SAD CASE OF COLLAPSE

Dr. Robert Henderson Broods Over Difficulties Until He Breaks Down.

Although known to those who were constantly about him, it came like an electric shock this week, to the community at large, that Dr. Henderson was a mental and physical wreck.

The Dr. has been a very hard worker, never taking a vacation from his labors. Becoming somewhat involved financially he began to brood over his difficulty until his reason was in danger of being dethroned.

His family decided that it might be well to send him to an asylum.

They called for the advice of Wm. A.
Palmer and A. A. Worthington and told them of their plans, although Mrs. Henderson had consented very reluctantly to the Dr.'s going to an asylum. Mr. Palmer then saw the Dr.
three times that day and took him driving in the evening and decided that he was no more insane than many other active, nervous busy men who are facing severe difficulties. Mr.
Worthington and Mr. Palmer decided that the proceedings for an examination as to his mental condition should be stopped; they saw the family and they all were very happy to find some other way out of the difficulty.

It was then arranged that the Dr.
should take a vacation until he was thoroughly rested and his health of body and mind restored. Attorney Worthington assured him that he need not worry, as his creditors would not disturb any of his property during his absence.

Dr. Henderson is not insane, as every one who conversed with him will say;
and he expressed himself Wednesday, as being much better and greatly relieved at the manner in which things had been arranged.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. and Mrs.
Henderson took the train for Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where they will visit for a time with Dr. Will Bradley a former student of the Dr.'s.

The many friends of the family are deeply grieved over the unfortunate affair and are sincerely hopeful that rest will restore the Dr. to his wonted health.

HOME MADE BREAD.

Mrs. Bertha Roe Has Fine Supply on Hand at All Times.

Since bread is the staff of life, it makes a vast difference to most people what kind of bread they eat, and many of the residents of Buchanan have found out that good home made bread can be procured at the Cottage Bakery, of which Mrs. Bertha Roe is the proprietor.

Mrs. Roe started in a very modest way, in the bakery business about seven years ago, occupying the Alexander building in the room where she now is. Twice during this period Mrs. Roe has been temporarily out of business here, once on account of ill-health and once when for four months she ran a bakery in Three Oaks.

The room which she now has for her sale room has recently been repapered, and a fine new eight foot show case put in which has been well stocked with candy. She recently had a new oven placed in the bake room, a McDowell, which gives now a total capacity of 240 loaves at one baking. Besides bread, there are all kinds of coffee cakes, rolls, pies, and cookies on hand at all times.

Mr. J. H. Portz, formerly of Niles, is the baker and gives evidence of knowing well his trade.

WILL HAVE NEW CARS.

And Pere Marquette Bonds to Get Them.

The Pere Marquette Railroad company has issued $1,600,000 first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds at par and interest. These bonds are part of a series of $2,000,000 made by the Eastern Equipment company on freight cars. The cars are built by the American Car and Foundry Co. and delivery is very nearly completed. The bonds have been offered to banks at the price fixed, less a commission of 1 per cent on amounts of more than $20,000 and are being well taken.—

Saved From Terrible Death.

The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's bottle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles.

Corn Weather.

W. E. Curtis in a letter from Des Moines, Iowa to the Chicago Record Her old says that Sec. Wilson says that this weather is worth $1,000,000 a day to the farmers of Iowa. The rain and cold caused late planting and the crop was backward but the area planted is larger than ever.
He says Captain Merry, vice president of the Ill. Central R. R. in Iowa declared that when corn grows rapidly it makes a peculiar crackling noise which he can distinguish above the rattling of the railway trains and the hooting of the whistles, and any one who knows Captain Merry will vouch for his accuracy.

It certainly is splendid corn weather
as the farmers report in this section.

Independence Day.

"Breaths there a man with soul so dead, Who never to himself has said This is my own, my native land."

Is there any one who, as he thinks of this, his own native land does not think of the heroes who shed their blood to make it free? or of the many who through long and weary marches and bloody conflicts gave their best, and all, to keep it free; so that today the stary flag floats on every sea, and all vie to do the land that floats "old glory."

We stand in holy reverence with uncovered heads before that noble throng of heroes, many of whom have stood before the greatest King and heard the welcome home from the weary conflict, and the few that still are active in the conflict to preserve the fair name and world wide fame of this "their own and native land."

Words are too frail to express the admiration we cherish for the noble boys in blue and while any of them remain we wish to do them honor.

These who were first in the rank to make this "freedom's land" have long since answered to the last bugle call, and received their reward and while not present in the body we will do honor to their memories, but there are still those among us who during the civil war passed through toils and hardship, that the union might be preserved and there we desire to give all honor while still they may see and enjoy a loyal people's gratitude. In the Record of today we give the sketch and pictures of three of this brave band of patriots who are well known to all in our midst.

MISS WINSTON'S "FOURTH"

By COLIN S. COLLINS

[Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company.]

"WELL, that is what I call downright mean," said Bud. "They never decorated Miss Winston." And he emphasized his remark by aiming a stone at the saucy chipmunk that had been making friendly overtures. Nellie, the eldest of the group, took exception to the remark.

"You talk as if she was a cozy corner or a pincushion," she exclaimed sharply.

"You talk like a girl," answered Bud, with fine scorn. "Don't you know she's a Daughter of the American Revolution?"

"And Mrs. Hodges, she says that she is a Mother of the Spanish-American War."

Bud's face indicated all the contempt possible for one whose nose is already tip tilted at a decided angle.

"Yes, and Miss Winston's grandfather helped lick the Britishers before there was any Philippines, but just because he is buried way up in Maine they didn't give her any Memorial day or any flags or flowers and didn't even ask her to sit on the platform. Like they did Mrs. Hodges. I bet it made her feel awful bad."

Here six-year-old Blinks set up a dismal wail. Some one in some fashion was injuring Miss Winston, who as a dispenser of cookies and gingerbread held a warm place in his small affections. The patriotic discussion was performed abandoned until Blinks was pacified.

The Courtney children spent every summer at the old family homestead in Chatham, but this year, thanks to an epidemic of diphtheria in the city schools, they had been spirited off to the country with the opening of spring. For the first time in their lives they had participated in a country celebration of Memorial day and had absorbed the full meaning of the occasion. In the city it represented merely a parade. Here in the quiet country town it stood for patriotism of the loftiest sort. And to the loyal, impetuous Bud it amounted to an insult that Miss Winston, whose every silvery gray hair he revered, had had no part in the solemn ceremonies.

It was not entirely because the three children felt that the quaint old Winston mansion was a never failing refuge in time of other disappointments nor that with the welcome always awaiting them there came more substantial proofs of their hostess' affection, but they felt that the white haired lady with the quiet voice represented the men who generations before had died that their country might live. Miss Winston's cookies were irreproachable, but better still were her thrilling tales of when Grandfather Winston was on Washington's staff. And in their eyes, far handsomer than the silver tea set which had come over in the Mayflower and had been given General Winston's father on his marriage, was the faded Continental uniform which hung in Miss Winston's own room and which they were permitted to gaze upon and even touch on those rare occasions when all three had been good simultaneously.

During the weeks which intervened between Memorial day and the Fourth of July a general air of mystery brooded over the Courtney family. If Grandmother Courtney had not been afflicted with falling eyesight, she must have judged from the secret conclaves in dim corners that something was brewing. As it was she did wonder somewhat at the subsidence of the usually exuberant Bud, who had little or nothing to say about the rapidly approaching day of noise and jubilation. Nor could she quite understand why when the supply of fireworks arrived from the city Bud did not attempt to sample them in advance. Only the year before in his enthusiasm he had shot off all the roman candles by daylight and then cried himself to sleep because night brought no fresh supplies. She even went so far as to administer a mild dose of senna to her eldest grandson on the general principle that when Bud's curiosity failed something must be wrong.

On the eve of Independence day the three children sat on Miss Winston's back porch sampling a fresh loaf of gingerbread.

"Do you mind, Miss Winston, if we decorate you tomorrow?" asked Bud with labored politeness.

"Bless your soul, no," replied the old lady, slightly puzzled, yet lending herself willingly to any plan that might bring pleasure to her young admirers. "But what do you mean?"

"You mustn't ask questions," responded Bud with sudden severity and incidentally heading off Blinks' attempts at explanation by filling the infant's mouth with gingerbread.

"You see," ventured Nell, "you were not decorated on Memorial day, and we thought tomorrow would do just as well. It will be more exclusive to have a celebration of our own and, besides, more appropriate, being Independence day and your Grandfather Winston having fought in the Revolution and his old uniform hanging upstairs." Nell was waxing incoherent, but Bud felt she was getting on dangerous ground, and he remarked, with the air of one refraining with difficulty from administering a reproof:

"Nell, I am afraid grandmother wants us to come home quick before you blab the whole thing. Good evening, Miss Winston! We'll see you in the morning." And with a bow that indicated the respect due one of Revolutionary ancestry he drove his submissive sister and brother out of the Eden where they would fain tarry.

The sun was barely peeping over Jason's barn the next morning when Miss Winston was roused by violent cannonading. Hurrying to the window, she saw Bud on her well trimmed lawn hoisting a flag on an improvised pole, while Nell held her ears against the progress of the national salute of twenty-one guns improvised from giant firecrackers and tomato cans.

"It isn't going off quite regular," explained Bud in stentorian tones above the din, "but some of the fuses is fatter than the others, and they go off too soon."

Miss Winston smiled and asked where they had found the flag.

"It's a pillowcase," replied Nell in housewifery triumph. "We made it ourselves. The blue is from the laundry, and the red grandpa got to paint the shingles with. It ain't just the right red, but it does very well. Now we are going to give you another salute and then go home to breakfast."

"Better stay here," called back the decorated one. "I'll be down in a minute, and we'll have Johnnycake."

"And honey?" suggested Bud.

Miss Winston nodded. "Then we will stay," he announced gravely, "for we have all the fireworks here, and we told grandma something might happen that we wouldn't come back for breakfast. So we'll set off one more pack of firecrackers and then come in."

All morning long Miss Winston, arrayed in a Tresh lawn dress figured with sprigs of dainty flowers, sat on the front porch with the double purpose of serving as the center of festivities and watching that Blinks did not set his clothes on fire. In the afternoon, when the supply of pyrotechnics ran short, Bud grandiloquently announced that it was time for exercises, and would Miss Winston please open the programme by telling them how her grandfather happened to become a general, and did the soldiers really go barefooted in the snow at Valley Forge. Miss Winston was not only willing but proud to do this, and later in the afternoon, in the dim, cool parlor, she served cake and lemonade, while on the stiff horsehair sofa reposed the tattered regimentals which represented so much to her and the youthful patriots who were enjoying the most glorious and perhaps most unselfish celebration in their short history. And of course they had to stay for supper, because when the longed for darkness came Zach was to set off the fireworks, roman candles, skyrockets and flowerpots.

It was quite 9 o'clock when the last rocket whizzed through the air and Zach was at liberty to retire to the kitchen porch for his evening smoke. Blinks had fallen asleep with his head in Nell's lap and a tender silence rested on the group when suddenly Bud sat up very straight.

"I hear music!" It was music, the one music suited to an Independence day celebration, the piping strains of a fife and drum corps. Nearer and nearer it came. The musicians swept round the bend with half of Chatham at their heels. Marching in advance was the president of the village board. The procession stopped before Miss Winston's gate, and the astonished little lady, with her three delighted guests circling round her, stepped hospitably forth. The president of the board removed his hat somewhat awkwardly and cleared his throat.

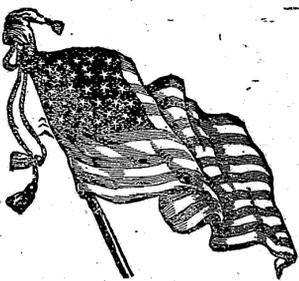

"It's the sentiment of some of our leading citizens, Miss Winston, that we ain't appreciated the fact that we had in our midst one whose ancestor fought in our country's first and greatest war, and we're glad even to be reminded of said fact by these here children, and in token of that sentiment, we have brought the fireworks display along and with your permission will set off the same in your pasture lot instead of in the public square, according to the usual custom." He stopped from sheer lack of breath, and Miss Winston, all a-tremble over this unexpected honor, gave her delighted consent to the subversion of her pasture lot to patriotic uses. So there were more red fire, more candles, more rockets and innumerable flowerpots and nigger chasers; then came, spread in living flames, a double portrait of Washington and General Winston. Nell could stand it no longer. In a very ecstasy of satisfaction she flung her arms about Miss Winston's neck.

"That's from papa. I wrote him to send them down." Bud glared at her through the darkness.

"It's all right," he assured her, "since it's so good; but I knew you couldn't keep a secret." Nevertheless he smiled as he felt Miss Winston's arm about his neck and her tender kiss upon his tanned cheek. They were starting for home now under Zach's care.

"Dear children, this has been the happiest, the proudest, day of my life, and you have made it so!" "Yes, it's been a bully day," assented Bud, vainly trying to stifle the pride in his voice. Blinks raised a sleepy face for Miss Winston's good night kiss.

"The lemonade was good, too," he murmured as he placed a confiding hand in Zach's big rough one. And so the four were swallowed up in the summer darkness, but long after they had disappeared Miss Winston stood at her gate inhaling the fumes of burned powder and enjoying them as a true Daughter of the American Revolution should.

Nestled in the bluffs on the border of Terre Coupee prairie in the west of Bertrand lies a beautiful little lake called Pike. Before man troubled it the water was pure and clear, said to be fed by numberless subterranean springs. The water is very deep, some going so far as to say that the lake has no bottom.

It abounds in fish and before the fish laws were so stringent many hundred pounds were taken out yearly. It is not strange then that city visitors seek its quiet for a day's outing. But legend has it the lake acts queerly toward these city visitors. It may be the great bubbling of the springs or the wrath of the spirits of the departed negroes drowned in its depths that brings on the great sea sickness, yea, vomiting until tears come. It acts on others differently sending good pious souls home hilarious and others are so lulled that they forget their fishing and lie all day between drinks under their conveyance.

The Maccabees of St. Joseph gave an excursion to Kanosha, Wisconsin last Saturday night. On the return trip Arthur Kessler of St. Joseph went to sleep on the hurricane deck and rolled off into the lake. His absence was not discovered for some time.

It abounds in fish and before the fish laws were so stringent many hundred pounds were taken out yearly. It is not strange then that city visitors seek its quiet for a day's outing. POLLY'S FOURTH.

Even a Parrot Can Cry, "Hurrah for George Washington"

Polly was a middle-age parrot whose early days had been spent in the green forests of Yucatan in Central America. I had long tried to teach Polly to speak and had taught her to say a few short sentences; about eight weeks before the Fourth of July I tried to teach Polly to say "Hurrah for George Washington." But she would not repeat it after me. Then I thought it might be too long to say it all at once—that she probably could not remember it all, so I tried to teach her to say it word for word. But no; she wouldn't say a word of it.

Yet she listened attentively when I repeated it. Then I got disgusted and gave it up till a week or so before the Fourth; then I tried to make her say it, but she would not listen to me now. So when the morning of the Fourth came I went out to Polly; she said, "Hello." I answered "Hello Polly, can't you say 'Hurrah for George Washington' for me?" Then she became furious and flew to the other side of her cage and would not look at me, so I finished feeding her and went into my room and got my fire-crackers, went outside, and was shooting my fireworks away when mother called me to come in for luncheon. After luncheon I had to stay in the yard, so I went and got Polly and hung her upon the veranda, put up the hammock and was reading St. Nicholas, when along the street comes the street band playing "Star Spangled Banner."

Then all of a sudden Polly becomes restless and cries as loud as she can "Hurrah for George Washington!" This is the story of Polly's Fourth.

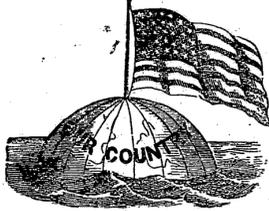

The Oldest Ship in the World.

The time was when American ships carried a broom at the mast head as a sign that America swept the sea. In those days fine ship building timber grew right down to the shore on the Atlantic coast, and there was hardly a bay on the New England shore where there was not a ship building yard. So it happens that most of the old sailing ships are built of American or Norwegian timber. I have seen hundreds of old square riggers roaming the world under strange flags whose every stick grew on American soil. Ships built of Essex oak are famous for their longevity. The oldest ship in the world, the mail schooner, Vigilant, running into St. Croix, F. W. I., is now under the French flag but was built, so I have been told, in 1802, of Essex oak at Essex, Mass; and was long under the stars and stripes.

But alas, Americans in these days can neither afford to build ships nor to sail them as American ships, except in the coastwise trade, where they are protected by law. It costs nearly one-fourth more to build a steel steamship in America than in England or Germany, and when they are built they are either not as good or are more unlucky. The underwriter's records show that American built ships do not stand the racket compared with the Clyde output. "The Deep Sea Sailor" in Leslie's Monthly for July.

Entertaining Fiction.

One advantage of reading a serial story in a daily newspaper is that an installment of convenient length is received every day that does not consume an undue amount of the reader's time. An installment of a high grade serial story appears in every issue of The Chicago Record-Herald, a popular feature of that enterprising Chicago daily. Among the successful stories which have recently been enjoyed by Record-Herald readers are "Soldier of Fortune," by Richard Harding Davis; "The Thrall of Leif the Lucky," by Ottilie Liljencrantz; "Tristram of Blent" by Anthony Hope; "When Knighthood was in Flower," by Chas. Major; "Alice of Old Vincennes" by Maurice Thompson and "Graustaak" by George B. McCutchen. Every issue contains also a short illustrated "human interest" story on the editorial page. Readers of the Record Herald can depend upon a never failing source of pleasant entertainment in the noteworthy fiction that is always to be found in its columns.

McClure's in Its New Dress.

Readers of McClure's cannot fail to have observed the many changes in the appearance of the magazine in the last months. Most important has been a change in the body type, which will be generally conceded very greatly to have enhanced the beauty of the page. The new type is a French old style, the matrices for which were cut in this country from French designs.

In contrast with the former black, condensed page of the De Vinne type, this is open, round, and light, with a great increase in beauty and legibility. A charming series of initial letter to go with the type has also been designed, also new head-bands and tail pieces of patterns to harmonize.

The paper of the magazine has also been improved with the result of far greater brilliancy than before in the half-tones. Very striking, too, is the new cover design, which was printed in June in a beautiful blue, and will instantly be recognized again in the current July issue in its dress of brilliant gold.

For a summer magazine the July Woman's Home Companion contains an unusual number of strong features. "Keeping House With Explosive" is an interview with Hudson Maxim. Dr. J. M. Buckley, the best-known Methodist of America, writes of "The Methodists and their Good Works." Ernest Harold Baynes contributes an intensely instructive article on America reptile, and W. G. Bowdoin tell about the "Rarest Bibles in the World." There are six short stories, and Eden Phillpott's strong serial, "The Farm of the Dagger." The fashion pages are full of suggestions for summer frocks.

Mrs. Herrick tells how to give a basket picnic, and Joseph H. Adam has a boy's article on "Camping Out, and How to Do It." The "Housewives' Reciprocity Bureau" and Home Dress-making pages are full of helpful suggestions for housekeepers. Published by The Crowell Publishing Company, Springfield, Ohio; one dollar a year ten cents a copy.

Hives are a terrible torment to the little folks, and to some older ones. Easily cured. Doan's Ointment never fails. Instant relief, permanent cure. At any drug store, 50¢.

LATEST FASHION NOTES.

DINNER GOWN IN PEAU DE CREPE.

The rage for shirrings has called forth charming variations of designs and very attractive is a reception of dinner gown on which this work is introduced. This is represented in old ivory peau de crepe, both bodice and skirt being inset with Marchel Niel yellow flowers in applique.

Mexican drawn work is introduced on the decollete bodice, and the ceinture of apricot velvet adds a rich, bold tone. Hand embroidery here finds expression, done in Corticelli wash embroidery silk. The effect is very beautiful.

Shirred costumes will be seen in the numerous crepes, and indeed there is nothing prettier than nun's grey crepe de Chine fashioned in shirred effect, deep around the shoulders, hips, and knees with adjuncts of grey and white lace, the finishing touches being applied in fringes, tassels, and delicate cords.

STRAIN TOO GREAT.

Hundreds of Buchanan Readers Find it so.

The hustle and worry of business men, the hard work and stooping of workmen, the woman's household cares, are too great a strain on the kidneys. Backache, headache, sideache, kidney troubles, urinary troubles follow. A Buchanan citizen tells how to cure them all.

Mr. Jas. F. Higbee, Broker, of 297 Britian Avenue, Benton Harbor, says: "I have had marked symptoms of kidney trouble for some time off and on and although I used a good many remedies I received little if any benefit from them. Noticing Doan's Kidney Pills endorsed by some of the most prominent people in Michigan, I concluded to try them and procured a box at Harry L. Bird's drug store. This I cheerfully say about them. They did me more good than all other remedies put together I ever used. I certainly can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as a remedy of great merit."

Just such emphatic endorsement is plentiful in Buchanan. Call at W. N. Brodick's drug store and ask him what his customers report.

Dragging Pains

2825 Keeley St., CHICAGO, ILL., Oct., 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groins. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Maudie Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

White Belt Club.

The ladies composing the White Belt Club met at the home of Mrs. D. V. Brown on Monday and gave her a delightful surprise.

DOUBLE WEDDING.

Interesting Ceremony on Wednesday Evening.

At the home of Burton Weaver, on the Sabin farm, there occurred Wednesday evening a very impressive double wedding, when Ora Fisher became the bride of Burton Weaver and Alta Fisher became the bride of Clarence Robinson.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. Weaver, an uncle of Burton Weaver, a minister in the Progressive church. The two couples stood under an arch of flowers at one end of the room and from the lawn just outside, there floated in the sounds of the wedding march played by the Buchanan Band. The little daughter of Willis Wire acted as ring bearer.

There were about one hundred and fifty persons present, and the house was beautifully decorated, Robert Dodd having the matter in charge.

A munificent wedding supper was served to all after the ceremony.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Weaver from Harb, Mich. The presents were numerous and beautiful and included quite a sum of money given to the brides.

The RECORD joins with the many friends in wishing the young people a long life and much happiness.

WONDERFUL HAPPENINGS.

Interesting Information Gained from Conversation with the Soldiers.

When one considers the number of shots that were fired by confederates and federal armies during the civil war, aimed by the men at each other, it is surprising that any one escaped without a wound. But such is the case, that occasionally one sees or learn of a soldier who has not received a wound.

In conversation with the G. A. R. boys, one learns of wonderful escapes.

John Perrot tells of a man by the name of Alfred Wert, who stood besides him in the memorable engagement at the battle of Shiloh and while neither one of them was hit, during the battle seven balls struck the barrel of Wert's rifles so that the stock was shattered but not a scratch was received by either of the men.

Mr. Richmond tells of an officer in his regiment who, as the war was being brought to a close, said that he did not feel he wanted to return home without a single wound, but who soon after was wounded in the upper part of his leg. When taken to the hospital he felt no pain and was happy in at least having received one wound for his country; but when the next morning came, that brave officer had fought his last fight and died from the severe gun shot.

Wm. Perrott Post of the G. A. R. of this village was named in honor of Wm. Perrott of Buchanan, who was Quartermaster of the 12th Mich. Regimental infantry. He was a cousin of John Perrott.

The Eighth Michigan Infantry, known as the Wandering regiment, held a reunion at Flint last Thursday, they recounted old experiences and lived over again the dark days of the civil war. An Old Time Fourth

THESE newfangled notions are giving the boys a queer kind of Fourth—one without any noise. With speeches and picnics no patience have I, And I pine for an old fashioned Fourth of July.

Then we rose with the dawn, and the cannon came first; We packed it with powder till ready to burst, And, my, how the glass in the windows did fly When it startled the echoes on Fourth of July.

We hitched up old Dobbin, and all tumbled in The roomy old wagon, the fat and the thin; Even grandma was there and as chipper and spry As any young maiden the Fourth of July.

AND WASHINGTON RODE ON HIS HORSE IN THE SKY.

We went to the barbecue. Who cared for showers When the feast was a-flutter with banners and flowers? And if down came the rain in the midst of it, why, It was part of an old fashioned Fourth of July.

The rockets and pinwheels and firecrackers, too, At evening all joined in the hullabaloo. And Washington rode on his horse in the sky— A figure in flame on the Fourth of July.

The band marching out in their uniforms gay Struck up by the light of the bonfires to play "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Sweet By and By." And so ended a glorious Fourth of July. —Minna Irving in Woman's Home Companion.

THIS DAY 148 YEARS AGO.

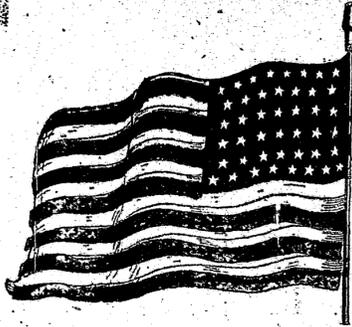

Five Days Later the Battle of Braddock Was Fought and Lost.

The Fourth of July, 1755, was an important day in the annals of this country. On that day General Edward Braddock was within five days' easy march of a field on which he was to fight a battle that might almost be said to have decided the ownership of the vast territory afterward to be known as the United States, a battle that may have had much to do with settling what language was to be spoken in the land. Though Braddock was badly defeated, his soldiers and the English speaking colonials put to rout and himself mortally wounded, that battle virtually led to a direct declaration of war by England against France, out of which after several years' bloody conflict came the treaty of Paris, giving England mastery of the greater portion of that territory now comprised within the limits of the territory over which Theodore Roosevelt presides.

From the diary of Robert Orme, Braddock's aid-de-camp and Washington's friend, we learn of the actual movements and doings of Braddock and some of his men on that memorable Fourth of July. Writing on that date, Orme says:

"We marched about six miles to Thicketty run. From this place two of our Indians were prevailed upon to go for intelligence toward the French fort (Duquesne, afterward Fort Pitt) and also (unknown to them) Gist, the general's guide. The Indians returned on the 6th and brought in a French officer's scalp who was shooting within a half mile of the fort. They informed the general that they saw very few men there or tracks, many additional works, that no pass was possessed between us and the fort and that they saw some boats under the fort and one with a white flag coming down the Ohio (Allegheny). Gist returned a little later the same day, whose account corresponded with theirs, except he saw smoke in a valley. He had concealed himself with intent of getting close under the fort, but was discovered and pursued by two Indians, who had very near taken him."

Orme was wounded in the battle which followed five days later. Upon his recovery he returned to England. He married Lady Townsend, the event arousing much gossip in high social circles on account of a previous arrangement between the lady's family and Lord George Lennox by which she was to become the bride of the latter. —Fittsburg Dispatch.

THREE BUCHANAN VETERANS

Who Forty Years After the Close of the Civil War are Still in Active Life.

ALL OF WHOM WERE COMMISSIONED OFFICERS

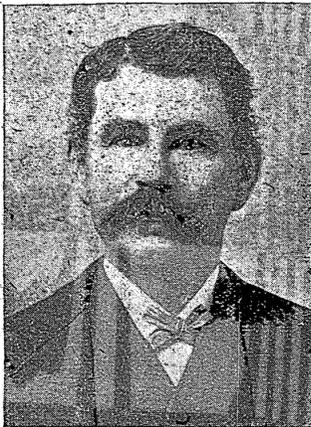

Served With Distinction and Were Honorably Discharged—Short Sketches of Their Lives.

C. F. RICHMOND.

CAPT. J. F. PECK.

JOHN PERROTT.

O. F. RICHMOND.

Mr. Richmond was born in Painsville, Ohio, May 21, 1838, and was engaged as ticket agent at Richview on the Ill. Central when he enlisted as private in Co. I, 81 Illinois Infantry July 9, 1862. He was appointed 1st Serg't Aug 15, 1862; commissioned 2nd Lieut. May 22, 1863; commissioned 1st Lieut. July 21, 1863; commissioned adjutant Dec. 12, 1864, brevetted Major 81 Ill., Infantry April 9, 1865, finally discharged at Chicago, Aug. 9, 1865, having served just three years and one month. Mr. Richmond came to Buchanan, Mar. 28, 1883, as shipping clerk in the Wagon works, he is a man of more than ordinary ability and has had an interesting experience in the service and is also (and very deservedly so,) proud of his army record.

CAPT. J. F. PECK.

Capt. Peck was born in Dauphin Co., Penn., 1830, and has resided in Buchanan twenty five years. He was commissioned first Lieut. Sept. 8, 1862, enlisted in 177th Penn.,

Nov. 21, 1862, and was commissioned Captain Nov. 21, 1862.

The photo of the captain shows him as he was at the time of his discharge from the service Aug. 5, 1865.

Capt. Peck is still at the age of 73 a very well preserved man actively engaged in the affairs of life and a prominent member of the United Brethren Church with good prospects for a number of years still before him. JOHN PERROTT.

John Perrott was born in Pennfield Monroe Co., New York, Nov. 27, 1835. He came to Niles with his family in 1844 and to Buchanan in 1846 where he has resided ever since, except such time as he spent in the army during the civil war. Mr. Perrott enlisted in the 12th regiment, Michigan Infantry Oct. 15, 1861, assergeant, Co. C. He was commissioned 2nd Lieutenant March 19, 1864. He was commissioned 1st Lieutenant June 9, 1864, and resigned Jan. 20, 1865, and was honorably discharged.

During his entire service from 61 to 65 Mr. Perrott never spent a day in the hospital. There was a time when he was 4th sergeant and had command of the company, all officers above him being sick. The regiment never made a march that he was not along.

Now at the age of 68 Mr. Perrott still is able to put in a full day's work as easily as many a younger man, and to look at him you would not consider him as old as he is.

A divorce case was started Tuesday by Nellie Yost against her husband, Alfred Yost. The charge was extreme cruelty. Mrs. Yost declares that on sundry occasions Yost swore at her and used other vile language, also that he beat her upon the head with a wash bowl and once broke a chair over her head. At another time he tore a dress from her and ripped it into ribbons. Yost had a bad habit of becoming drunk and on these occasions he was even more abusive than at others. An injunction was granted to restrain Yost from disposing of his property, and in this way to avoid paying alimony.

An evening session of court was again held June 30. The important witnesses in the case of Kruger vs. Kruger gave their testimony.

The case of the People vs. Carter and Rowe for assault and battery was adjourned until Thursday.—Daily Post.
