Justin Harvey Smith, the author of the papers on "Prologue of the American Revolution" which are to appear in the Century during the year 1903, has been Professor of Modern History at Dartmouth since the chair was established in 1867. Professor Smith is a graduate of Dartmouth in the class of '77, and he is said to be the fourth who has received a perfect mark there, Rufus Choat and the late Chief Justice Field of Massachusetts being two of the others. Professor Smith was at one time a partner in a large publishing house and was for several years at the head of its literary department, but in 1897 he dropped business and after fruther travel and study abroad brought out "The Troubador at Home," a reconstruction of the personalities of the medieval Provencal poets,

Since it was her bedtime and I preferred that Aleen's anger- should have time to cool I deferred the message till the next morning, but the next morning Aleen's mother an- nounced that her daughter was indis posed and would keep to her room. Toward evening a cold wind came up, and the guests of the hotel occu- pied the drawing room. Aleen sat reading at the other end from where I was. She did not deign to look up at me, though I was quite sure she knew I was in the room. My little friend came in and bade me good night. "Go tell Miss Aleen," I said to her. "After my first baby was born I did not seem to regain my strength although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of getting better I grew weaker every day. My husband insisted that I take Wine of Cardui for a week and see what it would do for me. I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength and health slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."

Wine of Cardui reinforces the organs of generation for the ordeal of preg-nancy and childbirth. It prevents miscarriage. No woman who takes Wine of Cardui need fear the coming of her child. If Mrs. Unrath had taken Wine of Cardui before her baby came she would not have been weakened as she was. Her rapid recovery should commend this great remedy to every expectant mother. Wine of Cardui regulates the menstrual flow.

How to Prepare a Manuscript. In preparing manuscripts use plain white paper and good black ink. Don't use paper that is flimsy or transparent or so spongy that the ink is likely to blur or sheets that are of different sizes or that have been torn out of a notebook and left with the rough edges untrimmed. The two sizes of sheets that are most generally used are commercial note and letter paper. If you have to send out hand written copy, never write it in pale ink or in lead pencil or in backhand, which as a rule is extremely difficult to make out, says a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal.

mending after being thoroughly wet.

Cultivate a round, clear, good sized, almost vertical hand and form the habit of leaving a wide space between the lines. Write, of course, on only one side of the paper, and if you find near the end that you are going to run a few lines over what you thought would be the last sheet don't squeeze the final lines together at the bottom of the page or write them on the back of it in order to save another sheet. In both handwritten and typewritten copy leave a margin of at least an inch at both sides of the sheet as well as at the top and bottom.

The young doctor took the sick man's temperature, scanned his tongue, felt his pulse and lifted the eyelids to scrutinize the optics. After a few seconds of profound meditation-or was it hesitation?-he prescribed for his patient in blindly scrawled Latin, adding in English the direction, "To be taken twice a day in any convenient vehicle."

"Be there any show fer me to git well, doctor?" quavered the sick man. "Sure there is, Mr. Simmons. You'll be all right now in no time. These pills will set you up at once."

Then the sapient young disciple of | Æsculapius drew on his gloves and gave a reassuring grasp to Ben Simmons' outstretched hand. With an encouraging smile all round upon the staring little Simmonses and the pallid wife, over whose face a gleam of hope seemed to flicker, he departed, tearing down the road at a breakneck speed, as if bound for a dying patient.

"Hanged if I know what ails the old chap," he mused as he galloped along. "How is a doctor going to prescribe for an idiot who can't give a clearer account of his feelings than 'a dull, heavy misery in his bones?"

But Ben Simmons mended from the hour that Dr. Bledsoe took charge of his case. Strength and courage and health seemed rolled up in those wonderful pills, the fame of which spread through the backwoods Missouri town. The doctor's visits soon ceased at the Simmons cabin, for Bob Simmons after long months of diseased liver, indisgriminate patent medicine taking and confinement within the four walls of a bedroom into which the breezes of heaven were never permitted to enter had come forth a well man. To the doctor, be it confessed, Bob's convalescence was as great a wonder as to the community at large, though of this he kept silence.

One evening Dr. Bledsoe was waiting for his mail at the little postoffice seated in an inconspicuous place behind a newspaper which he had spread out before him. Suddenly his attention was roused by hearing his own name spoken. The tone he recognized as the drawling one of Mrs. Ben Simmons,

"Yes; Ben were in a powerful bad way when Dr. Bledsoe tuk a hold of

The pessimists who are continually harping that the workingmen are gaining no advantages from the general prosperity should study the statistics which show the increasing savings of their class. These growlers assert that the increased wages paid are more than offset by the increased cost of living and that therefore the workingmen are no better off than before, leaving entirely out of sight that under the free trade laws several million workingmen in this country were earning no wages at all, being in enforced idleness. The report of the condition of the savings banks of New York for the year ending Dec. 31, 1901, shows a grand total of deposits of $709,059,156, an increase of $51,119,116 for the year. Statisticians estimate that two-thirds of the total deposits in the savings banks of the country are made by working people. These deposits amount to $1,734,126,194. In addition to this, the assets of trade unions, labor societies, building and loan associations, fraternal orders and life insurance and you will be sure to go to the right companies owned by working people amount to $3,132,464,810. This makes saved by the laboring people of this country after they have paid the debts incurred during the depression and idleness caused by the Wilson free trade law over and above the cost of living. The total is more than double that of six years ago and refutes the favorite assertion of the Democratic spellbinders that "the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer." The rich are certainly growing richer, as is shown by the payment the first of this month of over $60.000,000 in dividends and interest, but the poor are also getting richer, as is shown by the fact that they are coming in for dividend and interest payments as well.—Helena (Mon.) the decline when a brakeman climbed on the tender and shouted:

"There's a train behind, comin' like lightnin'." "How do you know?" asked Tim.

"Seen it in the moonlight." "See a headlight?" "There ain't no headlight. It's freight cars; must have broke loose." "Well, there's a switch at the bottom. We'll have to make it before they catch us."

He hooked up to the first notch and threw the throttle wide open. The engine made a jump, and before we could say "Jack Robinson" we were tearing down the grade at sixty miles an hour. We hadn't far to go, but the question was whether the locomotive would stick to the rails. She swayed and pitched and shuddered and shook like a ship in a gale. We shot over a bridge and out where we could look behind, and there was the cursed train coming like the wind.

"How far to the switch?" I asked. "'Bout two mile and a half." "Will we reach it in time?" "Dunno."

We were now on a straight track and could see the switch light at the little station at the foot of the grade and the moonlight gleaming on the rails the council appropriate sufficient straight as a pair of arrows for miles beyond.

"What's that standing on the track near the top of the grade?" I asked. Tim put his head away-out of the cab window and looked. When he took it in, his face was as white as the snow. He said in a hoarse whisper: "It isn't standin' on the track. It's comin' for us." "Great heaven! What does it mean-crushed from behind or in front." "But we may reach the switch in time to avoid both."

"Whoever's done this job has been smart enough to lock the switch so that no crowbar will open it. We're done for."

Just then above the rattle there was. a sound behind us as if a hill had toppled over, and, looking backward, we could see tons of mud and stones pouring over the rails. In about a minute there was a crash, and the coming freight cars were piled in a heap at the landslide. The rain had loosened a bank, and we had shaken it off.

"Any chance now at the switch?" asked. "Not unless they have left one end unlocked, which they haven't." Tim reversed his engine as he spoke and whistled down brakes. We came to a stop within a quarter of a mile of
