself.

If the desks in school were suddenly animated what amusing and strange incidents they might tell.

Years ago a little girl walked the streets of Bucharan to and from school, and well remembers to day the very seat she occupied in her first years at school. With the passing years this girl grew to womanhood married, and went west to live. The son who was born in their home grew to years of maturity and returned to Buchanan. The little daughter of schools and sits in the self same seat her grandmother once occupied and if the seat could speak it would tell how Adelaide Williams and two generations later Adelaide Couse had studied at the same desk.

Find Cap and Human Hand. Fishermen had their nets fouled about six miles from St. Joseph in a sunken wreck and in trying to clear them they drow up the skeleton of a human hand and a cap, which on exa mination proved to be one of those worn by the captains of the Graham fleet of steamers. It was at once supposed that the wreck of the ill fated Chicora had at last been found. Sec J. S. Morton of the company, however, when shown the cap stated it could nor have belonged to Captain Edward Stines, as has been supposed. for the reason that the decoration on the buttons was of later date than that in use at the time of the loss of the Chicora. The theory that it may prove to be the Chicora is strengthened by the fact that three or four brass claim checks used in exchange for baggage on the Graham fleet of steamers have come ashore during the last four years. Each bore a number and the name of the steamer Chicora.

R. station Tuesday morning, all cheerful and of one accord, they arrived at the Harbor in good time, the convention being called to order at 11:20 by A. N. Woodruff, county chairman. There were 301 delegates present. Mr. E. S. Kelley read the call.

Hon, Carmi Smith of Niles was introduced as chairman and made a ringing speech of about half an hour, in closing he said:

would take up and settle the trust question aright. Uncle Sam will protect his own everywhere. Mention of report was lost. the late lamented McKinley was received with applause, and reference to President Roosevelt brought out storms of approbation. Chairman President Roosevelt.

It was 2 o'clock when the convention reassembled.

The committee on credentials re-

Your committee on credentials beg leave to report as follows: That the delegates present from the various townships and wards except as hereinafter stated have presented proper credentials and are entitled to participate in the deliberations of this convention. The exception mention ed above was in the township of Three Oaks where there were presented two sets of credentials of delegates Your committee carefully examined into the matter of the contesting parties and find that the caucus was duly called by the township committee and notice thereof posted six days before the date of said caucus, that the proceedings were regular and the caucus proceeded to select the delegates. Said caucus was called for 7 o'clock at which hour it convened. After adjouranment another caucus was convened at 7:30 which proceeded to select delegates, some of whom were participants of the first and regular caucus, and whose names were voted on in the first caucus and defeated by a vote of 36 to 31. We have no doubt on the question of the regularity of the first caucus and the irregularity of the second caucus

which was wholly without authority to call caucuses. We therefore recomseated as the regular delegates, propnames to fill the vacancies of the absentees, viz: Alva Sherwood, W. C. BEEF TO COME DOWN

When the Grass-Fed Cattle from Texas Come into the Market in May.

SO DECLARES ONE OF THE "BIG SIX"

Uncle Sam Is Preparing to Go to Law.

New York, April 28.—Relief is promised definitely from the present high prices of meats, and within a month they will have reached nearly or exactly their former normal level.. This statement appears in The Press today and the paper also says: "The promise of relief was made last night by Ferdinand Sulzberger, one of the 'Big Six,' when he was conferring with the committee of investigation appointed by the Republican club, of this city. While this conference was only preliminary to the important one to be held in Washington with all of the meat 'barons' Sulzberger felt called upon to make some definite promise to the insistent committeemen.

Promise Based on Natural Reasons. "'I can say with assurance,' he said when pressed for some promise of relief, 'that in a month from now prices will have sought their former level, or close to it, and that that level will be found soon thereafter. I can make that promise because there will be an influx by that time of the new grassfed cattle from Texas, and with the thousands of them on the market a break in prices is bound to follow.'

Tells of a Big Six Conference. "It was learned that a conference to be held in Washington will be held next Thursday, in a place not yet selected. As it is to be a secret session the place chosen probably will not be made known in advance. Those at the conference will be G. F. Swift, Ogden Armour, J. Lyman (of Hammond & Co.), Edward Morris (of Nelson Morris & Co.), Michael Cudahy and Ferdinand Sulzberger (of Schwarzehild & Sulzberger). These men will confer in Washington with Attorney General Davies, of this state, and Alfred L. Bullowa, Senator Samuel S. Slater and James W. Hawes, members of the committee appointed by the Republican club to investigate the meat question and assist in prosecution if relief could not be obtained in any other way. It is not believed that Attorney General Knox will be present, as such a proceeding while he is preparing to prosecute the trust men would hardly

LAW IS AFTER THEM TOO

Prenquations at Chicago to Take the Trust Into Court.

Chicago, April 28.—Legal action against the big packers of the country will be instituted in the United States circuit court in this city during the present week. A bill to enjoin acts 'in restraint of trade" will be filed by counsel for the government after full consideration has been given to the evidence now in possession of the United States district attorney, S. H.

The district attorney and Special Counsel William A. Day, representing Attorney General Knox, were in conference all day Saturday. They declared that it was of more importance to the people of the country that the bill when filed should be as strong as the use of every particle of evidence in hand could make it than that it should be hastily brought before the federal court.

For that reason they took no action Saturday, and would not even set a day for the filing of papers. Another reason for their attitude is that every day additional evidence, as alleged, is coming to them, and their case is being made stronger. New York, April 28.—The Central Federated Union has adopted resolutions calling upon the Federation of Labor to assist in urging congress to remove the tax on foreign meats until such time as the price of domestic meats is reduced. The resolution read in part: "That the Central Federated Union of Greater New York and vicinity ask the assistance of the American Federation of Labor in bringing pressure to bear on congress to accomplish the passage of a bill withdrawing the taxes from foreign meats, and thus compel the beef trust to lower the prices of its meats, thereby putting an end to the suffering, ruin and misery now being caused by the beef trust's high prices." Admiral Schley at Memphis. Memphis, Tenn., April 29.—The first day of the visit to Memphis of Admiral and Mrs. W. S. Schley opened with lowering skies and occasional showers, and the proposed paradewas postponed. At the Auditorium in the afternoon the admiral was presented with a fine silver service. Last night the admiral was banqueted at the Gayoso, while Mrs. Schley was entertained by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

BRUTE THAT WAS QUICKLY CAUGHT Had Attempted an Outrage on a Child Only 12 Years Old.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 25.-Geo. Langworthy, whose herie is said to be at Big Rapids, has been arrested by Sheriff Chapman and a posse of deputies within an hour after he had made an unsuccessful attempt to abuse a 12-year-old girl, daughter of a wealthy farmer of Walker township. The attempt was made when she and a girl about the same age were riding on their wheels on their way from this city to their homes. Langworthy ran out from the roadside and dragged one of the girls off her wheel into the woods near by.

The other girl rode on as quickly as possible and, stopping at the home of a farmer named Hine, told what had happened. The sheriff and his depu ties were called by telephone and Hine and his hired man started in search of the man who had attacked the little girl. Alarmed by the screams of the child, the fellow had left her. He was tracked and captured, and has confessed. He had lately been released from a lunatic asylum, where he had been sent on a similar charge

Pingree said that Andrews told him they could sell the City Savings bank by fall, as there were two banks that wanted to buy it.

WAR STORY

OR the armies in the east the of 1862 was "On to Richthe column should go forward from Washington by way of Manassas plains, where the Bull Run disaster befell in 1861. The commander of the Army of the Potomac, General Mc-Clellan, adopted a compromise plan, which kept Washington covered from attack by the Confederates and took the roundabout course of the Virginia peninsula for moving his men and guns to the gates of Richmond. He expected to gain by this the James river for the warships and the supply transports. For the protection of Washington directly in front he stationed 40.000 men at Fredericksburg under General McDowell, intending to soon as he could tie the enemy up in his capital on the James.

Still another pass lay between Washington and Richmond open to the army that could control it by fighting. This was the famous Shenandoah valley. leading from the Potomac, above Washington, southwest to the headwaters of the James. At the beginning of May three Federal armies were facing toward Richmond, the Army of the Potomac, under McClellan's personal lead- two gaps in the Blue Ridge, and the ership, confronting the enemy at Yorktown; McDowell's corps at Fredericksburg, under orders to proceed overland to Richmond at the critical time, and General Banks' corps, in the Shenandoah valley, standing ready to defend Washington from attack on the north or to march toward the head of the valley and thus threaten Richmond on the north or to march in detachments to the support of McDowell, either for BUCHANAN, MICHIGAN burg or in an attack on Richmond. In the mountains west of the valley still another Federal army, under Fremont, was working its way east to hold the valley and relieve Banks of that task or unite his troops to the mass headed for Richmond on the overland route. The combined forces of McDowell. Fremont and Banks mustered 80,000 men admirably placed for the defense of Washington or supporting the attack on Richmond. By evacuating Yorktown, the 4th of May, 1862, the STONEWALL DESTROYING A WAR DISPATCH Confederates under General Joe Johnston opened for McClellan the pass to Richmond in the center of the peninsula. His troops went rapidly forward in the tracks of the retreating enemy. There was but one road over the barren sandy peninsula, and the march of the army was slow.

With McClellan actually marching on Richmond, the hour had come for the armies in waiting westward to close down from the direction of the upper James. But there happened to be an opposing force, rather a genius, in the Shenandoah valley who must first be reckoned with. This was Stonewall Jackson, a soldier chiefly known at that time as the hero of a picturesque incident of the first Bull Run. He had indeed played his part in a small way as the savior of the valley some weeks before. When Mc-Clellan had got his army well away from the front of Washington and en route for the peninsula, all of Banks' troops except Shields' division had been taken across the mountains eastward to act as a sort of reserve for McDowell in his task of guarding Washington. Stonewall was supposed by his enemies to be in retreat. With one foe menacing him on the west, another in his front on the north and McDowell of clumsy strategists, for Fremont the indications are rain or snow, and if between him and Richmond, retreat hemmed in the valley on the west, they separate, taking no definite posiwould have been the natural move for Banks on the north and McDowell east | tion, changeable weather can be looked a general lacking in audacity. One theory was, "Always mystify, mislead and surprise your enemy," and the other, "Hurl your own force on only a part of your enemy and crush it." The valley was a scene well suited for his policy. Between the Potomac river, the base for the Federals, and Staunton, the base for the Confederates, the valley is 100 miles long. There are passes to the east and to the west, all to be guarded to keep the army out or to hem it in. Jackson set out for a game of hide and seek, with occasional battles, to keep up a Federal scare in the valley, threaten to cross the Potomac and in this way compel the Washington government to hold a large force march them forward to Richmond as in the vicinity. This would weaken the besiegers of Richmond and by just so much strengthen its defenders. Jackson's first concern was to look out for his base at Staunton. This was threatened early in May by the march of two divisions of Fremont's army across the western mountains toward Staunton. Suddenly Jackson's entire force, except his cavalry pickets, disappeared from the valley. His soldiers marched east in the night through friendly people of the valley were told they would go to Richmond on the Virginia Central railroad. They boarded the cars at an obscure station and at night steamed westward to Staunton. A hurried march took the column to the mountain town of McDowell, and there on May 8 Jackson, having completely mystified and surprised his enemy, struck a weak part of his force and crushed it. Fremont's advance, led by Milroy and Schenck, had reached McDowell on the way to Staunton. The battle was fought with muskets alone, for the scene was a mountain top where artillery could not be brought to the firing line. Jackson won the fight, and his enemy retreated back to Fremont's main camp.

Stonewall passed the night of May S in the house of a citizen of McDowell. Next morning one of his officers who was going to Staunton called to we rub cold hands together to warm see if the general had any messages to them. This is a saving of time and insend to Richmond. Jackson sat down and wrote what he said was a dispatch to be wired from Staunton to President Davis. He wrote nearly half a page of foolscap, then, standing in front of a fireplace, read it over carefully and tossed it into the flames. Another message, not quite as long as the first, was written and likewise thrown into the fire. Then he wrote two lines, saying, "Providence blessed our arms with a victory at McDowell yester-

Perhaps if those burned dispatches had fallen into unfriendly hands they would have told too much. Jackson had more mystery in his mind. He sent his cavalry to follow up Milroy and Schenck on the road to West Virginia and also down to the valley to confront Banks at Strasburg. Once more the little army of the Shenandoah disappeared from public view and was wrapped in mystery to all except the faithful few whose business it was to know. The army could not be hidden from itself, but its leader kept his plans to himself. One of his generals, who was second in rank and would have commanded the troops in case of accident to Jackson, came away from an interview with his chief rating him bitterly for stupidity. "Why," said he, "I went to him for orders, and he simply told me to take my men to Staunton; never said a word about his plans. I haven't the slightest idea what they may be. teur Gardeners. As soon as the ground is dry enough to be dug with ease trees and shrubs may be removed. Plant them as early as possible in order that they may secure a good root hold before the trying times of drought and heat come. But take your time to plant each one, for upon the care taken in transplanting depend nuch of the future satisfaction and success, says Country Life. This caretaking is of two kinds—that which has to do with the preparation of the soil and that associated with the manipulation of the tree itself.

The richer and mellower the soil the more likely is the plant to grow and the surer is its subsequent thrift. Do not be stingy with the holes. Make them larger than the mere extent of the roots, especially if the soil is hard and stubborn. In many cases it is well to remove some of the earth and to replace it with fine top soil. Be sure to spade up the earth and make it fine in the bottom of the hole, for this enables the roots to grow downward to a constant moisture supply. Be sure also that the earth is firmly placed about all the roots. Air spaces cause the roots to dry out. It is well to set the plant a little deeper than it stood originally.

The less the plant is mutilated in removal the better. In spite of all one can do, much of the root system will be left in the ground. This means that the top must be cut back in proportion. In fact, it is well to shorten in the top more than the root, because the root system has lost its connection with the soil and must re-establish itself before active growth can begin. A large top under such conditions absorbs more moisture than the roots can supply, and the plant dwindles and dies.

Soap should never be rubbed on shawls or other knitted garments, but a good lather should be made of soap and warm (not hot) water and the articles pressed and squeezed in this until they are clean. They should be well rinsed in several waters of the same temperature as the suds. When the water has been pressed out (not wrung) as far as possible, let the shawl lie in a heap on a clean yoth to dry. Turn it about occasionally to expedite matters, but do not stretch it by hanging it up. If these instructions are carefully carried out, the shawl ought to be as soft and fluffy as when new.

How to Walk Properly. In walking endeavor to take a long, graceful, gliding step rather than the short, choppy motion which one so often sees. Walking on the toes gives a mincing, dancing school master gait. Let the weight fall on the balls of the feet, turn the toes out a trifle and transfer the weight of the body from one foot to the other as each step is taken. Avoid balancing the body by throwing the hips alternately out and in. This produces a walk that is neither graceful nor refined, and no woman should care to imitate it.

It is worthy of the old mill north of the Michigan preached a strong sermon, taking for his text the last part of the 5th verse of I Timothy, "Take care of the church of God," There was a martial spirit throughout the services as the membership was being rallied for united work this summer. Now that the debt is paid the church is in condition to do much toward the extension of Christ's Kingdom if the members will be loyal, to those in authority, under all circumstances. The pastor gave an incident of a church in a neighboring state where one of the officers was not above reproach but was making every effort to overcome temptation. The others in authority however instead of standing by him withdrew. This may be illustrated by comparing it to a train perfectly equipped with coaches, engine, engineer, fireman and trainmen but one of these becomes intoxicated and shall the others then leave the train to certain destruction? No, it is all the more important that each of the others stands by his place of duty and carry the train safe through the settlers are arming themselves and wards be determined to modify or dangers.
