Bill Nye's Cow Advertised

Bill Nye, the humorist, once had a cow to sell, and advertised her as follows: "Owing to ill health, I will sell at my residence in township 19, range 14, according to the government's survey, one plush raspberry cow, aged eight years. She is of undoubted courage and gives milk frequently. To a man who does not fear death in any form she would be a great boon. She is very much attached to her present home with a stray chain, but she will be sold to any one who will agree to treat her right. She is one fourth shorthorn and three-fourth hyena. I will also throw in a doubled-barrel shotgun, which goes with her. In May she usually goes away for a week or two and returns with a tall red calf with wobbly legs. Her name is Rose. I would rather sell her to a non-resident."

Plurality of Probate Judge Exceeds That of Congressman Hamilton

President Received Two Out of Every Three Votes Cast in This County—Supervisor Made Great Run in Country Districts

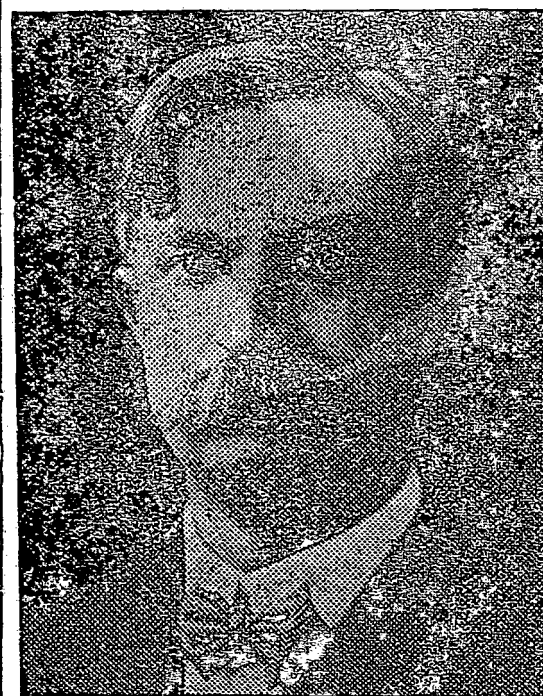

Frank H. Ellsworth, probate judge led the county ticket in last Tuesday's election. That was to be expected, but the fact that he ran second to Roosevelt and ahead of that popular statesman, Hon. E. L. Hamilton, is a matter of further congratulation. These two distinguished citizens of the county made wonderful runs, and were only fourteen votes apart in the count. They both received a plurality of about 2,850, and that is a remarkable showing.

Judge F. H. Ellsworth.

The complete unofficial returns for Berrien county, as sent to this paper, are as follows:

	PRESIDENT	Plu.
Roosevelt R	7,479	3,715

The candidates for the other offices on the county ticket were elected by majorities of from 1,500 to 2,000. The exact vote on the minor offices will not be known until the official count.

While it looked on election night that Larkworthy would give Miners

Register I. L. H. Dodd.

a close race for clerk, the rural districts and Niles offset the complimentary vote that was given to Larkworthy in the twin cities, and Mr. Miners was elected by a majority of over a thousand, enough to satisfy any man. Let it be predicted now that in two years County Clerk Miners will lead the Republican county ticket. He is not the sort of a man

STYLES AND QUALITY IN

The American woman has a lot of practical common sense when it comes to the buying of merchandise. She wants to be positive before she buys that it is the right style; she always wants quality. This store is famous for having good goods. Right prices on them, too.

is now on exhibition at our store. A fac-simile of the great United States building at the World's Fair, St. Louis, 1904 is now on exhibition in Ellsworth's show window. It is an architectural wonder, built like a "Fairy Palace" from Royal Cuticle Soap, the pride of the world toilet soap. As an artistic display it is a marvelous demonstration, and will merit coming miles to see and will be the most remarkable soap bargain ever offered in America.

has won for our store much well deserved popularity through our promises in South Bend we have been selected and appointed as sole distributing agents for South Bend by the Royal Soap Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, whose soaps have been the standard of excellence for nearly a quarter of a century. It is a wonderfully fine, dainty, medicated soap, smoothing the skin and beautifying the complexion and is sold on its merits exclusively. More than five million families throughout the length and breadth of the land are today using and will use no other. So much for the excellence of this soap. The regular price for Royal Cuticle Soap is 10 cents per cake, but for a limited time, acting as agents for the manufacturers, who desire to introduce the Royal Cuticle Soap into every home, we have the special privilege to sell

How Sweet!

An old oaken tree stood in the back lot of Dolph Allen of Pokagon. It was of no particular value, either for beauty or for use, but from his boyhood Allen had held familiarity with the heart-touching song of "Woodman, Spare that Tree," and he let it alone, although he was a farmer and no woodman. But last summer, when a buzzing sound in the tree-top attracted his attention he investigated and found it was populated with honey bees. Sweet as was the old song, Allen reckoned that honey was more so, and recently, securing a helper and a couple of pails, cut the tree. When a man starts out to cut down a "bee tree" he is just like the chap who goes fishing—expects to "get a lot." Allen expected the same thing, hence the blithe step and the two large pails. After a hard half-day's work the tree lay on the ground; and does anybody suppose there was much honey? We should expect not, but the fact is the tree proved to be hollow pretty nearly from top to bottom and there was taken from it 175 pounds of honey, beside a couple of pailsful that "smushed" and ran into the ground. All the dishes, and two washtubs in the house were filled with the hard earned store of the bee colony. One section of comb was found to be more than three feet long and a foot in breadth, and the varying colors of the deposit showed that the duration and industry of the colony had been one of years.

Congressman E. L. Hamilton.

Uncle Sam is ready for Thanksgiving day.

The "big stick" had a very large broom on the business end of it, hence the sweeping victory.

It is said it rained election night in 1896, also on election night in 1900, but in 1904 while it rained, the most of the people agree that the Democratic party was snowed under.

A few Democratic candidates for governor were successful in finding issues, and some of them, like Ferris, may be heard of when the party digs out from under the avalanche.

We are pleased to note the optimism of Editor Harkrider, of the Benton Harbor Review. He claims that he is deserving of a few bouquets for the wonderful results of the election, and if he can get them no other way he says that he will throw them at himself.

Some forty years or more ago some one down East brought out an automatic chess player that, set in motion by some unknown power, defeated all the chess champions, and created a great wonder until at length it was discovered that there was a man in it. That is what is the matter with the election this time, there was a man in it—Roosevelt.

Buchanan's Candidates

Buchanan has been particularly interested this year in the political situation, due to the fact that the village had two candidates, on each of the tickets.

Mr. John C. Dick the Democratic candidate for Judge of Probate has been a Buchanan citizen for many years and while he was unable to secure the election on account of the overwhelming Republican majorities, he is none the less qualified for the position and is a man whom Buchanan is proud of as a citizen. While Mr. Dick is on the other side of the fence from us, politically, he is our friend and neighbor, and we esteem him highly. We wish to congratulate him upon the run he made, especially in this town where he went ahead of his ticket by 70 votes.

Mr. I. L. H. Dodd, the Republican candidate for Register of Deeds, has also been a Buchanan resident for years and our friend and neighbor as well, he too is esteemed by us very highly, and we heartily congratulate him upon his election to the office to which he aspired. He will make a faithful and painstaking official, of whom the entire county, as well as Buchanan, will be proud.

JARVIS ESTATE NOW CLOSED UP

Bulk of The Estate Goes to Dowagiac Heirs

The final steps in the settlement of the estate of the late Burton Jarvis, of Buchanan, have been taken, and along litigation over a valuable property is now practically at an end.

The account of Administrator Frank Jarvis, was allowed a few days ago by Probate Judge Ellsworth at St. Joseph and a final order of distribution was made.

The estate of Burton Jarvis, who died without a family was appraised at a little over $50,000.

About $12,000 was disposed of in small bequests. The remainder of the estate amounting to about $30,000 in cash, securities and real estate after the expenses of administration, the inheritance tax and the costs of litigation have been paid, is what is now being distributed under order of the court.

This amount goes to Zaddock and Norman Jarvis, of Dowagiac. But Norman Jarvis having died since his brother, his children will receive his share. Zaddock Jarvis and his brother's estate are to receive the residue of Burton Jarvis estate share and share alike.

Superintendents and Principals of Berrien County Schools Now have Organization

An important feature of the meeting of the Berrien County Teachers' Association held at Benton Harbor last Saturday and one which will prove a great benefit to the students and educators of Berrien county, was an organization formed by the Superintendents and Principals. The Berrien County Teachers' Association is composed of the 24 graded schools in the county with St. Joseph, Benton Harbor, Niles and Buchanan included, and the new organization will be auxiliary to this society. The object is to systematize the grading, courses of study, etc., and outline a plan for promoting students from the lower to the higher school.

At present the high school only recognizes diplomas of the eight grade in the lower school and often pupils take up the work of the ninth grade in the lower schools but their work is not recognized by the higher school. By systematizing the work and having general course of studies, these diplomas will be recognized and a pupil may enter the high school in the second class.

A double benefit will be derived from this step. Students who otherwise would not have taken an advanced course of study will do so under the new conditions and the higher grades will also receive benefit.

Officers were elected as follows: President—Ward Marsh, Coloma Vice President—G. N. Otiwell, Berrien Springs.

Secretary and Treasurer—W. H. Woodley, Three Oaks.

The future association meetings will be divided. Teachers of the High school will not be compelled to listen to a lecture on entertainment for the Kindergarten pupils nor will the instructors of the lower grades be expected to listen to addresses on subjects foreign to their line of work.

This is the greatest stride that Berrien county has made along the educational lines and it promises to become popular. No other county in Michigan has as yet adopted this new system and the promoters of the step deserve much credit for the interest manifested in making Berrien county's schools rank among the first in Michigan.

Monday Club

The M. L. Club met with Mrs. Wm. East, Nov. 7. Order was called by the president, a few minutes after, two. Opening exercises consisted of singing, "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

Mrs. Dodd read a portion of the 49 Psalm, and the club united in repeating the "Lords Prayer." Secretary read report which was accepted, critic made a good report and conducted a drill on vowel sounds, Japanese fashion. Mrs. Graham conducted the history lesson in a very thorough manner. Items in regard to St. Louis exposition were given in response to roll call and proved very interesting. Mrs. Graham furnished a very enjoyable instrumental selection owing to the absence of Mrs. Emery. Mrs. Dodd gave connecting links between Acts 3 and 5 of Hamlet. Act five was read by club and followed by conversation on the play.

Smallpox in Buchanan

By request of Dr. O. Curtis, the village Health Officer, the RECORD refrained from mentioning the case of smallpox in Buchanan, Dr. Curtis' object was to keep the case as quiet as possible and not cause any unnecessary alarm. His precaution was of no avail, however, as the county papers have been publishing all kinds of stories about it. In order that our readers may properly understand the situation we wish to give them the facts.

Miss Cora Smith was visiting in Dowagiac, and upon her return home was taken sick, the disease developing into the genuine smallpox. Dr. L. E. Peck is in charge of the case and is doing everything possible to relieve the patient.

Dr. O. Curtis the health officer is taking all steps toward stopping the spread of the disease, and to that end has ordered that all school children be vaccinated, and his order has been carried out, and nearly all have complied.

All kinds of stories have been set afloat about the case, but as usual they are erroneous. Several people were exposed before they knew the nature of the disease, but all of them have been vaccinated. One of these cases in particular being Mrs. Geo. Howard. Mrs. Howard went to the Smith home and when informed at the door, the nature of the young lady's case, immediately went away and the story has been told that Mrs. Howard was quarantined, much to that lady's discomfort. The story is untrue and she has requested us to state to the public.

Tried To Escape

No little excitement was caused here yesterday by the attempted escape of a prisoner from an officer.

John H. Aisenhauer, of Jackson, deserted his wife and three children about three weeks ago and went to Chicago. Police detective D. F. Tobin, of Jackson, went to Chicago and arrested him. Yesterday they were going through Buchanan on the 12:38 train, which seldom stops here, but there was a party of Chicago men on the train who wished to stop at this place, so the train stopped for them. Mr. Tobin's prisoner took advantage of the stop and jumped from the train. Tobin followed him, but the fugitive was the faster on foot, and was getting away from his captor who shot at him several times. Hi Boyer and Cleve Brant then took a hand in the game and captured Aisenhauer. He was brought to town and locked up until the 5:19 train when Tobin again started for Jackson with him.

He had $1,200 in cash and $2,000 in notes with him, and it is said that he intended to go to the old country while his wife and children went penniless.

A Startling Test

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes, "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Mr. O'Hara Tells Why He is Glad of Defeat

Mr. O'Hara says that he did not want the office, and everyone knows that he is telling the truth, for it would be a financial loss to him. "I do not feel the sting of defeat," he said, "but it will mark the turning point in my life. I shall go to some larger city where there will be a larger field of usefulness for me. I have decided to close up my business and go to the Pacific coast. Wednesday morning when I went home at 4 o'clock I resurrected from my trunk a letter written eighteen years ago which discharged me as a steamboat clerk on account of my showing too much temper. I entered the practice of law and have made as great a success as possible in my limited field. This defeat will have a similar effect upon me I shall aspire to a larger field."

Berrien county will regret to lose Mr. O'Hara.—News-Palladium.

THE TIME WILL COME

When This Advice Will be Helpful to Buchanan People

Very few people are entirely free from backache. It does not take much to derange the kidneys. A little cold, a strain, stooping positions of hard work, overtaxes those delicate organs, and many aches and pains promptly follow. This man tells you here how every kidney ill can be relieved and cured. Read about it: Orvin W. Miller, employed by the Benton fuel Co., and living at 157 Michigan street, Benton Harbor, says: "I am more than pleased with the satisfactory results obtained from using Doan's Kidney Pills. I was troubled for several months with a dull aching in the small of my back, at times quite severe, more especially after a hard day's work. If I took cold it always settled in my back and I became quite lame and stiff. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I got a box. I commenced to use them as directed. To my surprise when I had taken about half a box the pain left my back, and I have not felt the slightest return of it since. Doan's Kidney Pills do all that is claimed for them."

Plenty more proof like this from Buchanan people. Call at the drug store of W. N. Brodrick and ask what his customers report.

Kyrle Bellew the Apollo of the Stage Kyrle Bellew, undoubtedly the historic Apollo of the day, as well as the foremost portrayer of romantic character, will tread the boards of Grand Opera House Chicago, in the title role of a play which was one of last season's theatrical sensations, "Raffles, the Amateur Crackman."

The coming of the handsome and gifted English actor is in itself an event to look forward to, and it is made of double importance in consideration of the delightful character of his play and of the remarkable cast with which he is surrounded. The latter includes none other than E. M. Holland, a star himself and an artist of the highest rank. It is not often Mr. Holland consents to support another star. He did so in this instance because his role in "Raffles" is little less than a duplicate of Captain Redwood, the detective, in "Jim the Penman," probably the greatest part in Mr. Holland's early career. Mr. Bellew's role, that of the gentleman-burglar-philanthropist, is picturesque in the extreme and calls for all the physical grace and artistic force and subtlety of which this actor is known to be possessed.

"Raffles" is more than an exciting and intensely dramatic play—it is a fascinating study in criminology and heredity. But the scientific element never predominates; the play is always the thing. The East emphatically approved of "Raffles" a year ago. It is the only drama that remained in New York 200 nights last season, and its run there was stopped because Mr. Bellew and Mr. Holland had promised to head the cast of the famous all-star revival of "The Two Orphans." The demand for the attraction this year is great. It is booked for forty-three consecutive weeks. Clara Blandrick is Mr. Bellew's leading woman, playing Gwendolyn Conron, the girl who loves Raffles even after she knows that it was he who was concerned in the disappearance of Lady Melrose's $100,000 diamond necklace. Prominently cast are Misses Hattie Russell, Lorena Atwood, Olive Wyndham and Mignon Boranger, and Stanton Elliott, A. W. Grass, Starling Gates, Frank McCormack, Frank Connor and Alfred James.

C. D. KENT

For Love of Country

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY,
Author of "The Grip of Honor," "The Southerners," "Sir Henry Morgan, Buccaneer," "A Doctor of Philosophy," Etc.

Copyright, 1898, by Charles Scribner's Sons

"This is the American Continental ship Randolph, Captain Seymour," cried the latter through the trumpet in a voice heard in every part of the ship of the line.

At least two hearts in the Yarmouth were powerfully affected by that announcement. Katharine's leaped within her bosom at the sound of her lover's voice and beat madly while she reveled in thought in his close proximity, and then, as she noticed again the fearful odds with which he was apparently about to contend, her heart sank into the depths once more. In one second she thrilled with pride, quivered with love, trembled with despair. He was there—he was hers—he would be killed! She gripped the rail hard and clinched her teeth to keep from screaming aloud his name, while her gaze strained out upon his handsome figure. Pride, love, death—an epitome of human life in that fleeting moment—all were hers!

On the main deck of the frigate the name carried consternation to Lieutenant Lord Desborough. So Seymour was alive again! Was that the end of my lord's chance? No. Joy! The rebel was under the guns of the battleship! Never, vowed the lieutenant, should guns be better served than those under his command. Unless the man surrendered, he was doomed. So he spoke eagerly to his men, bidding them take good aim and waste no shot, never doubting the inevitable issue. These thoughts took but a moment, however. Beauchamp, who had done the talking, now stepped aft to Captain Vincent's side and replied to Seymour's hail by calling out:

"Do you strike, sir?"

"Yes, yes, of course; that's what we came down here for. We'll strike fast enough," was the answer.

A broad smile lighted up Captain Vincent's face. He turned to the colonel, laughing, and said with a scarcely veiled sneer:

"I told you they were not up to it. The cad! He might have fired one shot at least for the honor of his flag, don't you see?"

The colonel, with a sinking heart, could not see at all. Cowardice in Seymour, in any officer, was a thing he could not understand. The world turned black before Katharine. What! Strike without a blow? Was this her hero? Rather death than a coward! In spite of her faith in her lover, as she heard what appeared to be a pusillanimous offer of surrender, Desborough's chances took a sudden bound upward, while that gentleman cursed the cowardice of his enemy and rival, which would deprive him of a pleasing opportunity of blowing him out of the water. Most of the men at the different guns relaxed their eager watchfulness, while sneers and jeers at the "Yankee" went up on all sides.

"Heave to, then," continued Beauchamp peremptorily and with much disgust, "and send a boat aboard!"

In an instant sheets of flame shot out, thankfulness, oblivious of everything but that her lover had proved himself worthy the devotion her heart so ungrudgingly extended him. There was great confusion on board the Yarmouth from this sudden and unexpected discharge, which, delivered at short range, had done no little execution on the crowded ship; but the officers rallied their men speedily with cool words of encouragement.

"Steady, men, steady!"

"Give it back to them!"

"Look sharp now!"

"Aim! Fire!"

And the forty odd heavy guns roared out in answer to the determined attack. The effect of such a broadside at close range would have been frightful had not the Randolph drawn so far ahead and her course been so changed that a large part of it passed harmlessly astern of her. One gun, however, found its target, and that was one aimed and fired by the hand of Lord Desborough himself—a heavy shot, a thirty-two, from one of the massive lower deck guns of the Yarmouth, which the pleasant weather permitted them to use effectively, came through one of the after gun ports of the Randolph and swept away the line of men on the port side of the gun. Some of the other shot did slight damage also among the spars and gear, and several of the crew were killed or wounded in different parts of the ship; but the Randolph was practically unharmed and standing boldly down to cross the stern of the Yarmouth to rake her.

But the English captain was a seaman, every inch of him, and his ship could not have been better handled. Divining his bold little antagonist's purpose, the Yarmouth's helm was put up at once, and in the smoke she fell off and came before the wind almost as rapidly as did the Randolph, her promptness frustrating the endeavor, as Seymour was only able to make an ineffectual effort to rake her as she flew round on her heels. The starboard battery of the Yarmouth had been manned as she fell off, and the port battery of the Randolph was rapidly reloaded again. The maneuver had given the Englishmen the weather gauge once more, the two ships now having the wind on the port quarter. The two batteries were discharged simultaneously, and now began a running fight of near an hour's duration.

The guns were served on the Randolph with the desperate rapidity of men who, awfully pressed for time, had abandoned hope and only fought to cripple and delay before they were silenced; those on the Yarmouth, on the contrary, were fired with much more deliberation and did dreadful execution. The different guns were disabled on the Randolph by heavy shot; adjacent ports were knocked into one, the sides shattered, boats smashed, rails knocked to pieces, all of the weather shrouds cut, the mizzen mast carried away under the top, and the wreck fell into the sea—fortunately on the lee side, the little body of men in the top going to a sudden death with the rest.

The decks were slippery with blood and plowed with plunging shot, which the superior height of the Yarmouth permitted to be fired with depressed guns from an elevation. Solid shot from the heavy main deck batteries swept through and through the devoted frigate; half the Randolph's guns were useless because of the lack of men to serve them; the cockpit overflowed with the wounded; the surgeon and his mates, covered with blood, worked like butchers in the steerage and finally in the ward room; dead and dying men lay where they fell; there were no hands to spare to take them below, no place in which they could lie with safety, no immunity from the searching hail which drove through every part of the doomed ship. Still the men, cheered and encouraged by their officers, stood to their guns and fought on. Presently the fore topmast went by the board also as the long moments dragged along. Seymour was now lying on the quarter deck, a bullet having broken his leg, another having made a flesh wound in his arm. He had refused to go below to have his wounds dressed, and one of the midshipmen was kneeling by his side, applying such unskillful bandages as he might to the two bleeding wounds. Nason had been sent for and was in charge under Seymour's direction. That young man, all his nervousness gone, was most ably seconding his dauntless captain.

The two ships were covered with smoke. It was impossible to tell on one what was happening on the other, but the steady persistence with which the Randolph clung to her big enemy had its effect on the Yarmouth also, and the well delivered fire did not allow that vessel any immunity. In fact, while nothing like that on the frigate, the damage was so great and so many men had fallen that Captain Vincent determined to end the conflict at once by boarding the frigate. The necessary orders were given, and a strong party of boarders was called away and mustered on the fore-castle, headed by Beauchamp and Hollins.

Taking advantage of the smoke and of the weather gauge, the Yarmouth was suddenly headed for the Randolph. As the enormous bows of the line of battle ship came slowly shoving out of the smoke, towering above them, covered with men, cutlass or boarding pike in hand, Seymour discerned at once the purpose of the maneuver. Raising himself upon his elbow to better direct the movement—

"All hands repel boarders!" he shouted, his voice echoing through the ship as powerfully as ever.

Washington Letter

Through President Roosevelt and Baron Speck von Sternberg, the German ambassador to the United States, an additional and highly important policy insuring the United States against war is about to be executed. During the stay of Dr. von Holleben, the former German ambassador in Washington, the relations between this country and Germany were not of the pleasantest and President Roosevelt found himself confronted with a difficult task when he undertook to eradicate the friction. Hardly had he assumed office when Germany and Great Britain blockaded Venezuelan ports and threatened the integrity of the Monroe Doctrine. President Roosevelt immediately warned the representatives of both nations that no seizure of territory would be permitted and our relations with Germany were not improved by the warning. Serious trouble in that instance, however, was averted by the president's proposal that the claims against Great Britain should be adjusted by the Hague and, Great Britain cheerfully acquiescing, Germany was virtually compelled to do the same.

Early in President Roosevelt's administration it was proposed that Prince Henry, brother of Kaiser William, should visit this country and Mr. Roosevelt extended a most cordial invitation. That visit was most successful from a diplomatic standpoint, although it was followed by the embarrassing offer of a statue of Frederick the Great. The president concluded to accept the gift however, and assigned to it a position in the grounds of the army war college. Today President Roosevelt reaped the reward of his courtesy. Several days ago, he called the attention of the Ambassador von Sternberg to the new arbitration treaty just negotiated with France and suggested that, in view of the very friendly relations existing between this country and Germany, the Kaiser should prove agreeable to a similar convention. The ambassador expressed his willingness to promote such an agreement and immediately took the matter up with the German foreign office with the result that he was today able to inform the president that the Kaiser had expressed his entire approval of the proposed arbitration treaty. The ambassador will begin the negotiations with Secretary Hay at once and the treaty will doubtless be completed before congress convenes.

When congress convenes the administration will be able to lay before it the senate arbitration treaties with France, Italy, Switzerland and Germany. Of these four, the convention with Germany is most important for the reason that Germany is devoting great effort to extend her trade in the same directions as the United States and is, probably, of all the European nations, the most impatient of the restrictions imposed by the Monroe Doctrine. In the estimation of diplomats a clash with Germany, while by no means probable, is the least unlikely of any difficulty that might occur between the United States and any of the great powers. The arbitration treaty, once ratified, will practically compel Germany to submit to the Hague any difficulty which may arise and is therefore the most important insurance against war effected in many years.

The estimates of four of the great government departments of the amounts necessary for the conduct of their respective business for the coming year have now been made public and all verify the predictions made in these letters some weeks ago, that the campaign would have a salutary effect, in that Democratic criticism of alleged Republican extravagance would tend to economy. The latest estimates made public is that of the war department which calls for an expenditure of $200,000 less than the amount expended last year. The interior department shows a saving, notwithstanding the great expense incurred for irrigating the arid lands of the West, all of which will, in time, be returned to the treasury and is, therefore, more of an investment than an expense. The postoffice shows a decrease in every direction save that of rural free delivery which has proved so popular that the outlay can hardly be decreased and, with the country as prosperous as it now is, no reason is seen for curtailing the service, although it might have to be curtailed with a recurrence of hard times. The estimates of the department of agriculture show neither increase nor decrease and the work of department has proved so beneficial to the farmers that it is believed it would be unwise to decrease the appropriations.
