Hick's Forecast for September.

From the 1st to the 4th falls the culmination of a regular Vulcan period, intensified by Mercury, Earth and Mars, with new moon on the 1st and Moon on the celestial equator on the 3rd. Warm weather generally will most likely prevail at the opening of the month, with falling barometer, growing humidity, and other storm indications spreading eastward from west and southwest. On and touching the 2nd to 4th no one should be surprised by energetic storms of rain, wind and thunder. This is one of the autumnal equinoctial periods in which heavy equatorial storms are quite probable, in all southern waters and around all coasts exposed to the ravages of these West India storms. No sane person will be alarmed at this cautious admonition. Nothing out of nature's ordinary and normal course is indicated; but nature's ordinary way, under existing astronomical conditions at this time, might make it dangerous for people in the sections named, who give no thought to the subject and pay no timely attention to indications.

If very low barometer and West India hurricane reach our south coasts at this time they will either reach interior sections, and travel thence to the Lakes and St. Lawrence, causing high temperature and heavy storms of rain, wind and thunder over most of the country, or they will move up the Atlantic coasts, causing danger in those regions and bringing high barometer, northerly winds and quite cool weather over all northern and central parts of the country. Timely and positive indications as to which way matters will turn, will appear to all who pay attention to the subject. The chances are that frosts will occur northward about the 4th to the 7th.

The elements will react into storm conditions of more or less energy, progressing from west to east about the 7th to 9th. The center of the Mars period falls on the 11th, and on and about this date, it must be remembered, our globe reaches a crisis or maximum of magnetic and electric excitation, as a rule causing many curious phenomena in earth and air. Electrical storms, earth currents, auroral lights, seismic shivers and all similar manifestations are common and natural about this time.

The regular storm period central the 13th will almost certainly bring on a state of stormy and unsettled weather that will continue in a general way into the reactionary storm days centering about the 17th and 18th. One of the danger periods for September, especially in localities exposed to equinoctial storms, will be about the 17th, 18th and 19th,

Watch all indications at this time, and do not be surprised by very cool nights and frosts, as soon as the low barometric area and storms move out of the way. Sections most exposed and most interested in the matter of probable frosts at this time, as well as other September periods, might save themselves loss by a common sense watchfulness.

The last regular storm period for September is central on the 24th extending over the 22nd to 27th.—Word And Works.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL

Given by The Lady Maccabees and Royal Neighbors Tuesday Evening for Benefit of

BUCHANAN BAND BOYS.

Room Donated by Mr. Arthur, and all did Their Best to add Attraction to the Social.

The ice cream social given on Tuesday evening by the Lady Maccabees and the Royal Neighbors was well attended, and the sum of $20.75 was realized from the sale of ice cream. The band had their platform erected in front of the Arthur building where they entertained the crowd that constantly surged in and out of the building, and for a square or more the sidewalk was crowded. The ladies did their best to make everybody feel at home and they certainly deserve to be congratulated on the manner in which they accomplished it.

HEROIC DEED.

Buchanan Boy Rescues Drowning Girl.

On Labor Day at Benton Harbor there occurred an accident, which would have undoubtedly cost the life of Miss Edith Summerville, but for the prompt action of Frank Dunbar, whose home is about four miles out of Buchanan, and who belongs to the naval reserves at Benton Harbor.

As an immense crowd was standing on the south pier, Miss Summerville who was among the number, fell into the river. She cannot explain how, whether she was pushed or slipped, but the horror of the situation was realized by but few people who were near the edge of the pier. When she came up the second time, Frank Dunbar, dove into the water and rescued the drowning girl. A representative of the Record interviewed Mr. Dunbar, who said he was the only one of the naval reserve to make the effort to rescue the girl, though some of the papers said there were two others who jumped into the water.

After much struggling the half-conscious girl was rescued and soon revived, though the escape was a narrow one.

Weekly Climate and Crop Bulletin

The U. S. Department of Agriculture, Michigan section reports the following for week ending Sept. 1:

Average rainfall .05 of an inch or .45 below normal. The weather of the past week has been bright and dry; the days have been moderately warm and the nights cool; these conditions were unfavorable for the best advancement of beans, corn and late potatoes. Corn has eared nicely and has made some improvement during the past week, but the crop is still backward and is making slow growth and if present conditions continue the yield will be short. Beans have improved slightly and most of the crop is now very near maturity. Late potatoes are badly in need of rain, have not made much progress and show some blight. Buckwheat has filled nicely and is in promising condition.

The soil is very dry for plowing and some correspondents report the soil so lumpy and dusty that plowing is almost impossible. Peaches and pears are yielding well and the late varieties will be fairly plentiful. Early apples are quite plentiful and prospects for fairly good yields of the late varieties continue promising. Brien county corn, pastures and plowing need rain; potatoes promising; apple outlook good.

Fortune Favors A Texan.

"Having distressing pains in head, back and stomach, and being without appetite, I began to use Dr. King's New Life Pills," writes W. P. Whitehead, of Kennedale, Tex., "and soon felt like a new man." Infallible in stomach and liver troubles. Only 25c at W. N. Brodrick's drug store.

GRAMPER'S CELEBRATION

By May Belleville Brown

Copyright, 1901, by M. B. Brown

"BEST like this selfish generation," Gramper Van Boskirk ejaculated. "Every man jack of 'em gallivantin' up to Waxhaw fer the Fourth, leavin' Pewee Corners empty as a meetin' house on week-days, 'cept fer you an' me, thet's too old an' lame to go, an' Poorhouse Sally, thet'll hafter stay with the Smith an' Benziee babies."

Cappen Carter, resting his chin on the head of his cane, nodded vigorous assent.

"Las' year they did as they'd orter," said he; "he'd a lawyer down from Waxhaw to make a speech, an' you an' me set on the platform with the big bugs 'count of bein' ole settlers."

Gramper's chin worked with vigor for a moment, and then he spat out indignantly: "Thet's the curse of railroads. People's never satisfied to stay at hum. Las' year they hed to drive er else go afoot, an' this year they must git up a big 'excursion an' go traipsin' off. Indianny was spiled the same way, an' I got up an' come to Kansas twenty year ago, an' now here's the railroad."

First Pewee Corners had been but the schoolhouse, where the farmers came once a month on Sunday to hear the circuit rider preach and where their children came to school during the winter. Then, as the land was more thickly settled, a postoffice was established in a farmhouse at the crossroads, then a country store, to which the goods were hauled in wagons from the nearest railroad, twenty-five miles away, and, last of all, the early spring and summer had brought a railroad directly to their doors, so new as yet that all the travel was by means of construction trains. In the meantime a section house, blacksmith shop and two or three other buildings had been added.

This little settlement was but one of several that were strung out on the railroad from Metropolis, the bustling young city on the Great Western railway to Waxhaw, forty miles to the west.

The approaching holiday was to be a double justification, to celebrate Independence day and the completion of the new road. The first passenger train was to carry a load of excursionists from Metropolis to Waxhaw. The regular trains would not run for some time, as the bridges on the line were but temporary wooden affairs, and the track was not fully ballasted as yet, but for this occasion the real estate agents had seen that a large crowd was assured, and the only ones discontented with the arrangements were Gramper Van Boskirk and Cappen Carter.

It was the evening of the 3d that a message from Metropolis came clicking into the little office, causing the operator to turn out with a shout that brought the men from all parts of town.

"Every seat's taken in the excursion train," he announced, "and no more cars can be had. They've ordered the construction train to back down from Waxhaw early in the morning, and every one from here up the road is to go on that. They've two cabooses and will put seats in the flat cars, so we will have plenty of room."

The morning of the Fourth dawned bright and hot. The roofs of the town seemed to curl up, shingle by shingle. Corn blades and weeds hung limp. The hills around the horizon swam in glimmering heat waves.

By 8 o'clock the construction train backed across the Pewee creek bridge, just at the edge of town, and up to the platform. It was lavishly decorated with bright bunting and flags, and the hilarious crowd swarmed aboard and took noisy possession. The engine puffed and snorted, the children shouted. There was a rumble, a roar, a succession of whistles, a trail of smoke, and the inhabitants of Pewee Corners were gone.

Gramper and Cappen sat on the edge of the platform gazing vindictively down the narrowing rails toward the disappearing train.

"I s'pose they think that no one ever hed a railroad before," asserted Gramper. "They act as if they owned track, train an' the hull caboodle."

"People ain't like they ust to be," said Cappen plaintively. "They're light minded an' onstable. They don't know who they're celebratin', but it's anything fer a frolic, an' farmin' may go to the dogs."

"An' they're goin' to hev a whole ox an' a Nunited States senator," ruminated Gramper in a tone of regret.

The sun climbed higher, and still the old men sat on the platform mourning their fate. Suddenly Gramper rose stiffly to his feet, pulling Cappen up after him.

"Looky yander!" he exclaimed, pointing excitedly up the road with his cane. Above the bank of Pewee creek, just where the railroad was flung across, arose a cloud of smoke that every moment increased in volume. They hobbled down the track to the bank and peered over. Where the great timbers of the temporary bridge crossed and recrossed flames licked greedily at the dry, tinderlike wood.

Gramper pointed to a dry ledge of earth far below the upper bank. "Them tramps thet left town this mornin' slep' down thar las' night an' must've built a fire fer breakfast. See how it's crep' from thar all along them beams till now mighty nigh the whole thing's afire!"

"Lan' o' gracious!" ejaculated Cappen, all his spite at the new railroad swallowed up in the face of this calamity. "Ain't thet too scand'lous?" Just then, from far up the eastern stretch of track, a whistle cleft the air. Gramper suddenly clutched Cappen's arm.

"It's a judgment on this perverse an' stiff necked generation!" he exclaimed dramatically. "Thet bridge'll be gone by the time the 'excursion train's in. Pewee Corners is up at Waxhaw with the bobycue, but Metropolis an' the Nunited States senator an' brass band'll be here, an' it'll be our celebration. Hip, hip, hooray!" And the old man's cane described a triumphant circle in the air.

A telegraph operator on the excursion train finally explained the matter to Waxhaw, where a bored crowd was impatiently waiting for the belated visitors, for a town of 300 people cannot do much entertaining if the speakers are fifteen miles away on the other side of a burned out bridge. The address of welcome was delivered, and the Coyote quartet of Waxhaw sang two or three patriotic songs, according to programme. The picnic dinner was held, but on the whole it was a lonesome affair, and even the barbecue failed to arouse much enthusiasm.

It was well along toward evening when the construction train, with its banners drooping, slowly backed up and stopped on the opposite side of Pewee creek. The crowd climbed down the embankment to the footbridges that were hastily improvised from the seats used in the flat cars, the narrow stream was crossed and a dusty, dejected and tired people filed up the bank.

In the grove that stretched away toward the creek from the platform were seated, in groups on the ground and on improvised seats, the excursionists from Metropolis, presenting a marked contrast to the homecomers, so comfortable and good natured did they look.

On the platform was seated a complacent crowd—the resplendent brass band, the United States senator whose name had advertised the Waxhaw celebration, several local celebrities from Metropolis and Cappen Carter, his chin upheld by aggressive dignity, while from the speaker's place held forth Gramper Van Boskirk, chairman of the day, who was winding up the programme by relating in most approved frontier style some of his experiences with the Indians and buffaloes.

As Gramper brought the exercises to a successful close Pewee Corners realized that the impromptu occasion had been a success, and its drooping spirits rose, and when the senator turned back for another handshake with Gramper and Cappen the two old cronies took on new importance in the eyes of the people.

After the train had pulled out to the music of three cheers for the senator three more were given with a will for the heroes who had risen to the occasion. This tribute Gramper acknowledged in a dignified manner, adding with some acerbity:

"Now thet you hev seen what two superannuated old men can do, I hope you won't be runnin' on wild goose chases over the country, but'll stay to home an' celebrate your own town the way you'd orter."

"Twas a great day—a great day," said Cappen as they hobbled down the road in the dusk.

"Yep, you bet it was," affirmed Gramper. "I give them tramps my oldest boots an' thet orn'ry brown wamus thet I ust to wear at butcherin' times. 'F I'd know'd they was goin' to hev thet accident under the bridge, I'd no but I'd done more."

The Hot Blast Airtight Florence will heat twice the space that can be heated by any other stove on earth, at one-half the cost. The only perfect floor heater that has ever been made. All features are patented, and remember no stove manufacturer can copy same for 18 years from date of patent.

The Hot Blast Airtight Florence burns soft coal or slack, all the smoke and gases. No filling up of the stove pipe or flue with soot. No dirt inside or outside the house. It will burn hard coal and all the gases which escape from the hard coal base burner. It will burn coke just the same as hard or soft coal. It will burn wood and sawdust, wet or dry. It will produce less than half the ashes than any other stove on earth, with any kind of fuel.

The Hot Blast Airtight Florence will be on exhibition, in full operation, Friday, Sept. 12, on the street outside of my place of business, burning smoke. Come and see for yourself the most wonderful discovery of the century.

Noted Hoosier Dead.

The death of the wellknown writer, Edward Eggleston removes a prominent figure from literary circles. His "Hoosier Schoolmaster," and "Hoosier Schoolboy," are among his best known works, information for which he gained while a circuit rider in the Methodist conference in Southern Indiana. He became a minister in 1857 retiring in 1879 to devote his time exclusively to literary pursuits.

Many of the educated and cultured people of Indiana have felt that the type of Hoosiers Eggleston portrayed which were misrepresentations of the real residents of the state, did the people of that vast and wealthy commonwealth injustice, but he undoubtedly found such characters in his travels, and brought them out with out much exaggeration to the delight of many thousand readers.

The President.

On Wednesday, while the president and Governor Crane of Mass., with others were riding in a trolley, they were run into by an electric car, causing the death of the secret service detective, Wm. Craig and considerably bruising the others. It is cause for thanksgiving by the entire nation, that all were not killed.

Even when we are apparently the safest we are often in danger.

Judge Geo. H. Durand the democratic nominee for Governor of Michigan was stricken with paralysis on Monday, which will in all probability incapacitate him for any active work again even if he should recover from the attack. The judge was generally accepted to be a very capable man, and one who would make a splendid run in the gubernatorial race, and it will not be at all likely that another can be found who could make any where near the run he would have made.

J. N. Read, editor and publisher of the Benton Harbor Banner Register, was in town on Friday and took time to give us a call. We would be pleased to have you call again brother Read.

We see by the Wayne County Press of Fairfield, that Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Crippen have returned to their home in safety.

SUMMER DESSERTS.

How to Make Some Delicious Hot Weather Dishes.

Frozen desserts are the only sort that deserve recognition when the mercury is soaring toward the 100 mark, and in them the housewife has wide range. In all well ordered kitchens the freezer is one of the indispensables, says the New York Tribune, and housewives and cooks have both learned that its processes are more expeditious than the ordinary ones of cooking.

The blended juices of currants and raspberries make a delicious sherbet. Boil together for twenty minutes a quart of water and one and a half cupsful of sugar. When the sirup has partially cooled, add to it one and a half cupsful of currant juice and one cupful of raspberry juice. When it is cold, freeze.

Frozen red raspberries and currants are deliciously tart for a hot day and are easily prepared. Mash a cupful and a half each of currants and raspberries, cover them with the juice of two lemons and a pound of sugar and let them stand an hour or two; then add a pint of cold water and freeze.

To freeze peaches peel, stone and mash the peaches and break three of the stones and mash the kernels. Boil together a pint of water, a cupful of sugar and the kernels for six minutes. Then strain, and when the sirup is cold add the peaches and freeze.

Tea ice cream is a favorite in some quarters. It calls for a tablespoonful of the choicest tea, four cupfuls of cream, the yolks of a half dozen eggs and one and a half cupfuls of sugar. Scald the cream in a double boiler, turn in the tea, cover and let it stand five minutes. Then strain, and when it is cold add the yolks and sugar, bring it nearly to a boil, then cool and freeze.

How to Clean a Straw Hat.

To clean a white straw hat buy a small quantity of salts of lemon and dissolve it in a pint of boiling water. Then take a soft brush—nailbrush will do nicely—and wash the hat with the liquid. When clean, rinse thoroughly in cold water and put in the air to dry. A sailor hat should be allowed to dry on a board or table, for thus the brim will be kept flat, and, of course, the drying must be in the shade, since wet straw very easily becomes sunburned.

How to Pick Flowers.

It is the pride of every gardener occasionally to give a bunch of flowers of his own growing to friends who come to visit him, but unhappily both flowers and bunch are often spoiled in the course of preparation. Flowers should never be broken off from plants with the fingers. If the stem is at all tough the plant is dragged at and injured. Neither is the use of scissors desirable, says Home Chat. The best method of plucking is with the aid of a sharp knife, and the stem should not be cut straight across at right angles, but in a slanting direction. In "making up" the bunch, too, the best and most striking blossom or blossoms should form the center and they should be added to from outside, the bunch being turned around at intervals.

How to Make Peanut Sandwiches.

An addition to the 5 o'clock tea table is peanut sandwiches. Do not roll the nut meats, but pound them in a mortar with a little salt until they are very fine. Spread bread that has been cut very thin with butter and then with the nut paste. Place two pieces together and cut the sandwich round or in a triangle.

How to Go Upstairs.

The wrong way to go upstairs, according to a physical culture teacher, is to lean over, contract the chest, hoop the shoulders and bend the whole body forward from the waist. The person who goes upstairs in this way will be exhausted at the top of even a short flight. Yet stair climbing, properly done, is considered a good exercise. The head should be erect, the chest expanded, the shoulders back, with no bend whatever of the body at the waist. With this poise put the whole weight on the ball of the foot and do not touch the step with the heel and note the springiness felt at every footfall.

How to Make Horehound Candy.

Make a strong solution of horehound leaves; strain this and put a quarter of a cup of it over the fire with a pound of brown sugar and a very little water. Cook until a little dropped in cold water is brittle. Add a tablespoonful of vinegar, boil up once and turn into greased tins.

How to Make Gooseberry Jelly.

Few housewives appreciate how delicious gooseberry jelly is. One and a half cups of water should be allowed to each pint of berries, and they should be cooked until they are broken, then turned into a jelly bag and allowed to drain over night. In the morning measure the juice and boil rapidly for ten minutes. Then add a pound of granulated sugar to every pint of juice and boil steadily for ten minutes longer. Skim while boiling, and when done pour into heated glasses, filling well and seal.

How to Pickle Mushrooms.

Take a gallon of mushrooms, cut off the stems, strew salt on them, let them remain twenty-four hours, drain, put in jars with mixed pickling spices, cover with scalded vinegar and tie. Perfectly delicious in a fortnight.

How to Polish Dining Tables.

Dining tables, which are now so much used for table tennis, may be polished by rubbing them for some time with a very soft cloth and a little linseed oil. Elbow grease is needed for this polish.

HOT WEATHER SWEETS.

How to Make Fruit Souffles With Either Cream or Water.

No ice is more delicious than the souffle. Made with fruit juice and water, it is temptingly refreshing on a hot day and lacks the somewhat overrich quality of ice cream. The more elaborate souffle, mixed with cream, is equally toothsome, but slightly richer and heavier. The rule for each is the same, whatever the flavor chosen. Fruits of all sorts can be used and are all excellent, says the Kansas City Star, but the pineapple has a peculiar piquancy when made after the simple manner with water only, and such juicy fruits as the orange, strawberry, raspberry and peach are peculiarly well adapted to the purpose. Pineapple, being somewhat difficult to manage with gelatin; is less easily made into the cream souffle than are other fruits, although it is possible to achieve success if great care is taken.

To make pineapple water souffle peel ripe, juicy pineapples, remove the eyes and cut into bits. Then sprinkle with sugar and let stand for several hours. Strain through a fruit press, and to every pint of the juice add one of water, six eggs well beaten and one pound of sugar, less the quantity previously used. Place the whole in a custard boiler and cook until it takes the consistency of boiled custard, stirring all the while. When removed from the fire, stand the vessel in one of cold water, and beat the custard briskly until cold. Pour into the freezer can, freeze after the usual manner and serve with cream slightly sweetened and flavored with pineapple juice.

To make souffles of other flavors follow the same general rule, substituting the juice of whatever fruit may be selected for that of the pineapple. In addition to the more familiar flavors, currant, cherry, plum and what is known as harlequin, or a mixture of two or more flavors, will be found delicious.

How to Make Mulberry Shrub.

Squeeze the juice from the mulberries through thin muslin or cheesecloth into a stone jar or crock, and let it stand until fermentation ceases. Carefully remove all scum and pour into a fresh, clean vessel and let it stand twenty-four hours longer and then pour off again. To a pound of granulated sugar allow thirteen ounces of juice. Stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved, and when the sirup boils up strain through a jelly bag into sterilized bottles and seal at once.

How to Peel Apples.

In peeling apples it is disagreeable to see a sort of brown rust creeping over the white pulp if the slices have to stand very long. This brown coloring is a pigment of the actual nature of rust caused by the presence of iron in the fruit and the oxidation of that iron by the air. The acid in the pulp helps in this oxidation considerably. By setting each quarter or slice as it is peeled in a basin of cold water no air contact is possible, and the brownness is avoided. But the water draws out the acids, and there is a sacrifice of flavor to color if this plan is used and the apples soaked too long. Any discolored slices will turn white again if rubbed with a piece of lemon.

How to Polish a Rusty Stove.

A stove that has been allowed to get rusty will often not take the blacking well when it is again cleaned. First rub it well all over with an old rag or piece of newspaper which has been dipped in a little paraffin. Add a few drops of turpentine to your ordinary mixed blacklead and black and shine as usual.

How to Repair a Mackintosh.

To mend a mackintosh procure a small tin of india rubber cement or dissolve some strips of pure india rubber in naphtha or sulphide of carbon to form a stiff paste. Apply a little of the cement on the surface of a strip of the same material of which the mackintosh is made, which can be purchased by the yard or in remnants from the waterproofer's; also apply a little cement to each side of the torn part, and when it begins to feel tacky bring the edges together and place the patch nicely over, and keep in position by putting a weight over it until quite hard, which will be in a few days.

How to Clean Rusty Flatirons.

Beeswax and salt will make your rusty flatirons as clean and smooth as glass. Tie a lump of wax in a rag and keep it for that purpose. When the irons are hot, rub them first with the wax rag, then scour with a paper or cloth sprinkled with salt.

How to Breathe Correctly.

To breathe correctly keep the chest up, out, forward, as if pulled up by a button. Keep the chin, the lips, the chest, on a line. Hold the shoulders on a line with the hips. Breathe upward and outward, as if about to fly, drawing the air with slow, deep breaths and letting it out gently. This conscious deep breathing repeated ten or twenty times at intervals during the day tends to expand the chest permanently, to give it classic poise and style. Repeated forty times, it is said to be a cure for worry.

How to Clean Brass Trays.

To clean brass trays sprinkle with silver sand, squeeze the juice of a lemon all over, rub with the pulp until all stains are removed. Wash off sand without touching tray with cold water; then stand in the sun to dry.

How to Wash Milk Jugs.

The proper way to wash milk and cream jugs is always to wash them in cold water first. If they are put straight into boiling water, it has the effect of causing the milk to sink into the ware.

A LESSON IN GEOMETRY.

Easily Demonstrated With a Wooden Ball and Pieces of Cord.

There are some propositions in mathematics that we can prove with perfect accuracy without making use of figures. There, for example, is that well known theorem of plane geometry—the surface of a sphere is equal to four times the surface of a great circle. That reads as if we were going to give you something dry and uninteresting, but read on and you will find it just the other way, for we are going to tell you how you may prove that proposition with a croquet ball and a piece of cord.

The croquet ball is a sphere, and the section made in it by passing a plane through its center is a great circle. The radius of the great circle, therefore, is exactly equal to the radius of the sphere.

Now, saw the ball through the center, thus dividing it into two hemispheres, and, laying one of them on the table, with the flat part down, drive a small nail in the center of the round or upper part. To the nail tie the end of a cord, and then wind the cord around the nail and the rounded surface of the half ball until this surface is entirely covered by the cord. Cut the cord where you stop winding.

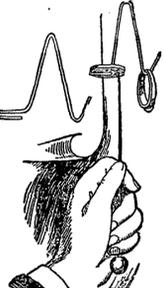

Then take the other half of the ball and drive a small nail in the center of its flat part, tying to the nail a piece of cord exactly like the piece first used, and wind it around the nail spirally, pressing it down so that it will lie flat on the surface of the circle. Cut the cord when the surface of the circle is entirely covered, and when you compare the two cords you will find that the piece first used is exactly twice as long as the second.

This proves that the surface of a hemisphere is equal to twice the surface of a great circle and that therefore the surface of a whole sphere is equal to four times the surface of a great circle.

So that we demonstrate an important theorem of geometry simply by using a ball and a cord.—New York Herald.

A Balancing Trick.

Bend a hairpin as shown in figure. Fasten a five cent piece into the hook on the left, while you suspend a ring or, if necessary, two rings from the other hook. This will balance the money, if you place the rim of the five cent piece on the point of the large pin, as shown in figure. By blowing against the ring the whole will turn without disturbing the balance.

The Otter.

The otter, as is well known, will eat none but the choicest portions of the fish it catches, and will, for preference, select even those choice portions from the plumpest and best tasting varieties. It is this trait in its character which leads it to play such havoc in trout streams and other preserved waters. In order to provide for itself a meal of perhaps two or three dozen mouthfuls the otter will not infrequently catch and kill nearly as many fine fish, contenting itself with a small portion from the back of each victim immediately behind the gills. When an otter kills a moor hen, which is not seldom when these birds abound near its habitat, it devours the neck only, leaving the body intact and devoid of every drop of blood.

A Coin Trick.

Place a little muckilage on the rim of a wineglass, turn the glass over on a sheet of white paper, and when the muckilage is dry cut away the paper close to the glass. Put the glass mouth downward on a sheet of paper like that which covers the mouth of the glass. Make a paper cone to fit over the glass. Now lay a penny on the large sheet of paper by the side of the wineglass. Cover the glass with the paper cone and place the whole over the coin. Command the coin to disappear, and on taking off the cone the coin will appear to have obeyed your command.

She Could Not Help It.

Lillian, three and a half years old, was in the house playing one day when it was raining very hard and was very dark outside. Mamma came to her and said: "Lillian, here were three pieces of cake in the pantry, and now there is only one. How did that happen?" "Well," said Lillian, her eyes open wide with excitement, "it was so dark in there I didn't see the other piece."

Something New.

A showman to the jungle went and caught a fierce young gnu. Said he, "I'll teach him to perform. And sell him to the zoo."

This man was very much surprised and quite delighted, too. For, lo, each quick and novel trick The new gnu knew!

MEETING OUR FLAG AT SEA

A Fourth of July In the Pacific

MY ship was returning from Japan to the United States five years ago," said a naval officer. "We had been on the China station for over three years, and most of us, forward as well as aft, were pretty lonesome, as you may fancy, for a sight of this smiling land of ours. We were eight days out from Yokohama, making for Honolulu to coal ship, when we were overtaken by the Fourth of July. All the ships in the American navy, you remember, are dressed with bunting from stem to stern on Independence day, whether the ships are at anchor or at sea, in any quarter of the globe. Our signal quartermaster made an especially beautiful job of ship dressing on this Fourth of July, and with our hundred foot homeward bound pennant streaming flat with the fresh breeze we were worth looking at.

"But we seemed to be absolutely alone in mid-Pacific. During the first three or four days of our homeward bound cruise out of Japan we had run across a few ships, all flying the British flag, but on this sunny Fourth of July morning we seemed to be quite alone on the sea, but we were not.

"A sail!" sung out the boy in the lookout.

"The sail was a skys'l, still and tiny as the link in a lady's lorgnette chain, and the men up forward jammed their eyes for the ship, which was making for us. A sailing ship approaching you at sea from the far horizon seems to make at you in bounds when you yourself are driving for her, and by the time we took a second long look at the approaching ship her huge royals, belled out by the fresh breeze, shone clear and brilliant in our eyes, reflected by the bright morning sun, but by the time we could make out the royals we had no time for them. Our gaze was focused on the bit of bunting at the main, the stars and stripes of our republic. I think a bit of a chill ran over the spines of all of us when we saw that. It seemed such a devilishly beautiful idea, that—the flag bounding slap at us right out of the middle of the Pacific, and of all mornings on the Fourth of July morning!

"DOES SHE WAVE?" HE HOWLED.

"This is good, this is good," muttered the old skipper a trifle hoarsely. And then the hull of the approaching ship, danced on the amethyst horizon for us, her code of signals fluttering.

"The Shenandoah, out of Bath!" shouted the signal quartermaster.

"You ought to have heard the men up forward, bless their mischievous, generous souls! They let out a whoop that rang around the circle of indigo sea like a Valhalla shout of victory, and I fear we were a bit undignified aft, for one of the senior watch officers alongside us on the poop deliberately threw his cap to the deck, thrust forth both of his arms in the air and emitted a series of howls that were calculated to make the voice of our siren seem small by comparison.

"Does she wave?" he howled. "Well, does she wave?"

"The Shenandoah, probably queen of all the clippers in the world, bore down upon us with every thread of her canvas set and drawing, as beautiful a picture as any man ever sees in this world, and there, fluttering far above her main skys'l, snapping in the breeze, and waving grandly with the dips and leans of the great ship, the flag! It would be hard to describe the feeling we all experienced when the Shenandoah swept by within a hundred yards of us. Her crew was just as much pleased as we were, and she did not wait for us to dip, but just as she swung by us like a princess in the pride of her finery again and again was the banner dipped in reply to our banner dipping at the mizzen, and the clipper's crew, ranged along the weather rail, mingled their hoarse shouts with the cheering of our man-o'-war's men.

"When a man sees the flag of his native land under circumstances like these, the memory of it is going to abide with him."—Washington Star.

Our Horrible Tariff.

Our tariff, in short, is the main factor in preventing the great increase of manufactures.—Baltimore Sun.

Exactly! What we need to set all our manufactures at work is to return to the splendid theory of the Wilson tariff, when men dared not strike, but hundreds of thousands would have been glad to have obtained work at 50 cents per diem, while two millions couldn't obtain employment at 40 cents per day.

Opposed to Progress.

A paper called Southern Progress, not having the fear of Ben Tillman before its eyes, has been started at Charlotte, N. C. If the men behind that paper really mean true progress, they will incur the everlasting enmity of Tillman, who will rage like a mad bull until the audacious undertaking is rendered nugatory.

$5,000 FIRE ON TUESDAY

Samuel Thompson Living North-east of Niles, Burned Out.

Tuesday at about 2:30 p. m. as Samuel Thompson was about finishing threshing a workman noticed smoke emerging from the large barn. The barn had been closed and it is not known how the fire originated but it burned furiously and did great damage.

There were on the place three houses, two barns, and granary besides the usual out buildings, all of which were destroyed except the main residence and that was badly damaged, and only by tearing up two carpets and soaking them with water was the house saved. Mr. Thompson was a large wheat farmer and no doubt had many bushels of wheat stored, which was a complete loss.

Besides the loss Mr. Thompson was himself injured in trying to save the building, but not seriously.

He was insured in the Berrien Co. Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of which, he is also director. His insurance is $5,000, distributed as follows: $1200 farm produce, $400 farm implements, $1000 on residence, $500 on furniture, $400 on two small houses, $400 on live stock, $1100 on two barns and granary.

How to Perfume Your Hair.
To perfume the hair, get a piece of water lily incense, which you can buy at any Japanese or Turkish store. Light it, and as the fumes arise shake the hair over it until the incense has all burned out. This fragrance will last a long time in the hair and is only a suggestion of perfume. Heavily perfumed locks are in bad taste, says the New York Press. Cheap cologne or perfume is bad for the hair. A little dash of violet toilet water will not hurt the hair and will give it a golden cast in the sunlight.

How to Keep Ice From Melting.
The latest device to keep the ice from melting almost as soon as it is placed in the refrigerator is a thick, flat pad, which is placed under, not over, the block of ice. The stuff of which the pad is made costs 75 cents per square foot.

How to Select Nutmegs.

Mother, Home and Heaven.

I've sometimes wondered, when my path has led,
My feet reluctant into stranger's halls
When for a season, I have been deprived
Of the endearments and delights of home;
When a self-exile from the dear fireside,
To duty sacrificing all its joys,
I've dwelt among strangers—still, though
Kind.

Often, and pitying as a friend could be
I've sometimes wondered if of all earth
words,
There were three sweeter, dearer to the heart,
Than Mother Home and heaven, I have thought
That if my hand were better skilled to write
The artist's pencil than the poet's pen,
I would be my life task to produce a work
That should make every heart grow soft with tears.
At that of those three simple, soulful
words.

"Mother!" the utterance of that sweet word
Turns back the wheels of Time, and I am left
A helpless infant on my mother's breast
I see her smile of love, I feel the kiss
That falls as gently as a breath of balm
Upon my brow. Then, as in after time,
I'm bowing at her knee, my lisping tongue
Repeating the sweet prayer she taught me there.

And then I listen to her kind reproof
Her words of counsel and my heart is stirred
With strange desires and longing to "be good."
And now I'm roaming thru the wild beech
woods,
Chasing the merris squirrel to his nest;
Mocking the glee of singing birds or bees,
Swinging like a wild thing high in the air
On some long grapevines, wading in the pond
Where the tall sycamore reach out their arms,
And clasp their hands that play with my wild hair.

I'm hunting buttercups amid the grass
Of the brook meadow, I am fitting here
And there in the wild, wondrous "sugar camp"
Dipping my sun-browned face in every
"trough,"
To test the sweetness of its liquid store,
And then I'm going home—home to the rest,
And peace, and quit, of the broad home hearth!

I lay my head upon my mother's knee,
And tell her all the wondrous sights I've seen
And kissed me and gravely says
That I'm "too wild romping for a girl,"
And this is home—for "home is where mother is!"
And round me are the faces that I love.

"Home!" The pure shrine where willing spirits bend
And offer grateful incense; where the cares
And trials and commotions of the world
Should never come; the castle where a man
May shut himself securely and defy
The angry turmoils of the world without.
Home is a refuge where the weary heart
Turns with its burdens; where the weary feet
Turn from their wanderings up and down
the world
Where the wrecked hopes of ruined wasted lives
Are brought to be entombed from the world's gaze
Or gloomy hospital, or battle din,
When life was ebbing out and death was near,

Has cried in vain "Oh! that I might go
home!"
How many a sailor, wrecked upon the sea,
How many a soldier in the prison cell,
That tells him home is near; and with the
thought
Of home to cheer, yet sadden him, gone down
To find a watery grave beneath the deep!
How many of earth's lost and fallen ones
Have been reclaimed by thoughts and hopes of home!

Home! It is where the heart is, and I have that,
That this is why we are not to lay up
Our treasures here on earth. Our Father knows
That we are strangers here, earth not our
home;
And knowing that if we gather treasures
here
Our fallen hearts will seek no better home,
He in his loving care hath made for us
A mansion suited to our soul's great wants,
And hath established it in heaven, where we

May store our treasures for eternal use
And here at last seal all our wanderings end,
At home in heaven. How do our bosoms
burn
With rapture in anticipation sweet
Of that blessed land, where toil, and grief
and pain,
And sighing, shall no more annoy our hearts!
Oh! there will be no tears, no weary feet,
No crushed hearts wearing out with ceaseless pain,
No long, slow, hopeless days and sleepless nights,
No heavy burdens hid beneath cloaks of mirth
And thus made harder to be borne; no lives
Wrecked, wasted, ruined, no cold, curious eyes.
No scornful smiles in that pure sinless
land.
But these our Father wipes away all tears,
And perfect bliss atones for all the woes
And crosses that make earth a dreary place.

"Home is where mother is," but Mother's hand
Cannot remove the burden from our hearts,
Though by her tenderness she may allay
The bitter pain and make it easier
And we may turn to home and mother when
The world deals harshly by us, and may find
And may find a refuge from its turmoils for awhile.
But mother dies, the roof-tree is torn down,
And we are shelterless amid the wild.
"Heaven is where God is," and we may go Weary and soiled, and travel-worn and tired,
And we may leave it all without the gate.
And when we enter thru the shining door
Our Father will receive us, dry our tears,
Clothe us and crown us, and one welcoming smile

Will fill us with such perfect ecstasy
That all that we have suffered and endured
Will seem as trifles not to be compared To the exceeding glory of our great reward.

THE FORD'S

BLACK-DRAUGHT

FOR CONSTIPATION

Constipation is nothing more than a clogging of the bowels and nothing less than vital stagnation or death if not relieved. If every constipated sufferer could realize that he is allowing poisonous filth to remain in his system, he would soon get relief. Constipation invites all kinds of contagion. Headaches, biliousness, colds and many other ailments disappear when constipated bowels are relieved. The Ford's Black-Draught thoroughly cleans out the bowels in an easy and natural manner without the purging of calomel or other violent cathartics.

Be sure that you get the original The Ford's Black-Draught, made by The Chattanooga Medicine Co. Sold by all druggists in 25 cent and $1.00 packages.

Morgan, Ark., May 25, 1901.
I cannot recommend The Ford's Black-Draught too highly. I keep it in my house all the time and have used it for the last ten years. I never gave my children any other laxative. I think I could never be able to work without it on account of being troubled with constipation. Your medicine is all that keeps me up.

In the Interests of Economy.

"Four tickets for the opera!" he exclaimed exultingly, as he entered the house.

"Oh, isn't that delightful!" she cried. "But, George, how could you afford it?"

"I couldn't," he answered.

"I have wanted to go so much," she went on, "but you told me you couldn't possibly spare the money for even two tickets, and now you have four."

"Luck," he explained, "pure luck. What's the use of being private secretary to a high flier if you can't get his season tickets on an off night? It just happened to occur to him that I might like to go, and he offered them to me."

"It's just too lovely for anything," she asserted, "and I'll tell you what we'll do—we'll pay off our social obligations to the Bronsons. Isn't it splendid to be able to do it this way after we had given up all thoughts of even balcony seats in the interests of economy?"

"Well, rather," he replied, "it's like finding a mislaid bill in one's watch pocket. Tell them, if they have no other engagement, we'll call for them tomorrow night."

"With a carriage of course," she suggested.

He looked troubled.

"Do you think that necessary?" he asked.

"Oh, yes, indeed," she replied. "It's the opera, you know, and these are swell seats. I wouldn't think of asking Mrs. Bronson to go without a carriage. It would look so dreadfully cheap."

"Oh, all right," he agreed. "I suppose we'll never have a better chance to square up with them—economically."

"Never," she said positively. "And while we're about it, don't you think it would be just as well to have them to dinner, so that we can go direct from here instead of calling for them?"

His brow clouded and he looked solemn.

"It's always best to do a thing the right way, if one is going to do it at all," she urged. "It seems so absurdly cheap otherwise, and this is the opera, you know and these are swell seats."

"Very well," he acquiesced. "Have them to dinner."

"Will you get the flowers, or shall I?" she asked.

"I'll get them," he said, with a sigh. "Roses, I suppose?"

"Of course."

"They come high."

"But think what we've saved on the tickets. We certainly can afford something."

"True"

And after the opera—what shall we have then?"

"A ride home," he answered promptly.

"With the Bronsons?" she commenced inquiringly. "When they've been so clever to do and we have such a good chance to do the thing properly? Just think of rushing them right off home after a long opera! Oh, it wouldn't do at all! We must have a little supper somewhere—just a quiet, dainty little one, you know. Remember, it's the opera, and we have swell seats, and there are only two ways of doing a thing—the right way and the wrong way, and the wrong way always seems so disreputably cheap. One can't afford to be cheap when one is in a position to be economically swaggar and generous."

He sighed and nodded a hesitating approval. Then he began scribbling on the back of an old envelope.

"What are you doing?" she asked.

"Jotting down a few figures," he replied. "I want to see just how much I've saved by refusing to buy two balcony seats and accepting four in the parquet as a gift. One's economies should be thoughtfully considered, you know."—Chicago Evening Post.
